NUMBER 40.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

BIG EVENT FOR STATE

One of the biggest events in this part of Wisconsin will be the bankers' excursion which will reach Owen Saturday, June 20. There will be about 150 in the party, mainly bankers from the southern counties. They will be joined by large numbers through this locality in an auto through the farming sections.

There are in this locality many large farms that are well improved, with the finest barns and herds to be found anywhere in the Middle West and with splendid herds of pure-bred dairy and beef cattle. Adjoining many of these farms are others in the process of development, and next to these will be found areas of unimproved cutover land. Probably there are few as good opportunities to show the upper portion of the state from the fifty land to the fully improved farms.

From fifty to upwards of a hundred automobiles will be in line for this occasion, which will be participated in by people from all the cities and towns of Clark and adjoining counties. We have waited long for such an opportunity to show our country to the financial people of the state—Pioneer Press.

ALUMNI DANCE A VERY PRETTY AFFAIR

Kewaskum Alumni Certainly Uphold Its Reputation to Entertain. Large Crowd Attends

The annual ball given by the Kewaskum high school alumni, in Groeschel's South Side Park hall last Saturday evening, was a financial success, as well as a very pretty social affair. At about 9 o'clock dancing began, to the excellent music of the popular Kewaskum Quintette, which consisted of six pieces, and was afterwards kept up until a late hour. At 12 o'clock dainty refreshments were served after which dancing was resumed. The beautiful gowns of the ladies, the inspiring music and the joyful countenances of the merry-makers all tended to make a picture long to be remembered by all those present.

YOU MUST SAVE 5000 DIMES FOR FORD AUTO

Are you saving your dimes to make the designing letter spell P-O-R D? If so, it is all right. Saving is a good habit. The Ford people admit that. But say they, you can not get an automobile that way unless you have at least 5,000 dimes.

The explanation is simple. In the United States are several mints who mark the money they coin in some manner or other. In the case of the dimes a designating letter is found on the reverse side of the coin below the wreath. The letter F stands for San Francisco, O for New Orleans, D for Denver, The Philadelphia mint, the home plant of Uncle Sam's money department uses no mark.

Through some manner, or other it was stated, and passed from mouth to mouth, that the person spelling FORD with the dimes would be given a car by the Ford company.

Thousands of persons have been saving their dimes. From the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico—everybody is looking for the dimes and no one has as yet received an automobile.

Whether the originator of the plan was a practical joker is not known. But it remains a fact it can't be done. Some one has inadvertently discovered that there are no Rs. Yes, that is the letter every one was looking for.

Furthermore, it won't be done. That is what the Ford people say, with great emphasis. Not because they themselves did not start the fad, but because they have been pestered with letters, telephone calls, and personal visits, both at their home office and at all the branches throughout the country. They wish people would forget it.

Now if you have been saving dimes keep it up. Lay aside a little every week. But don't believe every wildcat scheme for getting an automobile so easily. It can't be done.

MAIN STREET FINISHED

Work On The Reconstruction of Main Street, West of The Railroad Tracks, Was Completed Last Saturday

WORK DONE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF THE STATE

The Exact Cost of the Road According to Figures of Highway Commissioner Johnson is $1,164.15

The reconstruction of Main Street west of the railroad tracks to Fond du Lac Ave. was finished last Saturday evening. The work done was under the supervision of the State Highway Commissioner, Chas. Johnson being the highway commissioner and Grover Duenkel foreman. Although somewhat new, the road is in a fair condition. Both Commissioner Johnson and Foreman Duenkel state that in course of time it will be one of the best pieces of road in this community. They also expect to do some more work on this piece after the stretch on East River street is completed. The exact cost of the road is $1,164.15.

The reconstruction of Main Street west of the railroad tracks to Fond du Lac street, and the balance $4,000 on the East River road. As the amount expended according to state highway aid on Main Street was $181.65, there still remains $1,345.50 to be expended on the East River road. According to both Commissioner Johnson and Foreman Duenkel it is believed that the latter road will not cost this amount. They state that with good luck the River road will be completed the latter part of next week.

How long will this piece of road on Main Street last is the question of the majority of the tax payers in this village. We will venture

Street as it Appeared After Completion

According to the figures of Commissioner Johnson is $1,164.15, of which amount $181.65, the state county and village share equally according to the state highway aid, and the balance $682.50 the village will be compelled to pay for the reason that the entire stretch from curb to curb was reconstructed. Under the state highway aid the width called for is 18 feet, but our honorable village board just before the reconstruction was commenced, deemed it advisable to have the entire street fixed and therefore voted to raise the amount necessary for the additional cost. The width of the road from curb to curb is 44 feet, and as the state to say that it ought to last a life time, providing some attention is given same every year and that no one starts tearing up same by repairing sewers. It certainly would be a shame to spoil this piece of road after spending so much money. The Highway Inspector was in the village last Monday and stated that this would be a remarkably fine street and complimented Highway Commissioner Johnson and Foreman Duenkel on the work done. He also recommended that within a month or two the road ought to be oiled. It not only would prevent the flying of considerable dust, but also preserve the road. As long as so much money has already

Application for Liquor License

County of Washington, Village of Kewaskum, SS. Village Clerk's Office

The following application for liquor license, pursuant to Chapter of Section 1542 of the laws of 1911 has been filed in my office and the granting of which is now pending.

Name of applicant: Nic. Marx.

Location where business is to be conducted: On the south side of Main street near the C. & N. W. R. R. right of way.

Bondsman: Otto E. Lay and Michael Johannes.

Dated June 8th, 1914.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

During sometime from Saturday evening of last week until Monday morning of this week several articles were stolen from the outfit belonging to the Highway Commission. Grover Duenkel, Foreman.

KEWASKUM WINS OVER JACKSON

Local Boys Take The Opening Game of Base Ball From Jackson on The Lattor's Grounds Last Sunday

Our base ball team journeyed to Jackson last Sunday and defeated that team by a close score of 7 to 6. Although this was the first game our boys had played this season, the showing made by them was excellent. No thrills are reported but both teams put up a very good grade of the national game. Urban and Altenhofen did slab duty for the locals, while Petzold and Beck performed for Jackson. Next Sunday the local team will line up against Campbellsport on the home grounds. As there has always been considerable rivalry between the two teams, everyone should turn out and give the local boys their most liberal support and cheer them on to victory.

A picked up team from this village defeated the Prairie Villa nine on the local grounds last Sunday. The only star in the bright constellation was R. H. Mertes of Newburg, who held down the third sack and also did some very phenomenal club swinging.

FORD FAMILY TO HOLD A REUNION IN MILWAUKEE

E. C. Schumann of Milwaukee is making arrangements to get together all Ford owners in Wisconsin for an annual justification. In fact Mr. Schumann has become so enthused that he has already started arrangements for such a better understanding among this army of automobile owners, and the event is sure to create greater sociability in the Ford family. I am not connected with any automobile accessory or tire house, but I am a Ford owner and friends will vouch for my enthusiasm in this matter.

