GOSLINGS RAISED IN EARLY SPRING Much Land in Northern States

Fowis Should Be Allowed to Make Their Own Nests.

KEEP EGGS IN A COOL PLACE

Some Breeders Prefer to Use Hons for Hatching, as Goose Sometimes Besome Difficult to Manage-Incubation Varies.

(Prepared by the United States Depart.

The successful raising of goslings should begin with feeding the geese an egg-producing ration during the latter part of the winter or early spring. The geese should be allowed to make their nests early in the spring on the floor of the poultry house, or in large boxes, ern part of the corn belt. To be spebarrels or shelters provided for the рагрове.

The eggs should be collected daily and kept in a cool place where the contents will not evaporate too freely; if kept for some time they may be stored in loose bran. The first eggs are usually set under hens, while the last ones which the goose lavs may be hatched either under hens or under the goose. If she gets broody. If the eggs are not removed from the nest in which the goose is laying she will usually stop laying sooner than if they are taken away. Some breeders prefer to raise all the goslings under hens, as geese sometimes become difficult to manage when allowed to hatch and rear their tinued, to sow a little of it this spring young. Hens used for hatching goose if a full winter-wheat acreage was not eggs must be dusted with insect powder and have good attention, as, in the farmers in a neighborhood often will case of geese, the period of incubation is longer than in that of fowls. Goose eggs may be hatched in incubators and the goslings successfully raised in ing winter wheat. Perhaps some other brooders, although this is not a common practice.

warm water. Four to six eggs are set under a hen and ten to thirteen under a goose. They may be tested about the tenth day, and those which are infertile or contain dead germs should be removed. They hatch slowly, especially under hens, and the goslings are usually removed as soon as hatched and kept in a warm place until the process is over, when they are put back under the hen or goose. Some breeders who hatch with both geese and hens give all the goslings to the geese. Hens with goslings may be confined to the coop and the goslings allowed to range. The latter, especially if the weather is cold, are not usually allowed to go into water until they are several days old. In mild weather the hens are allowed to brood the goslings from seven to ten days, when the fatter are able to take care of themselves. Good-sized growing coops, with board floors, should be provided for the goslings, and they must be protected from their enemies and given some attention when on range.

Feeding Geese and Goslings. Geese are generally raised where they have a good grass range or pasture, as they are good grazers, and, except during the winter months, usually pick up most of their living. The pasture may be supplemented with light feeds of the common or home-grown grains or wet much daily, the necessity and quantity of this feed depending on the pasture. Goslings do not need feed until they are 24 to 36 hours old, when they should be fed any of the mashes recommended for chickens

PROFITABLE TO GROW SPRING WHEAT CROP

Which Is Ouite Suitable.

It is Probable That in Large Area Marquis Variety Will Give Best Result-Seed Should Not Be Hard to Obtain, (Prepared by the United States Depart-There is much land in the Northern states on which spring wheat growing may be profitable as well as patriotic this year.

An additional acreage of spring wheat can be secured by increased attention to the crop in sections where considerable areas formerly were planted. Spring wheat also should be sown in the Northeastern states—the northeastern quarter of the countrysouth and east of the present springwheat area. This includes the northcific it includes northern Kansas and Missouri and northward, and nearly all of the country north of Kentucky and Virginia, including the New England states. Spring wheat should not be sown along the seaconst, however, and generally not on land of low elevation. In the mountainous region spring wheat should be tried where land is available as far south as Tennessee and North Carolina.

Where Fermerly Grown. A fairly safe rule to follow in the present crisis, which demands a large wheat production, is for the farmers in all sections wherever spring wheat has ever been grown but now disconput in by them last fall. The older recall that spring wheat was once grown there, but that it gave way perhaps to higher-yielding or better-milicrop replaced wheat entirely. At the present time it is desirable in all such places to go back to some degree to spring-wheat growing.

If spring wheat fails the land is ready for a summer catch crop or for sowing winter wheat the next fall.

Choice of a Variety. In nearly all of this great area it is probable that the Marquis variety will give best results, or at least as good results as any spring wheat. Seed of this can most likely be obtained at points not far removed. Seedsmen generally should be able to supply it. or the county agent or state agricultural college can refer to sources of seed. It is the most widely grown variety in Minnesota and the Dakotas and is easily recognized by its short, wide-creased, broad, hard, red kernels.

Handling Spring Wheat. The culture of spring wheat should give trouble to no farmer in this section, accustomed as he generally is to winter wheat and to spring oats. The land should be prepared as for oats and seeded as early as possible. Use only land considered suitable for winter wheat. Early sowing is the best guaranty of a crop. It is best to sow wheat with a drill where one is to be had, but it can be sown broadcast and harrowed in. The same amount of seed per acre as of winter wheat, or a little more, should be sown. Six or seven pecks per acre is usually enough. Small patches of wheat sown by farmers generally in this northeastern section of the country will doubtless add greatly to our wheat supply, and will not interfere seriously with other farming operations.

WAGE WAR ON WEEDS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture) Good rotations and efficient farm practices will subdue weeds.

