CO. E OF FOND DU LAC TO GO TO FRANCE

Orders were received at Camp Douglas that Co. E of Fond du Lac, Co. F of Oshkosh and Co. G of Appleton had been chosen as part of the new "Rainbow" division which will be sent to France in the very near future.

Every company selected for this division is a crack company. And this is the class in which Co. E belongs, and in which it has been chosen for these many years by reason of its efficiency.

No higher honor could be paid to the Fond du Lac organization. It is a recognition of merit. The company needs a division of the best troops available at present. For these many years it has been developed through a score of years of hard practice and loyalty of its men who form a company that stands preeminent by reason of its worth.

Year after year Company E has gone to Camp Douglas with a body of well trained fighting men who participated in the mimic warfare as if it were a reality. Year after year these have returned with trophies which bore mute evidence to the effect that they were the flower of the Wisconsin National Guard and the Wisconsin National Guard is the best in America.

Co. E will be located at Mineola, L. I. until the orders come to the soldiers to take the boat for France. These local boys along with Co. E names Alfred and John Meisnick and Walter Matheiu which makes the movement of this company doubly interesting to us. Let us hope that the boys will so deport themselves as to live up to the reputation of one of the best companies in the United States.

J. B. Day Labor Agent

The Pilot wishes to again certify the farmers of this county that we have a county labor agent working under the Washington County Defense League. He is here to try and secure help for the farmers where needed, to place men looking for work where they can be of the greatest use to their country. James B. Day of Hartford is the labor agent, and any farmer wishing hired help or men looking for employment should state their wants to him, and if at all possible, their wants will be supplied. Mr. Day can be found by calling at 280 East Summer street, Hartford, or by phoning 264. Don't feel backward, for you will find Mr. Day will do all he possibly can to find men for the unemployed men.—West Bend Pilot.

Badge for Exempted Men

"Exempted U. S." A small round metal badge bearing these words will shield from public eyes of "slacker" those men freed by exemption boards from the duty of bearing arms. Thousands of these little buttons have been and will be sent to the exemption boards. From several designs submitted by artists, the war department selected one of simple red, white and blue, with the exemption inscription within a concentric circle.

BIG IMPROVEMENT MADE ON ZUMACH HILL

Under the capable management of Frank Rose, the Zumach hill located about 1 1/2 miles southeast of this village and the St. Michaels road, has been greatly improved the past few weeks. The hill has been cut down considerably and gravel has been hauled and filled in on the west approach of the hill which formerly was clear sand for some time. About eight or ten inches making it almost impossible for autos to make the hill on account of not being able to get good start at the base of the same. This piece of road has been a drawback to travel for some time, and now that Mr. Rose has put it in excellent condition, the farmers along this route will find that marketing their produce will be much easier than heretofore. Too much praise cannot be given Mr. Rose in the interest he has taken in this stretch of highway and the expense and labor has been subjected to in order to gain his point, an excellent piece of good gravel road. We hope other residents of the community may take an example of Mr. Rose's work and try and make their roads, where needed into first class highways.

Women's War Work

Sir: Granting the truth of your recent contention that pay is essential to the maintenance of industrial stability and vigor, I maintain that work is equally important to the average American woman. And, at last we have a domestic world whose need of workers coincides with the needs of our bodies and minds.

Industry needs workers and workers need to be industrious. The factories and farms and printing companies are not turning out workers and applicants. The "A Positions Are Filled" sign is covering with dust; the "Help Wanted" sign is working overtime. We are no longer harassed by the sight of scantily clad men and women traveling from door to door in quest of work. We pitied these creatures with starving bodies. Work may be a factor in saving us from the fate of being mindless pinheads with starving minds.

We need work for the same reason, that we need play; to keep our minds healthy and active; to divert us from agonizing worry over our sons, our husbands, and our other duties at the front. We need diversion and diversion of play alone will not suffice. We need absorbing, will prove our mainstay in the strain which we who remain at home must undergo.

We need more than a few hours a day of idling or handbagging. We need steady, relentless work, work which will leave us so bodily and mentally weary at night that we cannot dream. Work is one of the best of all remedies for the harassed mind.

Our country is in crying need of workers; she needs a vast army of producers to make food and clothing and ammunition for ourselves and our allies. By answering her need we may help defeat two enemies; the enemy abroad and our own insidious, home enemy. Let us not hoard our energy against future, indefinite needs; energy, and the capacity to do increase with exercise. Let us, unless we have wholesome, constructive ideas to offer the world, turn our strength from purposeless reflection to a material existence of work and sleep and play.

A Frightful Accident

Erwin Kirmse of the town of Fredonia met with a frightful accident last Friday afternoon. He was in the field cutting asycke clover, when a stone became lodged on the platform of his mowing machine. Without throwing out the gear, his machine, Mr. Kirmse jumped off of his seat and stood in front of the sickle bar to remove the stone. Just then his team started up, and his right foot was caught in the knives. Before he could stop his horse, his foot was nearly cut off near the ankle. He mounted the mower and drove home, a gallop and medical aid was summoned. Dr. Cooper of Watubeka brought Mr. Kirmse to West Bend to the Columbia hospital, where Dr. A. H. Heider assisted in dressing the leg and it took one hundred and forty-seven stitches to do this. Mr. Kirmse is doing nicely and will not lose his foot.—West Bend News.

TO BACK GRAHL IN FIGHT FOR CITIZENSHIP

Nine of the fourteen men who may lose their citizenship papers at the case brought against Henry T. Grahl, an Eden farmer going against him in the Federal District Court at Milwaukee, pledged themselves to back Grahl in the test case at a meeting of those affected Saturday night. The defendants in the action will be in the hands of W. W. Hughes of Fond du Lac.

Henry Grahl is an Eden farmer who took out his first naturalization papers before the outbreak of the war with Germany, but who was grandfathered in by the act of April 5, by Judge Fowler over the protests of the federal examiners. The United States attorney is bringing suit against Grahl, alleging that he has no right to the papers acquired after the outbreak of the war.

The case will be tried before Judge F. A. Geiger of the United States District Court at Milwaukee if the verdict is against the defendant here the case will be carried to the United States Court of Appeals.

The case will be tried before Judge Geiger August 23. Nine of the fourteen men concerned have agreed to back Grahl in the test case and share the expense of the court proceedings. It is expected that the other four will also enter the agreement.

POPE MAKES PLEA TO BELLIGERENTS FOR PEACE TERMS

Teuton Influence Seen in Papal Proposals.

FOR RETURN OF ALL LANDS

Pontiff Wants Supreme Tribunal of Arbitration to Settle All Future International Disputes—Washington Diplomat See Offer Inspired by Berlin.

Rome, Italy, Aug. 15.—Peace proposals made by Pope Benedict have been delivered to all the belligerent governments.

The pope suggests restoration of Belgium, Serbia, and Roumania and peaceful solution of the problems of Alsace-Lorraine, Trent, Trieste and Poland.

According to reports received from Vatican sources, it is expected the proposals will be published by the Vatican.

Pope Includes Wilson Ideas.

Washington, Aug. 15.—An unofficial outline of Pope Benedict's peace proposals received here discloses that the pontiff includes some of the principles of world peace for which President Wilson has declared. Among the pope's proposals are reduction of armaments, freedom of the seas and that there shall be no retaliatory struggle after the war for world commercial supremacy. These are regarded as the foundation stones of the pope's plan.

The pope's proposal declares that the injuries to all belligerents have been so great that there should be no thought of reparation except for the return of territory.

Included in the restoration of territory, the pope's proposals insist, should be the return to Germany of all her colonies, as well as the complete restoration of Belgium to her sovereignty.

Pope's Proposals Are Long.

The pope's proposals, which already have been delivered to the resident ambassadors and ministers of the warring powers in Rome, make in print more than a column of large newspaper type. Although special efforts are being made to facilitate transmission to the United States, this may not be effected for at least a day or two.

Meanwhile an accurate outline of the principal points of the communication is in the hands of the government and has received thoughtful consideration.

In eloquent language the pontiff describes the terrible condition existing in Europe, which he declares is headed for destruction unless the belligerents are willing to listen to the appeals of interested friends to cease a suicidal war. Such conditions, the pope feels, amply justify him in taking the present opportunity to suggest what may be, he hopes, at least a foundation upon which peace negotiations may be initiated.

At best Pope Benedict's proposals are suggested only as a rough basis for such negotiations, and he realizes that the details in all their complexity must be worked out patiently and in a spirit of conciliation by the belligerents.

Indorses Plans of President.

Unqualified approval of President Wilson's plan for the avoidance of future wars by some form of international organization which shall have behind it the necessary power to enforce its judgments is given by Pope Benedict, who declares that along with such a splendid project must go an effective arrangement for reduction of armaments to a point just sufficient for defensive purposes or to carry out the mandates of the world court.

It is inconceivable, the pope holds, that any permanent peace can be maintained unless the various peoples are willing to gather in an amity founded upon a recognition of national rights.

