

The Ambition of Mark Truitt

By HENRY RUSSELL MILLER

Author of "THE MAN HIGHER UP," "HIS RISE TO POWER," Etc.

(Copyright, 1913, by The Bobbs-Merrill Company)

He became conscious of Simon's curious gaze and turned sharply on him. "Old man, you seem to know a surprising lot about making steel. Look down the valley—there, on those hills. Do you see anything that isn't there?" Simon looked and nodded. "I've been seeing it more's forty years."

Henry stared. "Humph! An epidemic. There's magic in these hills. His thoughtful glance swept them once more. "But d—d alluring magic!"

The gentle, sometimes plaintive voice of the preacher had no power to distract from thought. His wistful message could not reach the man for whom it had been prepared in the hope that it would come to him with healing in its wings.

"Love would do that. . . . His own chance words kept running through Mark's mind, bidding him follow them along a new path. He followed, wondering that he had never trod that way before.

Was that, then, the evidence of love? Was there another manifestation of the miracle than that he had asked and awaited? For he had sought love, thinking to find it expressed as he had known it before in the old romantic visioning, the rhapsodic sentimentalities, the lust to possess. Mark Truitt was not the first to make that mistake. The coast of life is littered with the wrecks of those who have taken the flickering glow of youth's blind impulse to wed or the red flame of manhood's passion for the true light. But that morning a new perception dawned.

The poets and preachers were right. There was—there must be—a love that passed beyond the realm of the senses, that knitted souls as well as bodies, declared itself not in greedy, cruel desire but in the knowledge of a perfect, indestructible unity and the gentle will to serve, when it most gave received most. Such a love would not stand agape at sin, would suffer in its mate's suffering, yearn to bear that other's burdens. That love he had never seen, never met in his passionate pilgrimage. But that the heart was capable of it he knew from his own need; only in such guise could the miracle come.

The preacher was closing. Like an echo came his last words to Mark. . . . Faith, purpose, love, the trio of forces without which no life is complete. And of these the greatest is love. For love suffereth long. . . . seeketh not her own. . . . thinketh no evil. . . . endureth all things. . . . never faileth. Oh, my friends, open your hearts!"

The benediction had been said. Mark went quietly from his rear pew along the dusty, weed-flanked aisle until he came to a minor crease. There he dropped on the roadside and turned his eyes to the valley.

The murmurous quiet of noonday was about him. Up the rise, village bound, creaked a battered old top-buggy, bearing a passenger whose grizzled beard and lined face, too, showed the marks of time's battering.

"There's Magic in These Hills." Has a way with him, though. And the habit of taking what he wants, I guess, without waiting. "Sunday traffic," the doctor drawled, "is getting pretty heavy. Number four brought a woman, too. Expecting any baggage of that kind?" Mark shook his head absently.

even since the fire. I found him camped out in the old tool shed—about the only thing the fire missed. He's a half-starved little rat, with a straggly brown beard and a club foot. I asked him how he got there and he didn't seem to know. Said he'd just walked and walked and walked till he found the shed. I wanted to bring him back to town, but he wouldn't come. His mind's more than half gone. I should judge. You'd better send some one out to look after him."

"I will." "And he says," the doctor concluded his heralding of fate, "his name is Peter Anderson."

Cities Unbuilt. Henry was pleased to be facetious. The great Utopian—in his modest cottage—living in democratic simplicity among his village neighbors. Very pretty! I suppose you do the chores, too.

"Sometimes—what we have." "Very pretty! The Sunday papers would like that. But it's a little too theatrical, don't you think?" "Not conspicuously so. The place was here, and it served my purpose very well. I don't need much room, you know. I'm not a Wall Street here."

"Humph!" grunted Henry, still a skeptic. "What," Mark asked, "did you come here for?" Henry grunted again. "Cordial, I must say! I came to restore your sanity." He rose, mopping his face with a silk handkerchief. "Take me out of this sun and I'll begin. I hear you're pretty far gone."

Mark led him into a cool office-room—pleasant enough—and made him comfortable with a cigar and a chair by a window from which a view of the valley was to be had.

"Not ecstatic," Henry grudgingly admitted, "but good enough for a man—who has no women. Now tell me what you're trying to do here."

And Mark began, simply, without enthusiasm or sentimentalizing, to set forth his idea.

Henry listened intently, studying the while, with a growing astonishment, the grave, quiet-voiced man speaking. For he saw both a marvel and a mystery. Here was a man of powerful talents for which a rich, hungry market was waiting, of proven mettle for battling, who had tasted the sweets of conquest and won a footing from which he could go indefinitely farther and higher, giving himself to an idea—nay, an ideal—most remarkable of all, to an undeniably and thoroughly altruistic ideal. And giving himself sincerely. Such hasty explanations as mental lapse and theatricalism were put aside. The man was evidently honest, moved by a deep conviction and genuine purpose. Henry could not understand, but he could at once recognize that.

