CARVING SETS AND OTHER THINGS

Remind us of Thanksgiving. Everyone prepares for this great American Day. The housewife usually begins by considering her table appointments and figures if she has enough spoons and forks and what pieces she will have to add to give her turkey the right setting.

If you want a carving set that will make carving a pleasure, you will want one of those we sell. They are made of highly-tempered steel and are as good as money can buy.

Silver knives and forks, also spoons must not be overlooked, besides other pieces in silver and cut glass. Let us help you supply the missing articles.

That Watch of Yours!

May we enquire about its health? Is it pretty well? Does it do its work alright?

Or are you sometimes tempted to "say things" to it because it isn't behaving?

You shouldn't blame the watch, though, because it isn't its fault. It always does its best. YOU are the one to blame.

An unsatisfactory watch is always a tired watch—a dirty watch. And when we are so near to you with all these repair facilities, your watch ought to be as clean as a new pin—and ought to run "right on the dot."

ST. MICHAELS.

A very pretty wedding took place on Tuesday at the St. Michaels church, when Miss Elizabeth Schneider and Jacob Schladweiler, both of here, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride was attired in a white messaline gown and carried lilies of the valley and roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Barbara Schneider as maid-of-honor, who wore a white embroidery gown and carried carnations. Miss Annie Schladweiler, a sister of the groom, was bridesmaid. She was also dressed in white embroidery. The groom wore the customary black suit was attended by Albert Schladweiler, a brother of the groom, as best man, while Wm. Schneider acted as groomsman. Little Paulina Schneider, sister of the bride was the flower girl.

For the occasion the bridal party entered the church to the strain of the wedding march played by Miss Margaret Stockhausen. The local choir rendered some choice selections. After the ceremony the happy couple and a number of friends repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where the celebration was celebrated in grand style. After showers of congratulations, dinner was served to over 75 guests. The night fantastic was then typed until the early hours of Wednesday morning. Music was furnished by John Koden.

Mr. and Mrs. Schladweiler will reside at New Prospect where the groom has rented a farm. Mrs. Schladweiler is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nic. Schneider. She is a lady of sterling worth of character and high esteem by all who know her. She is especially well fitted for the position which she will now as a dutiful wife and the maker of a happy home. She has been the leading soprano singer of the local church choir for several years, the vacant place will be well noticed by all her companions. Her husband is one of St. Michaels young men, who has the most favorable impression upon all who know him. He will no doubt prove a worthy help mate to the young lady, whom he has chosen for a life companion. May their path be strewn with roses, fair and flowery, to the end is the wish of their many friends here.

MARRIED ON LAST SATURDAY

Miss Emma Stark, Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stark, Becomes the Bride of Kilian Honeck

TO RESIDE IN THIS VILLAGE

The Young Couple will Make This Village Their Home. The Groom is Employed by L. Rosenheimer

Last Saturday afternoon at 3:30 P. M. the bride and groom of the town, Miss Emma Stark and Kilian Honeck, both of the town of Kewaskum, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony. The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Martha Giese of Milwaukee, as maid of honor, while Jos. Honeck, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. After the ceremony the bride and groom repaired to the home of the bride's parents, where a wedding supper was served. After supper the occasion was celebrated in a most elaborate manner in the Stark building on Main St., this side of the bridge. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Stark of the town. She is a young lady of accomplished ways and is held in high esteem by all who know her. She for the past year kept house for her brother, Otto Stark, who owns a blacksmith shop in this village. The groom is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Honeck of the town. He is very well known and a very industrious young man. He has the famous Viennese comic opera success, "The Girl in the Train," known during its European run as "Die Geschiedene Frau." Much interest has attached to this offering by reason not only of its European success, but also for the reason that it enjoyed a remarkable run at the Globe Theatre, New York, and has since duplicated these successes on the road. A number of the capable singers and comedians together with an unusually handsome and well trained chorus will be seen at the Davidson and ten musicians are carried with the company to augment the regular orchestra of the theatre. The book of "The Girl in the Train" is by Lee Fall, who wrote "The Merry Widow" and the music is the work of Victor Fall, composer of the "The Dollar Princess." The American adaptation has been made by Harry B. Smith. Another argument against the legality of the law was the tax on residents of Wisconsin on all their income even if part of it was derived outside the state. Taxing non-residents on Wisconsin income may also exceed the power of the state outside its territory. For the income tax it was urged that any detail of assessment which is wrong may be dropped without impairing the general right to lay a graduated tax, and that the progressive rate is expressly permitted by the recent amendment to the state constitution.

The federal constitution, it was pointed out, demands only uniformity in taxes consistent with adequate government and it is recognized that no tax can be exactly just. The legislature has the right to tax inequality by another and still not violate the fourteenth amendment.

INCOME TAX LAW IS ARGUED

Its Constitutionality Now Before Supreme Court

MANY LAWYERS ARE HEARD

A Large Array of Lawyers is Heard on Both Sides at Madison

Madison, Wis., Nov. 20.—Arguments involving the constitutionality of the income tax law passed by the last legislature were made in the state supreme court today. The cases before the court are those of Bolens, plaintiff, against the secretary of state, state treasurer and members of the state tax commission, and Wending and others against the secretary of state and others. The first was argued by Benjamin Pose and C. F. Fawcett for the plaintiff, and by Russell Jackson, deputy attorney general; J. E. Dodge, formerly a justice of the supreme court, and George C. Green the defendant, and the second case by J. G. Flanders and George D. Van Dyke and D. S. Wegg for the appellants, and Russell Jackson, J. E. Dodge and Geo. Green for the respondents. The relator's attorney contended that the court should take original jurisdiction to save the taxpayers of the state from threefold incomes of different sizes. Before the legislature has exceeded its authority in delegating powers of fixing salaries of assessors to the commission, also that it violated the law uniformity since there are several rates of taxation for incomes of different sizes. Besides the graduated tax might be reversed and the highest tax put on the smallest incomes. The progressive tax also applies to corporations with different incomes. Other discriminations were urged in the law in taxing corporations and partnerships, married and single men, at different rates. The nature of the new coach of the train jumped the track as the train was approaching the station, which caused the engineer to stop the train at the foot of Wisconsin street. The whole bunch was in a hand and the next thing was to hurry to the theatre which was done with one of John I. Beggs' special.

After enjoying the show the crowd went to Schiltz's Palm Garden to spend an hour. At this place refreshments were indulged in. In this crowd we noticed the following Messrs. and Messrs. L. P. Rosenheimer, David Rosenheimer, A. L. Rosenheimer, Otto E. Lay and Yours Truly, Mrs. H. J. Lay, the Misses Edna Schladt and Lilly Schlosse and the Messrs. Doctor Klumb and Byron Rosenheimer. This was not the whole bunch, among those who were absent at this enjoyment was N. W. Rosenheimer and Miss Malinda Holley, who enjoyed themselves at the College Inn, where they partook of a cup of hot tea. At 12:30 the journey homeward was made and at 2:00 A. M. the train arrived at the local station any too soon for all. When alighting from the train our well known merchant Lehman hummed the song of Home Sweet, Home, which was very appropriate.

