FIGHTING FEET.

One of the amazing truths that it has taken war to bring home to us is that an enormous number of Americans are so badly handicapped by weak or flat feet as to make them unfit for military service. In the navy, for instance, it is authoritatively stated that next to eye defects more applicants are turned down on account of weak feet than for any other single cause. Mind that these are men who wanted the privilege of entering the government service as a profession.
It may be safely assumed that even these rejects were far above the normal physically. They thought they were comparable to the fine physical specimens picked for the army and navy. How many thousands there must be who are kept from doing what they would ordinarily like to do by defects known to themselves.
Weak or flat feet are entirely preventable and in the vast majority of instances they are entirely curable by simple measures. No barefoot race is ever weak footed. Savages may be normally flat footed, but this doesn't matter if the foot is strong and free from pain on prolonged use.
Obviously, when so large a proportion of shoe wearing people have weak feet, there must be something radically wrong with shoes. The fault, in many instances, lies in the lack of balance. The foot is thrown somewhat out of proper position and the result is a gradual stretching and breaking down of muscles and ligaments which shouldn't be stretching as they are. High, tightly laced shoes restrict normal motion and restricted motion will result in a weakening of muscles and a gradual breaking down of the arches.
Parents should be ready to fight shoe manufacturers and salesmen, if necessary, to get proper shoes for their children. Usually, however, it is difficult for the shoemaker to furnish proper shoes not because he isn't willing to, but because there are so many fool parents and other people that he is able to sell only the fool shapes.
If lack of exercise causes weakness, proper exercises should produce strength. They will. I have a longer article on prevention and cure on moderate cases of weak feet which I will forward to any interested Wisconsin citizen on receipt of stamped two-cent (2c) and self-addressed envelope.

County Fair Attractions Arranged

The amusement program for the coming County Fair on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 1, 2 and 3, is so extensive and varied, that no body will have to leave the grounds without having had his or her fill of enjoyment of one kind or another. Of the many attractions booked for this year's Fair some are sure to appeal to any visitor, no matter to what the taste or expectations are at tuned.
The program begins at 1 p. m. on Tuesday with daylight fireworks displayed by the Newton Fireworks Co. of Chicago. The first number consists of the national salute of 21 guns. That number of nine-inch mortars, or firework shells, are to be fired every half minute, exploding high in the air with tremendous reports. This salute will be followed by the display of "Old Glory" in fireworks. Three times the national emblem will be spread in dazzling fire over the sky, and in between more maroons will make the air reverberate with crashes. Simultaneously with the firing of the first shell the band will commence playing the national air and continue until all shells and salutes in this number have been discharged.
There will be ten more firework numbers during the afternoon, vying in splendor with anything ever seen in this line of entertainment. They represent the French and English flags, airships and other aerial craft, a large American flag shot into the air and bursting with a loud detonation, from a twelve-inch shell.
At 1:30 p. m., following the first two pyrotechnic numbers, a patriotic address will be delivered by some prominent speaker.
The races are to start at 2:00 p. m. and consist of a 2:15 trot and a 2:14 pace. A large number of the best and fleetest steeds of the state are expected to take part in this year's races, as handsome purses aggregating $1500 are offered.
The local turf is considered the best half-mile race track in the state.
Between the heats and the fireworks eight free acts by comedians and acrobats will be given on the platform facing the grandstand. These acts will be highly entertaining and astonishing, and they will be worth the visit to the Fair alone.
Of course, there will be band concerts, and there will be a base ball game, and the grand finale will be a balloon ascension and double parachute leap.
The base ball teams of Jackson and Schleisingerville will play for the championship of the county on Tuesday afternoon. The game will be called at 2:30.
This program will be essentially repeated on Wednesday afternoon, except that the address is omitted and the races begin sooner, at 1:30 p. m., the latter consisting of a 2:22 pace, 2:24 trot and a free-for-all trot and pace.
An uncommonly complete and diversified "Pike" will also be on the grounds which is furnished by the Wisconsin Amusement Co. We believe that the reputation of this company is a sufficient guarantee that nothing but the best and cleanest in side-shows will cater to the craving for lighter entertainment and curious sights.
But this wealth of attractions should not make us lose sight of the educational features of the County Fair, for then we would forget the best part, its underlying purpose. The products of the garden, field and orchards are displayed to tell us something of the achievements of others, and so do the live-stock, the dairy and the other exhibits. Of much value are also the lessons taught by improved devices and machines intended to lighten the burden of the farmer and to increase household economy.
And let us repeat once more the one important purpose of the County Fair for the city people, which lies in its being a most appropriate and convenient link between the town and the country. Let us grasp that chance to weld our interests. Let us all, farmers and others, put the best efforts in our Fair on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 1, 2 and 3, and it is bound to become the unparalleled success which it should be.—News.

Government Not to Seize Food Supplies Held in Homes

The following article was taken from the official bulletin on Wednesday, September 12th, 1917. The Department of Agriculture authorizes the following: "There is no truth in a widely circulated statement that the Government expects to take the food supply from any family. Both the Food Administration and the Department of Agriculture join in a statement to counteract what seems to be a deliberate propaganda to the effect that the Government intends to take from every family all canned goods put up in excess of 100 quarts.
This is only one of the variations of the rumor which has been widely circulated. Another statement is that the Government has been urging the canning, drying and preserving of fruits and vegetables so that they will be in a convenient form for the Government to handle and transport when it takes them away from the people. Further elaboration is that these goods are to be taken away from the American homes and shipped to England."

County Fair Attractions Arranged

The amusement program for the coming County Fair on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, October 1, 2 and 3, is so extensive and varied, that no body will have to leave the grounds without having had his or her fill of enjoyment of one kind or another. Of the many attractions booked for this year's Fair some are sure to appeal to any visitor, no matter to what the taste or expectations are at tuned.
The program begins at 1 p. m. on Tuesday with daylight fireworks displayed by the Newton Fireworks Co. of Chicago. The first number consists of the national salute of 21 guns. That number of nine-inch mortars, or firework shells, are to be fired every half minute, exploding high in the air with tremendous reports. This salute will be followed by the display of "Old Glory" in fireworks. Three times the national emblem will be spread in dazzling fire over the sky, and in between more maroons will make the air reverberate with crashes. Simultaneously with the firing of the first shell the band will commence playing the national air and continue until all shells and salutes in this number have been discharged.
There will be ten more firework numbers during the afternoon, vying in splendor with anything ever seen in this line of entertainment. They represent the French and English flags, airships and other aerial craft, a large American flag shot into the air and bursting with a loud detonation, from a twelve-inch shell.
At 1:30 p. m., following the first two pyrotechnic numbers, a patriotic address will be delivered by some prominent speaker.
The races are to start at 2:00 p. m. and consist of a 2:15 trot and a 2:14 pace. A large number of the best and fleetest steeds of the state are expected to take part in this year's races, as handsome purses aggregating $1500 are offered.
The local turf is considered the best half-mile race track in the state.
Between the heats and the fireworks eight free acts by comedians and acrobats will be given on the platform facing the grandstand. These acts will be highly entertaining and astonishing, and they will be worth the visit to the Fair alone.
Of course, there will be band concerts, and there will be a base ball game, and the grand finale will be a balloon ascension and double parachute leap.
The base ball teams of Jackson and Schleisingerville will play for the championship of the county on Tuesday afternoon. The game will be called at 2:30.
This program will be essentially repeated on Wednesday afternoon, except that the address is omitted and the races begin sooner, at 1:30 p. m., the latter consisting of a 2:22 pace, 2:24 trot and a free-for-all trot and pace.
An uncommonly complete and diversified "Pike" will also be on the grounds which is furnished by the Wisconsin Amusement Co. We believe that the reputation of this company is a sufficient guarantee that nothing but the best and cleanest in side-shows will cater to the craving for lighter entertainment and curious sights.
But this wealth of attractions should not make us lose sight of the educational features of the County Fair, for then we would forget the best part, its underlying purpose. The products of the garden, field and orchards are displayed to tell us something of the achievements of others, and so do the live-stock, the dairy and the other exhibits. Of much value are also the lessons

HURLEY TO TRY TO END STRIKE

Empowered by Wilson to Make Offer to Ship Workers.

