RUNAWAY HORSE JUMPS INTO AUTO

That Neither of the Occupants of Automobile Were Not Seriously Hurt Certainly is a Miracle

Last Sunday evening about 8:15 o'clock while returning to their home at Campbellport, after spending the day with the Jos. Karl family in town Kewaskum, Herman Krueger and two daughters experienced a runaway which they long will remember about one mile west of this village the front axle of the buggy near the wheel broke, throwing the occupants forcibly to the ground. Mr. Krueger receiving several bruises and bumps, the girls escaped injury. The horse in some manner tore loose from the buggy and galloped away, going through the village at break neck speed, when getting towards Wayne, and when nearing Ben Backhaus' place a half mile further, a Ford roadster, driven by Clemence Reinern of West Bend accompanied by Miss Florence of the town of Barton, was enroute to this village to attend the dance at the Opera House. It is thought the lights of the car blinded the horse, and as Mr. Reinern was unable to turn out of the road soon enough on account of the muddy roads, both collided, the horse jumping head first through the wind shield. Both of the occupants received slight cuts caused by the breaking of the wind shield, they were rendered assistance by Mr. Backhaus, who heard the noise, and very soon thereafter taken to Kewaskum by Mich. Johannes Jr., who happened along with his car, to have their wounds dressed. The horse received a broken leg and several other injuries, and it was necessary to kill it. The auto was damaged considerably.

GIRLS WIN THE OPENING GAME

Local High School Girls' Basketball Team Wins First Game of Season From the Plymouth Girls Team

That the basketball craze is again in full bloom was shown last week Thursday evening, when the local High School Girls journeyed to Plymouth to play the high school girls of that city, defeating them by the overwhelming score of 11 to 4. It was a great victory for the local girls, giving them the right kind of basketball spirit. It also gives them ambition to try for the state championship laurels.

High School Notes

Explain—"Man is an omnivorous animal!" No answer—What is the meaning of omnivorous? It refers to God. Then an omnivorous animal must be God-like. One of the members of the United States Junior class awarded her would rather hold a living crow than a dead hero—Brave. One of our Senior boys has received unexpected company. The visitor being Miss "Innocence" of the Kippuhan. Van Barcon, ditto at home. One of the Senior girls sneezed rather loudly Wednesday morning and Mr. Simon warned her to leave it a home. On Monday the Seniors ended the exams by a test in Physics. Pearson Brown has again made a nest out of an Algebra notebook. Our boys challenged the Plymouth basketball team on the local floor Wednesday evening. "I don't think I deserve zero on this exam," said the pupil as he took his Geometry papers. "No I don't either John," but that was the lowest I could give you said the teacher. On Friday evening, Oct. 27th our Girls Basketball team journeyed to Plymouth and defeated the Girls Basketball team of that city by a score of 11 to 4. The game was very interesting as the teams were quite evenly matched. By the effective coaching of our coach and skillful playing of the forwards the local team returned victorious. The record of not losing a game for the past three years was not effected by this year's team. Our girls have a very strong team this year and are ready to challenge any High School team in the state. A return game will be played in the near future. On Monday evening the Seniors entertained the Juniors to a Halloween party at the Opera House. The hall was decorated in a ghoulish manner, pumpkin faces were the only lights, cornstalks were also used to decorate and a zypsy fortune teller occupied a little booth built of cornstalks where the guests wished to learn about their future. The playing of games were some of the amusements of the evening. At eleven a delicious lunch was served, which was prepared by the Seniors.

Where Hughes Stands

Those of our German friends who protest so loudly because President Wilson did not order an embargo on arms and war munitions will find but little comfort in Candidate Hughes' declaration in a speech at Columbus, Ind., on Monday. He stated that he was in favor of every American right, including the right to travel upon the high seas and the right of shipment of war munitions. In the face of everything that has been said or done by the warring nations, President Wilson has kept a level head and has kept us out of war. Thank God for Wilson.—Pilot

PRESIDENT PLEDGES GREATER PROGRESS

Laws Must Fit New Life Mr. Wilson Tells the American People.

HIS RECORD OF DEEDS DONE

U. S. Rights Upheld With Honor, Farmers Aided, Business and Labor Benefitted, Children Protected—Women's Votes Protected.

Shadow Law, N. J., Oct. 28.—To the American people Woodrow Wilson today gave an accounting of his administration as their President. He "balanced his books" so that the record stands clear. Promises fulfilled, great deeds done! That, in short, tells the story. And yet the story is not finished. Other chapters in the great Book of Human Progress remain to be written. It rests with you, American Voters, to say whether the man who began the book shall finish it.

Here, in the President's own words, is a plain statement of what he, as leader not only of the Democratic party, but of the nation, has accomplished in your behalf and of what he plans for your future—a statement made not alone to the thousands who journeyed here, but to you and the hundreds of thousands throughout the country who celebrated "Wilson Day."

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

"My Fellow-Citizens: This is called 'Wilson Day' only because for six years, first as Governor of New Jersey and then as President of the United States, I have been permitted to lead first a great state and then a great national party along the ways of progress and of enlarged and regenerated life which our people had so long sought and so long been held back from by the organized power of selfish interest, and because the great honor has fallen to me of being chosen once more spokesman and representative of the men who mean to hold the country to these ways of peace, humanity and progress. It is of these forces that I shall speak and not of myself, who am merely their servant.

"What are these forces? Whence do they spring? What have they accomplished, and what is their program and purpose for the future? It is plain what they are. They are the forces of humane, righteous, and patriotic purpose which have sprung up in our day in the minds of those who perceive the shortcomings of the law as it has hardened in America and who look forward with purpose and conviction to a new age in which government shall be indeed the servant of liberty and not of privilege.

"These are men who perceive that American law has not kept pace with American sentiment; that our law has been holding us rigid and immovable, until class has begun, in free America, to be arrayed against class; until what was legal has begun to play a more important part in our thoughts and determinations than what is human and right; and until America has begun to lag instead of lead in reconciling what is with what ought to be.

"A new age had dawned upon us while those who were attempting to lead us were stumbling along with their heads over their shoulders, intent upon preserving the conditions of a day that is gone. America had changed and the whole world had changed. Our commerce and industry had grown to such a bulk that the domestic markets of which our former leaders were always so solicitous were glutted and we were bound, unless we were to burst our jacket, to find a free outlet into the markets of the world. The time had come when our commerce needed freedom and would be throttled by further restraints.

"We had acquired foreign possessions, had been drawn into the politics of the world, had begun to play a part which could not be played by provincials, but must be played by citizens of the great world of nations. And yet we had not altered our policy or our point of view. The great European war has served at least to show us this one thing, that the world itself has changed; that it had become at once too big a world and too little a world to submit its destinies now of this and again of that member of the great family of men; too compact, too intimate in its contacts, too universal in its way of intercourse, to make it any longer possible to limit the effects of any nation's action to a single, separate sphere where the rest would be untouched."

"An inevitable partnership of interests has been thrust upon the nations. They are neighbors and must accommodate their interests to one another, or else disturb the lives and embarrass the fortunes of men everywhere. No wonder that in such an age men in America should be cried awake and feel once more, as they felt them in the days when their great republic was set up, the compulsions of humanity and of justice!

Squaring Laws With Life. "There are the freshening winds blowing out of the life of mankind everywhere, that have brought on a new day in American politics. We have looked once more very critically at our own laws and our own practices and have set about to square them with the actual conditions of our life and the life of the world."

"Four years ago there were two parties in the field whose programme was conceived under the influence of these great forces of progress and adjustment, the Democratic party and the Progressive party. This year there is but one, the Democratic party. In the presidential election of four years ago some fifteen million votes were cast. Of these, nearly ten and a half millions were cast for the candidates of the two progressive parties, only three and a half millions for the candidates of the Republican party, the party which lingered in the old ways and felt none of the new impulse of a new day. More than two-thirds of the voters of the United States favored then, and favor now, a programme whose object is to serve the changing needs of humanity and progress.

"The Democratic party was entrusted with the task. These powerful forces of the new age were put under its direction. And under that direction what have they accomplished?"

"They have put both the business and the life of the country upon a new footing.

Financial Credit Released.

"They have released the financial credit, upon which commerce and production alike depend, from the control of small groups of financiers and bankers at the speculative center.

"They have released the commerce and industry of the country from the domination of those who were building up their power by selfish and unfair methods of competition.

"They have supplied those who wished to conduct their business in conformity with the spirit of the laws with friendly guidance and delivered them from a nervous fear of the courts.

"They have released our foreign trade from the shackles of a tariff contrived in the interest of special groups of favored producers, and have created a Tariff Commission intended to substitute public for private influences, facts for theories and pretensions, in all future legislation with regard to duties and restrictions on imports.

"They have made provision for the immediate and systematic development of our carrying trade on the seas.

"They have at last supplied the means by which the nation may be bound together, materially and spiritually, by a network of good roads upon which both commodities and sympathies may move freely from community to community.

"They have put the farmer upon a footing of perfect equality with business men and men of all other callings in respect of his access to commercial credit; have placed a great bureau of the Government at his service in seeking and finding his best markets; have protected him by the establishment of definite standards in the sale of his products, and have put the scientific knowledge of the world at his disposal by practical demonstration at the expense of the Government upon the farms themselves.

"Have Emancipated Labor. "They have emancipated the laborers of the country from the unjustified restraints which the courts had put upon them by mistaken applications of old law to new circumstances and conditions.

"They have released the children of the country in large part from harmful labor; have sought to safeguard the lives and the health of our laborers in dangerous occupations; and have put agencies of the Government itself at the service of those who seek employment. And most of these things have been done within the brief limits of a single administration. "And still the great work is not finished. It can never be rounded off and concluded so long as circumstances change and the fortunes and relations of men shift and alter. The question you have to decide one week from next Tuesday is whether it shall be prematurely interrupted, perhaps for a generation to come, and all the generous forces of the age and of the world thrown back upon themselves in discouragement and confusion.

"The programme remaining is as great as the programme accomplished. The procedure of our courts is antiquated and a hindrance, not an aid, in the just administration of the law. We must simplify and reform it as other enlightened nations have done, and make courts of justice out of our courts of law. We must seek and find the means of bringing capital and labor to a clear understanding of their common interests, which are no other than the interests of the nation itself as a community. We must release our great undeveloped natural resources upon some sensible plan of use and conservation.

Need Votes of Women.

"We must recruit the votes of forward-looking men by the votes of women so that we may have a fresh insight in all matters of social reform and move more certainly and more promptly in the solution of the many new problems of society with which the law must henceforth deal.

"We must unite the Americas, North and South, in a new sympathy and co-operation.

"We must seek justice and the right through every channel that offers; and we must put America in all its force, in all its wealth, alike of physical power and spiritual enthusiasm, at the service of the other nations of the world when peace comes on the other side of the seas, to make that peace permanent by establishing it on the everlasting foundations of right, co-operation, equality and justice.

"These things we must do and all else that may serve mankind.

"And our motto must be CO-OPERATION, the union, not the hostile rivalry, of the forces of society within the nation and within the family of nations. The interests of mankind can never again be served by aggression; the interest of no nation or group of nations can ever again be served by aggression. The contests of jealousy are as bitter and as dangerous as the contests of arms.

"Must Press Reforms. "The world must henceforth seek the means of accommodation, not the means of arresting quarrels merely. The nation we love and serve must be among the first and foremost of those that rise to the new ideals with spirit and well directed force.

"Such is the prospect, such is the programme, my fellow-citizens, to which we look forward; to which it is our purpose to move forward with enthusiasm and irresistible ardor. We will not pause in the midst of our task. We know that we stand at one of the most critical junctures in the history of the world, when all hopes hang in the balance.

"We will suffer no man, no body of men, through timidity or fear or jealousy, to delay or hinder or embarrass us. Reaction can have no place of tolerance amongst us when all the world waits upon those who plan justice and progress.

"I summon you, not only to sustain, but to swell, the hosts that have their faces now set towards the light, their eyes lifted to the horizons where the dawn of a new age begins to brighten; and I summon you with confidence, with a certain expectation of the part America and her great people are to play when the dawn broadens into day."

"The farmer has a good memory. He does not forget his life-long battle with entrenched privilege—organized and grown purse-proud during forty years of Republican indifference and misrule. He will not forget that it was WOODROW WILSON, the People's President, who saved his market from ruin on Sept. 2, 1916. The special pleadings of Republican defenders of special privilege and monopoly will find the farmer ready on Nov. 7.

