SOLDIERS' LETTER FROM FRANCE

Frank Harter of the town of Auburn is in receipt of the following letter from Chaplain Sylvester Harter from somewhere in France. He has the following to say:

Chateau d'Aux, Louplande (Sartre) November 6, 1918.
Mr. Frank Harter, Campbellsport, Wis.
Dear Uncle and all Martersville:

Who would have thought at this time last year, that your boy would be writing to you from somewhere within 150 miles from Paris! And yet here I am and perhaps on the eve before going to the front to do my bit for the souls of those whom we know as our own boys that are working such wonders for us all, and whom the Germans are unable to meet with their wonderful cruelty and war machinery. Today the Paris papers tell us that Austria has finally decided that war on the whole is rather unprofitable when one is drawing the losing card. Turkey has waved the white flag; and I hope that by tomorrow Germany may finally conclude that the American boys are just a little more than they were thought to be. There is no doubt about it that she can hold out for another year; but with certain defeat awaiting her in the end, she appears to me that sensible at least to see that a peace today with some of her possessions left is better than continued war and greater loss of blood and the gain of more and more hatred from the entire world.

Hartsville is, I suppose, brown with the autumn time. The corn is cut and husked; the potatoes and apples under cover; the bees asleep in the cellar. You are again resting after another harvest. How I wish that I could be with you again. But it will be years, at least one year at the earliest before I can expect to rest again within the delightful shades and warm sunshine of home, sweet home. My work after the war will be harder, even though not as dangerous, than it is now, the hospitals with their sick and wounded needing the chaplain after all the rest have gone home. That is the hardest to bear for me, I assure you. Let us hope that we will soon see the end of the awful war!

The place where I am now situated is called, as the title gives you, the Chateau d'Aux in the district of Sartre, about 150 miles from Paris on the west. The Chateau is one of the old castles belonging, at present to a French count married to a Chicago girl. The count is at the front, his wife living, however, at the Chateau, in one of the wings. The family permitted us to use the place with its grand grounds for our purposes, remembering, I suppose, that had the boys of the U. S. not come, their home would lie in ruins with the eastern parts. We are many, of course, some of us sleeping in what I make out to be the barn or storeroom of the place. One does not care, however, just where you unroll the blankets when night comes.

I have been here about three days now. There is so much rain about the country that my underwear and socks that I washed some days ago are still very much not dry; and today I stole some wood to build a fire. By the way, the wood one is able to see, or steal consists of small pieces of branches, the thickest branches averaging about an inch in diameter. What a time to keep such a fire going one has you can easily imagine. The meals are good, of course we pay for them.

No, I am not writing this in a parlor on the marble table. This letter is being written in the mess hall. I am sitting on my own trunk and have two others piled up for the typewriter itself. Yet it goes fairly well. My fire is going out, and it is growing dark. There are no lamps or lanterns in the barn. So I had better close for this time.

Give my richest love to my dear Aunts, and to my dear sisters and brother, to Jake across the road. Then tell Uncle Joe that I have sent my dear Uncle-chums each a high barrel of love, wishing for the day when I can see them again, all of you, my dear ones. And so au revoir. The next letter may be written soon. It may be a long time though before I find another opportunity. In the meanwhile pray for me and for the dear boys that are giving so much for the land I love, we love, so dearly. And God bless you all!

Your soldier boy,
Sylvester Harter,
Lieut. Chaplain, U. S. A.

Service for Our Soldiers and Sailors

The war has closed. The achievements of our boys have gone down into history. In Washington county there is a war history committee. The work of this committee is varied, but one of the fundamental things it will attempt to do is to secure the name, address and other facts of every man who entered the military or naval service of our country from this county. Unless these facts are collected now we may never have a complete record of all the men who have entered the service. It will be an easy matter to secure the names of the selective draft, but we have no total record of those who volunteered as soldiers and sailors.

Below is printed a military card calling for certain facts. Relatives or friends of boys now in service are urged to fill these blanks out at once and mail them to the chairman of the Washington County War History Committee. If possible include a photograph of each soldier.

MEMORIAL SERVICES HELD

Memorial services in honor of Private John Petermann, Co. H, 354th Inf., Am. E. F., whose obituary appeared in our last week's issue of the Statesman, were held in St. John's Ev. Luth. church, New Fane at two o'clock Sunday afternoon. Rev. C. J. Gutekunst addressed the meeting in the American language afterwards repeating the address in German. The Home Guards of Campbellsport attended in a body to do military honors. Appropriate songs were rendered by St. John's choir and by the children of the parochial school.

The weather being almost perfect many friends of the deceased and his family attended, many could hardly find standing room in the church. A space has been reserved in the cemetery at the church, for the body of Private Petermann, should it be possible that his parents have it brought over here from France, where it is now resting. By this death the first gold star has been put onto the service flag of St. John's church.

Thus we honor our fallen brave, yet how insignificant do not these honors seem compared with the sacrifice our heroes brought. Yet we know that all those who have fought the good fight of faith as they did the battles of their country have gained a most glorious victory in death. And thus the bereaved parents are cheered by the sympathies of the community as they are comforted by the promise of their Saviour.

Now hush your cries and shed no tears. On such death none should look with fear.

He died a faithful Christian man, And with his death new life began.

BERLIN SPENT $7,500,000

Bielaski Sends to Senators Orders Sent to Kaiser Win War.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Germany spent more than $7,500,000 for the dissemination of propaganda in this country from the beginning of the war.

Bielaski was arrested by Senator Overman in the hearing on an account of the activities of Bolo Pasha, executed in France as a spy, while he was in this country.

Bolo was brought to this country by a representative of W. F. Hearst. Bielaski was taken to the German embassy in New York, where he was held for several days.

Activities of Labor National Peace Council, organized in Chicago, in May, 1916, were discussed by Bielaski.

"Only a small part of it was spent, however," said Bielaski. "Lamar had a habit of taking credit for a great many things he had nothing to do with."

The New York Staats Zeitung was mentioned by Bielaski in connection with the financing of a secret propaganda to the extent of $495.

DANIELS' STORY OF WORK ON SEA

DECLARES U. S. NAVY HAS BIG TASK AHEAD IN POLICING THE SEAS.

