KEWASKUM, WIS., SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1917

NUMBER 9

PASSING OF ANOTHER OF OUR PIONEERS

Ignatz Strohmeier, who, after an illness of five months duration with heart trouble, answered the final call from the Angel of Death, at his home in the town of Kewaskum, on last week Friday, October 20th, 1917, having attained the ripe old age of 75 years and 11 days.

Mr. Strohmeier was born on October 26th, 1842, in Baunkaupt, Germany, where he received his early education. In the year 1856 he together with his parents immigrated to America, settling in Rochester, New York, after having lived there for one year, they moved to Hartford, Wis., and later came to his present home on March 17th, 1892, where the deceased passed through many of the hardships of the old pioneer days.

On May 27th, 1879, Mr. Strohmeier was married to Miss Margaret Gutschentritter. Seven children were born of this union, six of whom together with the grief stricken wife survive. One daughter preceded her father in death eight years ago. The names of the surviving children are: Ignace of Grigsby, Kansas; Anna, (Mrs. Anton Porlen) of Hartford, Wis.; Lena, Katie, George and Barney at home.

In the death of Mr. Strohmeier this community has lost one of its most highly esteemed veterans, a hard worker, patient and enduring, the result of his work was crowned with success. He was a man who enjoyed taking daily strolls over his farm and watching the crops grow. The deceased was taken sick while at work, his condition was not considered serious at first, but he gradually grew weaker until death came as a great relief to him. He was a kind father and husband. His family always went to him for aid when in trouble and felt consoled when they left him. He was charitable and honest, always ready to help those in need. Although his sufferings were great, he bore them with patience, meeting death peacefully and without fear. Though the loss to his family is great, his life's career was well done. May he rest in peace.

The funeral was held on Tuesday, October 30th, with services in the St. Bridget's church. Rev. Father Vogt officiating. Interment was made in the adjoining cemetery.

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the surviving relatives.

Those from afar who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Peter Gutschentritter of West Bend, Miss Lena and John Gutschentritter of Hartford; Mr. and Mrs. Albert Peters and daughters Clara and Rose and son Edwin of Rubicon, Carrie, John, Joe and Barney Gutschentritter of Addison; Nick and John Peters of Woodland, and Mrs. Anton Borlen and D. Borlen of Hartford and Ignace Strohmeier of Grigsby, Kansas.

Ernst Hoppe

Mr. Ernst Hoppe, who, after a two months illness, passed into eternal rest at his home in Milwaukee, last week, at the age of 32 years.

Deceased was born in Milwaukee, where he resided up to the time of his death, and where he was employed as a plumber by trade for the past 18 years.

Mr. Hoppe was a son-in-law of Peter Lefebre, to whose daughter, Veronica he was married several years ago. He leaves to mourn his early demise his wife and one child, Jerrel. Deceased was well and favorably known in Milwaukee, his jolly and good-natured disposition had won for him a host of warm friends.

The body was laid at rest in the Holy Cross cemetery. Those from afar who attended the funeral were: Mrs. Nick Kohn of Fond du Lac; Mrs. Elizabeth Rozolinski of Fond du Lac; Mr. and Mrs. Mat Hess of Fond du Lac; Louis Hess of Kewaskum; Mrs. Robt. Little, Miss Celesta Little of Kewaskum; Miss Josephine Dreis of Chicago and a large circle of friends.

"INTERNATIONAL" FOOD PRODUCTION CAMP.

Never before was there such need for a marshaling of the nation's resources in animal husbandry. The great purpose of stimulating the production of American farms to the maximum limit will fail if the live stock is absolutely essential to the highest returns from the soil. Never before was there such need for discarding the unprofitable types of farm animals. To waste expensive feeds on inferior stock is not only an economic crime, but absolute treason. The nation needs the highest returns that can be obtained from every acre of productive land. There is, therefore a patriotic as well as economic reason for making the coming International Live Stock Exposition a record breaker in point of service to the nation's greatest industry. To lessen efforts in promoting our live stock shows would be to weaken in the face of the great task that has ever confronted the tiller of the soil. Such weakening would invite failure. This is the year, above all years, when the husbandman wants the best that these give. The farmer is not a quitter. He wants the best service that can be rendered by every intelligent, well directed effort to agriculture.

We have an inspiring example from the farms and show and sale rings of Great Britain. Agricultural operations have been carried on there under great difficulty during the last two seasons, few British breeders have maintained their prestige in supplying the world with superior breeding stock. It is a high tribute to the stability of that nation's live stock industry to maintain supremacy in improved stock production under existing conditions. The live stock shows and agricultural exhibitions have been the chief factor in sustaining British agriculture. Let us emulate the splendid example set by them and let us throw our weight into the balance by putting into practice the lessons in economic production taught at the Chicago stock show during the first week in December.

Mrs. Mary Eva Berres.

Again the grim reaper of death has called from our midst, one of our most highly esteemed citizens, Mrs. Mary Eva Berres, (nee Lehnartz), whose death occurred at her home at St. Michaels on Friday morning at 11 o'clock, at the advanced age of 67 years, 3 months and 27 days.

Deceased had been in ill health for the past twenty years, but her condition was not a serious one, until a few days before her death when she had a paralytic stroke, from which she finally passed away in death.

Mrs. Berres was born on June 29, 1850, in Weiler, Germany. On June 28th, 1852, she immigrated to this country with her parents and settled in the town of Kewaskum, near St. Michaels. On October 11th, 1870, she was united in the bonds of matrimony to Math. Berres. The couple made their home on a farm in the town of West Bend, where they resided until the year 1884, when they came to their present home, and where she lived up to the time of her death.

Deceased is survived by her grief stricken husband and six children, namely: Peter of Campbellsport; Simon of Boyd, Wis.; Gerty (Mrs. Adam Hahn) of Campbellsport; John of Boyd, Wis.; William and Susan at home. Besides these she is survived by three sisters and one brother as follows: Mrs. Kathryn Knippen of Lombard, Ill.; Mrs. Mary Dricken of the town of Barton; Mrs. Annie Bauschen of Chicago, Ill.; and Gerhard Lehnartz residing in the town of Kewaskum.

Mrs. Berres was a kind mother and wife, a good neighbor and Christian, she will not only be greatly missed by her family and relatives, but by her countless friends, to whom the news of her death came as a great shock.

The funeral, which was largely attended, was held on Tuesday morning, October 30th, at 9:30 o'clock, with services in the St. Michaels Catholic church. Rev. Father Beyer officiating. Interment took place in the congregation's cemetery.

TRAVELERS' WAR TAX NOW IN FORCE

Even though you own a mileage book purchased months ago, for a Milwaukee-West Bend commutation ticket, the new law which went into effect last Thursday morning you must in addition to handing the conductor the ticket or slip, also pay him a sum equivalent to 8 per cent of the cost of mileage used. If a ticket is purchased at the depot ticket office the agent will collect the 8 per cent extra that the government will on and after Nov. 1, exact from each traveler as his or her share toward the war tax.

Make One Exception

There is one exception, however. No tax will be charged where the cost of the ticket is less than 35 cents. This, it is said, was intended to apply in a measure to suburban traffic, but even so, as many suburbanites use commutation tickets at a much lower rate per trip than by buying one ticket, they too will be compelled to contribute to the war tax when they buy their commutation books as many will no doubt continue doing.

To Parlor Car Fares.

The 8 per cent tax also applies to parlor car tickets and sleeping berth accommodations as well. For instance, the railroad fare from Milwaukee to Kewaskum at the present time is 84 cents. On and after Nov. 1, with the 8 per cent added, the fare will be about 91 cents more.

"On freight there is a war tax of 3 per cent which is to go into effect on the same day. The shipper or receiver will have to pay this war tax. The railroads on their part will, as we now understand it, make settlements each month to the government turning over the sum collected from the war tax percentage."

A 5 per cent tax will also be levied on express.

SCOTT PIONEER EXPIRES

On Tuesday of last week occurred the demise of Mr. Carl G. Bleck at the home of his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hintz in the town of Scott, one mile north of Batavia. Although he had reached the age of nearly four-score and ten, death was due to a stroke of apoplexy.

The funeral was held Saturday, afternoon from the Batavia Lutheran church, the Rev. Mr. Heschke officiating. The interment was in the Luth. cemetery one and one-half miles south of Beechwood, where she was his loyal and loving companion for so many years lies buried.

Mr. Bleck was born in Patzig, Germany on April 15, 1828, and came to America in 1854, settling first in Dodge county, this state. He had not been there very long when he purchased a farm in the southwestern part of Scott. Here he lived for many years and was held in the highest esteem by his neighbors. He and his most estimable wife brought up an interesting and useful family of children, all of whom are filling honorable places in life and reflect credit upon worthy parents. In 1891 Mr. and Mrs. Bleck and the younger among their children removed to Plymouth. They resided there for sixteen years. After the death of Mrs. Bleck, Mr. Bleck made his home with his children, and spent the last two years with his daughter, Mrs. Hintz, and family.

