AUTO TURNS OVER; WOMAN IS KILLED

Mrs. John W. Moses, 47, Cleveland, O., is dead as the result of injuries sustained when the car in which she was riding, turned turtle on a hill eight miles south of Theresa, Monday evening. Mr. Moses was driving the car sustained painful bruises but his injuries are not of a serious nature. In telling of the accident Mr. Moses said: "We struck a bump in the road and the shock threw the car to one side of the roadway sending it up an embankment and causing it to turn turtle." Mr. and Mrs. George W. Dorndorf, this city and Mrs. J. B. Coy, Marquette, returning by auto to Fond du Lac after a business trip to Milwaukee witnessed the accident from the top of a hill half a mile from the tragedy. "The car seemed to shoot into the air," Mr. Dorndorf said. "I got out and hurried to the scene of the tragedy to help the injured. Mrs. Moses' head was protruding from under the car. With the aid of some farmers, who happened to be near, we rescued her. I felt of her pulse. It was beating faintly. She then uttered her last words: 'John, John, I'm going.' Mr. Moses was bruised considerably as a result of the accident. He was pinned under the car and could not extricate himself. 'Is she dead? Is she dead?' was the first question he asked after the accident. Mr. and Mrs. Moses were motoring in a Ford roadster from Cleveland to Mayville, where they attended celebrating the former's birthday, at the home of their son, John E. Moses. At the time of the accident they were going north on the road leading from Schlesinger to Theresa. The body was brought to the George Dorndorf undertaking parlors, 115 North Main street and was taken to Mayville this afternoon. From there members of the family will accompany the body to Cleveland where burial will take place Thursday.

Washing Disease A Way

To most of us it is surprising to learn how much attention the medical officers in the French battlefield give to personal cleanliness of the soldiers as a disease preventive. It would almost seem to one not initiated in the ways of war, that so many big things need to be done that minor necessities, like baths for example, might be extended or neglected. It is a matter of convenience. Not so, however. Partly because Typhus Fever is spread by lice, the greatest care is exercised to provide bathing facilities. The French, furthermore, maintain bathtubs to "complete the toilet of the men by trimming the hair". How difficult the bathing may be is indicated by the following from an article on "Military Sanitation" in the American Journal of Public Health: "The water is warmed on the cook fire and the men are brought in groups of ten, made to undress and are scrubbed. In especially unfavorable conditions in cold weather, the bathing may be done in the stables where the heat from the animals will maintain a comfortable temperature". Few American homes are so poor that better provisions than these, at least, are not offered.

Here's a Chance Girl

Girls, here's the picture. Decide for yourselves. Eighty-acre farm, free of debt. This year's model automobile. Money in the bank. Comfortable home. Good farm buildings. High grade cattle. Crops prospects excellent. Living on a model farm three miles from Barton, Wis. is an agriculturist who does not take the last trick of the two, winner points. All tricks to one player loses twenty points. After game is concluded, call messenger of your section and deliver score sheet to him at the table where you are playing. Score sheet must not be taken. Within three days after the Tournament the Secretary will mail to each participant a certified copy of the Official List of Prize Winners.

Subscribers Take Notice!

As this is the time of year when business is slack for the printing fraternity and collections are slow in coming in, we would consider it a great favor if all our subscribers who are in arrears for the Statesman would drop in or mail a check to the amount of their indebtedness to us. It is only a small amount for each individual, but it assumes large proportions when you have several hundred delinquents on the list. Upon looking over our mailing list we find 162 subscribers who are in arrears, so you can readily see that at $1.50 a year it brings the sum up to $243, which would come in mighty handy to us right about this time. Look at the date stamped opposite your name on the Statesman and if in arrears remit promptly and save us the disagreeable task of mailing you a dunning letter.

How Lobster Gets Food.

The lobster gets his food by following the suggestions of his long antennae, which sort over the articles in his immediate vicinity and inform him which are edible and which are not. He cannot see much and relies upon his sense of touch for deterring information. He loves to fight, even in his wild state, not so much, it is thought, from cannibalism as from pure "meanness."

Fear Spiritually Weakness.

Fear is simply spiritual weakness, which may be compared to nervous weakness of the body. In other words, it is lack of spiritual sense of strength. And, as you know, spiritual strength comes from right living. A keen sense of being right drives out all fear. Hence a certain triumph of the defenders of right over their opponents, even in spite of superior numbers.

The Helping Hand.

"He who makes of himself an uplifting force for others will himself be lifted up; he who helps others on the downward path cannot ascend. The man who is always ready to give his fellow man a shove downward is a poor climber. The man whose hand is always a helping hand, his helping hands ever reaching down to give him a pull upward."

PICNIC LAST SUNDAY A BIG SUCCESS

Although threatening skies greeted our citizens on Sunday morning and during the day, the picnic held by Mrs. Kathryn Eberle in the North Side Park turned out to be a grand success in every way. During the afternoon a large crowd gathered at the park to witness the excellent concert given by a carnival company and to listen to the concert by the Kewaskum Brass Band. There were plenty of amusements during the afternoon for all, concessions were in abundance and the crowd being in a picnic mood, and very little trouble in waiting away the time. In the evening a mammoth dance was held to which over four hundred dance tickets were sold. This affair was really the only big doings held in the village this year and the surrounding community showed that Kewaskum is still on the map when it comes to entertaining visitors. We earnestly hope that next year this village may again take its place as an amusement center and have a number of these celebrations.

Superintendent Carlin Resigns

George T. Carlin last Saturday tendered his resignation as school superintendent of Washington County to Sheriff Frank Schenbeck, the same to go into effect on August 31. Mr. Carlin will turn his efforts towards life insurance and has accepted the position of general agent for the Central Life Assurance Society of Des Moines, Iowa, his territory covering the counties of Washington and Ozaukee. He will have his office in this city and will establish sub-agencies in different parts of his territory. Mr. Carlin's resignation as school superintendent will not be slighted by those who for years have watched his work in advancing educational interests in the county. He filled his position excellently, and to his energy and good judgment advanced made in our country school system are largely due. He was indefatigable in his work and he had the right ideas to lead him. He knew how to inspire and he had the right ideas to lead his superintendency the rural schools of our county progressed so efficiently, we probably never before. The county will indeed be lucky to get a successor who is able to make us forget the loss to our educational interests entailed by this resignation. A successor to Mr. Carlin will have to be appointed by State Supt. Cary within the next few weeks.—West Bend News.

STATE HAS POWER TO SEIZE COAL

Illinois Defense Council Reports to Governor.

ACT TO GUARD THE PUBLIC

Decision Says Lowden Has Authority to Take Over Properties and Fix Prices—Other States Invited to Conference.

Chicago, Aug. 8.—The state council of national defense recommended to Governor Lowden that the state of Illinois seize the coal mines in the commonwealth and operate them during the war.

It further called the councils of defense of the states of Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Ohio, Kentucky, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, West Virginia, Pennsylvania, North Dakota, South Dakota and Tennessee to meet in Chicago August 10, at 11 a. m., to consider the feasibility of joint action by all coal-producing states to reduce the price of coal.

Governor Has Power to Act.

This drastic action was taken following a report to the council from its committee on law and legislation that the constitution conferred on the governor the power to seize and operate coal mines without calling a special session of the legislature.

The opinion was written by Levy Mayer, and the other members of the committee are David E. Shanahan, the speaker of the Illinois house, and Lieutenant Governor John G. Oglesby.