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE

This week instead of being in this village I was far away so will tell you something about the trip. The reason for going was on account of a theatre party, which a number of our popular citizens were going to. As I had considerable business to take care of I left somewhat earlier for the large city. I was accompanied on my trip by Fred Schlieff, sub carrier on Route 2. I, of course, bought a round trip ticket, and upon handling it to Conductor McEachron, the conductor who had charge of the freight train, which was wrecked near Christ, Becker's place a number of years ago, he told us a comical story. He stated ha, ha, you bought a back-up ticket. Not knowing what he meant, his story began, which was as follows. This reminds me, when a party at Campbellsport asked the station agent for a ticket to Fond du Lac and back-up, I'll just wager that this party had a long time waiting for the back-up ride, but came back some day. He stated it did not take long after this however, that Fred fell into slumber and did not awake from it until the arrival at Milwaukee. Fred was also in the theater party to carry bundles as far as where the cars stop, which I am certain thankful for. While waiting for a car I spied our lumberman, who was also waiting to have a five-cent ride. Minutes passed and passed and no car came so the distinguished lumberman thought best to walk and thereby saved the price of admission to John I. Beggs' palace.

After finishing my business and looking at some of the street clock I saw it was nearly time for the train on which the remaining citizens of the theater party were to arrive. Reaching the depot and anxiously waiting for the train which was over an hour late, I was amused to see our lumberman again, and after his bearing that the train was so late, he became very nervous, so to pass his time, he happened to meet a friend, who bought him a cigar, which he smoked to his hearts content.

At 20 minutes after 5:26 arrived at the depot but instead of getting down to Cudahy as usual an accident happened, which was of the nature that the rear coach of the train jumped the track as the train was approaching the station, which caused the engineer to stop the train at the foot of Wisconsin street. The whole bunch was in a hand and the next thing was to hurry to the theatre which was done with one of John I. Beggs' special.

TELLS TAR STORY

KANSAS TEACHER RECITES DETAILS OF ATTACK ON LONELY ROAD.

Victim Accuses Barber Who Decoyed Her to Scene of Offering Insults and Leaving Her in Hands of Five Masked Men.

Lincoln Center, Kan.—Mary Chamberlain, the Shady Bend school teacher, told details of the attack upon her when she was tarred by a number of men at the trial of Edward Ricord and four others before a crowd of spectators that filled every inch of space in the courtroom.

Apparently at her ease, Miss Chamberlain answered the questions of the attorneys as to details of the "tar party." Once she became angered at questions propounded by the defense and flashed back a sharp answer, but she quickly recovered her even demeanor.

Her story of the affair was told amid a dead silence in the courtroom, as every spectator leaned forward eagerly to hear her dramatic recital.

Her narrative set forth how Edward Ricord, a village barber, decoyed her out into the country on the pretense of going to a dance, his alleged insults and their decision to return home; how when they had gone a short distance a party of five masked men dragged her from the buggy, while Ricord fled, and the subsequent pouring of tar on her body and limbs, while others rubbed it in with their hands; how by this experience she was rendered unconscious and later awoke to find herself being driven home by the companion who had deserted her, and how the tar clung to the body for days.

When the defense had finished its cross-examination, the state rested its case against John Schmidt, Sherrill Clark and A. N. Simms, accused of being accomplices in the attack.

The testimony of Edward Ricord, Chester Anderson and Delbert Kindsparger, has caused a hush to fall upon corner conclaves in which the "tar party" previously had been largely discussed in the light of a joke.

Grim details given in evidence have created a generally more serious view of what is now often styled "the county's disgrace."

Ricord told of meeting Sherrill Clark, one of the defendants, on the Sunday following the attack.

"What do you think they will do to me?" Ricord testified he asked Clark.

"If they send you to the penitentiary," the witness alleged Clark said, "Mary will go, too, as I have evidence which will convict her."

"Has anyone told you that if you testified you had improper relations with Miss Chamberlain you would be sent to prison?"

Ricord was averse to answering and asked the court if a reply was compulsory. Told that it was, Ricord said:

"Sheriff Wolford."

Ricord testified that he twice attempted familiarity with Miss Chamberlain while they were in the buggy, and that she had rebuffed him.

"She would not stand for my putting my arm around her and she said she wanted me to turn around and go home," he said.

Sheriff Wolford followed Ricord on the stand. The sheriff made a general denial of Ricord's charge against him.

OVER 200 WOMEN ARRESTED IN ATTACK IN PARLIAMENT.

Suffragettes Determined to Introduce Resolution Are Dispersed.

London.—The suffragettes of London made their promised assault on parliament and were repulsed by a large force of police, after they had done considerable damage by stone throwing.

For a time the police withstood the attack of the women and prevented them from entering the house of commons. More than 200 women were arrested. There were many minor casualties, the women resisting the police bitterly and forcing them to use their clubs.

Thousands of women resorted to desperate tactics, picking up stones and hurling them at government buildings. Hundreds of persons were struck by the flying missiles, and in some cases injuries were severe.

Hundreds of windows were broken, not alone in the government offices, but in nearby residences.

The situation grew so menacing after the window smashing was begun that the police reserves were called out, and as they came dashing upon the scene in patrol wagons the crowd scattered and inside half an hour had dispersed.

The demonstration was planned against the manhood suffrage bill which now is in a fair way of passing parliament.

STANLEY PROBERS SIT AGAIN

House Committee Resumes Its Investigation of the United States Steel Corporation's Doings.

Washington.—Entirely independent of the government's suit to dissolve the United States Steel corporation, the so-called steel trust, the Stanley investigating committee of the house resumed its hearings here and began to examine some of the biggest figures in the steel industry.

It is learned that the committee hopes to unearth sufficient additional evidence against the steel trust to force the attorney general to file an amended petition against this giant industrial concern.

The Democratic investigators claim that the department of justice has already "stolen their thunder" in filing the original petition and that the Stanley committee is entitled to credit for the action against the steel trust.

SEES DANGER FOR STATE UNIVERSITY

E. P. CARY, HEAD OF WISCONSIN SCHOOLS, RESUMES ISSUING OF OPEN LETTERS.

CALLS IT A PAMPERED CHILD

Declares Institution Receives Money from State That It Does Not Know What to Do With—Alleges Suppression of News of University.

Madison.—Charles P. Cary, state superintendent of schools, has issued a broadside against the University of Wisconsin, as part of a series of letters relating to school matters which he began two years ago.

The letter is addressed "to the teachers and the general public."