PRESIDENT MAY TAKE HAND

Situation Has Reached Point Where Shipping Board Realizes Settlement Must Be Reached Soon—War Work Held Up.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Employers and employees involved in the labor disputes in shipyards on the Pacific coast, as well as in other sections of the country, are to be asked to come to a speedy agreement to aid the government in its work.

If necessary President Wilson may take a hand in settling the troubles which have interrupted government work.

As yet the executive mansion is holding off from entering into the situation, and attempts at settling the disputes have been left largely in the hands of the shipping board, the newly organized adjustment committee and President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor.

Chairman E. N. Hurley made preparations to leave for San Francisco today to place the arguments of the federal authorities before the labor and capital involved. He may call at the White House before he starts on the trip.

Mr. Hurley will carry with him the authority of the president, it is said, to act definitely.

The situation has reached a point where the shipping board realizes that a settlement must be brought about without unnecessary delay in the best interests of the nation, and officials are satisfied that an adjustment will be reached when the situation is placed before the warring factions on that basis.

It has been stated that certain employers have acted in a manner which hindered speedy adjustment, unless the government assumed the entire burden of expense, but it is not thought that they will be acceptable to the labor interests and the government.

Mr. Hurley spent most of the day in consultation with Mr. Gompers and Secretary of Labor Wilson.

Mediator Acts. Sept. 19.—Government machinery moved rapidly during the day to settle the strike of approximately 25,000 iron workers and shipbuilders, whose walkout after rejection of higher wage demands paralyzed 100 or more great and small industrial plants in San Francisco and vicinity and tied up war emergency construction totaling $150,000,000.

The first concrete results of a conference, called by W. T. Boyce, an assistant immigration commissioner here, appointed by Secretary of Labor Wilson as federal mediator and conciliator, with committees of the California Metal Trades association and the Iron Trades council, the organizations of employers and employees respectively, was a serious discussion of a plan whereby the striking craftsmen members of 25 unions, might return to work with pay based on the scale of wages paid at Mare Island navy yard.

See End of Strike Near. No definite action was taken, the conferees adjourning until James L. Ackerson, representing the United States shipping board, had had opportunity to ascertain the federal wage scale.

Leaders of the men expressed willingness to discuss any "reasonable" compromise which might be officially offered. It was generally felt at the headquarters of both factions that some method of speedily ending the strike would be found.

Marines on Guard. Marines patrolling the Union Iron works, the largest of the plants affected, refused to allow anyone to approach the gates unless armed with a pass. It was said additional guards would be placed about other shipbuilding plants in San Francisco, Oakland and Alameda.

Ninety automobiles, each manned by two policemen, patrolled lines of the United Railroads in certain districts in a determined effort to prevent a recurrence of rioting.

BILLIONS FOR U. S. WAR

HOUSE PASSES LARGEST SUPPLY BILL BY UNANIMOUS VOTE.

$7,000,000,000 War Deficiency Measure Carries Appropriations for Army and Shipping Boards.

Washington, Sept. 19.—The $7,000,000,000 war deficiency bill, carrying huge appropriations for the army, fortifications and shipping boards, passed the house by a unanimous vote.

The bill, the largest supply measure in the country's history, now goes to the senate, where prompt action is expected.

It directly appropriates $4,830,000,000 and authorizes contracts for $2,314,000,000 additional.

The big items include: Shipping board, $835,000,000 cash, as part of the board's construction program, limited to an aggregate of $1,740,000,000; fortifications, $1,495,000,000, appropriated and contracts authorized for $975,000,000 more; naval emergency fund, $100,000,000; war department emergency fund, $100,000,000; construction of additional torpedo boat destroyers, $225,000,000 to start a $350,000,000 program; transportation of the army and its supplies, $350,000,000; army subsistence, $175,000,000; quartermaster supplies, $100,000,000; clothing and camp equipage, $330,000,000, and horses, $30,000,000; barracks and quarters, $49,000,000; medical department, $100,000,000; engineer department, $105,000,000; ordnance stores, ammunition, $39,520,000; small arms target practice, $13,000,000; ordnance stores and supplies, $70,000,000; automatic machine rifles, $220,000,000, and $118,000,000 more authorized; armored motor cars, $16,750,000, and $5,000,000 more authorized; aviation, $35,000,000; naval ordnance and ordnance stores, $12,446,480; ammunition for vessels, $40,000,000, and $15,000,000 more authorized; batteries and outfits for vessels, $50,000,000, and $28,000,000 additional authorized; reserve ordnance supplies, $47,500,000 cash, and $17,500,000 more authorized.

The senate appropriations committee has been at work on the house measure for several days and will hold brief hearings, beginning tomorrow, when Secretary of War Baker will appear and probably submit further additional estimates.

With new army and other estimates, the senate committee may be called upon to increase the bill around $1,000,000.

Senate Republicans favoring a congressional expenditure supervising committee have been planning to propose such a provision as an amendment to the bill, but may postpone their effort in view of the general desire to hasten adjournment.

ASSERT LOYALTY AT MEETING

League Opens St. Paul Conference With Patriotic Songs—Deny Wheat Price Plot.

St. Paul, Minn., Sept. 19.—Federal agents, closely watching public meetings for possible seditious utterances, attended the opening of the National Nonpartisan league convention of producers and consumers here.

Troubles which arose over a place on the program between the Nonpartisan league and members of the Minneapolis Van Lear faction, which caused the Minneapolis delegation to hold a conference elsewhere, were settled amicably, according to officials of the league, although Minneapolis was not given a place on the program.

More than 1,800 people were present, among them many Socialists. When the Minnesota State band began the program with a medley of patriotic airs all arose.

The railway brotherhood state legislative board convened in St. Paul for the purpose of attending the convention.

H. J. Walters, president of the State Agricultural college and member of the wheat price-fixing board, will speak. Senator A. J. Gronna of North Dakota will speak on "Wheat in the World War."

A. C. Townley, president of the league, made a bitter arraignment of war profiteers in sounding the keynote of the convention, urging the government to fix prices on other necessities in proportion to those fixed for wheat.

He denied that the meeting had been called to protest against the price fixed for wheat by the government.

AUSTRIAN ATTACKS HALTED

Rome Says Enemy's Drive on Bainsizza Plateau Failed—Vienna Claims Gain.

Rome, Sept. 19.—An Italian official statement says that in the southeastern area of the Bainsizza plateau further enemy counter-attacks were promptly repulsed. In the Carso there were brisk artillery duels and a frequent harassing fire.

BIG STRIKE IN WEST

$150,000,000 WORTH OF WAR CONTRACTS TIED UP AT SAN FRANCISCO.

25 UNIONS ARE INVOLVED

Employers Shut Down Plants and Await Action by Administration at Washington—U. S. Marines Land to Guard Property.

San Francisco, Sept. 19.—Strike riots and disorders on Monday, in which 15 persons received injuries necessitating hospital treatment and 30 rioters were arrested, continued throughout the day following the walkout of 25,000 iron workers and shipbuilders, which brought work to a standstill on more than $150,000,000 of naval and merchant vessel construction for the government.

The strike is characterized as the most extensive in the history of the Pacific coast.

A company of United States marines was landed at the Union Iron works dock, where the men went on strike. It is reported another company has been ordered from Mare Island to the plant and that the government will take similar action to protect shipbuilding plants at other bay points.

Full details of the strike and the demands of the 25 unions involved for higher wages have been reported to Washington. The employers have placed the issue squarely up to the federal officials, closing down their plants and making no attempt to operate while they await government action.

WHEAT REVOLT LAID TO FOES

U. S. Finds German Propaganda in Northwest States Caused Farmer Rebellion.

Washington, Sept. 17.—Pro-German propaganda is responsible for the refusal of farmers to sell their wheat crop at the price fixed by the government was the statement issued by the food administration on Friday night.

Mr. Hoover declared, except in territories affected by pro-German and anti-war agitators, there was no disposition on the part of farmers to withhold crops.

The food administration flatly denied the government is considering commandeering wheat stocks of farmers.

Mr. Hoover has turned the entire problem over to the department of justice. The department has been asked to investigate thoroughly various organizations and meetings, particularly in the northwest, which contemplate an agitation to upset the government's fixed price of $2.20 per bushel on wheat.

Officials of the department of justice will prosecute all involved in any agitation to embarrass the government in the prosecution of the war.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The war insurance bill, carrying an appropriation of $176,000,000 and providing allotments for soldiers' families, compensation for injuries and comprehensive insurance, was passed by the house.