Must Be Freedom of Seas.

Any attempt to prevent free economic action between the belligerents, the pope points out, would be disastrous; therefore he says there must be freedom of the seas in all that the term implies.

In a spirit of conciliation and justice, he says, all the belligerents must submit to accept the losses they have sustained except in the matter of territory and beside these questions of indemnity and reparation the pope declares that there must be no continuation of the war by an economic struggle for supremacy thereafter which would be purely evil.

This refers directly to the so-called Paris economic conference, which was followed by one in Vienna, where the effort was made to bind the belligerents on either side after the war to have virtually no commercial relations with their late enemies.

On the important question of the disposition of occupied territory and the territorial ambitions of the belligerents the pope, by way of preface, admits that special cases might justify special consideration and still be adjusted in conformity with the principles of equity and justice. But, as a general proposition, he feels that a proper basis for discussion would be the restoration of all territory now in enemy occupation. That would involve liberation of Belgium, leaving not a trace of German control, political or military.

The same principle of unincumbered freedom in its full sense, he says, should prevail in regard to every power and nation. Not only must French territory now occupied by Germany be restored to France, he says, but, on the other hand, all German colonies which have been occupied by England, Portugal, Belgium and Japan should be returned to Germany.

Would Hear Voice of People.

The more difficult question of Italy Irredenta, the pope thinks, should be examined in a spirit of conciliation and fairness and that a special consideration in the settlement should be given to national aspirations.

Likewise does the pope hold that the complex questions involved in readjustment of the Balkan states should be considered in the same spirit of equity and justice. He has especially in mind Armenia, the Balkans and Poland, and the intimation conveyed is that these questions can safely be dealt with by direct diplomatic exchanges between the belligerents, once an agreement is reached upon the general principles of recognition of national aspirations and justice.

The state department acknowledges that it received unofficial knowledge of the peace proposals before the news dispatches were received here. No official cognizance can be taken of it until the proposal is conveyed officially. Whatever consideration is given to it will be after consultation with the entente allies.

Within the entente diplomatic circle the opinion was freely and promptly expressed that the peace proposal was inspired by Germany and was an attempt to split the allies in a conflicting discussion of their war aims.

TOO LATE!

RULES TO NEW ARMY NEW BRITISH DRIVE

DRAFTED MEN ARE TOLD HOW TO REPORT FOR DUTY.

Recruits for National Army Will Be Summoned to the Colors September 1.

Washington, Aug. 11.—Local exemption boards will be in full charge of assembling the men called to the colors September 1. They will give the new fighting force its actual induction into military life, provide the men with meals, shelter and transportation, and escort them personally to the train for the mobilization camps.

Explicit regulations under which the first segment of the national army will be mobilized were issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder at Washington.

The details of the program for mobilizing the first 230,000 men called to the colors September 1 and forwarded to their camps before September 5 are as follows:

The actual call will go from the provost marshal general to the state adjutant general, stating the number of men to be supplied. Each local board will be at once informed of how many men it must furnish and the adjutant general will fix the day for enrolling the men.

The local board at once will make out the list of men to fill the call from the roll of accepted men, and will fix the place of entrapment and time of departure.

Orders to the men will be posted and also sent by mail. The men will be directed to report to the local board not less than 12 hours before the time of departure for camp.

Before the men arrive at board headquarters the board members must arrange for their accommodation. At board headquarters at the hour fixed for reporting the men will be drawn up, the roll called and agents will take them personally to their quarters, remaining with them until every arrangement for their comfort has been made. Emphatic notice is given that the quality of food shall be good.

For each district five alternates will be summoned. They will be held at the assembling point until train time to fill in vacancies should any men of the levy fail to report.

LOWDEN WINS FIGHT ON COAL

Agreement With Owners Provides Complete Safeguards Against Extortionate Costs.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Coal prices in Illinois are to go tumbling. Illinois citizens are assured a bounteous supply of coal.

The state now has a "coal dictator." He is Chief Justice Orrin N. Carter of the state supreme court.

Illinois coal mine operators threw up their hands in absolute surrender of Gov. Frank O. Lowden at midnight Friday after a five-hour grueling conference at the Blackstone hotel.

It was a sweeping victory for the governor. Lone-handed, behind locked doors, he fought. In the end there came complete surrender.

Epitomized here is the agreement: 1. Illinois coal is to be conserved for Illinois—it is not to go to other states paying higher prices.

2. At once the retailer is to be placed under fire and must reduce his prices to the consumers and with a big slash.

3. Chief Justice Carter, as "director of coal," is to decide all questions as to production. He is empowered to fix prices at which coal shall be sold at the mine.

GERMANS ARE SWEEPED BACK BY HAIG IN BELGIUM.

English Troops Capture All Teuton Forward Positions East of Mooge—Objectives Gained.

British Front in France and Belgium, Aug. 13.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig's forces at daybreak attacked and captured virtually all the German forward positions east of the Belgian town of Hooge on the battle front between Frezenburg and the Ypres-Menin road. The assaulting forces gained virtually all their objectives to the depth of several hundred yards in the first rush.

The German defenses stiffened after the initial onslaught and heavy fighting developed at some places, but at the latest reports the British were holding their new line strongly.

London, Aug. 13.—The French forces on the left flank of the British line in Belgium made further progress on Friday east and north of Bixchoote, according to the official report made to the war office by Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig.

British raiding parties blew up the German dugouts on a wide front east of Monchy le Preux, on the Arras front, the report adds, and greatly damaged the Teuton defenses.

On the battle front directly east of the Belgian town of Ypres, the British completed the capture of the town of Westhoek and secured the remaining positions held by the Germans on the Westhoek ridge, the official statement adds.

Paris, Aug. 13.—The French forces made further progress against the German positions on the Belgian front on Friday. The Frenchmen broke into the German lines, occupied several farms to the east of Bixchoote and a number of machine guns, according to the official statement given out by the French war office.

North of St. Quentin the Germans attacked the French positions along a front of nearly a mile in the region of Fayet. The French statement says the assault was repulsed.

HARVEST OF GOLD IN U. S.

America Has More of Yellow Metal Than Any Nation in History of World.

Washington, Aug. 13.—A rich harvest of gold has been the reward of neutrality in the great war; without exception the trading countries which have remained neutral have all greatly increased their holding of gold. The United States added to her gold stock until she now has approximately $2,000,000,000 in gold, a greater amount than any single nation ever held in the history of the world. Since this country's entrance into the war, gold has still continued to come in because war participation has not diminished the ability of the United States to sell vast quantities of supplies.

BOMBS DROPPED IN GERMANY

Paris, Aug. 14.—Two French aviators dropped bombs on Frankfurt-on-the-Main, one of the most important cities of the German empire, having a population of more than 300,000. A French official statement announcing the raid says it was in retaliation for the German aerial bombardment of Nancy and the region north of Paris.

DRAFT ARMY CALLED

NEW NATIONAL FORCE WILL BE MOVED SEPTEMBER 5, SAYS GENERAL CROWDER.

80 PER CENT FIRST DAY

Final Decision on Mobilization Dates for First 500,000 Men Drawn Indicates They Will Be Training by October.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The new national army will be moved into cantonment camps beginning September 5, Provost General Crowder announced on Monday. The first increment of 30 per cent will be moved September 5, the second of 30 per cent September 15, and the third September 30. The remaining 10 per cent will be moved to camps as soon thereafter as possible.

The dates specified for each movement of troops are for entrainment at home stations.

Final decision on mobilization dates for the first 500,000 men drawn indicates that virtually all of the first citizen army will be in training by the first week in October. Each mobilization day will be turned over to a patriotic demonstration.

The first day will be Wednesday, the second Saturday and the third will fall on Sunday. On the days named the men accepted for service will report to their local boards and will entrain for camp within 24 hours after their report.

They must present themselves in civilian clothes, with nothing but absolutely necessary baggage.

For many days the war department and railway experts have been working out plans for the great troop movement to camp. It is stated the men will go with the least personal inconvenience.

The plan to assemble the new forces in three increments distributes the task of furnishing supplies and equipment through September. It will also prevent serious shortages in any camp, and will give the new officers from the training camps time to familiarize themselves with their duties gradually before responsibility for a great body of men falls on them.

Four American Missionaries Perish When British Steamer City of Athens Is Destroyed.

U. S. MEN CAPTURED

AMERICAN CAPTAIN AND FOUR OF GUN CREW TAKEN FROM TANKER.

GERMANS MAY HANG MASTER

Yankees Taken From Standard Oil Steamer Campania, Which Was Sent to the Bottom, Says Navy Department.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Sinking of the American steamer Campania, a Standard Oil tanker, with the probable capture of her captain and four members of the naval guard by the attacking German submarine, was announced on Sunday by the navy department.