Supt. Cary declares there is danger that the university will ultimately conduct the state, instead of the state conducting the university.

He calls the institution a "pampered child," and says the state gives it money continually and that the institution at times does not know what to do with it.

A further charge is made that the news of the university is suppressed and that the people who maintain it do not know how the institution is conducted and what strides it has made.

His letter ends with a warning that instead of a state university he shall have a university state. He says the people should have that if they want it, but he deems it his duty to warn them in time.

CITY LICENSE FOR PEDDLERS

Case of Transient Merchant Arrested at Lake Mills Argued Before Federal Court at Madison.

Madison.—Motion as to right of Judge A. L. Sarborn of United States district court to sit in the case of the city of Lake Mills against Frank Cloud, a transient merchant, was argued today in federal court.

Cloud was arrested at Lake Mills for selling medicines without first procuring city license. He petitioned the federal court to issue a writ of habeas corpus directing the chief of police of Lake Mills to release him and the petition was granted.

Cloud immediately brought suit in the federal court on the ground that the city ordinance is in violation of the constitution of the United States and the state of Wisconsin and that the ordinance is unreasonable, extortionate and prohibitory in that it provides for a daily license fee of $25.

The city of Lake Mills contends that the question is one for state courts and not federal court. Judge Sarborn will decide the case early in December.

PICTURE FILM STARTS FIRE

Many Lives Endangered by Blaze in Enterprise Building, Milwaukee—Loss is $275,000.

Milwaukee.—The explosion of a film in the office of a moving picture concern in the Enterprise building, Second and Sycamore streets, started a fire which endangered the lives of hundreds of occupants of the building and caused damage estimated at $275,000.

That the building did not burn was due to the prompt work of the fire department and the fact that the building is of the fireproof kind. The fire started on the third floor. After burning the woodwork flames leaped from the windows and licked up the woodwork outside the windows of the floor above. The floors in the building are 12 inches thick and of concrete and the fire could not communicate otherwise than through the windows.

More than 3,000 films, which are used to send out to moving picture theaters in this section, are said to have been destroyed.

News Notes of Wisconsin

Milwaukee.—Believing that a second operation will cure the defects from which he is said to be subjected, Rudolph Schrader, the first person upon whom "moral surgery" was tried in Wisconsin, will be subjected to the knife for the second time, if county physicians will perform the operation. Judge Backus sanctioned such a proceeding and steps to have the operation performed will be taken by the last attorney.

Eau Claire.—Fire which entirely destroyed Botsford Brothers' general store at Altoona, Wis., and the residence of Mrs. W. L. Botsford and the leechhouse of William Howard, fanned by a high wind, threatened the entire town, but the work of a fire engine and firemen sent from Eau Claire stopped the spread of the flames. The loss is estimated at $30,000, with an insurance of about $15,000.

Fond du Lac.—Miss Clara Giddings has been selected as Gov. McGovern's partner to lead the grand march at the military ball opening the new armory in this city. She is a daughter of the late George Giddings, a manufacturer and banker, and has been a teacher in Fond du Lac's public schools. The ball is to be held the night of Nov. 28.

Racine.—An annual appropriation of $100 made by Racine county to each blind person assisted Annie M. Davies to obtain an education and secure employment at Oconto, Wis. In a letter addressed to the county board of supervisors, Miss Davies thanked the county and asked that her name be stricken from the roll of those who receive aid.

Madison.—Thousands of Wisconsin corporations, which have been awaiting a court decision on the workmen's compensation law, are reported about to accept the conditions of the new statute. Under this "wounded soldiers of industry" will receive compensations without being required to take their cases into court.

La Crosse.—Five thousand school children are to be enlisted in the fight upon tuberculosis according to plans of the La Crosse anti-tuberculosis committee announced today, by selling Christmas stamps. Conditions here as to tuberculosis have been found to be particularly bad.

SYNOPSIS.

Jack Keith, a Virginian, now a border platoon, is riding along the Santa Fe trail on the lookout for roaming war parties of savages. He notices a camp fire at a distance and, seeing a man attached to a wagon and at full gallop pursued by men on ponies. When Keith reaches the wagon the riders have massacred two men and departed. He searches the victims' pockets and finds a pocket with a woman's portrait. He resolves to hunt down the murderers. Keith is arrested at Carson City, charged with the murder of a woman named Willits. He goes to jail full of realizing the peril of swift border justice. A companion in his cell is a negro, who tells him he is Neb and that he knows the Keith family back in Virginia. Neb says one of the murdered men was John Sibley, the other Gen. Willis Waite, formerly an officer in the Confederate army. The platoonman and Neb escape from the cell, and later the two fugitives become lost in the sand desert. They come upon a cabin and find its one occupant to be a young girl, whom Keith recognizes as a singer he saw at Carson City. The girl explains that she came there in search of a brother who had deserted from the army. A Mr. Hawley induced her to come to the cabin while he sought to locate her brother. Hawley appears, and Keith in hiding recognizes him as Black Bart. Hawley tries to make love to the girl. There is a terrific "battle" in the darkened room in which Keith overcomes Black Bart. Hawley is appropriated, and the girl who says that her name is Hope joins in the escape. Keith explains his situation and the fugitives make for Fort Laredo, where the girl is left with the hotel landlady. Miss Hope tells that she is the daughter of General Waite. Keith and Neb drift into Sheridan, where Keith meets an old friend, Dr. Fairbank.

CHAPTER XVII.—(Contd.)

"You say there was no trace?"
"Nothing to travel on after forty-eight hours—a posse started out next morning, soon as they found him—when they got back they reported having run the fellows as far as Cimmaron Crossing—there they got across and escaped."
"Who led the posse?"
"A man called Black, I think," a man said.
"Black Bart?"
"Yes, that's the name; so, I reckon you didn't bury Willis Waite this time, Captain. You wouldn't have thought he was a dead one if you had heard him swear while he was telling the story—it did him proud; never heard him do better since the second day at Gettysburg—had his ear shot off, then, and I had to fix him up—Lord, but he called me a few things."

Keith sat silent, fully convinced now that the doctor was telling the truth, yet more puzzled than ever over the peculiar situation in which he found himself involved.
"What brought the General up here?" he questioned, finally.
"I haven't much idea," was the reply. "I don't think I asked him directly. There was a hint dropped, however, now you speak about it. He's been over those papers, and doesn't feel satisfied regarding the report of the posse. It's my opinion he's trailing after Black Bart."

"The dining-room was thinning out, and they were about the only ones left at the tables. Keith stretched himself, looking around.
"Well, Doctor, I am very glad to have met you again, and to learn Waite is actually alive. This is a rather queer affair, but will have to work itself out. Anyway, I am too dead tired tonight to hunt after clues in midst of this babel. I've been in the saddle most of the time for a week, and have got to find a bed."

