OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Building a Greater State

What is a greater duty upon the part of a citizen than to take a hand in the matter of building a greater state? Perhaps someone will say that it is building a greater community. We will not argue that feature of the situation—as a matter of fact one is mixed with the other so closely that it is difficult to act in one line without affecting the other. What is wanted is the booster spirit rationally governed, a demand for better things and action to secure them.

Some are declined to think that this building of better communities has a value only for, say, the real estate dealer or perhaps a certain line of merchants. If a railroad were proposed they can only see that the builders will likely receive a dividend on their investment. If a campaign for better farming, for illustration, were proposed, merchants will say that that means nothing to them—this is not so much the case as it used to be but it prevails too much even now.

There are many sections in upper Wisconsin where villages prevailed without any farming community and when any effort was made to develop the country agriculturally many merchants and professional men frowned upon such efforts. Happily such conditions prevail no more, but it illustrates inactivity in community building in an aggravated form. These village people needed farmers for patrons—they were asleep to the situation.

Fortunately sentiment in Wisconsin has been awakened very materially along the line for better conditions. We have organizations whose efforts are devoted to building better communities and others whose efforts are on a statewide basis. There is no citizen who should not be interested in this work—it is to the interest of all that it should go forward.

What greater ecnium is possible than that a man was active in community and state building? In what effort can there be greater satisfaction? The reverse need not be stated—no one would want the standing of having withheld his support from such effort.

Badger State Needs More Silo Farmers

Will you build a silo next year? Its none to early to begin planning. Even if you do live in Wisconsin you may still need to be converted to the advantages of feeding silage, or you may not have decided which is the best type of silo for your section and farm.

You, of course, will have plenty of opportunities this winter to see for yourself what are the advantages of silage and to determine what size and type of silo will best fit your needs. For there are more silos in Wisconsin than upon the farms of any other state, and their owners, whether dairy-men of beef cattle or feeders, are enthusiastic boosters for silos and of course more and more are being built each year.

Down in Kansas, they boast that their farmers own 7,137 silos, which is a splendid record in view of the fact that there were but 60 in the "Jay Hawker" state in 1909.

Assuming the average capacity of the silos of Wisconsin is 110 tons the Wisconsin farmers who own them likely will have about 5,000,000 tons of the very best of summer succulence on hand for feeding this winter. Although much of this feed will be fed to dairy cows, beef makers throughout the state are finding silos and silage valuable aids to economic beef production.

High School Notes

The Juniors were given a test in Modern History on Friday.

Miss Rose Brandtetter was a High School visitor one day last week.

"Giggles" for sale and cheap at that. Call on the Junior and Senior girls.

English Teacher: Roland would you please put your scansion on the black board.

Roland: What! My stanchion?

S. T., one of our Junior girls killed a number of wasps on the west side of the school building one day this week with her Geometry book. Some brave Junior.

The Sophomore boys believe in the old German proverb "Morgen Stunde hatt gold im Munde." Its all right boys perhaps some day you will be champions in "tennis."

The Sophomore, Junior and Senior girls organized a "Hiker's Club" Tuesday afternoon. As yet they have not taken any trips but intend to take their first hike Sunday.

We'll Have to Wear White Sox

If the European war does not cease within a few weeks and there seems little prospects that it will, everybody will have to wear white stockings.

Aniline, the chemical base of all dyes comes from Germany. It is said that there is no aniline produced in this country. Manufacturers of dyed goods have practically exhausted the supply in this country.

All drug stores are being visited by agents for the purpose of buying up the entire supply. It is stated that there is sufficient dye on hand to last about two months.

Soon it is expected that everybody will be wearing white hose on all occasions and the old black stand-by will be given a temporary release.

HARTFORD LAWYER

KILLED BY AUTO

Paul Rix, a Prominent Lawyer of Hartford, Was Almost Instantly Killed When Auto He Was Driving Turned Turtle

Attorney Paul Rix, aged 40 years, of Hartford, attorney for the Kessel Kar company, and former partner of Ex-United States Dist. Atty. H. K. Butterfield, was killed and his four companions were injured, when the rear wheel of their automobile broke while trying to avoid a bump in the road, two miles southeast of Menomonee Falls, shortly after dinner last Sunday. The machine turned turtle, went into the ditch and landed right side up facing the opposite direction in which they were going.

The injured are, Samuel Parent, aged 27, ribs on right side broken. Allen Derenbach, aged 25 right knee injured, severe cuts and bruises.

Joe. Parent, aged 30, slightly injured.

Leo. Hawkins, aged 22, slightly injured.

Mr. Rix was found by his companions about six feet from the car with his face towards the ground. The steering wheel breaking his ribs and crushing them into his lungs, which caused almost instant death.

Mr. Rix was driving the car and was going at a fair rate of speed when he tried to avoid a bump in the road, which caused the car to swerve and the rear wheel broke. All of the other occupants were thrown out of the car.

The men were going to Milwaukee to witness the double header of baseball between the Brewers and St. Paul. Mr. Rix promising his companions a treat to the game for the services they rendered at the Kessel Kar factory in the morning.

Mrs. Martha Rix, his wife, who is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos Ott of West Bend, became prostrated upon hearing the fatal news. She had the previous day returned from the northern part of the state where she took ill.

Mr. Rix was very well known throughout the county and state. He was a man liked by all who knew him. He also was chief advisor of the Kessel Kar company.

The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Services were conducted in St. James Episcopal church by Rev. F. L. Maryon of Kenosha. The remains were then given in charge of the Masons, under whose beautiful ritualistic work the burial took place in Union cemetery.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS

A very curious old watch was brought to U. S. Briggs this week for repair. It is the property of Mrs. Paul Buce of the town of Erin and is about two hundred years old, and was brought by her father from Norway. The watch is in a silver case and about the thickness of two ordinary watches. This is due to the works, which are quite different from the watches of today instead of being wound up by a spring it has a chain wind the fine gold chain being wound from one wheel to another. Over this winding system is a delicate gold filigree shield, and other parts of the inner works are of gold. It of course winds with a key. The inside of the watch bears the name of the maker, Brooks of London. It is a beautiful piece of workmanship and a valuable curiosity. Since being repaired the watch ticks away as cheerfully as if it had just come from the watch maker's hands.—Hartford Press.

The Germans took the offensive against the Russians and in a short but furious night attack won a terrific battle.

The battle was staged in Sheboygan when Officer John Dreesen, one of the Germans on the local police force, arrested John Smijumas, a Russian, for disorderly conduct. A counter attack was made by the Russian's brother and the battle raged furiously until the officer knocked one out with his club and the other with the butt of his revolver. In municipal court the Russians paid fines of $20 each for resisting an officer.—Evening Wisconsin.

A big snake, supposed to be a python, which escaped from a circus or carnival, has been roaming about the city of Watertown and giving the citizens of that place quite a scare. It was seen last Friday by several people and is described as being between ten and fifteen long with a huge body.

The snake was killed by Charles Sprenger, of that city, on Sunday with a shotgun. The reptile measured over six feet, but no one seems to know what kind of a snake it is.—Hartford Times.

Oscar Miske, son of Fred Miske, living on the Gus Frank farm, in the town of Jackson was seriously hurt last Friday. He had climbed up to a window in the barn to see if a load of clover that was being hauled was approaching the barn, and slipped and fell. He struck on his back on a pitchfork, the handle passing through the intestines and striking the stomach. He was removed to a hospital in Milwaukee, where he is reported to be doing nicely.—Hartford Press.

A stranger entered the Wisconsin House at Cedarburg last week Monday and for no reason whatever seized one of their iron match stands on the bar and hurled it at the proprietor, Charles Rilling. The chief of police was immediately summoned, and the stranger, who gave his name as Charles Riley, was arrested and sentenced to forty days in the county jail.—Hartford Times.

Andy Cronin, aged 70, an old time marine man of Port Washington has been missing for a week and is believed to have drowned. He was in the habit of walking out on the piers each night. His only relatives live in Milwaukee.

NEITHER SIDE CLAIMS GAINS IN CONFLICTS

Germans and Allies Slaughter Each Other Without Definite Results.

ADMIT THE LOSS IS HEAVY

Frontal Attacks and Repulses Cost the Lives of Thousands—Germany Financially Able Without Strain to Maintain War for Year—Cost to Her is $5,000,000 a Day—Russian Claims Rout of Austrians.

Paris, via London, Sept. 30.—Details of the French and British fighting on the left wing, along the Aisne, where the allies have repulsed for days the attacks of the Germans, who endeavored to take the positions by assault, are disclosed.

Word from the front describes the encounters. On one occasion the French and British held positions within a quarter of a mile of the German front, where they were not in danger from the heavy German artillery and were sheltered from the machine guns unless they came into the open.

One of the most furious German assaults turned upon the trenches occupied by British regiments, which calmly awaited the onslaughts of line after line of Germans, meeting them with sustained rifle and machine gun fire and sometimes at the point of the bayonet, which did great execution.

