Mob Attacks Temporary Jail and Shoots Prisoners-Four

Palmette, Ga., March 16.-Four dead negroes lie in Johnson's warehouse. Beide them, groating in agony, are five of their race, all victims of an assault made by white men of this neighborhood at an early hour this morning. This little city has had two incendiary fires, which have almost destroyed it, since January 1, and the segroes who were shot down while begging for mercy lie where they fell on the blood-soaked floor of the improvised Cinderella of Ancient Egypt. Cinderella of Ancient Egypt.

Cinderella is not entirely the product of fiction. Princess Rhodopis of Egypt was the first Cinderella. She was bathing in the Nile, and a bird, which Strabo calls an eagle, flying past, picked up one of her slippers, or sandals, flew away with it and dropped it on the lap of Prince Psammeticus, who was holding a court of justice in Memphis. He was so struck by the dainty manufacture and small size of the sandal that, being then in search of a bride, he at once vowed in search of a bride, he at once vowed that he would only wed the maiden whose foot fitted the sandal. There were two elder daughters of the first marriage who greatly envied her good fortune—and here we have all the essentials of the stern.

"Whereas," began Mrs. Taylor, "a long, dull paper is intolerable in this rapid, history-making age, while a long, good paper has so much in it that you wish to consume—" A chorus of "Ohs!" and little screams interrupted the discourse, and Mrs. Almon Hensley jumped on the platform and began to beat the astonished speaker's bonnet with both hands. Mrs. Taylor, in bending forward, had approached too near the gas lamp on the reading desk, with the result that the feathers on her bonnet caught fire. A Poisonous Beauty.

The writer has frequently seen de-criptions of and articles on the Primula onica, a very pretty and free-flowering variety of primrose, but it is seldom that any mention is made of the very poisonous properties of this plant. One writer states that while some objection of this sort has been made against this plant, he has never had any trouble with it. That may be true, and it is also true that many persons can handle the poison-oak or poison-ivy with little or no

In a large floral establishment where the Primula obeonica was grown for some time a number of more or less serious cases of poisoning occurred, and it was some time before it could be discovered what caused the trouble. It seems a pity that such a very attractive plant dd have this very serious objectionable feature, and some may wish to run the risk and add it to or retain it in their collection ofp lants, but the writer would aution such against handling the foliage when wet or when the hands are wet. and it would be well to keep it in a position where children could not handle it

"LIFE PLANT."

It Grows from Its Own Leaf in the Island of Guad loupe.

On the island of Guadeloupe, French West Indies, a peculiar plant, called the "life plant," grows wild. If any leaf be broken from the plant and pinned by the stem to the wall of a warm room, each of the angles between the undulations of the leaf margin soon throws out a number of white, thread-like roots. Next, a tiny plant begins to sprout, which in the course of two or three weeks attains a height of two or more inches. When the original leaf begins to shrivel, which may take from six weeks to three months, the small plants may be cut out with scissors and planted or the whole leaf buried, when the young plants will rapidly attain full size. When cultivated the plant grows four feet tall and produces graceful red and yellow flowers.

Consul Ayme believes this plant could be grown successfully as a house plant, and certainly in any ordinary greenhouse. Old and new leaves sprout with "life plant," grows wild. If any leaf
