As ball of electricity on the roof. As a couple of young men were passing along Hoyt street they noticed a little ball of fire descending toward them. They wait-ed and saw it alight on the roof of the home of Mr. Waters. Notifying the fam-ily, a ladder was brought into use and a search made, with the result that the fire was extinguished. The phenomenon easily takes its place among the recorded incidents which succeed storms. At such times at sea, sailors say balls of elec-tricity gently descend from the atmos-phere and lighting upon the mast, drop upon the deck or roll across the ship and drop into the sea. On land these events are less frequent, yet happen often enough to keep the interest of modern science engaged. In this city, in 1871, after the Chicago and Peshtigo fires, in October, a bright ball descended upon a barn in this city on Seventh street, poised an instant, then descended and killed two horses standing in adjacent stalls. Manitowoc, Wis., June 17.—[Special.] —Frank Woerfel's barn, containing hay and farm machinery, was destroyed by fire at 11 o'clock last evening at a loss of $1500.