The British, however, did not bear the whole brunt of the fighting, for the French troops, including a division of the famous colonial infantry and the Turcos, as well as many battalions of French regulars and others composed of territorial troops, also faced successfully prolonged attacks, which were delivered with great fierceness.

The vigor and spirit of the soldiers were considered remarkable after such an exhausting campaign, during which they had scarcely a full day's rest. When not actually engaged in fighting many of the regiments marched thirty miles daily for several days in changing position to carry out new movements.

Germans Deny Allies Advance.
The German official statement declares that "reports concerning a victorious advance of the enemy are untrue."

"The Germans suffered enormous losses in the last engagement," says the Bordeaux correspondent of the Reuter Telegram company. The message continues:

"German prisoners say that some companies of the guards have dwindled to 100 men and are commanded by young officers, as they have lost all their former officers since the beginning of the war."

Other dispatches confirm the report that the Prussian guard has been cut to pieces during the fighting. The strength of some companies has been reduced from 250 to 100 men. Two battalions have been annihilated.

The supreme clash of arms denoting the approaching close of the tremendous fortnight of practically unceasing battle along the four rivers flowing through northwestern France has been

In progress forty-eight hours without a decisive result.

RUSSIANS CLAIM SUCCESS; IS DENIED AT BERLIN

London, Sept. 30.—A Central News dispatch from Rome says that the following telegram has been received there from Petrograd:

"The right wing of the Austrians has been driven back beyond the Carpathians into Hungary, where they are being pursued by the Russians. The Austrian debacle is complete and they have lost all their artillery. The Austrian left wing has retreated to Cracow. The Russians have occupied two of the forts of Przemyśl."

The hour for the battle which will determine whether the Russians will make their proposed invasion of Germany with Berlin as the final objective appears to be drawing near.

EXPECT FIGHT TO LAST; WAR'S COST TO GERMANY

Berlin, Sept. 30, via London.—The correspondent of the Lokal Anzeiger, in a dispatch published here today, points out that a decisive turn in the battle which "has been raging in the western theater of war need not be expected for some time. Subordinate actions of a decisive character are becoming more general, the correspondent declares.

The losses of the Germans have been extraordinarily heavy, and the fact that those of the enemy have been greater is poor consolation. The troops are confident that in the end they will win the action.

A long column of French prisoners of war arrived during the week from the direction of Reims. Monday the correspondent met a column of about a thousand men whose faces showed that they were glad to have at last escaped the turmoil and terrors of this great era of modern battlefields.

Berlin, Sept. 30, via London.—The response of the German public to the efforts of the government to raise a war fund of 5,000,000,000 marks ($1,250,000,000), it is asserted here, has removed all anxiety the nation may have had regarding its ability to meet financial obligations due to the war.

Originally the reichstag allowed a war credit of 5,000,000,000 marks in addition to the war treasure, and of this amount 4,500,000,000 has been subscribed by the public without straining seriously the financial resources of the empire.

According to military authorities, the war is costing Germany about twenty million marks ($5,000,000) a day, inclusive of the money spent on behalf of those who have been deprived of their bread-winners.

BRIEF DISPATCHES TELL OF MINOR HAPPENINGS

(Special Correspondence.)
There is strong evidence from the inside of Brussels that something is expected by the Germans there. For instance, all the English nurses and doctors who have been there since war occupation have been ordered to depart. Some have already gone.

It is reported that all the wounded, irrespective of their condition, have been moved out of the city, and that some of them died in the moving.

The Japanese legation at Peking announces that Japanese troops, after fighting on Saturday and Sunday, occupied a position within seven and one-half miles of Tsing Tao, the seat of government of Kiauchau, the German leased possession in China. A German report, undated but evidently having to do with the same engagement, says that the Germans retired only from their outpost positions to the first line defenses of the city.

The Russian ministry of the interior today gave out figures on the harvest for 1914, according to which the food products reached a total of more than 64,285,000 tons.

A Bordeaux dispatch to London says a report has reached there that the German commander at Hulhausen, in Alsace, has committed suicide in despair over the fact that he was unable to pass the Vosges. He had previously telegraphed the German general staff to come and see the difficulties for itself.

The correspondent of the Giornale d'Italia (Rome), who has entered Pola, the great naval port and arsenal of Austria, reports that all the woods around the harbor have been cut and burned, country houses and villas have been painted gray and intrenchments have been dug and traps have been laid everywhere.

The troops centered at Pola, says the correspondent, total 300,000, and besides a fleet is assembled there.

The Berliner Tageblatt's military critic admits that "the German army in the Verdun region is menaced on three sides by the French."

"It is officially announced that French forces in equatorial Africa have reoccupied the greater part of the Congo territory ceded to Germany by the treaty of 1911," says the Havas (Paris) correspondent at Bordeaux.

A dispatch to the London Daily Mail from Venice, dated Sunday, says that the French fleet at that time had been in action for the last forty-eight hours bombarding the port of Cattaro and the fortified island on the Dalmatian coast.

A dispatch from Rome to London says a message from Budapest asserts the minister of the interior has announced fifteen new cases of cholera in the Hungarian city's military hospital.

The operators of a German Zeppelin dirigible dropped a bomb into a schoolhouse at Bielostok, Russia, yesterday, killing eleven children, according to a dispatch from Petrograd to the London Morning Post.

A dispatch to the Cologne Gazette from Igal, Dalmatia, asserts that the Austrian forts at Cattaro on Sept. 19 sunk a big French warship. The forts had intercepted a wireless message concerning the movement in the direction of Cattaro of fifteen warships and three cruisers. The Austrians awaited their arrival fully prepared. A salvo from the first fort sunk the warship and the other vessels in the fleet hastily retreated.

"Advantage has been taken of the arrival of reinforcements to relieve by fresh troops the men who have been on the firing line for some time," reports an attaché at the headquarters of Field Marshal Sir John French in an official press bureau statement. "Several units therefore have received their baptism of fire during the week," continues the statement.

Despite official denials by Austria, it is positively known that the Austrian forces on the Italian frontier are being strongly re-enforced. All of the regiments made up of troops of Italian birth or from the frontier itself, where Italian sympathy is strong, have been transferred to the battle line in Galicia. Their places have been taken by Hungarian regiments and those from the Russian frontier who, because of their pro-Slavic sympathies, could not be depended on to fight wholeheartedly.

GEN. FRENCH TELLS HOW BRITONS HAVE FACED GIANT GERMAN GUNS

London.—The official press bureau issued a report from Field Marshal Sir John French's headquarters on the British operations in France. The text follows:

"The enemy is still maintaining himself along the whole front and in order to do so is throwing into the fight detachments composed of units from the different formations, the active army, reserve, and landwehr, as is shown by the uniforms of the prisoners recently captured.

"Our progress, although slow on account of the strength of the defensive position against which we are pressing, has in certain directions been continuous, but the present battle may well last for some days more before a decision is reached, since it now approximates nearly to siege warfare.

"The Germans are making use of searchlights. This fact, coupled with their great strength in heavy artillery, leads to the supposition that they are employing material which may have been collected for the siege of Paris.

Confident of the Result.
"The nature of the general situation after the operations of the eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth, cannot be better summarized than as expressed recently in a neighboring French commander to his corps: 'Having repulsed repeated and violent counter attacks made by the enemy, we have a feeling that we have been victorious.'

"So far as the British are concerned, the course of events during these three days can be described in a few words.

During Friday, eighteenth, artillery fire was kept up intermittently by both sides during daylight. At night the Germans counter-attacked certain portions of our line, supporting the advance of their infantry as always by a heavy bombardment. But the strokes were not delivered with great vigor and ceased about 2 a. m. During the day's fighting an air-craft gun of the Third army corps succeeded in bringing down a German aeroplane.

"News was received also that a body of French cavalry had demolished part of the railway to the north, cutting, at least temporarily, one line of communication which is of particular importance to the enemy.

German Attack Stopped.
"On Saturday, the nineteenth, the bombardment was resumed by the Germans at an early hour and continued intermittently under reply from our guns. Some of their infantry advanced from cover, apparently with the intention of attacking, but on coming under fire they retired. Otherwise the day was uneventful, except for the activity of the artillery, which is a matter of normal routine rather than an event.

"Another hostile aeroplane was brought down by us, and one of our aviators succeeded in dropping several bombs over the German line, one incendiary bomb falling with considerable effect on a transport park near La Fere.

"A buried store of the enemy's ammunitions of war also was found not far from the Aisne, ten wagon loads of live shells and two wagons of cable being dug up. Traces were discovered of large quantities of stores having been burned—all tending to show that as far back as the Aisne the German retreat was hurried.

"There was a strong wind during the day, accompanied by a driving rain. This militated against the aerial reconnaissance.

Several German Attacks Fail.
"On Sunday, the twentieth, nothing of importance occurred until the afternoon, when there was a break in the clouds and an interval of feeble sunshine, which was hardly powerful enough to warm the soaking troops. The Germans took advantage of this brief spell of fine weather to make several attacks against different points. These were all repulsed with loss to the enemy, but the casualties incurred by us were by no means light.