"I reckon you won't discover such a thing here," he said. "Got seven in a room upstairs, and others corded along the hall. Better share my cell—only thing to do."
"That would be asking too much—I can turn in at the corral with Neb; I've slept in worse places."
"Couldn't think of it, Keith, and the doctor got up. "Besides, you sleep at night, don't you?"
"Usually, yes," the other admitted.
"Then you won't bother me any—no doctor sleeps at night in Sheridan; that's our harvest time. Come on, and I'll show you the way. When morning comes I'll rout you out and take my turn."

Keith had enjoyed considerable experience in frontier hotels, but nothing before had ever quite equalled this, the pride of Sheridan. The product of a mushroom town, which merely existed by grace of the temporary railway terminus, it had been hastily and flimsily constructed, so it could be transported elsewhere at a moment's notice. Every crack of a bed echoed from wall to wall. The thin partitioned off the ceiling from the ceiling by a foot or two, and the slightest noise aroused the entire floor. And there was noise of every conceivable kind, in plenty, from the blare of a band at the Pioneer Dance Hall opposite, to the energetic cursing of the cook in the rear. A discordant din of voices surged up from the street below—laughter, shouts, the shrieks of women, a rattle of dice, an occasional pistol shot, and the continuous yelling of industrious "barkers." There was no safety anywhere. An exploding revolver in No. 47 was quite likely to disturb the peaceful slumbers of the innocent occupant of No. 15, and every sound of quarrel in the thronged barroom below caused the lodger to curl up in momentary expectation of a stray bullet coursing toward him through the floor. With this to trouble him, he could lie there and hear everything that occurred within and without. Every creak, stamp, and more was faithfully reported; every curse, blow, snarl re-echoed in his ears. Inside was hell; outside was Sheridan.

Wearied, and half dead, as Keith was, sleep was simply impossible. He heard heavy feet tramping up and down the hall; once a drunken man endeavored vainly to open his door; not far away there was a scuffle, and the sound of a body falling down stairs. In some distant apartment a fellow was struggling to draw out his tight boots, skipping about on one foot amid much profanity. That the boot conquered was evident when the man crawled into the creaking bed, announcing defiantly, "If the landlord wants them boots off, let him come an' pull 'em off." Across the hall was a rattle of chips, and the voices of several men, occasionally raised in anger. Now and then they would stamp on the floor as an order for liquid refreshments from below. From somewhere beyond, the long-drawn melancholy howl of a distressed dog greeted the rising moon.

"Oh, You Mean Hope? Do You Know Her?"

Out from all this pandemonium Keith began to unconsciously detect the sound of voices talking in the room to his left. In the lull of obstructing sound a few words reached him through the slight open space between wall and ceiling.
"Hell, Bill, what's the use goin' out again when we haven't the price?"
"Oh, we might find Bart somewhere, and he'd stake us. I guess I know enough to make him loosen up. Come on, 'n' get goin'."

"Not me; this town is too near Fort Hays; I'm liable to run into some of the fellows."
A chair scraped across the floor as Bill arose to his feet; evidently from the noise he had been drinking, but Keith heard him lift the latch of the door.
"All right, Willoughby," he said, thickly, "I'll try my luck, an' if I see Bart I'll tell him yer here. So long."

He shuffled along the hall and went, half sliding, down stairs, and Keith distinguished the click of glass and bottle in the next room. He was sitting up in bed now, wide awake, obsessed with a desire to investigate. The reference overheard must have been to Hawley, and if so, this Willoughby, who was afraid of meeting soldiers from the fort, would be the deserter Miss Hope was seeking. There could be no harm in making sure, and he slipped into his clothes, and as silently as possible, unlatched his door. There was a noisy crowd at the farther end of the hall, and the sound of some one laboriously mounting the stairs. Not desiring to be seen, Keith slipped swiftly toward the door of the other room, and tried the latch. It was unfastened, and he stepped quietly within, closing it behind him.

A small lamp was on the washstand, a half-emptied bottle and two glasses beside it, while a pack of cards lay scattered on the floor. Fully dressed, except for a coat, the sole occupant lay on the bed, but started up at Keith's unceremonious entrance, reaching for his revolver, which had slipped to the wrong side of his belt.
"What the hell!" he exclaimed, started and confused.
The intruder took one glance at him through the dim light—a boy of eighteen, dark hair, dark eyes, his face, already exhibiting signs of dissipation, yet manly enough in chin and mouth—and smiled.
"I could draw while you were thinking about it," he said, easily, "but I am not here on the fight. Are you Fred Willoughby?"
The lad stared at him, his uncertain hand now closed on the butt of his revolver, yet held inactive by the other's quiet assurance.
"What do you want to know for?"
"Curiosity largely; thought I'd like to ask you a question or two."
"You—your're not from the fort?"
"Nothing to do with the army; this is a private affair."
"The boy was sullen from drink, his eyes heavy.

"Then who the devil are you? I never saw you before."
"That's very true, and my name wouldn't help any. Nevertheless, you're perfectly welcome to it. I am Jack Keith." No expression of recognition came into the face of the other, and Keith added curtly, "Shall we talk?"
There was a moment's silence, and then Willoughby swung his feet over the edge of the bed onto the floor.
"Fire away," he said shortly, "until I see what the game is about."

CHAPTER XVIII.

Intervening Willoughby, coolly, yet without in the least comprehending how best to proceed, Keith drew toward him the only chair in the room, and sat down. Miss Hope—more widely known as Christie MacLaire—had claimed this drunken lad as her brother, but, according to Hawley, he had vehemently denied any such relationship. Yet there must be some previous association between the two, and what this was the platoonman proposed to discover. The problem was how best to cause the fellow to talk frankly—could he be reached more easily by reference to the girl or the gambler? Keith studying the sullen, obstinate face confronting him, with instinctive antagonism over his intrusion, swiftly determined on the girl.
"It was not very nice of me to come in on you this way," he began, apologetically, "but you see I happened to know your sister."

"My sister? Oh, I guess not!"
"Yes, but I do," throwing a confidence into his tone he was far from feeling, "Miss Hope and I are friends." The boy sprang to his feet, his face flushed.
"Oh, you mean Hope? Do you know her? Say, I thought you were giving me that old gag about Christie MacLaire."
"Certainly not; who is she?"
"That's more than I know; fellow came to me at Carson, and said he'd

Merely Obeyed the Rules

How the Late Tom Johnson, in Early Life, Squirmed Out of Very Tight Place.