"My plans, which are still far from complete, include a parade and various contests are also planned for which prizes, in the nature of tires, wire wheels, horns, fuel, etc. will be given. Incidentally the first grand prize will be a Ford machine and when Ford owners realize, what the inducements are, I am sure that there will be a strong representation from all parts of the state.

Such an event will not only bring considerable business to Milwaukee but will prove an epoch-making event for a stunt of this kind. The businessmen who have heard of the idea are greatly impressed with it and tell me that the city will be greatly benefited in that it will mean added business.

Mr. Schumann added that the time of the year is most propitious for touring and that within the next week he will have a committee of fully forty upstate owners who will act with the Milwaukee Committee.—Evening Wisconsin.

NEW RULING ON RETURN LETTERS

After July 1st, all requisition for "special request" envelopes will be refused by the United States government unless such requisitions include in the return address not only the name of the sender but also the street number if it be a prominent office building or some other minute direction.

The reason for such action upon the part of the postal authorities must be obvious to any one who stops to consider the matter. New firms organizing in the city will omit the street number in the return card, merely for the purpose of indicating to the person to whom the letter is addressed that the concern is large and well known. And if the letter is not properly delivered the return may be almost as difficult, in case the writing concern is obscure, new and small.

"Special request" envelopes are envelopes upon which the stamp is embossed and are supplied by the government, with the return card printed in the corner at a cost very slightly over that of the stamp alone.

SPECIAL TWO DAY FISHING TRIPS TO THE COOL NORTH WOODS

The season for bass fishing has just opened. Go early and get the benefit of the year's best sport. The Fishermen's special will leave the Chicago Passenger Terminal at 6 p. m. KOHN FAMILY HAS FOUR GENERATIONS

The Oldest Member of the Group, Mrs. Theobald Kohn, Formerly Resided Near This Village

The Kohn family of North Fond du Lac enjoys the distinction of having living representatives of four generations.

The oldest member of the family, Mrs. Victoria Kohn, who resides at 1101 Minnesota avenue, was born in the state of Ohio in 1841, and came to Wisconsin with her parents when but two years of age, settling on a farm in the town of Kewaskum, where she lived until 3 years ago when she came to North Fond du Lac, to make her home with her children.

Her daughter, Mrs. Louis Hess, who resides at 512 McKinley St., was born in the town of Kewaskum in 1861. Her son, the third member of the group was born in Campbellsport in 1869. His daughter, Leona, the baby was born in North Fond du Lac and is now one year and four months of age.

Mrs. Kohn's husband died four years ago. She is the mother of thirteen children, twelve of whom are still living. Eight of the children are sons and four are daughters. She has thirty-six grand-children and seven great-grandchildren. Despite her age her health is excellent.

Mrs. Victoria Kohn is well and favorably known here. She and her husband having lived here about fifty-nine years. She is a sister-in-law to Peter Kohn, who still makes his home in this township. The children are Mrs. Louis Hess, of North Fond du Lac; Louise, Mrs. Christ Federmann, of Milwaukee; Anna, Mrs. Frank Hess of Eden; Doris at home; Frank, of Knowles; Nic. and John of North Fond du Lac; Louis and Charles of Alvin at home; William of Chicago Heights.

A VERY PLEASANT AFFAIR

Last Tuesday evening a large number of invited guests and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Mertes, assembled at the South Side park hall, to help them celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage.

The grand march, led by Mr. and Mrs. Mertes, dancing was indulged in and a jolly good time was had by all present. Near the midnight hour an elaborate supper was served in the dining hall and after partaking of the choice viands, the merry-makers resumed the dance until a late hour. The music for the occasion was furnished by Roden's orchestra. At parting, the guests expressed their desire that Mr. and Mrs. Mertes would live to celebrate their diamond wedding fifty years hence.

Among those from afar who were present were: Fred Dreher, wife and daughter, Lyndell of Milwaukee; Mr. and Mrs. Gottlieb Guenther and Carl Guenther of Port Washington; Gust. Pfeil and wife of Granville; Herman Groeschel and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Germer, Mrs. Emma Gellert and son Edward of Edinboro; William Groeschel and family of Boltonville; Mr. and Mrs. John Krautkramer and Mrs. Chas. Koch and son Oscar of Beechwood; Mr. and Mrs. Nic. Mueller, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Miller and son of Saukville.

HENRY DAMM'S HOME IS ROBBED

During the absence of Henry Damm from his home near Elmore, unknown parties broke into his residence and ransacked the premises last Tuesday.

Many articles were taken, among them being a good gold watch, over twenty dollars in cash, a collection of rare coins and about thirty-five young chickens.

No clue to the robbery has as yet been obtained, but it is thought that it must have been some one who was well acquainted about the place and knew of Mr. Damm's intended absence and watched for him to leave the place.—Campbellsport News.

MARRIED IN CHICAGO

On Tuesday, June 1, Miss Leah C. Wright was quietly married to Mr. H. C. Aagard, Jr., by Rev. J. Brushingham of Chicago, Ill., with Miss Leila C. Wright, sister of the bride and Harold Wright, cousin of the groom as witnesses. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Wright, and is well known throughout this vicinity, having spent her earlier life here. She is a graduate of the local high school in the class of 1906. After a short visit with the bride's parents, the newly married couple left last Tuesday morning for an extended wedding tour through the west.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

Math. Stuetgen, proprietor of a hotel at Holy Hill, met with a serious accident last Sunday morning while running his automobile near Richfield where he had taken some passengers. While near the Mintzlaiff farm, he attempted to dodge a piece of wood in the road, and in doing so the machine ran down an embankment and turned turtle. Fortunately Oglio Klippel, of Richfield, happened to come along right after the accident occurred, who placed the injured man in his machine and conveyed him to the residence of Dr. Falbe. Upon examination it was found that one arm was broken and his skull fractured. He was unconscious for several hours, and his condition at present is very serious.—Hartford Times.

While George Cooper and family were coming out from Milwaukee in an automobile Saturday morning the machine caught fire in the gearing just as they reached the city limits. Mr. Cooper stopped the car to see what the trouble was and his son got under it to extinguish the fire. In doing so he burned his right hand quite badly. There were fifteen gallons of gasoline in the tank at the time the machine caught fire, and had he not noticed it at the time he did, there might have been a serious accident.—Hartford Times.

A team belonging to Jos. Ziegler, a farmer residing near St. Lawrence, ran away in Schleisingsville last Monday while in charge of the hired man. The team collided with a Ford auto owned by Hubert Lofy, of the town of Richfield, and was so badly damaged that it had to be taken to a garage to be repaired.—Hartford Times.

Byron Barwig lost one of his horses last week near Campbellsport. His driver, Gustav Bartel was on the way to Long Lake with a load of furnishings when the horse was taken ill and in a short time was dead.—Mayville News.

DEATH OF WM. P. JOCHEM

William P. Jochem, a prominent member of the state Democratic central committee and retired business man of Cedarburg died at his home early Monday morning after a short illness.

Mr. Jochem has lived in Ozaukee county many years. He was born in 1856 in the town of Mesquite. He remained with his parents until he was 17. In 1873 he entered the employ of the Badensdoerfer flour mills at Hamilton to learn the miller's trade. Here he remained until 1877 when he left for Minnesota, where he found employment for five years. He returned to Cedarburg and engaged in the hotel business. Eight years ago he retired from the hotel business to devote his entire time to the elevator and grain business, from which he retired about two years ago.