The department issued this statement: "The Standard Oil tanker Campania, American steamer, was sunk by a submarine on the morning of August 6 143 miles west of Ile de Re. Forty-seven survivors reached land in safety. It is believed that the captain of the steamer and four of the guards are prisoners on board the German submarine."

Officials fear that the Germans will meet out the same fate to the Campania captain as they did to Captain Fryatt.

Capt. Charles Fryatt, master of the British liner Brussels, who was captured by the Germans on March 28, 1915, charged with attempting to ram the Teuton submarine U-33, was tried, condemned and shot to death the afternoon of July 27 of last year.

New York, Aug. 14.—The Campania was formerly the steamship Dunholme. She was built in 1901 at West Hartlepool, England, and was registered at 3,343 tons gross, 2,133 tons net. She was 335 feet long, with a beam of 47 feet.

An Atlantic Port, Aug. 14.—Another German submarine, if the gunners of a British freighter which arrived here are correct in their assumption that three shots, which struck an undersea boat off Brest, France, sent her to the bottom. The Britisher encountered the submarine on her last outward trip from this port.

One shot destroyed the periscope. The second and third were followed by an explosion and the submarine disappeared. The gunners were confident that the submarine went down involuntarily.

Named Controller After President Signs Conservation Measures—Outlines Policies.

Washington, Aug. 13.—The administration food control and food survey bills were signed on Friday by President Wilson and became law.

Formal appointment of Herbert Hoover as food administrator was announced at the White House later.

The first bill provides for stimulation of production and the second for control of foods and fuel.

The president summoned Mr. Hoover to the White House and signed a legislative order appointing him food administrator.

Mr. Hoover tells of his plans in a statement which he issued here.

"The food administration is to stabilize and not disturb conditions, and to defend honest enterprise against illegitimate competition," he said. "It has been devised to correct the abnormalities and abuses that have crept into trade by reason of the world disturbance and to restore business as far as may be to a reasonable basis."

The HILLMAN

A Story About an Experiment With Life

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

JOHN STRANGEWAY FEELS THE LURE OF LOVELY WOMAN AND IS UNABLE TO BREAK THE SPELL LOUISE HAS WOVEN

Synopsis.—On a trip through the English Cumberland country the breakdown of her automobile forces Louise Maurel, a famous London actress, to spend the night at the farm home of John and Stephen Strangeway. At dinner Louise discovers that the brothers are woman-hating recluses. Next morning she discovers that John, the younger brother, has recently come into a large fortune. In company with him she explores the farm and is disturbed by evidence of his rigid moral principles. He learns she is a friend of the prince of Sayre, a rich and disreputable neighbor. Three months later, unable to shake off the girl's memory, John goes to London.

"You aren't letting your thoughts dwell upon that woman?"

"I have thought about her sometimes," John answered, almost defiantly. "What's the harm? I'm still here, am I not?"

Stephen crossed the room. From the drawer of the old mahogany sideboard he produced an illustrated paper. He turned back the frontispiece fiercely and held it up.

"Do you see that, John?"

"I've seen it already."

Stephen threw the paper upon the table.

"She's going to act in another of those confounded French plays," he said; "translations with all the wit taken out and all the vulgarity left in."

"We knew nothing of her art," John declared coldly. "We shouldn't understand it, even if we saw her act. Therefore it isn't right for us to judge her. The world has found her a great actress. She is not responsible for the plays she acts in."

Stephen turned away and lit his pipe anew. He smoked for a minute or two furiously. His thick eyebrows came closer and closer together. He seemed to be turning some thought over in his mind.

"John," he asked, "is it this cursed money that is making you restless?"

"I never think of it except when someone comes begging. I promised a thousand pounds to the infirmary today."

"Then what's wrong with you?"

John stretched himself out, a splendid figure of healthy manhood. His cheeks were sun-tanned, his eyes clear and bright.

"The matter? There's nothing on earth the matter with me," he declared.

"It isn't your health I mean. There are other things, as you well know. You do your day's work and you take your pleasure, and you go through both as if your feet were on a treadmill."

"Your fancy, Stephen?"

"God grant it! I've had an unwelcome visitor in your absence."

John turned swiftly around.

"A visitor?" he repeated. "Who was it?"

Stephen glowered at him for a moment.

"It was the prince," he said; "the prince of Sayre, as he calls himself, though he has the right to style himself Master of Hainham. It's only his foreign blood which makes him choose what I regard as the lesser title. Yes,

"You Aren't Letting Your Thoughts Dwell Upon That Woman?"

he called to ask you to shoot and stay at the castle, if you would, from the sixteenth to the twentieth of next month."

"What answer did you give him?"

"I told him that you were your own master. You must send word tomorrow."

"He did not mention the names of any of his other guests, I suppose?"

"He mentioned no names at all."

John was silent for a moment. A bewildering thought had taken hold of him. Supposing she were to be there? Stephen, watching him, read his thoughts, and for a moment lost control of himself.

"Were you thinking about that woman?" he asked sternly.

"What woman?"

"The woman whom we sheltered here, the woman whose shameless picture is on the cover of that book."

John swung round on his heel.

"Stop that, Stephen!" he said menacingly.

"Why should I?" the older man retorted. "Take up that paper, if you want to read a sketch of the life of Louise Maurel. See the play she made her name in—'La Gioconda!'"

"What about it?"

Stephen held the paper out to his brother. John read a few lines and dashed it into a corner of the room.

"There's this much about it, John," Stephen continued. "The woman played that part night after night—played it to the life, mind you. She made her reputation in it. That's the woman we unknowingly let sleep beneath this roof! The barn is the place for her and her sort!"

John's clenched fists were held firmly to his sides. His eyes were blazing.

"That's enough, Stephen!" he cried. "No, it's not enough!" was the fierce reply. "The truth's been burning in my heart long enough. It's better out. You want to find her a guest at Raynham castle, do you?—Raynham castle, where never a decent woman crosses the threshold! If she goes there, she goes—Well!"

An anger that was almost paralyzing, a sense of the utter impotence of words, drove John in silence from the room. He left the house by the back door, passed quickly through the orchard, where the tangled moonlight lay upon the ground in strange, fantastic shadows; across the narrow strip of field, a field now of golden stubble; up the hill which looked down upon the farm buildings and the churchyard.

He sat grimly down upon a great boulder, filled with a hateful sense of unrequited passion, yet with a sheer thankfulness in his heart that he had escaped the miasma of evil thoughts which Stephen's words seemed to have created. The fancy seized him to face these half-veiled suggestions of his brother, so far as they concerned himself and his life during the last few months.

Stephen was right. This woman who had dropped from the clouds for those few brief hours had played strange havoc with John's thoughts and his whole outlook upon life. The coming of harvest, the care of his people, his sports, his cricket, the early days upon the grouse moors, had all suddenly lost their interest for him. Life had become a task. The echo of her half-mocking, half-challenging words was always in his ears.

He sat with his head resting upon his hands, looking steadfastly across the valley below. Almost at his feet lay the little church with its graveyard, the long line of stacks and barns, the laborers' cottages, the bailiff's house, the whole little colony around which his life seemed centered. The summer moonlight lay upon the ground almost like snow. He could see the sheaves of wheat standing up in the most distant of the cornfields. Beyond was the dark gorge toward which he had looked so many nights at this hour.

Across the viaduct there came a blaze of streaming light, a serpentine trail, a faintly heard whistle—the Scottish express on its way southward toward London. His eyes followed it out of sight. He found himself thinking of the passengers who would wake the next morning in London. He felt himself suddenly acutely conscious of his isolation. Was there not something almost monastic in the seclusion which had become a passion with Stephen, and which had its grip, too, upon him—a waste of life, a burying of talents?

He rose to his feet. The half-formed purpose of weeks held him now, definite and secure. He knew that this pilgrimage of his to the hilltop, his rapt contemplation of the little panorama which had become so dear to him, was in a sense valedictory.

After all, two more months passed before the end came, and it came then without a moment's warning. It was a little past midday when John drove slowly through the streets of Market Ketton in his high dogcart, exchanging salutations right and left with the tradespeople, with farmers brought into town by the market, with acquaintances of all sorts and conditions. More than one young woman from the shop windows or the pavements ventured to smile at him, and the few greetings he received from the wives and daughters of his neighbors were as gracious as they could possibly be made. John almost smiled once, in the act of raising his hat, as he realized how completely the whole charm of the world, for him, seemed to lie in one woman's eyes.

At the crossways, where he should have turned to the inn, he paused while a motorcar passed. It contained a woman, who was talking to her host. She was not in the least like Louise, and yet instinctively he knew that she was of the same world. The perfection of her white-serve costume, her spirit of it to me. In you I see the embodiment of my Therese."

Louise made no movement. Her eyes were fixed upon a certain shadowy corner of the wings. Overwrought as she had seemed, with the emotional excitement of her long speech, there was now a new and curious expression upon her face. She was looking at a tall, hesitating figure that stood just off the stage. She forgot the existence of the famous dramatist who hung upon her words. Her feet no longer trod the dusty boards of the theater. She was almost painfully conscious of the perfume of apple blossom.

