PLOTTED TO KILL.

Otto Sandmayr Seeks the Life of Winnifred Broese, His Housekeeper.

Milwaukee, Wis., March 25.—Otto

Sandmayr, a printer employed by the German Publishing company, was arrested last night for threatening to kill

Miss Winnifred Broese. The police say he not only admits the charge, but actually made arrangements for the murder of all his household furniture and providing for the care of his children and placing them in charge of St. Whitehead of the Humane society. This preparation, it is said, was taken by him with the expectation that he would be sentenced to Waukegan for taking the girl's life.

Miss Broese called at the central police station yesterday afternoon and told her story. It is said she had been employed as housekeeper by Sandmayr at his house at 2804 Fourteenth street, his wife's name being Mrs. Broese. She was working for him about four years. Not long ago she left his house because he would not let her go. She was then working and fitted out rooms for herself in a house owned by her mother at Sixth street. She was then working for him and was very abusive, but she tolerated him for the sake of her three small children, for whom she felt a deep pity. Finally his actions became unbearable and she decided to leave to take her life. He was behind her in her work, and she thought it best to leave. She was then working for him and was very abusive, but she tolerated him for the sake of her three small children, for whom she felt a deep pity. Finally his actions became

FIND CLUES TO A CRIME.

The Oldhouse Family Did Not Perish

by Fire—Seven Were

Slain.

Alma, Wis., March 25.—Ever since the burning of the Oldhouse family in their home at Herold, early in the morning of March 7, the neighbors have been considerably agitated over the mystery connected with the case. The bodies of the mother and five children were found in the bedroom and the father's body near the window in room next adjoining. On the mother's bed was found a revolver, with six empty shells, and a breach-loading shotgun was found near the father, without, however, showing any evidence of having been fired, as there were no shells in it.

At the inquest held the same day there was an attempt made to ascertain whether there had been any quarrel in the family, but nothing to that effect developed. The woman's head was examined and a fracture was found. This, it was thought, had resulted from machinery which was an accident. The dependent jury therefore returned a verdict of death from suffocation and fire, however, on suspicion of

END OF A LONG LIFE.

One of Fond du Lac's First Settlers

Passes Away at a Remarkable Age.

Fond du Lac, Wis., March 25.—(Special.)—Grandma Blackburn, who had been ill the past two weeks, passed peacefully away at her home in this city yesterday, aged over 100 years. Her death was expected hourly during the past week and relatives from different parts of the state were present at the death.

"Grandma" Blackburn as a girl was Elizabeth Durrant and was born in Chester, Sussex county, England, on September 22, 1795, and at her native town she married Samuel Blackburn in May,

1824, and in 1846 they came to Lamarine, this county, and took up residence on a farm near the city in 1874. They then moved to this city and purchased a residence on Harner street in which "Grandma" Blackburn resided until her death.

At the inquest held the same day there was an attempt made to ascertain whether there had been any quarrel in the

family, but nothing to that effect de-

GEO. NUGENT, Editor.

THE BAYARD CENSURE

Now that our British ambassador has been formally censured, just as every unbiased American citizen concedes he should be, it only remains for newspapers blinded by political prejudice to such an extent as the Milwaukee Journal to utter the following: "Be it remembered that this is in tended for a precedent; if it is not, the house is acting unadvisedly and for partisan purposes only. If it is to be a precedent, the party may at no distant day have to take its own medicine. Is it supposed that this house would have censured Mr. Bayard had he attacked the idea of tariff reform or free trade as advocated by a majority of the people of the United States for the last quarter of a century? The answer to this question will show the hollowness of the whole proceeding. It is the substitution of the party for the nation. It is political clap-trap merely; it will never become a precedent beyond the small minds that conceived it."

The action taken by the house will certainly stand as a precedent for future administrations; and, in reply to the second sentence of the part quoted, we should say that nothing short of a house as partisan as the Journal would refuse to censure any of our foreign representatives who publicly and voluntarily speak ill of the leading political practices of this country. As for "substitution of the party for the nation" it seems that the Journal alone is guilty, as it looks upon this matter from a partisan rather than a patriotic point of view. Then, too, the Journal is in a position to defend the practice of using men in office to serve private interests, as it once utilized a public man's private secretary, to its sorrow.

"THE MORE, THE MERRIER."

A plan is under consideration in the Postoffice department to stamp the weather forecast for the day on all letters deposited for transmission through the mails.—Chicago Chronicle.

Well, after the wild prognostications of natives and Indians last fall, we are prepared for the worst in the shape of forecasts, and it goes without saying that the new plan would not affect the weather any; so, why not let the Post office department "take a hand in," too? The chances are that some prognosticator would then "strike it right;" or, at least, the weather would have a shield of a time dodging the whole of them.

Now that the mere sight of an American battle-ship proved enough to make a Spanish cruiser drop her flag and skedaddle, the Spanish people may be led to believe that, as a marine monster, the Massachusetts is a veritable sea serpent.

BALLETON BOOTH's new Salvation army is founded on a mistake, which resulted in rebellion, so that it is not strange that he should admit that he erred in selecting brown colored suits for his followers for the sake of preventing further rebellion.

The resolution providing a penalty for using the flag of our country for advertising or other than patriotic purposes, should meet with the same unanimous approval in congress that it received at a recent convention of the Wisconsin National guard.

The recent action of Populists in nominating a municipal ticket at Milwaukee reminds us that their last total vote in Milwaukee county fell short of 10,000; and, if they do not make a better showing this spring than when Ulrich ran for mayor, their party will be a dismal failure there by next fall.

The Reed rule prohibiting smoking in the house of representatives should be strictly enforced. Smoke in congress, when so many political campaign camp-fires are being built throughout the country, is enough to irritate any pent-up patriot let alone a presidential aspirant and namesake of the lad who vowed he would never use "the weed."

The Senator Mitchell who recently reported a resolution proposing that senators be elected by the people, of course, is not the man who was elected by the legislature of his state against the wishes of the people. The Oregon senator is evidently of the people, for the people and willing to become subject to the will of the people.

EVEN the Pull Mall Gazette finds it easier to retract than to pay for saying that "Lady Somerset is enough to drive one mad." This not only shows that editors generally are willing to do all in their power to right such matters (even to turning a back "somerset"), but it shows that there are some great feats in store for Wisconsin editors if their convention action upon libelous matter becomes law.

The recent explosion in a baggage car at the Union depot in Milwaukee, caused the general baggage agent there to say that "any person who will endanger the lives of innocent people by placing a dangerous explosive in baggage given to the railroads to transport, does not deserve to be at large." Such sentiment may meet with the approval of some people; but, there are those who will still believe that if the trunk had not been handled so roughly it would not have exploded.

TOWARZYSTWO SW. WALENTEGO is not a name to be coveted to an "alarming extent," but the officers of the original society of that name are suing another organization in Milwaukee for adopting the same and claim $1,000 damages.

An English book was recently issued on etiquette, which places the author in the light of being as short on expression as its readers may be lacking in propriety, as witness the following: "Morning calls are usually made between the hours of 2 and 4. A gentleman should take his hat into the room with him, holding it in his hand during the visit—everything else should be left in the hall." How, different in this country. Here we take our hat off in the hall but wear the balance of our clothes throughout the call.

DUNDEE DOINGS.

T. White is falling gradually. Louis Milkie is on the sick list. Peter Mitchell is a caller in town. Archie McDougall is breaking a fine young colt.