Three main principles of weed control must be observed: (1) Prevent weeds from maturing seed on the farm, (2) prevent the introduction of weed seeds on the farm, and (3) prevent perennial weeds from making top growth.

The principles are the main thing; the particular method employed is of lesser impor-

Next to the principles ranks the man behind them. Many men make a start to clear their farms of weeds but give up too soon. Often the campaign is stopped when success is in sight, and the weeds soon recover. Clearing a farm of weeds, especially perennials, is no easy task; it requires more than average intelligence and perseverence. If, however, one faithfully carries out a plan of attack based on the above principles of weed control he can practically rid his farm of weeds without a great amount of extra labor and expense

Weed control is frequently a community problem, and for the greatest permanent success cooperation among farmers is re-

SPRING BLOSSOMS.

"How do you feel?" asked the first apple blossom of a peer blossom on one of the other trees in the orchard, "Splendidly," said the pear blossom. 'How about yourself?"

"Never better," said the apple bloson. Now when the other pear blossoms and apple blossoms heard these two talking they all wanted to see what was going on.

And before long they were all out talking and chatting while some of them were having games with the Breeze Brothers who blew them to the ground and made it look as if the snow bad come again.

"Did your trees have a secret to whisper to you?" asked the first apple

"Yes." answered the first pear blossom. "I was just about to ask you the sume question "

"It's this way with us," said the first apple blossom. "You see the farmhouse is very shabby. It's been needing a coat of paint for so many years. And the people who live inside are so poor they can't afford anything they don't actually need.

"They don't have to have the mint But they feel badly that they cannot afford to have their house painted for it would look so much brighter and prettier.

"Well, it's been this same way for so many, many years as I said before, And they have bad luck with the potatoes and the corn every year. Something always happens. Bugs eat up the pointoes and a storm is likely to come and hurt the corn just when it would be growing quite perfect.

FOODS TASTE BETTER COOKED -TOBACCO TASTES BETTER TOASTED

Since the day of the caveman, who liked his meat raw, civilization has learned a lot about the scientific treatment of the things we eat.

Naturally none of us would now prefer to have our meat raw, our potatoes as they come from the ground, our coffee unroasted.

And naturally follows the great discovery recently made by The Amerian Tobacco Co.-that tobacco tastes better TOASTED!

This wonderful new idea-simple like all great inventions-was first used in producing the famous LUCKY STRIKE Cigarette-made of toasted Burley tobacco.

Burley has a mellow flavor, entirely different from the tobacco usually used for cigarettes. It is a pipe tobacco and LUCKY STRIKE Cigarettes taste like a pipe. Adv.

A DAGGER IN THE BACK

That's the woman's dread when she gets up in the morning to start the day's work. "Oh! how my back aches." GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules taken today eases the backache of tomorrow-taken every day ends the backache for all time. Don't delay. What's the use of suffering? Begin taking GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules today and be relieved tomorrow. Take three or four every day and be permanently free from wrenching, distressing back pain. But be sure to get GOLD MEDAL. Since 18% GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil has been the National Remedy of Holland, the Government of the Netherlands having granted a special charter authorizing its prepament of the Netherlands having granted a special charter authorizing its preparation and sale. The housewife of Holland would almost as soon be without bread as she would without her "Real Dutch Drops," as she quaintly calls GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules. This is the one reason why you will find the women and children of Holland so sturdy and robust.

SECRET OF THE HIDING PLACE OF THE VARONA TREAS-URE IS LOST

Synopsis.—Don Esteban Varona, a Cuban planter, hides his wealth -money, jewels and title deeds-in a well on his estate. The hiding place is known only to Sebastian, a slave. Don Esteban's wife dies at the birth of twins, Esteban and Rosa. Don Esteban marries the avaricious Donna Isabel, who tries unsuccessfully to wring the secret of the hidden treasure from Sebastian. Angered at his refusal, she urges Don Esteban to sell Evangelina, Sebastian's daughter. Don Esteban refuses, but in the course of a gambling orgie, he risks Evangelina at cards and loses.

Sebustian uttered a strangled cry and rose to his feet. "Master! You must not-"

"Silence!" ordered Esteban. "Go about your business. What do you mean by this, anyhow?" But Sebastian, dazed of mind and sick of soul, went on, unheeding. "She is my girl. You promised me her freedom. I warn you-"

"Eh!" The planter swayed forward and with blazing eyes surveyed his Cueto to unlock you, even if I risk Esslave. "You warn me? Of what?" he

"Ho! None of that."

A shudder ran through Sebastian's frame. Whirling, he seized Don Pablo's wrist and tore the whip from his fingers. Although the Spaniard was a strong man, he uttered a cry of pain.

At this indignity to a guest Esteban flew into a fury. "Pancho!" he cried. "Ho! Pancho!" When the manager cage running. Esteban explained: "This fool is dangerous. He raised his band to me and to Don Pablo."

Sebastian's protests were drowned by the angry voices of the others. "Tie him to yonder grating," directed Esteban, who was still in the grip of a senseless rage. "Flog him well and make haste about it." Sebastian, who had no time in which to recover himself, made but a weak resistance when Pancho Cueto locked his wrists into a pair of clumsy, oldfashloned manacles, first passing the chain around one of the bars of the iron window grating which Esteban had indicated.