Only five representatives among 324 present failed to vote for the bill supplanting the old pension system in this war. These five answered "present" on roll call.

TRAITORS TO U. S.

ROOT SAYS PEACE ARGUMENTS ARE ENEMY ARGUMENTS.

Declares Spirit Is One of Rebellion and Effect Is to Hinder Government's Work.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Before 15,000 persons gathered at the war mass meeting in the Coliseum on Friday night, Elihu Root defined the word "traitor" as it applies in this crisis.

"Arguments against the war, since we have entered the war, are enemy arguments," he declared, while the great crowd shouted its approval.

"Their spirit is the spirit of rebellion and the effect is to hinder and lessen popular support. They encourage the enemy."

When the throng had given vent to its hearty approbation he paused dramatically and declared:

"Such persons are rendering more effective service to Germany than they ever could render on the battlefield with arms."

"Their purpose is so plain that it is impossible to resist the conclusion that the greater number of them are attempting to bring triumph to Germany."

"Anyone who by argument is hindering the government, and knows what he is doing, is a traitor," Mr. Root said.

Mr. Root, who appeared on the platform with Samuel Gompers as co-speaker of the evening, mentioned names in his powerful address.

He severely took to task naturalized citizens who have shown an inclination to be false to their new country.

The big meeting was held under the direction of the Chicago chapter of the National Security league. Long before the time for the speaking to begin the great hall was crowded.

RUSSIA IS REPUBLIC

PROCLAMATION ISSUED BY THE PROVISIONAL GOVERNMENT AT PETROGRAD.

CABINET OF FIVE TO RULE

Korniloff's Rebellion Has Been Quelled, But Confusion It Caused Threatens Fatherland and Its Freedom.

Petrograd, Sept. 18.—Russia has been proclaimed a republic. The provisional government on Sunday issued the proclamation, dated September 14.

The proclamation follows: "General Korniloff's rebellion has been quelled. But great is the confusion caused thereby, and again great is the danger threatening the fate of the fatherland and its freedom."

"Holding it necessary to put an end to the external indefiniteness of this state's organization, remembering the unanimous and rapturous approval of the republican idea expressed at the Moscow state conference, the provisional government declares that the constitutional organization, according to which the Russian state is ruled is a republican organization, and it hereby proclaims the Russian republic."

(Signed) KERENSKY, "Minister and President," YABLOUDIN.

The provisional government announced that all of the affairs of state had been intrusted to five members of the cabinet. The following official communication was issued:

"Pending the definite constitution of a cabinet and in view of the present extraordinary circumstances, all affairs of state have been intrusted to M. Kerensky, premier; M. Terestchenko, minister of foreign affairs; General Verhovskiy, minister of war; Admiral Verderovski, minister of marine, and M. Nikitin, minister of posts and telegraphs."

After the surrender of General Korniloff and the completion of the new cabinet, Premier Kerensky was interviewed. Premier Kerensky said:

"Announce that the Korniloff adventure now is completely at an end, and there is no prospect whatever of his adherents or of other parties attempting to revive it. Virtually all the chief movers in the revolt are in our hands and the matter may be considered settled."

"Our immediate problems are political, and I hope they will be settled satisfactorily and peacefully. We must think of reorganization at home and the conduct of the war."

SOCIALIST HITS U. S. FOES

C. E. Russell and Labor Leaders Denounce Copperheads and Traitors—Back America in War.

Philadelphia, Sept. 18.—"We are at war and there shall be no more oppression, no more kings, no more war on this earth. This is our answer to the hiss of the copperheads."

Charles Edward Russell, the noted Socialist and writer, member of the mission to Russia, thus defined the attitude of America's workers toward the war on Germany at a great loyalty mass meeting of Philadelphia labor organizations in the Garrick theater on Sunday.

The great spokesman of American working men addressed this meeting, held by the American Alliance for Labor and Democracy, and so aroused the enthusiasm of the 1,000 workers crowded in the theater that they rose en masse in a pledge to push the war to victory.

Quebec Cantilever Bridge Builders Begin 150-Foot Lift—Accidents Have Cost $2,500,000.

Quebec, Sept. 18.—A third attempt to place in position the central span of the Quebec cantilever bridge is being made.

Weather conditions being favorable, the span, resting on pontoons, was towed into position and hoisting chains attached to eight six-ton jacks ready to begin the lift of 150 feet.

An attempt made last September failed, the span falling into the river, resulting in 14 deaths. A previous attempt in 1916 also ended with loss of life, 70 persons dying. The two accidents caused a monetary loss of about $2,500,000.

ENVOY ACTED AS SPY

LANSING REVEALS WORK OF SWEDISH MINISTER IN MEXICO

Letter of Kaiser's Representative Asking Decoration for Scandinavian Aid Made Public.

Washington, Sept. 15.—The material aid given Germany by Sweden was not confined to transmission of naval secrets by code from Argentina to Berlin. A copy of an official letter from Herr von Eckhardt, German minister in Mexico, to his home office, given out by Secretary Lansing on Thursday, makes the startling revelation that Folke Cronholm, Swedish charge d'affaires in Mexico City, was an active agent of the German government.

So extensive were his services that he was recommended to the kaiser as being worthy of a special decoration as reward for his services.

It is shown that Folke Cronholm not only gave military and diplomatic information to Minister von Eckhardt at least up to March, 1916, but that he followed the example of his colleague in Buenos Aires by transmitting official messages from the German embassy in the official Swedish code to the foreign office at Stockholm and thence to Berlin.

At the same time the secretary of state made public a report from Ira Nelson Morris, American minister at Stockholm, declaring that while the Swedish foreign office was transmitting German messages in German code for the German diplomats, it was requiring Mr. Morris to file his messages to Constantinople via the Swedish foreign office in French.

After being received by Premier Kerensky at the winter palace and informed of the fate which awaited him, General Krymoff, commander of the Korniloff troops which were sent against Petrograd, returned to his lodging and shot himself.

Petrograd has entirely recovered its calm, a remarkable effect of the suppression of the revolt.

"Crossing" of Wireless Waves Responsible for Story of Submarine Attack Off U. S.

Washington, Sept. 18.—A "crossing" of wireless waves was responsible for the submarine scare on Saturday which set off a Washington on edge and hurried the Mayflower, with President Wilson and his party, into the protection of New York harbor. An American vessel was engaged in target practice. Some vessel heard the firing and reported it. A vessel was notifying a shore station of her position off Nantucket. THE HILLMAN

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

JOHN HEARS MYSTERIOUS PHRASES WHICH TROUBLE HIM WITH GRAVE DOUBTS ABOUT LOUISE—AT TIMES HE WISHES HE WERE BACK IN THE HILLS.

Synopsis.—Louise Maurel, famous actress, making a motor tour of rural England, was obliged, when her car broke down, to spend the night at the ancestral home of Stephen and John Stragewey, bachelor woman-haters, in the Cumberland district. Before she left the next day she had captivated John. Three months later he went to London and looked her up. She introduced him to her friends, among them Graillot, a playwright, and Sophy Gerard, a light-hearted little actress. John, puritanical in his views, entered the gay bohemian life of the city with enthusiasm. It was soon seen that John and the prince of Seyre were rivals for the heart and hand of Louise. Sophy also loved John secretly. The prince tried to entice John into evil ways by sending fascinating women to charm and bedevil him.

"Sometimes with Miss Maurel, sometimes with her little friend, Sophy Gerard, and sometimes alone," John replied. "I have bought a Baedeker, taken a taxicab by the day, and done all the sights. I've spent weeks in the National gallery, picture gazing, and I've done all those modern shows up round Bond street. I have bought a racing car and learned to drive it. I have been to dinner parties that have bored me stiff. I have been introduced to crowds of people whom I never wish to see again, and made one or two friends," he added, smiling at his guest, "for whom I hope I am properly grateful."

"The prince has been showing you round a bit, hasn't he?" Graillot grunted.

"The prince has been extraordinarily kind to me," John admitted slowly, "for what reason I don't know. He has introduced me to a great many pleasant and interesting people, and a great many whom I suppose a young man in my position should be glad to know. He has shown me one side of London life pretty thoroughly."

"There is no secret about it. It is Louise Maurel."

"And what about it all?" Graillot demanded. "You find yourself something more of a citizen of the world, eh?"