Mr. Bleck had been a successful farmer, and by industry had been enabled to accumulate a fair competence, which left him and his faithful helpmate independent of others during their declining years.

Mr. Bleck is survived by the following children: Henry Bleck, Clintonville; Charles W. Bleck, Kewaskum; Arthur B. Bleck, Sheboygan; Mrs. August Hintz, Marion; Mrs. John Krueger, Clintonville; Mrs. Charles Hunt, Cedar Falls, Wash.; Mrs. A. W. Siemers, Madison He also leaves thirty-seven grandchildren and fifteen great grandchildren.

FOOD PLEDGE CARD

This is the Food Pledge Card that you will be asked to sign next week: TO THE UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION.

I pledge myself to use the practical means within my power to aid the Food Administration in its efforts to conserve the supplies of the country, and, as evidence of my support, I wish to be enrolled with myself as a volunteer member of the Food Administration.

Name _____ Street _____ City _____ State _____

There are no fees or dues. We want your help, both in the form of your personal efforts to economize food and your influence with others toward food economy and wise control of our national supply. If you will give this it will be a direct service to your country.

What your pledge will mean: AS MEMBER OF THE UNITED STATES FOOD ADMINISTRATION

You can directly aid the Food Administration and help win the war by: Eating as little wheat bread or other wheat products as circumstances permit, and if possible, not more than once daily; (2) eating meat (beef, mutton, or pork) not oftener than once a day; (3) economizing in the use of butter and discouraging the excessive use of other fats; (4) cutting your daily allowance of sugar in tea or coffee, and of sweet drinks, candy, and in other ways helping to lessen the consumption of sugar; (5) eating more corn, rye, vegetables, fruit, fish, and poultry in place of wheat and meat; (6) avoiding wastes of all kinds; and (7) urging in your own home or the restaurants you frequent the necessity of economy in food, and requesting the observance of these pledges by other persons.

Therefore, I Emanuel L. Philipp, Governor of Wisconsin, hereby urge upon the people of this state the necessity and practicability of the observance of Food Pledge week. I ask that every citizen assist the volunteers who will give their time to this work in Wisconsin, and that a representative of every home sign the food pledge card. GOVERNOR

PHILIPP ISSUES

PROCLAMATION

By direction of the President and the National Food Director, Mr. Herbert Hoover, the people of this country are requested that beginning October twenty-eighth and ending November 3rd, 1917, they lay the foundation for a practical conservation of food. Such rules and regulations that are necessary will from time to time be promulgated to be observed during the period of the war. Our fellow citizen, Magnus Swenson, whom Mr. Hoover has appointed as Food Director for the state of Wisconsin, acting under this authority, respectfully requests that the people of the State of Wisconsin observe the days that I have above mentioned as a Food Pledge Week. In addition to the observances of meatless Tuesdays and wheatless Wednesdays recently established in Wisconsin, and more recently through Wisconsin's example established in the Nation, the people will be asked to sign the food pledge card. The suggestion that we practice every reasonable economy in the use of food should at this time commend itself to every patriotic citizen. We must feed our Army and our Navy and contribute as much of our surplus as we can possibly spare to our Allies. The European countries that have made common cause with us are short of food. A large part of the male population of those countries are non-producers because they are engaged in war, and inasmuch as they are fighting our enemy it is just as important to our success that we provide their soldiers with the necessary food to keep them at the front. We must not forget that every soldier of the Allies who becomes exhausted because of lack of food must be substituted by one of our American boys. It then becomes a question of either furnishing food or furnishing men, and I feel confident that when our people understand our real necessities in this respect they will be glad to forego luxuries and divide the necessities with the men who are defending our Country.

Wisconsin once more has an opportunity to demonstrate its unquestioned loyalty and to add the weight and influence of its splendid citizenship to this nation food conservation campaign. By eliminating wastes, and living up to the simple pledge asked by the food conservation campaign, we shall be able to make a larger contribution to the food supply of the nation.

Therefore, I Emanuel L. Philipp, Governor of Wisconsin, hereby urge upon the people of this state the necessity and practicability of the observance of Food Pledge week. I ask that every citizen assist the volunteers who will give their time to this work in Wisconsin, and that a representative of every home sign the food pledge card. I ask, further, that these cards be signed in the proper spirit, and with the observance and application of the promises made will be the test of this food conservation plan.

Emanuel L. Philipp, Governor.

AUSTRO-GERMANS CAPTURE UDINE

Kaiser's Troops Pushing On Toward Tagliamento.

RIVER HALTS CADORNA'S MEN

Rome Admits Army Are Retiring, but Tells of Cavalry Retarding Movement of Enemy—Heavy Guns Served.

Berlin, via London, Oct. 31.—Udine, the former Italian headquarters, has been occupied by Austro-German forces, army headquarters announced.

The Austrians and Germans are pressing forward irresistibly in the northern Italian plain toward the course of the Tagliamento river, the statement says. Austro-German troops, advancing from the Carnic Alps, have reached Venetian soil on the whole front and are pressing forward against the upper course of the Tagliamento.

Retreat Stopped by River. The retirement of the defeated Italian army is being stemmed at the few crossings of the river, which is greatly swollen.

[The Tagliamento river, on its lower course, is the defense line on which General Cadorna is reported to have elected to make his stand against the German invasion.]

The statement follows: "Udine has been taken by allied troops of the fourteenth army. The former seat of the Italian main army administration consequently has fallen into our hands on the sixth day of the successful operations.

Teutons Press Forward. "Indifferent to the demands upon them, our divisions are pressing irresistibly forward in the plain toward the course of the Tagliamento. The retirement of the defeated enemy army is being stemmed at the few crossings of the river, which is greatly swollen by downpours of rain.

"Our troops advancing out of the Carnic Alps have set foot on Venetian soil along the entire front and are pressing forward against the upper course of the Tagliamento."

Battle Covering Retreat. Rome, Oct. 31.—The Italian retreat continues, the war office announces. The Italian cavalry is in contact with the vanguards of the advancing army.

The Italians destroyed bridges over the Isoneo and fought rear-guard actions, by which means they checked the Austro-German advance.

Following is the text of the statement: "During the day the withdrawal of our troops on their new positions was continued. Destruction of the bridges over the Isoneo, effected by our troops, and the successful action of our covering units have detained the advance of the enemy.

"Our cavalry is in contact with the hostile vanguards. General Cadorna's bulletins are causing the nation to realize that it is facing a severe trial, but the press reflects a spirit of determination on the part of the people that the loss of the fruits of victory won in the past shall be but temporary.

The enemy's rapid gains of the last week are regarded as having been due not so much to superior forces as to the element of surprise.

According to Giornale d'Italia, no decisive battle has yet been fought, although one is expected to develop. Such a battle, it is predicted, will be on a large scale and involve wide movements in the open field, in the old-fashioned style.

The Italian retreat, according to the Messaggero, is being accomplished in good order, with the artillery saved or destroyed and stores and magazines burned.

The Messaggero also declares the Germans are making a mistake if they think to terrorize the Italians politically by this effort and "convert the country into another Russia." It asserts every revolutionary idea to make a lame peace has disappeared, and that the whole nation will fight until a just and lasting peace has been won.

British "Heavies" Saved. Italian Headquarters, Oct. 31.—After three days with the retiring Italian army the correspondent, who has just arrived at headquarters, is able to state that all the British batteries have been saved. The men suffered much from cold, torrential rain and hunger during the retreat.

As to the general situation of the Italian army in its retreat, the correspondent, who has been in the thick of the retirement, is prevented from giving details by military necessity.

HERTLING IS NAMED

KAISER APPOINTS HIM CHANCELLOR OF GERMANY.

Bavarian Prime Minister Succeeds Michaelis, Who Has Been Named Premier of Prussia.

Amsterdam, Oct. 31.—Count George von Hertling, the Bavarian prime minister, has been appointed German imperial chancellor.

Former Chancellor Michaelis has been named prime minister of Prussia.

Count von Hertling is well-known for his reactionary proclivities and is regarded as representing the most extreme Junker and pan-German position. He is one of the oldest German statesmen and has repeatedly given evidence of arrogant contempt for government by the people, as exemplified in the United States.

Doctor Michaelis, by virtue of his present office as chancellor, has also been "minister president," or premier, of Prussia. The change means that Michaelis is demoted from his place as chancellor, but will retain his job in the Prussian ministry.

Copenhagen, Oct. 31.—Berlin reports that an Count George von Hertling.

William received in audience a number of persons, presumably to inform himself on the political situation. No members of the reichstag were received by the emperor, who is carefully guarding his prerogative of making and unmaking ministers without consulting the representatives of the people.