"VOTERS, THINK IT OVER: Roosevelt is the guiding spirit of the Republican campaign. He is the substance—Hughes is the shadow. You know what Roosevelt stands for—protection, jingoism. He has declared openly his regret that this country did not get into the European War. Do you want Roosevelt, and Hughes, and War? Or do you want more Peace and Prosperity under Wilson?"

FARMER REAPS GAIN BY EIGHT-HOUR LAW

Prevented Tying Up of Crops Valued at $6,000,000,000.

BY FRANK G. ODELL

Editor Nebraska Farm Magazine.

The New York Sun quotes James Wilson, of Iowa, former Secretary of Agriculture, as saying that the farmers were hit hardest by the Adamson Eight-hour Law, which stopped the threatened general railroad strike. According to The Sun, Mr. Wilson said:

"The farmer has no eight-hour day. Should that number of hours become general in all occupations, including the farm, the prices of food would rise still higher than those current."

The logic of the venerable ex-Secretary is bad. The farmer is not worrying about the high price of food. He raises his own food. He grows food for sale. That's his business. If, as the ex-Secretary says, the eight-hour day will increase the cost of food,—the farmer has everything to gain.

And "Uncle Jim" has overlooked the fact that the farmers of the United States had not less than $6,000,000,000 worth of products practically ready to send to market when the strike crisis was imminent at the first of September. The threatened strike would have paralyzed the farmer's market and stopped the wage of the worker in every industry.

Incalculable losses, running into hundreds of millions, were averted when the strike was prevented. Woodrow Wilson did it.

"Tann Jim" was Secretary of Agriculture through four Republican Administrations—sixteen years. These were sixteen years of monopolistic control of the farmer's market. During this period, these great combinations, which have stood between the producer and the consumer, reaped the zenith of their power. Greed and extortion ran riot.

During this period, the farmers of the country complained continually of capitalistic extortion. They held conventions throughout the great grain and live stock belt to voice their protest. They sent deputations of able men to Washington. They sent their appeals for justice to the Secretary of Agriculture and waited at the door of the White House during the administrations of McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. They asked for bread and received stones of indifference. They demanded justice and received platitudes about "prosperity," "contentment," and "making two blades of grass grow where one grew before."

Then came another Wilson—Woodrow Wilson. Things began to change. David F. Houston was made Secretary of Agriculture. For the first time in the history of the Government, the business problems of the farmer received the attentions of his Government. The Office of Markets and the Bureau of Rural Organization were created to help him break the stranglehold of entrenched monopoly. The epoch-making Rural Credits Law was passed by Woodrow Wilson and a Democratic Congress. The power of the insurer and extortioner was broken when that Act was signed.

"The farmer has a good memory. He does not forget his life-long battle with entrenched privilege—organized and grown purse-proud during forty years of Republican indifference and misrule. He will not forget that it was WOODROW WILSON, the People's President, who saved his market from ruin on Sept. 2, 1916. The special pleadings of Republican defenders of special privilege and monopoly will find the farmer ready on Nov. 7.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

JACK FROST'S WORK.

"Well, I must get to work," said Jack Frost as he started off early one Evening.

"Ha, ha," he laughed to himself, "I shall play a good joke on them all. They didn't think I was going to come-calling Tonight. Ha, ha, ha," and Jack Frost laughed again.

Then he called his little helpers to him, "Come my Silver Frost Boys," he said. And along came a great many little Boys with bright Red Checks, Silver Suits and Silver Hats. They were very cold looking, but as their Checks were Red it showed they were warm themselves. "But oh, how Cold they would have made anyone who looked at them.

"Have you the Tools ready?" asked Jack Frost. "I feel just like drawing some beautiful Pictures this Evening on the Window Panes. How about it little Frost boys? Do you feel like doing a good Night's work?"

And the Frost Boys laughed and said, "We're always ready for this sort of work, Jack, it's just like Play for us."

"The naughty Breezes and the old Wind Fathers are all asleep," said Jack Frost. "It's a good Night, my Boys, a good, still Night."

Then Jack Frost and the Frost Boys went along on their Night's adventure. First they went to an old fashioned Garden in which lovely Flowers were sleeping quietly.

"Hello," said Jack Frost, as he nipped the ear of one Flower.

"Oh Jack Frost," called the Flower, "I want more Summer. I don't want to see the Winter come and the Flowers go. I like the Sun and the South Wind and—and—" But Jack Frost had waved his Silver Shawl over the Flower, and it drooped its Head—for it had been Frost Bitten!

And the Frost Boys Laughed.

"Flowers are so selfish," said Jack Frost. "Here they have a long Summer and Sunshine and warmth and a good time. People give them drinks of Water from Watering Pans when it hasn't rained in a long time, and when comes grow up around them, some one comes and digs the weeds up. They're spoiled, that's what's the trouble."

And the Frost Boys said, "That's what's the trouble." As they said this their voices sounded so Cold that a great many Flowers drooped over with fear. "Oh those Cold, Cold voices," they said as they began to droop and drop their heads.

Then Jack Frost and the Frost Boys waved their Silver Shawls over all the Flowers—except just a few they passed over which wouldn't drop so quickly. "Well do those another time," said Jack Frost. "There's too much work to be done Tonight." So a few Flowers in the Garden were left untouched.

And then they went to the Window-Panels, and there they made queer shapes and queer objects. They made Castles, and Webs and dancing Figures—all cut of Silver—and with their Silver Tools.

All Night long they worked, and oh how much they did! They covered everything with their Silver Frost, and when it was all over Jack Frost and the Frost Boys stood around and admired their own work.

"We'd better be doing something every Evening now," said Jack Frost. "Yes," said the Frost Boys. "Let's start out every night now for a new place."

"We've fixed up the Gardens just around here pretty well—all except for a few Flowers we've left. We'll come back and do them when we have more time. It's a very surprising thing to me," added Jack Frost, as he took off his Silver Hat, and looked about him, "that People do not appreciate our work more—it's so very, very beautiful!"

"Indeed it is," agreed the Frost Boys. The next morning when everyone woke up and looked out, the Window-Panels were covered with Frost, and the Flowers had all been Frost-Bitten. "Oh dear," everyone sighed, "that old Jack Frost has been around."

But when they saw the few Flowers left in every Garden they were very happy. "Summer hasn't quite gone," they said.

"No," said the Flowers, "we're still here."

"And you'll stay there for some time yet," said Mr. Sun, and Mr. South Wind said, "We'll look after you."

And they did, for they asked the Fairy Queen to put old Jack Frost asleep again for a good, long nap.

Drinking of Water A PROMINENT WOMAN OF WISCONSIN

(BY V. M. PIERCE, M. D.)

The general conclusions of the latest Medical Scientists prove that drinking plenty of pure water both between meals and with one's meals is beneficial to health. It has now been proven by means of the X-rays and actual tests upon many healthy young men that the drinking of large amounts of water with meals is often beneficial. Therefore if you want to keep healthy drink plenty of pure water (not ice water), both with your meals and between meals. If you ever suffer from backache, lumbago, rheumatism, or any of the symptoms of kidney trouble—such as deep colored urine, sediment in urine, getting out of bed at night frequently and other troublesome effects, take a little Auric before meals. These Auric Tablets can be obtained at almost any drug store.

Appleton, Wis.—"I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription to be very good. About six years ago I had womanly weakness. I took this medicine and it cured me in about six months. I am quite sure it is a permanent cure, as I have never felt any return of this ailment and am well and hearty as any one could wish to be. I can recommend the 'Prescription' very highly."—MRS. C. M. HELP FOR WORKING WOMEN

Some Have to Keep on Until They Almost Drop. How Mrs. Conley Got Help.

Here is a letter from a woman who had to work, but was too weak and suffered too much to continue. How she regained health:

Frankfort, Ky.—"I suffered so much with female weakness that I could not do my own work, had to hire it done. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I tried it. I took three bottles and I found it to be all you claim. Now I feel as well as ever and I am able to do all my own work again. I recommend it to any woman suffering from female weakness. You may publish my letter if you wish."

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from native roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

All women are invited to write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it will be confidential.

Bankers of the various Texas cities are bringing about the metamorphosis. Four carloads of grade Holsteins have just been shipped from Green county, and six more carloads will follow within a few days, as a result of a tour of investigation which has just been completed by Dallas and Amarillo financiers. Under the co-operative plan which is being worked by the Texas State Bankers' association, these cattle will be sold to farmers who desire to engage in the dairying industry, three years being allowed in which to pay. THE KITCHEN CABINET

I've whiled away dyspeptic hours with crabs in marble halls. And in the lowly cottage, I've experienced codfish balls. But I've never found a viand that could so allay all grief, And soothe the cockles of the heart, like rare roast beef.

—Eugene Field.

POPULAR GAME BIRDS.

Game is too choice and too expensive for experiments so when one is fortunate enough to have a brace of birds to serve to one's friends it is wise to be sure that they are properly cooked and served.

Broiled Squab.

Split the birds down the back and wipe them with a damp cloth, no birds should be washed unless the wild fishy taste is too strong, then they may be parboiled with a little onion in the water. This applies to wild birds like ducks, not to squabs. Skin and charcoal are sometimes used in the parboiling water to remove objectionable flavors. Broil twelve minutes, having the breast side toward the fire in the first ten minutes. Spread with butter, dust with salt and pepper and serve each on a triangle of fried hominy.

For roast squab lay lardoons of salt pork upon the breasts of the birds, dust with pepper and salt and put them in a hot oven. If there are but few birds a little water will be needed, but if a dozen or so, the birds will supply their own juice. After 30 minutes pour a tablespoonful of fruit juice over each bird, basting often with the liquor in the pan. Serve with bread sauce.

Quail Stuffed With Pate de Foie Gras—Prepare the birds as for roasting. Mince a little cold veal, season with minced celery, parsley and chives; add a little pate de foie gras and a few slices of truffle, season with salt and pepper. Stuff the birds and put them in a baking pan, cover with thin slices of salt pork, add stock or water, cover the pan and steam the birds for an hour and three-quarters. When the birds are at half done sprinkle them with fine bread crumbs and dust with pepper and salt. Baste them often after they are taken from the oven until they are cold. Split them at the breastbone and serve surrounded with cubes of aspic jelly. A green salad with French dressing is best served with this dish.

Bread Sauce—Simmer an onion in one and one-half cups of milk, strain and add a half a cupful of soft bread crumbs; season with salt and pepper; add a little celery salt and a few drops of Worcestershire sauce. Put a spoonful of this at the side of each bird and cover with fine bread crumbs fried in butter. In serving a squab for an invalid cover the breast with butter, season and serve on toast.

Though we eat little flesh and drink no wine, Yet let us be merry; we'll have tea and toast. Custards for supper, and an endless host Of syllabubs and jellies and mince pies, And other such ladylike luxuries. —Shelley.

TASTY DISHES OF CALF'S LIVER.

As the liver of calves is deficient in fat, it is wise when serving it to have it accompanied with lard or salt pork.

Broiled Liver.—Cut the liver into half-inch slices, cover with boiling water, let stand five minutes, then drain and wipe. Sprinkle with seasoning and broil on a well-greased broiler for five minutes. Serve with dots of butter on hot platter.

Liver Hot Pot.—Cut the liver into slices a half-inch thick, soak in cold water a few moments, then dry them thoroughly; lay them in a saucpan and dredge with seasoned flour. Cover with thin slices of bacon and sprinkle with chopped onion or shallot and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Cook below the simmering point, well-covered for an hour and a half. Serve with rolls of fried bacon.

Liver Rolls.—Cut half-pound of liver in slices and parboil five minutes, wipe each piece dry, lay a thin slice of bacon on each slice of liver; season with salt, pepper and nutmeg, roll up and fasten with a toothpick; dredge flour and fry until tender in hot bacon fat. When done thicken the gravy, add a teaspoonful of mushroom catchup or a little lemon juice.

Liver Dumplings.—Chop half a pound of calf's liver, add a chopped onion, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, salt, pepper and a dash of nutmeg. Mix with two well-beaten eggs and one tablespoonful of melted butter. Add enough fine bread crumbs to form into balls and boil in soup stock. Serve with soup.

Liver Force-meat.—Take half a pound of calf's liver, a quarter of a pound of bacon, one carrot, one turnip, one stalk of celery, a bunch of herbs and a dust of red pepper. Cut the bacon and fry until brown; slice and fry the liver after parboiling it five minutes in water, chop the vegetables, add the herbs and seasoning and stir all together until cooked. Remove the herbs and pound the rest in a mortar, when it is ready for stuffing fowl.

tion. Prosperity which is all pervading, which brings up the price of labor and the products of labor manufactured or grown from the soil, which gives work to all which swells bank accounts, particularly small savings banks, which puts all mills, mines and factories at work—such prosperity is not fictitious nor is it merely temporary.