Washington, Dec. 10.—With a story of brilliant achievements of the American navy in the war, Secretary Daniels, in his annual report, issued an urgent recommendation for continued expansion to meet the demands of peace for national and international work on the sea.

Through nearly all of the 134 printed pages the secretary tells in brief phrases of the navy's part in the war, of the things that have been accomplished through its work.

He speaks of the success in the accomplishment of transporting 2,000,000 men to France without the loss of an east-bound troopship through enemy action.

This reference to the "future" includes the report: "The day is not far distant when the world will witness an end of competitive building between nations of mighty weapons of war, in the peace treaty there undoubtedly will be incorporated President Wilson's proposal for a 'League of Nations' to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety."

"Navies still will be needed as an international police force; to control compliance with the degree of international tribunal, which will be set up to decide differences between nations, naval vessels will have large peace tasks of survey and discovery and protection of navigation to police duty of an international as well as of a national character.

"Inasmuch as the United States is the richest of the great nations and has suffered less in war than any of the allied powers, it will devote upon this country to make a contribution to the navy to preserve the peace of the world commensurate with its wealth, its commerce, its growing and expanding merchant marine and its leadership in the world of free people.

"It is, therefore, our duty now not, indeed to enter upon any new and ambitious navy program, but to go forward steadily upon the lines of naval increase to which the country committed itself by the adoption three years ago of the first far-reaching naval program in the history of the republic.

"I have recommended to this congress the adoption of another three-year program substantially like the one authorized in 1915. But the victory of the allies and the United States should, and will, I sincerely trust, within a few years, make it no longer necessary for any nation under whip and spur to burden its taxpayers to undertake to build, in competitive construction, bigger fighting ships and more of them than any other nation can construct."

Mr. Daniels shows that the new $200,000,000 three-year building program he has proposed will provide 150 additional naval ships, ten of them dreadnaughts and six battle cruisers, and the others to be in such distribution of approved types as the department may deem best.

Taking up his story of the navy and the war, the secretary declares the service was "ready from stem to stern" when the United States entered the conflict.

Teamwork has been the navy's slogan for five years. The striking success of the navy is ascribed to this fact by Mr. Daniels, who continues: "Apparently there have been times when a secretary of the navy seemed to find friction and lack of co-operation among the officers around him. If that spirit ever existed in the United States navy, I can state with confidence and pride that there is now no vestige of it, and I firmly believe, from my experience, not only during the last year, but during the last five years preceding, it never will return."

Writing with pride of the record of the marine brigade in France, the secretary shows that with only 8,000 men of the corps engaged, the casualties numbered 69 officers and 1,531 men dead, 78 officers and 2,534 seriously wounded, while but 57 marines are reported officially as captured by the enemy, illustrating the desperate character of the fighting in which the brigade participated, and the fact that it was always advancing.

As we went ashore, the bombardment began, and we were not only under fire of shells, but also of machine guns, and most anything that could be thrown.

All this time, "lest you forget," we had no shoes, and no clothing—only what had once been our underwear. It is all right to be a Coney Island snowbird and pose around in your bathing suit in the drifts, because you are in good condition, and last but not least, because you do not have to do it.

Figure out the other side of it for yourself. They marched us into a field where there was nothing much but guns and ammunition and snow, and set us up in something like skirmish formation. We stood there for some time, and then we saw a lot of Hun with the new long rifles coming toward us, yelling just as they did in battle, and we thought sure we were being used for machine targets.

It is a good thing they halted and stopped yelling when they did, or we would have started for them to fight it out, for we were not the kind that likes to be butchered with hands in the air, and we would have been glad for a chance to get a few of them before they got us. But they did halt, and then surrounded us, and drilled us away through swamps and woods and shallow water or slush. The women fellowed, too, and there were plenty of bricks and spit left. Women as well as men are the same the world over, they say. I wonder? You can just picture the women of Bay, Rockland, Me., following a crowd of German prisoners that way, can't you? Not! But of course the women of Rockland are pretty crude—no kumars at all—and Gott never commissioned President Wilson to take the lid off the strafe net for him.

They drilled us along the docks, and it looked as though the whole German navy was tied up at Sainnegeau. We saw many of the ships, and had heard about, among them being the famous Vulcan, the mother ship for submarines. There were many sailors looking along the docks, and they gave the women a hand with their days' work. They were no better with a brick, but they had more ammunition when it came to spitting. One of them tripped a young boy by the name of Kelly, and as you would never doubt, Kelly picked up a rock and crashed the sailor with it. He was then bayoneted twice in the left leg. We began singing then, our popular favorites. "Pack up your troubles, old man, and when they heard us, how the swine stared!

They drilled us past the German soldiers' quarters. The men were at rifle practice, and I guess all of us thought how handy we would be as targets. But when we got near them, they quit practicing and crowded around us yelling: "Hans! Zuruck!" Finally we got to the top of the hill, and were held by the barracks while an officer read the martial law of Germany to us. At least we thought maybe that was it.

Finally they took us to the barracks, and the first thing we saw was a great pile of hay. That looked good to us, and we made a dash and drove into it. But the Huns told us to take the hay and throw it in the middle of the road. They had to use force before we would do it. Finally we gave in, however, and started to carry it out. Some of the young boys were crying, and I do not blame them much.

But one of the boys tried to hit some of the hay behind a board and caught a splinter, and a splinter caught him in the eye. One of the barracks to the other. His nose was broken and his face mashed to a jelly. But there was nothing we could do, so we just wandered up and down the barracks, about as we did between decks on the Moeve, trying to keep warm.

While this marathon was on we heard a whistle blown very loudly, and when we looked out we saw a wagon piled up with old tin cans. Then we were told to form single file, walk out to the wagon and get each a can for himself. Each man had to take the first can he laid his hands on, and many of us got really ones with holes in them. So that about half an hour later, when we received barley coffee, and all we had to drink it from was that equal hole of the tin can had drunk theirs almost in the gulp or lose half of it.

The barracks were very dirty and smelled horribly, and the men were still not even half clothed. We all looked filthy and smelled that way, and where the coal dust had rubbed off, we were very pale. And all of us were starved looking.