When the late Tom Johnson started in life he drove a horse car in Indianapolis. One night there was a big storm of sleet and snow and the tracks were almost hidden. Johnson was on the night shift, and in the storm he drove his car two blocks beyond a curve before he realized the car was off the tracks and slipping along on the ice. He tried to pull the car back and failed. Thereupon he unblinded the horses, drove them back to the barn and left the car where it was. Next day the superintendent called him. "Here, Johnson," he said, "what do you mean by driving a car off the track and then leaving it in the street?"
"Why," Johnson replied, suavely, met my sister on a stage west of Topeka. I knew he was lying, because she's home over in Missouri. Finally, I got it out of him that she claimed to be my sister, but her name was MacLaire. Why, I don't even know her, and what do you suppose she ever picked me out for her brother for?"

He was plainly puzzled, and perfectly convinced it was all a mistake. That his sister might have left home since he did, and drifted West under an assumed name, apparently never occurred to him as possible. To Keith this was the explanation, and nothing could be more natural, considering her work, yet he did not feel like shattering the lad's loyalty. Faith in "perhaps the fellow who told you," he hazarded blindly, speaking the first thought which came to his mind, "had some reason to desire to make you think this MacLaire girl was your sister."

The suggestion caused him to laugh at first; then his face suddenly sobered, as though a new thought had occurred to him.
"Damn me, no, it couldn't be that," he exclaimed, one hand pressing his head. "He couldn't be workin' no trick of that kind on me."
"When do you mean?"
"A fellow named Hawley," evasively. "The man who claimed to have met my sister."
"Black Bart? Hawley?"
The boy lifted his head again, his eyes filled with suspicion.
"Yes, if you must know; he's a gambler all right, but he's stuck to me when I was down and out. You know him?"

HIS NAME MOST APPROPRIATE

"Knapp" It Was and Drowsy Delegate Proceeded to Live Up to Cognomen.
During the morning prior to the opening of the national convention, a special meeting of those delegates already arrived was held to discuss and vote on some preliminary measures. These met in a smaller hall, opposite the convention hall, and when they were all assembled in the stuffy room one of the members leaned back wearily in his chair and promptly fell asleep.
After an hour's session, the chair man called a vote on a certain measure. All responded but the sleeper, whose snores now and then echoed through the room.
"Here! wake that man up!" demanded the chairman, at this point "What's his name, anyway?"
"No one being able to tell, and no one following the chairman's order to wake the sleeper up, that functionary carried upon a ballot clerk to carry out the order. So accordingly the clerk hurried down the aisle to the dozer, shaking him vigorously by the arm, asking him his name the while.
With a broken snore he perforated the atmosphere, the sleeper awoke and "What's his name?" again called out the impatient chairman.
At this, the clerk straightened up from the unknown member's chair and, at a glance, recognized the name of the sleeper as "Knapp."

JOHN CHINAMAN'S INTERNAL TROUBLE

HALT BEEF TRIAL

NEW DELAY IS WON BY PACKERS IN TRUST TRIALS AT CHICAGO.

HABEAS CORPUS HELD VOID

Government Scores Victory Through Decision of Judge Kohlsaat That He Has No Jurisdiction in Matter of Writ—Defendants Remanded.

Chicago.—A delay of two days in the starting of the criminal trial against them was secured by counsel for the packers indicted for violating the Sherman anti-trust act.
The delay was granted by Judge C. C. Kohlsaat in the United States circuit court after the defendants had been defeated in efforts to make effective a writ of habeas corpus. An appeal to the United States Supreme court was allowed by Judge Kohlsaat.
After deciding to quash the writ of habeas corpus and ordering the defendants remanded to their sureties, Judge Kohlsaat agreed to delay formal entry of his decision and order for two days. This, it is asserted, will postpone the opening of the criminal trial of the packers long enough to permit the indicted men to get their appeal to the United States Supreme court, before they automatically accept jurisdiction in the district court by appearing at the trial there.
James Sheehan of special counsel for the government, made sharp objection to this delay.

U. S. ARRESTS GEN. REYES

Mexican is Charged With Violating the Neutrality Laws and Held Under $5,000 Bond.

San Antonio, Tex.—Gen. Bernardo Reyes was arrested here by a United States marshal on the charge of violating the neutrality laws. The arrest was made in pursuance of an indictment returned by the federal grand jury at Laredo.
Besides General Reyes four Mexicans of prominence and the sheriff of Webb county, Texas, are charged with aiding and abetting the violation of the neutrality laws.
A warrant for Reyes' arrest was issued by United States Commissioner after the report of the indictment had been received. The local charge is inciting a revolutionary friendly power.

MISSIONARIES DIE IN CHINA

Score is Reported to Have Occurred in Hainan, Capital of Szechuan Province.

Shanghai.—A massacre of foreigners in Hainan, capital of Szechuan, is reported. A large force of Honan rebels seized at a point twenty miles from Hainan.
A number of foreigners in general missionaries were made at the League mission in Lo-an, south of Su Chuan, province of Szechuan, according to reports received here. The French colonial minister officially reports the massacre, but gives no details.
The League mission is conducted by English Baptist ministers who, with Scandinavians, are the principal inhabitants of the region.

BOOM FOR GOOD HIGHWAYS

Roads Congress at Richmond, Va., Favors Cullom's Measure—May Receive Indorsement of Meet.

Richmond, Va.—The postoffice department's interest in highway improvement was made manifest at the good roads congress by Fourth Assistant Postmaster General P. V. DeGraw, who came representing Postmaster General Hitchcock. Mr. DeGraw is the active head of the rural free delivery system, whose carriers travel 400,000,000 miles over country roads each year.
Senator Cullom's bill for the construction of seven national highways between Washington, D. C., Buffalo, Seattle, San Francisco, San Diego, Austin and Miami will probably receive the unanimous indorsement of the convention.

Three Die in Hotel Fire.

Nashua, N. H.—Three men are dead and a fourth is in a hospital in a serious condition as the result of inhaling smoke in a fire that burned the interior of the Benton hotel, a lodging house near the Union station.

Chase Quits as Manager.

New York.—Hal Chase resigned as manager of the American league club at a conference with Frank Farrell, owner of the club. He will play first base next season, receiving the same salary as last season.

Oberlin Has $4,000,000.

Oberlin, O.—At the annual session of Oberlin college trustees, just ended, general reports placed that institution's total property, including endowment funds, buildings and equipment, at $4,000,000.

Report Castro is Defeated.

London.—The Venezuelan consul here received cable advices from Caracas informing him that ex-President Castro, at the head of a body of revolutionists, met with a disastrous defeat near San Cristobal.

RAMON CACERES SLAIN

PRESIDENT OF SANTO DOMINGO IS ASSASSINATED.

Assassins Shoot Him Down as He Leaves House of Friend—Dies at U. S. Legation.