"You!" she exclaimed, stretching out her hands. "Why do you not come and speak to me? I am here!"

John came out upon the stage. The French dramatist, with his hands behind his back, made swift mental notes of an interesting situation. He saw the coming of a man who stood like a giant among them, sunburnt, buoyant with health, his eyes bright with the wonder of his unexpected surroundings; a man in whose presence everyone else seemed to represent an effete and pallid type of humanity.

Those first few sentences, spoken in the midst of a curious little crowd of strangers, seemed to John, when he thought of his long waiting, almost piteously inadequate. Louise, recognizing the difficulty of the situation, swiftly recovered her composure. She was both tactful and gracious.

"Mr. Faraday," she said appealingly. "Mr. Strangeway comes from the country—he is, in fact, the most complete countryman I have ever met in my life. He comes from Cumberland, and he once—well, very nearly saved my life. He knows nothing about theaters, and he hasn't the least idea of the importance of a rehearsal. You won't mind if we put him somewhere out of the way till we have finished, will you?"

"After such an introduction," Faraday said in a tone of resignation. "Mr. Strangeway would be welcome at any time."

"There's a dear man!" Louise exclaimed. "Let me introduce him quickly. Mr. John Strangeway—Mr. Miles Faraday, M. Graillet, Miss Sophy Gerard, my particular little friend. The prince of Sayre you already know, although you may not recognize him trying to balance himself on that absurd stool."

John bowed in various directions, and Faraday, taking him good-naturedly by the arm, led him to a garden seat at the back of the stage.

"There!" he said. "You are one of the most privileged persons in London. You shall hear the finish of our rehearsal. There isn't a press man in London I'd have near the place."

Twenty-four hours away from his silent hills, John looked out with puzzled eyes from his dusty seat among ropes and pulleys and leaning fragments of scenery. What he saw and heard seemed to him, for the most part, a meaningless tangle of gestures and phrases. The men and women in fashionable clothes, moving about before that gloomy space of empty auditorium, looked more like marionettes than creatures of flesh and blood, drawn this way and that at the bidding of the stout, masterful Frenchman, who was continually muttering exclamations and banging the manuscript upon his hand. It seemed like a dream picture, with unreal men and women moving about aimlessly, saying strange words.

Then there came a moment which brought a tingle into his blood, which plunged his senses into hot confusion. He rose to his feet. It was a play which they were rehearsing, of course! It was a damnable thing to see Louise taken into that cold and obviously unreal embrace, but it was only a play. It was part of her work.

John resumed his seat and folded his arms. With the embrace had fallen an imaginary curtain, and the rehearsal was over. They were all crowded together, talking, in the center of the stage. The prince, who had stepped across the footlights, made his way to where John was sitting.

"So you have deserted Cumberland for a time?" he courteously inquired.

"I came up last night," John replied. "London, at this season of the year," the prince observed, "is scarcely at its best."

John smiled.

"I am afraid," he said, "that I am not critical. It is eight years since I was here last. I have not been out of Cumberland during the whole of that time."

The prince, after a moment's incredulous stare, laughed softly to himself.

"You are a very wonderful person, Mr. Strangeway," he declared. "I have heard of your good fortune. If I can be of any service to you during your stay in town," he added politely, "please command me."

"You are very kind," John replied gratefully.

Louise broke away from the little group and came across toward them.

"Free at last!" she exclaimed. "Now let us go out and have some tea."

CHAPTER VI.

The great French dramatist, dark, pale-faced and corpulent, stood upon the extreme edge of the stage, brandishing his manuscript in his hand. He banged the palm of his left hand with the rolled-up manuscript and looked at them all furiously.

"The only success I care for," he thundered, "is an artistic success!"

"With Miss Maurel playing your leading part, M. Graillet," the actor-manager declared, "not to speak of a company carefully selected to the best of my judgment, I think you may venture to anticipate even that."

The dramatist bowed hurriedly to Louise.

"You recall to me a fact," he said gallantly, "which almost reconciles me to this diabolical travesty of some of my lines. Proceed, then—proceed! I will be as patient as possible."

The stage manager shouted out some directions from his box. A gentleman in faultless morning clothes, who seemed to have been thoroughly enjoying the interlude, suddenly adopted the puppetlike walk of a footman. Other actors, who had been whispering together in the wings, came back to their places. Louise advanced alone, a little languidly, to the front of the stage. At the first sound of her voice M. Graillet, nodding his head vigorously, was soothed.

Her speech was a long one. It appeared that she had been arraigned before a company of her relatives, assembled to comment upon her misdeeds. She wound up with a passionate appeal to her husband, Mr. Miles Faraday, who had made an unexpected appearance. M. Graillet's face, as she concluded, was wreathed in smiles.

"Ah!" he cried. "You have lifted us all up! Now I feel once more the inspiration. Mademoiselle, I kiss your hand," he went on. "It is you who still redeem my play. You bring back the

They made their way down the little passage and out into the sudden blaze of the sunlit streets. Louise led John to a small car which was waiting in the rear.

"The Carlton," she told the man, as he arranged the rugs. "And now," she added turning to John, "why have you come to London? How long are you going to stay? What are you going to do? And—most important of all—in what spirit have you come?"

John breathed a little sigh of contentment. "I came to see you," he confessed bluntly.

"Dear me!" she exclaimed, looking at him with a little smile. "How downright you are!"

"The truth—" he began.

"Has to be handled very carefully," she said, interrupting him. "The truth is either beautiful or crude, and the people who meddle with such a wonderful thing need a great deal of tact. You have come to see me, you say. Very well, then, I will be just as frank. I have been hoping that you would come."

"You can't imagine how good it is to hear you say that," he declared.

"Mind," she went on, "I have been hoping for more reasons than one. You have come to realize, I hope, that it is your duty to try to see a little more of life than you possibly can, leading a patriarchal existence among your flocks and herds."

They were silent for several moments.

"I thought you would come," Louise said at last; "and I am glad, but even in these first few minutes I want to say something to you. If you wish to really understand the people you meet here and the life they lead, don't be like your brother—too quick to judge. Do not hug your prejudices too tightly. You will come across many problems, many situations which will seem strange to you. Do not make up your mind about anything in a hurry."

"I will remember that," he promised.

"You must remember, though, that I don't expect ever to become a convert. I believe I am a countryman, bred and born. Still, there are some things that I want to understand, if I can, and more than anything else—I want to see you."

She faced his direct speech this time with more deliberation.

"Tell me exactly why."

"If I could tell you that," he replied simply. "I should be able to answer for myself the riddle which has kept me awake at night for weeks and months, which has puzzled me more than anything else in life has ever done."

"You really have thought of me, then?"

"Didn't you always know that I should?"

"Perhaps," she admitted. "Anyhow, I always felt that we should meet again, that you would come to London. The problem is," she added, smiling, "what to do with you now you are here."

"I haven't come to be a nuisance," he assured her. "I just want a little help from you. I want to understand because it is your world. I want to feel myself nearer to you, I want—"

She gripped his arm suddenly. She knew well enough that she had deliberately provoked his words, but there was a look in her face almost of fear.

"Don't let us be too serious all at once," she begged quickly. "If you have one fault, my dear big friend from the country," she went on, with

"I have a table inside," he told them as they approached. "It is better for conversation. The rest of the place is like a bear garden. I am not sure if they will dance here today, but if they do, they will come also into the restaurant."

"Wise man!" Louise declared. "I, too, hate the babel outside."

"We are faced," said the prince, as he took up the menu, "with our daily problem. What can I order for you?"

"A cup of chocolate," Louise replied. "And Miss Sophy?"

"Tea, please."

John, too, preferred tea; the prince ordered absinthe.

"A polyglot meal, isn't it, Mr. Strangeway?" said Louise, as the order was executed; "not in the least what that wonderful old butler of yours would understand by tea. Sophy, put your hat on straight if you want to make a good impression on Mr. Strangeway. I am hoping that you two will be great friends."

Sophy turned toward John with a little grimace.

"Louise is so tactless!" she said. "I am sure any idea you might have had of liking me will have gone already. Has it, Mr. Strangeway?"

"On the contrary," he replied, a little stiffly, but without hesitation, "I was thinking that Miss Maurel could scarcely have set me a more pleasant task."

The girl looked reproachfully across at her friend.

"You told me he came from the wilds and was quite unsophisticated!" she exclaimed.

"The truth," John assured them, looking with dismay at his little china cup, "comes very easily to us. We are brought up on it in Cumberland."

"Don't chatter too much, child," Louise said benignly. "I want to hear some more of Mr. Strangeway's impressions. This is—well, if not quite a fashionable crowd, yet very nearly so. What do you think of it—the women, for instance?"

"Well, to me," John confessed candidly, "they all look like dolls or manikins. Their dresses and their hats overshadow their faces. They seem all the time to be wanting to show, not themselves, but what they have on."