The full membership of the council was in attendance, with the exception of Dr. Frank Billings, who is in Russia, and Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen. The vote on adopting the recommendations was unanimous.

Text of Recommendation.

Seizure of the coal mines was made the chief recommendation of the council, its report devoting all but the last paragraph to it. The section of the report which contained the specific recommendation follows:

"1. Seizure by the state and operation by it during the period of war of the coal mines in this state. Illinois is one of the leading coal-producing states in the United States. The annual output of this state is about 70,000,000 tons. The powers of the state to meet present conditions exist in their full measure. Salus populi suprema lex is a principle as old as government itself. There is an implied agreement on the part of every member of society that his own individual welfare and property shall, in cases of necessity, yield to that of the state.

Houses May Be Wrecked.

"Houses may be pulled down and bulwarks raised on private property for the preservation of the state and its people. Property may be destroyed to prevent the spread of fire or pestilential diseases. The safety of the state and of its people overweighs private interests. The seizure of the coal mines can be effected without the institution of judicial proceedings, and thus court delays be avoided. The right of the state in cases of this kind has for its foundation the security of sovereignty itself. And the doctrine of eminent domain and the police power support the right. The constitution of Illinois (Art. 2, Sec. 13) furnishes warrant for the plan of seizure of the mine; this article provides that:

Call on Other States.

The paragraph containing the recommendation to call representatives of various state defense councils into conference reads:

"Call an immediate meeting of representatives of state councils of defense of the neighboring coal-producing states so that an adequate and uniform measure of relief can be at once contemporaneously adopted and enforced in all these states."

The council of defense further directed its chairman to forward the recommendation to Governor Lowden and to send copies of it to President Wilson and various other officials at Washington, to Illinois' two United States senators and to the governors and councils of defense of the states invited to the conference.

The law committee finds that no preliminary court proceeding is necessary to take this drastic step. The authority to move is now on the doorstep of the executive office in Springfield.

The state council of defense found that prices at the mines were excessive, and that dealers here were making excessive profits in addition. First, it appealed to the mine owners and the dealers to co-operate in reducing rates. Both owners and dealers flatly refused, denying the council's right to interfere in the matter.

Governor Lowden next took a hand in the matter. He promised drastic action unless prices were reduced. He first thought of calling a special session of the legislature, but is said now to have decided that he has ample authority to act without further legislation.

The action of the council spread panic through the ranks of the dealers and mine operators, who, for the first time, seemed to realize that the state meant business.

FOOD BILL VOTE NEAR

SENATE AGREES TO ACT ON CONTROL MEASURE TODAY.

Indiana Senator Declares Public Doesn't Understand Proposed Legislation, But Wants It Anyway.

Washington, Aug. 8.—By unanimous consent agreement reached the senate will vote on the conference report on the food bill at four o'clock this afternoon.

The conference report on the bill again was the subject of debate in the senate today. Most Republicans were said to favor immediate adoption of the report, and the principal opposition came from Democratic members, notably Senators Reed, Hollis and Gore.

Senator New of Indiana, Republican, declared the public does not understand the bill and expects the impossible from it.

"Nearly every senator has doubts as to its results," he said. "Not ten members actually believe in it. But it is apparent that the senate is going to give this bill to the administration and the public because they want it. The public has been led to believe that it will reduce the cost of living and it would be impolitic to defeat it."

Senator Sherman of Illinois, Republican, declared that the public knows no more of the measure's scope than "a Moslem does of the Lord's prayer."

Speaking in opposition to the adoption of the conference report, Senator Gronna pronounced it a "victory for the Standard Oil company and the grain exchanges of the country," declaring there was nothing in it to control prices of the oils the farmer needs.

Control over fuel oil, he admitted, was inserted in the bill, but said this was only the product of petroleum after gasoline had been extracted.

WAR SURGERY WINS SUCCESS

1,000 of 1,350 Soldiers Whose Bones Were Broken Return to Front, Says U. S. Surgeon.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 8.—Out of one detail of 1,350 wounded men sent for special treatment to a London hospital suffering from crushed and broken bones, 1,000 were able to return to active duty at the front, according to Maj. J. E. Goldthwait, an orthopedic surgeon of the United States army medical reserve corps, who arrived here from Europe.

Major Goldthwait is one of 20 American medical officers who have been in France and England observing and studying new methods of treating wounded.

He said he returned to the United States to recruit surgeons who could be given the advantage of similar study in order that the American army when it gets into action may have the benefit of the modern treatment of wounds from its own surgeons.

DRAFT TO HIT NEWLYWEDS

Boards Ordered to Halt Exemptions in Some Cases—Men Who Fail to Report to Be Taken Into Army.

Washington, Aug. 4.—After conferring with Secretary of War Baker, Provost Marshal General Crowder sent the following telegram on Thursday to every governor in the country:

"The selective service law does not require discharges in all cases of technical legal dependency, but only permits discharges where, in view of dependency a discharge is advisable.

"Local boards may well hold that a marriage hastily consummated recently, and especially one contracted by a person after he has been called to present himself for examination to determine his fitness for military service, does not create a status of dependency in which it is advisable to discharge him."

This ruling, it was stated, at the provost marshal general's office, should settle the status of the marriage slackers.

President Wilson issued a supplemental order under the draft law which provides that persons who fail to report to local boards for examination shall be regarded as physically fit and liable for military service.

Gilbert some time ago took the examination for a commission in the regular United States army. He was recently informed that he has been recommended for a commission and will probably be called before he will be enrolled under the draft.

FOOD BILL IS ADOPTED

CONFEREES' REPORT ACCEPTED BY HOUSE WITHOUT DISSENT.

Measure Confines Control to One Man and Provides $2 Wheat—Board Eliminated.

Washington, Aug. 8.—The conference report on the food control bill was adopted on Friday by the house without a dissenting voice. Caleb Powers voted against the acceptance, but afterward changed his vote. Jeff Leamore of Texas voted "present."

The house also adopted almost unanimously the conference report on the bill creating a food survey.

Some dissatisfaction was expressed that the food control bill provided $2 wheat, eliminated the committee on war expenditures and confined the control to one man. Republicans spoke against these features. But in the end the Republicans joined in the "aye" vote.

The vote on acceptance of the report was 357 to 0. The objection of Powers was based on the Pomerene section, which regulates coal and coke through the federal trade commission.

The report on the food survey shows that the bill carries an appropriation of $11,346,000. The house originally made it $14,770,000, but the senate made the cut.

Foreign Minister Declares Slavs Must Prepare to Fight Throughout Winter—Says Kerensky Alone Has Nation's Confidence.

M. Kerensky has issued a manifesto in which he declares that he considers it impossible when the country is threatened with defeat without and disintegration within to refuse the heavy task again entrusted to him, which he regards as an express order from the country to construct a strong revolutionary government to carry out the principles already laid down.

"At the same time," said the manifesto, "I consider it inevitable to introduce changes in the order and distribution of government work without allowing myself to be influenced by the thought that these changes will increase my responsibility in the supreme direction of the affairs of state."

M. Kerensky's action followed close upon an all-night political conference which is declared as the most momentous assemblage within the country's history of the last 300 years.

"Peace for Russia is inconceivable," former Minister Tereschenko asserted at this conference.

"Russia must prepare to fight throughout the coming winter," the foreign minister declared, adding that "Alexander Kerensky alone has the nation's confidence."

By a vote of 147 to 46 a joint meeting of the executives of the workmen and soldiers' and peasants' councils confirmed the decision of the all-night political conference of continued confidence in Premier Kerensky.