Washington.—Ramon Caceres, president of Santo Domingo, was assassinated by political malcontents in San Domingo city, according to reports to the state department.
The American charge d'affaires reports that President Caceres was leaving the house of Leon Vasquez, where he had made a call, when he was shot by two men, Luis Tejera and Jaime Mote, Jr. The wounded man ran to a stable near the American legation, where he was pursued and fatally shot by the assassins.
Friends carried the dying man to the American legation, where he passed away half an hour after the attack. The assassins fled to San Cristobal.
All reports received here through official channels indicate that the city of Santo Domingo is quiet following the assassination, but there are evidences of unrest throughout the republic and this is likely to develop into a serious situation. Mr. Russell, the American minister of Santo Domingo, is at present in this country on leave of absence, and the secretary, Mr. Endicott, is acting as charge.

JOHN D. EYES STEEL QUIZ

George W. Murray, Counsel for Oil Magnate, Attends Inquiry Into Alleged Trust.

Washington, D. C.—George W. Murray, New York, counsel for John D. Rockefeller, appeared at the inquiry into the United States Steel corporation by the Stanley committee of the house of representatives. Expectation of testimony involving interests of Mr. Rockefeller in Lake Superior ore regions was responsible for Mr. Murray's appearance.
Testimony relating to a loan of $1,000,000 from Rockefeller by Alfred and Lenias Merrill of Duluth to develop ore lands and of a subsequent foreclosure had been forecast by members of the committee. Charles H. Martz of St. Hillaire, Minn., the first witness before the committee testified that he made the original survey for the Duluth, Mesaba & Northern railroad and that the road was built for the purpose of developing the Mesaba iron ore range.

"I am a literary man whose nervous energy is a great part of my stock in trade, and ordinarily I have little patience with breakfast foods and the extravagant claims made of them. But I cannot withhold my acknowledgment of the debt that I owe to Grape-Nuts food.
"I discovered long ago that the very bulkiness of the ordinary diet was not calculated to give one a clear head, the power of sustained, accurate thinking. I always felt heavy and sluggish in mind as well as body after eating the ordinary meal, which diverted the blood from the brain to the digestive apparatus.
"I tried foods easy of digestion, but found them usually deficient in nutriment. I experimented with many breakfast foods and they, too, proved unsatisfactory, till I reached Grape-Nuts. And then the problem was solved.
"Grape-Nuts agreed with me perfectly from the beginning, satisfying my hunger and supplying the nutriment that so many other prepared foods lack.
"I had not been using it very long before I found that it was turning out an unusual quantity and quality of work. Continued use has demonstrated to my entire satisfaction that Grape-Nuts food contains the elements needed by the brain and nervous system of the hard working public writer." Canada at the Chicago Land Show

WILL MAKE A MAGNIFICENT EXHIBIT OF GRAINS AND GRASSES, VEGETABLES AND FRUIT.

A carload of grain in straw, grasses and other of the products of Western Canada arrived at Chicago the other day, and is now installed in the Coliseum, where the United States and irrigation exposition is under way. Those who are interested in the "Back to the land movement" will find in the Canadian exhibit one of the best displays of the agricultural products of Western Canada that has ever been made. There are representative men there, who will be pleased to give the fullest information regarding the country.

The exhibit shows what can be done on the free grant lands of that country and most of the grain was produced on the farms of former residents of the United States who have taken advantage of the homestead lands of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta.

The vegetable exhibit will attract a great deal of attention, and some marvelous potatoes, carrots, turnips, cabbage and cauliflower are shown.

It is true that the homestead area is being rapidly taken up and the bulk of that now to be had lies north of the Saskatchewan river in a portion of the country known as the park country. Here there is a large quantity of open prairie interspersed by beautiful groves of poplar and willow. Water is in abundance, hay is plentiful and consequently fodder for animals is right at hand. Those who have taken advantage of farming in these districts and watched the efforts of those in the prairie proper feel that they have the advantage of their brother, who is not able to secure fuel and the other conveniences of the park district on his own farm.

The crop conditions throughout Western Canada the past year have been generally good, and some wonderful crop yields of wheat, oats and barley are recorded. The Canadian Government, under whose auspices the exhibit spoken of is being made, is preparing reports on crops in the different Western Canada districts, and while these will not be ready for distribution at the land show commencing on the 18th of November and closing on Dec. 8th, application made to the Canadian Government agent nearest you will bring them to you as soon as they are published.

PHYSICIAN ADVISES CUTICURA REMEDIES

"Four years ago I had places break out on my wrist and on my shin which would itch and burn by spells, and scratching them would not seem to give any relief. When the trouble first began, my wrist and shin itched like poison. I would scratch those places until they would bleed before I could get any relief. Afterwards the places would scale over, and the flesh underneath would look red and feverish. Sometimes it would begin to itch until it would wake me from my sleep, and I would have to go through the scratching ordeal again.

Our physician pronounced it "dry eczema." I used an ointment which the doctor gave me, but it did no good. Then he advised me to try the Cuticura Remedies. As this trouble has been in our family for years, and is considered hereditary, I felt anxious to try to head it off. I got the Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Pills, and they seemed to be just what I needed.

"The disease was making great headway on my system until I got the Cuticura Remedies which have cleared my skin of the great pest. From the time the eczema healed four years ago, until now, I have never felt any of its pest, and I am thankful to the Cuticura Soap and Ointment which certainly cured me. I always use the Cuticura Soap for toilet, and I hope other sufferers from skin diseases will use the Cuticura Soap and Ointment." (Signed) Irvan Hutchinson, Three Rivers, Mich., Mar. 16, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 17 K, Boston.

MISS SABINA PENNELL counted the turkeys in her flock.

Not that she expected to discover that she had any more or less than she had the day before.

But for a month she had counted those turkeys, estimated what they would bring in the market, and vainly endeavored to make that sum equal the amount she needed to pay the interest on the mortgage held on her little place by Elijah.

Elijah was the local money lender and note shaver. When Elijah had concluded the preliminaries of a loan with you, you began to realize why he was rich. He could bind you to more different impossible agreements than any one else. Elijah owned farm after farm—all the result of his shrewdness in the money-lending line. As to sharing notes, he was credited with cutting out everything but the date and adding that to his discount.

When he induced Miss Sabina Pennell to borrow five hundred dollars from him and to give him a mortgage upon her little place, he had really acted more decently than ever before. He did not want Sabina's place. What he wanted was Sabina herself. He had proposed to her—proposed in about the tone and with about as much sentiment as he usually manifested when he offered to lend one-third the value of a farm for a mortgage on the whole thing. Sabina had refused him, promptly.

She had refused him several more times, and then Elijah apparently resigned himself to his fate. But he knew Sabina's circumstances; he knew that when her father died and left her entirely alone in the world she would get into debt. So he kept track of her debts, which was not a hard thing to do, when every dealer in the town was a debtor of his.

At the psychological moment he offered to lend her five hundred dollars, secured by the mortgage. He pointed out to her that he didn't need the money and wanted to invest it, and that so long as she paid the interest on it she need never bother about repaying it.

"It's just putting that much money out at interest, for me," he smiled. "And it will relieve you of worry over what you may owe, so you can manage your place and make it pay you."