He has always been an active member of the Democratic party serving on the state central committee for twenty-two years and chairman of the county committee for the last twenty years. He was county treasurer of Ozaukee county for the last four years, a member of the Cedarburg school board for many years, also a member of the I. O. O. F. and Cedarburg Benevolent society.

Funeral services were held on Thursday, June 11, at 2 o'clock.

NOTES From MEADOWBROOK FARM

Give the pigs dry beds. The bull is half the herd. Poultry relish crimson clover. Be careful in feeding rape to cows. Pigs suffer from the heat and hot sun. Don't put the sheep out in a wet pasture. Cool cream to churning temperature as soon as ripe. Always select the best heifers for breeding purposes. There is many a farmer who sells cream and buys butter. Raise and finish beef cattle on the same farm when possible. Watch for any kind of vermin on chicks, especially head lice. The pig is not filthy because he wants to be. Just try and see. Rape is better for sheep and hog pasture than for any other stock. Moldy litter should never be allowed in a brooder or brooder house. Begin feeding a pig as soon as it will eat and keep it growing until mature. Black leg is a disease that will very seldom affect cattle over two years old. Ninety per cent of the farms of this country are said to be without any sheep. Some men whip their horses because they are in a bad frame of mind themselves. In case the sow produces only one litter per year she is liable to be a poor breeder. It is best to feed young calves three times a day. They relish their dinner the same as you do. Use the horse much as you would a human being and the treatment will not be much astray. Feeding a little linseed meal occasionally to stock is beneficial, keeping the system regulated. Animal husbandry is sure to be profitable in years to come, on account of the high prices of meat. The best site for a poultry house in any location is one where good water and air drainage are available. Some farmers believe in cutting alfalfa hay before it is one-tenth in bloom, although this is not common. Frequent rubbing and handling of the udder at calving time is beneficial to the cow and profitable to the owner. If we count the fertilizer value of good rich manure at the market price, one ton of manure is worth $2.50 to $3. The German farmer keeps more live stock and makes a better use of all other sources of plant food than we do. Look well after the early chicks. They will pay well if given good treatment, otherwise it is best to not have any at all. The feeder of any variety of stock should never neglect to feed a variety of feeds when it is at all possible for him to do so. Don't use strong powder to dust a hen with a young brood. Such practice often results in killing the chicks along with the lice. You feed your cattle and horses and hogs from the products of the fields—yes, and your family, too. What are you feeding your land? Practical farmers and truckers use the two-horse manure spreader—the manure is thoroughly cut up and spread evenly over the ground. At this season of the year hundreds of thousands of day-old chicks are shipped right from the incubators to points up to one thousand miles distant. When weaning the pigs use the creep which admits the pigs but excludes the sow from the pen where the slop is constantly available for the youngsters. Truckers and gardeners apply eight to ten tons of rotted manure spread broadcast on top of the ground and well harrowed in, and then drill the seed in with about 400 pounds of fertilizer to the acre. Sheep and lambs are often deceptive to the eye. A short-legged, short-bodied sheep is often heavier and will produce more wool than one that looks to be twice as large. As a rule great coarse looking sheep are not desirable. The time for cutting alfalfa varies with the use for which it is intended. If the purpose is to get the largest tonnage, the best time to cut the crop is when it is about one-tenth in bloom, or when the young shoots are beginning to show at the base of the plant. Fill rat holes with plaster of paris mixed with powdered glass, or set dishes of meal and plaster where the rats will find and eat it, always placing a dish of water near-by. The plaster will harden in the stomachs when they take a drink, and that is the end of the rat. When fowls "feel at home" and are properly cared for, they will produce eggs in plenty; but move them about from house to house, or ship them to some distant point, and it will be noticed the egg crop quickly drops. No farmer has to pay excessive prices for nitrogen. There is plenty of it in the air and science teaches how to use it by leguminous crops.

The feeder of any variety of stock should never neglect to feed a variety of feeds when it is at all possible for him to do so. Don't use strong powder to dust a hen with a young brood. Such practice often results in killing the chicks along with the lice. You feed your cattle and horses and hogs from the products of the fields—yes, and your family, too. What are you feeding your land? Practical farmers and truckers use the two-horse manure spreader—the manure is thoroughly cut up and spread evenly over the ground. At this season of the year hundreds of thousands of day-old chicks are shipped right from the incubators to points up to one thousand miles distant. When weaning the pigs use the creep which admits the pigs but excludes the sow from the pen where the slop is constantly available for the youngsters. Truckers and gardeners apply eight to ten tons of rotted manure spread broadcast on top of the ground and well harrowed in, and then drill the seed in with about 400 pounds of fertilizer to the acre. Sheep and lambs are often deceptive to the eye. A short-legged, short-bodied sheep is often heavier and will produce more wool than one that looks to be twice as large. As a rule great coarse looking sheep are not desirable. The time for cutting alfalfa varies with the use for which it is intended. If the purpose is to get the largest tonnage, the best time to cut the crop is when it is about one-tenth in bloom, or when the young shoots are beginning to show at the base of the plant. Fill rat holes with plaster of paris mixed with powdered glass, or set dishes of meal and plaster where the rats will find and eat it, always placing a dish of water near-by. The plaster will harden in the stomachs when they take a drink, and that is the end of the rat. When fowls "feel at home" and are properly cared for, they will produce eggs in plenty; but move them about from house to house, or ship them to some distant point, and it will be noticed the egg crop quickly drops. No farmer has to pay excessive prices for nitrogen. There is plenty of it in the air and science teaches how to use it by leguminous crops.

WATERS OF STATE CLAIM VICTIMS

THREE CRANDON YOUNG PEOPLE LOSE LIVES IN OOZE AT BOTTOM OF MUD LAKE.

YOUNG HEROINE DROWNED

Rushes Back Into Lake in Futile Attempt to Save Her Brother—Two Drown Near Oshkosh When Boat Capsizes.

Crandon.—Jessie, Hugh and Perry Smith, 20, 18 and 13 years old, of this city were drowned in Mud Lake, a shallow body of water with a bottom of mud springs. The unfortunate children, together with two other children of the family and a young neighbor, Lester Grandine, went bathing in the lake. The party soon became caught in the mud which acted like quick sand. Young Grandine worked his way out and with a boat brought all ashore but Perry, Jessie, the oldest girl, recovered and rushed back into the lake and lost her life in a frantic attempt to save Perry. Hugh was dead before physicians reached the scene of the disaster.

BURKE IS OUT FOR SENATOR

Ex-State Senator From Green Bay Announces Candidacy on Economy Platform.

Green Bay.—Timothy Burke, former sheriff, former assemblyman and senator, formally announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for United States senator. Mr. Burke declares against arbitration of the canal talks. He denounces the payment of money to Colombia. He demands more popular government. He declares that the people erred in voting for change from the old republican protective tariff idea. "On the question of expenditures, both state and national, we are all aware that the cost of everything has increased during the past decade, and that the people require more from the government than they did years ago," says Mr. Burke. "But whatever may have been the mistake of the past, the dawn of retrenchment is at hand, but retrenchment without retrogression."

