PIONEER CITIZEN DIES

Chas. Miller, Druggist, Passes Away at Hospital at Fond du Lac.—Death Due to Embolism.

It is with mingled feelings of sorrow and regret that we are compelled to announce the death of Chas. Miller, who passed away at the St. Agnes hospital at Fond du Lac during the wee hours of last Monday morning, March 25th. Death being due to embolism, seven days after undergoing an operation for strangulated hernia from which he had all but recovered.

THE LATE CHAS. MILLER

Deceased was born in Bavaria, Germany on July 15th, 1870. When a young man of 27 years he immigrated to this country. In the year 1872 he married Katherine Reck of West Bend. Their union was blessed with the children, namely: Lulu and Edward C. A. Shearer, of North Lake, Wis. The wife of the deceased preceded him in death a trifle longer than ten years ago.

Mr. Miller was engaged in the druggist business for over 50 years, commencing his vocation in Germany. His first location in this country was in the town of Houston. In the year 1874 he moved to this village, where he has resided ever since conducting a pharmacy and photographer's gallery.

Mr. Miller was a good and well respected man and was at all times held in the highest esteem. He had a good education and was very intelligent. He never allowed prejudice to take the place of better judgement. But what is better than all he was a kind man and loving husband and father, and for this reason his death will prove a wound that cannot be healed in the family circle.

One week prior to his death the deceased was taken severely ill with strangulated hernia, therefore removed to Fond du Lac where he underwent an operation. He was doing very nicely and indications were bright that he soon would recover. That his death was very sudden is shown by the fact that at 3 A. M. on Monday the night nurse visited him, and found the patient to be resting quietly. At 6 A. M. she again visited him to bathe him for the morning, but to her horror found him dead. On Sunday he also was feeling quite well. The news of the death of the deceased was circulated throughout the community, not only was a shock to his family but also to the community at large. Deceased was a member of the Kewaskum Lodge No. 191 I. O. O. F. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon with services at 1 P. M. at the house. The remains were transported to West Bend on the 2:32 P. M. train, where they were interred in the Union cemetery. Rev. Hoard of West Bend officiated.

Elected for Three Year Term.

Following is a clipping taken from the Iron River Reporter: "As noted in our high school news of last week the board of education at its recent meeting re-elected Mr. J. E. Cavanaugh, Supt. of Schools. This re-election is for a term of three years, and we congratulate both the board and Mr. Cavanaugh. School affairs have gone remarkably smoothly this year, and the superintendent has shown himself wise and tactful in dealing with both teachers and pupils. The news of the above no doubt is of very great interest to this community as Mr. Cavanaugh was principal of the local high school for ten years. We extend hearty congratulations to the professor."

The Cause of Rheumatism.

Stomach trouble, lazy liver and deranged kidneys are the cause of rheumatism. Get your stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels in healthy condition by taking Electric Bitters and you will not be troubled with the pains of rheumatism. Charles B. Allen, a school principal of Sylvania, Ga., who suffered indelible torture from rheumatism, liver and stomach trouble and diseased kidneys, writes: "All remedies failed until I used Electric Bitters, but four bottles of this wonderful remedy cured me completely." Maybe your rheumatic pains come from stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Electric Bitters will give you prompt relief. 50c and $1.00. Recommended by all Druggists. (Advertisement)

INCOMETAX LAW AMENDED

Madison, Wis., Mar.—(Special)—The income tax law has been amended by a bill, which has just passed the legislature so that errors in the income assessment of 1912 may be corrected in the assessment for 1913.

The law is amended further so that any errors in future returns or assessments of incomes may be corrected in the same manner as are assessments of personal property.

Much uneasiness has been felt over the state in regard to errors that crept into the last income tax statement and assessments. Those who made errors in their returns invariably appealed to the tax commission for relief as soon as the mistakes were discovered. The tax commission was without authority on the matter as no provision had been made in the law for altering the statements. The new law provided an adequate remedy for all who feel aggrieved towards the first assessment or any subsequent assessment.

The main portion of the bill provides the machinery for making corrections in returns and assessments of incomes in the same manner as corrections are made in personal property assessments, except that no town or village board common council or county officers can make any alteration in the income tax assessment without the written approval of the assessor of incomes. This provision grants more immediate relief. Tax experts have long since agreed that the income tax system is the most just system of taxation. Income tax measures have failed in many states owing to the lack of adequate administrative machinery. It is generally conceded that the Wisconsin law comes nearer the acme of perfection than any other law heretofore enacted. With the gradual smoothing out of rough spots the income tax is becoming popular with all classes.

LAW CURBING MONOPOLY.

Madison, Wis., Mar.—A sweeping law curbing monopoly and promoting co-operation will almost certainly be enacted by this legislature as a solution, in large part, of the problem of the high cost of living. Co-operative marketing and the cost of living were first made an issue in Wisconsin in 1910 in the Republican platform. The planks were drafted and the direction of Senator LaFollette by Prof. John R. Commons, now a member of the Industrial Commission, Prof. E. A. Gilmore, of the University, Fred J. McKenzie, editor of LaFollette's magazine, and other advisors of the Senator.

The legislature of 1911 to carry out the plank for investigation of the subject, created the board of public affairs. State Senator Hy. Krumrey brought the attention of this board to the cheese trust and the need of co-operation among cheese operators. The board made particular investigation in this industry, being assisted by Prof. H. C. Taylor, of the Department of Agriculture Economics of the university. Upon recommendation of the board of public affairs, the university now has Prof. Hibbard investigating the whole subject of state interference.

In 1911 President Van Hise, of the university, Prof. Commons Prof. T. S. Adams, of the tax commission, Dr. Charles McCarthy of the reference library, and several others made a long study of high prices. Thereupon, Charles W. Craue, of Chicago, provided a fund to employ expert drafters to draw up a bill for Senator LaFollette. Two conflicting plans were presented, one to contract by government commission the price of commodities; the other to prohibit discrimination in price between localities and individuals and other unfair practices and so protect the consumer. The bill by Senator LaFollette opposed such curbing of price by government commission as would recognize existing capitalization or watered stock as a basis for fixing prices.

Two bills were drafted but the bill for control of prices by commission was finally given up. The other bill provided an interstate paid commission and prohibited price discrimination and all unfair practices. The time for the introduction of the bill in congress was not opportune.

Several bills have been introduced at this session of the Wisconsin legislature. Most far reaching of these bills is a bill by Senator Browne, and the bill creating a market commission, recommended by Governor Mc Govern in a special message. The latter bill is moulded after the interstate trade commission bill combining with it the production and promotion of co-operative enterprises as pledged in the platform of 1910.

The bill has not been closely examined by the members of the legislature, but it does not prohibit control of prices and it is thought by some that it might indirectly bring about such control. The recognition of watered stock and its legalization as a basis of fixing prices, thereby fastening upon the people, for all future generations, the tribute that the trusts are now exacting as income upon watered stock, is the national plan which Senator LaFollette has fought against for several years. The progressives in the Wisconsin legislature will undoubtedly insist that

LIGHTNING RODS PROTECT

State Fire Marshal's Department Sends Out Bulletin No. 9, Called "The Lightning Bulletin."

Last year some editors made light of our issuing a lightning bulletin in the cold month of March. Their answer came in a lightning loss in Wisconsin of $73,495.00 in April and $149,655.00 in May; so another warning to rod builders ought not to come amiss at this time.

All state fire marshals know that lightning rods do protect. The experience of insurance companies furnishes further proof. Thirty Ohio Mutuals in 1911 paid lightning losses as follows: On buildings not rodDED $25,511, on buildings not rodDED $29,998.05. Thirty-four Pennsylvania Mutuals paid like losses as follows: On buildings rodDED $116.50, on buildings not rodDED $77,168.30.

Our department records for the last half of 1912 show a fire loss due to lightning as follows: Three fires on rodDED buildings $4,050.00, 26 fires on buildings not rodDED $334,080.00.

The facts in the three cases where lightning struck rodDED buildings are these: First, the rods were up 20 years. The owner knew nothing of their condition or depth of grounding. Second, a barn was rodDED. A silo was then erected near the barn, but not rodDED. Lightning struck the silo and fire was communicated to the barn. Third, there was but one ground rod, and that went to a depth of 3½ feet only.