The Bavarian premier, Count von Hertling, who has been named to the German chancellorship, arrived in Berlin Sunday.

His flat-footed and repeatedly announced opposition to all parliamentary or democratic development is well-known.

The Socialist Vorwaerts declares the count's opposition to parliamentarism and to the erection of Alsace-Lorraine into an autonomous federal state makes it impossible for the majority parties in the reichstag to consider him for the chancellorship.

SAYS RAIDER SANK 25 SHIPS

Count von Luckner, Captured Commander of Seeadler, Declares Craft Was Burned.

A Pacific Port, Oct. 31.—Count von Luckner, commander of the German raider Seeadler, told Fiji island newspaper correspondents, when he was captured near the Fijis recently, that the raider was destroyed by fire 2,000 miles from land, according to officers of a vessel which arrived here with details of the count's capture. Previous reports were that the vessel was wrecked on an island.

The count also asserted that the Seeadler destroyed 25 steamers and sailing vessels on its cruise.

A favorite plan of his was to send out a wireless message asking for the time. Some one would oblige him, and then the ship supplying the time was traced and sunk.

ALIEN ENEMIES RESTRICTED

Forbidden to Work or Live Within Half Mile of Brooklyn Water Front.

New York, Oct. 31.—An order forbidding all German aliens to live or work within a half mile of the Brooklyn water front was issued by federal authorities here. German aliens now employed along the water front must be discharged by Thursday. The new restrictions follow the development of evidence which tends to show the recent grain elevator fires in Brooklyn to be of incendiary origin.

HALLUCINATIONS!

HITS AT PROFITEERS LOAN OVER 5 BILLION

WHOLESALEERS WILL REFUSE GOODS TO SOME RETAILERS. REPORTS INDICATE SECOND ISSUE IS OVERSUBSCRIBED.

Government Moves to Check Speculation Through Special Regulations Issued by Mr. Hoover.

Washington, Oct. 30.—Food Administrator Hoover will cut off the supplies of retail food profiteers until the end of the war.

A new regulation goes into effect November 1. It provides that no manufacturer, wholesaler or other handler of foods will be allowed to sell to any retailer who makes unreasonable profits or buys quantities of food for speculation.

"The food administration does not intend to disturb any legitimate operations," said a statement issued at Mr. Hoover's office. "It takes the position that the great majority of food sellers are patriotic and honest.

"Such dealers will be protected. Those few who persist in abusing their opportunities will receive attention."

The government also moved to check speculation in canned goods. Special regulations were issued by Mr. Hoover to govern canners, who will be placed under license on November 1.

Rigid prohibitions were promulgated against the sale of futures in canned goods, corn, tomatoes, salmon and sardines before February 1.

EXPECT BIG CHRISTMAS MAIL

Post Office Department and Railroads Ask Public to Aid in Handling the Parcels.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The post office department and the railroads are co-operating in plans for the prompt handling of an enormous increase in Christmas parcels sent by mail, in addition to those sent by express.

Second Assistant Postmaster General Traeger issued this statement to the public: "The Christmas season this year will have an added interest for the American people. There will be the usual seasonal greetings and remembrances at home, and in addition there will be messages and remembrances to perhaps 2,000,000 men in the army abroad and in the cantonments in this country. The post office department will be called upon to handle practically two Christmas mailings—one on November 15, for the troops in France and the sailors with the fleet in European waters. The second will be the usual heavy Christmas movements for the homes, and this year, in addition, for the cantonments. This "double Christmas" will devolve a great burden on the transportation systems of the country; and considering the heavy demands imposed upon the railroads by these conditions it becomes the patriotic duty of every citizen to ease the burden of transportation by mailing Christmas packages early."

ENTIRE ISONZO FRONT HAS COLLAPSED, ACCORDING TO BERLIN.

THIRD ARMY IS DEFEATED

All Roads Covered With Columns in Disorderly Retreat—Rome Says Drive Into Plains Has Been Checked.

Berlin, Oct. 31.—The Austro-German troops invading northern Italy are standing before Udine, where the Italian headquarters have been located, according to army headquarters announcement.

The third Italian army made a brief resistance to the advancing Teutonic forces from Wippach to the Adriatic. This army is now in retreat along the Adriatic coast.

Cornons has been captured and the Austro-German troops are approaching the frontier of the Italian coast region. The number of prisoners is increasing.

The Italian front is yielding north of the sector which was pierced in the Teutonic attack, the weakening extending as far as Ploekken pass.

The entire Italian Isonzo front has collapsed, the statement adds. The second Italian army is retreating toward the Tagliamento. All the roads are covered with columns in disorderly retreat, the crowds comprising both soldiers and civil population.

Berne, Oct. 31.—Twenty thousand Austrians and Germans have been lost so far in the drive against Italy, according to information from Austrian sources, received here.

Rome, Oct. 31.—The Italians are checking the advance of Austro-Germans into the plains of northern Italy, the war office announced on Monday.

The Italian troops are fulfilling their duty and all movements ordered by the general staff are being carried out, the statement says.

"All movements ordered by the general staff are being carried out regularly and the troops which are opposing the enemy are fulfilling their duty by keeping in check his advance into the plains."

'WHITE CAPS' BEAT PACIFIST

H. S. Bigelow Seized in Kentucky and Punished 'In Name of Poor Belgian Women and Children.'

Cincinnati, Oct. 31.—Herbert S. Bigelow, pacifist leader, who was whisked away by his white-capped captors on Sunday night, was located on Monday near Florence, Ky. He had been taken into a wood near that place, his clothes had been removed and he had been thrashed with a blacksnake whip. The party of men that admitted the chastisement was dressed in "long white robes resembling those described as being worn by the renowned Ku Klux Klan."

Previous to "12 lashes being applied to his back" one of the party, according to the report, raised his hand commanding silence, then read from a paper he held as follows:

"In the name of the poor women and children of Belgium this man should be whipped."

After the lash was applied Bigelow was turned loose and directed toward Cincinnati.

Bigelow was removed to a hospital shortly after his arrival here.

"When the others were gone a considerable time my guards also left me, telling me not to go away for ten minutes."

Steamer Battles With Submarine Until American Destroyer Comes to the Rescue.

A French Seaport, Oct. 27.—Escaping from a German submarine after a bitter fight lasting nearly four hours, with seven of her crew wounded, two of them seriously, an American steamer of the Luckenbach line arrived here from an American port. The timely intervention of an American torpedo-boat alone saved the ship from being sent to the bottom. The stubbornness of the battle is indicated by the fact that the submarine fired 234 shots at the steamer, which responded with more than 200 shots.

King of the Khyber Rifles

A Thrilling Story of German Intrigue Among the Fierce Hillmen of India During the War

KING WITNESSES THE FASCINATING DANCE OF A DUSKY BEAUTY—BY RESISTING HER CHARMS HE OUTWITS ONE WHO WOULD GLADLY SEE HIM DEAD

Synopsis.—At the beginning of the world war Capt. Athelstan King of the British Indian army and of its secret service, is ordered to Delhi to meet Yasmini, a dancer, and go with her to Khinjan to quiet the outlaws there who are said by spies to be preparing for a jihad or holy war. On his way to Delhi King quietly foils a plan to assassinate him and gets evidence that Yasmini is after him.

Within ten minutes Hyde was asleep, snoring prodigiously. Then King pulled out the knife again and nudged it for half an hour. The blade was of bronze, with an edge hammered to the keenness of a razor. The hilt was of nearly pure gold, in the form of a woman dancing. The whole thing was so exquisitely wrought that age had only softened the lines, without in the least impairing them. It looked like one of those Grecian toys with which Roman women of Nero's day stabbed their lovers. But that was not why he began to whistle very softly to himself.

Presently he drew out the general's package of papers, with the photograph on the top. He stood up, to hold both knife and papers close to the light in the room.

It needed no great stretch of imagination to suggest a likeness between the woman of the photograph and the other, of the golden knife-hilt. And nobody, looking at him then, would have dared suggest he lacked imagination.

If the knife had not been so ancient they might have been portraits of the same woman, in the same disguise, taken at the same time.

"She knew I had been chosen to work with her. The general sent her word that I am coming," he muttered to himself. "There must have been an spy watching at Peshawar, who wired to Rawal-Pindi for this man to jump the train and go on with the job. Why should she give the man a knife with her own portrait on it? Is she queen of a secret society? Well—we shall see!"

He lay back with his head on the pillow, and before five minutes more had gone he was asleep. His mobile face in repose looked Roman, for the sun had tanned his skin and his nose was aquiline. In museums, where sculptured heads of Roman generals and emperors stand around the wall on pedestals, would not be difficult to pick several that bore more than a faint resemblance to him. He had breadth and depth of forehead and a jaw that lent itself to smiles as well as sternness, and a throat that expressed manly determination in every motion.