When Sabina signed the mortgage notes and received Elijah's check she had her first almost-tender feeling toward him. And when she went to him and asked him to give her a little more time on the interest, she had been really affected by his generous agreement.

"Don't let it worry you a minute, Sabina," he said. "Pay it when you can. I don't consider it a real business matter—between me and you, you know."

But now Sabina owed him ninety dollars, just for interest alone.

Now, Sabina was not the conventional maiden lady in reduced circumstances. She was not a baggard, thin, rheumatic woman of uncertain years, eking out an existence. She was just twenty-five years old, neat and pretty, and it took all she made teaching school to keep her. She had relied on her turkeys to pay the interest at least. How in the world she should ever pay the principal of the mortgage had not occurred to her.

But Elijah, with ninety dollars interest coming to him, was not the Elijah who had so generously loaned her the money. Elijah was telling her that times were hard and money was close, and although he hated to do it, he simply had to have money to meet his own obligations. So, since the mortgage was overdue, and the interest was unpaid—why—

"I'll do the best I can to raise the money, Elijah," Sabina said. "I've got forty-nine turkeys, and when I sell them—"

"But forty-nine turkeys won't bring you over sixty dollars," Elijah said. "You'll get about ten cents a pound for them, and might get five of them weigh more than twelve pounds."

Sabina looked out into the orchard, where her turkeys were strutting about. Elijah leaned toward her.

"Haven't you changed your mind, Sabina?" he asked.

"Changed my mind? About what?" "About marrying me."

Sabina turned to him, with her eyes flashing.

"Well, Elijah Green! So that was why you made me let you lend me that money, and that was why you were so nice about the interest, and that was—"

Elijah got as far as the door, then turned. He saw Sabina looking hopefully out of the window.

"Sabina," he said, softly, "I didn't mean that. I don't want to hurt your feelings. I want to make you happy. Haven't I shown you how much I think of you?"

"Yes," she replied, "five hundred dollars worth, with interest."

Elijah slammed the door as he went out. At the gate he met Jethro Jones, who was turning in.

"Good morning, Elijah," Jethro said, cheerfully. "Trying to cut me out?"

"Hub!" growled Elijah, hurrying on. So it came that when Sabina opened the door for Jethro her eyes were red and her face was pale. Jethro's prompt inquiry as to what was wrong was answered by a tumultuous account of the whole affair.

"And so you expected your turkeys to pay the interest?" Jethro smiled.

"Ye-yes," faltered Sabina.

"Well, excuse the language, but darn Elijah's skin and his skin game, too! I wish there was a way for you to trip him up."

Jethro's sympathy led him on to other statements and remarks having nothing to do with the turkeys or the mortgage or Elijah Green, but he did not find Sabina any more responsive than she had been to Elijah. In fact she was not even as responsive.

She pointed out to Jethro that if she married him people would say he simply took her out of pity because she had lost her home. Jethro went away marveling greatly at the unreasoning powers of women.

Next day he hurried up the walk to Sabina's door, while she was putting away her breakfast things preparatory to going to the schoolhouse.

"I've got it, Sabina!" he exclaimed. "I've got the idea. Now, you let me sell your turkeys for you, and don't interfere with me at all, and I'll make them bring the money you want."

To this, after much persuasion, Sabina agreed. She went to her school with a lighter heart than she had had for some time. It was true that Jethro was going to do this because of his friendship for her—but then there were friendships and friendships, she told herself.

Acting under Jethro's instructions, Sabina did not sell a turkey until a week before Thanksgiving. People who called and asked for one were told that she was not yet ready to sell.

When Jethro Jones got Elijah Green to change five hundred dollars in bank notes into gold coin for him, Elijah asked:

"Like gold better than greenbacks, Jethro?"

"Yep," Jethro answered. "Gold is always money, you know."

Elijah, at his request, gave him fifty ten-dollar pieces.

"What are you going to do with it?" he asked.

"Well, I'm going to invest it in turkeys," Jethro answered. "I've bought Sabina Pennell's flock, and I thought of buying up a whole lot here and there and making a little speculation on the Thanksgiving rush."

"That's the way to make money, Jethro," Elijah smiled. "How much did you pay Sabina for her turkeys?"

"Well, I've really taken them on commission," Jethro explained. "I've got them over at our place now, in the back yard. Maybe you'd like to pick out a nice fat one for your folks."

Elijah was willing, and accompanied Jethro. Into the back yard they went, and walked among the turkeys.

"I'll do the best I can to raise the money, Elijah," Sabina said.

Elijah was trying to decide which one he would have, when Jethro pulled out the package he had in his pocket.

"Gold is tolerably heavy," he said to Elijah. "I'll just parcel this around in my—"

At this he slipped, his hands flew up and the air was filled with a shining shower of bright pieces. The turkeys ran in a mass to the scene.

"Shoo! Shoo!" Jethro yelled. "Shoo them away, Elijah!"

Elijah stooped vigorously, but the turkeys were busy, and by the time they were driven to the end of the yard not one of the bright pieces was visible.

"What do you think of that?" Jethro cried.

"Five hundred dollars in gold swallowed by those turkeys!" Elijah said. "What will you do?"

"I'll have to kill them all and get the money out of their crops."

At this moment, Henry Tuttle, whose buckster wagon had been standing down the street, drove up. With just a flicker of a wink he called to Jethro:

"Ready to sell them turkeys?"

"Not now," Jethro said. "Guess I'll have to keep 'em myself."

"Well, tell you what I'll do. I'll give you three dollars apiece for them. Turkeys is going up."

"Can't do it, Hen. I hate to try to use them all myself, too."

"Give you three-twenty-five."

"I don't suppose all of 'em got those pieces," Jethro said, in an undertone to Elijah. "I believe I'll take 'em up on that and let 'em have ten of 'em."

"I'll give you five dollars apiece for my choice of fifteen of 'em," Elijah declared, promptly.

"Elijah has offered me five dollars apiece for his choice of fifteen," Jethro called to Henry.

"Elijah must be tryin' to corner turkeys," Henry grinned. "Tell you what—I'll give you seven-fifty apiece for the bunch."

"Does he know about what just happened?" Elijah asked.

"He wasn't here. How could he?" Jethro said.

"I'll give you eight apiece for the whole lot."

"Turkeys are in demand, Henry," Jethro laughed. "Elijah bids eight."

"Well, I'm busy. I've got to be movin' on," Henry asserted. "I'll give you ten."

"They've got to be killed and picked for market," Elijah said. "You must remember that, Jethro. I'll give you eleven-fifty apiece for 'em just as they stand."

"Elijah bids eleven-fifty," Jethro called to Henry.

"Little too steep for me," Henry decided, clucked to his horse and drove on.

"The turkeys are yours," Jethro said.