These instances rather prove than refute the fact that lightning rods do protect. Lightning in this country destroys more property than matches, sparks and kerosene together, and more than any other cause, except defective flues. It kills two and one-half times as many people as railroad kills passengers.

No large fire loss can be prevented so easily and cheaply as that from lightning.

MATERIALS.—Use a copper rod or one of galvanized iron or steel. Iron is not more of a conductor as copper but dissipates the energy of the flash better and is less likely to cause side flashes. Copper cables should weigh three ounces per square lineal foot. All points should be tipped with non-corroding metal.

LOCATION.—Rods should extend from moist earth, over the building, to moist earth on the other side. Placing rods at diagonally opposite corners is best. On the building rods should be run along the ridge. Avoid placing rods near interior piping.

POINTS.—All chimneys, cupolas and ventilators should have separate points. Points should not be more than twenty feet apart. A rod should run direct from an outside chimney to the ground.

METAL WORK.—Roof, gutters hay carriers and all other exterior metal should be connected with the rods or grounded separately.

FASTENINGS.—Rods should be fastened with clips of the same material as the rods, and held at a distance of one inch or more from the roof to prevent leaves from lodging. Never use so-called insulators.

GROUNDING.—All rods should be grounded to a depth of not less than eight feet—more if necessary to reach permanent moisture. Lightning seeks underground water beds. You can never overdo the matter of grounding.

A copper or steel ground wire is best.

WIRE FENCES.—Grounding wire fences at every sixth post would prevent the heavy loss of live stock.

MAKES.—There are about twenty goods makes of rods. We cannot and do not recommend any particular make.

UNBUSINESS HAS BEEN FELT OVER THE STATE IN REGARD TO ERRORS—THESE ERRORS IN THE FUTURE MAY BE CORRECTED.

BARABOO FIGHTS THE INCOME TAX

DELEGATION APPEARS IN SUPPORT OF MEASURE EXEMPTING RINGLING CIRCUS.

ASSESSMENT CALLED UNFAIR

Claim Made That Ninety Per Cent of Show Corporation's Business is Done Outside of State—Income Tax of Firm is $8,000.

Madison.—In attempting to adjust the income tax propositions to business conditions in Wisconsin as applied to particular lines of activity, a big delegation from Baraboo attempted to impress the joint hearing of several committees that Ringling Brothers' circus was to them more important than the income tax.

Assemblyman Carpenter's bill, which was under consideration, proposes to exempt incomes when 90 per cent of the business from which the income is derived is transacted outside of Wisconsin.

Former Senator Avery said that the Ringling shows meant a lot to Baraboo and that it was one of the important industries of that city.

Probe for Seed Companies. An investigation of seed companies is being made by the assembly committee on agriculture.

The Jennings bill, relating to the overcrowding of street cars, was advanced to engrossment in the assembly.

Qualifications of Mrs. Schwittay of Marinette Held Not to Meet Requirements of Law.

Marinette.—On a showing that Mrs. Gertrude Schwittay taught for only thirty-four and one-half days in Wisconsin and that she did not possess a certificate to teach in Wisconsin, at that time, Attorney General Walter C. Owen has reversed his first decision and now holds that Mrs. Schwittay is not eligible as a candidate for superintendent of schools.

Recommend Caine Bills. Madison.—The senate committee on judiciary recommends for passage the two bills prohibiting the sale of cocaine or similar drug except on prescription of a physician.

COLUMBUS VICTIMS PILE UP

Hundred and Fifty Lost There, While Town of Miamiburg, With 4,000 Inhabitants Is Reported in Ruins—Accurate Estimate of Fatalities Will Be Impossible Until Wreckage Is Exposed to View—Food Supply Is Depleted.

Grafton, W. Va., March 27.—The Baltimore & Ohio telegraph operator here received from an operator at a tower near Cincinnati, saying that a commuter train from Loveland, Ohio, to Cincinnati, had gone through a bridge and all on board, about 200 persons, apparently had been lost.

Columbus, Ohio, March 27.—Governor Cox received a message by telephone from Dayton by John Bell, the Bell telephone operator, in which it was stated that 200 bodies had been found.

The greatest need of flood sufferers at present is water. The Dayton water supply has been cut off.

Dayton, O., March 27.—The first hope to lessen the flood horror which has dominated this city for thirty-six hours came when the swirling lake, more than fifteen square miles in area, subsided two feet in depth.

The recession of water began about midnight and continued slowly, although the business section still is submerged from eight to twenty feet.

Any reliable estimate of the number of lives lost will be impossible until the ruined homes are out of water. Although the impression holds that several hundred have perished, it is said by those on the scene that the death toll may shrink to near 200 when a count can be made.

Property Loss Will Total Millions. The city is exerting all its remaining strength to avert the threatened aftermath of famine and plague. There is no safe drinking water available, and food supplies are almost exhausted. Mortality will be high among sick persons and infants.

150 Dead at Columbus.

Columbus, O., March 27.—The death list in Columbus began to grow when communication with the West Side was partly restored and may reach 150. News of the drowning of twenty-two persons is confirmed, apparently, and the list of those missing and believed to be drowned numbers almost a score.

Four Hundred Children Dead.

A school building that was known to have housed no less than 400 school children before the waters rushed in that direction is entirely submerged, and as far as can be ascertained all of those little ones have gone to watery graves.

In no place is the water less than six feet deep. In Main street, the down town section, the water is 20 feet deep.

The horror of the flooded district is heightened by more than a dozen fires, which can be seen in the flooded district, but out of reach of the fire fighters.

Down town the officers are filled with men who are unable to go home, and the upper floors and on some of the roofs of the residences are helpless women and children. Hundreds of houses, substantial buildings in the residence districts, many of them with helpless occupants, have been washed away.

Hospital Reported Washed Away. The St. Elizabeth hospital, with 600 patients, was reported to have been washed away. The building was

DEVASTATION BY WATERS

OVER BUCKEYE STATE

DAYTON—Accurate estimate of the number of dead will be impossible until water subsides. From 500 to 1,000 lives may have been lost. Seventy thousand are fighting for their lives in turbulent lake covering city. Food supplies are failing. All water is contaminated. Work of rescue rendered futile by lack of boats. Fire breaks out among the wrecked buildings and drives the survivors from roof to roof. Militia unable to check looting. School filled with children is swept away and hospital containing 600 patients reported destroyed.

MIAMISBURG—The entire town of 4,000 inhabitants is believed to have been washed away. All communication is cut off and a relief expedition which started from Dayton, twelve miles north, has not reported.

COLUMBUS—The entire state militia has been ordered out. The state from Lake Erie to the Ohio River, and from the Indiana to the Pennsylvania lines, is being devastated. Two hundred and fifty thousand persons are homeless. Governor Cox estimates. The property damage cannot be calculated. Three are known to be dead in this city and eleven missing.

PIQUA—Five hundred and forty are reported drowned.

DELAWARE—More than thirty dead.

HAMILTON—Sixteen known dead. Fire starts in $2,000,000 factory.

LOSSES ARE GROWING WITH EACH PASSING HOUR

At Peru, with a population of 16,000, between sixty and 250 deaths have occurred and the property damage cannot be told now.

The state faces the problem of rescuing and feeding thousands, and relief is pouring into the stricken cities and towns from all sides.

Marooned Fight for Lives. At dawn the hundreds of people in Peru who were clinging to the roofs of buildings were battling hard for their lives.

Food supplies, clothing and other provisions for 5,000 people sent from nearby towns during the night had arrived to points within two and three miles of the downtown district, but at daylight currents of the water running between the business houses was too swift to admit of navigation by ordinary rowboats.

Three motor boats from Winona Lake, fifty miles away, and with these it was thought that not only food and water might soon be taken into the city, but also that the survivors might be rescued.

The break of day found anxiety in Indiana centered in Brookville and Connersville, on the White river, from which frantic appeals for aid were received by Governor Raiston.

While the appeal was being made wire communication to Connersville failed. The person who was talking with the governor said that a break in the White river levee had flooded the valley, sweeping hundreds of persons before it.

Since then it has been impossible to re-establish communication even for a few minutes and the governor fears the worst there.

Militia were ready all through the night to hurry to the town, but no train was operated in that direction.

