A MAMMOTH MALTING PLANT.

The Malting Plant of the L. Rosenheimer Malt and Grain Co.—Details of Construction and Equipment—Interior and Exterior View.

Malting as Carried On in a Strictly Up-to-Date Plant.

The bird's-eye view of the L. Rosenheimer Malt and Grain Company presented herewith is a sketch made from a photograph and is a perfect view of the mammoth establishment. With the new addition which has just been completed, after thirteen months' work by skilled labor, the establishment becomes one of the largest and most modern malting plants in the Northwest.

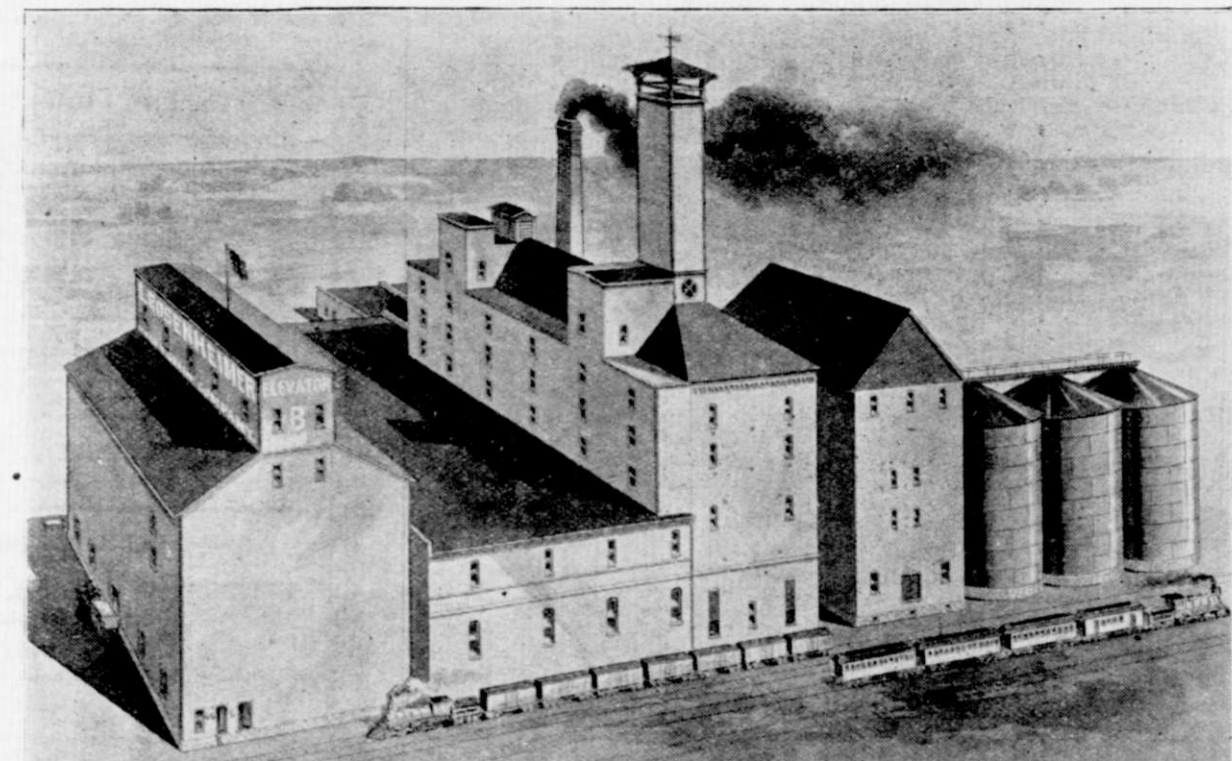

MORITZ ROSENHEIMER, President.

A Leading Grain Market. Kewaskum has long been regarded as the leading grain market in this section of the country and it has drawn its supply from a territory which reaches for many miles in every direction.

Second Increase of Capacity. In 1898 it was again found necessary to increase the capacity of the establishment. The capital stock was therefore increased to $250,000, and it was determined to give the malting plant a capacity of 600,000 bushels a year. Additions to the buildings were planned and the result stands before the people of Kewaskum today, a magnificent establishment which is a credit to the village and a source of pride to every resident.