They all laughed. Even the prince's lips were parted by the flicker of a smile. Sophy leaned across the table with a sigh.

"Louise," she pleaded, "you will lend him to me sometimes, won't you? You won't keep him altogether to yourself? There are such a lot of places to take him to!"

"I was never greedy," Louise remarked, with an air of self-satisfaction. "If you succeed in making a favorable impression upon him, I promise you my share."

"Tell us some more of your impressions, Mr. Strangeway," Sophy begged.

"You want to laugh at me," John protested good-humoredly.

"On the contrary," the prince assured him, as he fitted a cigarette into a long amber tube, "they want to laugh with you. You ought to realize your value as a companion in these days. You are the only person who can see the truth. Eyes and tastes blurred with custom perceive so little. You are quite right when you say that these women are like manikins; that their bodies and faces are lost; but one does not notice it until it is pointed out."

"We will revert," Louise decided, "to a more primitive life. You and I will inaugurate a missionary enterprise, Mr. Strangeway. We will judge the world afresh. We will reclothe and rehabilitate it."

The prince flicked the ash from the end of his cigarette.

"Morally as well as sartorially?" he asked.

There was a moment's rather queer silence. The music rose above the hubbub of voices and died away again. Louise rose to her feet. The prince, with a skillful maneuver, made his way to her side as they left the restaurant.

"Tomorrow afternoon, I think you said?" he repeated quietly. "You will be in town then?"

"Yes, I think so."

"You have changed your mind, then, about—"

"M. Graillet will not listen to my leaving London," she interrupted rapidly. "He declares that it is too near the production of the play. My own part may be perfect, but he needs me for the sake of the others. He puts it like a Frenchman, of course."

They had reached the outer door, which was being held open for them by a bowing commissionaire. John and Sophy were waiting upon the pavement. The prince drew a little back.

"I understand," he murmured.

John finds himself in the midst of new city adventures, and he succeeds in captivating more than one handsome woman of the stage world.

The Squirrel Dog.

There is no accounting for that uncanny faculty that enables a homely, long-legged, sad-eyed pup to go unerringly to a lofty oak tree in whose higher branches a bit of animated brown fur is secreted. Another dog of the same or more prepossessing appearance and of a better breed might trot unconcernedly past that same oak tree without so much as a casual sniff. But not so with the real "squirrel dog." He'd pick out the right tree in the densest grove a hunter ever penetrated. And if that squirrel started leaping from tree to tree, that dog would follow it over a square mile of timber.

Picturesque Kieff.

The most beautiful city in Russia is said to be, not Petrograd or Moscow, which lack perspective, the one lying flat at the level of the Neva, and the other situated on an insignificant stream, but Kieff, the ancient capital of the Cossacks, which lies on the heights overlooking the rolling Dnieper.

Weapons Are Intricate.

A rifle is a more or less simple-looking mechanism, but to make this rifle 1,223 separate manufacturing operations must be executed. One round of 8-inch shrapnel means 355 operations; to make an automatic pistol, 614; and for the terrible little mitrailleuse or machine gun, 1,900. The lightest 3-inch field gun costs $1,400.

Cause of Echoes.

An echo is caused when the waves of air which are created when you shout are thrown back again. They may be stopped by something they encounter and are turned back without changing their shape. Any kind of a sound wave will make an echo in this way.

The word lunatic is used twice in the New Testament (Matthew 4:24 and 17:15). The word evidently refers to some disease affecting mind and body. By the description given by Mark 9:17-26, it is concluded the disease is epilepsy.

THE SHARPLES UPWARD MILKER

SQUEEZE

ONE OF THE BEST MILKING MACHINES ON THE MARKET

Ⓒ No one task about the farm is quite so uninviting—yes, even loathsome—as milking by hand the long line of cows twice a day the year around. Sundays—holidays—everyday, it is always the same tedious, tiresome task which has kept thousands out of the dairy business, driven a large part of the better class of hired help to seek other employment, and the sons of the household from the farm to the city. The nightmare of the dairyman has been to get and keep good, reliable, cleanly, efficient milkers who would stay right on the job twice a day three hundred and sixty-five days a year. Ⓒ The SHARPLES MILKER fills all requirements for an efficient milker and fills them well; better than the best hand milker. With it one man can do the work of four to six men, and do it better in every respect. The Sharples Milker is absolutely reliable; is right there every day in the year; is cleanly beyond any comparison, excluding all possibility of dirt or even stable air; is more gentle, always even-tempered and more regular in its action than any hand milker; is most efficient in preserving soft, pliable, healthy teats and in quickly and thoroughly drawing the milk. Ⓒ Furthermore, our "Upward Squeeze" teat-cup is the fastest milker known. This means, of course, that it gets the work done quicker. It has, however, a more far-reaching advantage. It is a well-known fact that fast milking will, week by week, increase the production of any cow and lengthen her lactation period. The fast milking seems to stimulate the milk-producing glands. Hence the Sharples teat-cup, combining both the healthful massage and the fast milking, will on the average, get more milk per year from the cow than is possible by any other method of milking.

HARVEST WAR CROP OF APPLES SHORTLY

It Will Equal Two Bushels for Every Man, Woman and Child in the Land.

STAPLE FOODS TO ALLIES

Motto This Year Is "Eat an Apple and Send a Biscuit"—Unusual Need For Handling Crop—May Be Short of Help.

The United States is about to harvest its great war crop of apples. It equals two bushels to every man, woman and child in the country. In order to send as much staple food as possible to our fighting allies, Americans are urged to use as many apples as possible. The motto this year is: "Eat an apple and send a biscuit."

War conditions also confront the apple growers, for there is a scarcity of pickers, and careful preparations must now be made to see that this crop is all safely harvested and put into storage. Now is the time to begin organizing picking crews in every apple growing section. A survey of the situation shows that the farmer will need co-operation from business men in the towns and cities round about at which he trades, and which have just as great an interest in this crop as the farmer himself. This is emergency organization work to be taken up immediately by chambers of commerce, boards of trade, state and county councils of defense, and business men generally.

The labor supply to harvest this crop exists right in the cities adjacent to the apple orchards in most cases, but the draft and demands of factories and railroads for labor have disturbed the normal supply of workers upon which the farmer usually draws, and it is necessary to recruit new kinds of workers. People who have never regarded themselves as apple pickers may this year be asked to go to the orchards and help get in the crop for patriotic reasons.

The organization work should take the form of an immediate survey of labor resources to see where a picking force is to be recruited. Stores and factories can often release clerks and workmen for this service if notified in time. Families who would like a week or two of vacation in the country with light, healthy outdoor work at satisfactory wages, may also be induced to join the picking army. It has been suggested that the schools might be opened later this year so that boys and girls can be sent to the orchards, but this will not be necessary in all cases. One very good source of pickers can be found among the women's organizations of this country.

Much is heard about the scarcity of labor, but there is not as great a scarcity as most people imagine. Workers upon whom the farmer depends in ordinary times have simply been shifted into other occupations, and war conditions demand that business men step in, locate other classes of workers who can be shifted to the orchards for this emergency and see that the farmer has plenty of help.

The principles of careful fruit picking are very simple, and easily understood. If the farmer can start with two or three experienced pickers and spend a little time explaining good picking methods to his volunteers he should get excellent results, for these volunteers, while new to the work, will also be people of good average intelligence, and the war emergency will appeal to their interest so that they will be more than ready to help harvest the crop skillfully.

Apple growers are advised to get in touch with the business organizations in their nearest town, ask that help be given in securing pickers and report the number of pickers needed by themselves. One of the greatest difficulties in organizing harvest hands for any crop is that of gathering accurate information as to how many helpers are needed on each farm and in each township. For lack of such information it very often happens that one township will be handicapped because it is without sufficient helpers and a township twenty-five or thirty miles away will have a surplus of workers. By ascertaining in advance just how many workers will be needed in each locality, business organizations will be able to recruit a sufficient force and there will be neither scarcity nor surplus in any section.

This year's apple crop calls for special methods of handling. The size of the crop makes it necessary to send only the first-class fruit to market and to see that all seconds and culls are sold in bulk around home or worked up into by-products. There must be great care to see that apples are not exposed to the heat or outdoors after picking, but are properly housed in temporary storage places on the farm and carefully cooled. The scarcity of pickers will probably make it necessary to pick and house the crop first and grade and pack it afterwards. Full directions for handling the fruit will be published later.

The great big task immediately ahead is that of securing a picking force, and in this work the business man and the farmer are co-operating to an extent never known before. This is a war crop. It will be harvested with a war organization.

TO CONSERVE POTATO

Officials of Food Administration Give Advice.

Unusual Facilities for Financing Storage Have Been Arranged and a Comprehensive Plan of Action Is Recommended.

