ACTIVITY IN SCHLEISINGERVILLE

OFFICE BUILDING BEING ERECTED FOR LOCAL CONCERN

The long felt need of additional manufacturing industries in Schleisingerville has at last been realized in the organization of the Vim Tractor Company, which has purchased outright all the real estate, factory, foundry, buildings and all other assets of the Standard Machinery Company. That this new company will be successful is a foregone conclusion. No one denies that the farm tractor is another step in the line of progress equal to, or greater than the step from oxen to horses or the kerosene lamp to the electric light.

That the tractor will keep men on farms is a proven fact. One of the reasons for the young people leaving the farm for the city was the assurance that when the six o'clock whistle blew, the worker was all through with his work for the day. Whereas, on the farm, it was necessary to work far into the night caring for the horses that they might be fit for work on the morrow.

When horses were in the pasture, much time was lost in catching them and bringing them to the barn, while with a tractor it is only necessary to turn the "gas" and begin work. When the noonday rest arrives there are no horses to care for before caring for yourselves. Simply shut off the "gas" and have all the noonday rest for your self.

The Vim Tractor with a view to saving the farmer as much time and labor as possible, is so constructed and enclosed that it can be left in the field at night ready to start up again in the morning, without fear of any damage by the weather. All the working parts are enclosed in rain and dust proof coverings.

The plant of the Vim Tractor Company is adequate to manufacture at least one tractor a day at the present time, and with a new assembling plant contemplated to be erected, it can more than triple that output.

The new building for the general offices of the company is being erected on the main street of Schleisingerville.

The company will not have any stock brokers or fiscal agents to handle the sale of its stock, but a limited number of shares are to be offered to the public by the Board of Directors.

One of the conservative features of the Vim Tractor Company shares from an investment standpoint is the fact that the company will not permit the giving away of stock without full payment therefor. The enthusiasm already displayed and the large number of farmers that are availing themselves of the opportunity to buy stock in the company, indicates that the output of tractors will soon be greatly increased. According to an extract from a Washington, D. C., paper under date of April 19th, 1919 about 100,000 tractors were in use in the United States last year. It was there estimated that 90,000 tractors will be shipped to Europe during 1919, and believe that it would be several years before the production of tractors could supply the demand.

NOW IS THE TIME TO PREPARE

After exhaustive examination into the efficiency of the protection properties of lightning rods the Fire Marshall of Ohio as a war measure has issued an order for the protection of various classes of manufacturing and commercial establishments with lightning rods. This includes warehouses, flour mills, grain elevators, wholesale provision and grocery companies, cold storage plants, canning factories, grain, hay and provision storage, bakeries and food repositories, the purpose being to protect the food supply from serious fires. This is a protection measure and all citizens of this vicinity are called upon to take advantage of a known agency that will safeguard the resources as much as needed at this time and in the future by using every means to prevent loss of supplies needed to supply those that have gone forth to uphold the honor of the Country.

The farmer is among those upon whom the state and federal government must depend to protect his own grain supplies, and we urge all farmers to at once equip their barns and storehouses with lightning rods, as reports show that over fifty per cent more barns are destroyed by lightning than all other buildings.

The protection of foodstuffs is vitally necessary. President Wilson has but recently appealed to all farmers to produce more than ever, and it is essential that production should be protected. As the barn is a storage fort in this war it should be guarded. We appeal to all farmers to at once equip their buildings with this certain protective means. Do it now, as the spring and summer thunder storms are destructive. It is also a question of economy to do so this time, before the prices advance further. To get protection and prevent loss, rod now!

Doctors prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine, manufactured by F. J. ## OLDEST COUNTY RESIDENT DIES

On Wednesday, May 18, 1919, one of the oldest and most esteemed residents of the county passed away in death at the home of his son Fred in the town of Wayne. Cause of death being old age. Fredolin Baumgartner had passed the 97th milestone of his life when he was mustered out of life's service. He was born on Jan. 6, 1822 in Baden, Germany, where he was later married to Miss Barbara Brugger.

In 1846 he immigrated to America and settled in the town of Jackson, Washington county. In 1847 his wife died, leaving her husband and three small children to mourn her demise. Two years later he was again married to Mrs. Kathryn Kehrein, shortly after this marriage the family moved to the town of Wayne where he resided until his death. Two sons were born of this union. His second wife died in 1874. Of the five children born, only one Fred on the homestead survives him. He also leaves 18 grand children, 4 great children and five great-great grand children. Mr. Baumgartner was a man well liked by all his neighbors and friends, he was honest and upright in all his dealings, ready to help those in time of need, and a devoted christian. He was a strong, robust man, one who enjoyed most perfect health, during the course of his long life he never was sick one day until last March when he had the misfortune of falling and injuring himself to such an extent that he was forced to take to his bed where he remained until the final summons came. The funeral was held on Wednesday with services in St. Paul's church. Rev. Weber officiated. Burial took place in the congregation's cemetery.