And Henry could respect that for what it entailed. He judged men by instinct and instinct served him truly now, revealing to him what the speaker himself had not yet fully felt. Brilliance and courage, audacity even, Truitt had always had in generous measure. Now he had added steadiness and bigness, strength without hardening, and therefore the power to achieve greatly as never before. Everything Henry had known of Truitt he had liked; but he saw now he liked more than ever.

agree to their eight-hour shift—as an experiment. I'd like to see it tried out."

"Yes?" "Your company stores, company gardens and company homes are well enough. They can be made profitable—properly handled. But your profit-sharing plan is all wrong and—Henry leaned forward and rapped on the arm of his chair to emphasize each word—"and you can't have it. I wouldn't care if you gave them only a nominal share. It would be useful—at first—to get good men up here. Afterward you could cut it out. But why, in God's name, give them half?"

"Because I'll need the other half for some things I'm planning."

"I'm not joking," Henry repeated. "Why give them half?" "Oh, that's an approximation. It seems to be a pretty fair division of the spoils. I don't insist on its accuracy. However, that's not the point. Mark straightened up in his seat by the desk, facing Henry squarely.

"Have you forgotten that my money and mine only is invested in this plant? I can quote good authority, yourself, that a man ought to be allowed to run his own business to suit himself."

"As long as he hurts no one else." Mark smiled again at that. "You said you weren't joking. I suppose

"I'm Offering It as a Possible Alternative to Putting You Out of Business!"

"You aren't. That's the joke of it. However, the point is, you forbid me to conduct my own business in my own way. And your authority."

"The power," answered Henry quietly, "to smash you—and the will. We've got labor where we want it in this business and we propose to keep it there. What you propose would be a dangerous precedent. If we let you succeed, we'd have the men all over the country yammering for the same freak conditions. Therefore, we won't let you succeed."

"I see. And you?" "I made you—have you forgotten that?—and I'm responsible for you. I helped to put labor where it is, at some risk to myself, and I don't propose to have a man of my own making undo the biggest thing I've ever done. Therefore, I won't let you succeed."

"Truitt, every steel company in the country will make it its business to put you out."

"Understand? Of course I understand. That's why the idea grips you. You're a born battler; things were coming too easy for you. You need obstacles, to have to extend yourself. I need that. I've got a hold in Wall Street. I can tighten my hold. But I'm out of place there. I'm a builder, not a money-grubber. I've got to see things growing under my hand. What I'm at now is just a game. This would be a work, the kind I need. Will you consider it?"

"Are you offering it?" "I'm offering it as a possible alternative to putting you out of business. There may be magic in these hills, but if the thing works out on study as I believe now it will, I'll do it. What do you say?"

"And you say," Mark insisted, "it's the only possible alternative to fighting me?" "To being," Henry corrected grimly, "put out of business."

It was Mark's turn to go to the window. He stood there silent, for many minutes, looking not upon the city that might be but upon the little village that was.

"What do you say?" Henry demanded impatiently.

"It doesn't tempt. Mark faced him steadily. "You were mistaken. I don't want battle. I don't want obstacles. But I do want to put that through." He nodded toward the village and the mills.

"Humph! You'll find plenty of obstacles and battles over there."

"Yes. But there would be compensations. Do you mean," Henry demanded, "you choose to hobble along with a little one-horse plant and philanthropy when you might go with me into something really big? Compensations! You'll end in losing all you have."

"All the money I have," Mark corrected. "That is possible. But I'm not worrying about the poor farm. I expect, when that happens, I can find a good job somewhere."

"Then," Henry fired his last gun, gruffly, "then you choose those people over there against me—who made you?"

"They helped to make me—to make you, too—You," Mark answered quietly, "don't tempt."

"I can put it through. I will. . . . I have faith."

CHAPTER XXVII. White Water. The woman who alighted with Henry from the train had come with an errand. Sundry inquiries from the station and at the new hotel—so hideously garish amid the gray tones of its surroundings—convinced her that she would need Mark Truitt's help. But she had overheard her fellow passenger's questions to the doctor and guessed that Mark would be with him for most of that day.