Whatever the verdict of the people next Tuesday may be, the present President of the United States is sure of an exalted place in history. His task has been a hard as Lincoln's was, and he has performed it as Lincoln would have done. This and succeeding generations of Americans have cause to rejoice at the course President Wilson has pursued and the things he has accomplished, and the fearful things he has prevented.

He has nothing to fear from a just people.

TWO QUESTIONS

If he is elected whom is Hughes going to stand by—Lodge, Gardner, Morgan and Wall and Lombard Streets, or

Who doubts by whom and for whom Wilson will stand?

As to the state candidates, for Governor the Democrats have before the people, Burt Williams of Ashland. A vote for Mr. Williams will mean a vote for lower taxes and a more efficient administration. By voting for Mr. Williams also do not forget to vote for the remainder of the democratic candidates, who are needed to assist Mr. Williams in his work.

For Senator, we suggest William Wolfe of La Crosse. Wilson needs Wolfe.

For Congressman be sure to reelect Michael E. Burke. Mr. Burke is one of the most faithful congressmen at Washington. His past record has proven that he is a servant of the people. It would be a mistake not to reelect Mr. Burke.

For assemblyman of Washington county, do not forget J. A. Schwabach of South Germantown. Mr. Schwabach is one of Washington county's most prominent citizens. He is a friend of the people and will without a question be a good representative in the legislature.

For Sheriff vote for John Courtney. Mr. Courtney is a man well divided in this line. Mr. Courtney resides at Hartford and the splendid endorsement given him in his home town at the primaries, shows that he is a very faithful man.

For county clerk, of course reelect Anton Thielman, a man with long experience, a man who has held his position with honor, and who is on the job all the time.

For county treasurer, reelect Anton Mueller, the "Old Reliable Treasurer." Mr. Mueller ever since holding the office of county treasurer has proven himself to be a very capable man.

For register of deeds reelect John W. Gehl of West Bend, another man Washington county can feel proud of, and a man who at all times is ready to serve the people.

For clerk of the court we have Frank Heppie of this village. Mr. Heppie is a very industrious young man and should have the support of the home town. Mr. Heppie is elected will be able to fulfill his position in a very capable manner.

For coroner, reelect Wm. Kippenhan of Wayne, a man who is well acquainted with the position he has chosen, and who has given the very best of satisfaction and judgment in everything he undertook to do.

For county surveyor elect Herman Claus. As this is one of the minor offices of the county, Mr.

Claus will give the county as good an administration as opportunity may afford.

For district attorney be sure to vote for Frank W. Bucklin, who has no opposition, but show that you have endorsed his present administration by giving him a very large popular vote.

FIVE CORNERS

Miss Lucile Harter entertained about thirty of her friends at a Halloween party Tuesday evening.

The guests were met in the dooryard by a trio of ghosts and escorted to the house. Games were played and each guest had his fortune told in the witches' cave. At midnight a four course supper was served in the dining room which was very appropriately decorated with yellow crepe paper and Jack O'Lanterns. After supper more games were played until morning as no one of the party would venture out in the dark after having met real life ghosts and witches. Even then several of the guests experienced serious difficulties in returning to their homes, as the witches had been busy during the night and stretched ropes across the road. Everyone present pronounced it a most enjoyable affair.

Which Do You Prefer?

It is important for reasons of health and practical economy for every housekeeper to ask herself this question:

"Do I prefer a pure baking powder like Royal, made of cream of tartar derived from grapes, or am I willing to use a baking powder made of alum or phosphate, both derived from mineral sources?"

The names of the ingredients printed on the label show whether the kind you are now using or any brand, new or old, that may be offered is a genuine cream of tartar powder, or merely a phosphate or alum compound.

Royal Baking Powder contains no alum nor phosphate.

L. ROSENHEIMER

Communicated

On October 28th last, I was requested by the Village Marshal of Kewaskum to appear at 10 a. m. of said day in court at the village hall to answer to the charge of operating a Ford automobile with only one license plate thereon.

In this charge I pleaded guilty emphasizing, however, that I did not, by making such plea, consider myself liable to having violated any law of this state.

As it was intimated that I was possibly operating two cars under one license by using a single license plate on each machine, I consider it my duty to vindicate myself of such charge.

In the "LIST OF AUTOMOBILE AND MOTORCYCLE OWNERS" licensed in 1916, published by the Secretary of State of Wisconsin, there is to be found in Supplement three, page 94, license No. 95683, Henry Opgenorth, Ford 20. This is the car on which the rear license plate was missing on October 28th last, as above mentioned.

In Supplement One, page 143, there appears license No. 38335, Henry Opgenorth, Kissel 36. In Supplement three page 151, you find license No. 99240 also opposite my name, Ford 20. This car is operated by Mr. J. C. Wagner of Milwaukee, a member of the Henry Opgenorth Co. In same supplement No. three page 151, is found license No. 99256, Arthur Opgenorth, Ford 20. In volume one, page 456, license No. 27809, Victor D. Opgenorth, may be found.

The foregoing are all the cars which I have anything to do, and as above set forth, they had all been licensed long before October 25th last.

In this connection I desire to state that I never operated any car myself and up to this time, I have never paid any attention to their condition.

For the benefit of the general public I will state, however, that since the missing plate was lost (my son who operated the car during the month of September and up to October 20th last, says that he noticed the loss of the plate the latter part of September) the car in question was all most daily operated on the streets of the city of Milwaukee, where, as in every other large city, in order to safeguard the public, violations of the laws relating to automobiles, are carefully watched by the police. I also had occasion to operate it during said time in the cities of Cedarburg, Port Washington and in more than 25 other cities and villages of this state, without being once held up on said account; except that on October 25th last, I was politely reminded in Milwaukee, while securing in front of a business building that my rear license plate was missing, after which I told my my people to procure another license plate.

Thank God, we are not living in Russia, where malicious prosecutions and convictions by administrative process are accepted by the people without a murmur. In this country, under the protecting folds of the stars and stripes, public officials are our servants and not our masters.

I do not wish to say, nor insinuate in the least, that the village marshal exceeded his authority in making the arrest, nor that, as it is rumored, he was inspired by unlawful outside influence. This is a matter that my hereafter be determined by the courts.

This was the first time in my life that I was ever made to appear in any court of law as a defendant and I am sorry indeed, that by entering the village of Kewaskum, Wisconsin, with one license plate displayed on my car, I so disturbed the peace and dignity of said commonwealth, in the estimation of its zealous Guardian of Law and Order, that he considered it his bounden duty to bring me before a magistrate.

Henry Opgenorth.

Captain Koenig Says the Bremen Has Been Lost.

NOT CAPTURED BY BRITISH

Commander of German Subsea Liner Declares That Sister Submarine Had an Accident—Says He Dodged Warships on Way.

New London, Conn., Nov. 2.—Grundel like a sacred thing, the undersen freighter Deutschland, commanded by Capt. Paul Koenig, with a cargo worth $10,000,000, rests in her cradle in the Thames river at the end of her second trans-Atlantic voyage, the German's proof of having beaten the British blockade.

Speaking for its owners, the captain said that, despite the fate of the Bremen, that never reached port, the fact that the Deutschland had made the voyage twice proved the feasibility of the under-water freight trade, and announced that with the early completion of the Amerika, sister ship to the Deutschland and the Bremen, there would be established a regular service from Bremen to New London, with sailings every 40 days.

It was said the Deutschland would start for Germany in a fortnight and return as soon as practicable.

Admits Bremen Is Lost.

The joy of the Germans who came here to welcome the Deutschland was dampened by the announcement brought by Captain Koenig that the Bremen had been lost at sea. He said it sailed from Bremen on August 26 and started on the English channel route to New London.

He said the German government had positive knowledge that it had been lost in an accident due either to a storm or a collision. Captain Schwartzkopf, a friend of Captain Koenig, was commander of the Bremen, which carried a cargo of dyes and chemicals and had a crew of 28 men.

"That the English have captured her," said Captain Koenig, "I can say is absolutely untrue. The Bremen was lost at sea, and that we know. She was not sunk by the enemy."

Captain Koenig said that the cargo this time was worth $10,000,000, while the first cargo was worth but $1,500,000.

It was learned on good authority that the high value of the Deutschland cargo is due to the fact that it carries a large amount in securities, as well as large consignments of precious stones. Captain Koenig said it was probable that in the supplies of drugs cached within the cargo might be some serum for the treatment of infantile paralysis.

"I know there isn't much," he said, "because it takes monkeys to produce it, and in Germany we have now no monkeys."

Captain Koenig, who was decorated five times for the way in which he took the Deutschland through her first trip, telling of the trials of the second voyage, said:

"We left Bremen in broad daylight, October 10. As soon as we got into the North sea we encountered heavy gales from the southwest. Instead of going through the English channel, as we did on our first trip, we went through the Fair Island channel, between the Orkneys and Scotland.

"We soon struck very heavy gales. Beginning with the sixth day out, and four days following, we did not make a mile of headway, but just tried to keep on our course."

"Die of you stand on end again?" was asked, referring to Captain Koenig's adventure in the English channel on his first trip.

"Only beginners do that," he replied with a smile.

"Soon after we got out of the gales we ran into foggy weather," he continued, "and for three days could not take our bearings. When we were finally able to do so we were only ten miles off our course, thanks to our gyroscopic compass. We had very little chance to use the photographs that amused us soon our first trip."

Enters Under Own Power. After giving other details of the voyage the captain said:

"It was about three o'clock in the afternoon when we glimpsed No Man's Land in hazy weather. We submerged and steered southward until we dropped anchor at the mouth of the Thames at midnight."

A few moments after anchoring, the Efo, the motorboat of the Eastern Forwarding company, was notified, and brought the health officer and Captain Hirsch of the Deutsche Ozean Reederei, owners of the Deutschland, under its own power, moved slowly up to the new state pier and made fast alongside the Eastern Forwarding company's warehouse.

On her other side by the Willehad of the North German Lloyd line, and across the mouth of the cradle thus formed was drawn a pontoon carrying a fence 20 feet high, which shut off from the crowd all view of the craft.

ROBS. MICHIGAN BANK

LONE BANDIT GETS $6,000 FROM EAU CLAIRE INSTITUTION.

Employees and Customers Stand Aside While Man Forces Cashier to Surrender Money.

Eau Claire, Mich., Nov. 2.—All alone, a bandit walked into the Eau Claire State bank yesterday afternoon, pocketed $6,000, and escaped. A posse is searching for him.

It was about 2 p. m. when a stranger appeared in the financial institution and, drawing a revolver, forced patrons and employees to stand aside. Then, going to the cashier's cage, he pointed the pistol at Vene Beckwith and demanded that he turn over all the funds at hand. This was done.

Stuffing the $6,000 in his pockets, the bandit left the building, keeping all present covered until he vanished through the doorway.

After notifying the police and sheriff, bank officials communicated with Clarence W. Tobie, superintendent of the Chicago branch of the Burns Detective agency, who, it was reported by telephone, is on his way to the scene to investigate the case. Eau Claire is eleven miles from St. Joseph.

The police at South Bend, Ind., Benton Harbor and Niles, Mich., are watching all incoming automobiles and Interurban cars for trace of the robber.

Willehad. It was decided to delay delivering the manifest of the Deutschland.

Brings Same Crew.

Captain Koenig made the harbor without a pilot and used an old English chart dated 1800. The Deutschland brought the same crew it had on its first trip except for an addition of one man and a change of two. One man quit because of seasickness and the other, said Captain Koenig, did not care for the work. All service on the Deutschland is voluntary.

Captain Koenig said that on the way over he saw nothing of the U-53, but he had heard of its exploits off the American coast before he left Bremen. He also had heard of it by way of the wireless station at Nauens.

The commander of the Deutschland said it had become a simple thing for to dodge English warships.

"You simply dive under them," he said. "I had to dodge them at least seven times coming over, but I simply submerged until they were out of sight. Altogether, however, on the way over, I submerged only for about ninety-five miles, about the same as I did on my first trip."

In addition to seeing British warships in the North sea the captain said he had seen patrol boats off Scotland and several cruisers in midocean. He said he saw a four-funnelled ship off Nantucket. He supposed it to be a warship, but could not make out an account of the fog.

"Will Be Right Back."

Asked how long he would be here, the captain replied:

"I should say that in a fortnight you will see me no more for a while, but then don't be sad, for I will be back right away."

COAL COST LAID TO ROADS

Companies File Suits in the Federal Court at Chicago Against Carriers.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Two suits were filed in the United States district court which may result in the increasing or lowering of the price of coal to the consumer. The filing of the suits reveals a shippers' and carriers' war.