Indians Appalled by Flood. Though the whole state is appalled by the enormity of the disaster which in twenty-four hours has drowned hundreds of persons and done property damage of nearly $25,000,000, work of repairing telephone and telegraph lines and railroads was started early.

Practically every railroad and traction company operating in the state has lost one or more bridges, with several miles of track washed out or made shaky by the flood waters.

The Washington street bridge over the White river, which connects Indianapolis and West Indianapolis, which was closed for traffic, was torn apart by the waters, the floor of the structure being carried away.

With the breaking of the day came the problem of feeding refugees to the number of 16,000. The city has appropriated enough to defray this expense, but more will be needed tomorrow.

A relief fund has been started, and it is believed this will solve that problem.

The catastrophe at Peru was caused by the breaking of a Wabash river levee, which poured a torrent into the south part of Peru.

WILSON ISSUES AN APPEAL

Asks All Who Can to Send Money for Flood Sufferers to Red Cross.

Washington, March 27.—The terrible floods in Ohio and Indiana have assumed the proportions of a national calamity. The loss of life, and the infinite suffering involved prompt me to issue an earnest appeal to all who are able in however small a way to assist the labors of the American Red Cross to send contributions at once to the Red Cross at Washington or to the local treasurers of the city.

We should make this a common cause. The needs of those upon whom this sudden and overwhelming disaster has come should quicken every one capable of sympathy and compassion to give immediate aid to those who are laboring to rescue and relieve.

SUMMARY OF GREAT LOSSES

BY INUNDATION IN INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS—Streams which have been looked upon as beauty spots sweep over the city and inundate palatial homes on Fall Creek. Night of darkness and peril passes to find thousands of refugees crying out for food and water.

PERU, IND.—Estimated loss of life from 60 to 250. Water from ten to twenty-five feet deep is running through city at rate of twenty miles an hour. Relief is being hurried there from many near-by cities. People cling to roofs all night. Some collapse and fall into raging streams.

CONNERSVILLE, IND.—White river levee breaks there and at Brookville, near by, carrying hundreds before it.

Brookville.—Forty believed dead there. Five children, all of one family, swept to death as they cling to beams. Five bridges, including Big Four span, swept away and destroyed. Refugees gather in churches and pray for relief.

LOGANSPORT, IND.—Streets flooded; water five to ten feet deep. Scores of houses swept away, and it is believed impossible that all the inhabitants escaped.

FORT WAYNE—Three thousand homes submerged in suburbs.

TERRE HAUTE—One thousand families left homeless by flood.

LEWIS MADE SENATOR FOR THE LONG TERM

Legislative Deadlock Which Has Lasted Since February 11 Broken—Sherman for Short Term.

Springfield, Ill., March 27.—Col. James Hamilton Lewis was elected United States senator for the long term of six years. The breakup of the double deadlock that has been on since January came quickly.

The election of Colonel Lewis was an endorsement of the vote of the people April 3, 1912, when the colonel received the popular advisory vote without contest in the Democratic primary.

It is big victory for Governor Dunne, who put all the force of his administration back of the Lewis candidacy and the vote of the people.

Lewis received a total of 164 votes and Funk 23.

Before the balloting it was agreed that Lawrence Y. Sherman should be the choice of the legislature for the short term for senator.

The Illinois tieup gained national significance because of the fact that Illinois had had no representation in the upper branch of congress since March 4, when Shelby M. Cullom retired after 30 years of service.

Colonel Lewis goes to Washington as the successor of "Uncle Shelby," known as the old "wheel horse" of Republicanism in Illinois.

The dead lock in the Illinois legislature on senator ship had lasted since February 11, when the first ballots were taken in the house and senate separately.

James Hamilton Lewis and Lawrence Y. Sherman, the popular choices at the Democratic and Republican primaries respectively a year ago, led in the vote, but neither received the majority of both houses necessary for an election.

The situation was complicated by the fact that there were two senatorships to be awarded—one for a full term in succession to Senator Shelby M. Cullom, whose term expired March 4, 1913, and one for two years to fill the vacancy caused by the unseating of William Lorimer.

OMAHA BURIES ITS DEAD

Tornado-Stricken City Spends Night Interring Bodies Recovered—Relief Fund is $250,000.

Omaha, March 27.—Burying the dead and work of reconstruction occupied tornado-stricken Omaha. Paying last rites occupied the time of thousands of persons during the day.

Funerals were held in all parts of the city. Many of the bodies recovered from wrecks of Sunday's storm were cared for at undertaking establishments and the greater number of the funerals were held from these places.

Whenever possible, friends of stricken families took care of bodies and had them prepared for burial.

A Legal Mind. "No use whispering soft things to that girl. She's a law student."

"How does that affect her case?" "Well, she's prompt to detect the incompetent, the irrelevant and the immaterial."

Too Cautious. "How can you distrust your daughter's suitor when in this letter he proposes to lead her to the altar?" "Well, in its very nature, isn't that a miss-leading proposition?"

STORM HITS COUNCIL BLUFFS

Big Fire Follows Gale and State Troops Are Called Into Service to Fight Flames and Prevent Looting of Bodies and Fallen Buildings—Lives Lost in Iowa Town.

Chicago, March 25.—A death toll probably reaching 300 with $15,000,000 property loss was taken by twin equinoctial tornadoes which swept through the middle west.

Omaha, Neb., is the heaviest sufferer with at least 150 dead and devastation totaling twelve millions. This takes no reckoning of the hundreds more who have been injured, scores perhaps fatally.

A broad section of the residential district of the city, abiding places of the wealthy classes was wiped out. Fire added to the general havoc. Panic ensued and state and federal troops have been called out to maintain order.

Other Nebraska towns felt the death-dealing force of the wind which swept over Iowa as well. Missouri, Indiana, Illinois, Montana, Wisconsin, Kansas and South Dakota.

Storm Hits Chicago.

As far east as Chicago the fatal force of the storm was felt, the toll there being five killed with $500,000 damage. In Milwaukee, $200,000 property loss was sustained.

As Omaha was the center of one of the tornadoes, Terre Haute, Ind., became the center of the other.

Twenty-six are dead from the storm which hit the latter city. Fifteen were lost in Yutan, Neb., between twenty-five and thirty-five in surrounding Nebraska towns, ten in Council Bluffs, Ia., while deaths of from two to fifteen persons are reported from a score of other small towns through the nine states encompassed by the two storms.

The history of the middle west contains no record of storms of such violence and attended by such appalling loss of life.

200 Killed and 700 Hurt.

Omaha, March 25.—Two hundred persons were killed and 700 injured in Omaha by two tornadoes which struck the Nebraska metropolis within a half hour of each other.

Residences, churches, colleges and stores were leveled in an area eight miles long and from two to six blocks wide.

The property loss is estimated at more than $17,000,000.

In the path of the storm's devastation are some of the city's finest buildings, and two of the most handsome parks of the city were ruined.

More than 150 residences were totally destroyed and 250 were badly damaged.

Forty blocks in Omaha are virtually in ruins. Scores of persons were buried in the ruins of their homes and others were fatally injured by falling debris.

In a picture theater the entire audience of thirty was buried when the building collapsed under the weight of the wind.

Council Bluffs in Storm's Path.

Council Bluffs, just across the Missouri river, as well as South Omaha and a half dozen suburban towns, were greatly damaged. In Council Bluffs thirteen persons are known to have been killed and scores of others injured. Dozens of persons were hurt in South Omaha by falling timbers.

All the principal churches, schools, houses and other public buildings were converted into temporary hospitals, having been provided with cots, where the injured are treated. Many who escaped death or injury are homeless.

Early in the day the city's public-spirited citizens started a relief fund and responses were rapid and generous.

WIND AND FLOODS DO MUCH DAMAGE

WISCONSIN IS SWEEPED BY THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE STORM OF THE YEAR.

RIVERS SENT OUT OF BANKS

High Water Again Endangers Fond du Lac, Large Area of City Being Inundated—$200,000 Loss in Milwaukee—Other Points Suffer.

Fond du Lac.—Following a thunder storm on March 23 the two rivers passing through this city went on a rampage and the city experienced the most disastrous flood in history. With a foot of snow covering the ground when the storm started Sunday evening, the downpour melted the snow and added to the water which poured into the already swollen streams.

