STRIKE STILL ON.

Stone throwing was resumed on the Farwell avenue line, where most of the passengers are carried. Several cars on this line were stoned shortly after noon Wednesday and a number of windows were broken, but no one was hurt. A car on the Milwaukee line, on the Farwell avenue line, was knocked down by a stone thrown from a crowd, among which were a number of strikers, yesterday afternoon. The motor car ran down to the barn and Shepherd was given medical aid. The policemen had taken the car, but they will probably be replaced.

Kewaskum Statesman.

PUBLISHED EVERY SATURDAY.

Communications sent to this office for publication should be enclosed in respectable language and signed by the author, in order to receive proper attention.

GEO. NUGENT, Editor.

ANTI-TRAMP conventions are becoming nearly as numerous as tramps in this state. The latest one convened in Madison yesterday.

With the reins of the two old political parties in the hands of old editors, the coming fall should produce an interesting campaign in this state, from a literary point of view.

The Menasha maiden, who exercised the leap year privilege of proposing to a young man, must now be "sorry that she spoke," as Michael Jankowski is suing Rosa Lawandowski for breach of promise to the extent of $2,500.

The announcement that a telegram was sent around the world in four minutes recently by Chauncey M. Depew, leads the average American to conclude that the Postal Telegraph Cable company is swift enough to do—for a while yet, anyway.

Now that there is no lack of stormy weather, "rainmakers" may turn their attention to designing cyclone cellar patterns—as "The cyclone holds his fierce career Dark, stern, all pitiless, and pauses not Amid the mighty wrecks that strew his path. To sit and muse, like other connoisseurs, Upon the frightful ruin he has wrought."

If the late convention of railway surgeons in St. Louis developed a "way to mend nerves," perhaps the butchers' treatment usually given injured railway employes may mend proportionately, and the practice of sawing limbs off at the first joint above the point of injury may decrease correspondingly.

The 77th anniversary of the birth of Queen Victoria was celebrated at one of the garrison towns and naval stations throughout Great Britain last Wednesday; and, when one stops to consider that the Prince of Wales is in the heir apparent to the throne, it is no wonder that the British Isles all chimed in the salutation, "Long Live the Queen!"

The recent death of an eminent Berlin physician's child from an injection of the famous anti-diphtheria serum is proof that such action is apt to prove fatal to a person while in a healthy condition. As one poison can only be safely used to offset another, it appears that anti-toxine should only be used upon persons having symptoms of diphtheria, at least.

Now the Sun Prairie Countryman is using its meat-ax on Hod Taylor. If the instrument were in chopping trim, which it isn't, Hod would be sauged in good company.—Evening Wisconsinian. Perhaps the Countryman is using a dull ax for the purpose of making the chopping process as horrible as possible for its victim. "When Greek meets Greek"—well, they should not meet until they "sausage" a thing as a conflict between editors.

The refusal of Queen Victoria to pardon Mrs. Maybrick seems commendable in view of the evidence that the convicted woman "had an intrigue with a lover during the period of her husband's mysterious illness, and one which she endeavored to consummate after Mr. Maybrick's death." Queen Victoria's firm position in this matter is worth more to society than Mrs. Maybrick ever was or the Prince of Wales ever will be as long as he opposes her majesty.

It is refreshing to note that the ministers of Wisconsin's leading city are inclined to keep pace with the spirit of the times by touching upon topics of present as well as future concern to their congregations. All last week the people of Milwaukee were pestered with perplexing situations anent the street railway strike. Consequently, what more appropriate place or time could have been chosen to give the matter calm and cool deliberation than in one's church on Sunday? Who could present the matter fairly if not the clergy?

The last appearance of Julius Zuelke, who shot his employer in Green Lake county and escaped, was witnessed by Assemblyman Frost and a traveling salesman while out riding through the woods between Maple Valley and Gillett. As usual, the report states that the suspect had "a Winchester rifle," and, of course, in view of the fate of Joseph Strong, no one but Zuelke would now take such desperate chances as to be seen in the woods with a Winchester rifle. However, if Julius is a man of more intelligence than his average would-be captor, he has buried his rifle long ago and thus obliterated the main trace of his identity.

The "color line" in Louisiana has been sustained through a recent opinion delivered by Justice Brown of the United States Supreme court. This affirms the decision of the lower court that the old state statute, requiring railroad companies to supply separate coaches for white and colored persons, is constitutional. It would seem that the "color line" question could be settled better by a law requiring the railroad companies to sell graded tickets, especially in view of the fact that Southerners do not object to having negroes about when the latter act as servants or appear as a lower grade of stock. As for mere offending presence, the "all grades together" cars often contain passengers equally as obnoxious as negroes.

Now that Trumpf has surrendered to the Milwaukee authorities, conjectures are rife as to what prompted him to do so. Perhaps Ketting wrote, telling him that there is no institution like a state penitentiary for learning to keep accounts correctly; and, probably, the ex-bank president prefers Waupun to any place in Europe for a future residence, anyway. However, one thing seems quite plain now, namely: the Trumpf card has been played in the South Side bank wreckery; and, no matter how the "players" may have fared, the "dealers" do not seem to have realized enough "rake-off" to make a "decent-sized jack-pot."

LITHIA BEER.