The duma committee also has confirmed the vote of confidence in M. Kerensky.

SAYS U. S. MUST HELP

AMERICA MUST TAKE RUSSIA'S PLACE IN THE FIELD.

Major General Maurice, Chief Director of British Military Operations, Says Flanders Fight Success.

London, Aug. 4.—"Looking from the broader aspect at the events of the last fortnight in Russia," said Maj. Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, chief director of military operations at the war office, on Thursday, in his weekly talk, "it will necessarily mean a prolongation of the war. We cannot longer count on any great material assistance from Russia. This means a greater burden on the other entente allies, and for the United States it means that she must come into the field as soon as possible and with the greatest possible force."

Major General Maurice in commenting on the Flanders battle, said:

"This week the battle in Flanders was an entire success. Gen. Sir Douglas Haig fixed a definite line of objectives and, speaking generally, he attained it successfully. On the southern third of the front he attacked and gained his objective easily. On the northern third the enemy's resistance broke down so completely that General Haig felt justified in permitting his troops to go well beyond the objective. In the central third we fell a little short of the objective, owing to stubborn enemy resistance."

General Maurice said that the British commander's next move was to determine another objective and then, after the customary process of preparation, to proceed similarly to achieve it.

"In cases of this kind," said the general, "the objective line depends mainly upon the range of the artillery. The attacks must be patient and methodical. In this way we can gain ground and inflict heavy losses on the enemy without heavy losses to ourselves."

"In this week's battle we co-operated with the French. There were about six times as many British troops as French soldiers. Of the British four-fifths were purely English and one-fifth Anzac (Australians and New Zealanders), Welsh and Scotch. No Irish or Canadian troops participated."

THE HILLMAN

AN UNUSUAL
LOVE STORY

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

LOUISE HAS A CURIOUS EXPERIENCE WITH THE BACH-ELOR BROTHER AND SHE STARTS A LITTLE FLAME BURNING IN THE SOUL OF ONE

Synopsis.—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her automobile forces Louise Maurel, a famous London actress, to spend the night at the farm home of John and Stephen Strangeway. At dinner Louise discovers that the brothers are woman-hating recluses.

CHAPTER III.

Louise awoke the next morning filled with a curious sense of buoyant expectancy. The sunshine was pouring into the room, brightening up its most somber corners. It lay across the quilt of her bed, and seemed to bring out the perfume of lavender from the pillow on which her head rested.

Aline, hearing her mistress stir, hastened at once to her bedside. "It is half-past nine, madam, and your breakfast is here. The old incubator from the kitchen has just brought it up."

Louise looked approvingly at the breakfast tray, with the home-made bread and deep-yellow butter, the brown eggs and clear honey. The smell of the coffee was aromatic. She breathed a little sigh of content.

"How delicious everything looks!" she exclaimed.

"The home-made things are well enough in their way, madam," Aline agreed, "but I have never known a household so strange and disagreeable. That M. Jennings, who calls himself the butler—he is a person unspcakably a savage!"

Louise's eyes twinkled. "I don't think they are fond of women in this household, Aline," she remarked. "Tell me, have you seen Charles?"

"Charles has gone to the nearest blacksmith's forge to get something made for the car, madam," Aline replied. "He asked me to say that he was afraid he would not be ready to start before midday."

"That does not matter," Louise declared, gazing eagerly out of the casement window. Immediately below was a grass-grown orchard which stretched upward, at a precipitous angle, toward a belt of freshly plowed fields; beyond, a little chain of rocky hills, sheer overhead. The trees were pink and white with blossom; the petals lay about upon the ground like drifted snowflakes. Here and there yellow jonquils were growing among the long grass. A waft of perfume stole into the room through the window which she had opened.

"Fill my bath quickly, Aline," Louise ordered. "I must go out. I want to see whether it is really as beautiful as it looks."

Aline dressed her mistress in silence. Then, suddenly, a little exclamation escaped her. She swung round toward her mistress, and for once there was animation in her face.

"But, madam," she exclaimed, "I have remembered! The name Strangeway. Yesterday morning you read it out while you took your coffee. You spoke of the good fortune of some farmer in the north of England to whom some relative in Australia had left a great fortune—hundreds and thousands of pounds. The name was Strangeway, the same as that. I remember it now."

She pointed once more to the family tree. Louise sat for a moment with parted lips.

"You are quite right, Aline. I remember it all perfectly now. I wonder whether it could possibly be either of these two men?"

Aline shook her head doubtfully. "It would be unbelievable, madam," she decided. "Could any sane human creature live here, with no company but the sheep and the cows, if they had money—money to live in the cities, to buy pleasures, to be happy? Unbelievable, madam!"

Louise remained standing before the window. She was watching the blossom-laden boughs of one of the apple trees bending and swaying in the fresh morning breeze—watching the restless shadows which came and went upon the grass beneath.

"That is just your point of view, Aline," she murmured; "but happiness—well, you would not understand. They are strange men, these two."

Louise found her way without difficulty across a cobbled yard, through a postern gate set in a red-brick wall, into the orchard. At the farther end she came to a gate, against which she rested for a moment, leaning her arms upon the topmost bar. Before her was the little belt of plowed earth, the fresh, pungent odor of which was a new thing to her; a little way to the right, the rolling moorland, starred with clumps of gorse; in front, across the field on the other side of the gray stone wall, the rock-strewn hills. The sky—unusually blue it seemed to her, and dotted all over with little masses of fleecy, white clouds—seemed somehow lower and nearer; or was she, perhaps, higher up?

She lingered there, absolutely bewildered by the rapid growth in her brain and senses of what surely must be some newly kindled faculty of appreciation. There was a beauty in the world which she had not felt before.

She turned her head almost lazily at the sound of a man's voice. A team of horses, straining at a plow, were coming round the bend of the field, and by their side, talking to the laborer who guided them, was John Strangeway. She watched him as he came into sight up the steep rise. He walked in step with the plowman by his side, but without any of the laborer's mechanical plod—with a spring in his footsteps, indeed, pointing with his stick along the furrow, so absorbed in the almost opposite the gate before he was aware of her presence. He promptly abandoned his task and approached her.

"Good morning! You have slept well?" he called out.

"Better, I think, than ever before in my life," she answered. "Differently, at any rate. And such an awakening!" He looked at her, a little puzzled. The glow upon her face and the sunlight upon her brown hair kept him silent. He was content to look at her and wonder.

"Tell me," she demanded impetuously, "is this a little corner of fairyland that you have found? Does the sun always shine like this? Does the earth always smell as sweetly, and are your trees always in blossom? Does your wind always taste as if God had breathed the elixir of life into it?"

He turned around to follow the sweep of her eyes. Something of the same glow seemed to rest for a moment upon his face.

"It is good," he said, "to find what you love so much appreciated by someone else."

They stood together in a silence almost curiously protracted. Then the plowman passed again with his team of horses and John called out some instructions to him. She followed him down to earth.

"Tell me, Mr. Strangeway," she inquired, "where are your farm buildings?"

"Come and I will show you," he answered, opening the gate to let her through. "Keep close to the hedge until we come to the end of the plow; and then—but no, I won't anticipate. This way!"

They reached the end of the plowed field, and passing through a gate, turned abruptly to the left and began to climb a narrow path which bordered the boundary wall, and which became steeper every moment. As they as-ended, the orchard and the long, low house on the other side seemed to lie almost at their feet. The road and the open moorland beyond, stretching to the encircling hills, came more clearly into sight with every backward glance. Louise paused at last, breathless.