"Not a bit," John answered simply. "The more I see of the life up here, the smaller it seems to me. I mean, of course, the ordinary life of pleasure, the life to be lived by a young man like myself, who hasn't any profession or work upon which he can concentrate his thoughts."

"Then why do you stay?"

John made no immediate reply. Instead, he walked to the window of his sitting room and stood looking across the Thames with a discontented frown upon his face. Between him and the Frenchman a curious friendship had sprung up during the last few months.

"I gather," Graillot continued, "that, to put it concisely and truthfully, you are the most bored man in London. There is something behind all this effort of yours, my friend, to fit yourself, the round human being, into the square place. Speak the truth, now! Treat me as a father confessor."

John swung round upon his heel. In the clear light it was obvious that he was a little thinner in the face and that some of the tan had gone from his complexion.

"I am staying up here, and going on with it," he announced doggedly, "because of a woman."

Graillot stopped eating, placed the remains of his cake in the saucer of his teacup, and laid it down. Then he opened his lips to speak and abruptly closed them. His face suddenly underwent an extraordinary change. A few seconds ago his attitude had been that of a professor examining some favorite object of study; now a more personal note had humanized his expression. Whatever thought or reflection it was that had come into his mind, it had plainly startled him.

"Who is the woman?" he asked breathlessly.

"There is no secret about it, so far as I am concerned," John answered. "It is Louise Maurel. I thought you must have guessed."

The two men looked at each other in silence for some moments. Out on the river a little tug was hooting vigorously. The roar of the Strand came faintly into the room. On the mantelpiece a very ornate French clock was ticking lightly. All these sounds seemed suddenly accentuated. They beat time to a silence almost tragical in its intensity.

Graillot took out his handkerchief and dabbed his forehead. He had written many plays, and the dramatic instinct was strongly developed in him. "Louise!" he muttered under his breath.

"She is very different, I know," John went on, after a moment's hesitation. "She is very clever and a great artist, and she lives in an atmosphere of which, a few months ago, I knew nothing. I have come up here to try to understand, to try to get a little nearer to her."

There was another silence, this time almost an awkward one. Then Graillot rose suddenly to his feet.

"I will respect your confidence," he promised, holding out his hand. "Have no fear of that. I am due now at the theater. Your tea is excellent, and such little cakes I never tasted before."

"You will wish me good luck?"

"No."

"Why not?" John demanded, a little startled.

"Because," Graillot pronounced, "from what I have seen and know of you both, there are no two people in this world less suitable for each other."

"Look here," John expostulated, "I don't want you to go away thinking so. You don't understand what this means to me."

"Perhaps not, my friend," Graillot replied, "but remember that it is at least my trade to understand men and women. I have known Louise Maurel since she was a child."

"Then it is I whom you don't understand."

"That may be so," Graillot confessed. "One makes mistakes. Let us leave it at that. You are a young man of undeveloped temperament. You may be capable of much which at present I do not find in you."

"Tell me the one quality in which you consider me most lacking," John begged. "I want you on my side, Graillot."

"And I," Graillot replied, as he shook his friend's hand and hurried off, "want only to be on the side that will mean happiness for you both."

He left the room a little abruptly. John walked back to the window, oppressed with a sense of something almost ominous in the Frenchman's manner, something which he could not fathom, against which he struggled in vain. Side by side with it, there surged into his memory the disquietude which his present relations with Louise had developed. She was always charming when she had any time to spare—sometimes almost affectionate. On the other hand, he was profoundly conscious of her desire to keep him at arm's length for the present.

He had accepted her decision without a murmur. He made but few efforts to see her alone, and when they met he made no special claim upon her notice. He was serving his apprenticeship doggedly and faithfully. Yet there were times like the present when he found his task both hateful and difficult.

He walked aimlessly backward and forward, chafing against the restraint of the narrow walls and the low ceiling. A sudden desire had seized him to fly back to the hills, wrenched in mist though they might be; to struggle on his way through the blinding rain, to drink down long gulps of his own purer, less civilized atmosphere.

The telephone bell rang. He placed the receiver to his ear almost mechanically.

"Who is it?" he asked.

"Lady Hilda Mulloch is asking for you, sir," the hall porter announced.

Lady Hilda peered around John's room through her lorgnette, and did not hesitate to express her dissatisfaction.

"Who is the woman?" he asked breathlessly.

"My dear man," she exclaimed,

"what makes you live in a hotel? Why don't you take rooms of your own and furnish them? Surroundings like these are destructive to one's individuality."

"Well, you see," John explained, as he drew an easy chair up to the fire for his guest, "my stay in London is only a temporary one, and it hasn't seemed worth while to settle anywhere."

She stretched out her graceful body in front of the fire and raised her veil. She was very smartly dressed, as usual. Her white silk stockings, which she seemed to have no objection to displaying, were of the latest vogue. The chinchilla around her neck and in her little toque was most becoming. She seemed to bring with her an atmosphere indefinable, in its way, but distinctly attractive. Brisk in her speech, a little commanding in her manner, she was still essentially feminine.

John, at her direct invitation, had called upon her once or twice since their meeting at the opera, and he had found her, from the first, more attractive than any other society woman of his acquaintance. None the less, he was a little taken aback at her present visit.

"Exactly why are you here, anyhow?" she demanded. "I feel sure that Eugene told me the reason which had brought you from your wilds, but I have forgotten it."

"For one thing," John replied, "I have come because I don't want to appear prejudiced, and the fact that I never spent a month in London, or even a week, seemed a little narrow-minded."

"What's the real attraction?" Lady Hilda asked. "It is a woman, isn't it?"

"I am very fond of a woman who is in London," John admitted. "Perhaps it is true that I am here on her account."

Lady Hilda withdrew from her muff a gold cigarette case and a little box of matches.

"Order some mixed vermouth with lemon for me, please," she begged. "I have been shopping, and I hate tea. I don't know why I came to see you. I suddenly thought of it when I was in Bond street."

"It was very kind of you," John said. "If I had known that you cared about seeing me, I would have come to you with pleasure."

"What does it matter?" she answered. "You are thinking, perhaps, that I risk my reputation in coming to a young man's rooms? Those things do not count for me. Ever since I was a child I have done exactly as I liked, and people have shrugged their shoulders and said, 'Ah, well, it is only Lady Hilda!' I am quite convinced that if I chose to take you off to Monte Carlo with me next week and spend a month with you there, I should get my pass to the royal inclosure at Ascot when I returned, and my invitation to the next court ball, even in this era of starch. You see, they would say, 'It is only Lady Hilda!'"

The waiter brought the vermouth, which his visitor sipped contentedly.

"So there is a woman, is there?" she went on, looking across the room at her companion. "Have you committed yourself already, then? Don't you remember what I told you the first night we met after the opera—that it is well to wait?"

"Yes, I remember," John admitted. "I meant it."

He laughed good-humoredly, yet not without some trace of self-consciousness.

"The mischief was done then," he said.

"Couldn't it be undone?" she asked lazily. "Or are you one of those tedious people who are faithful forever? Fidelity, she continued, knocking the ash from her cigarette, "is really, to my mind, the most bourgeois of vices. It comes from a want of elasticity in the emotional fibers. Nothing in life has bored me so much as the faithfulness of my lovers."

"You ought to put all this into one of your books," John suggested.

"I probably shall, when I write my reminiscences," she replied. "Tell me about this woman. And don't stand about in that restless way at the other end of the room. Bring a chair close to me—there, close to my side!"

John obeyed, and his visitor contemplated him thoughtfully through a little cloud of tobacco smoke.

"Yes," she decided, "there is no use denying it. You are hatefully good-looking, and somehow or other I think your clothes have improved you. You have a little more air than when you first came to town. Are you quite sure that you haven't made up your mind about this woman in a hurry?"

"Quite sure," John laughed. "I suppose I am rather an idiot, but I am addicted to the vice of which you were speaking."

She nodded.

"I should imagine," she said, "that you were not an adept in the art of flirtation. Is it true that the woman is Louise Maurel?"

"Quite true," John replied.

"But don't you know—"

"She broke off abruptly. She saw the face of the man by her side suddenly change, and her instinct warned her of the danger into which she was rushing.

"You surprise me very much," she said. "Louise Maurel is a very wonderful woman, but she seems to spend the whole of her time with my cousin, the prince."

"They are, without doubt, very friendly," John assented. "They have a good many interests in common, and the prince is connected with the syndicate which finances the theater. I do not imagine, however, that the prince wishes to marry her, or she him."