This beer is brewed with water containing lithia, in a natural form, from our artesian well. Lithia is a recognized remedy for kidney diseases and gouty affections. This, combined with the admirable tonic qualities of our beer, makes it a most excellent beverage.

Gollmar Bros. circus, which exhibited in La Porte City last Tuesday afternoon and evening, attracted a very good attendance at each performance. The performance gave general satisfaction, and should the show come this way again next season it will meet with a hearty welcome at La Porte City.—La Porte (Ia.) Progress.

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

"Brags is something of a Mugwump, isn't he?" "Something of a mugwump! He's as non-partisan as a brass band."—Indianapolis Journal.

Barker—"Did you tell him that he lied?" Kiker—"Not in so many words; I told him he ought to be sending war news from Cuba."—Pack.

Bobby—"Say, ma, was the baby sent down from heaven?" Ma—"Why, yes." Bobby—"Um. They likes to have it quiet up there, don't they?"—Truth.

Benkintan—"I wonder why 'church yards yawn,' as Shakespeare says?" Pemberton—"Probably the epitaphs of deceased millionaires make 'em tired."—Truth.

"Whom did the convention declare for?" "No one." "Then the delegates are entirely uninstructed?" "Well, yes, generally; although I believe some of them can read and write a little."—Pack.

Bellows—"Good morning, Fellows! Has your brother's condition improved any since I saw you?" Fellows—"It grieves me to say it has not." "Does the doctor give him any hope?" "No, but he has given him about everything else."—Yonkers Gazette.

"She wants air! She wants air!" yelled a man on the inside of the crowd that had gathered around the female cyclist. "What's the matter—woman fainted?" inquired a policeman, rushing up. "Oh, no," replied the man; "she has only dismounted to pump more air into her tires."—Philadelphia American.

A story is told of how Daniel O'Connell received the grateful blessing of an Irishman during the course of his circuit in Ireland. He secured the liberation of a young son of Erin, who had been charged with some offense, for the second time. The acquitted fellow felt grateful and thus addressed the eminent lawyer after shaking hands with him: "And may you live to defend me always, Mr. O'Connell."

A prominent actor who once dined at a hotel where a couple of operators were eating at tables back of him says: "I presently heard one of them tap off the following sentence relative to my wife, 'Duceedly pretty girl! I wonder how long she has been married to him? The other fellow then tapped off 'Is he the guy who plays the Old Boy?' I then used my knowledge of telegraphy by tapping off 'Three years, no; I am the guy who plays O'Hooligan, the detective.'"

Bishop Paret of Baltimore has been telling a good story at his own expense. He was recently on a train, and near him sat two drunken men. Presently one of the men remarked to the other that some one had robbed him of a $20 bill, and he proposed to find it if he had to search the whole crowd on the train. "As it happened," said Bishop Paret, "I had a $20 bill and that was all, and as I was the nearest man to them and the first likely to be approached, I felt a little uncomfortable. Then it occurred to me to pretend to be asleep. Sure enough, in a minute more I was accosted with 'I say, neighbor! but I made no answer. Then the man grabbed my arm and shook me, but to no use, as I didn't wake up. He kept on shaking, however, and always a little more forcibly, until at last his friend interposed with: 'I say, Bill, let him alone, will you; he's drunker'n you are!'"

A correspondent, writing to the Chicago Record, tells a good story of how a foreign nobleman, the Marquis de Mores started a large beef-packing industry in the "wild and woolly West" and was handsomely buncoed by sharp and enterprising cowboys. When the "marquee's" plant was ready for business, word went out that he would pay cash for cattle, and various herds were headed Medorward. Mores determined to count the stock himself, and so arranged with the drovers to drive their offerings through a "draw" between two of the many hills surrounding Medora. It was his first experience, and he marveled at the multitude of cattle that poured through the narrow trail before him. However, he was all business and counted away industriously until he had bought several thousand head. The cattlemen drew their cash and departed, whereupon the marquis turned toward the yard to review his purchases. He hardly could credit his eyes on seeing the little bunch of scarcely as many hundreds as he had bought in tens of hundreds. Investigation showed that while he was engrossed in counting the marching creatures they had been driven around the hill and presented again, like the Roman army in a play. The experience was a rude shock to the elegant Frenchman and he never recovered from it. Following this came the competition of the larger cities, which absorbed what cash the cowboys left with him. There are many stories told in Medora of the marquis, but this is the most characteristic.

WISCONSIN'S RESOURCES are attracting general attention, and its railroads furnish the means to develop them. The limitless iron ore deposits of the Penokee and Gogebic Iron Ranges provide abundant opportunity for the establishment of Iron Furnaces and general iron working industries. Hardwood timber in great quantities attracts manufacturers of all wood articles including Furniture, Woodenware, Staves, Headings, Hoops and Veneering; the Granite and Lime Stone quarries are attracting attention, as their quality is unsurpassed for fine building work and strong lime. Numerous Clay, Kaolin and Marl beds furnish the best material for Tile, Brick and Pottery.

All of these materials are located on the line of the WISCONSIN CENTRAL, and any one who desires to locate a manufacturing plant is requested to write us, as we desire to confer with everyone who wants a good location with facilities for reaching markets everywhere.