"In one section of our firing line the occupants of the trenches were under the impression that they heard a military band in the enemy's line just before the attack developed. It is now known that the German infantry started their advance with bands playing.

"The offensive against one or two points was renewed at dusk, with no greater success. The brunt of the resistance naturally has fallen on the infantry. In spite of the fact that they have been drenched to the skin for some days and their trenches have become deep in mud water, and in spite of the incessant night alarms and the almost continuous bombardment to which they have been subjected, they have on every occasion been ready for the enemy's infantry when the latter attempted to assault, and they have beaten them back with great loss. Indeed, the sight of troops coming up has been a positive relief after long, trying hours of inaction under shell fire.

German Cannon Fire Falls.
"The object of the great proportion of artillery the Germans employ is to beat down the resistance of their enemy by concentrated and prolonged fire—to shatter their nerve with high explosives before the infantry attack is launched. They seem to have relied on doing this with us, but they have not done so, though it has taken them several costly experiments to discover this fact.

"From statements of prisoners it appears that they have been greatly disappointed by the moral effect produced by their heavy guns, which, despite the actual losses inflicted, had not been at all commensurate with the colossal expenditure of ammunition which has been wasted.

"By this it is not implied that their artillery fire is not good. It is more than good—it is excellent. But the British soldier is a difficult person to impress or depress, even by immense shells filled with a high explosive, which detonate with terrific violence and form craters large enough to act as graves for five horses.

Scott at German Shell.
"The German howitzer shells are from eight to nine inches in caliber, and on impact they send up columns of greasy black smoke. On account of this they are irreverently dubbed 'coal boxes,' 'black Marias,' or 'Jack Johnsons' by the soldiers.

"Men who take things in this spirit are, it seems, likely to throw out the calculations based on loss of morale so carefully framed by the German military philosophers.

"A considerable amount of information has been gleaned from prisoners. It has been gathered that our bombardment on the fifteenth produced a great impression. The opinion also is reported that our infantry makes such good use of the ground that the German companies are decimated by our rifle fire before the soldier can be seen.

"From an official diary captured by the First army corps it appears that one of the German corps contains an extraordinary mixture of units. If the composition of the other corps is similar it may be assumed that the present efficiency of the enemy's forces is in no way comparable with what it was when the war commenced.

Germans Lose Many Officers.
"The losses in officers are noted as having been especially severe. A brigade is stated to be commanded by a major; some companies of foot guards by one-year volunteers, while after the battle of Montmirail one regiment lost fifty-five out of sixty officers.

CHINESE TROOPS DESTROY BRIDGE

FIRST MOVE IN OPPOSITION TO OPERATIONS OF JAPS IN SHANTUNG PROVINCE.

GERMANS SHELL ANTWERP

Town of Lierre, Directly in Front of City, Under Fire—Antwerp Defenses Said to Be Strongest in the World.

Wei-Hsien, Shantung, China, Sept. 30.—Chinese troops on Monday blew up and destroyed the railroad bridge at Tayo-Ho, six miles west of here. The sound of the explosion could be heard in this city.

The above dispatch is the first indication that Chinese troops have taken any active part in opposing the military operations of the Japanese in Shantung province in the latter's campaign against the Germans in the leased territory of Kiao-Chow.

Chinese officials would not say Tuesday night whether the blowing up of the railroad bridge at Tayo-Ho, six miles west of Wei-Hsien, by Chinese troops, had been ordered by the government or not.

It has been learned, however, that the Japanese minister here informed the foreign office on Monday that the Japanese intended to occupy the railroad into Tsi-Nan, the capital of Shantung province. To this the foreign office refused to agree.

Chinese Troops Mobilize.

The information was obtained in high quarters on Tuesday that it is the wish of President Yuan Shi Kai to avoid trouble with the Japanese. The military men of China, however, are under German influence, and a large number of Chinese troops recently have been mobilized in Shantung province.

Begin Attack on Antwerp.

Amsterdam, via London, Sept. 30.—The Germans have commenced their attack on the first line of defense of Antwerp, according to dispatches received by the Amsterdam papers.

Mol, which is an important railway junction near the Dutch border, was occupied by the Germans on Sunday, and on Tuesday the Germans, who again occupy Malines, began a bombardment of Lierre, directly in front of Antwerp.

They also continued their bombardment of Forts Waehel and St. Catherine. It is believed heavy Austrian artillery is being used.

The fortifications of Antwerp are reckoned among the strongest in the world. The city has been fortified since the middle of the sixteenth century. In 1860, twenty-eight years after the taking of the city by English and French troops, Brialmont, the noted Belgian fort builder, supervised the re-fortification of the city, and since 1877 it has had a line of forts well out from the inner defenses.

In 1907 the government decided to do away with the inner line of walls and replace them with an inner line of forts on the right bank of the Scheldt. The plan involved the barricading of the intervals between the eight forts with iron barricades and permanent redoubts.

Warns Italians.

Rome, Sept. 30, via Paris.—The official Gazette has published a warning issued by the government to Italians who have taken or intend to take service in the army of any country now at war. This action is against neutrality and punishable under article 13 of the penal code, with from five to ten years in prison, or sixteen years in case Italy becomes involved. Article 13 also deprives any Italian who engaged in military service abroad of his Italian citizenship without exempting him from military service at home.

Sink British Ships.

London, Sept. 30.—The official news bureau announced today that the German cruiser Emden has sunk four British steamships and a collier. The Emden has been operating in the gulf of Bengal. She was reported recently at Madras, where she conducted a brief bombardment of that port and later at Pondichery.

Japs Win Skirmish.

Pekin, China, Sept. 30.—The Germans in Kiau-Chau have evacuated the Walderssee line of defense before an overwhelming force of the enemy. Tsing-tao is now completely invested. The German losses were small.

This information is contained in a dispatch received here from a German source at Tsinan, Shantung, which evidently is a wireless communication from Tsing-tao. It adds that the Japanese armored cruiser squadron bombarded Tsing-tao Monday without any damage.

Stock Exchange Firm Falls.

New York, Sept. 30.—The New York stock exchange firm of Cowertwell & Clark today assigned to Lyle E. Mahan. This is the fifth stock exchange failure resulting from the present financial crisis.

Estimate Aisne Losses.

London, Sept. 30.—Estimates place the German losses in killed, wounded and missing at about 180,000 in the Aisne battle, while those of the allies will probably reach 100,000.

Move Belgium Capitol.

Ghent, Sept. 30.—The military government of Belgium is being transferred from Brussels to Namur. All the archives were loaded in automobile trucks Sunday and since vehicles have been transferring the materials.

Russians Break Promise.

Berlin, Sept. 30.—Information made public in Berlin declares that the commander-in-chief of the Russian forces has revoked the government's promise of autonomy for Poland.

BADGER NEWS NOTES

Merrill.—Among the speakers on the program for the Central Wisconsin Teachers' association meeting Oct. 24 and 25, will be John E. Gunckel, president of the Newsboys' association, Toledo, O.; John F. Sims, president Stevens Point Normal school; Peter W. Dykema, professor of music, University of Wisconsin; George W. Davis, superintendent Sauk County schools; E. L. Luther, state high school inspector, and Silas B. Tobey, superintendent of schools, Wausau.

Madison.—L. J. Nash, state secretary of the statutes, notified the secretary of state that he had appointed Hilbert Lieser, formerly private secretary of Judge A. J. Vinje of the Supreme court, as indexer of the statutes at a salary of $100 a month. He also appointed Loretta F. Dinneen and Mildred J. Lund, both of Madison, as clerks in his department at a salary of $40 a month each.

Superior.—About a year ago, Frank Drummond, a lumberman of Cable, received a letter demanding payment of $5,000 to avoid being blown up. Since that time officers have been on the trail of the "black hand" writer. With the arrest of Charles Howard, a woodsman, aged 31, they profess to believe that they have come to the end of their search.

Milwaukee.—Ground for the first castle hall in the Wisconsin domain of the Knights of Pythias has been broken for Park Lodge No. 177, Milwaukee. The lodge was organized two years ago with eighty-three members. The cornerstone will be laid Oct. 18 by grand lodge officers.

Waukesha.—The newly organized Society of Americans of German Ancestry accepted fifteen new members at a meeting held in the G. A. R. hall, and adopted a constitution. President J. H. A. Lacher gave an address in which he explained the object of the organization, and what it expected to accomplish.

Appleton.—Two holdups have been reported to the police. Leland Meyer was held up by two men who demanded his money. Upon refusing to comply, he was knocked down, kicked and then robbed. Arnold Keska was held up in the same vicinity and was threatened with being shot.

Ashland.—Sam Marksman was drowned in the White river. He left Odanah in a rowboat and became ill on the way home, falling head first into the water. His body was found in twelve feet of water.

Kenosha.—Mrs. Emma Beyersdorfer Fox, 55 years old, wife of Bert Fox, a woman long prominent in Kenosha, committed suicide in the cellar of her home by hanging. Fear of blindness is believed to have caused her to suicide.

Neenah.—Neenah's continuation schools opened with forty-one pupils registered. Twenty courses are being offered.