About eleven o'clock that morning the whistle blew again, and we came out and were given an aluminum spoon and a dish apiece. Then we cheered up and saw corned beef and cabbage for ourselves. An hour later they drilled us through the snow to the kuche. When we got there we stood in line until at least half-past twelve, and then the Germans shouted: "Nichts zu essen." But we did not know what that meant, so we just hung around there and waited. Then they started shouting, "Zuruck! Zuruck!" and drove us back to the barracks.

Later we heard the words "nichts zu essen!" so often that we thought probably they meant "no eats." We had our reasons for thinking so, too. Those words, and "zuruck" and "traus," were practically all we did hear, except, of course, various kinds of schweinhunde.

It was awful to see the men when we got back to the barracks. Some of the boys from the Georgie, not much over twelve years old, were almost crazy, but even the older men were crying, many of them. It was nothing but torture all the time. They opened all the windows and doors in the barracks, and then we could not heat the room with our bodies. When we started to move around, to keep warm, they held a few shots at us. I do not know whether they hit anyone or not, we had got so that we did not pay any attention to things like that. But it stopped us, and we had to stand still.

The Huns thought we would take the rifles from the sentries and use them, too. I never saw a yellow bunch of people in my life. I do not mean people. I wish I could publish what I really mean.

We had stoves in the barracks, but no coal or wood to burn. There were many boxes piled up there, but they belonged to the Germans. We would have burned them, we could, but the Germans made us carry them around the road. They weighed about 150 pounds apiece, and we were so weak that it was all we had to do to bugle them. And we had to carry them; they would not let us roll them. We were so cold and hungry that even that exercise did not warm us.

About 2:30 the whistle blew again, and the Huns picked out a few men and took them down the road. We could not figure out why, but they came back about three o'clock, all of them with bread in their arms. They were shouting away at it, and we had a chance. Whenever the sentries were not looking they would bite at it like a fish going after a worm. Each man carried five loaves.

When they got in the barracks the sentries made them put the bread down on the floor, and then, with loaf boxes down the center lengthwise and four times across, which meant there was a loaf between the size of an ordinary toilet loaf in this country now. They gave each of us a piece of little bread, and a safety razor.

The bread was hard and dark, and I really think they made it from trees. It had just exactly the same smell that the dirt around trees has.

We filed past the sentries single file to get our bread, and there was no chance of getting in at all twice, for we had to keep on filing until we were out in the road, and stand there in the snow to eat it. We could not go back in the barracks until all very late and had been there.

Our bread was like that. A sign of barley coffee in the merchant cabbage soup called, at noon, a tenth of a loaf of bread at 3 p. m. That was our menu day in and day out, the same thing, but with a little extra, or any other time.

This cabbage soup was a great idea. We called it shadow soup, because the boys claimed they made it by hanging a cabbage over a barrel of water and letting the shadow fall on the water. We pretended, too, that if you found any cabbage in it, you could have your dish back for a second helping. But I never saw anybody get more than one dishful. All it was, was just spoiled water.

We tried to go to sleep that night, but there was so many sentries around us—and those of us who were not sick were wounded—that I do not think a man of us really slept. After a while I asked a sentry if I could go outside for a minute, but for some reason he would not let me. I had different ideas about it, so I stood around near the door, and when he turned his back out I went and around the corner of the barracks. But one of the sentries there saw me and blew his whistle, and a guard of eight came up from somewhere and grabbed me. I tried to explain, but it was no use, because every time I said a word it meant another swat over the ear, so finally I gave it up.

Then they drilled me across the road to the officers' quarters. There were three officers there, and each of them asked me questions about all kinds of things, but never once mentioned my running out of the barracks. Then they gave the sentries some commands, and four of the sentries took me out and over to the barbed wire fence. There they tied me, face to the fence, arms over my head, and hands and feet lashed to the wire, and with a rope around my waist, too. I thought, then, that my hunch had come true, and that I would be crucified, like Morry and Brown.

They posted a sentry there in addition to the regular guards, and every time he walked past me he would kick me or spit on me, or do both.

One time he kicked me so hard that a prong of the barbed wire gashed me over the left eye—the only one I can see with—and when the blood ran into my eye it blinded me. I thought both eyes were gone then, and I hoped they would shoot me. It seemed to me that I had got my share by this time without losing the other eye, and if it was gone, I wanted to go.

I could not put up my hand to feel where the prong had lashed me, and it kept on bleeding and smarting. I had on practically no clothing, you remember. The wounds in my thigh had opened, and it was bitter cold and windy. So you can picture to yourself how gay and carefree I was.

When I had been there for an hour and a half they untied me from the wire, and I knelt over on my back. They held me until I had to stand up, but I fell down again, and all the kicking in Germany could not have brought me to my feet. I was just all in, and they blew their whistles and the sentries in the barracks awakened two of the boys, who came and carried me in.

All the time the sentries were yelling, "Gott strafe England!" and "schweinhund!" until you would have thought they were in a battle. What their idea was I do not know.

The boys had a little water in a can, and one of them tore off part of the sleeve of his undershirt. So they washed the gash and bandaged it.

I was glad when I could walk, but I was so tired and worn out that I went to sleep at once, and did not wake up until they were giving us our barley coffee next morning.

JOY CHAPTER XIX. German Prison Camp. A few days after I had been lashed to the barbed wire fence some of the German officers came to the barracks, and one of them who spoke very good English said: "All of the neutrals who were on unarmed ships step out."

Then he called for all the neutrals, and the Danes, Swedes, Norwegians, Brazilians and Spaniards stepped out. And when I did, he said, "No, not Americans. Americans are not neutral. America supplies our enemies with food and ammunition." He raised his fist, and I thought he was going to hit me, but instead he gave me a shove that caused me to fall and get a little cut on the head. Then the sentry pushed me over with the British and the French.

After that they took the Norwegians, Swedes and Danes to separate barracks, and gave them clothes and beds and the same rations as the German soldiers. When I saw this I made a kick and said I was a neutral, too, and ought to get the same treatment as the Scandinavians. They took me to the officers again, kicked me about and swore at me, and the only answer I got was that America would suffer for all she had done for the allies. Then I was sent back to the barracks again.