For the first time in a score of years, the residence district on the east side of the city was flooded, scores of the handsome homes of the city's wealthiest citizens being isolated by water. On the west side the conditions were worse, the lowland being completely inundated for many blocks.

An appeal for help from the stricken district on the west side sent police and firemen scurrying about in boats carrying people to high land. Manufacturing and business institutions which never had to shut down for flood conditions before, were unable to operate, some because of having boiler rooms flooded, while others were isolated so that their employees could not reach them.

East of the city the farm lands were inundated and the road leading along the east shore of Lake Winnebago was washed away. A number of bridges on this road were destroyed. In the city several railroad bridges which were threatened with destruction were saved when heavy ore cars were placed on them.

Bishop R. H. Weller of the Fond du Lac diocese of the Episcopal church, had to be ferried in a row-boat from his residence to the church to conduct mass at 9 o'clock this morning.

$200,000 Damage at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee.—Damage estimated at $228,000 was done by the severe wind storm that swept Milwaukee on March 24. Five of the six coal conveyors of the St. Paul & Western Coal company went down almost simultaneously. The wind twisted the skeleton work and found resistance enough to hurl the heavy masses to the dock. It will be weeks before the damages can be repaired.

Much Damage at Racine.

Racine.—The severe storm did great damage in this city and vicinity. Fronts of stores were driven in by the rain, trees were uprooted and at Mount cemetery monuments were overturned. At the Wisconsin-Illinois league park the roof of the grandstand was carried away and parts were found 500 feet from the ball grounds.

The entire east fence of the park was razed. The damage is $1,000. The directors of the Racine Baseball association will hold a meeting and determine whether the grandstand and fences shall be rebuilt, or the park rebuilt on the south side. From all districts of the country come reports of much damage having been done by the storm.

Fox River High.

Deper.—A heavy electrical rain storm caused a high stage of water in Fox river, breaking up the ice nearly a foot thick, which went over the dam in large masses and destroyed the foot bridge which connected the piers. About two feet of water was going over the dam and the lock tender, J. M. Page, was working on the dam and had a narrow escape from being swept away with the footbridge. Some of the telephone lines were put out of commission.

The Storm in Walworth.

Elkhorn.—The storm was the severest that has visited this section in years. Barns, silos, windmills and chimneys suffered the worst, very many being destroyed. Telephone, telegraph and electric light wires are also in bad condition.

Destruction in Monroe County.

Tomah.—Eastern Monroe county suffered great loss of property through the most severe wind storm in years. Reports have been received of the destruction of scores of buildings in the rural districts surrounding this city.

Postmistress at Kohler.

Sheboygan.—Mrs. Mary Sperl, wife of the village clerk, has been appointed postmistress of the newly granted postoffice at Kohler, which has just been incorporated.

Asks $10,000 Damages.

Marquette.—For the loss of an eye George Greenwood, the son of a Marquette county farmer, wants $10,000. Suit for that sum has been filed here against the Oconto Lumber company of Oconto.

Students Contribute $7,000.

Madison.—Students in Madison contributed over $7,000 to the fund being raised for the Y. M. C. A. to pay off an indebtedness of $35,000. Half the amount required has been raised.

Lower Graduation Cost.

PARDON FOR INNOCENT MAN

Confession of Alleged Partner in Crime Frees William M. Fuller From Life Sentence.

Madison.—Gov. McGovern has granted a conditional pardon to William M. Fuller, sentenced from Dane county in 1885 to serve a life term in Waupun for the murder of an aged couple at Black Earth.

The crime for which Fuller was sentenced was a brutal one, but from the evidence it appears that William Bestor, who was found guilty at the same time and who received the same sentence was the instigator of the deed and the actual murderer. Bestor has since died, but before he died he made an affidavit that Fuller had no part in the murder.

Fuller's father and mother are now aged folk in the Soldiers' home in Waupun and it is one of the conditions of his pardon that he support them in their home in Jefferson county.

Besides the pardon of Fuller Gov. McGovern issued two absolute pardons and several other conditional pardons, paroles or commutations. One other pardon for a prisoner convicted of a capital offense was that granted to William M. Mueller, Madison, convicted on April 19, 1898, on a charge of murder in the first degree and sentenced to life imprisonment for killing Thomas Good.

No further applications will be considered by the governor until after the legislature adjourns.

DECIDE ON BOUNDARY LINE

Wisconsin and Michigan Joint Legislative Commissions Enter Into Tentative Agreement.

Madison.—The joint commission of the legislature of Michigan and Wisconsin agreed on the following water boundary divisions between the two states:

"Starting from the end of the government pier at Menominee, Mich., running in a northeasterly direction to a point three and one-eighth miles north of Boyer's Bluff on the west coast of Washington Island, thence midway in an easterly direction through the center of the passage between Rock Island, Wis., and St. Martin's Island, Mich., thence easterly to a point between the Canbury on St. Martin's Shoal to the northwestern point on Manitow Island."

BLOUSE CUT IN ONE PIECE

One of Tulle Valenciennes Is Made With Neither Trimming Nor Fullness.

The newest cream white blouses are more plain than ever. The prettiest are tulle Valenciennes, or a kind of soft point d'esprit with figures like those in the Valenciennes design. One blouse of this material has not the slightest trimming or fullness except in the back, where there is a tiny bit to cover the opening and make it look like a narrow plait. The entire thing is made in one piece, the sole garnish being little button studs of black velvet in two rows at the throat, both back and front, and on the wrists.

The neck is cut low and round, with cording of the lace in three rows. A noticeable feature of this blouse, which was designed in a house in the Place Vendome and intended for the Riviera, is the sleeves made all in one piece, with no extensions whatever. It is as though the entire thing had been molded together. No doubt the styles for the coming season will adopt ideas seen in this blouse. We have arrived at a period when cuts and finishes are at their crescendo of plainness. Nothing further is possible because effects could not possibly be any more rigid or simple.

STYLISH SPRING DRESS

Spring dress of Royal blue broadcloth with draped skirt and yoke of accordion pleated silk. The waist is made almost entirely of silk with lapels and accordion pleated short sleeves.

WANT MONUMENT RESTORED

Madison.—Appeal has been made to the State of Wisconsin through Gov. McGovern by Judge J. S. Anderson of Manitowoc, for restoration of the Wisconsin soldiers' monuments on the field at Gettysburg, Pa., reported destroyed by vandals recently. In a letter to the governor Judge Anderson urges that the matter be brought to the attention of the legislature and immediate action urged for replacing the monument. Wisconsin survivors and civil war veterans throughout the country have been much aroused by destroying of eight of the monuments erected upon the battlefield. Reports say that the monuments have been irreparably damaged by miscreants whose identity has not been discovered.

FIND BODY IN RIVER

Oconto.—The finding of the body of Violet Sylvester in the Oconto river near here has solved the mystery of her disappearance. Miss Sylvester, the daughter of a well known family of this city, disappeared under strange circumstances. During a violent storm she left her home and no trace of her could be found. She left a note advising her parents not to look for her, saying that it would be impossible to find her.

PAVING AT WAUSAU

Wausau.—On May 15 the board of public works will let the contracts for laying seven blocks of permanent street pavement. Probably vitrified brick will be chosen.

FORTUNE FOR TEACHER

Madison.—Miss Alida Degeler, an alumna of the state university and instructor in French there, has been informed that a fortune has been bequeathed to her by an uncle in Germany, whom she has never seen.

FINDS CORPSE IN RIVER

Janesville.—The corpse of a young man, which had evidently been in the rock river several months during the winter, was discovered by Mrs. Paul Blumh.