He slept like a boy until dawn; and he and Hyde had scarcely exchanged another dozen words when the train screamed next day into Delhi station. Then he saluted stiffly and was gone.

CHAPTER III.

Delhi boasts a round half-dozen railway stations, all of them designed with regard to war, so that to King there was nothing unexpected in the fact that the train had brought him to an unexpected station. He plunged into its crowd such as a man in the mood might plunge into a whirlpool. The station screamed echoed, reverberated, hummed. At one minute the whole building shook to the thunder of a grating regiment; at an instant later it clattered to the wrought-steel hammer of a thousand hoofs, as led troops horses danced into formation to invade the waiting tracks. Soldiers of nearly every Indian military caste stood about everywhere. Down the back of each platform Tommy Atkins stood in long straight lines, talking or munching great sandwiches or smoking.

Threading his way in and out among the motley swarm with a great black chevron between his teeth and sweat running into his eyes from his helmet-band, Athelstan King strode at ease—at home—intent—amused—awake—and almost awfully happy. He was not in the least less happy because perfectly aware that a native was following him at a distance, although he did wonder how the native had contrived to pass within the lines. At the end of fifteen minutes there was not a glit staff officer there who could have deceived him as to the numbers and destination of the force entraining.

"Kerach!" he told himself, chewing the butt of his cigar and keeping well ahead of the shadowing native. He did not have to return salutes, because he did not look for them. Very few people noticed him at all, although he was recognized once or twice by former messmates. At his leisure—in his own way, that was devious and like a string of miracles—he filtered toward the telegraph office. The native who had followed him all this time dawdled, but he did not let himself be troubled by that.

He whispered proof of his identity to the telegraph clerk, who was a Royal engineer, new to that job that morning, and a sealed telegram was handed to him at once. Because it was wartime, and the censorship had closed on India like a throttling string, it was not in code. So the Mirza Ali, of the Fort, Bombay, to whom it was addressed, could be expected to read between the lines.

Cattle intended for slaughter, dispatched Bombay on fourteen down. Meet train. Will be inspected en route, but should be dealt with carefully on arrival. Cattle inclined to stampede owing to bad scare received north of Delhi. Take all precautions and notify Abdul.

SULLIMAN.
"Good!" he chuckled. "Let's hope we get Abdul too. I wonder who he is!"

Still uninterested in the man who shadowed him, he walked back to the office window and wrote two telegrams; one to Bombay, ordering the arrest of All Mirza of the Fort, with an urgent admonition to discover who his man Abdul might be, and to seize him as soon as found; the other to the station in the north, insisting on close confinement for Sulliman.

That being all the urgent business, he turned leisurely to face his shadow, and the native met his eyes with the engaging frankness of an old friend, coming forward with outstretched hand. They did not shake hands, but the man made a signal with his fingers that is known to not more than a dozen men in all the world, and that changed the situation altogether.

"Walk with me," said King, and the man fell into stride beside him. He was a Rangar—which is to say a Rajput who, or whose ancestors had turned Mohammedan. Like many Rajputs he was not a big man, but he looked fit and wiry; his head scarcely came above the level of King's chin, although his turban distracted attention from the fact. The turban was of silk and unusually large.

The whitest of well-kept teeth, gleaming regularly under a little black waxed mustache betrayed no trace of betelnut or other nastiness. King was not so sure that the eyes were brown, and he changed his opinion about their color a dozen times within the hour. Once he would even have sworn they were green.

The man was a regular Rangar dandy, of the type that can be seen playing polo almost any day at Mount Abu—that gets into mischief with a grace due to practice and heredity.

"I Have a Message for You."

but that does not manage its estates too well, as a rule, nor pay its debts in a hurry.

"My name is Rewa Gunga," he said in a low voice. "I have a message for you."

"From whom?"

"From her!" said the Rangar, and without exactly knowing why, or being pleased with himself, King felt excited.

They were walking toward the station exit. King had a trunk check in his hand, but returned it to his pocket, not proposing just yet to let the Rangar overhear instructions regarding the trunk's destination; he was too good-looking and too overbrimming with personal charm to be trusted thus early in the game. Besides, there was that captured knife, that hinted at lies and treachery. Secret signs as well as loot have been stolen before now.

"I'd like to walk through the streets and see the crowd."

He smiled as he said that, knowing well that the average young Rajput of good birth would rather fight a tiger with cold steel than walk a mile or two. He drew fire at once.

"Why walk, King sahib? Are we animals? There is a carriage waiting—her carriage—and a coachman whose ears were born deaf. We might be overheard in the street. Are you and I children, tossing stones into a pool to watch the ripples widen?"

"Lead on, then," answered King. Outside the station was a luxurious modern victoria, with C springs and rubber tires, with horses that would have done credit to a viceroys. The Rangar motioned King to get in first, and the moment they were both seated the Rajput coachman set the horses to going like the wind. Rewa Gunga opened a jeweled cigarette case.

"Will you have one?" he asked with the air of royalty entertaining a blood-equal.

King accepted a cigarette for politeness' sake and took occasion to admire the man's slender wrist, that was doubtless hard and strong as woven steel, but was not much more than half the thickness of his own. One of the questions that occurred to King that minute was why this well-bred youngster whose age he guessed at twenty-two or so had not turned his attention to the army.

"My height?"

The man had read his thoughts! "Not quite tall enough. Besides—you are a soldier, are you not? And do you fight?" Then, after a minute of rather strained silence: "My message is from her."

"From Yasmini?"

"Who else?"

King accepted the rebuke with a little inclination of the head. He spoke as little as possible, because he was puzzled. He had become conscious of a puzzled look in the Rangar's eyes and it only added to his problem if the Rangar found in him something inexplicable. The West can only get the better of the East when the East is too cocksure.

"She has jolly well gone North!" said the Rangar suddenly, and King shut his teeth with a snap. He sat bolt upright, and the Rangar allowed himself to look amused.

"She has often heard of you," he said.

"I've heard of her," said King.

"Of course! Who has not? She has desired to meet you, sahib, ever since she was told you are the best man in your service."

King grunted, thinking of the knife beneath his shirt. Again, it was as if the Rangar read a part of his thoughts, if not all of them. It is not difficult to counter that trick, but to do it a man must be on his guard, or the East will know what he has thought and what he is going to think, as many have discovered when it was too late.

"Her men are able to protect anybody's life from any God's number of assassins, whatever may lead you to think the contrary. From now forward your life is in her men's keeping!"

For natives to hint at possible dissolution of the Anglo-Indian government. Everybody knows that the British will not govern India forever, but the British—who know it best of all, and work to that end most fervently—are the only ones encouraged to talk about it.

For a few minutes after that Rewa Gunga held his peace, while the carriage swayed at breakneck speed through the swarming streets. King, watching and saying nothing, did not believe for a second the lame explanation Yasmini had left behind. She must have some good reason for wishing to be first up the Khyber, and he was very sorry indeed she had slipped away. It might be only jealousy, yet why should she be jealous?

It was the next remark of the Rangar's that set him entirely on his guard, and thenceforward whoever could have read his thoughts would have been more than human. He had known of that thought-reading trick ever since his ayah (native nurse) taught him to lip Hindustanee; just as surely he knew that his impudent use was intended to sap his belief in himself.

"I'll bet you a hundred dabs," said the Rangar, "that she decided to be there first and get control of the situation! She's slippery, and quick, and like all women, she's jealous!"

The Rangar's eyes were on his, but King was not to be caught again. It is quite easy to think behind a fence, so to speak, if one gives attention to it.

"She will be busy presently fooling those Afridis," he continued, waving his cigarette. "She has fooled them always, to the limit of their bally bent. Yasmini plays her own game, for amusement and power—a good game—a deep game! You have seen already how India has to ask her aid in the 'Hills'! She loves power, power, power—not for its name, for names are nothing, but to use it."

"How long have you known her?" asked King.

The Rangar eyed him sharply. "A long time. She and I played together when we were children. It is because she knows me very well that she chose me to travel North with you, when you start to find her in the 'Hills'!"

King cleared his throat, and the Rangar nodded, looking into his eyes with the engaging confidence of a child who never has been refused anything, in or out of reason. King made no effort to look pleased.

Just then the coachman took a last corner at a gallop and drew the horses up at their haunches at a door in a high white wall. Rewa Gunga sprang out of the carriage before the horses were quite at a standstill.

"Here we are," he said, and King noticed that the street curved here so that no other door and no window overlooked this one.

He followed the Rangar, and he was no sooner into the shadow of the door than the coachman lashed the horses and the carriage swung out of view.

"This way," said the Rangar over his shoulder. "Come!"

CHAPTER IV.