BERNARD HAUFSCCHILD LAID AT REST

The funeral of Bernard Haufschchild, which was largely attended, was held last Sunday afternoon at one o'clock from the family residence with services in the Ev. Lutheran St. Lucas church. Rev. Greve officiated and interment was made in the congregation's cemetery. Mr. Haufschchild had been in ill health for over a year and kept growing weaker and weaker until he finally succumbed to a stroke of paralysis last week Thursday afternoon. He was born on March 3, 1855, in the town of Kewaskum, where he lived until the time of his death. On February 22, 1876, he was married to Miss Johanna Wolf, who preceded him in death in 1885. Three children were born of this union. On July 8, 1888, he was again married to Otilie Kroeske, who together with the following children survive: Bernardina (Mrs. August Jockes) of Hartford; Anna (Mrs. Ad. Hoppe) of Milwaukee and Henry and Arthur at home. Besides these he leaves one sister, Mrs. H. A. Robinson of Milwaukee and one brother Henry of Jackson, Wis.

EXPRESSION OF THANKS

The undersigned desire to express their heartfelt thanks to the many friends and neighbors for their kind sympathy and assistance rendered us in our recent bereavement, the illness, death and burial of our beloved husband and father, Bernard Haufschchild, to the pall bearers, Rev. Greve for his consoling words of comfort, for the floral tributes and to all those who showed their respect for the departed by attending the funeral.

SAYS STRAWBERRY BASS ARE BEGINNING TO BITE

Jacob Gonting of Gonting's Grove Big Cedar Lake, wishes to advise his many fishermen friends through The Times that strawberry bass are beginning to bite fine at the lake. There being no closed season on this species of the finny tribe, they may be caught at all times. Mr. Gonting is always very generous in furnishing fishermen with bait. He also has a large number of fishing outfits on hand and an ample supply of boats to take care of all who might wish to come out and try their luck.—Hartford Times.

MORE OVERSEAS MEN ARRIVE HOME

Three more of Kewaskum's veterans have returned home, namely Fred Schaefer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schaefer, Sr., and Alfred and John Meinecke, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Meinecke, Sr., who were members of the Rainbow Division.

Fred Schaefer enlisted on May 15, 1917, at Milwaukee in the 1st Wisconsin Cavalry, and left for Camp Douglas on July 15th. After several months training here he left for Waco, Texas, where he became a member of the 32nd Division, and where the cavalry was changed to the 120th Field Artillery. While in Texas, Fred broke his ankle as the result of being thrown from a horse. In March 1918 he left for overseas duty, and landed at Liverpool, England March 12th, 1918, from here he went to Waterloo then to Camp Coetandan, France. In May 1918, he entered the front lines at the Alsace, where he took part in the great drive that resulted in the first American artillery setting foot on German soil. From here he was transferred to the Marne, where the artillery relieved the 3rd division, and where they captured Fismes and advanced a total of 19 kilometers, capturing 97 prisoners and losing eight men. On August 28, 1918 he entered the front lines at Soissons as part of General Mangin's 10th Army, and were relieved on September 2nd by the 2nd Moroccan division, after capturing Juvigny and advancing a depth of 5 1/2 kilometers. On September 10 they arrived at Joinville for a period of four days rest, when the brigade was detached from the 32nd division and assigned to the Army of Artillery from which time on they supported the 32nd division in all its engagements except in the operations east of Meuse. They supported the 57th Brigade 79th Division and the 3rd Division at Argonne, from September 2nd to 6th. After this engagement the artillery went on a seven day and night hike to support the 89th Division from October 20th to the day the armistice was signed. The last battle was fought under severe difficulties, the artillery was forced to pull their big guns by hand on account of having lost nearly all of their horses, 83 out of 860 of the animals having been left. After the signing of the armistice the artillery was assigned to the 88th Division at Gonre Corq and later were transferred back to the 32nd Division. On May 4th, 1919 he landed at Boston, from where he was soon afterwards transferred to Camp Grant where he was mustered out of service on Friday, May 16, 1919.

MEMORIAL DAY

They march once more, but not as when they sought the battle fray, A thinning line of gallant men Whose thoughts are far away; Their white locks float upon the breeze, Their step is short and slow, But in their eyes the watcher sees The fire of long ago.

Under the standard, bullet-torn, Behind the muffled drum, In uniforms in the forest worn, Adown the street they come; Hark! Ere long 'twill be too late To honor thus the Blue, These are the men who grimly wait To bear the last tattoo.