Lady Hilda began to laugh, softly, but as if genuinely amused. John sat and watched her in ominous silence. Not the flicker of a smile perturbed his lips. His visitor, however, was undisturbed. She leaned over and patted his hand.

"Simple Simon!" she murmured, leaning a little toward him. "If you go on looking like that, I shall put your cheeks, too. You are really much too nice looking to wear such thunder clouds!"

"Perhaps if we chose some other subject of conversation—" John said stiffly.

"Oh, dear me!" she interrupted. "Very well! You really are a most trying person, you know. I put up with a great deal from you."

John was silent. Her face darkened a little, and an angry light flashed in her eyes.

"Well, I'll leave you alone if you like," she decided, tossing her cigarette into the grate. "If my friendship isn't worth having, let it go. It hasn't often been offered in vain. There are more men in London than I could count who would go down on their knees for such a visit as I am paying you. And you—you," she added, with a little tremble of real anger in her tone, "you're too hatefully polite and priggish! Come and ring the bell for the lift. I am going!"

She slid gracefully to her feet, shook the cigarette ash from her clothes, and picked up her muff.

"You are really an egregious, thick-headed, obstinate countryman," she declared, as she moved toward the door. "You haven't either manners or sensibility. I am a perfect idiot to waste my time upon you. I wouldn't have done it," she added, as he followed her dumbly down the corridor, "if I hadn't rather liked you!"

"I am very sorry," he declared. "I don't know quite what I have done. I do appreciate your friendship. You have been very kind to me indeed."

She hesitated as his finger touched the bell of the lift, and glanced at the watch on her wrist. She sighed, and watched the top of the lift as it came up. Then she dropped her veil.

CHAPTER XV.

"This is very nearly my idea of perfect happiness," Sophy murmured, as she leaned across the table and listened idly while John ordered the dinner.

"Give me very little to eat, John, and talk a great deal to me. I am depressed about myself and worried about everything!"

"And I," he declared, "am just beginning to breathe again. I don't think I understand women, Sophy."

"Wasn't your week-end party a success?" she asked.

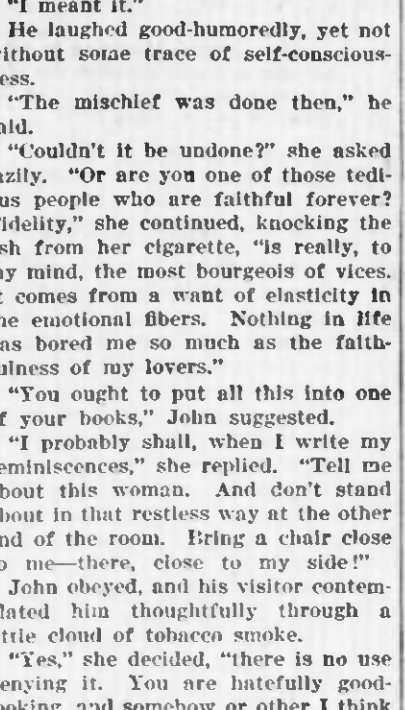

"Not altogether," he confessed; "but don't let's talk about it. Tell me what is depressing you."

"About myself, or things generally?"

"Yourself first."

"Well, the most respectable young man you ever knew in your life, who lives in Bath, wants me to marry him. I don't think I could. I don't think I could live in Bath, and I don't think I could marry anyone. And I've just thirteen shillings and fourpence left. I haven't paid my rent, and my dressmaker is calling for something on account on Monday morning."

"There's only one thing to answer to that," John insisted cheerfully. "I am going to lend you fifty pounds while you make your mind up about the young man."

"You Really Are an Egregious, Thick-Headed, Obstinate Country Man."

She made a face at him.

"I couldn't borrow money from a strange gentleman," she protested.

"Rubbish!" he exclaimed. "If you begin calling me a stranger—but there, never mind! We'll see about that dinner. Tell me more about your love affair, Sophy."

"It isn't a love affair at all!" she exclaimed, almost indignantly.

"Why, I am sorry. Your prospective alliance, then, shall I call it?"

"Oh, it isn't interesting," she said. "It's just a young man in Bath. He is a lawyer and moderately well off. He has wanted me to marry him for years. He was a friend of my brother's. Lately he has been bothering a little more than usual—in fact, I suppose I have received what might be called an ultimatum. He came up yesterday, and I went out with him last night. He has gone back to Bath this morning, and I have promised to let him know in a month. I think that is why I went out to Waterloo bridge in a mackintosh and got wet."

"Do you like him?" John asked practically.

"I like him, I suppose," Sophy sighed. "That's the worst of it. If I didn't like him, there might be some chance. I can't realize myself ever doing more than liking him in a mild sort of way; and if he expected more, as of course he would, then I should probably hate him. He tried to kiss me on the way to the station, and I nearly scratched him. That isn't like me, you know. I rather like being kissed sometimes."

John buried himself in the wine-list.

"Well," he admitted, "it doesn't sound very hopeful. I'm no sort of judge in these matters, but I have heard lots of people say that one gets on all right after marriage without caring very much before. You don't seem to have a very comfortable life now, do you?"

"Comfortable? No, but I am free," Sophy replied quickly. "I can come in and go out when I please, choose my own friends. It's rather fine to be here, you know—to be in the atmosphere, even if the limelight misses one."

John sighed, and regarded her thoughtfully. "You're a queer little girl, Sophy," he said. "I don't know how to advise you."

"Of course you don't," she answered. "No one could. As for you, I suppose you will marry Louise. What will happen to you after that, I don't know. Perhaps I shouldn't care so much about London then. You've made it very nice for me, you know."

"You've made it bearable even for me," he told her. "I often think how lonely I should have been without you to talk to. Louise sometimes is delightfully companionable, and kind enough to turn one's head. Other days I scarcely understand her; everything we say to one another seems wrong. I come away and leave her simply because I feel that there is a wall between us that I can't get over."

"There isn't really," Sophy sighed. "Louise is a dear. Considering everything, I think she is wonderful. But you are utterly different. She is very complex, very emotional, and she has other standards of life. You, on the other hand, are very simple, very faithful and honest, and you accept the standards which have been made for you—very, very rigidly, John. What are you looking at?"

John's whole expression had suddenly changed. His eyes were fixed upon the door, his face was stern as a granite block. Sophy turned quickly around. The maître d'hotel, with another satellite in his rear, was welcoming with much ceremony two lately arrived guests. Sophy clutched at the tablecloth. The newcomers were Louise and the prince of Seyre.

"I don't understand this!" John muttered, his lips twitching.

Sophy Gerard said nothing. Her cheeks were pink with excitement.

Suddenly Louise saw John and Sophy. She stood quite still for a moment; then she came toward them, slowly and a little languidly. The prince was still studying through his eyeglasses the various tables which the head waiter was offering for his consideration.

"What an astonishing meeting!" Louise remarked, as she laid her hand for a moment on Sophy's shoulder.

"What is going on behind my back?" John rose very slowly to his feet. He seemed taller than ever, and Louise's smile remained unanswered.

"The rain broke up my week-end party," he explained, "and I met Sophy in the Strand. In any case, I intended returning tonight. I understood that you would not be here until tomorrow about eleven o'clock."

"Those were my plans," Louise replied; "but, as you see, other things have intervened. Our little house party, too, was broken up by this abominable weather, and we all motored up to town. The Faradays have gone home. The prince heard from Miles that I was at home, and telephoned me to dine. Me voici!"

John was struggling with a crowd of hateful thoughts. Louise was wearing a wonderful gown; her hair was beautifully arranged; she had the air of a woman whose toilet was complete and perfect down to the slightest detail. The prince's slow drawl reached them distinctly.

"It was my servant's fault, I suppose," he said. "I told him to ring up last night and order the table for two in that corner. However, we will take the vacant one near your desk."

He looked around and, as if for the first time, missed Louise. He came toward them at once.

"The prince seems to have ordered his table last night," John remarked, his tone, even to himself, sounding queer and strained.

Louise made no reply. The prince was already shaking hands with Sophy.

"I thought you were spending the week-end with my cousin, Stragewey," he remarked, turning to John.

"We did spend part of it together," John replied. "The weather drove us back this afternoon."

"I congratulate you both on your good taste," said the prince. "There is nothing more abominable than a riverside retreat out of season. We are taking the table on the left, Louise."