DEATH CALLS W. P. JOCHEM

Member of Democratic State Central Committee Expires at Cedarburg After Short Illness.

Cedarburg.—W. P. Jochem, a member of the state Democratic central committee and retired business man of Cedarburg, is dead, after a short illness. He attended a meeting of the Democratic state central committee in Milwaukee a few days before. He had long been active in Democratic politics, being a member of the state central committee for twenty-two years and chairman of the county committee for twenty years. He had been county treasurer for four years.

Word Trust Bars Concern

Madison.—Under an opinion by Attorney General Owen confirming a previous opinion, the Minnesota Loan and Trust company will not be allowed to incorporate to do business in this state. The opinion says that a foreign corporation with the word "trust" as a part of its name cannot be licensed because of express prohibition.

Two Drown at Oshkosh.

Oshkosh.—Jacob Demler, 19 years old, and Joseph Herzok, 23 years old, were drowned in the Fox river. In the boat with them were: Edward Womanski, Joseph Wawra and Fred Grisdle. Wawra and Grisdle hung onto the overturned boat while Womanski swam to shore.

Catch Big Fish.

Manitowoc.—Two Rivers fishermen made the catch of the season at Shoto when they landed a 23 1/2 pound muskellunge, but it took the combined efforts of the two to get the big fish.

Child Drowns in River.

Eau Claire.—Arthur, the 2-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Linton Barney, while playing with his 3-year-old brother on the banks of the swollen Chippewa river, fell in and drowned.

Purchases Dixon Hotel.

Grand Rapids.—The Dixon hotel of this city has just been sold to A. F. Jones of Baraboo.

Awarded Wing Prize.

Washburn.—Miss Leah Olsen and Mellus Syle, members of the 1914 senior class of the Washburn high school, have been declared the winners of the Wing scholarship prize for having the highest four-year average.

Beavers to Meet June 24.

Madison.—The biennial convention of the Beaver's Reserve Fund fraternity will be held in Madison June 24-26 inclusive. Between 300 and 400 delegates will gather here.

Lightning Hits Barn.

Grand Rapids.—George V. Hammond, a farmer near Seven Mile Creek, met with a severe loss during an electric storm. His barn was struck by the lightning and consumed with several horses, cows and fifteen tons of hay.

Becomes Delirious and Dies.

Oconto.—George Forestal showed slight signs of delirium and was taken to the county hospital, dying shortly afterward.

STATE G. A. R. MEETS

FORTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL ENCAMPMENT OPENS AT MADISON.

S. A. Cook of Neenah and Col. W. J. McKay of Madison Eeek Election for Commander.

Madison.—Madison has assumed a military dress of flags and bunting for the forty-seventh annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic, department of Wisconsin, which opened here on June 9 and closes June 11. The Woman's Relief corps, the ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Sons of Veterans and the Daughters of the Grand Army are holding their annual meetings here at the same time. The contests for department commander will be between former Congressman S. A. Cook of Neenah and Col. W. J. McKay of Madison. The Neenah post adopted resolutions endorsing the candidacy of Mr. Cook and the Madison post took similar action regarding the candidacy of Mr. McKay. Walter O. Pietzsch of Baraboo has no opposition for senior vice-commander.

A feature of the encampment is a display of the eighty-four old battle flags carried by Wisconsin troops in the civil war. These are ordinarily kept in the state historical building at the university, but by permission of Gov. McGovern they have been brought down to the capitol and placed in the assembly chamber where the sessions of the encampment are held.

ABANDON WISCONSIN FIELD

Mining Property in Vicinity of Baraboo Found Unprofitable by Steel Trust.

Baraboo.—After having expended large sums of money in a futile endeavor to develop a profitable production in withdrawing from the Baraboo field of Wisconsin. Its mine at North Freedom is being dismantled. With the pumps and the other machinery removed, the property will be abandoned. It is at this mine that the last operations in the field were conducted. Other tracts tested had previously fallen by the wayside. A few years ago it appeared probable the Baraboo country would vie with some of the districts of the Lake Superior region as a source of iron supply. Exploration with the diamond drill had shown the existence of ore, and it was surmised that with shafts put down and lateral development undertaken the deposits would be found satisfactory in quantity and quality. The entry of the steel corporation was hailed as an event of great significance. But the district has not come up to expectations. Not only is the ore liberally mixed with rock, but water is present in such abundance as to make operations decidedly expensive.

High Water in Chippewa.

Eau Claire.—High water mark was reached in the Chippewa river here owing to a cloudburst over the Yellow river near Cadott. At Owen the streets were flooded and citizens forced to use rowboats.

WILL TRY OUT CONVICT CAMP

Board of Control Will Experiment With Prisoners in Building State Roads.

Madison.—Convict labor in building state roads is to be used in Wisconsin soon under the direction of the state board of control. Two camps of prisoners are to be placed at work in an experimental way within the next month, one at Waupun and one at Taycheedah, near the woman's industrial home. The plan of the board is to put the prisoners wholly upon their honor. Each company will contain about thirty and no guard will be placed over them, the superintendent to be a person selected by the highway commission to have charge of the engineering aspects of the work and the foreman to have general direction of the men.

Johnson Asks Re-election

State Treasurer Issues Formal Announcement As Republican Candidate.

Madison.—Henry Johnson, state treasurer, announces his candidacy for re-nomination in the following statement: "I hereby announce myself as a candidate for state treasurer on the Republican ticket at the primaries to be held Sept. 1, 1914. I am for an economical administration of the affairs of the state, so far as efficient and prompt service will permit."

U. C. T. Elect Officers.

Marshfield.—Following are new officers of Wisconsin Grand Council United Commercial Travelers elected at its annual convention here: Grand counselor, Charles G. Rumpf of Appleton; formerly of Marshfield; grand past counselor, E. U. F. Loether, Eau Claire; grand junior counselor, W. F. Raetz, Manitowoc; grand secretary, Thomas A. Wosinski, Milwaukee; grand treasurer, John Callaway, La Crosse; grand conductor, A. E. Hancock, Oshkosh; grand page, B. A. Honeycomb, Madison; grand sentinel, C. B. Campbell, Marshfield; G. B. Eranson of Janesville was reappointed grand chaplain by Grand Counselor Rumpf.

Dakota Farmers Coming.

Waukesha.—A delegation of North Dakota farmers will tour Wisconsin during June for the purpose of inspecting dairy farms and obtaining information as to the methods employed in making Wisconsin so widely known as a successful dairying center.

Washburn Plans Great Fourth.

Washburn.—Arrangements were made at the Commercial club rooms for a rousing celebration here July 4.

Hungarian Shoots Self.

Racine.—Because he was ordered to leave his boarding house today, for failure to pay his board, Stephen Ori, a Hungarian, went to his bedroom and shot a bullet from a revolver through his heart.

Well Digger Injured.

Coleman.—Thomas Meetz, a well driller, was perhaps fatally injured when the guide poles on the drilling machine broke and an upright struck him on the head.