Superior.—Superior's first fire hall, an old frame building constructed thirty-four years ago, has been dismantled.

Superior.—A geological survey of Douglas county, in conjunction with one of St. Louis county, Minnesota, has been started by a United States geological survey corps in charge of L. B. Roberts.

Superior.—Reconsidering his announced intention to remain in Vienna during the war, Dr. J. W. Lee of Superior has succeeded in getting to London, whence he will return to the United States.

Neenah.—George E. Elwers, graduate of this year's class at the state university, will be an instructor in botany at Marquette.

Cumberland.—Mrs. George Alfonso, a farmers' wife living near here, was hit by a stray bullet while sitting on her porch. She received a severe wound in her left shoulder.

Merrill.—A leak in one of the flumes of the large dam of the Grandfather Falls company has necessitated extensive repairs.

BOMBS FROM THE AEROPLANE

English Writer Points Out What He Considers Mistakes Made by the British Fighting Force.

One curious plaint reaches me, says a writer in the Aeroplane of London, to the effect that as soon as a German aeroplane appears over our lines our man, and the French also, start blazing at it to such an extent that it is impossible for a British or French aeroplane to get up and go for it without as much risk of being brought down by our fire as the Germans. Apparently the men, our troops especially, have not been sufficiently educated in the difference between our aeroplanes and the Germans', and presumably all our officers have not displayed the forethought of a certain cavalry officer who came to this office just before leaving for the front and commanded all my best photographs of British, French and German aeroplanes, wherewith to explain to his men. One hears also that some of our aeroplanes have been highly successful as bomb-throwers, though the press has not mentioned the fact. It is rumored—I sincerely hope without foundation—that one of our machines and its occupants were blown to pieces by their own bombs owing to a fall. If this is so it shows an extraordinary mistake somewhere, for the only bombs which should be used are those which only become "alive" after a drop of 200 feet or so, or else those fired by a time-fuse which is lighted just as it is dropped.

DAIRY

DEVELOPING THE YOUNG COW

To Establish Long Milking Propensity Dairyman Must Be Persistent in Milking Heifer.

If you wish to establish a long milking propensity you must be persistent in milking the heifer after her first calf. It is then that the habit of a long or short milking period is formed. Dry her up at seven or eight months, and it is difficult ever after to get her to milk for 10 months. For this reason keep on milking her for 10 or 11 months, no matter how little milk you may get. This is the Danish method of making large and persistent milkers, and it is the only practical way. To obtain gentle cows there is nothing like raising them yourself. The cow seems to partake of the disposition of her keeper. No dairyman can afford to have a man in his stable who is rough and quick tempered. A cow that is abused will not give much milk. If the heifer is thrifty and well developed she may be served when 18 months of age, and will then drop her first calf when two and a quarter years old. If served much beyond this period she is apt to acquire the habit of putting her food into flesh—and not into milk. It is well to delay the coming of the second calf for the few months longer than is usual in the mature cow. This gives the young cow a better chance to develop, as there is not the extra tax on her during the heaviest flow of milk.

The Danish and North Holland dairymen lay great stress on the importance of manipulating the udder, teats and milk veins. This consists of rubbing the udder with the hands and the milk veins under the stomach once or twice a week from calfood up to the time she drops her first calf. This handling enlarges and lengthens the teats and gives greater capacity to the udder. The young heifer so handled becomes very docile and when she calves she will allow you to gently rub her udder and draw the milk. The heifer's udder a few days after calving is swollen and inflamed and often painful. The young cow is nervous and excited. Let the calf remain with the cow, and after the calf has sucked gently milk her out clean. The relief thus given will quiet her and she will not offer to kick. The kicking cow is not born; she is made so by the milk. We have for a number of years followed this method and it has been very satisfactory.

METHOD OF SKIMMING CREAM

Simple Solution of Problem Has Been Afforded by a Small Separator for Use in Kitchen.

With the almost universal use of bottles as milk containers, by dairymen, the skimming of cream has become an added problem in the average household. A simple solution of this has been afforded by a small separator made for kitchen use, says Popular Mechanics. The instrument is in the form of a tube and is supplied with a valve at the bottom, which is opened and closed by means of a connecting wire. As the tube is inserted into a milk bottle the thumb is raised to open the valve, allowing the cream to enter.

SUMMER FEEDING FOR COWS

To Overcome Short and Dry Pastures Animals Should Be Given Forage With Some Grain.

Pasture is one of the essentials of successful dairy farming, but must not be depended upon blindly as the only source of the cow's feed during the entire growing season. Given the proper chance to make a good growth of grass during the early spring season before the herd is turned upon it, the cows will usually get enough food from the pasture alone for a few weeks of the late spring and early summer season to fully maintain their condition and milk flow, but later will often go hungry and fall off both in body condition and milk flow because the pastures become dry and short. To overcome this the cows should be fed either green forage or silage with some grain.

Cutter for the Silo.

There are on the market several makes of silage cutters that will give satisfaction. The capacity of the machine to be purchased is an important consideration which should not be overlooked. Many persons make the mistake of getting a cutter which is too small, thus making the operation of filling the silo very slow and interfering with the continuous employment of the entire force of men.

Tender Teats.

Where cow's teats are tender, they are easily scratched. Put on linseed oil just after milking, and keep skin pliable.

Profit From $100 an Acre Land.
The silo helps solve the problem of making a profit from $100 an acre land.

Meet Needs of Cow.

The ration should be balanced to meet the needs of the cow at all stages of lactation.

BELGIAN AMBULANCE CORPS AT THE FRONT

SOLDIER'S STORY OF BRITISH BAYONET CHARGE

London.—This grimly humorous story of a British bayonet charge, in which the Germans were stabbed in the back, was related by a wounded soldier just back from northern France.

"They can stand fire, can those Germans. We were picking them off like winking, and still they came on."

"It seemed as if there was an unlimited number of those soldiers, for they came, wave after wave."

"Then, when they got within shouting distance, we received the word to charge. Our officer was a sprinter, but we were out of the trench and heeling after him, all of us shouting."

"The Germans seemed struck. They just stood and gaped as we came charging down, their mouths wide open, as if they were wondering what the blazes we were up to."

"When we were within twenty or thirty yards of them there was an al-

England Has New War Song.

London.—All England is singing a new war song. It is by Sir Frederic Cowen and Harold Begie and makes a strong appeal for enlistment in the army. One of the verses of the song, which is entitled "Fall In," follows:

How will you fare, sonny, how will you fare,
In the far-off winter night,
When you sit by the fire in an old man's chair,
And your neighbors talk of the fight?
Will you sink away, as it were from a blow,
Your old head shamed and bent?
Or say, "I was not with the first to go,
But I went, thank God, I went!"

BERLIN CONFIDENT AND NOT AT ALL DEMORALIZED

Contrary to the reports that have been circulated in the United States, Berlin is not demoralized and panic-stricken by the war, according to Philip H. Wood, an American who recently left the German capital. In Berlin conditions are almost normal, Wood said, and things are going on with little change. There is little excitement.

"Life is going on practically the same as usual," he said. "There is

EDITORIAL

Now is the time to get your winter's supply for it will soon mean the hugging of the stove.

"Don't stop Mills; Start Them." Is the title of an editorial in the Chicago Herald and a mighty good title.

All that President Wilson had to mobilize was the good common sense of the American people, which he succeeded in doing.

Milwaukee's taxes this year will be $2.4 per thousand higher than last year. This is another case of lower taxation agitation. Kewaskum will soon know its fate as to the ratio of taxation. Let us hope for the reduction.

One of the best improvements ever made by the village was the building of a new cement sidewalk and the erection of guard railings along said walk on both sides of the Main street bridge. This stretch of walk is considerably traversed, especially by school children.

Automobilists will soon be paying two cents more for a gallon of gasoline, on account of the war tax to be levied by an act of congress. The act has already passed the House. It perhaps is a good thing that the winter months are approaching, which means a saving of at least a few months for all automobile drivers. It will also teach economy in the usage of gasoline.

Republican Paper and Editor Support M. E. Burke for Congressman

The editor of EVENTS is a Republican and with one or two exceptions, common to thousands of other Republicans, he has always voted and supported the Republican ticket. But that is a matter of no more importance than belongs to any other unimportant individual. But this paper, though outspoken in support of the Republican party, has exercised the privilege and duty of an independent newspaper in commending the merits of candidates of other parties. It has endorsed and continues to endorse the policy, character and conduct of President Wilson; it declares, and with a lot of the same sentiment by Republicans, that this congressional district never had a representative in Congress who did more for his constituents, regardless of party, than M. E. Burke, present Democratic Congressman, and candidate for reelection. He has specially commended himself to veterans of the civil war and their widows. But in no political campaign did this paper ever indulge in adverse comment of other party candidates. It has expressed its preferences for its own choice. In this present campaign it has pursued the same policy.