She stayed in her little hotel room until dinner time. After that meal, eaten in a noisy dining-room filled with still homeless men who had come to build or work in the Bethel experiment, she went out and wandered about through the old village, of which years before, hearing of it from an unappreciative young adventurer, she had thought as a sort of ante-room to heaven. There had even been a period in that far-off, innocent girlhood when she had thought of it as a beautiful restful haven, to which some day when he should have tired of the greedy city and its grind, her lover might bring her. Always, it seemed, she had needed and wanted a heaven. If only he had brought her then, what might have been saved!

"What might have been saved! But I mustn't think of that."

From down a narrow lane she caught a glimpse of the river, smiling in the sunlight. It beckoned to her and she obeyed, turning her steps upstream. A thick grove of oaks and chestnuts shut her off from the village and she was alone with the river and forest. River and forest held many memories for her.

Hours passed. A few fleecy, tumbling clouds floated over her. Heavier and less silvery masses appeared over the western horizon. The wind freshened. She did not notice. . . . And suddenly she knew that she was not alone.

She turned and saw him standing near, staring, bewildered yet strangely eager, toward her. Her lips parted, her bosom lifted in a sharp intake of breath, as their eyes met. Then she got slowly to her feet, trying to look away that she might regain a lost-self-control.

He started toward her, with the peculiar halting step she never could see without a tender maternal impulse. Scarcely two yards away he stopped.

"Kazia—you!" "Yes." "But I," he stammered, "I don't understand."

Self-control was coming back. "I came to get Piotr," he repeated mechanically. But he did not comprehend.

He passed a hand over his eyes. The apparition did not fade. Gradually he realized—with a dazing jumble of gladness and pain and reluctance—that it was indeed she, in the flesh.

"Piotr? I had forgotten him. I heard this morning he was here."

"Then he is here? I asked at the station and hotel, but no one had seen or heard of him."

"But why is he here? And why have you come?"

"He came back to us a few weeks ago, the forlornest wail I've ever seen. I don't know how he had been living—we'd no trace of him since Uncle Roman died. He was starving and his mind was clearly gone. I suppose he wouldn't have come to me otherwise. I ought to have put him away somewhere, but he was harmless and it seemed so cruel. He just sat around poring over books as he used to when he was a boy. He seemed to have forgotten all that's happened since then. And then three days ago he awoke. He asked me for some money—said something about a debt he had to pay. It was little enough—and he had so little of everything, poor Piotr!"

"So very little."

"He went out and didn't come back. And yesterday—I'd seen she was worrying, but thought it was because he hadn't appeared again—the Matka told me she thought from something he'd said that he might have come up here to try to harm you in some way. Do you know where he is?"

"The doctor here, who told me about him, said he's camping out in an old shed over there in the hills."

"If you'll help me to him, or send some one—"

"I will go myself."

"They had reached the lane that led to the main street and the hotel. She would have turned there, but he put out a hand and stayed her."

"Kazia, was it only on Piotr's account you came?"

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once children there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women not only healthy and strong.

The Hydration Ram. She was a Delaware county girl. She lived near Gaston and was in Muncie with her escort, watching a piece of engineering work that was being done about a new bridge. Every once in a while there came a peculiar grinding noise whose origin she could not locate.

Take the Blood Out and Wash It. Drs. V. A. Urevitch and N. K. Rosenberg have discovered a way to take the blood out of the body, wash it and put it back again. In the Roussy Vratich they describe their experiments upon animals. The idea, of course, is to rid the blood of poisonous substances. They found they could remove half the blood, prevent its coagulation by adding sodium citrate, wash it with salt solution and return the purified red corpuscles into the circulation. It was not necessary to return the white corpuscles.

Pressed Hard. Coffee's Weight on Old Age. When people realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are usually glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained of that 'weak all over' feeling and sick stomach. "Some time ago I was making a visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed a somewhat unusual flavour of the 'coffee' and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum. "I was so pleased with it that, after the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had wife prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely. "I had really been at times very anxious concerning my mother's condition, but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt so much better than she did prior to her heart, and had less trouble with her head, and no sick stomach; that the headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was well and healthy. "I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Postum comes in two forms: Regular Postum—must be well boiled. Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delicious beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins. The cost per cup of both kinds is about the same. "There's a Reason" for Postum. —Sold by Grocers.