"Is it the home of the fairies you are taking me to?" she asked. "If you have discovered that, no wonder you find us ordinary women outside your lives!"

He laughed. "There are no fairies where we are going," he assured her. "They were on a roughly made road now, which turned abruptly to the right a few yards ahead, skirting the side of a deep gorge. They took a few steps further, and Louise stopped short with a cry of wonder.

Around the abrupt corner an entirely new perspective was revealed—a little hamlet built on a shoulder of the mountain; and on the right, below a steep descent, a wide and sunny valley. It was like a tiny world of its own, hidden in the bosom of the hills. There was a long line of farm buildings, built of gray stone and roofed with red tiles; there were fifteen or twenty stacks; a quaint, whitewashed house of considerable size, almost covered on the southward side with creepers; a row of cottages, and a gray-walled inclosure—stretching to its white tottles—in the midst of which was an ancient church, in ruins at the farther end, partly rebuilt with the stones of the hillside.

Louise looked around her, silent with wonder. "It isn't real, is it?" she asked, clinging for a moment to John Strangeway's arm.

"Why not? You asked where the land was that we tilled. Now look down. Hold my arm if you feel giddy."

She followed the wave of his arm, and the lower hills on both sides, were parceled out into fields, inclosed within stone walls, reminding her from the height at which they stood, of nothing so much as the quilt upon her bed.

Her eyes swept this strange tract of country backward and forward. She saw the men like specks in the fields, the cows grazing in the pasture like toy animals. Then she turned and looked at the neat row of stacks and the square of farm buildings.

"I am trying hard to realize that you are a farmer and that this is your life," she said.

He swung open the wooden gate of the churchyard, by which they were standing. There was a row of graves on either side of the prim path.

"Suppose," he suggested, "you tell me about yourself now—about your own life?"

"My life, and the world in which I live, seem far away just now," she said quietly. "I think that it is doing me good to have a rest from them. Talk to me about yourself, please."

He smiled. He was just a little disappointed.

"We shall very soon reach the end of all that I have to tell you," he remarked. "Still, if there is anything you would like to know—"

"Who were these men and women who have lived and died here?" she interrupted, with a little wave of her hand toward the graves.

"All our own people," he told her. She studied the names upon the tombstones, spelling them out slowly.

"The married people," he went on, "are buried on the south side; the single ones and children are nearer the wall. Tell me," he asked, after a moment's hesitation, "are you married or single?"

She gave a little start. The abruptness of the question, the keen, steady gaze of his compelling eyes, seemed for a moment to paralyze both her nerves and her voice. It was as if someone had suddenly drawn away one of the stones from the foundation of her life. She found herself repeating the words on the tombstone facing her:

"And of Elizabeth, for sixty-one years the faithful wife and helpmate of Ezra Cummings, mother of his children, and his partner in the life everlasting."

Her knees began to shake. There was a momentary darkness before her eyes. She felt for the tombstone and sat down.

CHAPTER IV.

The churchyard gate was opened and closed noisily. They both glanced up. Stephen Strangeway was coming slowly toward them along the flinty path. Louise, suddenly herself again, rose briskly to her feet. Stephen had apparently lost none of his downness of the previous night. As he looked toward Louise, there was no mistaking the slow dislike in his steely eyes.

"Your chauffeur, madam, has just returned," he announced. "He sent word that he will be ready to start at one o'clock."

Louise, inspired to battle by the almost provocative hostility of her elder host, smiled sweetly upon him.

"You can't imagine how sorry I am to hear it," she said. "I don't know when, in the whole course of my life, I have met with such a delightful adventure or spent such a perfect morning!"

Stephen looked at her with level, disapproving eyes—at her slender form in its perfectly fitted tailored gown; at her patent shoes, so obviously unsuitable for her surroundings, and at the faint vision of silk stockings.

"And you?" she asked suddenly. "I have none of it," he asserted. "A very faint smile played about her lips.

"Perhaps not before," she murmured; "but now?"

again, permit me to wish you farewell."

He turned and walked away. Louise watched him with very real interest.

"Do you know," she said to John, "there is something about your brother a little like the prophets in the Old Testament, in the way he sees only one issue and clings to it. Are you, too, of his way of thinking?"

"Up to a certain point, I believe I am," he confessed.

"Do you never feel cramped—in your mind, I mean?—feel that you want to push your way through the clouds into some other life?"

"I feel nearer the clouds here," he answered simply.

They were leaving the churchyard now. She paused abruptly, pointing to a single grave in a part of the churchyard which seemed detached from the rest.

"Whose grave is that?" he inquired. He hesitated.

"It is the grave of a young girl," he told her quietly. "She was the daughter of one of our shepherds. She went into service at Carlisle, and returned here with a child. They are both buried here."

"Because of that her grave is apart from the others?"

"Yes," he answered. "It is very seldom, I am glad to say, that anything of the sort happens among us."

For the second time that morning Louise was conscious of an unexpected upheaval of emotion. She felt that the sunshine had gone, that the whole sweetness of the place had suddenly passed away. The charm of its simple austerity had perished.

"And I thought I had found paradise!" she cried.

She moved quickly from John Strangeway's side. Before he could realize her intention, she had stepped over the low dividing wall and was on her knees by the side of the plain, neglected grave. She tore out the spray of apple blossom which she had thrust into the bosom of her gown, and placed it reverently at the head of the little mound. For a moment her eyes drooped and her lips moved—she herself scarcely knew whether it was in prayer. Then she turned and came slowly back to her companion.

Something had gone, too, from his charm. She saw in him now nothing but the coming dourness of his brother. Her heart was still heavy. She shivered a little. It was he at last who spoke.

"Will you tell me, please, what is the matter with you, and why you placed that sprig of apple blossom where you did?"

His tone woke her from her lethargy. She was a little surprised at its poignancy, almost challenging note.

"Certainly," she replied. "I placed it there as a woman's protest against the injustice of that isolation."

"I deny that it is unjust."

She turned around and waved her hand toward the little gray building.

"The Savior to whom your church is dedicated thought otherwise," she reminded him. "Do you play at being lords paramount here over the souls and bodies of your serfs?"

"You judge without knowledge of the facts," he assured her calmly.

Louise's footsteps slackened. "You men," she sighed, "are all alike! You judge only by what happens. You never look inside. That is why your justice is so different from a woman's. I do not wish to argue with you; but what I so passionately object to is the sweeping judgment you make—the sheep on one side and the goats on the other. That is how man judges; God looks further. Every case is different. The law by which one should be judged may be poor justice for another."

out like a Don Quixote and search for vague adventures?"

"Because you are a man!" she answered swiftly. "You have a brain and a soul too big for your life here. You eat and drink, and physically you flourish, but part of you sleeps because it is shut away from the world of real things. Don't you sometimes feel it meant to live it, can only be lived among your fellow men?"

He looked over his shoulder, at the little cluster of farm buildings and cottages, and the gray stone church.

"It seems to me," he declared simply, "that the man who tries to live more than one life falls in both. There is a little cycle of life here, among our thirty or forty souls, which revolves around my brother and myself. A passer-by may glance upward from the road at our little hamlet, and wonder what can ever happen in such an out-of-the-way corner. I think the answer is just what I have told you. Love and marriage, birth and death happen. These things make life."

Her curiosity now had become merged in an immense interest. She laid her fingers lightly upon his arm.