Founders of the Company. The founders of this great establishment, Moritz and Adolph Rosenheimer, whose portraits appear herewith, were both born in Washington county at Schlesinger, Wis. They received a good public school education and had

being a more uniform product than can be produced by any other process. The drums communicate through a pipe with the fresh-air tunnel in the center of the building, and through another pipe with the exhaust tunnel at the sides of the room. These exhaust tunnels have connections with suction fans located in the rooms above, from which the air, drawn from the attapenator room into the fresh air tunnel and through the malting drums into the exhaust tunnels and fans, is discharged out into the open air over the roof of the building.

Equable Temperature Maintained. An important feature in this system of malting is the Dornfeld patent air-attapenator house, situated at the end of the drum room. The air attapenator and saturating device is sufficient to regulate 28,000 cubic feet of air per minute, which is ample for the germinating grain. The air is drawn from the outside into the upper story room, where it is distributed for the purpose of being heated or cooled in its passage down through the attapenator and atomizer, to the fresh air tunnel.

THE PROCESS OF MALTING. How the Galland-Henning System Works in All Its Stages. The process of malting by the Galland-Henning system is the most approved of modern times and is thoroughly scientific in all its stages. The barley is fully tested in order to determine the length of time each portion of the process requires, and after that the machinery does the rest, the result of the large uniform product than can be produced by any other process. The drums communicate through a pipe with the fresh-air tunnel in the center of the building, and through another pipe with the exhaust tunnel at the sides of the room. These exhaust tunnels have connections with suction fans located in the rooms above, from which the air, drawn from the attapenator room into the fresh air tunnel and through the malting drums into the exhaust tunnels and fans, is discharged out into the open air over the roof of the building.

Five of the 24 steep tanks on the second floor are charged with cleaned barley once in twenty-four hours. The barley remains from thirty-six to sixty hours in the steepers, during which time it is washed and purified with fresh water admitted through the metal valve from below. From the steeps it is run down into the respective malting drums, where it remains during the germinating period.

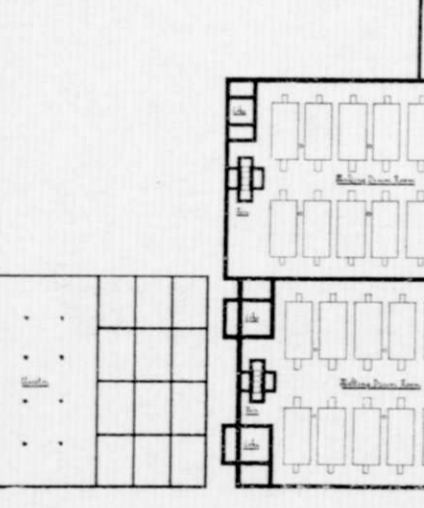

When the germinating process in the drums is finished, it is spotted down into conveyors directly under the drums, and is conveyed and elevated up into the dry kiln. Thus 5 of the 24 drums and steeps of 225 bushels barley capacity each) are loaded and unloaded every twenty-four hours. The adjoining kiln building, 39x78 feet, 72 feet high, of solid brick walls, is constructed the same as the other buildings (strictly fireproof). It is of five stories, in the first or lower story of which are located the furnaces, in the second story the malt hoppers and inclined slatted partitions. These in line or a slatted partition are for the purpose of regulating the proper quantity of air for each or any part of the kiln floor above, and gather the finished malt into the retaining hoppers as it is dumped from the lower malt drying floor. In this room, directly over the fires, is also located a large cement platform, and all ashes and dust are caught above and below the same, making it impossible for any dust and ashes drawn from the fires to get into the finished malt.

Drying the Malt. The third and fourth stories are the malt drying rooms, provided with the Giesler patent automatic dumping tray floors, and Dornfeld patent automatic malt turners. In the rooms at the sides on the top floor are located the exhaust fans which draw the heated air from the furnaces up and through the malt and discharge it through the cupolas over the roof.