It was a musty smelling entrance, so dark that to see was scarcely possible after the hot glare outside. Dimly King made out Rewa Gunga mounting stairs to the left and followed him. When he guessed himself two stories at least above road level, there was a sudden blaze of reflected light and he blinked at more mirrors than he could count. Curtains were reflected in each mirror, and little glowing lamps, so cunningly arranged that it was not possible to guess which were real and which were not. King stood still.

Then suddenly, as if she had done it a thousand times before and surprised a thousand people, a little out-of-brown maid parted the middle pair of curtains and said "Salaam!" smiling with teeth that were as white as porcelain. King looked scarcely interested and not at all disturbed.

Rewa Gunga lurched past him, thrusting the little maid aside, and led the way. King followed him into a long room, whose walls were hung with richer silks than any he remembered to have seen. In a great wide window to one side some twenty women began at once to make flute music. Silken punkahs swung from chains, wafting back and forth a cloud of sandal-wood smoke that veiled the whole scene in mysterious, scented mist.

"Be welcome!" laughed Rewa Gunga; "I am to do the honors, since she is not here. Be seated, sahib."

King chose a divan at the room's farthest end, near tall curtains that led into rooms beyond. He turned his back toward the reason for his choice. On a little ivory-laid ebony table about ten feet away lay a knife, that was almost the exact duplicate of the one inside his shirt. He could sense hushed expectancy on every side—could feel the eyes of many women fixed on him—and began to draw on his guard as a fighting man draws on armor. There and then he deliberately set himself to resist mesmerism, which is the East's chief weapon.

Rewa Gunga, perfectly at home, sprawled leisurely along a cushioned couch with a grace that the West has not learned yet; but King did not make the mistake of trusting him any better for his easy manners, and his eyes sought swiftly for some unorthodox, unplanned thing on which to rest, that he might save himself by a sort of mental leverage.

Glancing along the wall that faced the big window, he noticed for the first time a huge Afridi, who sat on a stool and leaned back against the silken hangings with arms folded.

"Who is that man?" he asked.

"He? Oh, he is a savage—just a big savage," said Rewa Gunga, looking vaguely annoyed.

"Why is he here?"

He did not dare let go of this chance side issue. He knew that Rewa Gunga wished him to talk of Yasmini and to ask questions about her, and that if he succumbed to that temptation all his self-control would be cunningly sapped away from him until his secrets, and his very senses, belonged to some one else.

"What is he doing here?" he insisted.

"He? Oh, he does nothing. He waits," purred the Rangar. "He is to be your body-servant on your journey to the North. He is nothing—nobody at all!—except that he is to be trusted utterly because he loves Yasmini. He is obedient! A big obedient fool! Let him be!"

"No," said King. "If he's to be my man I'll speak to him!"

He felt himself winning. Already the spell of the room was lifting, and he no longer felt the cloud of sandalwood like a veil across his brain.

"Won't you tell him to come here to me?"

Rewa Gunga laughed, resting his silk turban against the wall hangings and clasping both hands about his knee. It was as a man might laugh who has been touched in a brut with folly.

"Oh!—Ismail!" he called, with a voice like a bell, that made King stare. The Afridi seemed to come out of a deep sleep and looked bewildered, rubbing his eyes and feeling whether his turban was on straight. He combed his beard with nervous fingers as he gazed about him and caught Rewa Gunga's eye. Then he sprang to his feet.

"Come!" ordered Rewa Gunga. The man obeyed.

"Did you see?" Rewa Gunga chuckled. "He rose from his place like a buffalo, rump first and then shoulder after shoulder! Such men are safe! Such men have no guile beyond what will help them to obey! Such men think too slowly to invent deceit for their own sake!"

The Afridi came and towered above them, standing with garbled hands knotted into clubs.

"What is thy name?" King asked him.

"Ismail!" he boomed.

"Thou art to be my servant?"

"Aye! So said she. I am her man. I obey!"

"When did she say so?" King asked him blandly. The hillman stroked his great beard and stood considering the question. King entered a shrewd suspicion that he was not so stupid as he looked to seem. His eyes were too hawk-bright to be a stupid man's.

Now he chose to touch the knife on the ebony table as if he had not seen it before. He got up and reached for it and brought it back, turning it over and over in his hand.

"A strange knife," he said.

"Yes—from Khinjan," said Rewa Gunga, and King eyed him as one wolf eyes another.

"What makes you say it is from Khinjan?"

"She brought it from Khinjan caves herself! There is another knife that matches it, but that is not here. That bracelet you now wear, sahib, is from Khinjan caves too! She has the secret of the caves!"

"I have heard that the 'Heart of the Hills' is there," King answered. "Is the 'Heart of the Hills' a treasure house?"

Rewa Gunga laughed.

"Ask her, sahib! Perhaps she will tell you! Perhaps she will let you see! Who knows? She is a woman of resource and unexpectedness—let her women dance for you a while."

King nodded. Then he got up and laid the knife back on the little table. A minute or so later he noticed that at a sign from Rewa Gunga a woman left the great window place and spirited the knife away.

"May I have a sheet of paper?" he asked, for he knew that another fight for his self-command was one.

Rewa Gunga gave an order, and a maid brought scented paper on a silver tray. He drew out his own fountain pen, and since his one object was to give his brain employment, he wrote down a list of the names he had memorized in the train on the journey from Peshawar, not thinking of a use for the list until he had finished. Then, though, a real use occurred to him.

While he began to write more than a dozen dancing women swept into the room from behind the silk hangings in a concerted movement that was all the slumberous grace. Woodwind music called to them from the great deep window. They began to chant, still dreamily, and with the chant the dance began, in and out, round and round, lazily, ever so lazily, wreathed in buoyant gossamer that was scarcely more solid than the sandalwood smoke they wafted into rings.

King watched them and listened to their chant until he began to recognize the strain on the eye muscles that precedes the mesmeric spell. Then he wrote and read what he had written and wrote again.

"What have you written?" asked a quiet voice at his ear; and he turned to look straight in the eyes of Rewa Gunga, who had leaned forward to read over his shoulder. Just for one second he hovered on the brink of quick defeat. Having escaped the Scylla of the dancing women, Charybdis waited for him in the shape of eyes that were pools of hot mystery. It was the sound of his own voice that brought him back to the world again and saved his will for him unbound.

"Read it, won't you?" he laughed. "If you know, take this pen and mark the names of whichever of those men are still in Delhi."

Rewa Gunga took pen and paper and set a mark against some thirty of the names, for King had a manner that disarmed refusal.

King began to watch the dance again, for it did not feel safe to look too long into the Rangar's eyes. It was not wise just then to look too long at anything or to think too long on any one subject.

"Ismail is slow about returning," said the Rangar.

"I wrote at the foot of the tar," said King, "that they are to detain him there until the answer comes."

King tricks the Rangar and rescues some of Yasmini's cutthroats, whom he takes north with him as grateful bodyguards.

His Bright Idea.

"Now, look here, Mr. Mikey! This won't do! You haven't paid my rent for over a month."

"I'm sorry, but I really can't pay just now," replied Mikey.

"You're the third one today with that yarn!" exclaimed the landlord, "and I can't afford such a loss. You must see what you can do to help me!"

"All right—I will! I will write you tonight," answered Mikey.

Next morning the landlord eagerly opened the letter, expecting to find a remittance, but this is what he read: "Dear Sir: I've thought it over, and the only thing I can suggest, to diminish your loss, is to lower the rent."

EAT SKINNER'S THE BEST MACARONI

SKINNER'S MACARONI. "An American 'Sammie' is as fond of his wine as a German soldier," I remarked to an old sailor friend.

"Yes," he agreed, "but an American sailor doesn't like the same kind of wine that a German sailor likes."

"Why, how's that, uncle?" I asked.

"Well, you see," he answered with a chuckle, "the German sailors like to stick to 'port.'"

A Suspicious Note. A school teacher felt that she had every right to feel suspicious when a young boy pupil presented her with a note written in a boyish scrawl which read as follows:

"Miss Jones please let Johnny out of school this afternoon as I want to go to the ball game.

Johnny's mother, Mrs. Perkins."

Distant. "Is your wife hard to please?" "I don't know; I have never reached that stage."—Judge.

An Old Man's Stomach.

As we grow older and less active, and less food is required to meet the demands of our bodies. If too much is habitually taken, the stomach will rebel. When a man reaches the advanced age of 85 or 90, you will find that he is a light eater. Be as careful as you will, however, you will occasionally eat more than you should and will feel the need of Chamberlain's Tablets to correct the disorder. These tablets do not contain opium, but strengthen the stomach and enable it to perform its functions naturally. They also cause a gentle movement of the bowels.

THE NEW WAR TAX HELPS WHIP ENEMY

Folks Have to Pay Extra Now for Postage, Travel, Amusements, Etc.

REMEMBER, KAISER TO BLAME

But for Prussia's Mad Ambition and Barbarous Methods, World Probably Would Be at Peace—Don't Forget Income Tax.