"You speak for your people," she said. "That is well. But you yourself?"

"I am one of them," he answered—"a necessary part of them."

"How you deceive yourself! The time will come, before very long, when you will come out into the world; and the sooner the better, I think, Mr. John Strangeway, or you will grow like your brother here among your granite hills."

He moved a little uneasily. All the time she was watching him. It seemed to her that she could read the thoughts which were stirring in his brain.

"You would like to say, wouldn't you," she went on, "that this is a useful and an upright life? So it may be, but it is not wide enough or great enough. Some day you will feel the desire to climb. Promise me, will you, that when you feel the impulse you won't use all that obstinate will power of yours to crush it? You will destroy the best part of yourself, if you do. You will give it a chance? Promise!"

She held out her hand with a little impulsive gesture. He took it in his own, and held it steadfastly.

"I will remember," he promised.

Along the narrow streak of road, from the southward, they both watched the rapid approach of a large motor-car. There were two servants upon the front seat and one passenger—a man—inside. It swung into the level stretch beneath them, a fantasy of gray and silver in the reflected sunshine.

Louise had been leaning forward, her head supported upon her hands. As the car slackened speed, she rose very slowly to her feet.

"The chariot of deliverance!" she murmured.

"It is the prince of Seyre," John remarked, gazing down with a slight frown upon his forehead.

She nodded. They had started the descent and she was walking in very leisurely fashion.

"The prince is a great friend of mine," she said. "I had promised to spend last night, or at any rate, some portion of the evening, at Raynham castle on my way to London."

He summoned up courage to ask her the question which had been on his lips more than once.

"As your stay with us is so nearly over, won't you abandon your incognito?"

"In the absence of your brother," she answered, "I will risk it. My name is Louise Maurel."

"Louise Maurel, the actress?" he repeated wonderingly.

"That is another matter," he confessed. "You come from a world of which I know nothing. All I can say is that I would rather think of you—as something different."

She laughed at his somber face and patted his arm lightly. "Big man of the hills," she said, "when you come down from your frozen heights to look for the flowers, I shall try to make you see things differently."

CHAPTER V.

Once more that long, winding stretch of mountain road lay empty under the moonlight. Up the long slope, where three months before he had ridden to find himself confronted with the adventure of his life, John Strangeway jogged homeward in his high dogcart. The mare, scenting her stable, broke into a quick trot as they topped the long rise. Suddenly she felt a hand tighten upon her reins. She looked inquiringly around, and then stood patiently awaiting her master's bidding.

It seemed to John as if he had passed from the partial abstraction of the last few hours into absolute and entire forgetfulness of the present. He could see the motorcar drawn up by the side of the road, could hear the fretful voice of the maid, and the soft, pleasant words of greeting from the woman who had seemed from the first as if she were very far removed indeed from any of the small annoyances of their accident.

"I have broken down. Can you help?" He set his teeth. The poignancy of the recollection was a torture to him. Word by word he lived again through that brief interview. He saw her descend from the car, felt the touch of her hand on his arm, saw the flash of her brown eyes as she drew close to him with that pleasant little air of familiarity, shared by no other woman he had ever known.

Then the little scene faded away, and he remembered the tedious present. He had spent two dull days at the house of a neighboring land owner, playing cricket in the daytime, dancing at night with women in whom he was unable to feel the slightest interest, always with that faraway feeling in his heart, struggling hour by hour with that curious restlessness which seemed to have taken a permanent place in his disposition. He was on his way home to Peak Hall. He knew exactly the welcome which was awaiting him. He knew exactly the news he would receive. He raised his whip and cracked it viciously in the air.

Stephen was waiting for him, as he had expected, in the dining room. The elder Strangeway was seated in his accustomed chair, smoking his pipe and reading the paper. The table was laid for a meal, which Jennings was preparing to serve.

"Back again, John?" his brother remarked, looking at him fixedly over his newspaper.

John picked up one or two letters, glanced them over, and fung them down upon the table. He had examined every envelope for the last few months with the same expectancy, and thrown each one down with the same throb of disappointment.

"As you see,"

"Had a good time?"

"Not very. Have they finished the barley fields, Stephen?"

"All in at eight o'clock."

There was a brief silence. Then Stephen knocked the ashes from his pipe and rose to his feet.

"John," he asked, "why did you pull up on the road there?"

There was no immediate answer. The slightest of frowns formed itself upon the younger man's face.

"How did you know that I pulled up?"

"I was sitting with the window open, listening for you. I came outside to see what had happened, and I saw your lights standing still."

"I had a fancy to stop for a moment," John said; "nothing more."

John Strangeway is able to stand this kind of dissatisfaction with life for just so long. Then he takes the bit in his teeth and goes tearing away.

HE WAS WAITING PATIENTLY

Constant Attendant at Play When Wife to Be on Hand When Erring Wife Was Caught by Husband.

A problem play was being produced in Chicago. One evening it was discovered that a certain man, evidently from the rural district, had attended the play six nights in succession and always sat well down in front. Each night he leaned forward eagerly in his seat and drank in the words of the drama.

These facts were communicated to the theater press agent, who scented a good story. Approaching the interested spectator from the acts, he apologized for his intrusion and said: "Would you mind telling me just why you are so interested in this play? Do you know some member of the cast?"

"Nope," said the man from the outlands. "That ain't it. But I'll tell you about it. You know the scene in the private room of the restaurant, where the dark man and the other man's wife got up and leave by the left-hand door just a moment before the woman's husband enters by the right-hand door?"

"Yes," said the press agent expectantly.

"Well," said the interested spectator, "some night the husband's going to come in before they leave."

The True Word.
Two elderly New York clubmen who have retired spend much of their time gazing out upon the Fifth avenue throngs from their leather rest chairs at a club lounge window.

Charles B. Towns was seated near them the other day. A very stunning woman of middle age passed in a handsome turnout.

"I wonder how old she is?" said one. "Woman is as old as she looks," was the reply.

There was a pause. "And man is not old until he quits looking," said the first—and both resumed their gazing.

Couldn't Blame Him.
Joe—Do you like romantic girls?
Jack—No. When you make a hole in your bank account buying them flowers, they tear them apart, saying, "He loves me; he loves me not."

A Perfect Day should end—as well as begin—with a perfect food, say—

Grape-Nuts with cream.

A crisp, delicious food, containing the entire nutriment of whole wheat and barley, including the vital mineral elements, so richly provided by Nature in these grains.

Every table should have its daily ration of Grape-Nuts.

FRATERNAL DAY AT STATE FAIR WILL BE BIG AS STATE DAY

Immense Fraternal City to Be Established on the Fair Grounds, Each Order Maintaining Separate Headquarters—Drill Competitions to Be Held Tuesday Night, Sept. 11—Fraternal Congress Committee Is in Charge.

Milwaukee Aug. 13. — Fraternalists of Wisconsin, under direction of a committee of the Wisconsin Fraternal League, of which John W. Brown of Stevens Point is secretary, will have a big day at this year's State Fair.

Fraternal Day will be Tuesday, Sept. 11.

All fraternal organizations in the Badger State have combined to make this even bigger than State Day, which will be Sept. 12. The committee has

STATE FAIR HELP FIGURES.

To guard the State Fair grounds requires nearly 200 men all week. Over fifty ticket sellers and takers are necessary. It requires nearly 2,000 employees in all capacities to run the fair.

Men working on promotion plans for many weeks, and the response it is receiving is more than encouraging.