Bring chaplets for the men who sleep Beneath the somber pines— The brave who in the forest deep Formed once the battle lines; No clarion notes arouse them now, No foes around them lie, The grass is waving o'er each brow Beneath the Union's sky.

For them no drums of battle beat Advance or overthrow, For them no bugles sound retreat, No dreams of midnight foe; Among the cedars and the pines, Beside the river's flow, They gently camp in sacred lines Who battled long ago.

Columbia weaves a wreath of fame, Her hands the blossoms spread, She knows her sons, she calls by name Her living and her dead; Beneath the banner of the stars, In Solitude's array, She crowns her heroes of the wars On loved Memorial Day.

MEMORIAL DAY AGAIN

Once More the Nation Honors Those Who Died That Their Country Might Forever Live.

THE gray and dwindling ranks of the Grand Army of the Republic march once more to lay flowers on the graves of those who died that the nation might live, and to keep alive in youthful hearts the fires of patriotism which burned so brightly in 1861. In view of the hurrying commercial age in which we live, who shall say that this latter service of these grizzled veterans is less important than the one which they performed in the morning of life?

It is a mournful thing to watch the inevitable depletion of their ranks, caused by the slow, unending procession of the years. In the last year for which figures are available the Grand Army lost by death 11,338 members—four times as many as were known to have been killed in the Union army at the battle of Gettysburg. Yet there is a consolation which should not be forgotten. These veterans fought the most successful war the world has ever known. Wars which change the allegiance of provinces or add to or subtract from the dominions of princes are common enough. Of wars which at once liberated a race and saved a nation there has been but one. That unique distinction attaches to the four years' strife in which these veterans bore their part, and the glory of that unprecedented achievement glides their graying hair.

MEMORIAM.

A year, a month, Memorial day, Like tinted snow the bloom of May, Crowned Boys in Blue, Sweet flowers, types of life and death, Bathed by Memory's living breath, Their work renew.

While Love and Duty, linked by tears, Knock in the name of yester years On Memory's door, To offer with the scent of youth Their tributes to a patriot truth For evermore.

So years creep on—a Nation's fame Genuis each loyal sleeper's name In faintest hue, And our Flag shall ever wave Requisite o'er each Patriot's grave— The Boys in Blue

BATTLE TIDE TURNED

At Gettysburg the High Hopes of the Confederacy for Victory in Struggle Were Ended.

FIFTY-SIX years ago, at dawn, 70,000 men in gray and 90,000 men in blue were hastening toward a little hamlet in southern Pennsylvania, fiercely seeking to shed each other's blood. Battle-ent banners proclaiming past valor fluttered along their ranks, and cannon rumbled and sabers and bayonets flashed through the hill passes as the hurrying hosts were arrayed by their generals for the coming battle.

The Confederates under General Lee had invaded Pennsylvania from the south, and just one week before, June 22, 1863, Lee had sent 20,000 men yet farther north to capture Harrisburg. They expected that the close of July would find them in possession of Philadelphia. But just as their advance cavalry were pointing their guns across the Susquehanna Lee learned that the Army of the Potomac, under Maj. Gen. George G. Meade, had started from Harper's Ferry in pursuit, and Lee ordered his troops in motion back toward Gettysburg, where twelve turnpike roads concentrated.

General Meade, hurrying his corps northward, came to the outskirts of Gettysburg the night of June 30 with his advance cavalry.

At daybreak July 1 General Buford, leading Meade's cavalry, clashed with General Heth's Hill's Confederate corps, and one of the greatest battles of all time was on. All day the fight raged, as the troops composing the two armies were hurled forward from distant points to take part. At nightfall the Confederates had driven the Union men back from the ground held by them in the morning, on through the streets of Gettysburg, and finally to a line of battle on Cemetery hill and ridge southeast of the town, and during the night the commanders of both armies filled up gaps in their lines and strengthened their positions for the inevitable battle of the morning.

All the second day Lee hurled his brigades against Meade's right and left flanks. Desperate fighting in the celebrated wheat field; desperate fighting in the famous peach orchard; desperate fighting in the Devil's den. Hand-to-hand fighting on Culp's hill, Round Top and Little Round Top. When dark came the Confederates had jammed the Union force further back on their line of battle. They had gained ground, but the ground had only served to make the federal position more compact.

On the third and last day came Lee's final attempt to win, a mighty cannonading of 130 guns at one o'clock in the afternoon hurling death into the Union forces on Cemetery ridge. Then, at 2:30 in the afternoon, an order from Lee, a nod of the head from General Longstreet, for he did not sanction the charge, and away went General Pickett in that most famous charge from the Confederate position on Seminary ridge to the Union center on Cemetery ridge, nearly a mile apart.