Washington.—Officials of the food administration gave out the following statement concerning the steady of potato prices, especially important just now:

Unusual facilities for financing storage are offered American potato growers as a result of war conditions. The federal reserve system is at their disposal, and farmers who store their 1917 potato crop in approved local warehouses, may obtain, upon their storage receipts, 90-day loans from member banks of the reserve system at a rate not to exceed 6 per cent. Mr. Lou D. Sweet, potato expert with the food administration, was instrumental in bringing this matter to the reserve board's attention.

New England growers have started a movement to take advantage of this ruling to help them solve their marketing problem. The prospect which the growers of this group of states face is that of handling 45,000,000 bushels of potatoes—one-tenth of the entire United States crop—without causing an overstocked market and the resulting loss of all profit on the crop.

The growers communicated with local authorities in their respective states, who in turn laid the situation before the food administration. A conference between the growers, local authorities and experts from the food administration was held recently at Boston, Mass. A plan of action was mapped out at this meeting which includes the following:

1. Marketing of only one-third of the crop at harvest time; another third in 90 days, or placing in storage and later distributed as demand affords opportunity; the remaining third to be stored by the grower and marketed throughout the year.

2. All potatoes to be graded with care, taking out culls, cuts, cracks and any that are bruised. It was recommended that a wire screen grader be used—one and seven-eighths-inch mesh for oblong tubers and two-inch mesh for round ones. Graded stock then to be placed in good two-bushel sacks—one hundred and fifteen pounds to the sack—and the sacks sewed tightly so as to prevent shaking and bruising.

3. Increasing the load in each railroad car from the normal 30,000 pounds. These cars can be unloaded within 24 to 36 hours of their arrival at destination.

4. That municipalities and other bodies provide storage for as large quantities as possible at the peak of the harvest.

"A storage house," said Lou D. Sweet, who attended this meeting, "such as will conform to the requirements laid down by the Federal Reserve board, does not call for a specially constructed house. There are innumerable buildings, which, if properly cleaned, ventilation provided, and managed so as to maintain a temperature of about 35 degrees, will answer admirably for this purpose.

"This year the United States planted its potato crop from the poorest quality of seed that ever went into the ground, and naturally the harvest will be potatoes of poor quality. Strict grading, careful packing, common-sense storage, and careful shipping are necessary to insure just returns to the growers who have responded to the president's call for increased production of potatoes."

A lady living in a large apartment house relates the following: "I had occasion one day to visit the apartment of a neighbor. Such grave and earnest tones of remonstrance reached my ears, as I approached my friend's room, that I hesitated about intruding. I found her winsome young daughter with her, and the mother had evidently been rebuking her, for the girl's face was flushed, and there were tears in her eyes.

"Come in," said my friend. "I have finished what I was saying to Jenny, and I hope she will remember my wishes."

"Ah, these children—these children!" thought I to myself. How wayward they are, even gentle things like Jenny, and how tremendous are a parent's responsibilities!

"I have just been telling her," continued my friend, "that she must not wear her evening gloves when she goes shopping in the morning. In the first place, it is not genteel; and in the second place, it is extravagant."

Her evening gloves! And yet, I assure you, her tone and expression, and the impression made on the child, would have befitted a serious wrongdoing—one that had issues in time and eternity.

A Dilemma. "I couldn't get out of marrying her. When she proposed she said: 'Will you marry me? Have you any objection?' You see, whether I said 'Yes' or 'No,' she had me."

"Why didn't you just keep silent then?"

"I did and she said, 'Silence gives consent,' and that ended it."

What Well Dressed Women Will Wear

Here is a new, separate skirt for fall which shows no very radical departure from the styles in skirts that prevail now. It would be difficult to improve upon the simple, well-adjusted skirt of today, with their good hues and interesting vagaries in pockets and belts. The material in the skirt pictured is a novelty with moderately wide stripes in a darker shade of the color in the skirt, set far apart on a cross-bar surface.

The belt and flat pockets are cut in one piece and stitched to the skirt.

SIMPLE, WELL-ADJUSTED SKIRTS.

Slits provide the openings for the pockets, but their practical use is open to debate. They are capacious, however, and might carry a handkerchief or coin purse without spoiling the line of the skirt.

The belt is shaped to fit the figure, and this is the characteristic of belts in general. They are not mere bands about the waist, but are so cut and placed as to give a graceful definition of the waistline. The business of supporting the skirt is not theirs, but is taken care of by a webbing belt on the under side, which fastens with hooks and eyes. A single large bone button at the front of the cloth belt looks more than equal to its responsibility.

Chain-stitching has the effect of embroidery on collar and pockets. A cap to match adds to the distinction of this modish waist-dress. It is of white rubberized satin. A band of black taffeta converts it into a small, roomy turban with coronet cut in scallops at the top. The girlie is made of the silk and slips through a silk-covered buckle at the front.

The second suit is much less simple, but a delight to the girl with a Venus de Milo figure, which it will set off to the best advantage. It has a bodice and short skirt, gathered to give trim waistlines. Bands of white rubberized satin are stitched to this girlie, each band terminating in a small white button at the front. The collar is of the same satin. Short puffed sleeves are gathered with five rows of shirring, finished with a narrow ruffle about the arm. The smart cap is made of the satin and the up-standing satin ends at the front are probably wired. White cloth sleeves, faced with black, and black silk stockings, striped with white, bring this suit to a charming end.

Although so many of the season's models are made of silk, the virtues of mohair for water sports should not be lost sight of.

A grateful humanity betakes itself to the water in the burning days of August, and thereby makes life bearable. And the feminine half of it goes clad in better looking garments than ever before within the memory of man. Not so long ago bathing suits were about all alike, and longer ago a bathing suit was not a necessity in the wardrobe; people played in the

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

RACCOONS' CORN FEAST.

Daddy Raccoon was teaching the children their lessons. "Whenever you are near water," he said, "you must be sure to wash your food. That makes it so much cleaner." For the raccoon is very clean and cares a great deal about his food being nice and clean and fresh.

"You can eat a great many things," said Daddy Raccoon. "You are allowed eggs of all kinds, fish, frogs, turtles and all sorts of fruit and nuts."

"The best of all you haven't mentioned," said the Raccoon children. "Ah, I am keeping it as a surprise," said Daddy Raccoon.

"When are we going?" asked the children. "Going where?" asked Daddy Raccoon, as if he didn't know at all what the children were talking about.

"Dear me," sighed Mother Raccoon, "the children get to know so much these days. Yes, it was different in my time. I didn't know about corn until I was told about it."

At that all the Raccoon children laughed shrilly. "Oh, mother," they said, "now you have let the cat out of the bag. We didn't say we knew it was corn."

"Let what cat out of what bag?" asked Mother Raccoon. "I haven't a cat nor a bag. What absurd nonsense you children talk."

"Oh," said one of the Raccoon children, "that is just an expression."

"Still I don't understand," said Mother Raccoon. "I suppose I am not up-to-date."

"An expression is a saying," said the Raccoon child. "It is something people say—lots and lots of people. And it's supposed to be wise."

"What does it mean?" asked Mother Raccoon, who was much puzzled.

"It means that someone has let the secret out—or the thing that was supposed to be kept in."

"Why did they use the cat and bag for example?"

"Oh, I don't know," said the little raccoon, "unless it was started by someone cruel and foolish—but it's been said so often now that no one stops to think what it means. Now it only means that a secret has been let out."

"And corn was a secret?" laughed Mother Raccoon. "I have my doubts about that."

"So have we," said the children. "But you know we were not supposed to know and you let it right out."

"So I did, so I did," said Mother Raccoon.

"Well, no harm done," said Daddy Raccoon. "If the children find out about corn so much sooner than they did in our time—well, all I can say is that it is mighty smart of them."

"And now children," said Mother Raccoon, "you all know that corn is good for raccoons. Yes, it is very, very good." And Mother Raccoon smacked her lips with the thought of it.

"I think lessons are over with for today," said Daddy Raccoon, taking off his spectacles made out of twigs of small trees and holes cut out of large green leaves.

"Goodies, now," said the children. "And what is more, we have a surprise for you."

"What?" exclaimed their parents.

"Yes," said the children. "The reason we know about corn is because we have found a cornfield, where the corn is just ripe. We somehow went to it as if it were our nature to do so."

The raccoon parents laughed and said, "Well, somehow it is!"

"And now we're going to show you the field."

"Is it in a dangerous place?" asked Mother Raccoon, who had had so many terrible adventures stealing corn that she was a little nervous.

"No," said the children. "It is a particularly nice cornfield. There seem to be no rude creatures around to drive us off. We'll have a corn feast."

And indeed they did! Mother and Daddy Raccoon and all the Raccoon children, and the children certainly acted as though they had always known and loved the taste of summer corn.

Doing Without. One of the arts of life is to learn how to do without. Few of us have anything we consider desirable and if we grumble over every little deprivation we make ourselves miserable and our associates uncomfortable. To learn to do without and yet be cheery and happy, goes far toward making life a success.—Girl's Companion.