There will be Fraternal City fronting on the main street of the Fair grounds. At the entrance to Fraternal City there will be a general office for the committee, and in the city each organization will maintain a headquarters all week. There will be special accommodations for fraternalists, including a lunch.

Drill competitions will be conducted in the big Stock Judging pavilion Tuesday night, and it is expected that several fraternal leaders of national reputation will speak during the program of drill competitions.

There also will be an immense parade of fraternalists Friday night during the night program in front of the grand stand, each order being represented by a float.

Fraternal organizations are planning to make Fraternal Day of value to them as well as of value to the State Fair. They intend the day as a sort of rallying time for consideration of fraternal matters, and it is understood that a number of fraternal orders intend to hold state or national conventions in Milwaukee during State Fair Week, Sept. 10 to 15.

Bureaus to provide rooms and other accommodations for fraternalists during their stay will be maintained both in the downtown district in Milwaukee and on the Fair grounds.

Fraternal Day was established in 1916. It is expected that a Fraternal Building will rise on the Fair grounds some day.

Good Printing

THE kind of printing that pays dividends is the kind you should have. Pale, muddy, poorly arranged printed matter is worse than none. The quality of your business is often judged by the quality of your stationery.

—inferior printing gives an impression of cheapness that is hard to overcome, while good printing carries with it a desirable suggestion of quality.

We produce only Quality Printing. Whether you want an inexpensive handbill or a letterhead in colors, if you order it from us you will be sure of getting good work. We have the equipment and the "know how" that enables us to get out really good printing—printing that impresses people with the good taste of its users. That is the only kind of printing that

To reunite the particles of mercury or other liquid which have become separated in a thermometer raise it to the level of the extended arm, the bulb upward, and jolt the tube with a quick downward stroke. Repeat this, not too vigorously, until the liquid returns to its proper position.

Colds Cured.

To cure colds, mix one pint of lard and two ounces of camphor gum, heat, and when cool add one tablespoonful of strong ammonia. Keep in cool airtight place. Apply to soft flannel and put on chest.

Shadoff an Ancient Device.

For 54 centuries the shadoff, a type of sweep used by the Egyptians for raising water, has been in common use. Indeed, it is thought by some to have been an ancient device even 3,500 years before Christ.

Stockholm Harbor Always Open.

Although Stockholm is within a few miles of being as far north as Cape Farewell, Greenland, ice breakers keep the harbor open in winter. Petrograd lies almost due east across the Baltic and the Gulf of Finland, a distance of 450 miles. Copenhagen is 330 miles in an air line to the southwest, and the German city of Danzig is the same distance due south.

THE SHARPLES UPWARD SQUEEZE MILKER

ONE OF THE BEST MILKING MACHINES ON THE MARKET

No one task about the farm is quite so uninviting—yes, even loathsome—as milking by hand the long line of cows twice a day the year around. Sundays—holidays—everyday, it is always the same tedious, tiresome task which has kept thousands out of the dairy business, driven a large part of the better class of hired help to seek other employment, and the sons of the household from the farm to the city. The nightmare of the dairyman has been to get and keep good, reliable, cleanly, gentle, efficient milkers who would stay right on the job twice a day three hundred and sixty-five days a year.

The SHARPLES MILKER fills all requirements for an efficient milker and fills them well; better than the best hand milker. With it one man can do the work of four to six men, and do it better in every respect. The Sharples Milker is absolutely reliable; is right there every day in the year; is cleanly beyond any comparison, excluding all possibility of dirt or even stable air; is more gentle, always even-tempered and more regular in its action than any hand milker; is most efficient in preserving soft, pliable, healthy teats and in quickly and thoroughly drawing the milk.

Furthermore, our "Upward Squeeze" teat-cup is the fastest milker known. This means, of course, that it gets the work done quicker. It has, however, a more far-reaching advantage. It is a well-known fact that fast milking will, week by week, increase the production of any cow and lengthen her lactation period. The fast milking seems to stimulate the milk-producing glands. Hence the Sharples teat-cup, combining both the healthful massage and the fast milking, will on the average, get more milk per year from the cow than is possible by any other method of milking.

All the cost of the exhibit is to be assumed by the federal government.

At least one acre of land will be required for actual trenches. There will be barbed wire entanglements, and dummy fighting between troops furnished by the government.

There will be placed on exhibit torpedoes, mines, guns of all types, a warship model, a submarine boat, and warplanes. War movies will be given and there will be many other features to fill an entire building.

To Push Safety in Factories.

S. J. Williams was appointed engineer to the industrial commission, to fill the position left vacant when C. W. Price entered the employ of the National Safety council. Williams has been the deputy of the commission in charge of building inspection. His home is in Madison, but he originally came from Milwaukee, where he was engaged in the contracting business.

He will have charge of the entire work of the industrial commission in promoting safety and sanitation in factories and workshops.

New Education Board.

The following appointments to the new industrial educational board were announced by Governor Phillip: Representatives of employers, E. W. Schultz, Sheboygan; Robert Cooper, Kenosha; E. J. Kearney, Milwaukee. Representatives of farmers, Miles L. Hineman, Tomah; George F. Conings, Eau Claire, and C. E. Hanson, River Falls. Representatives of labor, Oliver Ellsworth, Oshkosh; A. W. Taggart, Superior. A third place on the board to represent labor is to be filled by the governor.

New Laws on Child Labor.

One of the new laws of Wisconsin that is beginning to attract state-wide interest is the new child labor law.

This measure attracted very little attention in either house of the legislature and was passed without any opposition. Now, however, many inquiries are coming to the industrial commission upon the scope of the new law, and many manufacturers are endeavoring to ascertain what they must do to comply with its provisions.

Permits for Minors.

The most important change made is that after September 1, 1917, all minors under seventeen years of age must secure permits to go to work. The only exceptions are for farm work, for domestic service of a casual nature, and for other kinds of domestic service in cities in which there are no vocational schools. Under the old law only children up to sixteen years of age had to secure permits. As originally passed by the legislature, the new law provided that children up to eighteen years of age must secure permits. It also provided that the act should go into effect immediately upon passage. Upon representation by the industrial commission that these provisions would work great hardships to employers, the governor refused to sign this measure until the legislature had amended it to make the permit age seventeen instead of eighteen years and not to have the new law become effective until September 1, 1917.

Old System Confusing.

All permits hereafter are to be issued by the industrial commission and by such judges and other persons as the commission may designate to issue permits. Previously, county and municipal judges have had joint authority with the commission to issue child labor permits. This dual system led to much confusion and frequently permits were issued illegally with the result that the employers of such children subjected themselves to heavy penalties. Arrangements are now being made by the commission for the appointment of judges and other persons in each community to issue child labor permits.

Another change made by the new law is that striking out the provision of the old law allowing employers to work children of permit age 8½ hours per day on five days of the week, provided they were given Saturday afternoons off. Under the new law, a straight eight-hour day for children under sixteen years of age is provided, with a limit of 48 hours per week.

Increase Schooling Hours.

The legislature has also increased the hours per week during which children working under permits must go to continuation school. Hitherto it has been five per week, hereafter it will be eight per week for children under sixteen years of age and four per week for children from sixteen to seventeen years of age.

Farmers Act in Silo Campaign.

The silo building campaign waged by the college of agriculture and the county councils of defense is resulting in a widespread movement to conserve this year's corn crop.

Wisconsin's present quota of 60,000 silos or one to every third farm, will be greatly increased over the ratio of any previous year. Agricultural agents even hope for 75,000 silos before the end of 1918.