AMONG OUR NEIGHBORS Carp catching has been all the rage for several days. The Vine street bridge was crowded with fishermen for several days and the carp were taken from the river in dip nets in large quantities. Several of our local fishermen have been encouraged by this run to resume the business of seining carp and considerable quantities in barrel shipments have been sent from here the past week.—Horizon Reporter. Frank Saueressig and Dave Anthony had a close call last Wednesday while riding in the former's auto between this city and Kewaskum. In some manner the auto turned turtle and Mr. Saueressig was pinioned below the car. Present, however, was able to remove the car and after getting it righted they were able to proceed on their trip, neither of them being injured.—West Bend Pilot. On Friday last Mrs. Chas. J. Smith, living on the former P. Koch farm just west of the city, brought to this office a beautiful pink rose and buds which had been cut from the bushes in her garden that day. They were certainly pretty. On one bush, Mrs. Smith said, she had counted seventeen buds nearly ready to blossom.—Burlington Standard Democrat. Babies Killed in Mothers' Arms There follows an abstract from the foreword of the report of the Philadelphia Baby Saving Show, which is one of the best compositions it has been my fortune to read for a long while. It has been altered very slightly to adapt it for this column; but not enough to alter the message. The author has condensed, elaborated and compressed into tabular form the tenets of a comparatively new philosophy and of a comparatively new religion. Read carefully and studiously until you have grasped the hope of the great social and educational movement for "life more abundant." Knowledge is waste unless knowledge saves. Humanity is the measure of scientific discovery. Unless the many learn, the few teach in vain. The tax of death laid on babies can be commuted by care and knowledge. The death of the old is inevitable and in the course of nature. The death of babies is social murder and in the course and carelessness of man. Educate the mother and the baby will have life more abundantly. Given perfect conditions, or at least as perfect as our own knowledge now permits, and not one baby in a hundred would die, as a baby. Years later, age would end. Now babyhood slays. Leave conditions as they are and twenty or twenty-five out of a hundred babies die. The fight for babies is in most cities the fight for a quarter of those born. No one can win this fight but the mother. Add to her love knowledge; and to her knowledge, instruction; and to instruction practice; and a place in her mother's arms would be the safest of all refuges. Today society slays one in four babies in their mothers' arms. It is the most unsafe refuge known. No other part of society dies as much as babies. Think what it means—if you can bear the poignant pang of this discovery—to find out that mothers by the ten thousand know that their babies need not die, know that somewhere there are men who know what would save their babies, and yet know no place where they can get this precious knowledge, this buckler and shield against the darts of death, aimed at the babies in their arms.

Big Ben should be in every farmer's home. You men who live on the farm have got to be heavy workers. And if you are heavy workers you require heavy sleep and lots of it. For heavy sleep is heavy work's reaction and it's not always easy for the heavy sleeper to get up without help. That's where Big Ben comes in. He makes it easy every morning. Big Ben is a truth-telling and reliable alarm clock. He gets you up, he never fails. You're always up on the dot if he's in the sleeping room. See him in my window next time you come to town. PHILIPP ELECTED; RACE IS CLOSE FOR U. S. SENATORSHIP

REPUBLICANS CLAIM CANDIDATE GOVERNOR HAS PLURALITY OF 20,000.

NO CONGRESSIONAL CHANGE

All Members of Wisconsin Delegation Re-elected—Indications Point to Defeat of Ten Amendments.

Milwaukee, Nov. 4.—With thirteen counties missing and 481 out of 2,054 precincts in the state to be heard from, the vote on governor and United States senator stands as follows: For Governor—Philipp, republican, 117,312; Karel, democrat, 99,494; Blaine, independent, 25,362.

Based on these returns, supporters of Paul O. Husting, claim he will be elected to the United States senate by from 3,000 to 5,000 plurality.

The counties remaining to be heard from include Douglas, Juneau, Kewaunee, Marinette, Pierce, Polk, Price, St. Croix, Sawyer, Taylor, Vernon, Washburn and Waushara, and the republicans claim that when final returns from these usual republican strongholds are received the tide will be turned in favor of McGovern.

In any event the race is going to be a close one and neither candidate will have any votes to spare.

Blaine Help to Husting. The independent candidacy of Blaine for governor is held responsible for Husting's lead, as in many localities the latter's votes are equal to those cast for both Karel and Blaine.

Dane county, with four country precincts missing, gives Philipp 3,500, Karel 4,855, Blaine 4,025, McGovern 3,569 and Husting 6,430. It will be seen that Mr. Philipp and Mr. McGovern received practically the same vote, with a few votes in favor of the governor, while Mr. Husting ran 1,575 ahead of Mr. Karel.

One nonpartisan, one democratic and one social democratic state senator were elected. Five nonpartisans were successful in contests for assembly seats, while six democrats and eight socialists were elected to the lower house of the state legislature.

On the ten proposed constitutional amendments, Milwaukee county rejected seven and approved three. The latter were the amendments providing for initiative and referendum; home rule and the recall.

No Change in Congressmen. The congressional representation from Wisconsin remains unchanged. The hopes of the republicans that they would be able to redeem the Sixth and Ninth districts, which are normally republican but are now represented by democrats, were not realized.