Will Be Viceroy's Guests.

Neenah.—The Rev. and Mrs. J. N. Jersild of this city have left for New York, where they will take passage on the steamship Imperator for Europe. They will be guests of the viceroy of Ireland. The Rev. Mr. Jersild is an alderman here.

Andrew Mikkelsen Dies.

Kenosha.—Andrew Mikkelsen, aged 46, proprietor of the Garfield hotel in this city, died in Pontiac, Mich. A widow and one daughter survive him.

BLACK RIVER ON ANNUAL RAMPAGE

CLARK COUNTY VILLAGES SUFFER AS SWOLLEN TORRENT BREAKS ITS BOUNDS.

DAMS AND BRIDGES GO OUT

Buildings at Greenwood and Hemlock Fall Into Stream—Great Damage Along Big Eau Claire River.

Neilville.—Swollen from heavy rains, the Black river became a raging torrent and there was fear in towns along the river, both north and south of this city, that a repetition of the Black River Falls disaster of three years ago might be repeated.

At the village of Greenwood, thirty-five miles north of here, the Municipal Light and Power company's dam is reported to have been swept from its foundation and 250 feet of reinforced concrete levee torn away. The water was several feet deep in the streets and small buildings near the shore of the river were washed away and whirled down the stream.

At Hemlock, forty-two miles north of here, much damage was caused by the flood. The sawmill and roller mills of the T. O. Withee Lumber company are reported to have been washed down the river through the bursting of a dam higher up the stream.

Sawmill Dam Goes Out.

Marshfield.—March Rapids, a sawmill settlement in Marathon county, ten miles from Marshfield, has sustained a heavy loss by flood. The Big Eau Claire river overflowed and carried out the dam and bridge of H. Doud & Sons company, sweeping the yards clean of heading staves and lumber and carrying away 700,000 feet of logs, 200,000 of which belonged to farmers and the rest to the Doud company. Logs are scattered all along the banks from Stratford to Grand Rapids, on the Wisconsin side of the river.

Great damage was reported by farmers throughout western Marathon county. Train service to the north of the Soo line was resumed after thirty-six hours' interruption, during which all Soo line trains have detoured via Eau Claire and Marshfield over the Omaha. The Northwestern line from Marshfield to Wausau has been closed for two days.

High Water in Chippewa.

Eau Claire.—High water mark was reached in the Chippewa river here owing to a cloudburst over the Yellow river near Cadott. At Owen the streets were flooded and citizens forced to use rowboats.

The Bride and the Bridal Gown

BRIDES to be, more than any one else, are interested in the superb trousseau made for the president's daughter. But a review of the gowns made for her, and other members of the bridal cortege, reveals an adaptation of the present modes to individual taste and refinement that is interesting to every one.

The most noteworthy feature about all the gowns was simplicity. In a season of conglomerations and elaborations that often arrive at the stage of fussiness and shapelessness the gowns of Miss Wilson's trousseau were simple in design and yet contrived to strike the notes of the mode. Kurtzman, to whom the daughters of multimillionaires appear to turn with one accord when they go a-trousseauing, undertook the pleasant task of outfitting the White House bride, and accomplished it in a manner to wonder at.

Here is a picture of the bride, photographed in her wedding gown. The gown is of ivory white satin, made with a long train, and the lines of the skirt unbroken except by a flat application of magnificent point lace. The bodice is draped in the quaint and fascinating surplice fashion at one side with a sash of lace drawn over the shoulder at the opposite side. The underbodice is of chiffon laid in irregular plaits and fastened with a small brooch at the point of the "V" shaped neck. It was a triumph.

The very long and moderately full tulle veil was arranged in a cap for the head, with a wreath of orange blossoms set just back of the gathered fullness at the front. The short face veil is thrown back, falling free from the head, but the remainder of the veil falls from the cap, into which it is gathered across the back of the head.

The bouquet of white orchids with many loops of gauze ribbon and valley lilies was provided with the usual pendants of ribbon and sprays of flowers, the longest reaching to the bottom of the gown.

The gown may be taken as a lovely type of the regulation bridal dress with a concession to the present mode in the hanging of the skirt and the open, uncovered throat. The sleeves were rather full and long. It is a splendid achievement, and the rare lace that adorns it ought to outlast generations of brides. It looks as if it might have been chosen with the idea of treasuring some memento of the gown, which adorned the bride, upon the great day in her life.

This, and others of the trousseau, are worthy the study of women who refuse to follow exaggerations in style. The gowns are those of a woman of exquisite taste and a keen "sense of clothes."

Really Clever Bathing Caps

It is interesting to note that bathing caps, designed along entirely new lines, are taking the place of simpler caps of rubberized cloth made all exactly alike and without any reference to becomingness. The new caps are of silk and many of them intended to be worn over close-fitting rubber caps which provide the real protection to the hair.

A pretty and strikingly original model is pictured here, made of taffeta silk, which is about as satisfactory as any material to be had for bathing caps and suits. Women understand now that getting down to actual swimming and managing to look well when emerging from the water are two entirely compatible things. But the cap and the suit worn are matter that demands serious attention.

People who have leisure and money are going in for athletics, more and more. A town without at least one swimming pool for women is about as much behind the times as a house without a bath tub. No woman should miss the benefits and pleasures of the simplest and pleasantest of summer sports; and one does not need to belong to the leisure class to enjoy the water. It happens that water is a commodity possessed by every community.

The cap illustrated is made of a piece of silk folded over and stitched in one seam. It is made to fit snugly about the head and finished with a narrow hem. Two tabs of silk are tacked on at the sides by way of making the cap becoming.

There is a great variety in caps and suits to choose from this year. The fabrics are inexpensive, and any one with the average knowledge of sewing can make them.

JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

Spread of Chints.

With old-fashioned mahogany furniture, the bed covering should be old-fashioned, too. If you are fortunate enough to have an old quilt, made in an elaborate pattern, especially one that is pure white, use it on the old-fashioned bed. Otherwise make a spread of chints, or else one of heavy homespun linen.

An easy feat—to put one's foot in it when one attempts to stand on one's dignity.

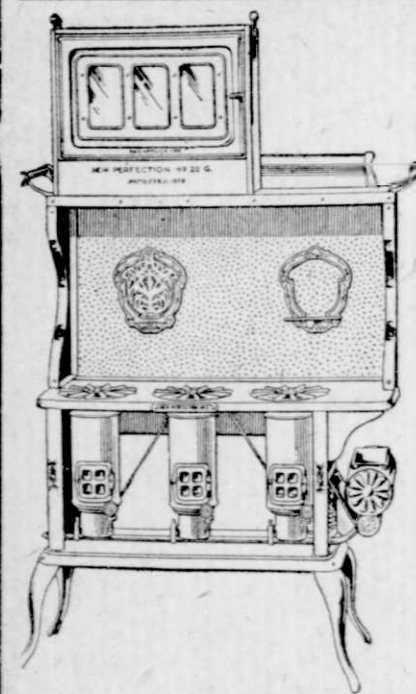

Modern Lover.