Give the Farm a Name

Give the farm a name and the farm up to the name. A name gives distinction, it is an expression of honest pride, it shows an interest in the place. It means something more than so many acres of brown earth, a dwelling and barns. It means a place that one feels is in the best sense the home of himself and his family. Sentiment gathers around it and crystallizes so that at last the owner does not so much ask in declining years, "How much can I get for my farm?" but, "Who is going to succeed me on it? And that means a deepening and strengthening of home ties and those of locality, both of which are greatly needed in America rural life.

But for practical reason as well as sentimental it is wise to bestow a name upon the farm. No self-respecting man would give a good name to his farm and then keep the farm in poor condition. The sense of pride would prompt any man to do his level best. That would mean better cultivation, house and barn painted, fences in good condition, better stock and better crops, and more attractive appearance within and without the dwelling. There is scarcely a farm, however, situated, that some appropriate name may not be given it. Landscapes, a spring, clump of trees, position, historic associations are among the many things that may suggest the name. And always remember this, that it is with the farmer more than anyone else, rests the solution of the problem of arresting the drift city-wards. An attractive home, a home that has a distinctive name about it, goes a long way towards the solution.

What to Look for in "Feeder" Cattle

How to select steers that will make good gains and return substantial profits should be well known by the man who plans to market his crops as feed this fall or winter.

John L. Torrey of the University of Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Station is urging cattle feeders to look for the following characteristics in animals which they intend to finish for the market:

Steers, if they are to make profitable gains in the feed lot, must have beef characteristics, a wide strong back, and a large heart girth.

They must have a strong frame and plenty of room for the vital organs, for an animal with a weak constitution cannot hold up through the feeding season.

A wide head and muzzles, which usually indicate good feeding qualities.

Short legs, heavy hind quarters and arched ribs are essential in the feeding animal.

The skin should be reasonably thick, soft and covered by a heavy coat of hair.

The animal should have a straight back and low set appearance, due to the depth of body and short legs.

Buying Health Insurance

A prominent man writes: "Why shouldn't I be able to employ a physician to examine me periodically to determine the state of my physical health? I go to my dentist every six months. If he finds a little surface cavity he fills it before it becomes big. As a consequence, my teeth are sound. It seemed to me that if this course is wise in the care of the teeth, it ought to be applicable to the balance of my body. When I applied to my physician, he laughed and told me to quit fussing about myself. I'm not hysterical about my health, but I can't see why I should be considered a crazy man when I suggest that I want to make certain there aren't some little troubles that can be removed or corrected before they become big. Why, my wife even takes her jewelry to the repair man periodically, in order that she won't lose a setting. Why should I consider my health to be as valuable a possession as a jewel in a vanity outfit? Am I crazy or is the doctor?"

Answer: "I should say you are mentally sound, quite sound. You startled the doctor. He isn't accustomed to such requests. Haven't you noticed the consternation of a conductor, when an uncommon passenger hands him a ticket that was overlooked in the collection?"

The physician should have complimented you on your good sense. Like all other physicians, however, he is more accustomed to seeing sick, hysterical, imaginative people than hard headed ones. The chances were a hundred to one that you belonged to the abnormal class. The physician took that chance and was wrong. In the next ninety-nine similar consultations he would be right. Not a bad proportion in any class of work. What is to be hoped for is that the odds will be reduced. As more people come to appreciate your point of view, there will be less chance of physicians making the error this one did.

Your idea is spreading. Don't abandon it. You might do worse than to organize a little company to secure the commodity you need. See a previous article entitled "cost of cure."

A Thousand to One

Ever think about this? There seems to be a thousand ways to spend money to one chance to make it.

Doesn't it seem that way to you? It does to most of us, and that's the reason why you should take care of it after you have made it. The very best plan to take care of the money you have made is to place it in a good, safe, reliable bank like ours. It will be subject to your check but you will not be so liable to spend it or lose it as you are by carrying it around or hiding it around the house.

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of "THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

SYNOPSIS.

Mark Truitt, encouraged by his sweet-heart, Emily Martin, leaves Bethel, his native town, to seek his fortune. Simon Truitt tells Mark that it long has been his dream to see a steel plant at Bethel and asks the son to return and build one if he ever gets rich. Mark applies to Thomas Henley, head of the Quinby Iron works, for a job and is sent to the construction gang. His success in that work wins him a place as helper to Roman Andrezski, open-hearth furnaceman. He becomes a boarder in Roman's home and assists Piotr, Roman's son, in his studies. Kazia, an adopted daughter, shows her gratitude in such a manner as to arouse Mark's interest in her. Heavy work in the intense heat of the furnace causes Mark to collapse and Kazia cares for him. Later Roman also succumbs and Mark gets his job. Roman presents this and tells Mark to find another boarding place. Five years elapse during which Mark has advanced to the foremanship, while his labor-saving devices have made him invaluable to the company. In the meantime Kazia has married one Jim Whiting. Mark meets with an accident which dooms him to be a cripple for life. He returns to Bethel intending to stay there. He finds Emily about to marry another man and wins her back. Emily urges him to try to make the steel works his life. The big steel interests are secretly anxious to get hold of stock in the Ironquels Iron company, supposed to be worthless. Timothy Woodhouse seeks financial assistance from Mark and tells him to let Mark have stock in the Quinby company through a trust that if he does not he will lose both of them.

CHAPTER XV—Continued.

It was the less satisfying because he foresaw the end of a chapter. He had spent himself: in body—he was no longer capable of long intense application, he had fallen back upon the invalid's last resort, drugs; in mind—the creative faculty seemed dead, that very morning a young man in the mills had announced an important invention that was to have been Truitt's magnum opus and upon which his sterile brain had labored in vain, in soul—he could no longer dream. And for reward he had—the dry fact of a triumph he could not sense and the prospect of an empty, useless, discontented future.

He was a critic, you see; but not of himself. The world was out of joint.

Passers-by were diverted from their own cares by the sight of a well-dressed man stamping his cane on the pavement and muttering aloud: "An evil fate pursues me. Other men do as I do, desire as I desire and find content. Why can't I be contented—and happy?"

A thousand faces screamed past him, unrecognized and unrecognizing. Then, at a corner where two currents dammed each other, appeared one that seemed oddly familiar. It was of an undistinguished homeliness, pasty pale, morose, matching well the general shabbiness of its owner. At first Mark, confused by the dirty brown beard, did not recognize him.

The man had no doubts. At sight of Mark an evil glitter sprang into the sudden eyes.

"You!"

By the hate that had lived through fifteen years Mark placed him.

"Piotr Andrezski!"

"Peter Anderson," the man corrected him.

"That's a good American name. I'd forgotten you had a preference." Mark smiled and held out a friendly hand.

"How are you, Peter Anderson?"

The hand was ignored. When Peter Anderson sneered, his homeliness became almost grotesque.

"Since you're so interested, I manage to keep alive."

"How do you manage it?"

"I'm a compositor on the Outcry—when there's any money for an issue."

"The Outcry?"

"You'll hear of it yet. It's the paper of our Cause."

Mark knew of but one cause that employed the capital "Socialism, I suppose." He smiled indulgently. "I hope it's in funds sufficiently often."

"I look it, don't I?"

The answer was so obvious that Mark avoided it. "How," he asked hastily, "is Roman?"

"He breathes and sleeps and eats. But he's dead."

"Is that a Socialist parable? I'm not a Socialist, so you'll have to explain."

"His mind's gone. It began to go soon after you stole his job. But probably you've forgotten that, too."

"I have no recollection," said Mark coldly, "of any such occurrence." With a curt nod, he passed on.

He had gone but a few steps when he halted and looked back. Peter, unmindful of elbowing pedestrians, was still at the corner, glaring at him.

Impulsively he turned and retraced his steps.

"See here, Piotr," he said. "Let us not use hard names. There are a good many things we'd never agree on, but we can agree on this—you're hard up. I've been luckier than you. What can I do to help you?"

Piotr's lips formed a surl. "Nothing." But the refusal did not fall. A look of transparent craft displaced malice.

"Do you mean that?" he asked suspiciously.

"I'm not in the habit—"

"I don't care about your habits," Piotr interrupted ungraciously. "If you want to do something, you can lend me a hundred dollars."

"Lend," evidently, was a euphemism.

"What will you do—still, that's your business. Of course, I will. I wish you'd asked me something harder. Come along to the bank."

The bank was a few blocks away. Mark improved the time by asking the details of Roman's circumstances. Piotr, sullenness not lifted by the prospect of money, answered shortly. It was a pitiable story of descent—from the gradual dissipation of the savings of Roman's active years and the swift failure, through idleness and too much alcohol, of his mental powers, leaving him and Hanka dependent upon Piotr's scanty and uncertain earnings.

"Where," Mark asked, as they entered the bank, "do you live now?"

"Rose Alley!"

"Mr. God!" Mark stopped short.

"What does your sort know of it?"

"Quite enough. Come along."

A few minutes later they were in the street again, Piotr the richer by the sum he had asked.

They stood facing each other—the strong man who had conquered and the inefficient, one of life's guerrillas, who had just taken of the strong man's largess. But the inefficient was not grateful; a hundred dollars could not conquer his hatred.

"I s'pose," he sneered, "you want me to thank you?"