"Well, now, let's understand this deal," Elijah said. "I'm payin' you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys—"

"I'm payin' you eleven-fifty apiece for the turkeys and their contents."

and their contents. No monkey business about that, is there? I get the turkeys and their insides, and all, no specifyin' what is inside of 'em."

"That's the agreement," Jethro answered. "No specifications whatever. Elijah. It's a plain business transaction."

"Can I kill the turkeys here?"

"It would clutter the place up too much. You can put them in crates and haul them off."

"Well, I've got your five hundred in greenbacks in my pocket yet. Here it is, and here is sixty-three-fifty more is that right?"

"Right as a trivet," Jethro agreed and the deal was closed.

That evening he turned over to Sabina five hundred and sixty-three dollars and fifty cents, telling her what he had done.

"It wasn't honest, Jethro," she objected. "You've got to give it back to Elijah."

Further discussion of this ethical point was interrupted by Elijah, who burst into the house angrily.

"You—you scoundrel!" he shouted shaking his fist at Jethro. "You robber! You bunco man! There wasn't a thing in those turkeys' crops but brass pool checks! You swindled me I'll have the law on you."

"Well, Elijah," Jethro smiled, easily. "Sabina and I have just been talking the matter over, and I agree with Sabina that it wasn't quite fair to make you take your own medicine. Now, if you'll agree to be reasonable and to take Sabina's turkeys for the interest that is due you, I'll give you back your money. And, of course she'll have to have plenty of time to pay off the mortgage, because if people found out about your turkey deal they'd make so much fun of you—"

"All right," Elijah snarled. "But how's she goin' to pay the principal?"

"That," Jethro replied, dropping his arm about Sabina's waist, "is some thing I'll have to advise her about when we are married."

As the gate clicked after the departing form of Elijah Green, Jethro lifted Sabina's chin again, but before kissing her he observed:

"You ought to have had me as sales manager long ago, Sabina."

Turkeys Credited to India. In 1524 the first mention of turkeys in England is noted, and evidently they were brought to Europe by Merchants who came by way of the Levant, a confusion of the West Indies and East Indies resulting in the bestowal of a wrong name. The present French names, canards and dindons show that they were believed to have come from the Indies. By 1541 English gourmets had realized the value of the turkey and a rule was promulgated by Archbishop Cranmer prohibiting the serving of more than one at a feast. Fourteen years later they had become so common that records show they were sold for as little as four shillings each, and by 1573 well-to-do farmers were accustomed to serve them for Christmas and other state occasions.

Sing Hymn of Praise. Those who have in their youth an early childhood lived close to nature and grown up near to the very heart of things; those who have found pleasure in the woods, the fields, the grasses, the flowers, in bees and birds, in sun shine, rain or snow, are sure of happiness—they can never be bored or discontented. They have found the keynote in nature's harmonies, and I will always respond to their call. The old-fashioned manner of keeping Thanksgiving may be a thing of the past, but the true child of nature is always ready to sing the hymn of praise at the harvest time of the year.

Opposite Remedy. "Is sleeping in the open air a remedy?"

"Yes, and strange to say, it is tentative one, too."

Hats for Matrons

Effective Costume in Plain Amethyst Delaine With Lace Insertion and Embroidery.

There is something about fringe which adapts it to millinery designed for older women particularly well. It is made of rich materials, as lace, chenille, satin and silk, and is carefully and compactly put together. Now that it is so fashionable, many hats are trimmed with it, and some of them entirely covered with the narrow silk fringes.

There are so many bonnet-like shapes this season that there is a wider choice than heretofore for older women. These shapes are unusually softening and becoming and a very agreeable change from turban and toque shapes which have been worn for so many years. Older women should consider them with favor. They are small, with roomy and comfortable head sizes. They fit well down over the crown of the head and stay in place without difficulty. Worn with a face veil, they are very neat, as there is no chance for the hair to blow about. There is a very great variety of these shapes, their main difference being in the backs. Some of them turn down, some are brimless at the back and others turn smartly upward, allowing room for a low coiffure.

In Fig. 1 a very attractive shape is shown which may be had in felt, velvet or any of the materials used for winter hats. Velvet loops and chenille fringe headed by a band of roses, form the trimming. This shape is worn both by young and elderly women, with equal appropriateness. More particularly designed for older women, the hat in Fig. 2 follows the lines of a bonnet. The crown is a soft plume effect made of fringe applied to quills and a fringed cabochon. This is a very new model, rich and dignified in effect. It is made in the darker shades of the rich colors which characterize this season's millinery.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Hair Ornaments. Imitation amber and tortoise shell pins and barettes for the hair, handsomely studded with brilliants, are now in great demand, as the fashionable hair dressing, with the soft waved pompadour and Psyche knot drest high on the head, calls for both the ornamental pins and barettes for evening wear. A revival of the mound or mop hair dressing in a much more graceful form is noted. The hair is waved and softly parted at the left side of the head. The bar is then coiled and piled high and wide across the top of the head in a becoming and natural way. Jeweled pins and the new buckle barette to match are very effective with this hair dressing.—Harpers' Bazar.

White Serge for Winter. For early winter wear white suits of cloth, corduroy or heavy ribbed serge are very smart. The coats are cut on Empire lines, with a seam just above the waist line, and immense revers and large flap pockets give the suit a youthful appearance. To be worn with one of these smart suits, recently ordered for a miss of Green, a large soft hat of white silk beaver, with a fetching flat tailored bow of Persian lamb as its sole trimming, was chosen. The handsome fringe of lace that finished the front of the coat was caught by another bit of Persian lamb.

Food After the Flood. Every moving thing that liveth shall be food for you; as the green herb have I given you all. But flesh with the life thereof, which is the blood thereof, shall ye not eat.—Genesis 1:3-4.

Business Instinct Strong.

A photographer tells as a joke on himself that a woman, accompanied by a little boy, came into his studio the other day. "I want my plicker took," she said. "I see that you take plickers for four dollars a dozen this week, so I come for mine. And I want this little boy took in the same plicker with me." "Yes, madam—but, of course, we made an extra charge outside this special rate when two pictures are taken at once." "Oh," says the lady, "but I'll keep the boy in my lap. That's the way I do in the street car, and no body ever says anything."

Explained. An old lady, the customer of an Irish farmer, was rather dissatisfied with the watery appearance of her morning's cream and finally she complained very bitterly to him. "Be aisy, mum," said Pat. "You see, the weather of late has been so terrific hot that it has scorched all the grass off the pasture land, and O! have been compelled to feed the poor basties on water lilies!"—Ideas.

Surprised. "Do you mean to tell me you really live in Chicago?" "Yes. You speak as if you thought it remarkable for me to do so."

"Why, I supposed people merely stayed in Chicago until they got money enough to live in New York."

There are still plenty of green pastures for all the Lord's sheep.