Teachers Elect Officers. La Crosse.—H. L. Gardner, superintendent of schools of Vernon county, was elected president of the Western Wisconsin Teachers' association at the closing session of the convention at the State Normal school here.

GAINS FOR G. O. P.

DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY IN HOUSE CUT DOWN TO ALMOST NOTHING.

UNDERWOOD TO THE SENATE

Republicans Have Lost a Few Seats in Upper House—Hot Race in Indiana—"Uncle Joe" Cannon is Elected.

Washington, Nov. 5.—Latest returns indicate that the Democratic majority in the house of representatives may be reduced from 145 to 9. With many contested districts still to be heard from with final figures, the incomplete returns divide the membership as follows: Democrats, 222; Republicans, 233; Progressives, 10.

The Democratic majority in the senate apparently has been increased from 10 to 14.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—Lawrence Y. Sherman seems to have carried Illinois for United States senator, defeating Roger C. Sullivan by probably 27,000 votes. To do this Senator Sherman had to receive over 100,000 of a plurality outside of Cook county, as Sullivan carries this county by probably 75,000.

In Connecticut the Republicans elected a governor, United States senator and five Republican congressmen to take the place of five sitting Democrats.

Robins in Illinois ran third to Sherman. In Cook he made almost as good a showing as the Republican, but in his own home precinct, the Eighteenth of the Seventeenth ward, he got only 30 votes, while Sullivan received 100 and Sherman 94.

In New York Charles S. Whitman, Republican, was elected to succeed Governor Glynn, Democrat, by a plurality estimated at 125,000. All other Republican candidates for state offices were elected. The legislature is Republican by a good working majority.

The early returns in Massachusetts indicated that David Walsh, Democratic governor, had been defeated for re-election, but later, with most of the state in it finally was conceded that the Democrat had won by nearly 10,000 plurality. Several congressional districts in Massachusetts that were Democratic for the past two years, however, were won back by the Republicans.

In Indiana, Albert J. Beveridge was overwhelmingly defeated for the senate. Senator Shively, Democratic incumbent, claims to have won by 20,000.

In Maryland the Democratic candidate for United States senator, J. W. Smith, has been elected over E. C. Carrington, Republican, and W. M. Reichard, Progressive. Iowa sends Albert B. Cummins back to the United States senate over M. Connolly, Democrat, by an increased plurality. George W. Clark, Republican, wins in Iowa for governor, over T. J. Hamilton, Democrat, and George C. White, Progressive.

Oscar W. Underwood, Democrat, is elected in Alabama to the United States senate by an immense plurality. In Pennsylvania Hotes Penrose, Republican, was so far ahead of Gifford Pinchot, personal friend of former President Roosevelt, that it was admitted that Penrose would get ten times as many votes as the Progressive. A. M. Palmer, Democrat, was third.

Joseph G. Cannon of Danville (Ill.), former speaker of the house of representatives, elected over Frank T. O'Hair, Democrat, by a big plurality. New Hampshire elected R. H. Spaulding, Republican, over A. W. Noone, Democrat, and J. H. Gallinger, Republican, to the United States senate over R. H. Stevens, Democrat. In this state the Bull Moose loss was marked.

The indictments were returned before Judge Foster, who immediately issued bench warrants for all the defendants. In addition to those already mentioned the other men indicted are: George McCulloch Miller, Charles F. Brooker, William Skinner, D. Newton Burney, Robert W. Taft, James S. Elton, James S. Hemingway, Charles M. Pratt, A. Heaton Robertson, Frederick F. Brewster, Henry K. McHarg, Edward D. Robinson, Alexander Cochran, Thomas DeWitt Cuyler, Edward Milligan and Francis T. Maxwell.

According to the indictments the persons named conspired to gain absolute ascendancy over the transportation systems in New England, namely, steam railroads, traction lines and steamship companies.

MAROONS ARE HELD TO SCORELESS TIE

BADGER FOOTBALL TEAM SURPRISES ENEMY IN ANNUAL GAME.

MARQUETTE MEETS DEFEAT

Lawrence Completely Outclasses Opponents and Wins by Score of 21 to 0—Beloit Triumphs Over Ripon College 14 to 0.

Madison.—Chicago was given a big surprise in the annual game here, by being held to a scoreless tie. For four thrilling periods the Maroon and the Cardinal lines moved up and down the gridiron turf—the advantage passing from one side to the other with the rapidity and changing front of repeated cavalry charges in an open plain.

Wisconsin had the better team. The Badgers upset the dope in the best possible form, and battled Stag's Maroons to a standstill. The final outcome of the great fray was a 0 to 0 score, but the cardinal clad warriors covered themselves with honor.