The defendants in both suits are the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe and 141 other railroad companies, and their receivers.

The plaintiffs in one suit are the Clinton Coal company and ten other coal companies and in the other the Ayrdale Coal company and 16 other coal companies.

The Clinton suit is a bill in equity for an injunction requiring the return of coal cars to the Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroad for service of mines along the road. The Ayrdale suit is similar, except that it asks the return of cars to the rails of the Chicago, Terre Haute & Southern railway. Both bills are identical except for the names.

The bills set up that the defendant railroad companies have failed and refused to return coal cars to the proper lines; that cars have been wrongfully diverted and misused and confiscated, and asks that a restraining order be immediately issued, followed by a preliminary injunction, against the roads named.

TROOPS AT POLLS IN CUBA

Islanders to Elect President—Sale of Alcoholic Liquors Prohibited During Voting Hours.

Havana, Cuba, Nov. 2.—Troops were on guard here and throughout the provinces as the polls opened for the presidential elections. The crux of the contest is the attempt of the United Liberals under Gomez and Zayas to wrest the government from Monocel Conservatives and regain the power which they lost with the defeat of Zayas in 1912.

Throughout all Cuba the sale of alcoholic liquors was prohibited from midnight until Thursday. This is the first spell of dryness in the history of the republic.

SHIP IS TORPEDOED

AMERICANS ABOARD BRITISH STEAMER MARINA SUNK BY SUBMARINE.

SEVENTY OF CREW MISSING

Only Thirty-Four Survivors Are Landed at Crookhaven—United States Citizens on Rowanmore Which Was Sunk by Diver—Lifeboats Shelled.

London, Nov. 1.—The admiralty informed the American embassy that the Marina was torpedoed, but that it had not been ascertained whether warning was given.

No official information is available whether any Americans were drowned, although only 34 survivors have been landed at Crookhaven. The Marina, which was outward bound, was torpedoed twice and broke in two. It is reported that men were drowned while attempting to lower boats. Mr. Frost has been ordered to obtain all available information in regard to the Americans on the vessel. The admiralty says the Marina was not under government charter.

Only thirty-four members of the crew of 104 are known to have been picked up. They have been landed at Crookhaven, Ireland.

Lloyd's, however, reports that a steamer anchored off Crookhaven, Ireland, signals that it has picked up the ship-wrecked crew of the Marina. Mr. Frost is now procuring affidavits from survivors.

The Marina, which has been engaged in transatlantic service, was a vessel of 5,204 tons gross, built in 1890. It was last reported as arriving at Glasgow October 10, after sailing from Newport News September 21.

A report on the sinking October 26 of the British steamship Rowanmore also was made to the American embassy by Mr. Frost, who states that the vessel was torpedoed. Seven Americans, including five Filipinos, were on board the Rowanmore.

Several of them have given Mr. Frost affidavits stating that a submarine shelled lifeboats while they were being lowered and after they were clear of the ship, without causing loss of life.

Newport News, Va., Nov. 1.—At the offices of the United States Shipping company, local agents for the Donaldson line, owners of the Marina, it was stated that the Marina was not a transport in the service of the British government.

"She is one of the regular steamers plying between here and Glasgow," it was said, "and was owned and operated as a merchantman by the Donaldson line. She carried general cargo and sometimes horses for the British government, but she had not been commandeered, and still retained her character as a merchantman."

Asbury Park, N. J., Nov. 1.—President Wilson learned of the sinking of the British steamer Marina while at dinner. A request was immediately sent the state department for all details. The reply stated the character of the charter under which the vessel was operating had not been definitely determined. Until this is settled it will be known whether the submarine issue will be again raised between the United States and Germany.

Frank Galvin, in a Premier car, astonished the crowd by finishing in second place in 58:45, only eight seconds behind the winner.

Wilcox, in another Peugeot, finished third in 37:10.

Resta, who was a favorite with the crowd, led for the greater part of the race up to the 60-mile mark, where he broke the crank shaft of his car.

Vom Schauplatz des europäischen Völkerrkrieges

Selbst dem gelegentlichen Zeitungsleser muß es aufgefallen sein, das London und Paris bedeutend ruhiger geworden sind, so daß man beinahe zu der Ansicht kommen könnte, die Somme - Schlacht sei zum Abschluß gebracht worden.

Nichts wäre falscher als eine solche Annahme. Die Somme - Schlacht wird mit derselben Wut, derselben Verschwendung von kostbaren Menschenleben und demselben oft furchtlosen Drauflospressen der Artillerie fortgesetzt; aber das Blatt hat sich gewandt. Zwar befinden die Deutschen sich noch nicht beifällig in der Offensive und noch ist die Kraft der Alliierten nicht erlahmt, aber die Deutschen haben erhebliche Verstärkungen erhalten und namentlich die Artillerie ist bedeutend verstärkt worden.

Kurz nach der Einbringung der Ernte trat diese Veränderung zu Tage. Zuerst mußte der große Sieg auf Haupe erzwungen werden, der Sieg über die englischen Ausbungerungspläne, die Ernte mußte unter Dach und Dach gebracht und der Winter oder beteiligt werden. Als das geschah, warf der deutsche Vauer den Pfing und die Sense in die Ecke und griff wiederum zum Schießpulver, nicht um, wie in früheren, schönen Tagen, auf die Jagd zu gehen, sondern, um sein Vaterland gegen den vor den Toren tobenden Feind zu schützen.

Es scheint eine gesunde, urfrächtige Sippigkeit gewesen zu sein, die von den deutschen Feldern in die Schützengräben zog, denn seitdem sie da sind, haben Briten und Franzosen, Russen und Rumänen zu liegen aufgehört. Am meisten hatten die Briten unter diesen für Deutschland günstigen Umständen zu leiden. Sie sind, darüber besteht kein Zweifel, der gefährlichste Feind, was Zahl und Fähigkeit anbelangt, und die Entlohnung des Somme - Schlacht hatte es gefügt, daß gerade ihre Front, die britische, dem deutschen Gegenstoß am stärksten preisgegeben war. Bis Combes und etwas darüber hinaus hatte man die Alliierten vorstoßen lassen, dann wurde dem Vorstoß ein stählerner, anscheinend unzerbrechlicher Riegel vorgehoben. Die britische Front nach Norden hin war in etwa 22 Kilometer (von Dieppe bis bis Combes) lang geworden, eine solche Angriffsfläche für die auf der Linie südwestlich von Vauxonne hart verhassten Deutschen. In den drei und einhalb Monaten, die es Briten und Franzosen nahm, bis Combes vorgedrungen, hatten die Deutschen mehr als genügende Zeit gefunden, sich auf der nördlichen Flanke der Briten einzunisten. Die nachfolgenden Ereignisse haben das bewiesen.

Obgleich sie immer wieder neue Menschenmatten und neue Schiffsladungen von Munition gegen die deutschen Reihen schleuderten, sie schwanzten und wichen nicht. In unermesslichen Strömen floß britisches Blut, nahezu 4,000 Mann wurden alle zwölf Stunden aus ihren Reihen ausgeschieden.

Bei Sailly brachen die Briten sechsmal vor, aber alle diese Vorstöße brachen unter den schwersten blutigen Verlusten zusammen. Die deutsche Infanterie kam aus ihren Unterständen und aus den Granatrichtern, in welchen sie den Angriff abgewartet hatte, rasch das Gewehr an die Schulter und machte den fürmenden Gegner in aufrechter Stellung im Maschinen- und Gewehrfeuer nieder.

Offenbar hatte sich der Gegner der Hoffnung hingeben, daß seine enorme artilleristische Tätigkeit seiner Infanterie den Weg zu einem leichten Siege öffnen würde, und das erfuhr auch, warum die Infanterie in geschloffenen Reihen vorging, wobei sechs bis zehn Sturmwellen aufeinander folgten.

Unter diesen Sturmwellen waren Reihen aufgestellt, welche von Offizieren zu Pferde geführt wurden, was gar nicht zu erklären wäre, wenn der Feind nicht absolut überzeugt gewesen wäre, daß die deutsche Infanterie unter dem gewaltigen Feuer vernichtet werden sei. Unter Surren und Gefährt wählten sich die Reihen einen, wie sie glaubten, sicheren und leichten Sieg entgegen.

Es wird mehr und mehr wahrscheinlich, daß sich der Feind an dieser unerklärlichen Front ebenso verhalten wird, wie es mit den Russen bereits an der galizischen Front der Fall war.

Neuzeit Quadranten von den 10,000, die sie nehmen müssen, um die Deutschen aus Frankreich zu vertreiben, haben die Alliierten in den vier Monaten ihrer verlustreichen Offensive genommen. Nur 9,910 weitere Quadranten sind zu nehmen übrig, und doch gibt es noch Leute, die an den Sieg der Alliierten glauben.

An der östlichen Front haben die Russen ihre Angriffe nicht wieder erneuert. Diese Latlosigkeit auf russischer Seite ist ein stummer Beweis für die unerbittliche Nichtigkeit der deutschen Politik, in der die Verluste der Russen auf eine Million Menschen geschätzt werden. Und hier man, in der Gestalt von Demetris, wiederum von russischen Separatfriedens - Wünschen. Ob vielleicht doch etwas wahres daran ist? Vor einiger Zeit hieß es, Rußland sei im August zum Separatfrieden bereit gewesen, habe aber wieder Hoffnungen geschöpft, als Rumänen in den Krieg eintrat. Heute schon, nach kaum zweiwöchentlichen Kriegsführung, ist Rußland keine Hilfe mehr, sondern eine Bürde, die auf Rußlands schon schwer belasteten Schultern ruht.

Alliierte bestehen auf ihr Recht die Zeit zu rauben.

Washington. Die Antwort Frankreichs und Großbritanniens auf die amerikanischen Forderungen betreffs Einmischung leitens der genannten Länder in den Vorkriegs auf hoher See und der gegenwärtigen Verschleppung von Postdampfern nach britischen Häfen, ist eine unverschlüsselte Abweisung aller Behauptungen und Forderungen des Staatsdepartements.

Die Note giebt im Prinzip die Unverletzlichkeit der Vöj, wie im internationalen Gesetz niedergelegt, an, spricht ihr dieselbe aber in der Praxis ab. England wie Frankreich behaupten ein Recht zu haben amerikanische Post in insizieren, während sie nach Konstantinopel jagen.

Die zwei verbündeten Regierungen beanspruchen das Recht neutraler Postschiffe zu ihren Kurs nach alliierten Häfen zu bringen zum Zweck, die Postschiffe zu unteruchen, zensurieren oder zu konfiszieren. Dieser Anspruch wurde wiederholt von den Vereinten Staaten abgewiesen, nicht allein betreffs von Post sondern auch von Kargos.

Das einzige Zugeständnis, welches die beiden Regierungen machen, ist in folgendem Passus der Note enthalten:

"Betreffs Versendung von Dokumenten und Korrespondenzen, welche auf neutralen Schiffen und selbst in Häfen der Alliierten gefunden werden und in keinem Zusammenhang mit dem Kriege stehen, haben die alliierten Regierungen die Behörden angewiesen, solche Schriftstücke nicht aufzuhalten, sondern dieselbe womöglich ohne Verzug weiterzubefördern."

Schließlich erklären die alliierten Regierungen in einem weiteren Passus sich bereit, für Schäden, welcher durch Inspektion von Postschiffen aus Versehen entstanden, später aufzukommen.

The DESTROYING ANGEL

By Louis Joseph Vance

CAN YOU SOLVE LOVE'S PUZZLE?

What is love, anyhow? Is it, in the case of husband and wife, respect and admiration of certain spiritual qualities? Or, in your experience, is it pure physical attraction between a certain man and a certain woman—with respect and admiration as side lights?

Do you believe that an intelligent woman would love enough to live with him, the man who years previously had married her just to save her good name as a girl and then had disappeared? That is the problem confronting Sara Law, the great actress, in "The Destroying Angel."

Hugh Whitaker, you remember, was given just six months to live, by eminent surgeons. He discovered a decent young woman in trouble—her honor at stake. "One good deed before I go," he said; "I'll marry this frightened child, and give her my respectable name. Then I'll go off somewhere and wait for the end." This he did—and five years later turned up in New York from Australia, prosperous and healthy, and started a hunt for the girl-wife of other days.

He discovers her in Sara Law, and mutual recognition across the footlights stops a play. Martin Ember, former detective, comes to Whitaker and tells amazing facts. A big mystery looms in this installment.

"And you found her and told Drummond?"

Whitaker leaned over the table, studying the man's face with intense interest.