Cueto swung a heavy lash; the sound of his blows echoed through the quinta, and they summoned, among others, Donna Isabel, who watched the scene from behind her shutter with much satisfaction. The guests looked on approvingly.

Sebastian made no outcry. The whip bit deep; it drew blood and raised welts the thickness of one's thumb; nevertheless, for the first few moments the victim suffered less in body than in spirit. His brain was so benumbed, so shocked with other excitations, that he was well-nigh insensible to physical pain. That Evangelina, flesh of his fesh, had been sold, that his lifelong faithfulness had brought such reward as this, that Esteban, light of his soul, fear of disappointment. But Sebastian closed his eyes wearily. "You can't make me suffer more than I have suffered," he said. "And now-I curse you. May that treasure be the death of you. May you live in torture like mine the rest of your days; may your beauty turn to ugliness such that men will spit at you; may you never know peace again until you die in poverty and want-"

But Donna Isabel, being superstitious, fled with her fingers in her ears; nor did she undertake to make good her barbarous threat, realizing opportunely that it would only serve to betray her desperate intentions and put nobody, as you can see. You must her husband further on his guard.

As the sun was sinking beyond the farther rim of the Yumuri and the valley was beginning to fill with shadows Esteban Varona rode up the hill. His temper was more evil than ever, if that in an effort to drown the memory of his earlier actions. With him were Poblo Peza, and Mario de Castano, Col, Mendoza y Linares, old Pedro Miron, the advocate, and others of less consequence, whom Esteban had gathered from the Spanish club. The host discounted and lurched across the courtyard to Sebastian.

"So, my fine fellow," he began. 'Have you had enough of rebellion by Sebastian had hung sick and limp he suddenly roused. He strained at his manacles and the bars groaned under his weight. His eyes began to roll, his lips drew back over his blue gums. Noting his expression of ferocity, Esteban cut at his naked back with the riding-whip, crying: "Ho! Not subdued yet," eh? You

Sebastian's fists alone would have been formidable weapons, but they were armored and weighted with the old-fashioned, hand-wrought irons which Puncho Cueto had locked upon them. Wrapping the chain in his fingers, the slave leaped at Esteban and struck, once. The sound of the blow was sickening, for the whole hony structure of Esteban Varona's head gove way.

There was a borrified cry from the other white men. Don Pablo Peza ran forward, shouting. He swung his machete, but Sebastian met him before the blow could descend, and they went down together upon the hard stones. Again Sebastian smote, with his masit was you who brought me to this; it sive hands wrapped in the chain and was your hand that whipped me. It all happened in far less time than it takes to tell. The onlookers had not yet recovered from their first consternation; in fact they were still fumbling and fugging at whatever weapons they carried, when Sebastian came toward them, brandishing the blade on high. Pedro Miron, the advocate, was the third to fall. He tried to scramble out of the negro's path, but, being an old man, his limbs were too stiff to serve him and he went down shricking.

By now the horses had caught the scent of hot blood and were plunging furiously, the clatter of their hoofs mingling with the blasphemies of the riders, while Sebastian's bestial roaring made the commotion even more

It was a frightful combat. It seemed incredible that one man could work quickly, such dreadful havoc in so short a time. Those who came running to learn the cause of the hubbub turned away sick and pullid, for the paved yard was a shambles. Pancho Cueto called upon the slaves to help him, but they slunk back to their quarters, dumb with terror and dismay.

All that night people from the town below came and went and the quinta resounded to sobs and lamentations, but of all the relatives of the dead and wounded, Donna Isabel took her bereavement hardest. Strange to say, she could not be comforted. Now, when it was too late, she realized that she had overreached herself, having caused against the grating, but at these words the death of the only two who knew the secret of the treasure. She remembered, also, Sebastian's statement that even the deeds of patent for the land were hidden with the rest, where ten thousand men in ten thousand years could never find them.

CHAPTER III.

"The O'Reilly." Age and easy living had caused Don Mario de Castano, the sugar merchant, to take on weight. He had, in truth, become so fat that he waddled like a penguin when he walked; and when he heart?" rode, the springs of his French victoria gave up in despair.

In disposition Don Mario was practical and unromantic; he beasted that he had never had an illusion, never an interest outside of his business. And yet, on the day this story opens, this prosaic personage, in spite of his bulging waisthand and his taut neckband. in spite of his short breath and his prickly heat, was in a very whirl of pleasurable excitement. Don Mario, in fact, suffered the greatest of all illusions: he was in love, and he believed himself beloved. The object of his adoration was little Rosa Varona, the daughter of his one-time friend Esteban. To be sure, he had met Rosa only twice since her return from her Yankee school, but twice had been enough; with prompt decision he had resolved to do her the honor of making her his wife Notwithstanding the rivulets of perspiration that were coursing down every fold of his flesh, and regardless of the fact that the body of his victoria struggling to escape the burdens of his great weight, Don Mario felt a jauntiness of body and of spirit almost like splendid prince riding toward the "You would never guess!"