With the betting 2 to 1 against them, and practically every expert picking them to lose, the Badgers not only held Chicago to a tied score, but outplayed the conference champions in every department of the game.

In generalship, punting, forward passing, line bucking and gameship, Juneau's cohorts had the edge.

Appleton.—Marquette university was no match for Lawrence college on the Lawrence field here, the latter winning 21 to 0 in the most listless game here this season. Until the fourth quarter, Lawrence by unfortunate fumbles, was unable to cross the Blue and Gold's line but once. Seven times she lost the ball inside Marquette's ten-yard line, the latter putting up a star defensive game and five times she lost it on fumbles. Marquette was unable to gain consistently on Lawrence, being able only four times during the entire game to make first-down.

Ripon.—The Ripon college football team was defeated here by Beloit by a score of 14 to 0. Ripon did not show the usual ginger it has and was completely outclassed by its opponents, the Beloit backs being able to go around the ends for long gains. Ripon spruced up in the last quarter and started to show that they could play ball, but it was too late. Beloit's play ball, but it was too late. Beloit's play ball, but it was too late. APPOINTMENTS CONFIRMED

Executive Committee of University of Wisconsin Board of Regents Approve Teachers.

Madison.—The following appointments have been confirmed by the executive committee of the University of Wisconsin board of regents on the recommendation of President Van Hise: T. L. Tanton, assistant in geology; Eva Jolivet, teaching fellow in zoology.

PLAN COLLEGE EXTENSIONS

Trustees of Lawrence College, Appleton, Accept Tentative Designs for Additional Buildings.

Appleton.—Tentative plans for a building change at Lawrence college, which will end with the accommodation of 1,600 students, were provisionally accepted by trustees of Lawrence college at their annual meeting.

The plan includes a large number of new buildings for dormitories, scholastic work, gymnasium and halls and for the extension of the campus. The plans call for the present campus to be used for purely educational purposes.

The present gymnasium will be enlarged and used as a science building, while the third structure for scientific purposes will be constructed on the present site of the president's residence and observatory. The new gymnasium will be erected south of the present gym.

PHILIPP TO FILL VACANCIES

Source of Positions, Some Carrying Good Salaries, to Be Filled by New Governor.

Madison.—Gov. E. L. Philipp will have a score of appointments to make when he takes office, or shortly thereafter. The first to be made will be in his official family and consist of private secretary, state claim agent and executive clerk. In addition to these is the position of superintendent of public property, which is an appointment much sought after since the legislature raised the salary to $3,000 a year. This appointment is in the hands of the governor, the same as those in his immediate official family, and does not have to be confirmed by the senate.

Another very important appointment the new governor will have to make will be that of insurance commissioner, the term of Commissioner H. L. Ekmr expiring June 30, 1915. There is a possibility that before the time arrives for the appointment to this important position that the office will again have been placed in the elective list, where it was formerly. If not, the governor will have a chance to give some one a good berth.

Other appointments which will be made at once are three on the state board of agriculture, where the terms of Mrs. Adda T. Howie, H. E. Krueger and G. E. Kuntz expire Jan. 1. Though this is before the retirement of Gov. McGovern, it is official courtesy for the outgoing governor to leave these appointments for his successor to make.

In February the terms of H. D. Hamilton and George B. Nelson, as members of the board of normal school regents, expire, and their successors will have to be appointed. The term of Dr. C. H. Stoddard of the state board of health also expires in February.

DAIRY FACTS

REPLACES PAPER COVERING IN THE REFRIGERATOR—NO OPPORTUNITY FOR LODGERMEN OF GERMS.

The well-intentioned but thoughtless housekeeper will give the matter of the selection of her milkman a great deal of serious consideration, and finding one in whom she has perfect confidence and who she has reason to believe is delivering a clean and otherwise satisfactory article, she proceeds to nullify all the work he has done in this direction by making repeated use of the paper disk which has been placed on the top of the bottle.

DAIRY FACTS

Sanitary Covering for Milk Bottles. Often this paper cap is handled and rehandled many times in the course of the operation of emptying the bottle, and every time this handling takes place a certain amount of contamination is imparted to the milk in the bottle. This paper disk should be thrown away as soon as it has been removed from the bottle, and it is not sufficient that the bottle should be covered with a saucer, butter cloth or other thing of this character. The opening should be effectively and securely covered and a cap of porcelain has recently been invented for this purpose. Being of glass and having a smooth surface there is little or no opportunity for the lodgment of germs, and, furthermore, its shape is such that the edges of the bottle are covered and protected from contamination.