RICH MAN IS ACCUSED

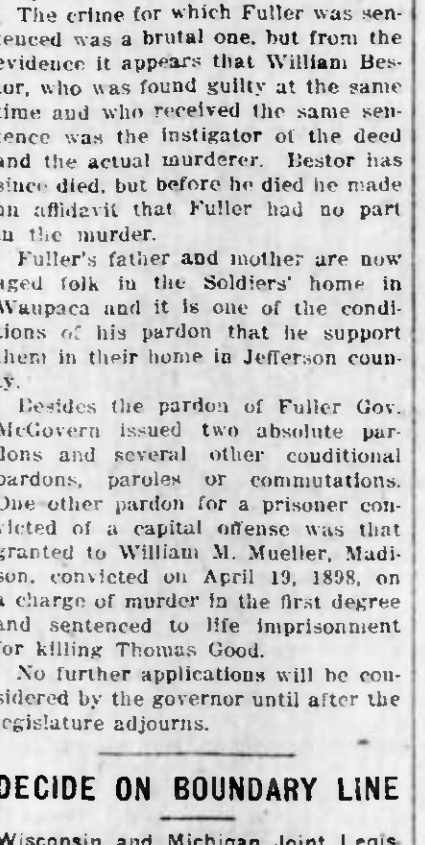

Kenosha.—C. D. Holt, one of the wealthiest men of this county, has been cited to appear before Circuit Judge Helden for alleged contempt of court. It is charged Holt wrote an intimidating letter to a juror.

DAM GOES OUT: LOSS $10,000

Manitowoc.—A loss of about $10,000 was caused when the concrete dam at Oslo, owned by the Oslo Power company, went out under pressure of a heavy ice jam.

Gown of Exquisite Design

Product of American Talent

To demonstrate their ability at designing gowns excelling the importations from France, American dressmakers have given their best effort and talent to the most beautiful gowns shown in this country. The photograph demonstrates more ably than words the result of their efforts. The gown is a Grecian gown of white chiffon with rhinestone trimmings, with a Grecian key design and rhinestone grille.

BLACK SATIN HAT RETAINED

Though White Seems to Be Coming Favorite Color, Yet This Style Is Always Smart.

While colors are to be rampant this year and spread themselves over the world like a gorgeous sunset or a rainbow, yet the tiny black satin hat is to be very smart indeed. The woman who is in doubt what to choose when she is bewildered by the sulphur, purple, bronze and red shades offered would do well to rapidly retreat to black conservatism and choose a hat of black satin that has little trimming and owes its beauty to its shape.

JUST A LITTLE TOO HASTY

Changes Are Coloner Newton Will Investigate Hereafter Before He Makes a Complaint.

"Have you noticed that dead dog in Harris' back yard?" inquired Colonel Newton at the breakfast table.

"No, I haven't; I didn't know they had a dog," he was returned.

"No more did I, but there's a dead dog lying in their back yard, and it's been there for a day or two. If it isn't disposed of by tomorrow I shall notify the health department."

As the dog was still there, stretched stiff and stark, upon his return at night, the colonel telephoned the health department to come in the morning and remove the body of a dead dog in his neighbor's back yard, which was becoming offensive.

The men came early, before the colonel had left home, to attend to the matter. He saw them pick up the animal, drop it suddenly and turn away. The colonel, satisfied, hurried out to see about it.

"Why didn't you take that dog away?" he puffed.

The officer eyed him coldly. "Aw, come off," he said, in a tone of disgust, "that's a stone dog; piece of brickly-brack; put 'em for the ash man."

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free with 32-p. Skin Book. Address Post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

URGING GREAT SALE OF CANNED FOODS

Dealers, grocers, jobbers and manufacturers all over the country are joining hands during the week of March 21st to April 5th in an effort to acquaint housewives with the economy and quality of canned foods.

It is now a well known fact that heat is the only preservative used in preparing these economical foods. The cans are sealed and sterilized at a temperature of 250 degrees, which prevents any contamination and keeps the contents fresh and wholesome all the day the tins were filled in the canneries.

National Canned Foods Week during which dealers and grocers will make canned foods their sale-features, is for the purpose of demonstrating to housewives that the cost of living can be cut with such foods, and that they may be served in hundreds of delicious ways, and thus served daily without monotony.

The farmer's wife especially finds it advantageous to relieve herself of all the cooking possible and canned foods enable her to do this. In fact, they improve the quality of her meals.

Women in every community should observe National Canned Foods Week by going to the dealer and putting in a supply. The saving and general satisfaction in the use of Canned Foods is entirely worth while.—Adv.

"Feed Dr. Hess Stock Tonic on Three Months Test at Our Expense."—Dr. Hess & Clark.

John Marx, Kewaskum, Wis. Dear Sir:—We want every stock raiser that comes into your store this Fall to go home with a package, sack or pail of DR. HESS STOCK TONIC. This is asking a good deal perhaps, but if you will read the conditions of this request we believe you will agree with us that there is not a single, solitary farmer in your whole community that would not avail himself of this opportunity. Here it is:—

"Mr. Feeder—Take home from your dealer's store a package, sack or pail— or a ton if you like of Dr. Hess Stock Tonic, feed it to your horses, cows, pigs, etc. all Winter and Spring. It costs less than a cent a day for a horse, cow or steer, and 8 cts. a month for the average hog. If, after it is used you are not satisfied with the extra profit it has made you, in increased growth and milk production, besides keeping your animal healthy and free from worms, take back the empty packages and your dealer is compelled to refund your money."

We authorize you to make the same iron-clad guarantee on DR. HESS POULTRY PAN-ACEA, to make hens lay, to shorten the molting period. INSTANT LOUSE KILLER we guarantee to destroy lice on horses, cattle, sheep ticks, etc.

Refund every cent if these preparations fail and we will reimburse you. Very truly yours, DR. HESS & CLARK.

To meet the demand of this guarantee, we have a large stock of Dr. Hess Stock Tonic, Poultry Pan-ace-a, Etc. on hand. Come in and take home any quantity you desire. We will have more goods on the way, so we can supply every customer.

SYNOPSIS.

Robert Cameron, capitalist, consults Philip Clyde, newspaper publisher, regarding anonymous threatening letters he has received. The first promises a sample of the writer's power on "certain days." On that day the head of a mysteriously cut portrait of Cameron while the latter is in the room. Clyde, a theory that the portrait was mutilated while the room was unoccupied and the head removed by means of a string, unindicted by Cameron. Evelyn, Grayson, Cameron's niece, with whom Clyde had been dating, the head of Cameron's portrait nailed to a tree, where it had been used as a target. Clyde pledges Evelyn to secrecy. Clyde learns that a Chinese boy employed by Philatus Murphy, an artist living nearby, had been given a gift from Cameron's lodgings. Clyde makes an excuse to call on Murphy and is persuaded. He pretends to be investigating alleged infractions of the game laws and speaks of finding the bones of a certain pipe under the tree where Cameron's portrait was found. The boy then tells him of a dead tree nearby. While visiting Cameron in his dressing room a Nell Grayson, sister is mysteriously averted. Cameron becomes seriously ill as a result of the shock. The third letter appears, it makes direct threats against the life of Cameron. Clyde is Cameron's sick bed. He makes empty. He tells Evelyn everything and plans to take Cameron on a yacht trip. The yacht picks up a fisherman drifting helplessly in a boat. He gives the name of Johnson. Cameron disappears from yacht while Clyde's back is turned. A fruitless search is made for motor boat seen by fisherman. Johnson is before Cameron disappeared. Johnson is allowed to go after being closely questioned. Evelyn takes letters to an expert in Chinese literature, who pronounces them of Chinese origin. Cameron's fellow college student, who recommends him to Yip Sing, prominent Chinese in New York. The latter promises to seek information of Cameron among his contacts. Cameron in Pekin. Cameron had a letter declared to Clyde that he had never been in China. Clyde calls on Dr. Addison, who learns that Addison had been in contact with one of his intimate friends, but that a falling-out over Cameron's portrait had been seen in Pekin by Addison. Clyde goes to meet Yip Sing, who Johnson, attempts to follow him to his apartment, sprains his ankle and becomes unconscious. Clyde is taken to hospital. He is sick several days as a result of inhaling charcoal fumes. Evelyn, who had been given a peculiarly strong anesthetic which renders a person temporarily unconscious. Murphy is discovered by Evelyn. Evelyn's relations with the Chinese. Miss Clement promises to get information of Cameron. Blum is the head of the Consolidated, of which Cameron is the head. It is caused by a rumor of Cameron's illness. Clyde finds Cameron on Fifth avenue in a dazed and emaciated condition and takes him home.