The next day at about one o'clock they took us from the barracks and drilled us through the swamps. The men began to fall one by one, some crying or swearing, but most of them going along without a word. Those who went down were smashed in the head with rifle butts or belts.

Finally we arrived at a little railroad station, and had to stand in the snow for over an hour while the engine ran up and down the tracks hugging on cars. When we finally got in the cars were frozen stiff, and could hardly walk, and some of the boys simply could not move without assistance.

They loaded twelve men into each compartment, and detailed a guard of six men to each car. The windows in the cars were smashed, and everything about the cars was dirty. Finally the train stopped at a town named Alt-Damm, and there was a mob of women and children around, as usual, ready for us with bricks and spit. They stoned us through the car windows, and hounded and jeered at us, but by this time we were so used to it that we did not mind much. Only every now and then some fellow would get all he could stand, and either talk back or make a pass at somebody. Then he would get hit—either a bayonet through the arm or leg, or a crash on the head with a gun butt.

After an eighteen hour ride, without food or drink, we arrived at Neustrelitz. It was raining as we pulled in. As we went up the grade to the town we could see lights about a mile away, and we figured that that was the camp. The rain stopped and we remained in the cars for some time. Then, after a while, we knew our new guards were coming; long before we could see them, we could hear the racket they made. Somehow a German cannot do anything shipshape and neatly, but always has to have a lot of noise, and running around, and general confusion. Four-footed swine are more orderly in their habits than the Huns.

When they came up, we were rousted from the cars and drilled up the road to the camp. When we got near the German barracks we were halted and counted again, and made to stand there for at least an hour after they had finished counting us, shivering like leaves. At last they placed us in barracks, and those who could went to sleep.

There were about forty barracks in the line group at Neustrelitz, and two large Zoppella sheds. The barracks were just about like those at Schweinmunde—at least, they were no better. Along the sides of the rooms were long shelves or benches, and every three feet were boards set in grooves. The shelves were what we had to sleep on, and the boards in the grooves divided them up so that only a certain number of men could use each bench.

The following morning we nearly dropped dead when the Huns pulled in a large wagon full of clothing. We thought we never would have anything to wear but our underclothes. They issued to each man a pair of trousers, thin model, a thin coat about like the sweater coats some people wear in the summer, an overcoat about as warm as if it had been made of cigarette papers, a skull cap and a pair of shoes, which were a day's labor to carry around. Not one of us received socks, shirts or underwear.

The toe was cut from the right shoe of the pair I received, and as my wounds were in the right thigh and my leg had stiffened up considerably, and got very sore, I got pretty anxious, because there was nothing but slush underfoot, and I was afraid I might lose my leg. So I thought that if I went to the commander and made a kick I might get a good shoe.

I told him that I was slushy outside, and that the water ran through the hole in my shoe, and made it bad for my whole leg, which was wounded. He examined the shoe, and looked at the open toe for some time, and I thought he was going to put up an argument, but would give in finally. Then he asked me what I wanted. I thought that was plain enough to see, but I said just as easily as I could that I wanted a shoe without a hole in the toe.

"So the water runs into it, does it?" he said. "Well, my advice to you is to get a knife, cut a hole in the heel and let the water out." All the other swine in the room laughed very loud at this, and I guess this Fritz thought he was a great comedian. But something or other, it did not strike me so funny that I just had to laugh, and I was able after quite a struggle, to keep from even sneezing. It was a harder struggle than that to keep from doing something else, though!

Our meals were just about the same as at Schweinmunde—the bread was just as muddy, the barley coffee just as rank, and the soup just as cabbage-like. The second morning after we had had our barley coffee, one of the sentries came to our barracks, which was number 7-B, and gave each of us an envelope and a sheet of writing paper. Then he told us to write to anybody we wanted to, after which he chucked on the door in big letters: KRIEGSGEFANGENLAGER.

and told us it was the return address. We were very surprised, and asked each other when we were in Neustrelitz. After a while, we learned that it means "Prisoner-of-War-Camp." At first, though, many of us thought it was the name of the town, and we got to calling it the Brewery, because the name was in lager. Whatever beer was brewed there, was not for us though.

RED CROSS POLICY GOOD NEWS

Chairman Davison Tells of Work Which the Organization Plans to Accomplish.

NATION IS ASKED TO ENROLL Week Preceding Christmas Will Be Devoted to Adding to the Membership—Problems of Reconstruction Are Gigantic.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Henry P. Davison, chairman of the war council of the Red Cross, today issued to the 3,854 chapters and the 22,000,000 members the following statement outlining the future policy of the American Red Cross:

"The whole American people will be invited in the week preceding Christmas to enroll as members of the Red Cross. It is confidently believed there need be no further campaigns for Red Cross funds, but instead the annual roll call will constitute the foundation of the Red Cross. The people should, therefore, know as definitely as possible the plans of this national humanitarian society.

"Wherever our soldiers and sailors may be, the Red Cross will stay with them until they are demobilized. Nothing which may do will be left undone, either for the men in the war zone, for those returning for those in the camps and hospitals or for their families at home to whom will continue to be devoted the ministrations of the Red Cross home service.

"The problems of reconstruction, involving feeding and caring for the distressed civilian populations of Europe, are of such magnitude that necessarily they must be met very largely by the governments of our allies, with whom our own government will cooperate.

"The war program of the American Red Cross will thus steadily and rapidly merge itself into a peace program. While the plans in this direction cannot be formulated specifically, in advance of the general relief program of the allied governments, the American Red Cross is nevertheless planning to develop its permanent organization in this country upon a scale never before contemplated in time of peace. The commissions which are now conducting the activities of the American Red Cross in foreign countries, as well as the temporary war organization in this country, will as a matter of course ultimately merge their activities with those of the permanent organization of the Red Cross.

"The work of the American Red Cross will be therefore, perfect confidence that the peace activities of the Red Cross will be conducted under able and inspiring leadership. The chapters will maintain their organizations upon a scale adequate to the new demands to be made upon them. Local committees will be organized to coordinate and more the work of having in their midst strong and efficient Red Cross chapters. The divisional organizations with honorary and permanent staffs, will be maintained—always ready for service; and national headquarters will have a large and efficient personnel to direct the activities of the organization as a whole.