That charge made great history. After leading his men to the Union line and piercing it, Pickett was beaten back. The point pierced was a stone wall, known to this day as the Bloody Angle, or "High Water Mark" of the Confederacy.

Lee, from Seminary ridge, saw the charge was a failure and the battle lost. He ordered a retreat and the Army of Northern Virginia departed from the scene of its three-day valorous struggle, but still with sufficient fighting strength and spirit left to continue the conflict for nearly two years longer.

That is the Battle of Gettysburg in a nutshell.

Old Tools of War.

The Grand army veteran will live forever in song and story, but the weapon with which he fought his way to immortality is so much junk today. Carbine, musket and rifle have given way to machine guns, and the clash of sabers, man to man, has been replaced by the purr of long-distance shells. Of the firearms that fill countless racks and cases in the museum at Washington the veteran will find duplicates, lock, stock and barrel, of every weapon he carried in the Civil war, though each has retired from active service to serve as exhibits in the nation's armories of time.

But the flag is still in style. And it is the flag that counts.

General Thomas Great Soldier.

"Old Pap Thomas," as his soldiers lovingly called him, has received full credit for his services in the terrific battle of Chickamauga. He has never been given due recognition for his other work, nor assigned a proper place in the hall of fame of the nation he helped to save.

He was a Virginian by birth, and therefore his loyalty at the beginning of the war was subject to unjust though not unnatural suspicion. He declined to supersede General Grant, and thereby lost his chance to win supreme command in the West. The one event was a misfortune; the other a chivalry too fine to be appreciated in the hurry and stress of war.

Badger State Happenings

Fond du Lac—Unable to reach any kind of an agreement after having been out forty-one hours, the jury trying Raleigh A. Ives for the slaying of Herbert P. Lochr was discharged by Judge Chester A. Fowler. During the time they were out the twelve men devoted more than 20 hours to actual deliberation on the case. The last vote taken by the jurors stood seven for a third degree manslaughter verdict and five for a fourth degree manslaughter verdict. Even though the maximum difference between the penalties on the findings is but two years imprisonment both sides refused to compromise. The first ballot taken by the jury was on the question of guilt or innocence and stood eight for a verdict of guilty and four for acquittal. After several hours all but one man stood for conviction, and on the second day he was brought over to support fourth degree manslaughter verdict. Court officials stated that Ives would be tried again at the fall term of court, probably in November. It was thought that it might be necessary to take the case into another county for trial at that time, owing to the wide publicity the affair has received here. Attorneys think there are few men in this county who would now qualify for jury services. Ives will continue to have his liberty under bail of $30,000.

Madison—The Wisconsin hay crop will total approximately 5,369,000 tons in 1919, according to the estimate of Joseph A. Becker of the Wisconsin cooperative crop reporting service (United States bureau of crop estimates and Wisconsin state department of agriculture). The production in 1918 was 3,950,000 tons. The acreage of tame hay is estimated to be 2,737,000, compared to 2,582,000 last year, an increase of 6 per cent. The acreage of wild hay is estimated to be the same as last year, 318,000. More than half of the sum allotted the Appleton district has been pledged. The district is expected to raise $252,500 for the fund. Eight churches have reported oversubscriptions.

Kewaunee—Sixteen saloons in Kewaunee will close on enforcement of national prohibition, July 1. Some will reopen as soft drink parlors and restaurants. The best inheritance any parent can possibly give a child is a good education. This is something that nobody can take away and something which will be a joy forever, for we believe that what we acquire here we will use hereafter.

WHAT TO EAT.

There are any number of kinds and flavors of gelatine desserts on the market which, by the addition of boiling water, are ready, when cold, to serve with cream and sugar. These desserts are good, easy to prepare, and easy of digestion, qualifications which make them popular; but one tires of things too easy and unvaried.

Here is a dessert, very dainty and rich, which will be good to serve the "grown-ups" who have good digestion: Frangipan Pie.—Roll out very thin a rich pastry and cut it in rounds, using a plain tin for a marker. Bake three of these cakes, and put them together with a filling of crushed strawberries and cream, covering the top with the berries and sweetened whipped cream. Cut in pie-shaped pieces.

Stewed Lettuce.—This is a dish not sufficiently used to become common. When one is tired of serving the fresh lettuce, steam it until tender, and serve as a greens, with butter, salt, pepper and a dash of vinegar, if liked. Cucumbers are good cooked. Peel and cook until tender in boiling water or over steam, then serve with a drawn butter sauce. Onion juice may be added for variety of flavor.