Our greatest glory consists not in never falling, but in rising every time we fall.

HELPFUL SUGGESTIONS.

Desserts for children should be planned with care and may be both delicious and appetizing, as well as easy of digestion. Figs and prunes are both highly nutritious and good for children, but they tire of them, served in two or three ways.

As candy is so liked by the little people, the following suggestion may be used to satisfy that longing without feeling that the child is being injured. Take the stones from soaked prunes and add an equal quantity of figs, put them through the meat chopper, and use the water in which the prunes were soaked to boil with sugar, until a heavy syrup that will make a soft ball in water, is formed, remove from the heat and stir until creamy, add the chopped fruit, make into small balls, roll in powdered sugar, and set away to harden.

Home-Made Soda Water.—Take two pounds of sugar, two ounces of tartaric acid, three pints of water and a half-ounce of the essence of wintergreen, the whites of two eggs. Mix the sugar and tartaric acid together with the water, let it boil slowly for two minutes, then set aside to cool.

When cool, stir in the wintergreen essence and the beaten whites of the eggs. Stir all together, put into jars and keep in the ice chest. When required for use put two tablespoonsful of the syrup in a glass, fill with cold water, and stir in a quarter of a teaspoonful of soda.

Buttermilk Pop.—Heat a quart of buttermilk in a double boiler, when boiling stir in two tablespoonsful of flour that has been rubbed smooth in a little cold milk. Stir and cook until the flour is thoroughly cooked and serve hot.

Frozen beef tea is a novelty which will appeal to the invalid during the hot weather. To prepare the beef juice take a thick piece of steak and broil it quickly in a hot pan, then score it and put it into a vegetable press to extract all the juice. This juice will, with a pinch of salt, be of much finer flavor than that which is cooked a longer time. Serve either hot or cold.

Turkish Cream Candy.—Put one and a half cupsful of sweet cream and three and three-fourths cupsful of sugar. Cook, stirring often until a very soft ball is formed in cold water or the candy thermometer registers 238. Let cool a little then turn out upon a marble slab, add fruit and nuts and work with a paddle until it shows signs of turning to a cream. Let stand 15 minutes, then break off a portion and knead until soft and smooth throughout, then press into a mold lined with oiled paper. This will fill a quart mold. When it is hard it may be cut in slices or cubes, dipped chocolate or wrapped in paper with out dipping.

JACK CRAWFORD.

The way they make cherry pie in India may be interesting to us, and worth trying. Line a deep pie plate with pastry and put into it a quart of stoned cherries, fill the dish with molasses and sprinkle over the top four tablespoonsful of flour, cover with pastry and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. Then brush over with beaten egg, sprinkle with sugar, and return to the oven to brown.

Cherry Roly-Poly.—Roll out very thin a rich pie paste, heap on two cupsful of drained cherries, that have been pitted. Roll up and place in a deep saucepan. Add a cupful of sugar, a cupful of boiling water, two tablespoonsful of butter, and bake one hour in a moderate oven. If there is not sufficient juice to serve as sauce, cream may be used if desired.

Cherry Sponge.—Put a pound and a half of cherries into a saucepan, a cupful of cold water, two cupsful of sugar and cook gently until all the juice is extracted. Strain, add two heaping tablespoonsful of powdered gelatin with a half cupful of boiling water and a teaspoonful of almond extract. When nearly cold, add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Pour into a wet mold and turn out firm. Decorate around the base with ripe stoned cherries.

Cherry Cake.—Cream half a cupful of shortening, add one-half cupful of sugar, a little grated nutmeg, four well-beaten eggs, two cupsful of flour, sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder, a teaspoonful of vanilla and a half cupful of milk, mix well, and add a half cupful of preserved cherries cut in small pieces. Pour the mixture into long tins and bake until nicely brown.

Cherries are an addition to any fruit salad, and as stewed sauce to be served with cookies, make a most delicious dessert.

Sambal, Malay Chutney.—Peel and quarter three quinces not wholly ripe, add one onion, pepper, salt and a green chilli pepper, put all through the meat grinder and serve with a roast.

What the American Soldier Intends to Do With Kaiser is Not Understood in England.

With commendable enterprise a London editorial brother seeks to clarify for his readers the quaint expression of certain American soldiers who have intimated that their first undertaking in Europe will be to "can the kaiser." In interpreting them to intend to roast up his high mightiness hermetically, however, the Londoner's zeal outruns his information.

Nix, nix, friend, it doesn't mean that at all! says the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. It means merely that they propose to decorate the German emperor with hardware; to take his jaw; pour the leather into him; put him on the pan; slip him one on the wind! kidnap his Angora; show him where he gets off. To put it more plainly, having bought clips in a game where the custom has been to play 'em close to the waistcoat, the Americans have taken off the limit and announce they will copper all bets, see all raises and intend, the very first time the kaiser gets his feet wet, to call him off the Christmas tree.

It is plain in the circumstances that our British brethren are about to find their knowledge of English handsomely increased.

APOLOGIZING TO THE TIGER

Raymond Blatway Tells of His Experiences While Connected With a Traveling Menagerie.

In a book of reminiscences, "Through Life and Round the World," Raymond Blatway tells the following story in connection with a traveling menagerie he attached himself to while knocking about the West during his salad days.

"One day just after breakfast," he says, "I peeped in at the messroom door. There was a full-grown tiger licking the jam and bacon off the plates."

"Oh, I beg your pardon!" I ejaculated, as I hastily shut the door. A moment after I met Jack, the tiger's keeper.

"I can't find that other tiger nowhere," he said to me. "I guess I've mislaid the old critter."

"You have!" I yelled, for I was a good deal annoyed with the danger I had so narrowly escaped. "You'll find him in the messroom licking the plates."

"Thank you, mate," he said. "An hour after I overheard the proprietor asking his little son if he had washed up on the breakfast dishes."

"Fact: no need to, pop; the tiger licked 'em like he knew they wanted cleaning!"

Crop Outlook Reported Fine.

Prospects for large crop of nearly every kind throughout Wisconsin were never better, according to the joint crop report issued at Madison today. The potato crop, with the condition of 85, compared to a ten-year average of 84, indicates, with favorable weather conditions, an estimated production of 37,000,000 bushels—one of the largest crops in the history of the state and nearly three times the production of 1916. The entire United States crop is estimated at 467,000,000 bushels, compared to 285,437,000 bushels last year. Late blight, the disease most feared by Wisconsin potato growers, has not made its appearance so far, and the bugs are being kept well under control. A large crop of fine hay has just been secured, and the harvesting of small grains is in full swing with yields running well up to normal. Corn, while late, is making remarkable progress, and if early frosts do not interfere will make an average crop or better. The condition of the crop on August 1 was 80, which is only 2 per cent below the average for the past ten years, or a probable production of 61,600,000 bushels, compared to 60,840,000 last year. The estimated production for United States is estimated at 3,190,000,000 bushels, compared to 2,583,241,000 last year.

To Probe Lake Conditions.

C. M. Larson, chief engineer of the railroad commission, will make an investigation to determine causes of the high water in Lake Kegonsa.

The commission has already received a report on conditions and found that much, if not all, of the trouble is due to the lack of dredging in the river connecting the lakes, and to the unusually wet spring.

The river is choked with weeds and mud. As a result much of the lowland adjoining all the lakes is under water.

In Madison, Bristingham park has been the chief sufferer. City Engineer Parker announced that the locks on Lake Mendota will be closed for a short period to relieve the situation.

Mr. Larson has suggested that a general drainage district be incorporated to handle the situation.

Hearing on the petition of S. R. Chase and others for an order establishing levels on Lake Wingra has been postponed.

Old Capitol Is Inspected.

The commission appointed by Governor Philipp has made its first inspection of the old state capitol building at Belmont and is now making plans for the restoration of the building to its original site. State Engineer J. D. Mack, one of the members of the commission, said that the information regarding the exact location of the building was not definite, and he hoped that some of the old settlers would furnish information to the commission.

The governor appointed a committee composed of Senator Platt Whitman, M. P. Rindlaub, Platteville, and State Engineer J. D. Mack, Madison, as members of the commission.

The old territorial capitol at Belmont was used in the fall of 1836 for the meeting of the first territorial legislature. The principal issue before that legislature was the location of the permanent seat of government, and Madison was finally selected through the efforts of Judge Doty.

Publish Exempts' Names.

Following receipt of orders from Provost Marshal General Crowder, Gov. E. L. Philipp notified all exemption boards in the state to give to the newspapers names of men who ask exemption and their reasons.

General Crowder's telegram said in part: "The people are entitled to know the grounds upon which claims for exemption or discharge are being asked by registered men. Local boards should therefore be instructed immediately to make available to the press from day to day the names of persons claiming exemption or discharge, the ground on which such claims are based and in general the number of cases that are being disposed of by the boards from day to day. This instruction does not apply, of course, to discharges on the ground of physical disability."

Free Cups on Trains.