"Study is being given by the national organization not alone to the problems of international relief, but to the home service, the promotion of public health education, development of nursing, the care and promotion of sick, aged, and other correlated work which may contribute to the health and happiness of men, women and children.

"The work which developed will be believed, provide both for world relief and for home communities alike, and thus constitute a channel, for the continued and useful expression by Red Cross workers and members of those qualities of sympathy and love which in a whole people have poured out so abundantly during the war.

"For the completion of its war work and for the institution of its peace program, the Red Cross is fortunately in a healthy financial condition. Abundant occasion for the use of large funds of money and great quantities of garments and other supplies will continue to arise, but it is believed that there will be no further need for intensive campaigns for funds. The work of supplementing governmental activities which the Red Cross will be called upon to do in all parts of the world, will be upon a great scale, but it will call for human service rather than for large expenditures.

"What the American Red Cross needs now is not so much contributions of money, as the continued devotion and loyalty of its members. This is peculiarly true at this moment of transition from war to peace. Annual membership involves the payment of only one dollar. The moneys thus received not only defray all the administrative expenses of the organization, but leave a substantial balance, which, together with all funds subscribed directly for relief, are devoted solely to that purpose. The roll call of the nation is thus to be called at Christmas time, that through enrollment in their Red Cross the American people may send a message to our soldiers still overseas and to the peoples of the world that we are not only merely content with seeing our arms mated with our allies in victory, but that our abiding purpose is that the love, the sympathy and the intelligence of all America shall be rededicated to the permanent service of mankind."

Every household should have at hand all the time a dependable remedy with which to fight catarrh and catarrhal conditions.

The experience of Mrs. M. E. Berkeley, No. 132 27th St., Galveston, Tex., is not unique, but her letter tells us carry a vigorous "safety first" suggestion to every American home: "I wish to tell you of the good Peruna has been to me. I have used it five years and have never found it other than satisfactory. Restored to health, catarrh, indigestion and many other ailments. I am never without Peruna."

Catarrh, colds, catarrh, grip and influenza cannot safely be neglected. Any disease due to catarrhal inflammation of the mucous lining, whether of the nasal passages, throat, lungs, stomach, bowels, kidneys, bladder or other organs, is to be feared. Catarrh is always a menace to the general health and on account of its prevalence must be fought and fought hard all the time.

Thousands place their entire dependence upon the well known time-tried remedy, Peruna. Dr. Hartman began selling Peruna for catarrh forty-five years ago. Try Peruna first and avoid possible disappointment and expense.

HAD EXAMPLE BEFORE HIM Top-Eared Youth Could Not Doubt That Some People Could Speak Fast Without Stuttering.

A venerable citizen of the Straddle Ridge neighborhood entered a lunch-room in Polkville, dragging after him a gaiter-headed, top-eared youth.

"What kind of top-eared gaiter you?" he asked of the brisk waiter. "Peach, apple, plum, raisin, punk, nut, almond, walnut and coke-rot-constant!" he answered, with considerable rapidity.

"But—what?" returned the old fellow. "The young lad repeated the list with such rapidity that I could not hear him." "Please say that again, if you'd just as live," requested the ancient man.

"Say, looker here," demanded the waitress. "Can't you understand anything?" "No, you can't understand all right?" he turned to the top-eared youth.

Thereupon, Emmett, in a triumphant tone, said, "You see, it's just as I told you, it's just as fast as he holds his tongue without stuttering, if he'll only take heed of my advice."

RHYTHM OF NEGRO MELODIES

Writer Points Out How It Differs from That of the White Man's Folk Music.

Some interesting characteristics of negro music are discussed in a book on "Negro Folk Songs" by Virginia Curtis Berlin, observes the Boston Herald. "Though the negro, transplanted to other lands, absorbed much musically from the surrounding civilization, the characteristics which give to his music an interest worthy of particular study are precisely those which differentiate negro songs from the songs of the neighboring white man; they are racial traits, and the black man brought them from the dark continent. The most obvious point of departure between negro music and European is found, of course, in the rhythm. The simple rhythms natural to the white man (I speak of folk music, the people's song, not of the elaborate creations of trained musicians), are usually even and symmetrical. In negro songs the rhythms are uneven, jagged, and, at first hearing, eccentric. For the accents fall most frequently on the short notes and on the naturally unstressed beats, producing what we call syncopation of a very intricate and highly developed order. Rhythmically the negro song has far more variety of accent than the European; it captivates the ear and the imagination with its exciting vitality and with its sense of alertness and movement. The black man has by nature a highly organized rhythmic sense. A totally uneducated negro, dancing or playing the bones, is often a consummate artist in rhythm. My African informant thought nothing of singing one rhythm, beating another with his hands, and dancing another—and all at once.

FEW ESCAPES

There are few indeed who escape having at least one cold during the winter months, and they are fortunate who have but one and get through with it quickly and without any serious consequences. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and observe the directions with each bottle, and you are likely to be one of the fortunate ones. The worth and merit of this remedy has been fully proven. There are many families who have always used it for years when troubled with a cough or cold, and with the very best results.

Scrub yourself daily, you are not clean inside. This means clean stomach, bowels, blood, liver. You clean your hands each day—it's more important to cleanse the stomach and bowels. Moral: Take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea—a thorough cleanser—purifier.—Edw. C. Miller.

Low Meat Prices vs. High Cattle Prices

If the farmer cannot get enough for his live stock, he raises less, and the packer gets less raw material.

If the consumer has to pay too much for his meat, he eats less of it, and the packer finds his market decreased.

The packer wants the producer to get enough to make live-stock raising profitable, and he wants the price of meat so low that everyone will eat it.

But all he can do, and what he would have to do in any case to stay in business, is to keep down the cost of processing the farmer's stock into meat so that the consumer pays for the meat and by-products only a little more than the farmer gets for his animals.

For example, last year Swift & Company paid for its cattle about 90 per cent of what it got for meat and by-products (such as hides, tallow, oils, etc.)

If cattle from the farm were turned miraculously into meat in the hands of retailers (without going through the expense of dressing, shipping and marketing), the farmer would get only about 1 1/2 cents per pound more for his cattle, or consumers would pay only about 2 1/4 cents per pound less for their beef!