"I say, old chap, you're an extravagant person. What you got there—a chrysanthemum?" "Chrysanthemum! Dear me, no. That's a lavender wig for the adored one."

Sure Enough.

Church—I see residents of certain sections of St. Louis, Mo., are trying to force improved street-car service. Gotham—What's the matter? Haven't they got enough straps?

A Perfect Separator Oiling System

The new system of De Laval automatic oiling provides for a constant and liberal supply of CLEAN oil to every wearing surface of the machine at all times. There are no oil holes to fill up with dirt or perhaps to be neglected altogether, and every part is supplied with clean oil from the oil reservoir automatically and constantly.
In other, so-called, automatic oiling systems some of the parts have to be oiled by hand and no provision is made for getting rid of dirt that may get into the oil from the outside or of small particles of metal which come from wear, so that after a short time the oil supply becomes foul and injurious to the finely adjusted wearing parts.

DE LAVAL

CREAM SEPARATORS have the only automatic oiling system which provides for a constant supply of fresh oil and, at the same time, the constant discharge of the used oil together with all worn metal particles or dirt which may have gotten into the used oil.
The perfect system of De Laval lubrication means an easier running and a much longer wearing machine. Come in and let us explain the advantages of De Laval automatic oiling.

SYNOPSIS.

The Watermelon and James, two friends, having each their own way of life, decide to clean up, acquire new clothes and let their companions, Mike, the butcher, and to who is the better looking, Watermelon goes to a barber shop, while James, who is a clever trick and gets a wig. He discovers a young man being in a lake and steals his clothes. While sitting in an automobile he discovered standing empty by the roadside, general Crossman and his daughter, Henrietta. He drove up in a car, assuming that his car is damaged, the general's general assistant, Watermelon binds him a card, and the general, William Hargrove, Bitchelor. The general's general assistant, Watermelon, slips away and breaks the motor, and then he and Bitchelor and his wife, he invites him to dine with them. Watermelon is introduced to Henrietta, a big, well-to-do, and his daughter, Billy, with whom he proceeds to fall in love. Bartlett, who has been going by Bitchelor's operations, has been the supposed broker with him for a week while he was in the market. He gives instructions to his broker. While chatting with Billy, the Watermelon decides to go to the general's house, and tells his home companions of his adventures and asks them to find Bitchelor and give him the tramp clothes. The party starts out with Bartlett and Crossman's car. Late at night the general's general assistant, Watermelon, breaks in and eats their lunch. They spend the night in the house. The general's general assistant, Watermelon, goes to the general's house, and the party attempts to escape, but is captured by the officers who are hunting for Bitchelor's car.

The Watermelon leaned back, very indifferent and drew out his cigarette papers. Alphonse climbed obediently from the car, with his usual imperturbability. Calmly and willingly he scaled the stone wall and set off across the field with his captor. Tom thoughtfully examined his gun, one eye on the motor-car.

The general's desire to explain was superseded by a still greater desire to get away. The grim faces of the two men impressed him with the gravity of the event. If they were to escape, now was the time, when the forces of the enemy were divided, but there was his car. He could not leave that behind and the man in the road was a fairly good reason for him to remain where he was and make no attempt to reach it. Bitchelor had put up a clever bluff, but it had been called, and they had to sit there until the return of the other man, when they would be exposed, for of course the key wouldn't fit. That second man was a stubborn brute. The Lord had made mules. He didn't intend men to be.

Henrietta repressed a wild wish to scream aloud. Never, never again would she go into another man's house unless expressly asked to do so by the owner. She glanced behind, up the hill, toward the house. Alphonse and his captor had just come into sight again and were returning through the field. Henrietta breathed heavily. This was awful. When the two reached the stone wall, she hoped she would faint. She knew she wouldn't, she never fainted. She turned around that she might not see them. Nothing could be done, apparently, but simply wait for the hand of the law to fall upon them. She looked at Billy. Billy was frozen dumb. This was the end.

The Watermelon turned carelessly and spoke to Henrietta. "That was a pretty bird up there. Did you see it?" "Yes," said Henrietta automatically, though she had seen no bird. She heard the two men now right behind the car and she sank back limply.

"Well," queried the Watermelon. "By gum," admitted the man with the key. "It fits."

CHAPTER XIII.

Only to Be Lost.

Bartlett grinned and removed his hat to wipe his brow. The general drove not to show a guilty surprise. Billy gazed and Henrietta began to live again.

The Watermelon held out his hand. "My key, please. Kindly remove that piece of artillery from the road and we will go on."

The man, covered with perspiration and embarrassment, handed back the key. "When the Browns come back, shall we tell them you called?" "Certainly," said the general pompously, and in the exuberance of the reaction, he drew a half dollar from his pocket and handed it to the fellow.

"Kindly give that to Dick," said he with the benevolence of a grandfather. Billy waved to the crestfallen two and Henrietta gave them a gracious, forgiving bow.

"Never again," said she, "shall I do wrong. The possibilities of discovery are too nerve-racking."

GOT ONE ON CHARLIE MANN

Well-Known Washington Official for Once Was Not as Widespread as He Usually is Found.

Charles H. Mann is noted for his charity and geniality. But above these qualities is his pride in discharging his duties according to the letter and the spirit of the rules which govern him. He is the superintendent of the press gallery of the house of representatives in the national capitol, has a total of 21 silver hairs on his head, and is believed to have been the first white baby born in the District of Columbia.

Last summer charitable Charlie, on account of his wide acquaintance with the newspaper correspondents and editors throughout the country, was asked to guard the door leading to the newspaper men's section at the Baltimore convention, and to admit no one unless he exhibited a certain white card entitling the holder to a seat in that section.

Father used to say—

"Father used to say—" began the Watermelon. "I'll bet your mother didn't talk much," laughed Bartlett.

But the general had passed through an unhappy half hour and had no heart for jesting. "If you knew the Browns, Mr. Bitchelor," said he, "it was your duty to have told us so."

"Yes," said Henrietta. "I have aged ten years, and at my time of life that is tragedy."

"And why," asked Billy, "if you had the key, didn't we go in by the front door last night?"

The Watermelon stared from one accusing face to the other in frank surprise. Even Mike with his fat wits would have grasped the situation. "I didn't know them," he protested.

"When I can go in by a door, I don't choose the window."

"But the key," objected Billy. "Dick and Lizzie," added Henrietta. "Their very ages," climaxed the general.

"It was only a bluff," said the Watermelon wearily. "I remembered their names and ages from books I had seen around the room last night and the dresser, sort of birthday presents and things, you know. I never saw one of them."

The general roared and loved the boy. Henrietta leaned forward and patted him on the shoulder. "Wonderful, wonderful, Holmes!" said she.

"Did you take the key on purpose?" asked Billy, all aflutter with admiration. The Watermelon flushed. He had taken the key in by any chance he should ever be in that neighborhood again, and the family away, he could spend the night in a comfortable bed instead of under a hayrick. Besides, keys always came in handy. He didn't look at Billy. He laughed and changed his seat to the one between the two girls.

"When I looked the front door, I slipped the key out without thinking, I suppose," said he. "Besides, keys are handy. When you are stony broke, you can rattle them and make the other fellow think maybe they're the mon."