He was about to bid me good-night when I checked him.
"Doctor," I said, "I am glad to find you so optimistic. Before you go I want you to write me a bulletin of Mr. Cameron's condition and sign it. I want no mention in it of the injury, since it is not serious. If possible, I would suggest that you use the word 'indisposition' and be sure to employ the 'temporary' you called into play a moment ago."
Dr. Massey gladly acceded. Seated at Cameron's writing table he scribbled a bulletin of even more encouraging and confident tenor than I had indicated. And I used it in the Crystal Consolidated. But neither the spoken nor the written words of the physician held for me any considerable measure of solace. My friend's condition was desperate. I knew it and my heart ached for him; but it ached more for Evelyn, his ward, who loved him, and who must be given the gladness of good news only to be frustrated the next moment on the cross of anxiety.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Three Promises.

Need I say that I did not sleep that night? It was five o'clock when I left Cameron's, after a talk with the nurse, and I promised to return in an hour. The interval was devoted to a cold bath, a shave, and a change of clothing at my rooms; and at six I was back again, talking once more with Checkabedy who was personally serving me with coffee in the breakfast room.
"Between you and me," I began, "there is small need of concealment in this matter of Mr. Cameron's disappearance and return, his coming as remarkable and mysterious as his going. I think I am experienced enough to understand that such an affair as this cannot be kept entirely secret—especially not from Mr. Cameron's servants—and it is better, Checkabedy, that you should understand it thoroughly. I can fancy the distorted story that has been circulated below stairs. That more rumors, wide of the truth, have not leaked out and gained press publicity, speaks very well for you and your staff, and I congratulate you on your loyalty and good judgment. All I ask now is that you will continue to be guarded in what you say. A single unadvised word might interfere very materially with our efforts to trace the guilty ones and bring them to punishment."
And then I told him as much as I deemed wise of the facts of the abduction, of my chance finding of his master the previous night, and of my anxiety concerning his present condition.
"And above all things, Checkabedy," I added in conclusion, "don't look solem and distressed when Miss Evelyn is present. Before her, no matter how we really feel, we must appear confident."

A little later the morning papers were brought in, and I scanned one after another in search of some new twist or turn of the story of the previous afternoon. The more conservative journals were inclined to make light of the scare. "Mr. Cameron," said one, "ceased to be active in the affairs of the Crystal Consolidated over two years ago. If he is ill, which is by no means certain, the fact can have but little real significance so far as the company of which he is the largest shareholder is concerned. It may be stated on the best authority that Mr. Cameron's shares have never been raised speculatively, and that even in the event of his death they could not by any possibility come on the market, for the reason that he has provided a trust fund, by will, for the benefit of his niece, and that they are a part of that fund."

The sensational press, of course, still insisted that the Glass King was in a New England sanitarium, though they had failed to locate the institution. Despite my alarm I smiled at the thought of how their afternoon editions would have to eat the leek, as the Welsh say.
The papers finished, I grew restless. I desired constant news from the sick room, and lacking it, I roamed about the house, in nervous unease, my brain busy with conjecture, forming one theory after another, and dismissing each as readily. The situation was a tantalizing. The answer to all the questions which had absorbed me for weeks lay dormant in the brain of the man sleeping beyond that closed door. Theories, therefore, were now more futile than ever. The one accomplishment to be asked was the arousing of an intellect, the stirring of a memory.
Dr. Massey had promised that when Cameron awakened mental clarity would be restored, that he would be able to answer questions with intelligence.

It is hard to explain why I doubted this. I think it must have been something I saw in those dull, vacuous eyes, when I first looked into them under the pale light of the white-gloved electric street lamps. If I had been the morning in the hospital, by those eyes alone, I should have said that this man was not he. They were so different, lacking all the expression of the Cameron eyes I knew. And yet I knew him, despite this; knew that strong chin and jaw, which spelled determination in two syllables; knew his broad, generous nose, and his high intellectual forehead. These points of recognition were so convincing, that I could afford to ignore the eyes I had never seen before and the wasted frame and the shrunken, unsteady legs.

At brief intervals I consulted the clocks. It was marvellous how the time dragged. And that nurse! Would he never have an errand outside the suite? I had told him I should spend the morning in the house, and that I wished to be informed of the slightest change in his patient. I must conclude, therefore, that Cameron was still sleeping, that Bryan was still watching.
From the fact that Evelyn had not yet appeared I drew a measure of consolation. If I could have tidings of even the slightest improvement in Cameron before meeting her, it would aid me in the assumption of confidence upon which I had determined.

At ten minutes past eight I was searching the encyclopaedia in the library for information on the subject of brain concussion. Already I had followed the trail through three volumes from "Brain" to "Nervous System" and from "Nervous System" to "Concussion," when an opening door caused me to turn eagerly. Mr. Bryan, the nurse, in a white uniform such as hospital doctors wear, stood on the threshold. The next moment I had risen from my crouching position before the bookcase and had met him midway across the room with anxious inquiry.

"Mr. Cameron awoke a quarter of an hour ago," he told me. "His power of speech has returned. He asked me where he was and what had happened. I told him he was in his own house, and that he had met with an accident." "Yes, yes," I hurriedly replied. "And what, then? Did he inquire for any one?"
"No. For all of a minute he lay looking about the room without another word. Then, in a puzzled way, he repeated: 'My own house!' and asked, 'Where is this house?' And I told him. He did not seem to recognize the room at all."
"Is he still awake?"
"Oh, no, Dr. Massey left directions that he was to be given some nourishment—a raw egg and milk—and then another powder to make him sleep. He turned on his side after that, and in less than three minutes was in a deep slumber once more."

I was annoyed that I had not been called. I let myself hope that sight of my memory even though the familiar objects of his bedchamber failed. I said as much to the short, broad-shouldered nurse, whose twinkling eyes were in violent contrast with his thin-lipped, grave, determined mouth.
"Dr. Massey's orders were that for twelve hours no one should be admitted to the room," was his unanswerable rejoinder.
"Which means not until after five o'clock, this evening?"
"Exactly, sir. But I shall report to you everything he says, as nearly as possible in his own words."
"Very well," I said. "I shall spend the day here." My tone conveyed dismissal and I fear it still smacked of annoyance. Mr. Bryan, however, gave no sign of resentment. His eyes were still kindly merry, his mouth still inspired relief. He turned towards the door, saying:
"He'll probably sleep four hours at least, Mr. Clyde. If you wish to go out, there's no reason why you shouldn't."
I meant to reply. My lips were already framing a sentence, when a tableau checked me.

Evelyn Grayson was standing in the doorway. She wore a clinging house gown of pale blue, cut low at the throat, and bordered with a deep collar of Irish lace. The rose flush of youth and health tinted the cream of her complexion and a shaft of sunlight from a near window made a glittering golden nimbus of her hair. With wide, startled eyes she was gazing at Bryan, or, to be more exact, at the snowy linen duck in which he was clad, and which must have held for her a perplexing significance.

The nurse had halted, deferentially standing aside at sight of the girl whose young beauty seemed to dazzle him.
For a moment the stillness and silence were absolute. Then Evelyn turning her gaze upon me advanced quickly, with a little questioning cry: "Philip?"
"You're surprised to find me here," I interpreted, with hands outstretched.
"And to—she began, laying her fingers again on my palms, while I, "To find a nurse here, as well," I finished for her. "Let me introduce Mr. Bryan." But when I would have presented him he had already gone.
"But who is he?" she questioned in nervous haste. "What—"
It was well, I thought, to have the revelation over and done with as speedily as possible.

"You asked," I brought him home at two o'clock this morning."
I do not know what I expected, but I am sure I was not prepared for what I saw. Her fingers, suddenly releasing themselves from my fond but feeble support, clutched wildly at the lapels of my coat for support, as she burst into a passion of sobs. In vain I made efforts to comfort and quiet her. She became hysterical. She laughed and cried by turns, while I, making bold to regard her as a sorrowing child rather than the woman she was, held her close and murmured all the soothing, encouraging words and phrases I could conjure.
"—I—am so glad," she whispered at last, her big liquid blue eyes swimming, her fair face wet with the torrent of her emotion. "I—am so happy."
Presently I placed her in a great, cavernous leather chair, and lent her my handkerchief—assisted her, indeed—to remove the evidences of her tumultuous joy. After which I sat down opposite her and answered a hundred questions, still marvelling at the contrariety of the feminine temperament which defies disaster dried and over good tidings is like Niobe all tears.