"No—and yes. I found Mrs. Whitaker. I didn't report to Drummond."

"But why—in heaven's name?"

Ember smiled somberly at the drooping ash of his cigar. "There were several reasons. In the first place I didn't have to: I had asked no retainer from Drummond, and I rendered no bill; what I had found out was mine, to keep or to sell, as I chose. I chose not to sell because—well, because Mrs. Whitaker begged me not to."

"Ah!" Whitaker breathed, sitting back. "Why?"

"This was all of a year, I think, after your marriage. Mrs. Whitaker had tasted the sweets of independence and—got the habit. She had adopted a profession looked upon with abhorrence by her family. She was already successful in a small way, had little need of the money she would get as claimant of your estate. She enlisted my sympathy, and—I held my tongue."

"That was decent of you."

The man bowed a quiet acknowledgment. "I thought you'd think so."

"There was a third reason."

He paused, until Whitaker encouraged him with a "Yes—?"

"Mr. Whitaker—the gray came point-blank—"do you love your wife?"

Whitaker caught his breath. "What right—" he began, and checked abruptly. The blood darkened his lean cheeks.

"Mrs. Whitaker gave me to understand that you didn't. It wasn't hard to perceive, everything considered, that your motive was pure chivalry—quite altruistic. I should like to go to my grave with anything half as honorable and unselfish to my credit."

"I beg your pardon," Whitaker muttered thickly.

"You don't, then?"

"Love her? No."

There was a slight pause. Then, "I do," said this extraordinary man, meeting Whitaker's gaze openly. "I do," he repeated, flushing in his turn, "but . . . hopelessly . . . However, that was the third reason," he pursued in a more level voice—"I thought you ought to know about it—that induced me to keep Sara Law's secret. . . . I loved her from the day I found her. She has never looked twice at me. . . . But that's why I never lost interest."

"You mean," Whitaker took him up diffidently—"you continued to—ah—?"

"Court her—as we say? No." Ember's shoulders, lifting, emphasized the disclaimer. "I'm 50 folk. I have had the sense not to invite the thunderbolt. She doesn't know it, unless Max told her against my wish; but it was I who induced him to bring her before the public, four years ago, as Joan Thurston. . . . Since then her destiny has been rather too big a thing for me to tamper with; but I've watched and wondered, sensing forces at work about her of which even she was unconscious."

"What in blazes do you mean?" Whitaker demanded, mystified.

"Did it strike you to wonder at the extraordinary mob her farewell performance attracted tonight?"

"Why—yes. It struck me as rather unusual. But then, Max had done nothing but tell me of her tremendous popularity."

"That alone, great as it is, wouldn't have brought so many people together to stare at the outside of a theater. The magnet was something stronger—the morbid curiosity of New York. Those people were waiting, thrilled with expectancy, on tiptoe for the sensation that presently came to them: the report of Drummond's death."

"What the devil—?"

"Patience! This is the third time it has happened—the same thing, practically. Sara Law on the verge of leaving the stage to marry, a fatal accident intervening. Did Max by any chance mention the nickname New York has bestowed on Sara Law?"

"Nickname? No?"

"They call her 'The Destroying Angel.'"

"What rot!"

"Yes; but what coincidence. Three men loved her—and one by one they died. And now the fourth. Do you wonder . . .?"

"Oh, but—"The Destroying Angel!" Whitaker cried indignantly. "How can they blame her?"

"It isn't blame—it's superstition. Listen . . ."

Ember bent forward, gliding Whitaker's gaze with intent, grave eyes. "The first time," he said in a rapid undertone, "was a year or so after her triumph as Joan Thurston. There were then two men openly infatuated with her, a boy named Custer, and a man I believe you knew—William Hamilton."

"I knew them both."

"Custer was making the pace; the announcement of his engagement to Sara Law was confidently anticipated. He died suddenly; the coroner's jury decided that he had misjudged the intentions of a loaded revolver. People whispered a suicide, but it didn't look quite like that to me. However . . . Hamilton stepped into his place. Presently we heard that Sara Law was to marry him and leave the stage. Hamilton had to go abroad on business; on the return trip—the wedding was set for the day after he landed here—he disappeared, no one knew how. Presumably he fell overboard by accident one night; same men with everything in the world to live for do such things, you know—according to the newspapers."

"I understand you. Please go on."

"Approximately eighteen months later a man named Thurston—Mitchell Thurston—was considered a dangerous aspirant for the hand of Sara Law. He was exceedingly well fixed in a money way—a sort of dilettante architect, with offices in the Metropolitan tower. One day at high noon he left his desk to go to lunch at Martin's; crossing Madison square, he suddenly fell dead, with a bullet in his brain. It was a rifle bullet, but though the square was crowded, no one had heard the report of the shot, and no one was seen carrying a rifle. The conclusion was that he had been shot by somebody using a gun with a Maxim silencer, from a window on the south side of the square. There were no clues."

"And now Drummond?" Whitaker exclaimed in horror. "Poor fellow! Poor woman!"

A slightly sardonic expression modified the lines of Ember's mouth. "So far as Mrs. Whitaker is concerned," he said with the somewhat pedantic mode of speech which Whitaker was to learn to associate with his moments of most serious concentration—"I echo the sentiment. But let us suspend judgment on Drummond's case until we know more. It is not as yet an established fact that he is dead."

"You mean there's hope—?"

"There's doubt," Ember corrected acidly—"doubt, at least, in my mind. You see, I saw Drummond in the flesh, alive and vigorous, a good half hour after he is reported to have leaped to his death."

"Where?"

"Coming up the stairs from the downtown subway station in front of the Park Avenue hotel. He wore a hat pulled down over his eyes and an old overcoat buttoned tight up to his chin. He was carrying a satchel bearing the initials C. S. D., but was otherwise pretty thoroughly disguised, and I fancied, anxious enough to escape recognition."

"You're positive about this?"

"The man was Carter S. Drummond. I don't think I can be mistaken."

"Which way did he go?"

"Toward the Pennsylvania station. I fancy; that is, he turned west through Thirty-third street. I didn't follow—I was getting into taxi when I caught sight of him."

"But what did you think to see him disguised? Didn't it strike you as curious?"

"Very," said Ember dryly. "At the same time, it was none of my affair—then. Nor did it present itself to me as a matter worth meddling with until, later, my suspicions were aroused by the scene in the theater—obviously the result of your appearance there—and still later, when I heard the suicide report."

"But—" Whitaker passed a hand across his dazed eyes. "What can it mean? Why should he do this thing?"

"There are several possible explanations. . . . How long has Drummond known that you are alive?"

"Since noon today."

"May I ask, what was the extent of your property in his trust?"

"A couple of hundred thousands."

"And he believed you dead and was unable to find your wife?"

"Oh, I don't think that." Whitaker expostulated.

"Nor do I. We're merely considering possible explanations. There's a third . . ."

"Well?"

"He may have received a strong hint that he was nominated for the fat job that overtook young Custer, Hamilton and Thurston; and so planned to give his disappearance the color of a similar end."

"You don't mean to say you think there was any method in that train of tragedies?"

"I'm not in the least superstitious, my dear man. I don't for an instant believe, as some people claim to, that Sara Law is a destroying angel, hounded by a tragic fate; that her love is equivalent to the death warrant of the man who wins it."

"But what do you think, then?"

"I think," said Ember slowly, his gaze on the table, "that someone with a very strong interest in keeping the young woman single—and on the stage—"

"Max! Impossible!"

Ember shrugged. "In human nature no madness is impossible. There's not a shred of evidence against Jules Max. And yet—he's a gambler. All theatrical managers are, of course; but Max is a card-fiend. The tale of his plunging runs like wildfire up and down Broadway, day by day. A dozen times he's been on the verge of ruin, yet always he has had Sara Law to rely upon; always he's been able to fall back upon that asset, sure that her popularity would save off bankruptcy. And he's superstitious; he believes she is his mascot. I don't accuse him—I suspect him, knowing him to be capable of many weird extravaganzas. . . . Furthermore, it's a fact that Max was a fellow-passenger with Billy Hamilton when the latter disappeared in midocean."

Ember paused and sat up, preparatory to rising. "All of which," he concluded, "explains why I have repressed upon your patience and your privacy. It seemed only right that you should get the straight, undistorted story from an unprejudiced onlooker. May I venture to add a word of advice?"

"By all means."

"Have you told Max of your relations with Sara Law?"

"No."

"Or anybody else?"

"No."

"Then keep the truth to yourself—at least until this coil is straightened out."

Ember got up. "Good night," he said pleasantly.

Whitaker took his hand, staring. "Good night," he echoed blankly. "But—I say—why keep it quiet?"

Ember, turning to go, paused, his glance quietly quizzical. "You don't mean to elude your wife?"

"On the contrary, I expect to offer no defense to her action for divorce."

"Grounds of desertion?"

"I presume so."

"Just the same, keep it as quiet as possible until the divorce is granted. If you live till then . . . you may possibly continue to live thereafter."

"What is your opinion of this Drummond suicide report? Do you believe the man is dead—if he isn't, why the effort to create the suicide impression? Is Drummond a thief or a madman?"

Frank Wilmarth of Sun Prairie is the 1916 champion boy farmer of Wisconsin, and Miss Helen Hatch of Lake Geneva is the 1916 champion girl farmer of Wisconsin. By attaining these honors each wins $100 in gold given by Frederick D. Underwood, president of the Erie railroad and owner of Fed-acres farm, Wauwatosa.

Prof. Thomas L. Bewick of the University of Wisconsin, superintendent of the boys and girls' department of the state fair, has completed his records of 1916 awards, determining state and county champions and state club winners, and it is upon these records that Wilmarth and Miss Hatch win their coveted honors.

The six winners of county championship prizes are: First, Richard Ryan, Dane; second, George Marwin, Milwaukee; third, Laurie Nourse, Bayfield; fourth, Thomas Carlidge, Sauk; fifth, Roger Taylor, Waukesha; sixth, Christian Conrad, La Crosse. Those prizes, short course agricultural scholarships at University of Wisconsin, are given by the M. and M. association of Milwaukee.

Thomas Carlidge was the 1915 Wisconsin champion boy farmer who won a trip to the Panama-Pacific exposition.

The three full-blood Guernsey bull calves given by George W. Browne, Briard Ripple farms, Waukesha, for stock judging were won as follows: First, Onalaska agricultural school; second, Pewaukee high school; third, Mukwonago school.

The prize of $100 in gold given by the Wisconsin Bankers' association for the champion club was won by the Lynx club of Walworth county.

Special prizes for the best school and club exhibits were won as follows: Corn, Sun Prairie school; potatoes, Rydfield high school; calf, Onalaska agricultural school; pig, Sun Prairie school; poultry, Sun Prairie school; garden, Bayfield high school; canning, Belle Canning club, Burlington; sewing, Jolly Dozen club, Elkhorn.

Tax Levy Increased.

The state tax levy for 1916 amounts to $4,579,758, according to the figures of the department of state. This amount, which is annually levied in October and collected in January and February, is larger than the 1915 levy by $149,022.

The following amounts are included in the levy for the various funds, most of them for education: Common schools, $2,198,758; university, $1,285,048; graded schools, $200,000; normal schools, $571,132; interest on certificates of indebtedness, $148,820; free high schools, $175,000, and for general purposes, $1,000.

Buttermakers to Meet.

Eau Claire.—R. Carswell of St. Paul, formerly of Menomonie, secretary of the Northwestern Wisconsin Buttermakers' association, who was a visitor in the city, said that plans are being made for the annual meeting of the association to be held in Eau Claire some time during the coming January, the exact dates yet to be decided upon. The state meeting this year is to be held at Sparta on December 3, 4 and 5. The meeting of the national association will be held at Minneapolis on November 14, 15 and 16.

Y. M. C. A. also will be a part of the building.

Tribute to State Highway Board.

A striking tribute to the efficiency and economy of the Wisconsin state highway department is found in a report just received by the Good Roads association from Wisconsin, from the United States department of agriculture. This report is just off the press and discusses state highway mileage and expenditures for the calendar year 1915.

An analysis of the report has just been issued by the publicity department of the State Good Roads association. Some interesting facts are set forth therein.

Analysing the engineering and administrative costs of the 11 states which spend $3,000,000 or over under the direction of state highway commissions, it is found that this cost in the state of Wisconsin is 1.94 per cent, being lower than all the other states except Michigan, which is 1.5 per cent. Under the Michigan system, however, a large part of the engineering and administrative cost is borne by the counties and hence it may be stated that the Wisconsin highway commission is administered more economically, that is, the cost of engineering and administration is less than any other state in the Union. New York tops the list with an administrative cost of 9.6 per cent. Massachusetts is second with 7.7 per cent. Pennsylvania third with 6.4 per cent, and then follow Minnesota, 4.9 per cent; Maryland, 4 per cent; Ohio, 2.2 per cent, and Michigan and Wisconsin as above indicated. The average engineering and administrative cost of all these states is 5.2 per cent, compared with 1.94 per cent in Wisconsin.