"Now for breakfast," cried the general gaily, never long forgetful of his meals. "Tell me," begged Henrietta, "what would father say?"

"Grace," said the Watermelon. The general, as he informed Henrietta at the first roadside they came to and at which they stopped for breakfast, was full of the old Nick. He felt that there might be no limit to his darling, he might go as far as to rob an apple orchard and make no attempt to repay the owner, that was, if the apples were ripe. Henrietta's own spirits were rising. One never realized what liberty was until one three aside conventionally—not foolish, but conventionally, the silly, foolish laws of senseless ages. Billy as usual laughed at every remark, while the general, the tramp and the financier grew fairly brilliant beneath the spur of two pretty women's laughing eyes.

The Watermelon, in his silk socks, his soft panama and fine linen, was too much in the habit of taking fate as he found it, without wonder or protest, to marvel now at his change of fortune or to be disturbed or embarrassed at the unexpected society in which he found himself. Between him and Bartlett was only the difference of a few millions, both lived by their wits, and if one preferred to walk while the other rode, it was merely a matter of choice—no sign of inferiority between man and man.

They stopped that evening at a small town in the north of Vermont, as far from a railway and telegraph office as Bartlett could bring them. He had watched Bitchelor carefully for signs of restlessness, but the young man appeared absorbed in the present, with no thought for anything but the moment and Billy and Henrietta.

After supper, they loitered a while on the porch. The night was dark and warm. Across the road and over the fields, the frogs in a distant pond were croaking, and the air was thick with fireflies.

"It is dark and still," said Billy, her hands thrust into the pockets of her linen coat, her feet slightly parted, as a boy would stand, her small head thrown back.

"What good does that do," asked the Watermelon, "seeing a universe? It's miles away and can't help you any."

"You have no beauty in your soul," declared Henrietta. "I think the idea is beautiful, seeing a universe."

"When you are down and out, you don't take any pleasure in looking at a universe," said the Watermelon. "A dollar, or even a quarter, will look a darned sight more beautiful."

"I wouldn't like to be poor," said Billy. "It must be so terrible to have no motor-car, for one thing."

"It is," agreed the Watermelon, who would have agreed to anything Billy said. "It's simply awful."

"What did you mind most," asked Billy, "when you were a newsboy?"

"Let's go look at the universe," suggested the Watermelon hastily. "We can see it much better down the road a bit."

Billy consented, and they strolled away in the dark. The general, who thought he was talking politics, was laying down the law to the hotel clerk, and Henrietta and Bartlett were left alone. They lingered a moment on the porch and then quietly disappeared up the road in the opposite direction from that taken by Billy and the Watermelon.

Bartlett's desire was to reach Maine as soon as possible and get lost over Saturday, but to avoid every city and larger town on the way and to hurry by the smaller places where there might be telegraph or telephone connections.

"Out of touch of the world for a week," he was fond of repeating. "No letters, no papers, no worries and no nerves."

And his desire was the Watermelon's. The more they avoided towns, the better the youth liked it. Telegraph and telephone stations were zealously shunned. He would have liked to have seen a paper, so as to judge what the police thought in the case of the theft of the wealthy young stock-broker's car, provided Bitchelor had allowed the thing to become public, which he very much doubted, but the little he knew of the man's character. It was hardly an episode one would care to see in print if one was dignified and self-made. And the Watermelon chuckled.

It took them longer than Bartlett hoped, sticking to narrow, unused country roads, and the next night found them still in Vermont. They spent the night at the village boarding house, and once again Billy and the Watermelon went down the road a bit to look at the universe, and Henrietta and Bartlett went up the road.

The following day, to Bartlett's satisfaction, they got lost. It was late in the afternoon when they stopped at Milford, a small town in New Hampshire, and made inquiries about the next town. Was it far and would the accommodations be good? It wasn't far, the farmer whom they questioned, assured them, only five miles. He directed them how to go and they thanked him and pushed on.

They went on and on and at nightfall found them in a lonely bit of wooded road apparently miles from any town or habitation. Bartlett was pleased. They were lost, and by great good luck they might remain lost for a considerable length of time. The general, too, was delighted. They would make a night of it. The lunch basket had been filled earlier in the day at a country store, so there would be enough to eat. The seats of the autos were soft and one could sleep in the cars or on the ground, as one preferred. It was warm and the rugs and shawls would be covering enough.

They ran the cars out of the road to a convenient clearing. Henrietta got out the basket, shawls were spread on the ground in the light of the two cars and they prepared to make the best of things.

"Dare as misery," said Henrietta dreamily. "In the day, one sees a world," quoted Bartlett, standing beside her where she leaned, a slender figure, against the post of the porch. "In the night one sees a universe," and he waved his lighted cigar vaguely toward the myriads of stars above them.

"What good does that do," asked the Watermelon, "seeing a universe? It's miles away and can't help you any."

collar marked like that shows that his owners don't stay in one place long enough to get a new plate on his collar between moves, and I don't care to rent to transients."

References which appeared satisfactory had been placed in the hands of the renting agent, who was on the point of declaring them unnecessary, owing to the genteel appearance of the applicants for a flat, when suddenly he exclaimed:

"By the way, I'm sorry, but I don't believe I can let you have that flat, after all. It's been spoken for."

"This is like old times," declared the general genially: "a night on the march, far out on the prairies, not a thing in sight, not a sound but a coyote or the cry of a wolf."

"And Indians," said Henrietta, "hiding back of the nearest hillock, creeping up on you unawares."

Billy glanced behind her at the woods and wished they had chosen a more open place to dine.

"Yes," agreed the general cheerfully, "or down in some southern swamp, with the Johnny Rebs stealing through the bushes."

"Oh, please," begged Billy. "What's the use of telling about things creeping up on you?"

And she glanced again at the bit of wood she could see in the light of the lamps. Far in the west the star was making and here and there a star twinkled between the rolling clouds.

A thunder-head was now and then revealed distinctly by flashes of distant lightning, and thunder rumbled ominously in the sultry night. A whip-poorwill called steadily and once a bat on graceful wing flew by in the early light.

The general laughed. "That was living in those days, Billy," he said. "A man was a man and not an office automaton, a dime saving bank."

CHAPTER XIV.

Billy, Billy, Everywhere.

Bartlett nodded. He had been watching Henrietta through half-lazy, half-closed lids, leaning against a fallen log. Somehow out there in the coolness and sweetness of the summer night, in the open country, with only the drumming of the insects and the shrill clamor of frogs to break the silence, nothing seemed to matter, to be worth struggling for. He felt that he hardly cared what was happening in his absence, back there in the hot, crowded, dirty city. A few more millions added to the useless many he already owned, what did it matter?

What amount could buy the night, the peace and sweetness and content?

"You're right, General," said he, watching the play on Henrietta's thin, white hands in the lamplight, as she and Billy arranged the evening meal. "A man's not a man in the city—nothing but a dirty, money-grubbing proposition. Dollars and cents, dollars and cents, the only reason of his being."