Evelyn's emotions alone considered, it was, therefore, just as well that Cameron had not returned robust and of sane mind. Her rejoicing undiluted might have resulted in nervous breakdown. As it was, the mere fact that he was weak and a trifle distraught—which was the mildly equivocal way in which I softened the truth for her—aided her for her fortitude the revitalizing potency of a tonic. It so balanced her joy with anxiety that she grew strong in surprisingly short space.
"I do not see why a nurse is at all necessary," she objected, at once. "I shall nurse him, myself. Louis and I can do everything that is required."
"But Dr. Massey—" I began. Whereupon she interrupted me:
"—Dr. Massey probably thinks I am a foolish, frivolous child. I shall nurse Uncle Robert even if I have to dismiss Dr. Massey and get another physician."

There was nothing to be gained by opposing her at this time, so I held my non-committal peace, doubting, nevertheless, the practicability of her proposition. But to her next proposal I must needs interpose the obstructive truth.
"—Come," she commanded, brushing back her hair with both hands the encroaching golden halo, with the gesture of one who prepares for conquest, wiping away, as it were, the last clinging vestiges of her emotional weakness. "Come, let us go to him, together."
She was on her feet before I could restrain her.

"Not now, Evelyn," I said, quietly, and at the risk of seeming rudeness, sat still.
"—But, why?" And there was a hint of suspicion in the look she gave me.
"—He is asleep," I told her. And when she had relaxed into the great chair again, I added, temporizingly, "Mr. Bryan will let us know when he awakens."
Her disappointment was undisguised, and in secret I sympathized with her. She was a woman of some thing of that which had come to me when Bryan had refused me converse with his patient. But it were better to divert than to commiserate, and so I said:
"—This is the day I am to hear from Miss Clement."
"—Is it?" she asked, indifferently, the disappointment still ranking. "I didn't know."
"—She has promised me important information before three o'clock. If she keeps her word, this whole perplexing mystery may very shortly be cleared up."

"I should think that what you would call 'supernatogatory'," she asked, smiling.
"—I should think Uncle Robert could tell all that is needed, now, himself."
I was at a loss for a moment how to answer her, and in that moment the telephone broke in, and did away with the necessity of response.
The instrument was on the writing table at my elbow, and with a "Shall I?" to Evelyn, I took the receiver from the hook and bent to the transmitter.
"—Yes," I said, "Miss Grayson is here. Who is it, please?" I thought I recognized Miss Clement's voice, and it was not wrong. But, after all, it was I who wanted. She had called up my rooms and my office, and, unable to get me at either place, had taken the chance that Evelyn might aid her to my discovery.
"—You have learned something?" I asked, disguising as well as I could my burning interest. If possible, I would keep from Evelyn the least suggestion of how vitally important I regarded the news I hoped for.

"I hardly know how to explain it to you," came Miss Clement's reply. "I was on the verge of what I am sure was a most pregnant revelation. I was to be given names and dates and circumstances. I had been promised these by one in whom I put the greatest reliance. And now I am asked to wait another twenty-four hours. Something has happened, my confident tells me; something puzzling and utterly unexpected, and those who know most of the matter are now most at sea."

Evelyn must have seen me smile. It was quite evident to me that Miss Clement was in touch with some one well-informed, but it was not that which provoked the smile. I smiled because I felt that Cameron in some way had outwitted his captors and gained his freedom. This was the unexpected happening which had thrown the villainous slant-eyed camp into confusion, and I rejoiced at my friend's intrepidity.

"And so," I said to Miss Clement, "you wish me to wait another day?"
"—I think it would be worth while," she answered.
"—And I do, too," I told her. "I don't suppose you've seen an afternoon paper, have you?" I went on. "Well, they contain some news of interest. They tell that Mr. Cameron came home last night, and for once, at least, they tell what is very nearly the truth."

If sincerely ever carried over a wire it carried then in Miss Clement's congratulations, and there was something almost divine in her forbearance to ask for particulars. She congratulated Evelyn, too, and promised to come to see her, and then once more she assured me that she would yet learn everything we could possibly care to know.

"The Chinese," she added, "are a deliberate rate, Mr. Clyde. They refuse to be hurried. But eventually we shall have our answers."
With Evelyn beside me the hours no longer dragged. We talked unceasingly; reviewing everything from the receipt of the first letter, conjecturing on each of the more or less problems making up the one great mystery, but arriving at nothing definite; adding, if changing conditions at all, to our own confusion.

And if, in passing, at intervals, where opportunity offered, I spoke tender words and pleaded for a definite, or at least a closer, more intimate understanding between us, who shall say that I was to blame? She was never more lovely, never more appealing than on that morning; and I begged for an admission of a sentiment above and beyond the mere sisterly regard to which hitherto she had persisted in limiting her expressed affection for me.

More than once I had read in her eyes—without unseemly conceit, I trust I may be permitted this assertion—that I now asked in lip avowal. But there seemed to be with her a notion that the occasion was ill-suited to my plea.
"—Philip," she said, "dear Philip, I care for you very much; almost as much as I care for Uncle Robert. You have been very good to me, and very good to him, and if I could tell you that I love you in the way you ask, I—"
And there she hesitated a shade of a second. "Even if I tell you, you shall correct me," she murmured, now. "It is not stubbornness, Philip. It is just a woman's way. Ask me again, when Uncle Robert is well, and all this horrible nightmare has passed. Promise me that you will ask me again!"

"Never fear," I returned, "I'll ask you."
"—And promise me, too," she added, "that until all the skies are clear once more, you will not mention the subject."
I was on the verge of promising; not because it would be an easy promise to keep, for I knew it would be very difficult; but because I could deny her nothing. I was on the verge, I say, when the library door opened, and Louis, pale and excited, and so in haste that he had not paused to knock, was exclaiming:
"—Monseigneur Cameron! Pardon! Maie, a score of fears springing instantly to birth within us, Evelyn and I were on our feet before the speech, rapidly delivered as it was, was finished. Were we ready? We evidenced our readiness in no such voiceless thing as words.

Louis stood aside for us to pass, and as I went by him, I asked, under my breath:

"—What is it, Louis?"
"—Ah!" he whispered. "Monseigneur Cameron is talking in the strange tongue which neither Monsieur Bryan nor I myself can understand."

CHAPTER XIX.

The Pang of Disillusion.

The sick room was dark. So dark that for a little, until our eyes accustomed themselves to it, we could barely distinguish objects. But our ears required no attuning. Even in the passageway, separated by a heavy mahogany door, we had hint of what was going on within; and as we entered, a hoarse thrade smote us in the gloom, like an assault from ambush.

To us both the tone and words were alike unfamiliar. In infection and modulation the voice was strange. And the uttered sounds were a coarse, horrid jargon. Once I thought I detected an English oath, but I was not sure.

Evelyn clutched my hand and I could feel against me the tremble of her arm young body. Gladly I would have spared her this ordeal, but I had been no less unprepared than she. And now, as gradually shapes defined themselves less dimly in the gloom, the horror grew; and, held by it, I stood inert. I stood where I had paused—the quivering girl very close beside me—staring, listening, wondering.

It was a large room, lofty of ceiling, with high windows, across which heavy curtains were drawn; and the only light was that which stole between three dark, richly-colored, glass medallions set in a side wall.

Cameron's bed, a massive, ornately carved four-poster, was hung with fringed and embroidered velvet, and in the dust of the chamber it took on the somber likeness of a catafalque, adding to the eerie seeming a touch of the funeral. Inconspicuously from the shadowy midst of it came that ranted riddle of strange words, now high pitched, now bass, now guttural.

What had at first seemed a moving gray patch had developed by degrees into the white, slight-robed, sitting figure of the invalid, swaying excitedly, with arms extended in ceaseless gestures. For a long moment this uncanny object had held my gaze, but presently near the bed's foot, I descried Bryan's white uniform and the sight brought a measure of relief. In response to a beckoning head-tilt, the nurse joined us.