Canterbury Chicken.—Cook together three and one-half tablespoons of butter and one tablespoonful of finely chopped onion (when the onion is yellow, add one tablespoonful of cornstarch) and pour over one and one-half cups of chicken stock. Bring to the boiling point and simmer for ten minutes, add one-half tablespoonful of lemon juice, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika and one and one-half cups of chopped cooked chicken. Serve very hot, garnished with toast points and parsley.

Fillets of Beef With Bananas.—Cook the fillets cut one and a quarter inch thick, and arrange on a hot platter with the liquor from the pan poured over them. Cook quartered bananas in a little butter until well cooked, then place these quarters on the fillets and serve.

POPULAR DISHES.

The busy housewife with but one pair of hands at her command must do away with frills in cooking, no matter how much she may enjoy them. A few minutes spent in arranging and garnishing a dish, however, is never wasted effort.

Carrot Pudding.—Take one cupful of grated carrot, one cupful of grated potato, one egg, one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of shortening, one-half cupful of raisins, one teaspoonful of soda and one cupful of flour. Steam one hour.

Drop Doughnuts.—Take one-half cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of milk, one and one-half cups of flour sifted with one teaspoonful of baking powder, one egg, a little salt, ginger and grated lemon rind. Beat the egg white stiff, then add the sugar gradually, then add the beaten yolk, lemon rind, salt and ginger and milk with the flour. Drop from a teaspoon into hot fat and fry brown. Roll in powdered sugar.

Chocolate Cookies.—Cream half a cupful of shortening with one cupful of sugar, one egg. Add one-half cupful of sour milk with one-half teaspoonful of soda, two squares of chocolate melted over hot water and one and one-half cups of flour. A half cupful of nuts may be added if desired. Cover with a frosting, using one whole egg beaten, adding three cupfuls of confectioners' sugar and three tablespoonfuls of cream. This frosting will keep for some time. Put on the cookies when they are nearly cold.

Sour Cream Pie.—Mix together one cupful of chopped raisins, one cupful of sugar, one cupful of sour cream and one egg well beaten, one-half a teaspoonful each of cinnamon, nutmeg and salt, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of cloves and a teaspoonful of vinegar. Bake this in two crusts.

Cabbage Salad.—Shred very fine one small firm head of cabbage, add half a cupful of chopped almonds that have been blanched, four or five ripe bananas finely cut, mixed with a cupful or more of thick sour cream. Season with salt, red pepper and paprika and add a dash of vinegar, if it is not sufficiently acid.

Mock Rabbit.—Take a pound each of corned beef and veal, two onions and a green pepper; put all through the meat chopper, add three eggs and crumbs to make a loaf. Place in a baking pan with strips of bacon on top; bake three-quarters of an hour.

Asparagus Salad.—Tie a bunch of asparagus tips together and steam until tender. Cut rings of red peppers and thrust the tips through the rings. Serve on lettuce leaves with a spoonful of thick salad dressing.

HOW SOME MEN GET RICH

Probably in Years to Come This Trader Will Boast of His Great Financial Ability.

"Some years ago," says an old trader, "I was strolling by the ticker in a dull and reactionary market. An acquaintance came up and asked me what to buy. At the time I was absolutely bearish and could see nothing good on the list. It was early afternoon and just then the time came on the tape, '1 p. m.' So, with a laugh, I turned away, remarking, 'I guess P. M.'s as good as anything.'"

"Some months later I was accosted in the street by the same man, who greeted me with the greatest cordiality. 'That was some tip you gave me,' he said. 'I plunged on it and cleaned up a whole lot of coin.'"

"Tip?" I said. "When did I ever give you a tip?"

"Sure," he replied. "You said to buy Pacific Mail and I bought all I could carry."

Truly, the Mother Pays!

Here is an account from a Paris paper of what was said at his trial by the mother of Cortin, the young anarchist who shot Clemenceau: "Cortin's mother stops. She wants to speak, but tears choke her words. She makes an effort and one hears a voice that is not his, but a sob; 'I did not come to defend him. But I don't want that they should call him unpatriotic. He was so sad to see all those soldiers die. He wept when he spoke to me about all those boys dying with the word "mother" on their lips. He wanted to enlist. It's a pity they did not accept him. He was brave. They might have given him dangerous errands, and at least he would be dead by now—' But she hasn't strength to finish what she wants to say. She turns back and collapses on a bench, sobbing."

Business Viewpoint. "What do you think about the possibility of Mars being inhabited?" "I've never given the matter much thought," answered the practical business man.

"But the idea is interesting." "Maybe so, but not to me. Even if there were people on Mars and we could get there, I don't think it would be a good market for our product. I manufacture corsets, sir."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

More Than a Page. A very stout, massive man obtained an interview with a celebrity and asked for a job.

