A MESSAGE FROM PEKIN.

Dispatch Dated June 26, Shows that Situation was Desperate.
TIENTSIN ATTACKED.

The imperial government at Peking, the secretary declared, was in communication with the outside world, and there was no reason why Washington should not be permitted to communicate to it. Secretary Hay pointed out that while some credence could be put in the advice of the Chinese sources, the best way to prevent their accuracy and authority was to place the finger on their lack of organization and lack of control. The representatives of several nations manage their civil and military affairs largely without cooperation. The ranking officers of each nation naturally have jurisdiction over the operations of his government's troops. Questions of policy are discussed daily, but they have not the power to enforce the wishes of the majority. Admiral Seymour's method of commanding is to make requests, which the Chinese are bound to obey. The Chinese have instances of the ranking officers holding aloof from operations of which they are not personally interested.