Out of this cent or two per pound, Swift & Company pays for the operation of extensive plants, pays freight on meats, operates refrigerator cars, maintains branch houses, and in most cases, delivers to retailers all over the United States. The profit amounts to only a fraction of a cent, and a part of this profit goes to build more plants, to give better service, and to increase the company's usefulness to the country.

Swift & Company, U. S. A.

MRS. ISLEY'S LETTER

Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE THICK CROSS, FEVERISH HURRY, MOTHER! REMOVE POISSONS FROM LITTLE STOMACH, LIVER, BOWELS. GIVE CALIFORNIA SYRUP OF FIGS AT ONCE IF BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When feverish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, loath to eat, has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of colic, give a teaspoonful of California Syrup of Figs, and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again. You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit-laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by the "California Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Adv.

WHAT CAN WE DO?

Below will be found the answer to the question which has been so insistently asked in the caption above. It is a great pleasure to see the time to time just what is being accomplished by the American Red Cross. The largest American Red Cross hospital farm in England is at Salisbury, Southampton, where a considerable part of the 186-acre estate is under cultivation. One thousand wounded and convalescent American soldiers have been sent to King George, Queen Mary and Princess Mary at a big military hospital in Dartford, just outside London, recently. The royal visitors inspected American Red Cross activities at the hospital. A good time was had by all. Santa Claus, Christmas and the Red Cross roll call come but once a year. The roll call takes place during the week of December 16. Speak up and dig down—when your name is called. One of Christopher J. Kringle's first stops on Christmas eve will be the American hospitals in France. In every ward of every hospital he will find a Christmas tree and Red Cross workers waiting to help him fill soldier socks. The Belgian commission of the American Red Cross has established a fund known as the "Queen's Purse" for war victims. Queen Elizabeth of Belgium goes about hospitals constantly supplying little extra comforts to patients. She has spent large sums of her own for this purpose, and in addition the American Red Cross provides a purse of $5,000 for this purpose.

The American Red Cross at Verona, Italy, is helping an existing orphanage to meet the urgent problem of caring for the homeless children. It has agreed to support 100 babies under a year old, and 20 between the ages of one and three. Americans in the American Red Cross ambulance service received 65 decorations for work performed in one month. This number includes seven silver medals, four bronze, and 54 war crosses.

Fifteen thousand men a day were served on an average by each of the 16 American Red Cross canteens on the Italian front. Sixteen of these canteens are portable. Le Harve—A Belgian colonel, just from the front, speaking of a canteen for which the American Red Cross provided quarters on very short notice, said: "One live demonstration like this is better than a year of talk." He also stated in a report: "It is wonderful to see how responsive the Belgians are to everything American."

The department of civil affairs of the American Red Cross undertook to establish or maintain 14 institutions in the war zone of Italy, which provided food, clothing and care for 3,477 children.

MADE BY AN ARTIST IN FURS

This rich and graceful cape-coatee, with its muff to match, is one of those much-admired, two-in-one garments that designers are now so fond of. It followed two converging paths to its success, combining the free, easy lines of a cape with something of the snugness of a coat. Its ingenuity was rewarded in a wrap more graceful than either of its inspirations. It is much more cozy than a cape or scarf, easily adaptable to a coat for comfort. But on mild days or in the warmer climates it is worn open at the front and fastened at the shoulders, as casually as either a cape or scarf.

When the wearer of this pretty garment adjusts it as a protection against the cold, the ingenuity of the furrier who made it reveals itself. The narrow scarf, attached to the neck, and passing through straps of fur at the waist line, is slipped from under these straps and wrapped about the throat, and the front of the wrap fastened up to meet it, thereupon it is a warm coat. The muff is melon-shaped, with slashed frills at the ends and every woman knows that it may actually keep the hands warm, or merely serve as a luxurious and elegant accessory of dress. Both the wrap and muff are distinctly up-to-date.

Hudson seal is a favorite with designers, but these artists in furs have distinguished themselves in other pelts. Squirrel, dyed and natural, broadbill, ringtail, mole and kolinsky are dividing honors with seal in coats, capotes, capes and in those combination wraps that have so captivated well-dressed women. While the shorter garments are having a great vogue the luxurious long coats, like, tail scarfs and muff, are always good style. Julie Sutherland Ribbon Workbag. A good workbag for a Christmas gift can be made from two yards of Dresden ribbon six and one-half inches wide and one embroidery hoop. Cut two rounds of cardboard, the size of the hoop for the bottoms of the "double-decker" bag, pad with sheep cotton and cover with the ribbon. Divide the remaining ribbon in halves and seam up both pieces. Then sew one to a cardboard round and fasten at the top of the outside rim of the embroidery hoop. Make the top part of the bag in the same way, save that the cardboard bottom is to be sewed to the inside of the embroidery ring, which has been covered by the silk ribbon.

Dressup Frocks. A charming and simple dinner gown may be made of black mullines lace and black net over a foundation of white English embroidery. A frock of dark green chamoisee, if correctly made, with long, tight sleeves and a narrow, draped skirt, need have no trimming. A pale pink batiste frock should be trimmed with real flit lace and girdled with blue tinsel cloth, glancing with gold and silver threads.

The KITCHEN CABINET

The men of the past overcame because they had convictions. We of the present frequently fail because we have nothing but opinions. HOT SUPPER DISHES.

For those who have their heavy meal at noon, the hot dishes, whether soup or escalloped, is an essential on these cool autumn nights. If the family is small, a few tablespoons of mashed potato, tomato, beans or other vegetable will be sufficient for the basis of a good cream soup.

Spanish Meat Dish.—This is a real food, tasty dish, and one which may be prepared with small amounts of meat. A half-cupful of finely minced meat will season a dish sufficient to serve four persons. Sliced, parboiled potatoes are placed in the bottom of a well-greased dish; then sprinkle over the meat and a thin layer of finely shredded Spanish onion; over this, a thick layer of tomato and bake for an hour or more in a moderate oven. The seasoning should be well done. Adding cayenne pepper and any gravy will also add to the flavor.

Hash From Boiled Dinner.—Chop fine the vegetables left from an old-fashioned boiled dinner with some of the corned beef; season and add some of the broth saved from the vegetables, and cook slowly in a frying pan for an hour on the back part of the stove. Serve with dill pickles and bread and butter.