"Ah, yes," said the celebrity; "but I didn't recognize you; you see, you've become a volume."—London Answers.

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Nitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as Nitro-Phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, Nitro-Phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight, weakness with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which are nearly always accompanied by excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the flush of perfect health. CAUTION:—Although Nitro-Phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

The Pipeless Furnace —PLUS

A Customer Wrote to Us Lately, as Follows:

"I want you to make clear to me how I am going to heat my bathroom with your pipeless furnace, when the room is closed. I am heating it now with an oil stove, but when I put in a furnace next fall, I expect it, at least, to warm the bathroom; for the others, a pipeless will be all right. I like your furnace, but you will have to show me how, and what it will cost me, to get what I want, or there will be nothing doing."

We Answered This Question Before It Was Asked by designing and patenting an attachment so any detached room may be heated from a pipeless furnace. This consists of a separate heating and return-air compartment in the furnace, which may be connected by a separate pipe, to the detached room.

A damper, operated from the front of the furnace, throws the heat into the detached room, or allows it to come thru the main central register, as may be desired. Because of this valuable improvement in the pipeless furnaces, we are sending our heaters to New England, and other distant sections, where distance might be supposed to limit the sale of our heaters.

The Hess Welded Steel Pipeless Furnace

distributes heat to every corner of the house, draws off the cold air from the floors, and humidifies the air by means of an ample evaporation arrangement. It burns any fuel, and produces as much heat from soft coal as from anthracite. Its seams are riveted and welded, by melting the plates together, and it is absolutely and everlasting as tight as a seamless glass bottle.

We sell for cash, Liberty Bonds (at market value), or in easy monthly payments. Send us a sketch of your house and let us show you how we would plan the heating for it, and what our equipment would cost.

CAUSE OF HEADACHE.

By knowing the cause, a disease may often be avoided. This is particularly true of headache. The most common cause of headache is a disordered stomach or constipation, which may be corrected by taking a few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets. Try it. Many others have obtained permanent relief by taking these Tablets. They are easy to take and mild and gentle in effect.

SURGERY UNPOPULAR AMONG SUFFERERS

Operations Often Needlessly Performed—Too Hasty With Knife.

Most people are afraid of the knife and prefer an early death, rather than undergo the ordeal of an operation. That too many needless operations are performed is the claim of Dr. Karass. The doctor never uses the knife and has proven time and again that such diseases as Gout, Gall Stones, Chronic Appendicitis, Piles, Rupture, Tumors and special diseases of Women, could be cured without operation. Dr. Karass also treats diseases of the heart, lungs, stomach, liver, kidneys, nerves, brain, skin, including rheumatism, sciatica, epilepsy, paralysis, catarrh, asthma, deafness, head noises, weak lungs, stomach trouble, bloating and special diseases. The doctor offers free examination to all who call. If after this thorough examination the doctor finds he can cure you he will tell you so, and if he cannot cure you he will refuse to treat you. No incurable cases accepted for treatment; still there are many sufferers who have been pronounced incurable by others who respond quickly to the treatment as used by the doctor.

Dr. Karass will be in his office at the Republican House, Kewaskum, Wis., on Wednesday, June 4th, and every Wednesday thereafter. Hours 9 A. M. to 2 P. M.

DO YOU ENJOY LIFE?

A man in good physical condition is almost certain to enjoy life, while the bilious and dyspeptic are despondent. Do not enjoy their meals and feel miserable a good share of the time. This ill feeling is nearly always unnecessary. A few doses of Chamberlain's Tablets to tone up the stomach, improve the digestion and regulate the bowels is all that is needed. Try it.

PRESIDENT SENDS SHORT MESSAGE FROM EUROPE

Address to Congress Is Read by Regular Reading Clerk.

EXPLAINS HIS STAY ABROAD

Imperative Duty Makes Absence of Chief Executive Necessary—Subject of Labor Unrest Dealt With Exhaustively—Suggestions for Domestic Legislation.

Washington, May 20.—For the first time in history a message from the president of the United States, cabled from Europe, was read to the congress today. It was as follows:

"Gentlemen of the Congress: I deeply regret my inability to be present at the opening of the extraordinary session of the congress. It still seems to be my duty to take part in the counsel of the peace conference and contribute what I can to the solution of the innumerable questions to whose settlement it has had to address itself; for they are questions which affect the peace of the whole world and from them, therefore, the United States cannot stand apart. I deemed it my duty to call the congress together at this time because it was not wise to postpone longer the provisions which must be made for the support of the government. Many of the appropriations which are absolutely necessary for the maintenance of the government and the fulfillment of its varied obligations for the fiscal year 1919-1920 have not yet been made; the end of the present fiscal year is at hand; and action upon these appropriations can no longer be prudently delayed. It is necessary, therefore, that I should immediately call your attention to this critical need. It is hardly necessary for me to urge that it may receive your prompt attention.

