CHAPTER IX—Continued.

To my utter surprise he resumed his talk with me as the young man went away.

"You see all ways are north when you put this lodestone near the needle," he went on.

"I could not remember that I had ever been 'introduced' to anybody. I knew that people put their wits on exhibition and often flung down a 'snag' by way of demonstrating their fitness for the honor, when they were introduced in books.

"What shall I say when—when you introduce me?" "Oh, say anything you want to say," he answered with a look of amusement.

"I'm kind o' scared," I said. "You needn't be—he was once a poor boy just like you."

"It is an Honor to Meet You, Sir, and Thank You For the Right to Vote—When I am Old Enough."

"It is a pleasure to be here and a regret to call you back to Washington," said the president as they shook hands.

"I suppose that means an extra session," the senator answered. "First let me reassure you. I shall get away as soon as possible, for I know that a president is a heavy burden for one to have on his hands."

"Don't worry. I can get along with almost any kind of a human being, especially if he like pudding and milk as well as you do," said the senator, who then introduced me in these words:

"Mr. President, this is my young friend, Barton Baynes, of the neighborhood of Lickitysplit in the town of Ballybeen—a coming man of this country."

"Come on," was the playful remark of the president as he took my hand. "I shall be looking for you."

"I had carefully chosen my words, and I remember saying, with some dignity, like one in a story book, although with a trembling voice:

"Are you sure that the stock of the gun you saw was broken?" "Yes, sir—and I'm almost sure it was Amos that ran away with it."

"How do you know?" snapped Mr. Grimshaw. "This boy see it plain. It was a gun with a piece o' wood broke out o' the stock."

"Is that so?" was the brusque demand of the money lender as he turned to me. "Yes, sir," I answered.

"The boy lies," he snapped, and turning to my uncle added: "Yer mad 'cause I'm tryin' to make ye pay yer honest debts—ain't ye now?"

"Uncle Peabody, keeping his temper, shook his head and calmly said: 'No, I ain't anything ag'in' you or Amos, but it's got to be so that a man can travel the roads o' this town without gettin' his head blowed off.'"

"Mr. Dunkelberg turned to me and asked: 'Are you sure that the stock of the gun you saw was broken?'"

"I picked up a stone and threw it at him and it grazed the left side of his face, and the other night I saw the scar it made."

"Huh!—Liar!" he muttered. "I am not a liar," I declared with indignation, whereupon my aunt angrily stirred the fire in the stove and Uncle Peabody put his hand on my arm and said:

"No, Sir! Ye Can't Buy the Nail on My Little Finger or His With All Yer Money—Damn You!"

end and the chickens cackled and the old rooster clapped his wings and crowed with all the power of his lungs.

"I trembled with a fear I could not have defined. Mr. Grimshaw shuffled out of the door, his cane tapping the floor as if his arm had been stricken with palsy in a moment."

"Come on, Bart," Uncle Peabody called cheerfully, as he walked toward the barnyard. "Let's go an' git in them but'nuts."

"He paid no attention to our visitors—neither did my aunt, who followed us. The two men talked together a moment, unheeded their horses, got into their buggies and drove away."

"Wal, I'm surprised at Mr. Horace Dunkelberg tryin' to come it over us like that—ays! I be," said Aunt Deel. "Wal, I ain't," said Uncle Peabody.

FORGOT WHAT HE NEEDED

From the Republican, Mt. Gilead, Ohio: The editor had an interesting experience some time ago, when a young gentleman came to this office and asked for a copy of the Morrow County Republican. He scrutinized it carefully when a copy was handed him, and then said: "Now I know!" "What is it you are looking for," we inquired. "My wife sent me after a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and I forgot the name. I went to several stores and the clerks named over everything in the line on the shelf except 'Chamberlain's'. I'll try again, and I'll never go home without Chamberlain's Cough Remedy." The Republican would suggest to the proprietors of stores, that they post their clerks, and never let them substitute. Customers lose faith in stores where substituting is permitted, to say nothing of the injustice to makers of good goods and the disappointment of customers.