Rice and Egg Omelet.—Put a quarter of a cupful of washed and drained rice in a frying pan and two table-spoonfuls of sweet fat and cook until the rice is slightly yellow, then add soup stock, if at hand, or boiling water. Cook until the rice is tender, then add seasonings, and stir in two or three eggs and a half-cupful of milk. Turn out on a hot sizzling dish and serve with curled bacon.

Egg and Sausage Omelet.—Beat five eggs until light, add a finely chopped onion (a small green one), a spoonful of chopped green pepper and two table-spoonfuls of ham or liver sausage. Season well and put into a hot omelet pan, turn out on a hot platter and garnish with parsley.

Oysters Fried in Batter.—Make a batter with two table-spoonfuls of milk, two well-beaten eggs, a table-spoonful of flour and a dash of salt. Dip well-dried oysters in the batter and fry in two table-spoonfuls of hot fat.

Sweet potatoes cooked until tender, then buttered and sprinkled with sugar and set into a brown is a pleasant way of serving them.

For woman, not undeveloped man. But diversify, and add some of the things that are different. Not like to like, but like in difference. —Tempsion.

TRUE HOSPITALITY.

The ornaments of a house are the friends who frequent it. The happy hostess, one who entertains frequently and whose invitations are always welcome, is she who gives of her best to her friends. She who "improves" herself and family for weeks to pay for an extravagant entertainment is not extending true hospitality to her friends.

In these mindless days when a vast majority of our housewives are their own cooks, there would be little entertaining unless the meals prepared were largely such as may be all ready to serve with little additional work at the last minute. No guest enjoys roasted hams for the first course. We cannot forego the pleasure of having our friends around our tables frequently, so it is necessary that the entertaining be simple and simple food well prepared and daintily served is usually in favor with the best people.

In these days of food substitutes we are looking for originality expressed in the manner we deal with them and to this short time we are already "snowed" under with new recipes which have been worked out by our efficient and loyal American housekeepers. She who serves her friends with food and entertainment within her means is bound to be respected by those worth while and the others don't count. To the average woman being a good old-fashioned dinner table, where each is given a share in the serving is a positive joy to the dinner-guest who has been "suffered" on eight-course dinners whose only recommendation is the employment they give our long-suffering physicians.

Let us then continue to entertain simply, within our means, going calmly on, envying nobody, setting a wholesome example which will be followed with gratitude by even the lavish and well-to-do.

One young housewife gave a plate of old-fashioned boiled dinner to her friends and they talked of it for days. Each hostess has some dishes in which she excels and she is wise who does not try experiments on her friends.

The only movable part of a new four-sifter is a flat coil of heavy wire which passes back and forth over the wire mesh as the implement is shaken.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER.

THE HENNERY.

"Cock-a-doodle-do!" said Mr. Rooster. "I'm glad I don't belong to a henner." "What in the world is a henner?" asked Mrs. White Hen. "Cock-a-doodle-do, cock-a-doodle-do," said Mr. Rooster again. "Well, that is the biggest joke I ever heard in all my life. It's quite the funniest question, and it's quite the funniest joke. In fact I could go on saying it was the biggest joke I had ever heard for ever and ever so long and I wouldn't make any mistake in saying so."

"You wouldn't be making the joke any bigger by saying so," remarked Mrs. White Hen. "Maybe not," said Mr. Rooster, "but I wouldn't be making it any smaller. Jokes don't grow smaller."

"Oh, don't they?" cackled Mrs. White Hen. "Of course they do! A joke will sometimes sound quite funny the first time it is heard, less funny the second time and not at all funny the third time."

"Oh, indeed?" said Mr. Rooster. "Yes," said Mrs. White Hen, "some jokes are very stupid after they have been told more than once, and again there is a joke, once in a great while, which can be thought about and thought about and still considered funny."

"That's the kind this is," said Mr. Rooster, and he laughed once again. "Then you'd better tell it to me," said Mrs. White Hen.

"I do believe I will," said Mr. Rooster. "Please promise me that it won't hurt your feelings."

"I promise," said Mrs. White Hen, "that I won't scold you if it does. How can a creature promise a thing won't hurt her feelings when she doesn't know what is going to be said?"

"I suppose that is too much to expect of any creature," said Mr. Rooster. "Maybe you'd rather not hear it?" "I would rather hear it," said Mrs. White Hen. And then she gave a long sigh, a very long sigh, such as we hear a hen make once in a while. "I feel sure," she said, "that it is going to be something dreadful. I don't believe I will think it's a joke. There are jokes which are jokes to some creatures and which aren't jokes to others."

"He laughed once again. The jokes may be on them and they don't like that. "Still I haven't had a chance to let you judge for yourself whether the joke is funny or not. Now I will tell it."

"Go ahead," cackled Mrs. White Hen. "Well," said Mr. Rooster, "the henner is a place for hens. And I wouldn't like to belong to a henner."

"What's the joke in that?" asked Mrs. White Hen. "Consider it a very rude speech and not in the least funny."

"I don't mean to be rude," said Mr. Rooster, "for I think all the Mrs. Hens are quite charming and I am always glad to pull up warts for them and give them goodies to eat. No one can say I'm not a nice, polite rooster."

"That is so," agreed Mrs. White Hen. "What I meant was that I wouldn't like to be without some of my rooster friends. No Mr. Rooster would like to be without other rooster playmates, any more than a boy would like to be without other boy playmates."

"Now that I see it your way I understand you didn't mean to be rude," said Mrs. White Hen. "But what was the joke? Where was it hidden?"

"Oh, the joke was that you didn't know what a henner was and you gave a hen!" said Mr. Rooster.

"Well, that was quite funny," said Mrs. White Hen. "That's about all I think of it now," said Mr. Rooster, "for it is as you say, a joke is not so much of a joke when thought about too much as a rule. But I didn't mean to be rude and I so hoped you would not misunderstand me."

"I'm not angry, nor am I hurt," cackled Mrs. White Hen pleasantly.

Up to Them. "What do you think of the Kaiser's latest peace terms?"

"I'm not thinking about the Kaiser's peace terms at all. I guess General Pershing and General Foch can do all that sort of thinking that's necessary."