Some other interesting features are detailed by the analysis. During the past 12 years the annual expenditures on rural roads and bridges in the United States has increased from about $18,000,000 to $282,000,000, an increase of over 1,500 per cent. During the same period the annual state aid for road and bridge construction and maintenance has increased from $2,550,000 to $53,492,000, or almost 2,000 per cent. As the analysis says, it means that efficient road construction is demanding a larger unit. As showing the growth of state supervision in 1904 state aid and control of highways and bridges prevailed in only 11 states. In 1916 all but four states, Georgia, Indiana, South Carolina and Texas, had some form of a state highway department.

Another striking feature is that in 1904 practically all of the state funds were applied to road construction not to exceed 3 per cent being devoted to maintenance. In 1915, about $8,000,000, or 30 per cent, was applied to maintenance.

State's Expenditures Reduced.

Figures indicating that the cost of administration by the various state activities, commissions, boards and bureaus has been considerably reduced in the past year are contained in the annual report of State Treasurer Henry Johnson.

Treasurer Johnson's report shows that the net disbursements of the state for the year ending June 30, 1916, were $15,218,205.50, as compared with $15,980,063.32 for the year ending June 30, 1915, a difference in favor of 1916 of $761,857.82.

In a paragraph preceding the statement of receipts and expenditures of the general fund, Treasurer Johnson explains that the sources from which that fund is derived are the annual tax school, graded schools, charitable and penal institutions, a tax on civil actions, railroad taxes, plank-road taxes, street-railway taxes, telephone taxes, street licenses, trust-company taxes, boom-company taxes, hawkers' and peddlers' licenses, notary-public fees, taxes on legacies, sales of books, interest on deposits in state banks and the appropriation by the federal government for the Wisconsin Veterans' home at Waupaca. The receipts for this fund for the year ending June 30, 1916, were $10,858,209.98, and the expenditures $11,969,947.93. At the beginning of that year there was a balance on hand of $3,211,464.24, and at the end of the year, June 30, 1916, the balance was $2,089,728.29.

The report that the bonded debt of the state, which dates back to 1861-63 and which was created for war purposes now amounts to $2,151,000, $100,000 less than a year ago.

Tax Levy Increased.

The state tax levy for 1916 amounts to $4,579,758, according to the figures of the department of state. This amount, which is annually levied in October and collected in January and February, is larger than the 1915 levy by $149,022.

The following amounts are included in the levy for the various funds, most of them for education: Common schools, $2,198,758; university, $1,285,048; graded schools, $200,000; normal schools, $571,132; interest on certificates of indebtedness, $148,820; free high schools, $175,000, and for general purposes, $1,000.

When he returned home, peeling handsomely from sunburn, his first question was: "You got all my cards, I hope?"

"All twelve, Wingham," she replied. "The views of that wave were lovely and I appreciated the handwriting as much as ever, and the dates were all put in beautifully, but still—"

"Yes, Malina?"

"Well, you must have given them to an awful duffer to post for you to say you the trouble. He posted them all on one day, just as you wrote them, and I got the whole lot two days after you left."

Excusing himself, Wingham called a taxicab and rode 15 miles out into the country and sat on a fence with his thoughts.

Style--Quality--Value

These three words are descriptive and indicative of the coats and suits that HILLS are showing this season but every season. However this year they are even better than ever.

Never before were suits modeled along such attractive lines. They are neater than they have been for the past several seasons. The materials are better and the lines are better. And in spite of the fact that the price of materials are soaring, suits still remain about the same.

Coats this year are also especially attractive. The coat this year is more of an all purpose coat than has ever been in use before. We have chosen our stock from among the best that the New York market has to offer and we know that here you can find what you want.

And yet Chesterfields are MILD—that's the point.

No other cigarette can give you this new enjoyment (satisfy yet mild) because no cigarette maker can copy the Chesterfield blend.

WILLIAM F. WOLFE

Democratic Candidate for United States Senator

For the office of United States Senator, the Democrats of Wisconsin have nominated a man of the highest caliber—who if elected will bring honor and credit to his native state, Wisconsin, and prove a fearless champion of the policies of President Wilson in that branch of Congress.

An attorney by profession, a natural born orator of power, force and eloquence and a man easily approached by his fellow men, William F. Wolfe possesses the qualifications which make him the man of all men in the state who is needed at this time of terrible uncertainty to our country, which is undergoing an ordeal such as has not been experienced since the days of the Civil war.

Wisconsin needs a man like Wolfe in Washington, a man of sterling qualities and unwavering devotion to the cause of his country—a man of highly intellectual ability who never learned the word "Fear."

The Democrats of Wisconsin also need Wolfe at Washington to help President Wilson fight the moral battles of America and to aid him in the struggle he is making to maintain peace, prosperity and happiness among his people.

William F. Wolfe was born on a farm near Appleton, Wis. He was educated in the schools of that city and later graduated from the University of Wisconsin. A few years later he received a law degree from the same University. Prior to obtaining a law degree he was actively engaged in the field of Journalism throughout the various states.

He finally settled in La Crosse, Wis., where he became actively engaged in the practice of his profession and after a few years built up one of the largest law practices in that city.

A man of Wolfe's ability could not be kept on the lower rung of the ladder and La Crosse was not slow in recognizing his merit and unusual ability.

He was city attorney for four years and during that period a business administration was adopted, the effects of which are still apparent in La Crosse.

Mr. Wolfe has been a candidate for attorney general on the Democratic ticket and was a delegate at large at the National convention of 1912. He served on the committee of resolutions at that convention and was a delegate at large also at the convention of 1916. He has taken active part in the speaking campaigns for the Democratic party since 1888 and had charge of the headquarters of the Woodrow Wilson Primary campaign in Milwaukee four years ago.

THOMAS H. RYAN

Democratic Candidate for Attorney General

For its candidate as attorney-general, the Democratic party has selected one of the most prominent and capable attorneys in the state, whose legal record is such that no question as to his fitness for office can be raised upon that score.

Thomas Henry Ryan of Appleton is known throughout the legal fraternity of Wisconsin as an attorney of high character, exceptional ability and polished eloquence. His training has been all that one could desire.

Born January 21, 1867, in the town of Buchanan, Outagamie county, he attended district schools in that town. Later he entered Ryan high school at Appleton in September, 1884, and was graduated from that institution June, 1887. He then entered the University of Wisconsin in the fall of 1887, and was graduated from there June 16, 1891. He entered the law school of the university in the fall of 1891, finishing June 17, 1892. After leaving school he located in Appleton July 5, 1892. During the years of 1897, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1906 and 1907, he was city attorney of Appleton, which position he filled until 1907, when he was elected to the position of Municipal Judge for four years, being the first Municipal Judge of Outagamie county. He was re-elected without any opposition in 1911 for another term of four years. At the expiration of his term in 1915, he refused again to be a candidate, having decided to enter the law firm of Ryan, Cary & Frank in the city of Appleton.

AT THE RACES.

Redd—That fellow over there was just talking about the horses. Do you know him?
Greene—Oh, yes, well.
"How do you know he's up on the ponies?"
"Why, he's a college graduate."
"What's that got to do with his knowing the ponies?"
"Why, he's a graduate of a veterinary college."

Before and After.

"My dear," said Mrs. Wederly to what she drew in the matrimonial lottery, "what is the difference between idealism and realism?"
"Idealism," answered Wederly, "is what we experienced during our courtship."
"Yes," she gurgled, "and realism?"
"Oh," he replied, "that is what we are up against at the present writing." Whereupon the cat got up and left the room in disgust.

"Oh—wirra, wirra!" cried the poor woman, bursting into tears. "We niver mition pore Biddy's name anny more, na'am. She married beayth her. She run off wit wan o' thim lizards iv the Smart Set!"—Judge.

A Happy Thought.

"At the last moment Mrs. Gadders discovered that there were only 13 guests for dinner."

"My! That would never do."
"Certainly not, but that woman has a head on her shoulders!"
"How did she solve the difficulty?"
"She placed her poodle in the chair of the absent guest."

Just Half Enough.

"My boy!" said the man of millions, "why is it that you can't pay your bills on an allowance of $10,000 a year?"
"Well, dad," replied the gilded youth, "I presume that's because a year contains twelve months, instead of six."

Consoling.

His Wife—John, dear, did you get any consolation from the minister's sermon this morning?
Her Husband—You bet I did. I was made to realize that I might be a whole lot worse than I am.

ACCOUNTED FOR.

Hubby—That new cook I secured is certainly quiet. One would never know she was about the place.
Wife—She isn't. She left this morning.

"Who is that pompous looking old gentleman?"
"That's Mr. Grabcohn. He donated $100 to relieve war sufferers in Europe and expects to be consulted when peace terms are made."

Not Quite Clear.

Diggs—What salary do you get?
Biggs—One hundred and fifty per.
Diggs—Per week or per-haps?

BURT WILLIAMS

Democratic Candidate for Governor

Burt Williams the Democratic candidate for Governor was born at Berlin, Wis., and received his preliminary education in the country schools surrounding that city. He afterwards graduated from the High School of Berlin, and takes pride in the fact that the Wisconsin public schools were his only educational opportunity and training. Shortly afterwards, he entered the newspaper field and eventually became publisher of the Ashland Daily News.

He was elected mayor of Ashland in 1901 and held office for three successive terms. Although Ashland is a strong Republican city, he was elected mayor the first time on the Democratic ticket by a vote of three to one, and the next time was nominated by both Republican and Democratic parties. His administrations became known all over the state, because of the fights carried against public service corporations, and those to compel the big lumber companies of that section to pay taxes on the basis of other property owners.

Williams was a candidate for the Assembly in 1902 and for Congress and Lieutenant Governor in 1906. While a candidate for Congress, all the delegates to the Central Labor Council at Ashland including Democrats, Republicans and Socialists, signed a public statement urging all laboring men to support the candidacy of Williams, their action being based on the attitude he had maintained in fighting for the labor cause in Ashland as mayor and as a newspaper man. He has been president of the Wisconsin league of Municipalities and was publisher of the Wisconsin Municipality Magazine for two years, when President Wilson appointed him United States Internal Revenue Collector for the Western District of Wisconsin.

Williams has always been active in advancing the cause of good roads, better rural education and more interest in agricultural training in city and country schools. He is a member of a number of fraternal organizations and was one of the active organizers of the Wisconsin Order of Elks.

SURGEONS IN SEA BATTLE

Herculean Tasks That Were Faced in Great Naval Fight Off Jutland Bank.

"During the battle of Jutland bank the naval surgeons performed a terrible task," writes the medical correspondent of the London Times. He tells of the sudden emergency that confronted them, and the hasty transfer of stores and equipment from the sick bays above the armor to the fore and aft distributing stations below it. "Soon in their station," he continues, "they heard the booming of guns, and soon there crept down to them the fumes of the exploding charges. From that time the stations became the scenes of fierce and terrible activity. The doctors' rooms at the very moment when the streams of wounded began to flow down to them, adding suffocation to the thousand other perils of the work. The ship reeled under pounding blows, she staggered in a difficult sea; the concussion of her guns was so great as to preclude the possibility of adequate surgical assistance. Wearing gas masks, the doctors did what they could, bending their energies selflessly to the great task, as is the tradition of their calling.

"In another ship an enemy shell destroyed the aft station utterly so that the whole work of relief fell on the remaining forward one. Hour after hour, without rest of time or exhaustion, the staff labored to undertake its great task. Another ship was holed and had her electric light cut off. The medical station was in darkness; it was foul with the gas fumes from the enemy shells, water poured in by the holes in the vessel's side. Here, single-handed, a young naval surgeon tolled by the light of an electric torch until he was ordered to get his wounded away because the ship was sinking. And this task he achieved so well that not a life was lost. The doctors witnessed strange scenes during these hours, and perhaps the strangest of all was that which followed the announcement that a German ship had gone down, for then all the wounded, including the man on the operating table, began to cheer."

Unsatistactory.
The old farmer was looking over a comic paper the storekeeper at the crossroads emporium had given him. "I don't think much of this paper no how, by grass!" he remarked.
"What's th' matter with it?" queried his good wife.
"They ain't nothin' in it much but picketers," replied the old granger, "an' most uv them ain't so."