"I know," agreed Henrietta, nodding. "I sometimes wonder why it was so arranged in the world, you know, why couldn't love, courage, honor have been made the medium of exchange, the most vital necessity of life? Every one has to have money, so every one has to struggle for it. Why couldn't things have been started differently?"

"Potatoes, two kisses a peck," suggested the Watermelon.

"Three," said Bartlett, "if the purchaser is young and pretty. A smile would be enough, if she were old and wrinkled and unweid."

"A motor-car would probably necessitate a wedding," said the general.

"No, no, no," protested Henrietta. "How silly! You don't understand me at all."

"I would hate to be a clerk at a bargain sale," said the Watermelon, sniffing a cracker from the box Billy held.

"Yes," agreed Bartlett, "think of the microbes!"

"Microbes?" asked Billy who had not been following the conversation. "Where?"

"In kisses, Billy," said the general. "I should think you would have found it out by this time. Everybody you kiss—"

"I never kiss anybody," protested Billy, blushing delightfully.

"He used to say," began the Watermelon.

"Look here," interrupted Bartlett, "that father of yours was a minister, you say. I vow he could know nothing about this subject."

"He married more people than you have," said the Watermelon.

"Yes," said Henrietta kindly, "he must have known all about it. Do tell us what he said."

THE CREDULITY OF MANKIND

Catalogue Houses Quack Doctors of Commerce.

PROMISES, NOT GUARANTEES

A Mail Order House Baron Never Shoves His Patent Leather Shoes Under a Poor Man's Table—His Victims Extend From Ocean to Ocean—From Sunrise to the Last Chance.

Said a clever quack to a painstaking business man, "How many of the passing multitude, do you understand, appreciate your honesty or uphold the impositions of quackery?"

"Not more than one in ten," was the answer.

"Well," said the quack, "you may have the one. I'll take the nine." That is the system upon which the mail order houses operate, and nothing more strikingly portrays the credulity of mankind than their success. Quackery is a thing universal and universally successful. In most cases it is literally true that no imposition is too great for the credulity of man.

The Quack Doctor of Commerce.

The retail mail order house is the quack doctor of commerce. It promises much and guarantees nothing. Like patent medicines, the directions are always on the inside, and you must buy a nonreturnable package before you find out what they are.

The mail order house never helped to build the little white school in your district or unroll the road past your door. No mail order house ever took you by the hand when you were in distress and told you to let the little account run until after harvest next year. No mail order house ever sold you a vehicle and spent every cent of its profits in the community where you and your neighbors could get it all back again. No mail order house ever shined its patent leather shoes under your table and rejoiced with you when you were glad, nor spoke encouraging words when affliction visited you, nor stood with uncovered head beside the graves of your children.

Sentiment is Unknown.

That the mail order houses are after your money is an undisputed fact. Every dollar sent to them leaves your neighborhood poorer. The mail order house may bear upon its face the semblance of friendship, but no human heart beats under its cloak of hypocrisy. Sentiment to it is unknown. The whole institution is as cold and bloodless as a corpse.

There never was a farm in all Christendom whose value was increased by the mail order houses. They are parasites to which life is worthy of notice only while they can draw the financial blood out of the communities, to the upbuilding of which they contribute nothing. They create no local market for the product of the farms. They have no property in the country which can be assessed to help bear the burden of taxation.

Can Duplicate Every Offer.

In every town in the country the local retail merchant stands ready to duplicate every offer seductively set forth in the catalogues of mail order houses, and more. He will trump the best trick the mail order house ever played if you will put down your cash and accept from him a class of goods devoid of respectable ancestry and upon which no reputable manufacturer's name can be found, but in which the disease germs of prison made goods are secreted. He can sell cheap goods if you will; but he can meet the best price ever made by a mail order house if you will plunk down your money and accept what he gives you without question and without recourse. But you must not expect him to be in his place of business every day in the year, ready and willing to make good any defect, ready and willing to stand back of every article he sells with his own reputation and the warranty of a responsible company.

Local Merchant Needs No Advocate.

The local merchant needs neither advocate nor defense. His methods rest upon principles that have built up in this country a system of internal commerce which is both the marvel and the admiration of the world. His business is legitimate because its success contributes to the general prosperity of the community in which it stands as a thriving example of honesty and industry.

It does not require that a man shall be endowed with unusual mental attainments for him to know that a private monopoly in restraint of trade, designed to wring extortionate profits from consumers, is detrimental to the best interests of the patrons of that industry. Any combination organized for the purpose of smothering competition, whether it be of capitalists, capitalists of industry, laborers, farmers, transportation lines or any other branch of the business world, is essentially unethical, unwise and destructive of business in the end.

The honest consumer must pat himself enthusiastically on the back when he spends his money in such a way that in supplying his own wants he is helping to build up the community in which he lives.

Builders of Wisconsin Farms

Because he has followed in the path of the dairy cow,—success and prosperity is the lot of the Wisconsin farmer. Because the dairy herd is the central feature upon Wisconsin farms,—the state is today the Greatest Dairy State in the Union, and one of the richest agriculturally.

The Dairy Cow Wins a Great Victory in Wisconsin

The dairy cow has won a great victory in Wisconsin. Back in the 70's there were many sections in the state where the farms were so "run down" and unproductive that they were actually abandoned. The once virgin soils no longer yielded abundant crops; their strength and fertility exhausted by continuous years of wheat raising. Farming was all but ruined. It was under these conditions that the dairy cow was introduced into Wisconsin agriculture and from that day on she has steadily restored the lost fertility to the "worn out" soils, regained the agricultural prestige of the state, and enriched her owners.

Every progressive farmer is a subscriber to farm papers. Every progressive farmer in Wisconsin should be a subscriber to a dairy farm paper,—and that paper should be—

Hoard's Dairyman

Right here in your own state, almost at your door, is published the leading dairy journal of the world,—the undisputed authority of the dairy industry. Hoard's Dairyman is a wise counselor and a safe guide for the man keeping cows. It is a handbook of timely and helpful suggestions and advice. Intimately familiar with local conditions, it meets the same problems every Wisconsin farmer meets, and assists him in solving them.

HOARD'S DAIRYMAN is the only agricultural paper in Wisconsin owning a farm that is kept constantly under the direct management of its editors.

Make 1914 Your Best Year

For the coming year Hoard's Dairyman will contain many features of special interest and value to Wisconsin farmers. It will help you to make this year your best year. Personal experiences of some of Wisconsin's most successful dairymen will be published. A series of articles on dairy farm management will be contributed by the eminent authority, Prof. D. H. Otis, and the reports and discussions upon the

Big Farm Management Contest

In which nearly 300 of Wisconsin's best managed dairy farms are entered, will form topics of absorbing interest. Soil fertility, rotation of crops, feeding and breeding problems, the raising of alfalfa, sanitation, farm buildings, dairy breeds, and scores of other vital subjects are discussed every week in Hoard's Dairyman with a fullness and directness that meets the needs of the beginner as well as the experienced dairyman.

SPECIAL SUBSCRIPTION OFFER We are pleased to announce that by special arrangement with the publishers, we are enabled to offer a year's subscription to Hoard's Dairyman in combination with this publication at a most attractive subscription price. We offer—