He led her away, and they passed down the room. John slowly resumed his seat.

"Sophy," he demanded hoarsely, "tell me the truth. Is there anything between the prince and Louise?"

Sophy nervously crumpled up the toast by her side.

"The prince admires Louise, and has done so for many years," she answered. "No one knows anything else. Louise never speaks of him to me. I cannot tell you."

"But you must know," he persisted, with a little break in his voice. "Forgive me, Sophy, if I made an ass of myself. First Lady Hilda, and then Graillot, and then—well, I thought Louise might have rung up to see whether I was at home, if she came back sooner than she expected; and the prince took the table last night!"

She leaned over and patted him on the hand.

"Don't worry," she begged. "If Louise has to choose some day between him and you, I don't think she'll hesitate very long. Don't look so stern, please. You look very statuesque and perfect, but I don't want to dine with a piece of sculpture. Remember that I am flinging you too attractive for my peace of mind. There's your tea!"

He poured a glass of wine and drank it off.

"I'll do my best," he agreed. "If it sounds like rubbish, you can still believe what I appreciate everything you've told me. You are pretty, and I am lucky to have you here. Now I'll try to make you believe that I think so."

She leaned over so that her head almost touched his.

"Go on, please!" she murmured. "Even if it hurts afterward, it will be heavenly to listen to!"

The next night Sophy acted as showman at the first production of the play, so long delayed because of Graillot's insistence on a scene that promised to be startling to English playgoers. Her part was over at the end of the first act, and a few minutes later she slipped into a seat by John's side behind the curtain.

"What do you think of it so far?" she asked a little anxiously.

"It seems quite good," John replied cheerfully. "Some very clever lines, and all that sort of thing; but I can't quite see what it's all leading to."

Sophy peered around the house from behind the curtain.

"There isn't standing room anywhere," she declared. "I don't suppose there ever was a play in London that was more talked about; and then putting it off for more than three months—why, there have been all sorts of rumors about. Do you want to know who the people in the audience are?"

"Not particularly," John answered. "I shouldn't know them, if you told me. There are just a few familiar faces. I see the prince in the box opposite."

"Did you telephone to Louise today?" Sophy asked.

John shook his head.

"No. I thought it better to leave her alone until after tonight."

"You are going to the supper, of course?"

"I have been asked," John replied, a little doubtfully. "I don't quite know whether I want to. Is it being given by the prince or by the management?"

"The management," Sophy assured him. "Do you come and take me! It's going to be rather fun."

The curtain went up upon the second act. John, from the shadows of the box, listened attentively. The subject was not a particularly new one, but the writing was brilliant. There was the old "Marquis de Guy," a rone, a degenerate, but still overbearing and full of personality, from whose lips came some of Graillot's most brilliant sayings; Louise, his wife; and Enriday, a friend of the old marquis, and obviously the intended lover of his wife.

"I don't see anything so terrible in this," John remarked, as the curtain went down once more and thunders of applause greeted some wonderful lines of Graillot's.

The mystery about the life of Louise further troubles John and he sets forth to get the exact truth, no matter how tragic for him it may be.

PROVISIONS OF NEW WORKMAN'S LAW

Benefits to Injured Are Increased Ten Per Cent by Changes.

EMPLOYERS PAY FOR BURIAL

Compensation Recoverable in Cases of Total Disability Is Materially Increased—Farmers Not Subject to Law.

Madison.—The provisions of the new workmen's compensation law passed by the last legislature have gone into effect and apply to all industrial accidents that occur in Wisconsin. The new law materially increases the benefits to injured workmen; the increase having been estimated by the legislative committee which reported the measure as approximately 10 per cent.

The most important items in this increase are the modifications in the schedule of fixed benefits, which materially lengthen periods of disability for all specific injuries involving amputations.

The new law also increases the compensation recoverable in cases of permanent total disability to workmen in the prime of life. Hitherto indemnity for permanent total disability has been limited to six times the annual wage, regardless of the age of the injured workman. Hereafter, the maximum indemnity which workmen under thirty-two years of age may recover, if they are permanently totally disabled, is a fraction less than ten times the annual wage, which sum is reduced in accordance with a regular schedule for workmen totally disabled later in life.

Another provision in the new law, increasing the compensation benefits, is that which requires the employer to pay burial expenses not to exceed $100 in all death cases. The law also liberalizes the provision regarding medical aid, permitting the industrial commission to extend medical aid beyond 90 days after the injury, where such an arrangement is expected to result in a shortening of the period of disability.

Still another provision of the new act gives increased compensation in cases of multiple injuries; where workmen sustain more than one specific injury in a single accident, as when several fingers are cut off. In such cases the compensation hereafter will not be merely the sum of the compensation due for each injury, but also an additional amount for the multiple character of the injury.

As heretofore, however, farmers are not subject to the act unless they specifically accept its provisions. The same arrangement is also made in the new law as regards policemen and firemen.

A further provision extending the scope of the compensation act is that which provides that all subordinate officers of the state and its political subdivisions are to be covered by its terms, as well as all other employees who have hitherto been subject to the law.

A new feature is introduced by the provision that triple compensation shall be paid to children of permit age who are injured while working without child labor permits, or while engaged at prohibited employments.

May Pledge Hoover Aid.

The woman's committee of the state council of defense will consider the recommendation to Wisconsin schools of a pledge recently adopted by the public schools of Council Bluffs, Ia., which explains Hoover, food administrator of Herbert Hoover, food administrator of Herbert Hoover, national commissioner of education; the woman's division of the Council of National Defense, and Albert M. Deyoe, Iowa superintendent of public instruction. The pledge follows:

"I, _____, pupil in the _____ school in _____ hereby promise that I will not fretfully or complainingly find fault with the food set before me while my country is at war, nor will I criticize such food in any manner while at the table; but if it is necessary to talk it over I will do so cheerfully and helpfully when not at the table, and I will in every way, do my best to make it easy for those who must feed me to do so without leaving some one else hungry."

"And if I forget this pledge, I promise to fine myself 1 penny for each time it is broken, same to be paid into the school fund for the aid of Belgian children (or other fund established for the purpose)."

It is expected that the responsibility school children will feel at entering individually an agreement to aid national conservation will inject additional spirit into the whole plan of saving.

Law Supplements Ready.

While the 1917 legislature adjourned about one month earlier this year than the session of two years ago, there were 679 laws passed this year against 637 for the 1915 session. In 1915 the laws passed represented 206 pages of the law supplement pamphlets, while the laws of 1917 will make 269 pages, or an increase in number of pages of about 26 per cent. The law supplements will weigh about one pound each. The work of printing these supplements this year is quite a task. It will require over 100 tons of paper.

Forewarn Hunters of Waterfowl.

The hunting season for waterfowl and shore birds opened September 7. No game birds can be hunted or killed between sunset and 30 minutes before sunrise; or, by shooting from any boat, canoe, raft or blind in open water; or from any boat not propelled by paddle, oars or pole; or any game birds other than wild geese with the use of a rifle.

Not more than five live decoys are allowed and each must be provided with a registration tag by the conservation commission on payment of 10 cents each.

No more than 15 wild ducks, including mudhen, or 15 plovers, snipe, rail, and rice hen, or ten wild geese or brant can be killed or transported any one day, except a mixed bag limit of 20 birds, but containing not more than the bag limit of any one variety; that is if a hunter kills 15 ducks or mudhens he may kill or transport five wild geese or five snipe, etc.; with his 15 ducks or mudhen the same day, which makes a mixed bag of 20.

No game birds can be shipped by express, parcel post or otherwise, but must be accompanied and carried openly by the hunter in possession of a hunting license.

Game birds cannot be sold or served in hotels, restaurants, saloons or clubs, etc., and nobody can have them who is not in possession of a hunting license. Wood ducks, woodcock, wild swan, partridge, spruce hen, prairie chicken, sharp-tailed grouse, quail, pheasant, Hungarian partridge and all other wild birds, except crows, English sparrows, blackbirds, sharp-shinned and cooper's hawks and great horned owls, are protected all the time.

War Work Open to Women.

Every woman in Wisconsin may now become a member of the various war committees of the women's advisory committee to the state council of defense. A plan for associate memberships was inaugurated at the last meeting of the advisory board, the members of which realize that the subcommittee should be larger and more representative.