PREVENT SCOURS IN CALVES

Infectious Disease Gains Access to the Body of Young Animal Soon After Its Birth.

(By C. H. ECKLES, Missouri Experiment Station.) One kind of scour is an infectious disease which gains access to the body of the calf soon after birth through the freshly broken navel cord. It usually occurs within a week and often within 48 hours after the calf is born, and runs its course quickly. The symptoms are sudden, severe sickness, sunken eyes and usually a white, foul-smelling dung. If one calf has become infected others are liable to contract the disease and die in the same manner. It is important to thoroughly disinfect box stalls where calves are dropped and have them well bedded with clean straw. It is always a good plan to disinfect the navel cord when the calf is born, and if there is reason to suspect they might contract the disease, extra precautions should be taken, such as singeing the cord with a hot iron, which stops up the opening, or to tie the end of the cord with a string and wrap a strip of cloth around the calf's body. A mild solution of creolin, zenoleum or carbolic acid should be applied to the cord as a disinfectant.

PROFIT IN CAREFUL FEEDING

Common Cows Capable of Producing Much Larger Yield Than Secured by Ordinary Methods.

(By T. L. HAECKER, Minnesota Experiment Station.) From a careful investigation we find that our common cows are capable of producing a much larger yield than is secured from the average common cow in the state. During the past decade we have always had at the Minnesota university farm, in the dairy herd, a number of common cows; that is, cows with no dairy heredity.

Butterfat in Milk.

The average yield from these common cows, for 23 yearly records, is 5,000 pounds of milk and 222 pounds of butter, which last, valued at 27 cents per pound, is equal in round numbers to $60 for butter alone. The average receipt per common cow in the state is $48.40; which shows that the average cow is yielding $14 less per annum than she might easily yield if given the same care and feed as are given the cows at university farm.

Butterfat in Milk.

The average quality of milk should yield about 4 per cent of butterfat by the Babcock test. Full directions for the use of this and other tests are sold with the testing machines. Five per cent of the milk is an average yield of butter.

Seal Direct to Consumer.

It is just as easy—through some farmers will not allow themselves to think so—to sell butter direct to the consumer at retail prices as to turn it over to the dealer at wholesale prices, provided enough is produced daily to supply 40 customers.

Stir Milk While Cooling.

Stir milk frequently while cooling it down in a tank. If this is not done, the milk near the outside of the can becomes cool while that in the center remains warm.

Fire Destroys Barn.

Wausau.—A large barn belonging to Edwin Ziegenhagen at Marathon was destroyed by fire. The loss amounts to several thousand dollars.

Train Decapitates Youth.

Green Bay.—George Valent, aged 17, of Green Bay, was decapitated when he attempted to jump from a moving train on the Northwestern line at Depere. He and two companions were stealing a ride.

Plan New Postoffice.

Merrill.—Plans for the erection of the new postoffice are going forward. Postmaster Runke, who recently returned from Washington, believes the contracts will soon be let.

Secretary of Agriculture Discusses Meat Shortage

Addressing an audience composed of stock raisers from practically every state in the Union, at the National Dairy Show Convention at Chicago, recently, Secretary Houston of the United States Department of Agriculture declared the short meat supply to be one of the most serious problems confronting American agriculture.

Mr. Houston approved the plan of cattle raising on large ranches and declared that no comfort would be snared by the Federal Government in further increasing production from this source but insisted that the proper solution of this problem depended on an increased interest in livestock raising by farmers and in a more systematic control and eradication of hog cholera, cattle tick and tuberculosis.

Figures were quoted from Government reports, showing that the production of meat in the United States during the past 14 years had fallen off 3,000,000,000 pounds and that the population of the nation during this time had increased 22,000,000.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Wisconsin State Board of Immigration

In competition open to the world Wisconsin again has scored heavily with her pure-bred seed grains. Word received today by the Board of Immigration states that H. E. Krueger of Beaver Dam has been awarded $550 in prizes for grains entered at the International Dry Farming Congress and Exposition recently held in Wichita, Kansas, at this contest winning first and second premiums on wheat including a sweepstake; two firsts on white and yellow oats including a second premium sweepstake and two first premiums of $150 each for the best two-rowed and six-rowed varieties of barley.

For eight successive years Mr. Krueger has won world's sweepstake premiums with Wisconsin barley, a handsomeness showing unapproached by any other state. It is also significant that acre for acre Wisconsin outduces the dry farming regions by fifty per cent and does so consistently without the discouraging element of crop failure or profit eating freight charges. Equally impressive is the fact that these pure-bred grains reward the grower with additional recompense because of their seed value. And still each year the demand greatly exceeds the store in Wisconsin granaries.