Washington—How does the war tax strike you? How do you enjoy putting up three cents instead of two on all letters sent out of town? How do you like paying the extra charge for movies, railroad tickets, telegrams, long-distance phone messages?

And, by the way, if you are single and earn more than $1,000 a year, you have to pay a two per cent tax on all in excess of the thousand bucks. And if you are married, you have to pay two per cent tax on your annual income in excess of $2,000.

Didn't you know that? Well, it's true, and the tax must be paid by June 1, 1918 for the whole year 1917. If you fail to pay, the government can exact a heavy penalty. But remember, folks, it is all done to help whip the kaiser. If the tax makes you growl, curb the kaiser, don't curse our government.

All of the new taxes fall upon the average man. They have nothing to do with the "conscription of wealth." They are a part of the program of taxation to make each man, woman and child in the United States feel a direct personal part in the war. They apply to freight, passenger and express transportation, pipe lines, Pullman seats and berths, telegraph and telephone messages, insurance policies, admissions to theaters and "movies" and to club dues. The effect of most of them is felt, therefore, in a slight rise in the high cost of living.

The taxes are expected to net the federal government the following revenues:

Table with 2 columns: Category and Amount. Includes Freight transportation ($7,500,000), Express transportation ($10,000,000), Passenger transportation ($60,000,000), Pipe lines ($4,500,000), Seats and berths ($4,000,000), Telegraph and telephone messages ($7,000,000), Insurance policies ($5,000,000), Club dues ($1,500,000), Admissions ($50,000,000).

The war tax on facilities furnished by public utilities is now levied as follows:

Three per cent of the amount paid for transportation by rail or water or by any form of mechanical motor power in competition with carriers by rail or water, on freight consigned from one point in the United States to another.

One cent for each twenty cents or fraction thereof by express companies for transportation from one point in the United States to another.

Eight per cent of the amount paid for the transportation of persons by rail or water or by any form of mechanical motor power on a regular established line in competition with common carriers, from one point in the United States to any point in the United States, Canada or Mexico where the ticket is issued in the United States. No tax is imposed on commutation or season tickets for trips less than 20 miles, or in cases where the fare does not exceed 35 cents.

Ten per cent of the amount paid for seats, berths or staterooms.

If a mileage book used for transportation or accommodation was purchased prior to November 1, 1917, or if such fare is paid, the conductor or agent collecting the fare is required to collect the tax.

Five per cent on the amount paid for the transportation of oil by pipe line.

Five cents for each telegraph, telephone or radio dispatch originating in the United States where the charge is 15 cents or more.

The foregoing taxes are paid by the persons paying for the services or facilities rendered. A carrier making no charge for transporting a commodity because of its ownership thereof, or for any other reason, is required to pay a tax equivalent to the amount which would be imposed if it received payment, except in the case of commodities which are necessary for its use in the conduct of its business or the business of another business.

Service rendered to the federal and state governments is exempt from taxation. Persons collecting these taxes are required to make monthly returns and monthly payments to the federal government.

The new levies upon insurance take effect in the following manner: On life insurance, eight cents on each $100 or fraction of the amount of the policy, except industrial insurance policies not in excess of $500 issued on the weekly payment plan, in which case the tax is 40 per cent of the first weekly premium. Policies of re-insurance are exempt.

On marine, inland and fire insurance, one cent on each dollar or fraction of the premium charged under each policy including renewals, but not including policies of re-insurance. Casualty insurance, one cent on each dollar or fraction of the premium

LIKES FOOD SAVING PLAN OF WISCONSIN

Food Administrator Herbert Hoover Will Adopt It for the Nation.

SENDS WORD TO SWENSON

Advices the State Food Administrator That He Will Urge All Other States to Adopt the System Put Into Force for Wisconsin.

Madison—Food Administrator Herbert Hoover is so well pleased with the success of the Wisconsin method of conservation in meatless and wheatless days that he has sent a message to Mangus Swenson, state food administrator, notifying him that the national office has urged all other states to adopt the Wisconsin plan.

The dispatch states further that proprietors and managers of the 906 hotels and restaurants in Wisconsin have been asked to make a report to the national administrator regarding their experiences in observing the weekly meatless and wheatless days.

Food Administrator Swenson said that the idea had been taken up extensively in this state even by private families, and that it has been successful beyond expectation.

See Dentists First. Wisconsin conscripts are going to "see the dentist" before they go to the trenches.

Because of the amount of work to be done on the teeth of drafted men and because army regulations assign only one dentist to each 1,000 soldiers, the war department has notified Gov. E. L. Phillip to give publicity to the fact that Badger dentists have volunteered their services.

The war department's letter follows: "Most of the members of the dental profession of your state have volunteered to give free dental treatment to all men accepted for the National Army. The dental surgeons propose, as far as possible, to bring in order the teeth of each selected man before he reaches the mobilization camp. This service is to be performed under the supervision of the office of the surgeon general, United States Army.

"Under the law only one dentist per thousand is permitted in the army. One dentist to a thousand is not sufficient to care for the dental needs of the new army before it is ordered to foreign service. The patriotic offer of these members of the dental profession is, therefore, of great value, not only to the comfort but to the efficiency of the National Army.

"It is desired not to add to the many labors which local boards are already performing. Therefore, it is suggested that these boards must be asked to mail notices of this opportunity to their selected men, but that they be urged to give the widest possible local publicity to it, and that they be encouraged to co-operate and lend assistance when their local dentists ask for the names and addresses of accepted men."

The letter is signed by Provost Marshal General E. H. Crowder.

Veterans' Resolutions Hit Senator. Madison veterans of the Civil war, who attended the reunion at Vicksburg with their old comrades and opponents during the Vicksburg campaign have returned.

Resolutions were passed at the reunion condemning Senator La Follette and his followers in and out of the United States senate; thanking the state, the governor, the members of the legislature for providing the expense of the trip, and John C. Prien and Albert Beerfort, who had charge of the Wisconsin delegation during their trip.

Comrade F. A. Rozene, president of the National Association of Vicksburg Veterans, came in for a warm vote of thanks and appreciation.

La Follette's Chief Issue. The La Follette issue will be the chief issue in the event of a special election being held to name a successor to late United States Senator Paul O. Husting. Although the attorney general in an unofficial opinion has declared an election will be necessary, Governor Phillip has requested a formal ruling before taking decisive action. The Wisconsin Loyalty Legion will be a big factor in the senatorial campaign and it will oppose every La Follette candidate who appears in the field. Some of those mentioned as possible successors to Husting are: Governor Phillip and Judge John C. Karel, Milwaukee; Thomas Kearney of Racine, William N. Hutton of New London and former Gov. Francis McGovern, Milwaukee. All of these men are strong foes of La Follette.

Urges Teaching of Patriotism. The Wisconsin Loyalty Legion urges that schools be used for patriotic education, as they are used elsewhere. The Legion has been appointed agent of the committee on public information for the distribution of literature in Wisconsin and is prepared to furnish the documents for educational purposes. In many schools the pamphlet on "How the War Came to America" and the annotated copy of the president's "War Message" are being used as exercises in English, furnished by the Loyalty Legion.

Keep Liquor From Troops.

Gov. E. L. Phillip sent a letter to all local army draft boards to see that no drafted men sent to concentration camps were intoxicated or carried intoxicating liquor with them.

Such gifts result in a very bad effect on the men, make them default of discipline and are likely to lead to court-martial for the unfortunate man. But apart from the effect upon the man, it defames the good name and reputation of the state. We must see to it that not a single person from this state enters a mobilization camp under the influence of liquor.

In selecting the man who is to be in charge of the contingent from your local board, will you please select one who will enforce the rule that the men of the National Army shall have no liquor whatever prior to their entrainment or while en route? Please give the person in charge of the contingent instructions that liquor is forbidden and ask him to confer all liquor found in the possession of the men in his charge. We are calling the attention of railway officials to section 1565 of the Wisconsin statutes forbidding public drinking of intoxicating liquors on trains and authorizing conductors to confiscate liquor found on the train.

No white drafted men of Wisconsin probably will be ordered to camp this month.

Keep the Flag in Your Window. More ardent than any other patriot, more loyal and downright than any grown-up can be, are the children of a community. To schoolboys and schoolgirls a thing either is, or it isn't. They don't split hairs like their elders; they neither pussyfoot nor quibble nor have conscientious scruples.

It is so when school children talk about the war—as they all do. They raise no futile questions of whether it was right for America to get into the war; they know we are right because we are in. They know that because we are in we are going to win.

They talk about what their kin and friends are going to do to help win—of what will happen when Big Brother Jim hits the Flunders line; of how Bill from across the street or Tom from out in the country, cousins it may be, will make the Germans sick when he goes over the top.