"I shall take the liberty of addressing you on my return on the subjects which have most engrossed our attention during those anxious months, since the armistice of last November was signed, the international settlements which must form the subject matter of the present treaties of peace and of our national action in the immediate future. It would be premature to discuss them or to express a judgment about them before they are brought to their complete formulation by the agreements which are now being sought at the table of the conference. I shall hope to lay them before you in their many aspects so soon as arrangements have been reached.

Rights of the Worker.

"The question which stands at the front of all others in every country amidst the present great awakening is the question of labor; and perhaps I can speak of it with as great advantage while engrossed in the consideration of interests which affect all countries alike as I could at home and amidst the interests which naturally most affect my thought, because they are the interests of our own people.

"By the question of labor I do not mean the question of efficient industrial production, the question of how labor is to be obtained and made effective in the great process of sustaining populations and winning success amidst commercial and industrial rivalries. I mean that much greater and more vital question, how are the men and women who do the daily labor of the world to obtain progressive improvement in the conditions of their labor, to be made happier, and to be served better by the communities and the industries which their labor sustains and advances? How are they to be given their right advantage as citizens and human beings?

"We cannot go any further in our present direction. We have already gone too far. We cannot live our right life as a nation or achieve our proper success as an industrial community if capital and labor are to continue to be antagonistic instead of being partners. If they are to continue to distrust one another and contrive how they can get the better of one another, or what perhaps amounts to the same thing, calculate by what form and degree of coercion they can manage to extort on the one hand work enough to make enterprise profitable, on the other justice and fair treatment enough to make life tolerable. That bad road has turned out a blind alley. It is no thoroughfare to real prosperity. We must find another, leading in another direction and to a very different destination. It must lead not merely to accommodation, but also to a genuine co-operation and partnership based upon a real community of interest and participation in control.

"There is now in fact a real community of interest between capital and labor, but it has never been made evident in action. It can be made operative and manifest only on a new organization of industry. The genius of our business men and the sound, practical sense of our workers can certainly work such a partnership out when once they realize exactly what it is that they seek, and sincerely adopt a common purpose with regard to it.

"Labor legislation lies, of course, chiefly with the states; but the new spirit and method of organization which must be effected are not to be brought by legislation so much as by the common counsel and voluntary co-operation of capitalist, manager and workman. Legislation can go only a very little way in commanding what shall be done. The organization of industry is a matter of corporate and individual initiative and of practical business arrangement. Those who really desire a new relationship between capital and labor can readily find a way to bring it about; and perhaps federal legislation can help more than state legislation could.

Industrial Democratization.

"The object of all reform in this essential matter must be the genuine democratization of industry, based upon a full recognition of the right of those who work, in whatever rank, to participate in some organic way in every decision which directly affects their welfare or the part they are to play in industry. Some positive legislation is practicable. The congress has already shown the way to one reform which should be world-wide, by establishing the eight-hour day as the standard day in every field of labor over which it can exercise control. It has sought to find the way to prevent child labor and will, I hope and believe, presently find it. It has served the whole country by leading the way in developing the means of preserving and safeguarding life and health in dangerous industries. It can now help in the difficult task of giving a new form and spirit to industrial organization by co-ordinating the several agencies of conciliation and adjustment which have been brought into existence by the difficulties and mistaken policies of the present management of industry, and by setting up and developing new federal agencies of advice and information which may serve as a clearing house for the best experience and best thought on this great matter, upon which every thinking man must be aware that the future development of society directly depends. Agencies of international counsel and suggestion are presently to be created in connection with the league of nations in this very field; but it is national action and the enlightened policy of individuals, corporations and societies within each nation that must bring about the actual reforms. The members of the committee on labor in the two houses will hardly need suggestions from me as to what means they shall seek to make the federal government the agent of the whole nation in pointing out, and if need be, guiding the process of reorganization and reform.

Duty to Returning Soldiers.

"I am sure that it is not necessary for me to remind that there is one immediate and very practical question of labor that we should meet in the most liberal spirit. We must see to it that our returning soldiers are assisted in every practicable way to find the places for which they are fitted in the daily work of this country. This can be done by developing and maintaining upon an adequate scale the admirable organization created by the department of labor for placing men seeking work; and it can also be done, in at least one very great field, by creating new opportunities for individual enterprise. The secretary of the interior has pointed out the way by which returning soldiers may be helped to find and take up land in the hitherto undeveloped regions of the country which the federal government has already prepared, or can readily prepare for cultivation and also on many of the cut-over or neglected areas which lie within the limits of the older states; and I once more take the liberty of recommending very urgently that his plans shall receive the immediate and substantial support of the congress.