B. G. Packer, Commissioner of Immigration.

Farm Facts

Help to organize rural life and make the country a better place in which to live.

The problem that confronts the farmer next in importance to distribution is diversification.

Agriculture has gone through two thousand years of evolution and is still in an experimental stage.

Over-production is the stumbling block, and systematic marketing the stepping stone of agriculture.

It is the duty of every farmer to see that his wife is supplied with every equipment to lighten her labors.

To eliminate waste and inefficiency in marketing, the farmer should keep in close touch with market conditions.

The problem of marketing is the biggest business proposition of any age of nation and one that will require the combined efforts of all the agencies of civilization to solve.

Acetylene Lighting System

Two recent explosions of acetylene generators, both of which caused property loss and one a fire, are a warning to the farmer to the installation and care of these systems.

The manufacturer and sales agent will say that explosions are impossible, and neither careless, nor ignorance makes the machine dangerous. This is only selling talk. A machine thus guaranteed cost the life of a young man last month at Wilmot in this state.

When the system is properly installed and cared for, acetylene gives a perfect brilliant and steady light. As electricity and gas from central stations cannot be had in the country, acetylene lighting systems are often found in farm homes and country hotels and we have no desire to discourage the use of these lighting systems, and do not claim that they are fraught with more danger than gasoline lighting systems, but we want people to realize that acetylene gas is highly explosive and that calcium carbide also is dangerous unless kept dry.

The purchase of such a system should make sure that such a system has been tested and approved by, and bears the label of the Underwriters Laboratories.

The main danger of explosion is at the generator tank; so it is important, that this tank be kept in a separate, outside building, and not in the basement of the main building, where an explosion is certain to destroy the building and to endanger the lives of the occupants.

The building in which the generator is installed should be well lighted and ventilated. No artificial light or fire should be within fifteen feet of the generator. The use of any candle, lantern, lamp, match or other open light near a generator should never be permitted.

The generator should be charged by daylight only at regular intervals and never by a novice. Before charging the generator, carefully clean out the generator chamber and remove all the residue. Do not place this in sewer pipes, do not use paper cans or wooden receptacles or near any combustible or inflammable materials.

The carbide container should never be filled over the mark designated, or making allowance for expansion. When charging the proper supply of fresh clear water should be put into the tank.

The building in which the generator should be installed should be heated by steam or hot water if possible. The room must be safe from freezing.

The presence of pungent odors, or a flickering, irregular flame or hissing sound at the burner means trouble, and should be investigated at once by one who understands the system.

Calcium carbide should be bought in metal drums only, of not over one hundred pounds capacity, and not more than one drum should be opened at the same time. The carbide drums also should be stored in an outside building, which is always dry, waterproof and well ventilated. They should not be kept in the building where the generator is.

It is well to raise the drums from the floor by supports so that the air can circulate under them, and that they may not come in contact with damp floors.

Consider this danger to human life and property, and let your motto always be SAFETY FIRST.

Clem P. Host, State Fire Marshal.

How much tax will they pay to support your schools and educate your children, for improving roads and bridges, for the support of the county poor and for the expenses of running the business of the township county or state? On what page is their offer to contribute money to the support of the churches? What time of credit will they extend to you when your crops are poor and your money gone when through misfortune or illness you are not able to send "cash with the order" for your groceries, clothing, farm tools and crockery? Where is their offer to contribute to your entertainment next Fourth? In short will they do anything to provide a market for what you have to sell and thereby keep up the value of your state? Why The Youth's Companion Should Be in Every Family

"If I could take only one paper," said the late Mr. Justice Brewer of the Supreme Court, "it would be the Youth's Companion—a little of everything, in a nutshell, and unbiased." The Companion is a family paper in the completest sense. It provides reading that, without failing to interest the young, still interests the mature. It unites young and old through their common enjoyment of delightful fiction, agreeable miscellany, and the clear exposition of public questions.

So carefully is it edited, so varied are its contents, that it would easily supply a family with entertaining fiction, up-to-date information and wholesome fun, if no other periodical entered the house.

If you are not familiar with The Companion as it is today, let us send you sample copies and the Forecast for 1915.

New subscribers who send $2.00 for the fifty-two issues of 1915 will receive all the remaining issues of 1914, besides a copy of The Companion Home Calendar for 1915.

Wisconsin farmers produced 4,364,000 tons of tame or cultivated hay during 1914 according to the preliminary estimates made today by the United States Department of Agriculture. The yield last year was 3,848,000 tons. The product is selling for an average of $9.40 per ton, compared with $8.17 per ton in 1913. The yield per acre this season is 1.75 tons and the quality is two per cent better than the average crop of the past ten years.