A complaint has been made against the Milwaukee road with regard to furnishing free cups on trains. The 1913 legislature passed a law requiring them. The road contends that as Wisconsin is the only state requiring free drinking cups, the penny slot machine, with the sign that cups may be obtained from the brakeman, is a substantial compliance with the law. Attorney General Owen holds to the contrary.

Begin to Inspect Fairs.

The sanitary supervision of 80 Wisconsin fairs will constitute part of the task of three hotel and restaurant inspectors during the next two months. This work began on Monday with the opening of county fairs at Reedsburg and Boscobel.

Heads Liberty Loan Workers.

Mrs. John W. Mariner has been appointed state chairman of Wisconsin, to have charge of Liberty loan work among women in this state. The appointment comes from Mrs. W. G. McAdoo, chairman of the woman's Liberty loan committee of the council of national defense. It has been decided to organize each state for Liberty loan work among women, the state chairman appointing a chairman in each county. Mrs. Mariner becomes a member of the state division of the council of national defense.

Herb Fields in Wisconsin.

Herb culture is coming to be an American institution in many parts of the country, especially in Wisconsin. The urgent need for medical means to allay the suffering and stifle the misery of foreign battlefields has awakened some territories to action. Thirty acres of fertile land on the shore of University bay are under cultivation to help supply the demand for medicinal, drug and poisonous plants. The demand is due largely to the necessity of supplying hospital units that are in the foreign service.

Kilauea's Lava Lake.

Early reports indicate that the alarms of war will not prevent many Americans from visiting their new national park in Hawaii. Three celebrated volcanoes, Kilauea, Mauna Loa and Haleakala are in the new reservation. The lava lake at Kilauea, a spectacle which has drawn thousands of visitors in past years from every part of the world, will be, it is predicted, unusually spectacular this season because of the recent increased volcanic activity in the region.

Old Capital Is Inspected.

The commission appointed by Governor Philipp has made its first inspection of the old state capitol building at Belmont and is now making plans for the restoration of the building to its original site. State Engineer J. D. Mack, one of the members of the commission, said that the information regarding the exact location of the building was not definite, and he hoped that some of the old settlers would furnish information to the commission.

Free Cups on Trains.

A complaint has been made against the Milwaukee road with regard to furnishing free cups on trains. The 1913 legislature passed a law requiring them. The road contends that as Wisconsin is the only state requiring free drinking cups, the penny slot machine, with the sign that cups may be obtained from the brakeman, is a substantial compliance with the law. Attorney General Owen holds to the contrary.

Mrs. Mariner becomes a member of the state division of the council of national defense.

Herb Fields in Wisconsin.

Herb culture is coming to be an American institution in many parts of the country, especially in Wisconsin. The urgent need for medical means to allay the suffering and stifle the misery of foreign battlefields has awakened some territories to action. Thirty acres of fertile land on the shore of University bay are under cultivation to help supply the demand for medicinal, drug and poisonous plants. The demand is due largely to the necessity of supplying hospital units that are in the foreign service.

Honest Advertising

THIS is a topic we all hear now-a-days because so many people are inclined to exaggerate. Yet has any physician told you that we claimed unreasonable remedial properties for Fletcher's Castoria? Just ask them. We won't answer it ourselves, we know what the answer will be.

That it has all the virtues to-day that was claimed for it in its early days is to be found in its increased use, the recommendation by prominent physicians, and our assurance that its standard will be maintained.

Imitations are to be found in some stores and only because of the Castoria that Mr. Fletcher created. But it is not the genuine Castoria that Mr. Fletcher honestly advertised, honestly placed before the public, and from which he honestly expects to receive his reward.

Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Dr. J. C. Fletcher.

Raise High Priced Wheat on Fertile Canadian Soil

Canada extends to you a hearty invitation to settle on her FREE Homestead lands of 160 acres each or secure some of the low priced lands in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. This year wheat is higher but Canadian land just as cheap, so the opportunity is more attractive than ever. Canada wants you to help feed the world by tilling some of her fertile soil—land similar to that which during many years has averaged 20 to 45 bushels of wheat to the acre. Think of the money you can make with wheat around $2 a bushel and land so easy to get. Wonderful yields also of Oats, Barley and Flax. Mixed farming in Western Canada is as profitable an industry as grain growing.

The Government this year in asking farmers to put increased acreage into grain. There is a great demand for farm labor to replace the many young men who have volunteered for service. Disturbing Remark.

A country lawyer was defending a prisoner who had killed a man by hitting him on the head with a brick. The case against the prisoner being quite clear, the counsel endeavored to get his client off by making a perfluous speech. He said: "The responsibility of defending my client is almost overwhelming. This morning, as I was walking in my garden enjoying the lovely sunshine and balmy air, listening to the birds singing, and looking at all the beautiful flowers, I said to myself, 'My poor client, immured in his cell, can see none of these things!'"

Just then a spectator at the back of the court shouted: "Neither can the man he hit on the head with a brick!"

CARRY PARCELS AID UNCLE SAM

STATE COUNCIL OF DEFENSE TO MAKE CAMPAIGN TO CUT DOWN DELIVERIES.

LOWER PRICES TO RESULT

Another Advantage Will Be to Increase Man Power for the Army and Thereby Help to Win the Battles We Must Fight in Europe.

Madison, Wis.—The Carry plan for grocery stores and other business houses which bear a similar relation to the consumer is to be made the basis of a campaign to cut down deliveries by the State Council of Defense.

At the urgent request of the National Council of Defense, the Wisconsin Council will inaugurate this campaign. Its object is to conserve man power for the war, but the advantages which will accrue to the consumer in lower prices will be one of its great benefits.

Every one has heard of the thoughtless woman who buys a spool of thread and asks that it be delivered. This may be an unusual experience for the retail store, but every day some such order is received over the telephone. The custom of having goods delivered has become so thoroughly established that consumers think nothing of asking for immediate deliveries several times a day, without a thought of the economic loss for which some one must pay.

The State Council will try to remedy this situation by recommending a reduction of the number of deliveries to two each day. Housewives will be asked to co-operate and without their co-operation the plan will fail.

There are many ways in which the women of America are being called upon to "do their bit", and this is one of them.

Fewer deliveries means more men for the army and for the industries which must go on during the war, many with increased effort.

A plan of campaign to show the advantages of carrying parcels is to be explained to the county councils of defense in the near future.

Coal May Be Cheaper.

Madison, Wis.—Now that the state of Illinois is following the lead of the Wisconsin Council of Defense the prospects for cheaper coal is better than ever.

The Right to Aid.

The race of mankind would perish did they cease to aid each other. From the time that the mother binds the child's head till the moment that some kind assistant wipes the death damp from the brow of the dying, we cannot exist without mutual help. All therefore, that need aid have a right to ask it from their fellow mortals; no one who holds the power of granting can refuse it without guilt.—Sir Walter Scott.

Child's Love of Music.

When a child has shown sufficient interest in music to wish to hear it, he should certainly be allowed to try and imitate what he has heard, and to create music for himself. Sometimes a child of four or five shows more love for music than one double that age. If they desire to listen and to learn, age makes little difference.—Exchange.

The Only Failure.

George Elliot makes Felix Holt say: "I'm proof against that word failure. I've seen behind it. The only failure a man ought to fear is failure to cleave to the purpose he sees to be best. As long as a man sees and believes in some great good, he'll prefer working toward that in a way he's best fit for, come what may."

FRATERNAL DAY AT STATE FAIR WILL BE BIG AS STATE DAY

Immense Fraternal City to Be Established on the Fair Grounds, Each Order Maintaining Separate Headquarters—Drill Competitions to Be Held Tuesday Night, Sept. 11—Fraternal Congress Committee is in Charge.

Milwaukee, Aug. 13. — Fraternalists of Wisconsin, under direction of a committee of the Wisconsin Fraternal League, of which John W. Brown of Stevens Point is secretary, will have a big day at this year's State Fair. Fraternal Day will be Tuesday, Sept. 11.

All fraternal organizations in the Dodge State have combined to make this even bigger than State Day, which will be Sept. 12. The committee has accommodations for fraternalists, including a lunch.

Drill competitions will be conducted in the big Stock Judging Pavilion Tuesday night, and it is expected that several fraternal leaders of national reputation will speak during the program of drill competitions.

There also will be an immense parade of fraternalists Friday night during the night program in front of the grand stand, each order being represented by a float.

Fraternal organizations are planning to make Fraternal Day of value to them as well as of value to the State Fair. They intend the day as a sort of rallying time for consideration of fraternal matters, and it is understood that a number of fraternal orders intend to hold state or national conventions in Milwaukee during State Fair Week, Sept. 10 to 14.

Bureaus to provide rooms and other accommodations for fraternalists during their stay will be maintained both in the downtown district in Milwaukee and on the fair grounds.

Fraternal Day was established in 1916. It is expected that a Fraternal Building will rise on the fair grounds.