They don't crumble, they boast, of the taxes their fathers pay, of the sacrifices they make to buy Liberty bonds, of the socks their mothers knit, and of the things left off the table that the soldiers at the front and the children of France may be fed.

He will be a sad child who is unable to make such a boast this year. His way through the winter term of school will be rough. He will be flouted and jeered and will have to endure persecution, for youngsters are not considerate of the feelings of one of their own age. It is likely he will have to fight, if he can't "come clean" for his Uncle Sam.

In a simple way children may be saved from all that. To American boys and girls the flag is their country. Put a flag in your window. Give your child a ready-made answer to any question of his loyalty. Do not subject him to the certain humiliation, if not persecution, which any doubt of your patriotism will inflict upon him.

U. S. Senator Husting's Successor. Gov. E. L. Phillip has taken no part in the political discussion growing out of the death of United States Senator Paul O. Husting. The governor, however, occupies the center of the stage by reason of the fact that he is vested with authority to call a special election to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Husting.

Whether he will call a special election or will ask the legislature, which will be called in special session early in December, according to present plans, to give him power to appoint a temporary successor to the late senator is a matter the governor has not publicly determined. It is believed that he will reach a decision in the near future.

Big Increase in Income Tax Returns. Remarkable prosperity in Wisconsin is indicated by an announcement of the state income tax commission that without a change in income tax rates the revenue from this source from corporations has virtually doubled in a year. The income tax on corporations assessed is for $7,348,968.73, compared with $3,743,180.17 last year, an increase of $3,605,688.56.

Coal Conservation Urged. The state board of health urges the following: Avoid overheating your house this winter; do not let the temperature stay above 68 degrees. Everybody do this and millions of tons of coal will be saved in this country. This will mean: More coal to prosecute the war; smaller annual fuel bills; improvement in the health of the people. Dr. H. A. Grubb, federal fuel administrator, says: "If every family and every industrial plant save 10 per cent of the coal it uses, the coal problem will be solved."

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

RARE BUFFALOES.

"Was watching the children growing up," "Little son Henry," she said, "will soon be a big buffalo. His horns are curved. For such a long time they have been quite straight—the way all my sons' horns have been when young. But now it shows Henry is growing up—he has beautiful horns which go off in semi-circular curves."

"What are semi-circular curves?" asked Nick.

"They are curves which only go half round—just like half a circle," answered Daddy. "And so Mrs. Buffalo gazed with fondness at her son."

"Henry, Mrs. Buffalo's child, was really much older than I think we would guess."

"How old was he?" asked Nancy.

"About six months old," said Nick. "Maybe a year old," suggested Nancy. "If Daddy says he was older than we would imagine when full-grown."

Daddy laughed and shouted, "Both wrong!"

"Now Henry was born one May, seven years before Mrs. Buffalo made this speech. She did not know that he was seven years old. She had not stopped to count the years, but she did know that he was at least a grown-up son because of his horns."

"To be sure every spring of the seven years she knew that she and her family and cousins and relations had all shed their coats and that they had not bothered about new ones until the fall. This had happened every year. It was simply that Mrs. Buffalo had not counted how many years there had been."

"Come and talk to me," said Mrs. Buffalo, as she noticed Mrs. Bison not far away.

"What kind of an animal was Mrs. Bison, Daddy?" asked the children.

"Mrs. Bison belonged to the same family of animals as Mrs. Buffalo. Sometimes one is called a buffalo, then

"I Am Feeling Rare," Said Mrs. Bison.

It is also called a bison. It is like having two names that mean just about the same thing.

"But this buffalo had always been called Mrs. Bison, and when Mrs. Buffalo called her she went right over."

"Good morning," she said politely.

"Good morning," said Mrs. Buffalo.

"How are you feeling?" asked Mrs. Bison.

"Well, and how are you feeling?"

"I am feeling rare," said Mrs. Bison. "What in the world does that mean?" asked Mrs. Buffalo.

"It means the way I am feeling of course," answered Mrs. Bison.

"If that's the way you feel I am sure I don't understand. Are you ill at all?"

"No, not at all," said Mrs. Bison.

"Then whatever do you mean?" asked Mrs. Buffalo, who was becoming more puzzled every moment.

"I heard some people from a long distance off shout to each other, and this is what they said when they looked at me: 'Do you see that buffalo over there?'"

"Then some one else said, 'Yes.'"

"And after a little bit I heard a third person say, 'The buffalo is getting to be very rare these days.' So, you see, I am right. I am rare—very rare!"

"Then I must be feeling rare too," said Mrs. Buffalo. "Your name is Bison though you are the same as I am, and so I am every bit as rare as you are."

"I suppose that is true," said Mrs. Bison. "But you must give me the credit for having heard that we are rare. If I hadn't, we might never have known it."

"No, we probably never would have known it," said Mrs. Buffalo.

"It must mean that we are gentle and nice, even if we are stubborn and always insist upon having our own way. Of course now and again the bulls get very angry, but we don't. And perhaps it means that we are so very large."

"No," said Mrs. Bison. "I'm sure from the way they were talking it didn't mean anything usual like that. It must have meant that we were considered very wonderful!"

"Perhaps," said Mrs. Buffalo, "but it is nice to be feeling that way." For even though they did not know that rare meant something unusual and scarce, they liked the new word.

Equal to Emergency.

The best way to learn to be equal to the big emergency is to be equal to the small ones. It is all nonsense to suppose that the girl who bursts into tears over some trivial vexation is going to stand up bravely to the big trials of life. The people who distinguish themselves in an emergency are those who have practiced self-control in the commonplace, every-day routine.

"I Am Feeling Rare," Said Mrs. Bison.

Suffered For Years Back and Kidneys Were in Bad Shape, But Doan's Removed all the Trouble.

"My kidneys were so weak that the least cold I caught would affect them and start my back aching until I could hardly endure the misery," says Mrs. D. C. Ross, 973 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y. "In the morning when I first got up, my back was so lame, I could hardly bend over and any move sent darts of pain through my kidneys. It was hard for me to walk up stairs or stoop, and to move while lying down sent darts of pain through me."

"The kidney secret, MRS. ROSS tells was scanty and distressing and the water remained in my system, making my feet and hands swell. There were dark circles under my eyes and I became so dizzy I could hardly see. I had rheumatic pains in my knees and it was all I could do to get around. For years I was in that shape and I wore plasters and used all kinds of medicine to no avail until I tried Doan's Kidney Pills. They rid me of the trouble and strengthened my back and kidneys. When I have taken Doan's since, they have always benefited me."

Became a Bit Worried.

The conversation at a recent social affair turned to the beautiful indifference of some children, when this story was fittingly related by Representative Frank L. Greene of Vermont.

Recently a small party named Bessie had a birthday, and a little girl friend of her own age was invited to come around and help her celebrate the glad occasion. Both were given cake and things, and afterward they happily pranced off to the upper part of the house.

Two hours later the mother of Bessie went to look for the children and found her sweet child sitting alone in a great armchair nibbling on a remnant of the dainty repast.

"Why, Bessie," exclaimed the surprised mother, glancing around the room, "where is your little friend?"

"We were playing hide and seek in the attic," calmly answered Bessie, as she continued to nibble her cake, "and I gave up looking for her quite a long time ago."

More Than One Way.

"Everyone at the club thought my hat was lovely, dear," said Mrs. Holt with a beaming smile. "Of course it was not expensive. I only paid $22 for it, but it is quite as lovely as Mrs. Bingley's, which cost her nearly $75."

"But the Ringley's are able to own a more conspicuous pew in church than we are," faltered her husband.

"Well," she exclaimed, radiant, "they can't come in any later than we can!"—Grit.

Honesty pays in the end—but you must be at the right end.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Let us keep the mind clear and bright, fill it with wholesome thoughts of life, and be kindly in our feelings towards others.—C. B. Patterson.

SEASONABLE DISHES.

For a nice occasion when dainty salad is desired make a cherry salad as follows:

Cherry Salad.—The nice large canned cherries are preferable, fill each with a fibert and arrange eight or ten on a head lettuce leaf for each person. Pour over a little dressing made from the cherry juice, olive oil and seasoning.

Maple Parfait.—Beat three eggs, yolks and whites separately, until light. Scald a cupful of maple sirup and pour it boiling hot over the yolks of the eggs, fold in the whites and set aside to cool. Add a pinch of salt, two cupfuls of whipped cream, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and freeze. Serve after ripening for several hours. Sprinkle each, serving with chopped walnuts or pecans.

Potato Croquettes.—Put two cupfuls of mashed potato through a ricer, add a tablespoonful of butter, two tablespoonfuls of chopped parsley, a teaspoonful of onion juice, and a well-beaten egg, salt, pepper and celery salt to season. Form into croquettes and fry in deep fat, after dipping them in egg and crumbs.