This arrangement opens a channel for every woman in the state to take a live interest in the duties and achievements of the war organizations, and make her feel that she is part of that organization. The work of child welfare, liberty bond issue, food conservation, etc., of these various committees has a broad scope.

Wisconsin's organization of women's committees is far in advance of many other states. Their work has not been merely propaganda; they have really accomplished much along the lines of food production and conservation. There are women looking after other women who are laboring in the factories, taking the place of some man who has gone to the front; they are actually engaged in war relief both at home and abroad.

Membership can be gained by the payment of 10 cents to the county chairman of the women's committee. For this fee she will receive a badge of distinction. The various subcommittees are: Home and foreign relief, Mrs. E. L. Maloney; woman in industry, chairman, Mrs. William Kittle; registration, Mrs. John W. Mariner; conservation, chairman, Miss Abby L. Marlett; social welfare, Mrs. W. A. Lawson; education, Mrs. H. M. Youmans; home work for town and county, Mrs. Schumacher; Red Cross, Mrs. Joseph W. Hobbins; Liberty loan, Mrs. John W. Mariner; speakers, Mrs. V. A. C. Tenison; publicity, Miss Amy Grimshaw; child welfare, Mrs. Mary Grimshaw.

Apple Growers Warned of Law.

The state department of agriculture has just prepared Circular No. 6, giving the rules and regulations to be observed in packing apples under the new Wisconsin apple grading law. The new law requires that all Wisconsin apples sold in closed packages from this time on be packed in grades and these grades be stamped on the box, together with the owner's name and address.

A heavy fine is provided for misbranding a barrel or for misrepresenting the contents by putting the good fruit on the top of the barrel. The law has resulted in great benefit to both grower and consumer in states where it has been in force for some time. The consumer who wants a good article has found that he can now buy home-grown fruit and be sure that it is what it is represented to be, while on the other hand, the grower finds a better market for a good, honest product than formerly because it does not have to compete with other barrels in which all the good fruit is on the top layers.

The state department of agriculture is planning to help the growers take advantage of this law. If a grower files a request in advance, an inspector will be sent out to help him get started grading and packing correctly. All growers and dealers should send for the circular and familiarize themselves with the new requirements before the apple harvest comes on.

Drinking Cup Law Mooted.

The drinking cup law is now before the Wisconsin railroad commission for interpretation. The 1913 legislature passed a law requiring the railroads of the state of Wisconsin to furnish free drinking cups to passengers. Compliance was made that the Milwaukee road was not complying with the law. The officials said that no other state had such a law, hence they had slot machines by which passengers could buy cups. To comply with the law a sign says drinking cups would be furnished by the brakeman.

HAD PIECE OF IRON IN LEG. For eleven years Man Carried Souvenir of San Francisco Earthquake About With Him.

Bernard Hughes, who is seventy years old and has traveled the country exclusively, walked into the dispensary of St. Joseph's hospital the other day and asked for a physician, says the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Doctor," he informed the surgeon, "I've got a bad pain in my left leg and I want you to do something for it." The surgeon took him to one of the operating tables and examined his leg. "You've got some sort of a bunch near your ankle," said the doctor, "and I think you ought to have it removed."

Shortly afterward the surgeon removed a piece of iron about an inch long and an inch and a half wide, which formed the "bunch."

"How in the world did that get in there?" he asked. "Well, I'll tell you what I think, doc, I was in San Francisco in 1906 when it had the earthquake," replied Hughes. "There was an explosion where I lived and a part of the stove hit me in the leg. I shouldn't be surprised if that piece of iron was a part of the stove, and I guess I've been toting it around with me ever since."

The missile in these eleven years had worked its way from the knee to the ankle.

The Smart Set in Millinery

Two-piece or three-piece matched sets in millinery are among the smartest things shown in the new displays for fall. The two-piece set is just what designers have made it possible to select a hat and bag—a hat and collar—or a hat and cape or scarf.
 made to match; or, if they do not match in materials, some touch in trimming makes them kin. A silk hat trimmed with chinchilla, for instance, is bound for life to a high chinchilla collar by a veil that falls from the hat and is sewed to the upper edge of the collar.

Where there are only a few threads broken in Irish or Swiss lace they can easily be repaired with a needle and thread the same size as that used in the manufacture of the lace. Place a tiny knot at the end of the thread on the needle and draw this through the place where the broken thread joins the body of the lace. Having done this, draw a succession of loop knots over the floating thread very tightly close to the base. Now follow with the new thread the course that the old thread has taken, and do the same with the other loose end, knotting it securely close to the body lace. Cut away the loose ends and the break is no longer perceptible.

Small Breaks in Lace.

Leading the vanguard of matched sets came the hat and bag to match and this fancy is altogether so pleasing that hat and bag sets are quite likely to be found also in the rear of the fashion parade along about Christmas time. If you contemplate something unusual in Christmas gifts that hat and bag set pictured here ought to prove interesting.

One of the smartest of smart sets is of brilliant green satin brocade with gold and finished with green chetillie tassels in the bag. The hat, to be worn with it, has a crown of black velvet and a narrow rolling brim of the green and gold brocade. At the back a flat tassel made of green chetillie falls from the crown, and small, flat flowers, made of chenille are set about the crown.

 A successful costume depends more upon handsome accessories like these, than many of us realize. A plain, dark gown of satin in black or other color, is lifted into brilliancy by tricks of elegance, in hat and bag or hat and scarf, and is equal to formal wear by these means.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Every woman can render important service to the nation in its present emergency. She need not leave her home or abandon her home duties to help the armed forces. She can help to feed and clothe our armies and help to supply food to those beyond the seas by practicing effective thrift in her own household.—United States Department of Agriculture.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS

One never has too many good things in the fruit cellar for winter use. The following may be new to some and suggestive to many:

Apple Catsup.—
 Peel and quarter a dozen apples, stew
 them in a very little water until soft, then run them through a sieve. To a quart of the sifted apples add one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of pepper, the same of cloves and cinnamon and two medium-sized onions, chopped fine. Stir all together, add one tablespoonful of salt and a cupful of vinegar. Boil one hour and bottle while hot.

A cupful of apple juice added to two cupfuls of ripe grape juice will make a nice jelly.

Wild Grapes for Winter Use.— Carefully remove all the stems from wild grapes which have been picked after the frost has sweetened them and place them in a stone crock with layers of sugar between, until the crock is full. Cover with a double thickness of cloth and the newspaper over the cover. Keep on the cellar floor in a cool place. The grapes cure themselves and keep their fresh taste.
 Huckleberries and blueberries may be treated in the same way.

Pear Preserves.—Pare the fruit very thin, make a sirup of a pint of water to a pound of sugar, and when it is clear, put in a pound of pears and stew gently until they are clear. Place a clove in the blossom end of each pear and add the juice and thinly pared rind of a lemon to each five pounds of fruit.

Peach Preserves.—Take three-quarters of a pound of sugar to each pound of the fruit. Put the sugar with a cupful of water and boil and skim.
 Pare the peaches and cut them in halves or quarters, then in the sirup for ten minutes. Take out the fruit carefully, placing it in the jar, boil the sirup for fifteen minutes or until it is thick, pour over the fruit and seal while hot.

Today may be all that is mournful—
 Our paths cannot always be bright.
 But tomorrow we'll somehow take courage.
 And trustingly enter the fight.

A FEW SALADS.

A spoonful or two of cooked corn cut from the left-over vegetable added to a potato salad is a great improvement to the plain variety.

Corn Salad.—Allow
 half as much chopped
 celery and walnut meats
 as cooked, grated corn, season with onion, salt
 and pepper and dress with a French dressing. This may be served on lettuce leaves if desired.

Beet Salad.—Cut in small pieces six cooked beets, the same quantity of potatoes and celery. Mix the yolks of three eggs with olive oil, add vinegar, oil and seasonings to taste, stir well and serve poured over the vegetables.

Onion Salad.—Chop fine two Span-
 'sh onions and place on ice to chill.
 Arrange crisp lettuce in a salad dish and place the onion on this, sprinkle with chopped red pepper and olives, and serve with French dressing.

Watercress Salad.—Wash the cress, and when dry and crisp place in a salad bowl, cover with slices of cucumber, sprinkle with a teaspoonful of chopped onion and pour over a French dressing, using a little tarragon vinegar and three drops of Worcestershire sauce. Serve very cold.