"No. If you need more, come to me. And, see here, Piotr, I want you to get Roman and your mother away from Rose Alley."

"You want—?" The money in his pocket, Piotr threw craft to the winds.

"What have you to do with us? Do you s'pose we'd let you help us?"

"But you took—"

Piotr chuckled—a chuckle of triumphant malice. "Did you think it was for us?" The chuckle grew into a laugh, as though he pondered some mammoth jest. "You—you—have just paid for the next issue of the Outcry!"

He wheeled and went haltingly away. Mark watched him until he turned a corner.

"Poor devil!" Mark shook his head pityingly. "He's mad."

It was not Mark's habit to waste precious hours wandering the crowded city streets in introspective meditation. He now went to the appointment with his lawyer to keep which he had left Henley.

It was a long and tedious consultation, having to do with a big real estate deal in which Truitt had shown his customary shrewdness. He displayed little interest. More than once Shirley, the lawyer, had to recall his straying attention. Shirley was astonished at this; his client was notable for his concentration on the matter in hand. He would have been even more deeply astonished, could he have looked upon the picture that lurked away Mark's thoughts. But then, for the grasp on his shoulder tightened. "Roman, don't you know me? I'm Roman—Mark Truitt, you remember."

The shoulder stirred a little under the tight grasp; Roman's head slouched forward again and he began once more his aimless twining of the long beard.

"How long," Mark's voice had become sharp, "has he been this way?"

"Almost three years."

"And here?"

"A year longer."

Kazia's eyes said: "What is that to you?"

"Why," he demanded, "didn't you let me know about it?"

She smiled—contemptuously, as it seemed to him.

"We must get them out of here," he went on hastily.

"We can't. Piotr won't let us."

"He must," Mark declared curdly.

"He will not," she repeated.

"I saw him today. He's crazy."

"He is. He's a good compositor and could make enough to keep them at least decently. But he prefers to work for the Outcry—for little or nothing. Generally it's nothing. He says it's for the cause."

"But that's no reason why he shouldn't let me help them."

She shrugged her shoulders. "To Piotr it is. I know, because I've tried."

"Then," he said, "we'll take them away and settle with Piotr afterward."

He said it crisply, with the assured air of fortune's darlings who, having made their resolve, take its consummation for granted. Her faint smile showed again.

"It isn't so simple as that. They won't go."

"They won't go?" He stared. "Why not?"

"For one thing," she returned

She looked at him steadily, showing no surprise.

Shirley, the name of Rose Alley would have raised to life no dead memories. Shirley's astonishment, however, reached its climax at the close of the consultation.

"It's a good deal," he remarked, "for you."

Mark answered with a nod and opened another subject. "I don't suppose Timothy Woodhouse left much."

"Practically nothing."

"How does our case stand?"

"We'll win it."

"You're sure of that?"

"Absolutely. His estate will never push it to trial."

"Then settle it."

Shirley whistled his surprise. "Has the philanthropic bee stung the whole Quinby concern?" he grinned. "I wouldn't do that, though. It would be an admission. As a lawyer, I couldn't advise—"

"I don't ask advice. Settle it."

Shirley waved a concessive hand. "It's your case, of course. For how much? They'll take any figure."

"For whatever you think fair. Not as a lawyer, however. Think of it," Mark smiled wryly, "as a gentleman—if the word means anything to you."

"It's your case," Shirley repeated. "But my notion is, people will think you don't want the publicity—for social reasons. That sort of talk—"

He groped and stumbled up two flights of stairs that groaned protesting under his tread. He found a door and knocked. It opened. . . . For a full minute, speechless, he stared at the woman who stood on the threshold.

CHAPTER XVI.

Glowing Embers.

The figure silhouetted in the doorway was one to make men dream, full curved, strong with the strength of women whose forebears have always toiled, yet without heaviness; it was the strength that lies in quality, not in bulk.

She looked at him steadily, showing no surprise. And by that he read that she had learned to take life, its coincidences and its climaxes as they came, calmly with no loss of poise.

She spoke first, in a low even voice that blinted even less than her manner at inner excitement. "I thought it was Piotr. Your step sounds like his."

They might have been daily familiar.

"Yes," he flushed. "I am somewhat in his case."

He almost missed the swift glance she cast toward his cane. But he was grateful that she had no comment for his injury. In the presence of her splendid perfections his own physical shortcomings seemed almost cause for shame.

"How do you do, Kazia?" he said gravely. "I didn't expect to find you here."

He held out an uncertain hand. She took it, neither hastily nor reluctantly, for a brief meaningly clasp.

"I am here sometimes. Will you come in?"

She stood aside and he entered, trying to overcome his limp. It was the kitchen, which in Rose Alley—as he remembered—had to serve as living room as well. It was clean, but bare; pitifully bare.

By the stove stood a little faded woman, much stooped, her hair white and thin, her pale lack-luster eyes for the moment brightened by a startled question. He went over to her and took her hand. She shrank away from him.

"It is Mark Truitt, Matka," said Kazia in Polish. "Don't you remember?"

Hanka said something in the same tongue.

"She says," Kazia interpreted, "they have never forgotten."

Their eyes met again. . . . His turned away quickly and went to the other occupant of the room. He sat in the only armchair, a huge mass of inert flesh, head slouched forward and legs playing aimlessly with the long unkempt beard that reached half-way to the bulging waist. Mark laid a hand on his shoulder. Roman looked up. But Roman saw as the new-born babe sees.

"Neither harm nor good."

"One doesn't like to think of one's self as reduced to even a harmless nonentity. Still, most of the virtues are negative, I believe. Though I'm vain enough to wish I could have been a positive influence in the making of the woman you've become. It's rather remarkable, Kazia."

"It isn't remarkable—or excuse for vanity."

She had not winced, nor had her steady gaze wandered. But for just an instant a fleeting somber shadow had rested in her eyes.

"I must go," she said.

"He walked in silence to the mouth of the court. At their approach Mark's man got down from the trap, touching his hat."

"Can't I set you home?" Mark ventured, not at all sure that she would accept. But she affected no reluctance. She glanced at a little watch she wore. "I go to the Todd hospital, and I've overstayed here a little."

He helped her up to the seat. The horses sprang forward, swung into the car tracks and quickly left the tenement neighborhood behind. For a time Mark gave his attention to guiding their swift course around overtaken cars and the slow lumbering teams that drew the heavy traffic of the street. They were on the bridge before either spoke.

"You set off," he said, "to the hospital, he began suggestively. "Do you—"

"I'm on a case there."

"You're a nurse, then? I remember you had a knack for that sort of thing. Your husband—er—I hadn't heard—"

"I haven't seen him for 12 years."

"Kazia," he asked gravely, "will you tell me about yourself?"

"Good night," she repeated. "And thank you again."

He dined alone at his club that night. The events of the day had left him depressed and strangely restless and with a strong distaste for companionship.

CHAPTER XVII.

Fanned into Flame.

"I'd better quit thinking of her," Mark told himself.

A virtuous and a wise resolution, forsooth! And one strangely hard to keep. The thought—of a woman of the people, dwelling in a fine strong body whose splendid perfection the toll of the people could not diminish, whose flame it could not quench—never withdrew entirely, at most retired into ambush whence to spring out upon him at unguarded moments, with ever increasing potency to stir his jaded imagination.

Attainment of the partnership had indeed proved to be the climax of his career with the Quinby company. Followed quickly the long imminent collapse. There was no specific ailment, save a heavy stubborn cough and the constant ache in his injured hip, which were really symptoms. It was rather a general failure of his powers. He was no longer able to whip flagging energies to the day's tasks. The cool, clear, incisive brain that could grasp a multitude of details and yet not lose sight of result and purpose had become cloudy, vacillating and wandering, a poor tool for the direction of a huge, intricately organized plant operating under tremendous pressure.

He was subject to attacks of profound melancholy. He could not sleep without the aid of drugs. Worst of all, the will to endure, to mock pain and weakness, had broken.

"What's the matter with me?" he demanded of his physician.

"Burnt out," was the succinct reply. "What can I do?"

Terrible Misfortune.

"They are shifting consuls on the merit system," said Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth collector. "Here's a man in Shanghai at $4,500 getting shifted to Barcelona at $3,000. An other consul with a Warsaw job at $4,000 is shifted on the merit system to Fiume at $3,000. A few more such shifts, and where will the poor fellows land?"

"Shifting consuls on the merit system—that's a good way to express it. It reminds me of Bilson."

"Have you heard of the terrible misfortune that has befallen Bones?" Bilson said to me.

"No," I said. "No!"

"Bones, poor fellow," said Bilson, "has eloped with my wife."

quietly, "the Matka loves her son. I'll ask her."

"She turned to Hanka and for several minutes the two women talked earnestly in their native tongue. Hanka shook her head continuously.

"She says," Kazia returned to Mark. "My Piotr wouldn't like it."

Hanka interrupted, laying a hand on Kazia's arm and looking anxiously toward the door. Kazia nodded.

"She says also," she interpreted again, "that we'd better go. It's most time for Piotr to come home. She's right."