Royal Sandwiches.—Cut fresh brown bread a quarter of an inch thick and cover it with the following mixture:

Put three hard-cooked eggs into a dish, add four tablespoonfuls of butter, a dash of red pepper, two tablespoonfuls of cooked ham, chopped, mix and rub through a sieve, then add two tablespoonfuls of whipped cream, spread this on the bread and sprinkle over it finely chopped celery, that has been chilled in ice water, add a teaspoonful of olive oil, a little vinegar and salt, place another slice of bread on top of this and butter the top, sprinkled with hard-cooked yolk of egg put through a sieve, and lightly with chopped parsley. Cut the bread in strips and serve.

Pineapple Salad with Honey Dressing.—Arrange slices of fresh pineapple on lettuce and pour over the following. Beat together three tablespoonfuls of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of honey, a tablespoonful of lemon juice and a dash of salt. Use at once.

When whipping cream, add a tablespoonful of condensed milk to a bowl of whipped cream, and beat it well just before serving. It will add much to its deliciousness and increase the quantity of the cream.

A half-cupful of good-flavored cheese grated, then added to a dish of creamed toast, makes a highly nutritious dish.

It is a fine thing to have a great thought, but it is a much finer thing to pass a great thought on to others.

God has given us tongues that we may say something pleasant to our fellow-man.

HONEY DISHES.

A most delicious plum butter was that made by our grandmothers using honey instead of sugar; just try it with your plums and see if it isn't worth remembering.

Rice Pudding.—Take a half cupful of rice, two quarts of good milk, a pinch of salt and honey to sweeten, bake for three hours, stirring often the first half of the cooking. Raisins may be added and a little butter if the milk is not rich.

Honey Spice Cake.—Stir together until creamy one and a half cupfuls of honey, one scant cupful of shortening, add gradually two well-beaten eggs, one-half cupful of milk and three cupfuls of flour in which two tablespoonfuls of baking powder have been sifted, a tablespoonful of allspice and a cupful of each of raisins and currants. When well-mixed turn into a deep greased pan and bake in a moderate oven until brown.

Baked Apples.—Core and peel five even-sized apples. Mix one cupful of fine bread crumbs, three tablespoonfuls of honey, one-half teaspoonful each of cinnamon and lemon extract. Fill the centers of the apples with the mixture and bake in a buttered dish.

East Indian Pudding.—Soak three cupfuls of bread crumbs in two cupfuls of cold water for five minutes, then press out the water, mix well with a tablespoonful of melted butter, add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, one-half cupful of raisins, five yolks of eggs, flavored with one-half a teaspoonful of grated lemon peel. Bake in an earthen dish twenty-five minutes.

Honey Ginger Snaps.—Into a double boiler put three-quarters of a cupful of shortening, one cupful of honey and two teaspoonfuls of ginger, cook three minutes after reaching the boiling point, then set aside to cool. When cold stir in enough flour to make a stiff mixture, roll out thin and cut, bake in a quick oven.

Honey added to lemon juice makes a most delicious fruit sirup to serve on a fruit cocktail.

What Can We Do?

There is a request from hospitals for scrapbooks made to interest the convalescent soldiers when time hangs heavy on hands forced to be idle. Certainly here is a simple and easy task waiting for those who are anxious to serve the needs of our soldiers in some way, but with little time or money to spare. And convalescents in the hospital are not the only ones who will find the scrapbook something to enjoy and pass along. So, if you are casting about for something to send to the Summits for Christmas, consider the many virtues of a clever scrapbook.

These books are to be filled with pictures, cartoons, very short stories, good and new jokes (especially those originating in the army). These can be cut from magazines or papers or gathered elsewhere. Old files of magazines immediately prove a good field for exploration in filling them. Kodak pictures, if good and of general interest, will help out, and those of animals or country life are always interesting, or those made on trips to places of great natural beauty of historic interest. The blank books can be had at the humble and useful ten-cent stores and the pictures pasted in them. There is really more interest in this work, if the books are to be sent to acquaintances who have joined the army, and it is not at all hard to get acquainted with some soldier boy who may have less attention from home than his comrades. One especially nice thing about them is that they can be passed along and another is that the work is interesting in itself.

The pictures and stories should always be cheerful. The boys at the front have no use for "sob stuff," but they don't mind being a little sentimental. Here is a chance to be immediately seized, to do something worth while for Christmas.

MODELS IN COATS FOR MISSES.

We can achieve smartness in coats that sell at a moderate price, if they are made up in correct lines and in accordance with accepted styles. This is a consummation devoutly to be wished for the mother of the young girl. No one is more sure of what she wants, or harder to change in her convictions, than the miss in her teens, but, thanks be, she is not exacting in the matter of materials. She does not yearn for ermine or sealskin and will gladly wear rabbit fur disguised as either, if only it is made up in the right way.

For her the coat in the picture has been designed. It possesses all the style requisites which she can demand, worked out in materials that are moderate in price—as prices go just now. This coat is evidently an adaptation of styles with the authority of at least two famed Paris houses behind them. It is of bolivia, a heavy wool cloth, banded with a fur fabric that has much the effect of moleskin. The lines are straight from shoulder to hem and there is the coolest and smartest of muffer collars about the neck, a narrow girde, with long ends of the simplest "throw-over" variety, is finished with hanging ornaments of silk cord. On the original model there were no pockets, but pockets are very practical on winter coats and they have been added without marring this design.

Buttons are used for fastening the coat; three large ones, covered with cloth like the coat, are placed at the front, one above and two below the girde. Three smaller ones manage the collar and the front of the body. The bands of fur fabric need not be like the coat in color; those in black look well on almost any of the fashionable colors in wool, but the best effects are not in strong color contrasts. Dark brown with brown bandings, taupe with taupe bandings, wine or dark amethyst with black bandings are good combinations for coats. All the neutral or "glove" colors are to be recommended.

A young man, very fond of the girls, but very cautious as to his dealings with them, recently went to a poetical friend and asked him if he would help get up a birthday sonnet to a certain young lady.

"Why, you ought to know about what's the proper thing," said the young man. "Something rather tender, but at the same time, remember, I don't want to commit myself in any way."

ALL MEN AT HOME SHOULD PREPARE FOR WAR

The first test a man is put thru for either war or life insurance is an examination of his water. This is most essential because the kidneys play a most important part in causing premature old age and death. The more injurious the poisons passing thru the kidneys the sooner comes decay—so says Dr. Pierce of Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., who further advises all people who are past thirty to preserve the vitality of the kidneys and free the blood from poisonous elements, such as uric acid—drink plenty of water—sweat some daily and take Anuric, double strength, before meals. 60c a package.

This Anuric is a late discovery of Dr. Pierce and is put up in tablet form, and can be obtained at almost any drug store. For that backache, lumbago, rheumatism, "rusty" joints, swollen feet or hands, due to uric acid in the blood, Anuric quickly dissolves the uric acid as hot water does sugar. Take a little Anuric before meals and prolong life. Send 30 cents to Dr. Pierce for trial package of Anuric.

"HIS BROTHER'S KEEPER"

How may clean, careful, and intelligent parents protect their children and themselves from the contagious diseases and other evils which infest the homes and neighborhoods of unclean, careless, and ignorant people? This is a question which has agitated mothers and fathers throughout the history of educated mankind. The complete answer has not been found.

This much we know, however, that inasmuch as those who are sick with pestilences spread their own affliction to others, our own safety is dependent upon making others safe. This is another instance in which the biblical question: "Am I my brother's keeper?" must be answered affirmatively. In this one, however, it is not just one of conscience, alone, but of selfish, personal interest as well.

In their efforts to free themselves from needless suffering, preventable disease, and premature death, people are confronted with the necessity of giving as much attention to their neighbor's lives and health as to their own. What does it profit the husbandman to free his fields from thistles if his neighbors' carelessness cultivates them? His care of his own fields profits his neighbor rather more than it does himself.

Just so with contagious diseases. The mother who keeps her snuffly-nosed child at home and away from contact with other children is doing an even greater service to her neighbor than she is doing to herself or her own child. It is only a square deal that she should receive equal consideration from her neighbor.

Medical school inspection, whether it be conducted by a doctor, a school nurse, or an intelligent teacher, is the best device so far arranged by which careful and intelligent parents may protect their children from disease contamination of the children of careless and ignorant parents. The fundamental principle of school-child-health-inspection is discovering sources of infection and removing them before the well have been infected. Nothing could be simpler or more in line with common sense practices as applied to other things. What house-wife, for example, would keep decaying apples in contact with her sound ones.

The establishment and proper maintenance of health inspection. Its value lies in the realization that preventing disease is much cheaper than curing it.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and for years it was supposed to be incurable. Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is a constitutional remedy, is taken internally and acts through the blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. One Hundred Dollars reward is offered for any case that Hall's Catarrh Medicine fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