Mixed Vegetable Salad.—Mix one cupful of cold cooked potatoes, the same amount of cooked peas, one-half a cupful of celery cut in dice and one cupful of tomato jelly, cut in cubes.
 Mix with French dressing, then arrange on a salad dish and serve with slices of tomato with mayonnaise dressing.

Tomato With Orange Salad.—Peel and slice six tomatoes and six oranges, arrange them in alternate rows in a salad bowl. Add oil and tarragon vinegar to the juice which escapes from the salad mixture; season well with salt and pepper, sprinkle with parsley and serve.

Chicken Salad.—Mix a cupful of cold cooked chicken with one cupful each of cooked peas and walnut meats, add mayonnaise to moisten and serve on lettuce with a garnish of olives.

Concerning Hay Fever.

There is no such thing as a rose without a thorn. That affliction of early summer comes from various grasses, such as Johnson grass, nut grass, Bernarda grass, and oats, and some trees, particularly red cedar and black walnut. These grasses and trees are pollinated only by insects, and it is the rule in hay fever science that the disease is usually caused by the pollen that goes by breeze rather than by bees.

Too Sick To Work

Many Women in this Condition Regain Health by Taking Lydia E.
 Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Convincing Proof of This Fact.

Ridgway, Penn. — "I suffered from female trouble with backache and pain in my side for over seven months so I could not do any of my work. I was treated by three different doctors and was getting discouraged when my sister-in-law told me how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped her. I decided to try it, and it restored my health, so I now do all of my housework which is not light as I have a little boy three years old."
 — Mrs. O. M. RHINES, Ridgway, Penn.

Mrs. Lindsey Now Keeps House For Seven.

Tennille, Ga. — "I want to tell you how much I have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feelings, cold feet and hands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said I had a severe case of ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others and they have been benefited." — Mrs. W. E. LINDSEY, R. 3, Tennille, Ga.

SAYS ALL CHILDREN DO IT

University President Startles Hearers by Declaring Youths Like to "Take" Things.

Dr. G. Stanley Hall, president of Clark university, speaking on "Religion and Education," the other day, tossed off a number of opinions that rather startled some of his hearers.
 "Say, 'damn' once in a while if the occasion demands," Doctor Hall advised, and when the gasping had subsided he gave it as his belief that slapping children was a good practice if the slappings were administered vigorously and "not more in sorrow than in anger."
 "Be very kind about stealing," said
 the wise doctor, "for all children do it."

That appears to be a pretty broad assertion, says the Dayton News.
 Perhaps the doctor is right, but let us hope that he has overstated the case. In justice to him it must be added that he qualified his assertion concerning the thievish propensities of children by saying:
 "Possibly there is not a person here,
 a man at least, who has not stolen apples, turnips or watermelons. If they had been caught in the city they would have been branded as criminals."

We can understand the doctor's conclusions concerning apples and watermelons, but why should any boy want to steal turnips? As well accuse all boys of preferring work to play. No, we refuse to believe that Doctor Hall was not too generous in his accusation.

Too Expensive.

Wife—My dear, I wish you wouldn't play billiards for money. It's nothing but a game of chance.

Husband—Nonsense! Billiards is a game of infinite skill.

Wife—Not as you play it, my love!

LIFT YOUR CORNS OFF WITH FINGERS

How to loosen a tender corn or callus so it lifts out without pain.

Let folks step on your feet hereafter;
 wear shoes a size smaller if you like,
 for corns will never again send electric sparks of pain through you, according to this Cincinnati authority.

He says that a few drops of a drug called freezeone, applied directly upon a tender, aching corn, instantly relieves soreness, and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts right out.

This drug dries at once and simply shrivels up the corn or callus without even irritating the surrounding skin.
 A small bottle of freezeone obtained at any drug store will cost very little but will positively remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

If your druggist hasn't stocked this new drug yet, tell him to get a small bottle of freezeone for you from his wholesale drug house.—adv.

New to Her.

"Miss Willing," began the young man, as he wiped the cold perspiration from his brow, "are you fond of stories?"
 "If they are new, Mr. Woodby," replied the fair maid, "I simply dote on them."

"But the one I was going to tell you, Miss Willing, is not new," said the young man. "It is, I might say, Miss Willing—or, Clara—the old, old story, but—"

"Oh, never mind, George," she interrupted. "Even if it is a chestnut, I'm sure I never heard it. Go on, please!"

Bees in a Church Bell.

A swarm of busy bees has taken possession of the belfry of the Christian church, Halsey, Ore., and has stored honey in such quantity that the floor was broken and honey is dripping down upon the bell, making it impossible to ring it for church services.

The propensity to argue is evidence of conceit.

A call has come from France, to the Red Cross, asking for 150,000 woolen garments for the men at the front.

These include socks, mitts, mufflers, sweaters, and they must be made by women. Everybody that is anybody is knitting, and everywhere millady goes her knitting—in a knitting bag of sorts —is sure to go, too—like Mary's lamb.
 People who never touched a knitting needle before have mastered the art of knitting socks and find the work fascinating.

When we contemplate the brief history of a pair of socks we realize that the task of furnishing them will never be through with until the war ends.
 Supplies of socks must be sent in relays, one after the other, because, sturdy as the knitted woolen ones are, they will wear out.

Mufflers are easier for the beginner, and the sort of sweaters required are not very difficult. They are sleeveless and are really chest and back protectors. All the knitted garments must be made according to standards, which will be furnished by the Red Cross to those who apply for them.

A luxury that can be made by women who do not knit—if there are any—will interest them. Feet that get sore in the trenches can be rested and helped to heal by felt slippers, and these can be made by women at home.
 As we care for the comfort of our men
 when they are at home working for us, so we must care for their comfort when they are away—working and Feed the Fighters! Win the War!!

Harvest the Crops — Save the Yields

On the battle fields of France and Flanders, the United States boys and the Canadian boys are fighting side by side to win for the World the freedom that Prussianism would destroy. While doing this they must be fed and every ounce of muscle that can be requisitioned must go into use to save this year's crop. A short harvest period requires the combined forces of the two countries in team work, such as the soldier boys in France and Flanders are demonstrating.

The Combined Fighters in France and Flanders and the Combined Harvesters in America WILL Bring the Allied Victory Nearer.

A reciprocal arrangement for the use of farm workers has been perfected between the Department of the Interior of Canada and the Department of Labor and Agriculture of the United States, under which it is proposed to permit the harvesters that are now engaged in the wheat fields of Oklahoma, Kansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Minnesota and Wisconsin to move over into Canada, with the privilege of later returning to the United States, when the cross in the United States have been conserved, and help to save the enormous crops in Canada which by this time will be ready for harvesting.

Quite a little excitement was caused here last Sunday on account of a hill climbing contest which was pulled off by Frank Day of West Bend and Wm. Klein of Lomira. A large number of autos from surrounding villages witnessed the exhibition. Mr. Day drove his big Marmion 8 and made the hill on high, going about 35 miles an hour at the top, with one other passenger besides himself. Mr. Klein of Lomira also made the hill on high with a stripped Ford. We are told that considerable money changed hands as a result of the contest. This hill to the north of St. Kilian is about a mile long, and owing to a ridge at the bottom, it is difficult to get a good start in the ascent. Little obstacles like that are no drawback to Frank when he once sets his mind on doing something.

Why Pay the Peddler or Canvasser Twice These Prices?

You can save a good deal of money by buying your stock tonic at this store, instead of paying the peddler big, fancy prices for goods of unknown quality. Look at these prices for that old reliable and guaranteed stock conditioner and worm expeller—

DR. HESS STOCK TONIC

100 lb. drum costs $6.50

Remember, we have no peddler's wagon and horses' expenses to pay. That's why we can sell you Dr. Hess Stock Tonic at these rock-bottom prices.

Here is another point, Mr. Farmer, we want to emphasize, that is: Dr. Hess Stock Tonic is highly concentrated; it goes farther, as the small dose quantity proves. Dr. Hess Stock Tonic is to put your animals in a thriving condition, make the ailing ones healthy and expel the worms—otherwise you get your money back right here at our store. We also handle Experience the Best Teacher. It is generally admitted that experience is the best teacher, but should we not make use of the experience of others as well as our own? The experience of a thousand persons is more to be depended upon than that of one individual. Many thousands of persons have used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for coughs and colds with the best results, which shows it to be a thoroughly reliable preparation for those diseases. Try it. It is prompt and effectual and pleasant to take.
