SLAVE TO THE RING.

Young Matron Who Feared to Re move the Marriage Symbol.

There is a young married woman on the south side who has an awful superstition against removing her wedding ring. The gold band was a triffe large when it was first solennly slipped on her finger and since then she has grown a bit thinner, so that the space between the singer and the ring has increased a triffe. But she would not let the ring drop off. would she remove it voluntarily, for the wealth of the Indies. As a matin the weath of the influences. As a mat-ter of fact, this proposition was not sub-mitted to her, but she volunteered the in-formation. When engaged in her ablu-tions she was obliged to keep her ring finger crooked to prevent the band from lipping off into the soapy water, and in nousehold tasks she was forever in a ferment lest a piece of furniture or a tablecloth would whisk the ring from its

Just what she feared from its removal she was unable or unwilling to state. Whether she thought that would annul the marriage contract or whether she feared a blight would fall upon her house she could not be induced to tell, but she hung on to that ring like grim death-until one evening last week. She was sitting in an easy chair listening to her husband reading aloud from a newspaper and her hand was dropped idly toward the floor as she endeavored to get complete rest. Suddenly the dutiful husband was startled by a scream. "What's the matter?" he demanded,

"What's the malarm. cinging up in alarm. "Oh, Frank, I've dropped my ring."" "Oh, Frank, I've dropped my ring."" "My oh, Frank, I've dropped my ring. she exclaimed, almost tearfully. "My wedding ring' It slipped off my finger." The worst had happened. The ring so long carefully guarded had slipped down her inverted finger while she half dozed in the chair and some slight movement of her hand had shaken it off her finger. It fell on a heavy bear-skin rug, but she could not be induced to look for it, nor would she glance at her hand while it was stripped of the ring. "You get it and put it back on," she declared, and her husband plowed around in the bearskin until he found the little circlet, and then gravely slipped it on the finger where he had placed it six months before. And when he made bold to chaff her about her fears and to hand her a few merry gibes and quips and things about Nineteenth century enlightenment, she only smiled half defaulty and said: "Well, I don't care." what could he say?-Chicago

A HAMMOCK ADVENTURE.

Rattlesnake Fastens Its Fange in a Young Woman's Dress.

Miss Eva Quick of Lackawaxen had a thrilling experience with a rattlesnake the other day. She was lying in a ham-mock when she heard a rustling in the leaves near her head and saw a big snake making ready to spring. Before she could make any outcry the snake was beside her in the hammock. She fell to the ground, screaning with fright, and the snake, which had fast-eened its fangs in her skirt, loosed its hold. Miss Quick picked up a hoe and killed the snake. It was 4 feet 7 inches in length and had eleven rattles.

JAPANESE PAPER SHINGLES.

A Cheap Roofing Made in the Mikado's Empire.

The Japan Times reports that at present Japan has four workshops engaged in making cardboard and pasteboard, with an average daily output of thirty to forty tons. In quality the home-made article bears comparison with the German or American make, but this remark cannot yet apply to the prices. Nevertheless, probably because of a very narrow mar-gin of profit procurable, the import of for-eign goods is practically stopped.

An ingenious innovation recently start-d by the Tokyo Card and Pasteboard ompany, the largest in its line in Japan, has resulted in markedly facilitating the development of the industry. It consists in making thick tarred pasteboards as substitutes for shingles for ordinary root substitutes for shingles for ordinary roof-ing. The paper shingles are now in ac-tive demand, being about 50 per cent. cheaper and far more easily managed than ordinary shingles, hence considera-bly economizing the labor of mechanics. The shingles do not differ much in point of being merce? invariant first and water of being proof against fire and water compared with the ordinary article. This does not seem to be an exaggeration, judging from the fact that the paper shingles have been adopted in sub-rooling the new Tokyo chamber of commerce and the Imperial Tokyo university buildings.