Had Never Had One.
"Would you consider me presumptuous if I asked you for a kiss?" inquired the new arrival in the hospital.
"That depends," replied the nurse.
"Have you fallen in love with me?"
"Can't say that I have in this short time. But I've never had a sterilized kiss."

Privilege of Tenants.
Redd—The newest office building feature is a garage for the accommodation of tenants.
Greene—That means if a person hasn't a car of his own he can go down to the garage and smell the gasoline belonging to the other fellow.

Melodrama.
"Is this what you would call a gripping play?"
"Most assuredly. The villain chokes the heroine and the hero chokes the villain off and on for nearly three hours."

Eggs-actly.
Myer—There is a little hamlet in Ohio in which the hens produce an average of 20,000 eggs daily.
Gyer—Twenty thousand eggs daily! Say, that town isn't a hamlet—it's an omelet.

ON PINE MOUNTAIN

Pathos of Conditions in Corner of Unknown America.

Kentucky Mountaineer's Yearning to Obtain Advantages for His Motherless Brood of Seven Children Related by Woman of Settlement School.

The searching pathos of conditions in a small corner of what might be termed Unknown America is mirrored in a communication received by the National Geographic Magazine from Miss Ethel De Long of the executive committee of the Pine Mountain Settlement school, Pine Mountain, Harlan County, Kentucky. Striking indeed is this picture given by the correspondent in her simple yet supremely sympathetic recital of the paternal yearning of a white Kentucky mountaineer to obtain educational advantages for his motherless brood of seven:

"A man has just walked in from Big Creek, thirty miles away, to try to enter all of his seven children in our school. He would not leave only the older one, because as he said, 'If I part 'em while they're little fellers, they won't have no feelin's fer each other when they're raised. I want ye to take 'em all or none. Hit was their mammy's last wish that I keep 'em together. I'll jest do fer 'em myself the best I ken, if you can't take 'em all."

"He brought with him an irresistible appeal, a word picture of the seven, and his tale of how he had 'keered' for them. Thirty-four years old, worn, stooped, toothless, he has made a gallant fight to raise his children right. He mentioned the children's clothes. 'I've made 'em all,' he said. 'I couldn't hire nobody to sew fer 'em, so I jest made 'em everyting they wear, myself. I've washed fer 'em, I've tended 'em, an' I've gone out in the cornfield to work fer 'em. I've raised 'em as right as I know, but I can't do fer 'em lak I ought."

"I get right sick with the phthisis, and I've studied about what would happen to 'em if I was to be tuk off from 'em. When I have to go away from 'em to earn a little money, hit's sech a dread on me, les' they git burned up at night, s'posin' the house should ketch fire, an' little fellers allus so sleepy-headed at layin'-down time. Sometimes I'm afraid to go home."

"Why didn't you marry again?" I asked, 'so as to get help in raising your children?"

"Tears came into his eyes, 'Hit's best fer little younguns to hav' jest one mammy, an' s'posin' I'd thought to help 'em a-marryin' again, I might a got 'em in a mighty bad state."

"If we take the children, are you going to marry again?" said I.

"No'm, I'm done with marryin'. I jest want my younguns raised right, whilst I'm a tryin' to make the money fer 'em."

"You see, we don't want children whose parents want to get rid of them," said I, "but those whose parents want them to have a good chance."

"Yes," he said, I know. That's the reason I want 'em here. You want younguns whose parents has got diligence and with innards to raise 'em toward humanity. Yes, I'll pay ye all I can make fer 'em, ef ye'll jes' raise 'em right. I've raised 'em to work. I've worked myself. I begun when I was seven, an' I couldn't git much education. In my raisin'-up hit was one day in school and the next day out; one week in school an' the next week out. I want 'em to git a chance to make their livin's—to live, an' not to be bowed under lak I've been."

"No, they don't sw'ar, ner cuss; an' they hain't got no mean ways when they're in my sight. I've brought ye a recommendation from folks that met ye when ye come through Big Creek five or six years ago."

"We were moved with compassion, although our annual pledges must be multiplied four-fold to care for the sixty children we already have, besides the seven 'little fellers,' from the 'chunk of a girl jes' goin' on five' to the fifteen-year-old boy who has hoed corn all summer.
"How could we resist those faces and the patient father who had done the best he 'knowed?' We told him to bring them, all seven. An hour ago he started back on his long thirty miles to make the children ready."

Wonderful Drilling Machine.
A remarkable example of concentrated labor saving is the new multiple-spindle drilling machine that at one operation drills the 46 holes required in an automobile transmission case. The holes vary in size from 3-16 to 27-18 inch and some are on an angle, but all are drilled in two or three minutes, although the work formerly required five different machines and involved seven different operations. A 25-horse power motor at the rear drives the main shaft. This is connected to the horizontal heads by steel gears and cloth pinions, and to the vertical head by beveled gears and correct spindle speeds are obtained through gear reductions in oil-tight boxes on the head.

Might Have Been Worse.
Helen asked her grandfather to hold her candy while she went into the house. Since it was a warm day, the candy melted a little in his hand.

Basis of Prosperity in Common Schools

"The basis of both prosperity and Democracy lies in our common schools. The Democratic party charges the present administration with bad faith in reference to our educational system. Fair promises have been constantly made for the improvement of the schools of the people and especially the rural schools, but these promises have not been kept or else fragmentary and inefficient legislation has been enacted as a sop to public opinion. Nothing can be expected in the way of a popular education widely diffused over the state, reaching every farm and every factory with the Republican party in control. Its professed interest is in a higher education in privately endowed institutions unrelated to the pressing social problems of the day. It would have millionaires control and finance the great educational interests of the state. Special privileges would be entrenched in our education system, eating out the very vitals of our democracy. Whatever it has stood for in the past, nothing can be expected from the reactionary Republican party now seeking office in this state. We, the party of the whole people, pledge ourselves to work unceasingly to the end that education will be offered to every boy and girl in the state, whether poor or rich, whether in the crowded sections of our cities or among the scattered population of our country districts. We pledge our every effort to the end that the movement for democratic education in the university and the normal schools begun several years ago, but temporarily halted by the present administration, shall be pushed rapidly forward and that everything shall be done to make these institutions, supported by the taxes of the working people of the state, extend their benefits to all the people of this state. We pledge that these institutions shall not bar the worthy boy or girl and the ambitious man or woman from participation in their benefits and that there shall be short course, personal instruction, traveling teachers, fair entrance requirements and credits, be made the servants of the people by opening up their resources to all the people.
"We pledge ourselves to restore and to emphasize the democratic character of our educational system."—From the Democratic State Platform.

NOTICE OF GENERAL ELECTION

TO THE ELECTORS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY:—

OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK, October 25, 1916.

Notice is hereby given that a general election is to be held in the several towns, wards, villages, and election precincts in the county of Washington on the 7th day of November, 1916, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The names of the candidates for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of the office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column, in the sample ballot below.

INFORMATION TO VOTERS.

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk which must have indorsed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for.

If a voter wishes to vote for all the candidates nominated by any party he shall make a cross or other mark under the party designation printed at the top of the ballot in the circle made for that purpose. A ballot so marked and having no other mark will be counted for all the candidates of that party in the column underneath, unless the names of some of the candidates of the party have been erased or a name shall be written in or a cross mark be placed in the square at the right of the name or names of candidates in another column. If the voter does not wish to vote for all the candidates nominated by one party, he shall mark his ballot by making a cross or mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom he intends to vote, or by inserting or writing in the name of the candidate.

A voter may vote for an entire group of candidates for presidential electors by making a cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) under the party designation at the head of the party column, or he may vote for the candidates for presidential electors by making a cross (X) or mark in the square at the right of the name of each candidate for whom he wishes to vote. If a voter does not wish to vote for any one or more candidates for presidential electors in the group, he may erase the name of such candidate or candidates and may write in the space provided therefor, the name or names of the person or persons for whom he desires to vote, and the cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) at the head of the party column shall count as a vote for each of the candidates in such column. If a voter does not wish to vote for any candidate for president or vice-president or for any presidential electors, whose names appear upon the ballot, he may insert or write in the names of the candidates for president and vice-president, and presidential electors to a number equal to the number of electors to be elected, in the appropriate spaces in the blank column at the right of the ballot.

The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot be spoiled, it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all shall be issued to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Unofficial ballots or memorandum to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth, and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter.

After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed indorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box, hand him his ballot to be placed in the box, and pass out of the voting place.

A voter who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, can have assistance of one or two election officers in marking same, to be chosen by the voter; and if he declares that he is totally blind, he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath in his discretion, as to such person's disability.

The following are facsimiles of the official ballots:

SAMPLE

NOTICE OF GENERAL ELECTION

TO THE ELECTORS OF WASHINGTON COUNTY:—

OFFICE OF COUNTY CLERK, October 25, 1916.

Notice is hereby given that a general election is to be held in the several towns, wards, villages, and election precincts in the county of Washington on the 7th day of November, 1916, at which the officers named below are to be chosen. The names of the candidates for each office to be voted for, whose nominations have been certified to or filed in this office, are given under the title of the office and under the appropriate party or other designation, each in its proper column, in the sample ballot below.

INFORMATION TO VOTERS.

The following instructions are given for the information and guidance of voters: A voter upon entering the polling place and giving his name and residence, will receive a ballot from the ballot clerk which must have indorsed thereon the names or initials of both ballot clerks, and no other ballot can be used. Upon receiving his ballot, the voter must retire alone to a booth or compartment and prepare the same for voting. A ballot clerk may inform the voter as to the proper manner of marking a ballot, but he must not advise or indicate in any manner whom to vote for.

If a voter wishes to vote for all the candidates nominated by any party he shall make a cross or other mark under the party designation printed at the top of the ballot in the circle made for that purpose. A ballot so marked and having no other mark will be counted for all the candidates of that party in the column underneath, unless the names of some of the candidates of the party have been erased or a name shall be written in or a cross mark be placed in the square at the right of the name or names of candidates in another column. If the voter does not wish to vote for all the candidates nominated by one party, he shall mark his ballot by making a cross or mark in the square at the right of the name of the candidate for whom he intends to vote, or by inserting or writing in the name of the candidate.

A voter may vote for an entire group of candidates for presidential electors by making a cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) under the party designation at the head of the party column, or he may vote for the candidates for presidential electors by making a cross (X) or mark in the square at the right of the name of each candidate for elector for whom he wishes to vote. If a voter does not wish to vote for any one or more candidates for presidential electors in the group, he may erase the name of such candidate or candidates and may write in the space provided therefor, the name or names of the person or persons for whom he desires to vote, and the cross (X) or mark in the circle (O) at the head of the party column shall count as a vote for each of the candidates in such column. If a voter does not wish to vote for any candidate for president or vice-president or for any presidential electors, whose names appear upon the ballot, he may insert or write in the names of the candidates for president and vice-president, and presidential electors to a number equal to the number of electors to be elected, in the appropriate spaces in the blank column at the right of the ballot.

The ballot should not be marked in any other manner. If the ballot be spoiled, it must be returned to the ballot clerk, who must issue another in its stead, but not more than three in all shall be issued to any one voter. Five minutes' time is allowed in booth to mark ballot. Unofficial ballots or memorandum to assist the voter in marking his ballot can be taken into the booth, and may be used to copy from. The ballot must not be shown so that any person can see how it has been marked by the voter.

After it is marked it should be folded so that the inside cannot be seen, but so that the printed indorsements and signatures of the ballot clerks on the outside may be seen. Then the voter should pass out of the booth or compartment, give his name to the inspector in charge of the ballot box, hand him his ballot to be placed in the box, and pass out of the voting place.

A voter who declares to the presiding officer that he is unable to read, or that by reason of physical disability he is unable to mark his ballot, can have assistance of one or two election officers in marking same, to be chosen by the voter; and if he declares that he is totally blind, he may be assisted by any person chosen by him from among the legal voters of the county. The presiding officer may administer an oath in his discretion, as to such person's disability.

The following are facsimiles of the official ballots:

UNEXPECTED SUNSHINE

By ELLIS PYNE.

"Gee! There's Elsie Morton and old man Simpson again," said Jack Boyd to Philip Ware as they sat down at luncheon in a downtown hotel. "Have you noticed the coolness between Elsie and Fred Hartman?"

"Yes, everybody's noticed it," said Philip, "but neither Elsie nor Fred will tell the cause of it, I understand. Amy Moore, who will rush in where others would fear to tread, sounded them both, but got only an indifferent shrug from Elsie and a grouchy one from Fred."

"By George!" exclaimed Jack, a moment later. "The plot thickens, for here come Fred and Amy Moore, this minute."