In response to inquiries by K. L. Hatch, director of the agricultural extension service, and A. W. Hopkins, secretary of the Livestock Breeders' association, manufacturers have sent assurances that prices will not be greatly advanced over former years and that there will be sufficient material to meet the demand.

Wisconsin bankers are repeating their promises to loan money for silo construction. The bankers' stand is backed by an appeal to farm patriotism and business sense by Magnus Swenson, chairman of the state council of defense.

Managers of creameries and cheese factories are including with their monthly cream and milk checks inserts in which the value of dairy defense and silo building is pointed out.

Be a Brother to Some Soldier.

The stay-at-home rangers are appealed to by the state council of defense in the following plea for co-operation:

"Now is the time when Uncle Sam expects every citizen to be a soldier. To each one of us comes the privilege of enduring a soldier service to our country, even though most of us must remain at home. It is up to everyone of us to stand back of the boys who wear the uniform and who bear the brunt of our battle at the front.

"Every fellow who is to have the honor of representing Wisconsin at the front should have every reasonable assurance that his home affairs will receive the best possible attention while he is away.

"Back of every soldier boy there should be here at home a citizen soldier who would be his personal friend and 'back-home' fellow, his brother, his pal."

To Secure Uniformity in Exemption.

In order to secure uniformity in exemption under the federal draft law by the five district exemption appeal boards of the state of Wisconsin, the members of these boards at a conference held here created a state central committee, consisting of the chairman of each of the five district boards, to formulate rules and regulations for the guidance of the district boards and to adopt a general uniform policy to be followed by the district boards in the performance of important responsibilities.

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

MODES ADAPTED TO FULL FIGURES.

Designers of apparel for stout women are confronted with two problems: one, to make accepted styles becoming to full figures and the other, to create styles exclusively for them. The first problem takes most of their time and thought, for all women like to dress in the mode, and the perverse modes continue to be designed for the slimmest of youth. But specialists are doing more than their bit toward making life happy for women whose figures have rounded out to the fullness of matronhood.

Just how successfully they can design becoming clothes is set forth in the costume of wool and satin shown in the picture. The underskirt and upper part of the sleeves are of satin, the overdress of serge, and it might be of any of the more substantial woolen fabrics. Every line in this model shows careful thought on the part of its creator. The straight hanging satin skirt adds nothing to the size of the hips. A little carefully disposed fullness in the overskirt straightens the line from bust to hips and the pockets are placed where they will not widen the figure. By extending the overdress into points at the sides an almost straight line is achieved from neck to hem. The point on the deep cuffs makes the sleeves shapely and the narrow collar and short shoulder seam lessen the width of the shoulders.

Rows of small buttons on the sleeves and on the front of the overdress center the eyes on straight lines. Soutache braid makes a dignified finish and with the pockets proclaims the designer's allegiance to prevailing modes.

What Can We Do?

The American Red Cross is organizing 30 base hospitals and preparing the equipment, supplies and personnel for them. The magnitude of this undertaking can be glimpsed when we consider that each unit has 23 surgeons, two dentists, 50 graduate nurses with assistants and attendants making up 250 persons; for the 30 units, 7,500 persons, trained to care for the wounded.

Besides the permanent equipment of these hospitals with the most modern appliances for the care of the sick and for surgical cases, it is necessary to provide great numbers of articles that are quickly consumed by a hospital in service, such as bandages, splints, pads, drains, garments worn by the wounded and all sorts of surgical dressings. These are called consumable hospital supplies and these are the things that women are making and will continue to make while war lasts. Every woman can help in this work in some way. Not to do something is a confession of indifference or of cold-hearted lack of sympathy or of selfishness—a betrayal of cheap character that dishonors womanhood.

But indifference often springs from lack of knowledge and not from coldness of heart. Red Cross headquarters have been deluged with letters from women all over the country, offering to help in any way they can. For their benefit one of the important chapters of the Red Cross has issued a circular of information concerning the work of base hospitals and in it a vivid picture is painted of the experiences of the wounded soldier from the time he falls until he reaches a base hospital. DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

FAIRYLAND PARTY.

"It had been such a hot summer day," commenced Daddy, "that the fairies thought they should give an evening party."

"We haven't given one for so long a time," said Fairy Ybab.

"That is so," said Princess Twilight-Bell, "and now is just the time of the day I love to think of a party. The sun is going to bed and the moon is about to join us. It is in the lovely in-between-time of blue shadows and wonderful colors."

"You have a name well suited to you," said Princess Joy. "No one loves the twilight as you do. And your voice is just like a lovely bell, too. Ah, you have a name just made for you."

"Princess Fairy Twilight-Bell, or Twilight-Bell, as she was usually called, made a low bow, and said,

"I thank you, Princess Joy. You make us happy with your sweet smiles and kindly speeches."

"Well," said Princess Joy, "it is so much more fun to tell creatures how lovely they are than to always be scolding and fussing."

"And you are well named, too," said Twilight-Bell.

"Princess Joy laughed, threw her wand up in the air, and said, 'Oh, for an evening of fun. Oh, for dancing, singing, story-telling and a fairyland supper!'"

"Just then the Queen of the Fairies came along. She was wearing a gown of purple with silver stars and on her head was a crown of silver with a beautiful long purple feather in the front.

The Rose Petals Danced About.

"I hear rumors of a party tonight," said the Fairy Queen. "In fact, I think we all feel like one. Well, let's hurry. We'll ask all our friends—the gnomes, brownies, bogies, elves, oaves, old Mr. Giant, Witty Witch and the merry little goblins."

"Ah," said Princess Joy, "it will be a great and large party. Fairyland will be aglow with joy and merrymaking this very evening."

"Soon all the woodland creatures came to the party. The messages had been taken to them ever so quickly, for the Summer Evening Breeze Brigade had carried them. And they, too, were asked to the party."

"We must have the summer breezes," said the Queen of the Fairies, and all agreed.

"Mr. and Mrs. South Wind were invited, too, and they came right on time. The stars all came out and laughed to see such fun. The moon beamed and grinned.

"He often played hide-and-seek behind the big pine trees, but most of the time he was right out shining over them all. The reason for that was because he did not want to miss a moment's fun while he was 'hidin' and not 'seekin'."

"We have come, too," said some very soft voices, and the most wonderful fragrance filled the air.

"It's like a rose garden," said the Queen of the Fairies.

"It must be a rose garden," said the other fairies and guests.

"But they were some distance from the nearest rose garden, and they couldn't quite understand the delicious, wondrous scent of roses.

"Soon, all about them, scampered the rose petals. 'The Summer Evening Breeze Brigade brought us,' they said. 'We just came along with them, dancing over the ground until we got here. Do you like us?' And the rose petals danced about and flew gently over the green moss and the soft woodland ground.

"You are so lovely," said the fairies, "and the sweet rose fragrance makes this indeed a fairyland party."

"And," said the Queen of the Fairies, "we must thank the Summer Evening Breeze Brigade, for they invited our guests and they brought us the rose petals for a glorious surprise."

"The Summer Evening Breeze Brigade were so much pleased that they began to sing a song of a summer evening in fairyland. The earth people thought the trees were whistling and the breezes blowing gently and whispering, perhaps, but it was the echo from fairyland of the song of happiness and joy they were singing.

"And the fairyland party kept on until the Dawn fairies arrived for their breakfasts, and the others went to the land of fairyland dreams."

She Was.