"I think," Mark answered, "I'll stay, since I'm here, and have this out with Piotr."

"You'd better not." Her swift glance seemed to measure his physical frailty. "Piotr's temper is uncertain. He found me here once and drove me out. It—the gloom could not quite hide the color that surged into her cheeks. "It wasn't nice."

"I'm sorry for them, but just the same, since I've started, I'll see this through and wait for Piotr."

"No, you'd better not," she repeated with cold emphasis. "You can prove your inflexibility in some other way. Piotr is apt to have been drinking and if his temper is stirred up, he'll make them suffer." She nodded toward Hanka and Roman. "Really, you're quite helpless in the matter."

"I seem to be." He laughed shortly, to conceal a disappointment as undefined as the emotion set stirring by the sight of his old friends. "But, at least, I can leave some money."

"But she shut him off from this, too. "No. What money they can use without Piotr's knowing of it, I can furnish."

He limped stiffly toward the door, more hurt than he was willing to admit to himself by the rebuff and the failure of his impulsive mission.

He went quickly out into the dark passage, that he might not have to look longer, and there awaited her. When she came, he led the way down the rickety stairs and out into the foul smelling court, lighted up now by a swaying arc lamp.

"One would think," he blurted out, "you wanted to stay there."

"Do you find that so wonderful?"

"I'm glad you can't. It's no place for such a you."

"Many people have lived here."

"No, not from choice. I know. I lived here once myself, before—"

He hesitated a moment. "I left it to live with Roman."

She made no reply. He stopped, facing her and blocking her egress.

"You're thinking my going there was to the advantage of no one but myself?"

"Why else should you have gone there?"

"That's almost cynical, isn't it? I might have had several other reasons—but didn't. At least I did you no harm."

"Neither harm nor good."

"One doesn't like to think of one's self as reduced to even a harmless nonentity. Still, most of the virtues are negative, I believe. Though I'm vain enough to wish I could have been a positive influence in the making of the woman you've become. It's rather remarkable, Kazia."

BEGINS VISUAL INSTRUCTION

University Prepares to Send Slides and Picture Films to Schools in the State.

Madison.—"The department of visual instruction" of the state university's extension department will shortly be in full operation. Arrangements are being made for shipping the first of the educational films and slides to Wisconsin schools.

According to letters at the extension department nearly half the schools of the state will offer their pupils and patrons weekly social-educational evenings this year, with the motion picture equipment playing a large part in the programs.

A series of thirty-five sets of slides and films, covering subjects of art, history, natural history, industries and even fairy tales are offered by the department.

Each school subscribing to the bureau will receive a set of films each week. The expense is the express from the last place of shipment. This is estimated at about 50 cents.

To date 400,000 slides have been ordered by the schools. This is compared with the record of the New York state department, which last year provided 215,000.

PAROLE HONOR CONVICTS

Head of State Board of Control Pleased With Working Plan and Ten Are Released.

Madison.—"Not an incident has occurred nor a circumstance arisen in connection with the experiment in the adoption of the honor system in the Wisconsin penal institutions, to upset our faith in that system," said Chairman Ralph Smith of the state board of control. In the two honor camps there are some seventy men. Besides these there are about fifty employed as "honor men" on the prison farm and on the building for the criminal insane at Waupun. Not an attempt at escape has been made. At the session of the board ten of the honor men were granted parole from the two camps. These men were eligible to parole, but they were not required to return to prison. They were given their freedom directly from the camp.

CRUSHED UNDER MACHINE

Edward C. Ketchum of Grand Rapids Met Death When Automobile Turned Over.

Grand Rapids.—Edward C. Ketchum, local ice and coal dealer of this city, met death when his automobile, while returning from Pittsville, Wis., blew off in and turning to see where it went it is supposed that he turned the steering wheel at the same time, which headed his car for the ditch, and in his endeavor to bring it back onto the road turned too short, causing the car to turn completely over. He was crushed under the steering wheel. He suffered a fracture of the skull and his left side was bled in. He died before he could be brought to the city.

CARP REMOVED FROM LAKE

New York Firm's Bid Accepted For Fish—40,000 Pounds Seized From Lake Mendota.

Madison.—Two carloads, approximately 40,000 pounds, of carp were removed from Lake Mendota in the vicinity of the Menota asylum for the insane by W. R. Wieden and a crew of men under the direction of State Game Warden Sholtz. Bids for the fish were received from a half dozen firms by Mr. Sholtz. The Lake Fish company of New York was given the fish for 5 1/2 cents a pound placed on the track here, packed in ice. It being the first company to bid at the rate accepted by the game warden department.

Hold Plumbers' Examination.

Madison.—The state board of health announces a state wide examination for the licensing of journeymen and master plumbers in Madison on Oct. 3. The examination is conducted by Thomas M. Ferguson, chairman, Madison, W. C. Kirchoffer, Madison, and J. E. Robertson, Milwaukee, and held here officers of the Relief Fund association were named as follows: President, I. J. Rosenberg; secretary, Joseph Saffro, and treasurer, J. Shefirin. Contributions will be received by these three and the Milwaukee Wochenblatt, Hebrew daily.

Burned By Boiling Tar.

Sheboygan.—Henry Bosshardt was severely injured when he slipped and fell from the roof of the Hand-Knit Hosiery company's plant. In throwing out his arms to protect himself Bosshardt struck his right arm in a kettle of boiling tar and was frightfully burned.

Coal Docks Run by Electricity.

Wausau.—The docks of the Northwestern Fuel company in this city are now being operated by electricity, the current having been turned into the motors today. The dock is equipped with motors capable of developing over 600 horsepower.

Old Prison Guard Dies.

Waupun.—The death of one of the oldest guards at the state prison at Waupun has been reported to the state board of control. He was F. W. Meul, who for twenty-five years has been in the employ of the prison. He was 70 years of age.

Child Drowns at Play.

Ashland.—While playing on the bank of Bad river, 7-year-old Nio Gross was drowned. He accidentally fell into the stream. The water was so muddy and rapid that his body could not be found until some time afterward.

BUILDING "CASTLES IN AIR"

Proceeding That Seems Foolish, if Not Reprehensible, to Some, May Readily Be Explained.

Those who build castles in the air are occasionally spoken of by more matter-of-fact persons with brutal and noisy derision, but often with a kind of tender pity which they find, not unjustifiably, far more exasperating. It implies so complete a misunderstanding of the builders' frame of mind. They are supposed to live in a vale of disappointments, but if they be out-and-out workmen with a love of their art they do, in fact, nothing of the kind. Long before one castle has actually fallen, sometimes even before so much as a teltite crack has appeared in the walls, they are planning the foundations of another on a larger and more gorgeous scale. When the crash ultimately comes it is unheeded, for the din of cranes and hammers already are hard at work again. We have it on Sam Weller's authority that to take to building houses is "a medical term for being incurable." And very fortunately that is, a fortiori, still more true of castles. It is not, however, this implication of a life made up of disillusionments that is the most difficult to bear. Rather it is the suggestion that those who indulge in day dreams are so besotted by them come true. This is at once a slur on their intelligence and on their ability to play their own game properly; it shows that the sympathetic and stupid creatures who make it could never acquire the rudiments of the game if they were to try for a thousand years. As long as the player is trammelled by doubts and wonderings whether anything so beautiful could ever really befall him, he must almost necessarily curb his fancy and turn sadly back from some glorious vision; but, once he has as much as half admitted to himself that he is moving in the realms of fantasy, he can soar away to heights unknown.

Is Tobacco a Drug?

An interesting case of splitting hairs has arisen in Ireland in the administration of the national insurance act as to whether tobacco is a drug, a necessity or a luxury, all three views being taken by different authorities, says London Tit-Bits. It appears that the superintendent medical officer of the Dublin district recommended that a consumptive patient coming under the provisions of the act be given tobacco for smoking to comfort him in his last days, offering to pay for the weed himself, but the insurance committee decided that the tobacco was necessary to the patient's treatment and sent to the national insurance commissioners. Two weeks later the local authorities received a lengthy communication demanding an explanation of their action in charging the government with a shilling's worth of tobacco. Their reply was that tobacco was recognized as a drug in the British code under the title of nicotiana tabacum and that it had been prescribed by a registered practitioner. Thereupon the commissioners consulted learned K. C.'s and they are still wrestling with the subject. Meanwhile the patient is dead, the tobacco has been smoked and the expense of the disputation has already reached a hundred times the cost of the original tin of shag.

His First Thought.

A well-known athlete says that on entering a Turkish bath one night he found a stranger struggling in the swimming pool. There was nobody near. The man was evidently unable to swim, having jumped in probably without ascertaining whether the water would be above his head. The athlete swam to the assistance of the struggling man. Grasping him by the hair, he towed him to the side of the tank and assisted him to hang on until he recovered his breath.

What were the first words uttered by the rescued one? Did he stammer out thanks to his human preserver? No. The human mind is a curious affair. As the half-drowned man struggled back to consciousness memories of an old jest seemed to flit through his brain, for he said:

"Lucky for me I wasn't bald-headed!"

No Loafing Allowed.