"And if I'm not mistaken, that sparkle in Amy's eye means she's got something up her sleeve. It can't be that she has designs on Fred, for she's happily engaged to his brother in Cleveland."

Except for a friendly nod upon first seating themselves, Amy and Fred seemed oblivious of Elsie's presence. Amy ordered only the lightest lunch, insisting that she must be away in half an hour at the latest. When she had almost finished her light luncheon she glanced about and saw Jack Boyd and Philip Ware sauntering toward the doorway, which brought them near her table. She flashed them a smile of greeting and bade Fred call them over as she wanted to ask them something about the coming dinner dance at the country club next evening.

Although her luncheon was finished, Amy made no move to leave her seat until she saw Elsie and Simpson leave their table. Then she contrived to have the party of six acquaintances reach the elevator at the same time and make the descent together. Her only object was to bring Elsie and Fred into the general conversation, but an unexpected occurrence did far more than all her maneuvering to clear up the clouded atmosphere surrounding the estranged pair. When they reached the main floor they found that a summer shower was coming down in driving sheets. A man and woman rushed from a taxicab at the curb into the lobby where the group of six stood, reluctant to venture out until the shower had passed. The woman, who was young and pretty and well dressed, gave a pleased exclamation when she saw Fred Hartman.

"Why, Mr. Hartman, what an unexpected pleasure!" Fred advanced with a cordial response to her enthusiastic greeting, and the lady added: "I'm so glad to have an opportunity to present my husband to you, for we owe you a lot for your kindness to me that dreadful day. Mr. Smith, Mr. Hartman," she concluded, and the two men shook hands.

"Mr. Hartman," he said warmly. "Mrs. Smith has told me all about that harrowing hour and a half in a stuck elevator and of your lightning trip to the station afterward. Believe me, we appreciate your courtesy to a client in distress. She could never have got the deeds straightened out and made that train without your help, but she's still worrying because you missed a luncheon engagement with a lady who had deserted the trust before you could get to a telephone."

"Well, that misfortune was the fault of the stupid elevator man, and couldn't have been even remotely blamed upon Mrs. Smith, who was as unwilling a prisoner as I. It's too bad that unpleasant experiences are your lot on another visit to the city."

"Oh, we don't mind the rain," said Mrs. Smith, as they entered the elevator.

"Come, Fred Hartman, and 'fess up to this romantic affair your friends have mentioned," commanded Amy, as the elevator disappeared. "It's a good thing I wasn't the girl who had the luncheon engagement with you. I'd have scorned you ever after."

"Oh, come now," pleaded Fred. "To have lost the pleasure of your company and to have felt that I had caused you annoyance would have been punishment enough for me without your scorn. Isn't that a fair statement of the case, Elsie?"

"As far as it goes, yes," admitted Elsie, "but you must consider that Amy would not have known the real facts of the case until you told her, and imagine what her feelings would have been if—well—say if she had seen you rushing that handsome woman into a taxi just as she herself came out from a lonely luncheon."

"There, now!" said Amy saucily. "It's enough to make me weep, even though it's only a make-believe case, but I'm dying to know who the poor girl really was and how she took it."

"Perhaps she was too piqued at first to listen to an explanation," said Elsie promptly, to ward off Amy's further conjecture, "but I'm sure that when she did know all about it she was sorry she had acted childishly."

"You are quite sure, Elsie?" asked Fred, as if they were alone. And, indeed, they were practically alone, for Amy and Jack had exchanged knowing glances and had drawn the other two men over to the doorway to see whether the rain was slackening.

"Quite sure, Fred," said Elsie, very softly, "and bless those dear Smiths for making me both sorry and sure."

"Amen," whispered Fred, as they went in answer to Amy's delighted call to come and see the wondrous sunshine that had broken through the clouds. (Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A Woman's Leisure.

We are caught between an old tradition of married life, which insists that a woman's time is fully occupied, and the new facts of married life, which bely the tradition. If we could forget the tradition and look at the facts, our whole attitude would change. As it is, this large margin of time, continually and increasingly ours, is, as it were theoretically nonexistent. It has not yet received official recognition. Therefore, being treated as something contingent and accidental instead of something expected and calculable, it has no dignity, no coherence in its uses. It is like the reading done in a doctor's office while we wait. We are like children who receive frequent but undesirable gifts of pocket-money, yet are given no stated allowance. The money is spent as it comes—casually, without special plan. It is the rare child who will make such accidental fortune serve any large ends. So it has been with women's time. Having no theoretic leisure and much actual leisure, they have filled it with whatever chances to importune most insistently.—Atlantic Monthly.

FAMILIAR QUOTATIONS.

Games For Which We Are Indebted to Rev. Edward Young.

Among the older English poets sententious quotations from whom have passed into the very warp and woof of our daily speech, the first place, of course, belongs to Shakespeare. The second belongs to Pope and the third not to Milton or Dryden, but to the Rev. Edward Young, whose "Night Thoughts" lay on the reading tables of the pious ancestors of those of us who had them. Young has been called "Pope in woolen stockings." Perhaps he would be more accurately described as Pope in cassock and bands.

To him is due the possession by almost every one of the knowledge that "Procrastination is the thief of time," that "we take no note of time but from its loss," that we should "be wise to-day—'tis madness to defer," that "at thirty man suspects himself a fool, knows it at forty and reforms his plan," that none the less "a fool at forty is a fool indeed," that "all men think all things mortal but themselves," that "blessings brighten as they take their flight," that "man wants but little, nor that little long" (echoed by Goldsmith), that "by night an atheist half believes a God," that "Death loves a shining mark," that "pygmies are pygmies still, though perched on Alps," that "all may do what has by man been done," that "the man that blushes is not quite a brute," that "too low they build who build beneath the stars," that "an undevout astronomer is mad," that "none think the great unhappy but the great," and that "fondness for fame is avarice of air."

"Insatiate archer, would not one suffice?" is a familiar query which he first propounded. The very first line of the first Night in which he achieved his funeral thoughts, "Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep!" has often been repeated as Shakespeare's—no doubt by confusion with Macbeth's eulogy of the sleep he had murdered.—Philadelphia Ledger.

VASTNESS OF GREENLAND.

This Ice Crowned Island is as Big as Mexico or Alaska.

Greenland is the largest island in the world. Its total length from Cape Farewell, its southern extremity in 60 degrees north latitude, to Cape Morris K. Jesup, its northern extremity in 83½ degrees north latitude, is in round numbers 1,500 miles, almost exactly the same as the length of the United States on the ninety-seventh meridian, from the mouth of the Rio Grande to where our northern boundary crosses the Red River of the North. The greatest width of Greenland is about the same as the distance from New York to St. Louis.

In regard to its area the figures of various authorities vary widely. It may be sufficient to say that it can be grouped in size with the United States east of the Mississippi, Alaska, Mexico, Colombia, Persia, Portuguese West Africa and Turkey in Asia.

Its interior is covered with a great sheet of ice rising to elevations of probably 10,000 feet in places and several thousand feet in thickness. The available ice free land is a strip of varying width along the coast, intersected by numerous deep fjords.

When one turns the pages of American arctic exploration Greenland is found more or less intimately associated during over sixty years with all American expeditions, except the Jeannette expedition.

Americans have lifted nearly all of its northwestern and northern coasts out of the arctic night and fog and have twice crossed its northern part. American names stud its coasts, and the name of an American marks its northern extremity, the most northern known land in the world.—Rear Admiral Peary in New York Times.

His Telephone Number.

"Confound it all!" cried a business man. "I've forgotten my new telephone number. I didn't write it down because that's an indication of weakness."

"What about forgetting the number?" said the other man. "Isn't that mental weakness too? Is it the number of your home telephone?"

"Yes."

"Then why not call up your wife and ask her what it is?"

And without the slightest hesitation the forgetful man called up the forgotten number and asked his amazed wife what it was.—Chicago News.

Handed It Back.

"Why don't you put your mind on it and get a good cook?" demanded Jones impatiently of his wife.

"Well," replied Mrs. Jones sweetly, "I guess it is because I don't know how. I never seemed to have a faculty for selecting people to live with."—Exchange.

Brine.

Brine boils at 225 degrees F. and at this degree fine salt is formed. At 185 degrees F. common salt results and fishery, or large grained, at 110 degrees F. The salt crystallizes on the surface of the brine in the pans, floats a little and then sinks to the bottom, leaving it free from fresh crystals.

Changeable.

"He fell in love with a girl whose face he saw on a magazine cover."

"Sounds romantic. Did he follow up the romance and marry her?"

"Didn't have time. There's another magazine out this month."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A DARING DUELIST

"Fighting Bob" Stockton Both a Quaker and a Fire Eater.

WAS THE PRIDE OF OUR NAVY.

He Could Give D'Artagnan Points on Getting In and Out of Rows and Once Challenged Ten Captains of a British Regiment to Mortal Combat.

The life of Robert Field Stockton is full of adventure and of remarkable exploits. He was a Quaker, and yet he was one of the greatest fighting men in the American navy.

While the young American naval officer was still in the early twenties he found himself with no less than ten duels on his hands. Stockton had served with distinction in the war of 1812, and when the rulers of the Barbary states became troublesome a short time thereafter he accompanied the squadron to the Mediterranean and was one of the most active of the officers in ridding the sea of the pirates.

In those days the American navy was practically a stranger in European ports, and the British, smarting under the defeats of the war of 1812, were very unfriendly toward Americans. On one occasion the Erie, upon which vessel Stockton was an officer, dropped anchor in the bay of Naples. An Italian came aboard for a job and showed a recommendation given him by an American naval officer beneath which a British officer had written a contemptuous epithet.

Stockton was furious when he read what the British officer had written. Learning the officer was aboard one of the British men-of-war in the bay, Stockton sent him a challenge. The Englishman seemed disinclined to fight except at long range with pistols, but a duel was finally arranged.

Stockton shot the English officer in the leg. The Britisher dropped, yelling: "I'm hit! I'm hit! Are you satisfied?" Stockton said he was not, but finally agreed to let the matter drop if the Britisher showed proper courtesy to all Americans thereafter.

From Naples the Erie sailed for Gibraltar. The officers of the British regiment stationed there were still angry at the memory of the war of 1812 and made life unpleasant for the young American. Stockton was not the sort of man to take their insults calmly. The upshot was that he rashly agreed to fight a duel with each of the regiment's ten captains. The chances of his returning home looked very small.

Yet he fought several of the duels, wounding his adversaries, and escaped practically unhurt. The series of fights came to an end in a sensational fashion before all ten of the captains had met him. In one encounter Stockton had just wounded his opponent severely when a guard of British cavalrymen swooped down upon him and placed him under arrest. Stockton wrenched himself free, sprang at one of his mounted captors, tore the man from the saddle, vaulted on to the riderless horse's back and galloped away to his ship, outstripping his pursuers and gaining the Erie in safety.

Stockton, feeling that he had been deceived by the British officers and that their conduct in arranging for his arrest was contemptible, branded them as a lot of knaves. Meanwhile Stockton was the idol of the squadron, and when he returned to New York in 1821 he was "Fighting Bob" to the whole country.

Stockton's next mission was to take charge of the American Colonization society's expedition to found a negro colony on the west coast of Africa. By rare diplomacy he secured and settled the African territory that later became the Republic of Liberia. Once, while in Liberia, he held a whole hostile tribe at bay single handed by leveling a pistol at their king. Upon his return, there being no work for him in the navy, he retired and for twelve years he was a successful financier and promoter.

In 1838 Stockton went back to the sea. He devoted himself to introducing into our feet the use of steam vessels in place of the old fashioned sailing ships and was thus in a way the father of the present mighty battleship and cruiser. Later he was made commander in chief of the squadron in the proposed attack on California, and in a short time he won for himself the title of "Conqueror of California." In honor of his achievements Stockton, Cal., and Stockton street in San Francisco bear the conqueror's name.

Stockton died in 1866, having combined during his career of soldier of fortune the vocation of duelist, sea fighter, colonizer, territorial conqueror, financier and statesman.—Philadelphia Press.

St. Martin and the Dictionary.

St. Martin when he divided his cape with a naked beggar at the gate of Amiens gave also two words to the English language. The oratory in which this torn cape was preserved as a sacred banner acquired the name of "chappelle" (from the French "chape"), the custodian being termed "chapelain," and thus our English words "chapel" and "chaplain" are derived.—Westminster Gazette.

Mighty Near It.

"Do you, Mr. Stacks, think that a rich man can go through the eye of a needle?"

"I don't know. I will, however, admit that my lawyers have dragged me through some very small loopholes."—Puck.