"Hello, Bub," said the stranger to the small boy sitting on the steps of the house. "Is the boss home?"

"Yes," replied the small boy, "She's in the back yard."

STORE FRUIT JUICES

How to Prepare for the Future Comfort of the Family.

ALL FRUITS CAN BE UTILIZED

Grape Juice—Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider—Here is a Fine Flavoring Sirup.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Various fruit juices may be prepared in the home and bottled for future use. Practically any fruit may be used in the first recipe following.

Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider—Add five ounces of powdered calcium carbonate (obtained at any drug store) to seven gallons of apple cider. Powdered calcium carbonate (carbonate of lime) or, to give it its common name, precipitated chalk, is low-priced and harmless.

Make a cotton stopper and press into the neck of the bottle and leave during the sterilization period. Set bottles in boiling hot water up to the neck of the bottle, sterilizing the fruit juice for 30 minutes at a simmering temperature (165 degrees Fahrenheit).

Grape Juice by Two-Day Method—For home use there are a large number of varieties of grapes which will make a pleasant and healthful drink.

however, only clean, sound fruit should be used and it should be well ripened, but not overripe. The grapes should first be crushed and pressed in an ordinary cider mill or by hand if no mill is available.

Red Juice—For red juice, the crushed grapes are heated to about 200 degrees Fahrenheit before the juice is separated from the pulp and then strained through a clean cloth or drip bag without pressure.

Grape Juice should be stored away in bottles or jars that are not too large, for after these have been opened the juice is likely to spoil.

Sirup Made From Windfall Apples and Apple Cider—Add five ounces of powdered calcium carbonate (obtained at any drug store) to seven gallons of apple cider. Powdered calcium carbonate (carbonate of lime) or, to give it its common name, precipitated chalk, is low-priced and harmless.

When the test shows that the sirup has been cooked enough, pour it into fruit jars, pitchers, etc., and allow it to cool slowly. Slow cooling is important, as otherwise the suspended matter will not settle properly and the sirup will be cloudy.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Be true to the best that is in your soul. And follow your high ideal. And so, as the beautiful seasons roll, you shall see your dreams grow real.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE TABLE.

A delicacy for luncheon or tea is small, round crisp crackers, covered for after these have been opened the juice is likely to spoil.

Mock Chicken—Take two pounds of round steak, cut rather thin, a quarter of a pound of bacon and one onion. Cut steak into pieces about five inches long and three wide, salt and pepper and lay strips of the bacon lengthwise on the steak.

Chicken a la King—Melt four tablespoons of butter in a chafing dish, add half a green pepper chopped fine and cook for three or four minutes. Add two tablespoons of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, cook until smooth, then add a pint of cream and stir until the sauce thickens.

Green Gage Sherbet—Take a quart of green gage plums, stew and put through a sieve, add the juice of two lemons, one and a half cupfuls of sugar, and two tablespoons of softened gelatin.

Honey Rolls—Dissolve a yeast cake in a cupful of warm milk, add a half cupful of butter or other fat, a tablespoonful of sugar and a teaspoonful of salt.

Tomato and Asparagus Salad—Cut firm, ripe tomatoes into half-inch slices and stamp out the center of each with a very small biscuit cutter.

SEASONABLE IDEAS.

The spicing and preserving season has already begun, but be sure to add a few quarts of spiced blackberries.

Spiced Blackberries—Put seven pounds of blackberries in a preserving kettle with three pounds of sugar and a pint of cider vinegar.

Berry Jam—In selecting berries for jam the ripe, broken ones will give fine color and flavor, but about one-half the quantity should be slightly underripe.

Cherry Preserves—Pick morello cherries when fully ripe, remove the stems, but do not pit, prick each one to prevent bursting. For each pound of cherries allow a pound and a half of loaf sugar.

Green Beans in Salt Brine—Take fresh beans, string and cut for table use, dry with a cloth and place on a layer of salt in a crock, cover with another layer of salt and repeat until the crock is nearly full.

Small berries like currants, black berries, blue berries and raspberries may all be satisfactorily dried by placing them on trays in the sun or drying them around the stove, or using both methods.

SAXON "SIX"

A BIG TOURING CAR FOR FIVE PEOPLE

25.9 Miles Per Gal. of Gas

234 stock model Saxon "Sixes" travel 70,200 miles July 18 and set grand average of 25.9 miles per gal. of gas

To give a national demonstration of the remarkable gasoline economy of Saxon "Six", 234 Saxon dealers joined in a 300 mile drive July 18.

A grand average of 25.9 miles per gallon of gasoline was registered for the 70,200 miles of travel.

Consider that this run took place in 234 different parts of the country, under 234 different sets of conditions, over 234 different kinds of roads.

Consider that these 234 cars were stock model Saxon "Sixes", not "tuned up" special cars, not cars with "doped" gasoline.

Saxon Motor Car Corporation, Detroit

That proves that this 25.9 miles per gallon of gasoline is the ordinary, the average performance of 234 Saxon "Sixes" taken right out of stock.

And it proves as nothing else would prove, the gasoline economy your Saxon "Six" will give you. No other car in its class can match this record.

Furthermore, these 234 Saxon "Sixes" averaged 175 miles per quart of oil.

And not a single instance of mechanical trouble occurred throughout the entire 70,200 miles.

There is the proof that Saxon "Six" is your kind of a car. Price f. o. b. Detroit, $935.

Didn't Seem to Be "Free" Seeds.

An Indiana congressman recently made a liberal distribution of free seeds, sending them to his constituents in franked envelopes on which appeared the regular warning, "Penalty for private use, $300," says the Indianapolis News.

"I don't know what to do about those garden seeds you sent me. I notice it is $300 fine for private use. I don't want to use them for the public. I want to plant them in my private garden. I can't afford to pay $300 for the privilege. Won't you see if you can fix it so I can use them privately? I am a law-abiding citizen, and do not want to commit a crime."

WHERE SEASONS ARE MIXED

Caves exist in United States in which ice freezes in Summer and Thaws in Winter.

There are several cases in the United States where nature seems to have become confused as to the seasons, according to Popular Science Monthly. During the late spring and summer ice forms and a freezing temperature prevails, but as winter comes on the interior of the caves becomes milder, the ice gradually melts and a kind of subdued summer sets in underground.

One of these peculiar caves is to be found at Coudersport, Pa., and one at Decorah, Iowa. The superstitious among the residents of those localities give the caves a wide berth and look with suspicion upon any one daring enough to attempt to investigate them.

Edwin S. Balch of Philadelphia, who has made a study of the subterranean ice mines, as they are called, states that according to the theory evolved by investigators the formation of the caverns is such that the cold air of winter does not penetrate and settle in them until late in the spring at the time when the water from spring thaws is seeping through the walls and roof. This water meeting the cold air freezes and stays frozen all summer until, as the fall season approaches, the warm summer air at last finds its way into the cave and melts the ice.

Naturally Grave.

"I have here," said the party with the unbarbered hair who had ejected his person into the editorial sanctum when the office boy wasn't looking, "a little poem entitled 'A Pauper's Grave.'"

"Huh!" growled the editor. "Nothing remarkable about that. Who has a better right to be grave than a pauper? You certainly wouldn't expect his mirth to sloop, would you?"

Careless Management.

If the term "carelessness" must be used, it might well be applied to management which permits hazards to exist; but surely not to the injured themselves, for self-preservation is the first law of nature, and it is inconceivable that anyone with rare exceptions should wilfully permit or cause injury to themselves.—H.