THE BRICK WAREHOUSE. The brick warehouse has a heavy stone foundation with solid brick walls, heavy steel frame lined with brick, and cement floors, making it clean, dry and warm. There are 8 steel tanks of 2000 bushels capacity each in this building for the convenient handling of malt, over cleaners and scales, loading directly into cars. The structure is connected with 3 immense steel tanks 50 feet high by 50 feet in diameter, each having a capacity of 29,700 bushels. The tanks are hopper-bottomed for self-discharge into iron tunnels which return the malt from the tanks to the workhouse for loading.

Power and Heating Plant. The power plant, which is situated to the west of the drum house, covers a space of 40x48 feet. It contains two boilers of 150 horsepower each. These furnish steam to run a 150 horsepower Corliss engine and the several pumps to supply the water for the plant, taken from two inexhaustible wells. The system of heaters and boilers is the most elaborate of its kind. The exhaust steam is used for heating the plant and other buildings in the neighborhood. For this latter purpose an underground pipe has been laid at a heavy expense and it works to a charm. The steam is led already to along the large center tunnel and through the germinating malt in the drums. The malting and ventilating arrangement is magnificent, and all the rooms, including the large drum and steep room, are plastered to a smooth finish with cement, and kept scrupulously clean. The air in all the rooms is sweet and clear and of uniform temperature, which in cold weather is further automatically regulated by a system of exhaust steam coils. All heating is done by exhaust steam only, and the condensation returned to the boilers.

BUILDERS OF THE PLANT. Galland-Henning Company of Milwaukee and Its Able Assistants. The Galland-Henning Company of Milwaukee, which furnished the malting machinery and outfit, is one of the largest manufacturers of such machinery in the country, and this wonderful plant will stand as a credit to its designers and inventors. The company has had able coadjutors in the firms which supplied it with certain of their specialties, and each is as noted in its particular line as the principal contractor. Logemann Bros., Milwaukee. The boilers and all their fittings and accompaniments, as well as all the other machinery which came from the establishment of Logemann Bros., are finished in the best style, the workmanship showing that they came from an establishment of the first class. The firm of Logemann Bros. stands high in the commercial world, and it has large contracts for all its specialties, a proof that they are of the best quality and fully up to the best products of the age in inventive genius and skill. The business of the firm has expanded rapidly, until it now stands in the front rank of the manufacturing establishments of the state and its name upon machinery is a guarantee of its excellent quality and utility.

Mueller & Wilde, Milwaukee. Mueller & Wilde of Milwaukee furnished the plumbing and steam-fitting work for the plant under an elaborate system that admirably accomplishes its purposes. The appliances for distributing the steam which is to do the work of heating the great plant, and also to convey the surplus heat to distant buildings and there utilize it, are finely constructed and reflect credit upon the manufacturers, a standing advertisement of their mechanical skill and execution.

Keeley & Smith, Milwaukee. Keeley & Smith of Milwaukee furnished the dynamo which turn the power given to them into light and make it available for the various purposes it serves either within the plant or outside in the streets and business houses and residences. They are a never-failing source of wonder to the crowds of visitors, and their beneficent results are appreciated by all who find their product of great and pleasing utility.