"I thought you had better come," he whispered, quite calmly. "I thought possibly you might understand what he is saying."
"—But I don't," I whispered back. "If it's a real language I never heard it. What do you imagine it is?"
"—I have an idea it's Chinese," he answered. "It sounds like the stuff you hear at a Chinese theater, and I caught two or three words of pidgin-English, just before you—" He broke off suddenly, and plucked at my sleeve. "There!" he murmured. "Did you hear that? Masked. That was plain enough. It means 'never mind.' A little while ago he was evidently trying to hurry some one. It was chop-choop about every other sentence."

Evelyn's eyes shone luminous in the gloom.
"—Can't you give him something to quiet him?" she begged. "It's awful to let him go on like this. It's cruel. He seems to be in such distress."
"—I can, of course," Bryan returned. "But I thought Mr. Clyde was anxious to have everything he said reported, and—"
"—Oh, do give him something," she insisted.

Bryan left us to obey. I saw him stop at a table near the bed, and in the half light I caught the glint of a hypodermic syringe. But, as if scenting his purpose, Cameron's voice lulled abruptly. For a second he was quiet, and then, before any one of us, he thought, suspected his purpose, he turned, suddenly, swiftly, and slipped from beneath the bed clothes to the floor where he stood erect, with arms upraised and tensed, shouting in shrill, strident key what seemed to be orders, directed not at one but at a horde.

The great bed separated him from both Bryan and myself, but we skirted it in haste, and came upon him before he had taken more than a single step. As we confronted him, his arms lowered and his clenched fists shot forward threateningly. But a far more startling happening at this juncture was his abandonment of his jargon, and his adoption of intelligible English.

TO TAKE OUT STAINS

SIMPLE AGENTS THAT MAY BE EMPLOYED BY HOUSEWIFE.

Good Idea is to Have a Set of Rules That May Be Posted in a Conspicuous Position About the House.

It is hard for even the housewife of large experience to remember exactly the simple agents for removing various stains. Knowledge of the average maid or laundress is still more limited, hence a device which serves in one house as a constant jog to the memory. It is a set of rules printed upon a yard of the blackboard cloth used on school-room walls.
Instead of writing with chalk, print the rules neatly in the form of a table in white oil paint, thinned with turpentine. This medium, if properly dried, is permanent; it cannot be disturbed either by steam or by rubbing. After allowing it to dry for four or five days it may be tacked on the kitchen wall, inclosed in a frame of plain pine picture moulding.

Here is a copy of the table for any one who may care to make one:
Ink Stains—Soak in sour milk. If a dark stain remains, rinse in a weak solution of chloride of lime.
Blood Stains—Soak in cold salt water, then wash in warm water with plenty of soap; afterward boil.
Grass Stains—Saturate the spot thoroughly with kerosene, then put in the wash-tub.
Iodine Stains—Wash with alcohol, then rinse in soapy water.
Hot Tea and Coffee Stains—Soak the stained fabric in cold water, wring, spread out and pour a few drops of glycerine on each spot. Let it stand several hours, then wash with cold water and soap.

Iron Rust—Soak the stain thoroughly with lemon juice, sprinkle with salt and bleach for several hours in the sun.
Grease Spots—Hot water and soap generally remove these. If fixed by long standing, use ether, chloroform or naphtha. All three of these must be used away from either fire or artificial light.
Pitch, Wheel Grease, Tar Stains—Soften the stains with lard, then soak in turpentine. Scrape off carefully with a knife all the loose surface dirt; sponge clean with turpentine and rub gently till dry.
Mildew—Soak in a weak solution of chloride of lime for several hours. Rinse in cold water.
Sewing Machine Oil Stains—Rub with lard. Let stand for several hours, then wash with cold water and soap.

Scorch Stains—Wet the scorched place, rub with soap and bleach in the sun.
Fruit Stains—Stretch the fabric containing the stain over the mouth of a basin and pour boiling water on the stain. In cold weather fruit spots can frequently be removed by hanging the stained garments out of doors over night. If the stain has been fixed by time, soak the article in a weak solution of oxalic acid or hold the spot over the fumes of sulphur.

Fricassee Chicken.
Fricassee chicken, considering what can be done with it, is not expensive. A three or four pound fowl put into pieces, stewed and served with plenty of good cream gravy poured over toast or biscuit will be sufficient for six persons and, in addition, enough will be left for another meal of chicken pie or cream chicken.
Another good way is to steam a whole instead of cutting it into pieces. Then, when the chicken is tender, put two or three strips of bacon on top of it and place it in a hot oven until it is a light brown. Chicken prepared in this way will be as tender as a high-priced roasted chicken.

Virginia Stuffed Ham.
Put one ham into boiling water and cook three hours; cool and remove the skin and bone. Make a dressing of a loaf of white bread, three onions (chopped fine), one tablespoon butter, one teaspoon each celery seed, sage and thyme, and a little pepper and salt. Make a deep incision in ham and remove the bone. Fill the cavity with the dressing. Sprinkle with brown sugar and bake slowly for two and a half hours. Baste with the liquor in which the ham was boiled.

Chocolate Cream.
Take a pint of milk, a gill of cream, the yolks of three eggs, five ounces of powdered sugar and mix together. Turn and place over the fire; cook and stir constantly until it is reduced about a quarter, then add two ounces of grated chocolate, dissolved in a little milk. Cook until the chocolate is cooked and then strain and pour into molds and set away to cool. Serve cold.

Slicing Tongue.
When the tongue is tender remove it from the liquor and let cold water run over it for a minute or two, and the skin will come off easily. In slicing it, instead of cutting it straight across with the result that a part of the meat is in tiny dry slices, cut it with a slant, making each slice one of good size and shape—Woman's Home Companion.

Almond Wafers.
Pour a layer of melted sweet chocolate into a flat greased pan and place a layer of blanched almonds on top of this. Cover these with another thin layer of melted chocolate and set away in a cool place.—Woman's Home Companion.

The first condition of human goodness is something to love; the second, something to reverence.—George Eliot.

Many a girl with brains enough for two equalizes things by marrying a man without any.

Circumstantial Evidence.
"Did you find our poor friend's spirits were broken?"
"Yes, in a way. He was ordering nothing but brandy smashes."

Mistake.
Bobby was saying his prayers in a very low voice.
"I can't hear you, dear," his mother whispered.
"I wasn't talking to you," replied Bobby, firmly.—Harper's Magazine.

Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

Directing Children Aright.
The young need to be taught that although there is sometimes a pleasure of the senses in committing sin, it is inevitably followed by remorse and punishment. Crime, remorse, punishment form an inseparable trio. On the other hand, while it is often hard to do right, the sense of satisfaction, self-respect and self-control that follows right action is worth all the effort made.

In Private.
As he started out with the bushel of ashes he walked into a clothesline that he didn't see.

When he had picked himself out of the ash pile and recovered his hat he stood in the back yard and relieved his feelings.
"Henry," called his wife.
"Well," he snapped.
"Don't stand out there to do it. Come straight into the house and tell me that it's all my fault."

Was Much Impressed.
A little girl who had acted as ring bearer at a cousin's wedding was inclined to view her part of the impressive ceremony with great seriousness. One day some time afterward the child heard her grandmother talking of her possible future marriage.

"You know, I'm half married already," the child earnestly remarked.
"Half married already? What do you mean, child?" asked the surprised grandmother.
"—Why, don't you remember when I carried Cousin Carrie's wedding ring?"

Horse Fell Into a Tree

Awaiting Aid, the Animal Tightly Clutched the Trunk With His Rear Hoofs.

Visitors to Ferry Bar were much surprised the other morning to see a horse up among the branches of a tree. The animal had gotten in its feet from a bank that overtopped the tree. The tree probably saved the horse's life.

The accident occurred while the horse was grazing in a pasture in the rear of the Baltimore Motor club at Ferry Bar. John McMahon, 877 West Fayette street, was at work on a motor boat when he was startled by a convulsive rustling in the trees nearby. Looking up, he was startled to see four hoofs jutting through the leaves and swinging madly back and forth. A moment later the hoofs became still and the horse wrapped the rear end around the tree, clutched desperately to prevent a further fall.

A call was sent to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals and an ambulance was hurried to the scene. Blocks and tackle were fastened to a tree stump on top of the hill and leather belts were wrapped about the horse. When the work of hitching the belts was completed it was found that the animal could not be rescued until several of the limbs of the tree