A well-known theatrical manager, more famous, if possible for his many successes, attending the rehearsal of one of his plays, noticed that a man in the audience who had to play the trombone was holding the instrument in front of him and doing nothing.

Mr. Stetson at once called him to account.

"Say," said he, "what do you mean by not working along with the other fellows?"

"Why, Mr. Stetson," said the musician, "I can't play; I have 19 bars rest."

"Not on your life!" replied the angry manager. "I don't pay anyone for resting. Either you play, when the other fellows do, or you clear out. See?"

Surgery in the Air.

Sitting astride a steel beam on the highest section of a new theater under construction a doctor recently chloroformed a structural ironworker, and snapped into place the bones of a dislocated shoulder. When the accident occurred the workman was left helpless, as both arms were disabled, and there was no means of descent except a series of ladders. The doctor removed his hat, coat and vest, and began the dangerous ascent. A workman followed with the doctor's surgical case. After the operation the workman was able to make his way down the ladder and was taken to his home.

Decrease in Hydrophobia.

Since the founding of the Pasteur Institute in Paris, there has been a steady decline in the number of cases of hydrophobia, none at all occurring some years.

Two of a Kind.

Senator Works of California never liked the study of mathematics in his school days. Arithmetic used to make his life a burden to him. One afternoon as he was riding home on the car he happened to get a seat next to a little chap who was taking home some school books for study. One was an arithmetic.

"Do you like arithmetic?" asked the senator, sympathetically.

"Now, I hate it," replied the boy.

"Put her there," suggested Works, offering his hand.

Self-Centered.

"Dusenby is a great welfare worker."

"A philanthropist, eh?"

"Not at all."

"But you just said he was a welfare worker?"

"He works for his own welfare."

A movement has been started in Paris for uniform motor horns.

Woven wire is now used as a binding agent in road construction.

THE GOOD JUDGE TAKES A SNAP SHOT OF THE POLITICIAN

YOU would rather take a clean, small chew, of course! "Right-Cut" users get real tobacco satisfaction from less than a quarter their old size chew—and they are passing the glad news along to their friends.

It's the Real Tobacco Chew. Made of pure, sappy tobacco—seasoned and sweetened just enough.

Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away. Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.

It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shreds so that you won't have to grind it up with your teeth. Grinding ordinary candied tobacco makes you spit too much.

The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with useless and loathsome. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "Right-Cut."

One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

TO GET KNOWLEDGE

EVERY MAN SHOULD EXERCISE MIND BY THINKING.

Learning Comes Through Our Senses, Which Are to the Mind and Body What Reporter is to Newspaper.

Whatever knowledge we have we have obtained it in two ways, Thomas Drier writes in the Nautilus. The first is inheritance. The second is acquisition. With that which we obtained from our ancestors we had nothing to do. We are not concerned with the past. We are vitally interested in the present.

All knowledge must be obtained to day by one or more of the five senses. Through the avenues of seeing, hearing, touching, smelling and tasting come all our sensations. The quality and number of sensations depend upon the kind of sense organs we have.

The man with weak eyes can never obtain through sight the knowledge obtained by the man with eyes that are strong. The man whose sense of taste has been impaired, say, by indulgence, cannot obtain the sense of satisfaction of the man whose taste is cultivated and trained to report accurately.

Our senses are to the mind and body what reporters are to a great newspaper. Each has a special department. One covers police, another the drama and entertainment, and so on. Each is a specialist. The more efficient, the better trained, the more educated each reporter is in his special department of reporting, the stronger will be the stories and articles he will turn in to his paper.

The strength and power of the paper is but combined strength and power of the work of the reporters. The truthfulness of the paper is the sum of the truthfulness of reporters. The news story written by the reporter with weak eyes will lack strength and accuracy just as the eyes of the reporter lacked strength and accuracy. As the matter which is printed in the newspaper is the result of the work of the reporters so is the matter printed on the mind the work of the five senses.

To build the muscles of the body we require wholesome food and proper exercise. No matter how wholesome the food, no matter how much or how little we eat, we cannot have strong, healthy bodies unless we take proper exercise.

So with the mind. No matter how rich the mental food the senses may bring to the mind, no good can be accomplished unless the mind is exercised, is used in serving some purpose, is employed in doing some work. Let us use our newspaper figure to illustrate. If a newspaper employed the greatest staff of reporters in the world, if each one had no superior anywhere, if each wrote stories and articles that had never been equaled, if the stories sent in were such as to command the interest of the entire city—if these reporters did all and wrote all things and these articles were printed in the paper in the most attractive typographical manner, and the papers were then stored in a vault in the basement, would that newspaper have any influence, would its circulation grow, would advertisers clamor for space in its columns?

Why Papa Lost Consciousness. "If you marry him," said her papa, who was exhibiting symptoms of violent displeasure, "I will not only have to support him, but I will have to pay his debts, too."

But the pretty girl and petulant young thing who was hanging to his coat lapels was not moved by the argument.

"Now, papa," she said, "you know well enough that Fred has to live, just the same as other men. And, as to his debts, I've heard you say hundreds of times that a man's debts ought to be paid."

ADVERTISE AND YOU'LL SUCCEED

Fight Catalogue Houses With Their Weapons.

PRAIRIE FIRE AN EXAMPLE.

Western Farmer Successfully Coped With Conflagration by Little Blaze of His Own—Why Not Try His Tactics on the Mail Order Menace? Printed Matter a Great Help.

[Copyrighted, 1914, by Thomas J. Sullivan.] The concern which persistently and consistently advertises brings to itself great reward in the form of increased business. Fences, rocks and trees are covered with print and paint. The shower of advertising in the shape of handbills is incessant. They are put into one's hand at every step—at the church door and in hotels, in public vehicles, thrust under private doors and sent by millions through the mails.

Glittering Advertising Maze. The only road to commercial success leads through a glittering maze of advertising.

Great boats, bearing on their sails huge advertisements, sail up and down all season before crowded watering places, and now and then a rain of advertisements comes from a wandering aeroplane.

When daylight falls the magic electric light throws advertisements on large screens in conspicuous places in both large and small cities.

Shout From Mountain Top. Climb to the mountain top and shout for a solution of the retail mail order evil, and back over the hills will come the answer in the echoing cry "Advertise!"

The life, the fame, the success, the hope and future of commerce lie in that one magic word.

Advertising is unquestionably the weapon which will make the community worthless for the retail catalogue houses, but it is not absolutely necessary that printed matter be the whole thing.

Personal and individual advertising is most helpful. It is such advertising that gives retail mail order houses their train.

And through advertising the local merchants can deprive them of much of the trade that comes from their community.

Fight the Prairie Fire. The western farmer fights the prairie fire with a little fire of his own, which kept always under control, he so uses that the bigger fire, finding no fuel there on which to feed, sweeps by and leaves him safe.

So, in your advertising, you have your saving fire with which to fight the consuming competition of retail mail order houses.

The printed matter, of course, must continue to be the main relative for urging people to enter your store.

Show windows, however good, are sure to be seen only by a few of those who might need to trade with you while personal invitations cannot be given quickly enough to a sufficient number to answer everyday purposes.

It is through printed matter that the retail mail order house offerings are constantly made, and, if for no other reason than to prove the determination at least to match the efforts for trade in your community, use the local press and printed matter enough to let no one whose trade should be yours forget that you are in a position to fill his wants.

Originality Best Method. The local merchant should dwell at length on the fact that he delivers after the goods have been seen and before the money has been paid for them, and when it comes to making good should anything go wrong, he is right at hand, not a thousand miles away.

A reputation for originality is continually being sought by most merchants, and one can get it more easily by being natural in every move. Adverting that sounds like you is not only sure to bring the greatest results, but it is also the one kind of advertising your competitor cannot successfully imitate.

It is true that some self styled advertising experts have studied the dictionary, the grammar and the type specimen books until they are able to talk a jargon that makes advertising, by which we mean printed matter, seem very much of a mystery to the average man.

Operate Like Pickpockets. The mail order house system experts in the advertising art are something like the pickpocket who, in an attempt to divert suspicion from himself, joins the throng and abouts "Stop thief!" as loudly as any one. Look through the mail order catalogues and you will find that nearly all of them tell you that their houses are the cheapest places to buy; that they have the best facilities.

They will intimate that the other fellow is the one to avoid if you do not want to get "trimmed" and that it is the other fellow that handles the trash.

When a dog bites you the first time blame the dog; if he bites you again blame yourself. If the mail order houses get the best of you once blame them; if they do it again blame yourself for being such an indistinguishable chump.

Farmers will save themselves much work, time and money if they buy prepared soapstone from the Appleton Soap Factory instead of bothering with Lye made from Ashes, when working up their waste kitchen fats into soap. Throw your ashes upon the fields and you will gain ten times the cost of my Soapstone. It is excellent for the following purposes: to make hard and soft soap, to dehorn cattle, to clean sewers, sinks, milk cans and machinery. To remove paints and varnish, to clean boilers, to dress wounds, on hoofs of cattle and sheep, to drive away mice and rats. Full direction with every can.