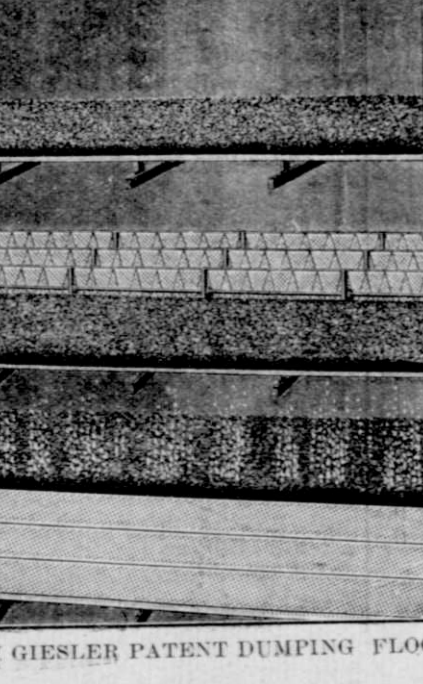

Milwaukee Bridge and Iron Works. The Milwaukee Bridge and Iron Works furnished all the structural iron and steel that entered into the construction of the great buildings, in itself an important portion of the work. It took a great quantity of iron and steel to complete the buildings, and the material is all of excellent quality and modern design, furnishing both beauty and strength to the structure and bringing with them the fireproof qualities absolutely needed for the plant. In this age of the world when iron is taking the place of wood in great buildings, the Milwaukee Bridge and Iron Works have an important mission to perform, and their reputation for promptness in execution and integrity in carrying out its contracts have given them an enviable business reputation.

The mason and carpenter work was done by local contractors, Herman Oppenorth of Kewaskum and Charles Martin of Barton led the mason work, and Louis Brandt and Joseph Miller of Kewaskum the carpenter work. Mi-channel Keller of Milwaukee was the millwright. In justice to all these artisans it should be said that their work was done in the best style and received the hearty commendation of the principal contractors.

Disraeli Rejoiced. Disraeli, it is said, laughed only once in the House of Commons. Gladstone had made an impassioned speech in favor of the Union of Wallachia and Moldavia. Disraeli pointed out that the result would be the extinction of the independence of these people, and the only thing left would be the remnant "which would be painted with admirable eloquence by the rhetorician of the day." In reply, Mr. Gladstone said that he would not be guilty of the affected modesty of pretending to be ignorant that that designation, "the rhetorician of the day," was intended for himself. Mr. Disraeli interrupted with the remark: "I beg your pardon; I really did not mean that." Gladstone's face expressed amazement and indignation, and Disraeli sat down with a satisfied smile that told of his equipment.

A writer in Forest and Stream asserts that the criterion of modernity is manifested to a greater or less extent by all the lower animals, and he has compiled a list of eighteen crimes, which are commonly committed by birds, beasts or reptiles. The incidents include murder, perjury, fraud, suicide, theft, kidnapping, highway robbery, polygamy and drunkenness.

TOWERS OF SILENCE.

Strange Method of the Parsees in India of Disposing of Their Dead.

Near Bombay the Parsees have built huge structures called "Towers of Silence," in which the bodies of their dead are given over to the vultures. About these towers an awful, weird stillness always prevails. But the solemn silence of death is in all lands. Every year, in 100,000 American homes, the sorrow of a silence caused by that dread monster—Consumption—is known, but its frightful ravages would be almost wholly prevented and recovered for Consumption were kept in every home. To show what wonderful cures this marvelous medicine will effect we will tell T. C. Faulkner, of Wickliffe, Ky., tell how it saved his life. "I was taken very ill with a severe pain in my right side. I was attended by two physicians, who told me I had consumption. The pain moved from my side to my breast. I coughed night and day and had frequent hemorrhages of the lungs. All believed I had but a few months to live. For nearly two years I had been unable to do any work. For eighteen months I had been unable to lie down in bed. All the sleep and medicine I could get did me any good, until a friend advised me to try Dr. King's New Discovery. I used thirteen bottles and am, to-day, as well and hearty as I ever was in my life. I am a carpenter and lost one day from work on account of sickness." This grand remedy is also the quickest and surest cure on earth for Obsolete Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Pleurisy, La Grippe, Pneumonia, Asthma, Hay Fever, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all bronchial troubles. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Money back if not cured. A trial bottle free. At all druggists.

Help... Nature

Babies and children need proper food, rarely ever medicine. If they do not thrive on their food something is wrong. They need a little help to get their digestive machinery working properly.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF COD LIVER OIL WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES OF LIME & SODA

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.

will generally correct this difficulty.

If you will put from one-fourth to half a teaspoonful in baby's bottle three or four times a day you will soon see a marked improvement. For larger children, from half to a teaspoonful, according to age, dissolved in their milk, if you so desire, will very soon show its great nourishing power. If the mother's milk does not nourish the baby, she needs the emulsion. It will show an effect at once both upon mother and child.