PREPARING FOR SUPPLY OF ICE

Pond or Stream Should Be Ample Protected From All Contaminating Sources.

NOT NECESSARY TO BUILD PLACE TO LOCATE HOUSE WHERE THE WATER IS PURE. CLEAR

Protect the water supply from drainage from contaminating sources such as privies, barnyards and cesspools. Keep the ice surface clear of snow, as it retards the melting.

Mark off the surface into cakes of the desired size, being sure that the lines are rectangular. Cut out a strip of ice the width of the cake desired. Force this strip under the surface of the ice field, thus opening a channel to the landing. Saw off large cakes and float them to the landing, where they may be cut into smaller cakes.

Not Many Tools Required. For the average farm the only tools required are two saws, two pairs of tongs, two icehooks, one pointed bar, one straight bar for marking.

Where the cream only is to be cooled, allow at least one-half ton of ice per cow in estimating the size of an ice-house you need. For cooling milk, allow 1 1/2 tons per cow. These quantities should be enough to leave a margin for household use; but it is better to have too much than too little.

Location and Drainage. Locate the icehouse in a shady place near the dairy house, and where there is good natural drainage. Ice melted from the melting ice is not removed, melting will proceed at a more rapid rate. If the house is built on sloping porous ground, natural drainage should be sufficient; but if on a clay soil, artificial drainage should be provided.

Use plenty of insulation. If sawdust or mill shavings are used, see that they are dry. Commercial insulation is more efficient and durable than either but is more expensive. Wooden houses insulated with sawdust or mill shavings should be ventilated. Houses with commercial insulation and a cement finish need no ventilation.

The dairy division, United States department of agriculture, Washington, has further information about ice-houses and the use of ice on the dairy farm. Don't wait till the last minute, or you may be too late.

DO NOT MARKET AILING HOGS

Endangers Neighbors' Property and is Harmful to Swine Industry of United States.

The danger of shipping sick hogs to market is, of course, obvious. Farmers and others who knowingly endanger their neighbors' property through the marketing of diseased stock instead of properly disposing of such animals on the farm and disinfecting the premises are guilty of wrongdoing and should be restrained or punished by the proper authorities.

Such men retard the work that is being done by state and federal agencies to eradicate cholera and to make the swine industry a profitable investment.

Conservation is necessarily the basis of increased production, and until farmers are fully advised not to patronize infected localities, to shun stock yards having no federal or state supervision when purchasing stockers or sows, and to immunize against infectious and contagious diseases of live stock, particularly hog cholera, efforts at stimulating increased production of meat will be seriously hampered.

To buy hogs from infected districts, whether stock yards, feeding lots or farms, without the proper prevention of immunization and disinfection, not only hampers production, but establishes a likely chance of introducing hog cholera on clean farms and destroying the susceptible animals already on the premises.

Madison—Livestock production and dairying were discussed at a meeting here of agricultural workers and county agents. Dean H. L. Russell, field attorney, former food agent in Winnebago county, and Dr. O. H. Elston, state veterinarian were the speakers.

IDENTIFICATION AND USE OF BENT GRASS

Bulletin Tells How to Clear Up Confused Ideas of Plant.

Rhode Island Variety is Common in New England State and is Valuable for Lawns, Golf Courses and Other Purposes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Information that will enable gardeners and farmers to clear up confused ideas regarding the identification and use of the bent grasses commonly grown in the United States is given in Bulletin 602, "Identification and Use of Bent Grasses," published by the United States department of agriculture.

Common in the United States are the bent, colonial bent, velvet or brown bent, and carpet bent. Rhode Island bent, according to the bulletin, is a common grass in New England, and is valuable for lawns and golf courses. For making a fine turf it is excelled only by velvet and carpet bent, which are the best bent grasses for turfs.

John Europe, a velvet bent maker, the "best" bent turf, "carpet bent" the next best, and "velvet bent" the next best, while that produced by Rhode Island bent is a "poor" bent.

For turf making, the grasses are distinguished by their seed heads, which occur in commercial trade. The kinds of seed are illustrated, together with the principal varieties found with them. Misbranding in the trade occurs chiefly in the substitution of red-top seed for seed of the other grasses, but a study of seed characteristics, as given in the bulletin, will enable seedsmen and farmers to distinguish red-top seed from that of the other grasses, more especially for growing turf.

SUPPLY OF FEED FOR WINTER

Farmers Should Co-Operate in Purchase of Concentrates to Save Freight and Handling.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Dairy and live-stock farmers should lay in their supply of concentrated feeds, such as cutaneous meal, velvet bent, meaty peanut meal, etc., as early as possible. There is no indication that prices will be lower in the future, and freight concentrations will be less because of the winter advances. As far as possible, farmers should co-operate in the purchase of such feeds, so as to be able to ship in car lots. Considerable expense in freight and handling by middlemen may be saved by purchasing in this way.

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR COWS

Richest in Protein of All Common Feeds on Market—Should Be Given in a Mixture.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Cottonseed meal is the richest in protein of all the common cow feeds on the market. It is usually the cheapest source of protein available, but it does not have the best physiological effect upon the cow, often causing digestive troubles if fed in large quantities for long periods. At first it is advisable to start with one to two pounds a day, gradually increasing the quantity if no bad results are observed. In some herds in the North as high as five to six pounds a day are fed without bad results. In the South there seems to be no limit in this direction.

Cottonseed meal is a highly concentrated feed and should, if possible, be fed in a mixture with some bulky feed like bran. It can be fed to better advantage when the roughage contains an ample quantity of succulent feed. While its physiological effect in the North at least is not good as compared with most other cow feeds, its cheapness and the fact that in time the cows seem to overcome this tendency to digestive trouble from it are rapidly giving it great prominence as a cheap source of protein for dairy cows.

You'd hardly know Pete was chewing

Yet he says he gets more satisfaction out of his small chew of Gravely than he ever got out of a big chew of ordinary tobacco. "Real Gravely has a pure, rich taste," says Pete. "It's sweetened just enough, and one small chew holds its good taste so long. I figure that this class of tobacco costs me nothing extra—maybe less than I'd have to spend for ordinary plug."

It goes further—that's why you can get the good taste of this class of tobacco without extra cost.