"Peculiar and very stimulating conditions await our commerce and industrial enterprise in the immediate future. Unusual opportunities will present themselves to our merchants and producers in foreign markets, and large fields for profitable investment will be opened to our free capital. But it is not only of that that I am thinking; it is not chiefly of that that I am thinking. Many great industries prostrated by the war wait to be rehabilitated, in many parts of the world where what will be lacking is not brains or willing hands or organizing capacity or experienced skill but machinery and raw materials and capital. I believe that our business men, our merchants, our manufacturers, and our capitalists will have the vision to see that prosperity in one part of the world ministers to prosperity everywhere; that there is in a very true sense a solidarity of interest throughout the world of enterprise, and that our dealings with the countries that have need of our products and our money will teach them to deem us more than ever friends whose necessities we seek in the right way to serve.

Future Commerce.

"Our new merchant ships, which have in some quarters been feared as destructive rivals, may prove helpful rivals, rather, and common servants very much needed and welcome. Our great shipyards, new and old, will be so opened to the use of the world that they will prove immensely serviceable to every maritime people in restoring, much more rapidly than would otherwise have been possible, the tonnage wantonly destroyed in the war. I have only to suggest that there are many points at which we can facilitate American enterprise in foreign trade by opportune legislation and make it easy for American merchant ships where they will be well-comed as friends rather than as dreaded antagonists. America has a great and honorable service to perform in bringing the commercial and industrial undertakings of the world back to their old scope and swing again, and putting a solid structure of credit under them. Our legislation should be friendly to such plans and purposes.

"And credit and enterprise alike will be quickened by timely and helpful legislation with regard to taxation. I hope that the congress will find it possible to undertake an early reconsideration of federal taxes, in order to make our system of taxation more simple and easy of administration and the taxes themselves as little burdensome as they can be made and yet suffice to support the government and meet all its obligations. The figures to which these obligations have arisen are very great indeed, but they are not so great as to make it difficult for the nation to meet them, and meet them, perhaps, in a single generation, by taxes which will neither crush nor discourage. They are not so great as the immense sums we have had to borrow, added to the immense sums we have had to raise by taxation, would seem to indicate; for a very large proportion of these sums were raised in order that they might be loaned to the governments with which we were associated in the war, and those loans will, of course, constitute assets, not liabilities and will not have to be taken care of by our tax-payers.

Equitable Taxation.

"The main thing we shall have to care for is that our taxation shall rest as lightly as possible on the productive resources of the country; that its rates shall be stable, and that it shall be constant in its revenue-yielding power. We have found the main sources from which it must be drawn. I take it for granted that its mainstays will henceforth be the income tax, the excess profits tax and the estate tax. All these can be so adjusted to yield constant and adequate returns and yet not constitute a too grievous burden on the taxpayer. A revision of the income tax has already been provided for by the act of 1918, but I think you will find that further changes can be made to advantage both in the rates of the tax and in the method of its collection. The excess profits tax need not long be maintained at the rates which were necessary while the enormous expense of the war had to be borne; but it should be made the basis of a permanent system which will reach undue profits without discouraging the enterprise and activity of our business men. The tax on inheritances ought, no doubt, to be reconsidered in its relation to the fiscal systems of the several states, but it certainly ought to remain a permanent part of the fiscal system of the federal government also.

"Many of the minor taxes provided for in the revenue legislation of 1917 and 1918, though no doubt made necessary by the pressing necessities of the war time, can hardly find sufficient justification under the easier circumstances of peace, and can now happily be got rid of. Among these, I hope you will agree, are the excises upon various manufactures and the taxes upon retail sales. They are unequal in the incidence on different industries and on different individuals. Their collection is difficult and expensive. Those which are levied upon articles sold at retail are largely evaded by the readjustment of retail prices. On the other hand, I should assume that it is expedient to maintain a considerable range of indirect taxes; and the fact that alcoholic liquors will presently no longer afford a source of revenue by taxation makes it the more necessary that the field should be carefully restudied in order that equivalent sources of revenue may be found which it will be legitimate, and not burdensome, to draw upon. But you have at hand in the treasury department many experts who can advise you upon the matters much better than I can. I can only suggest the lines of a permanent and workable system, and the placing of the taxes where they will least hamper the life of the people.

"There is, fortunately, no occasion for undertaking in the immediate future, any general revision of our system of import duties. No serious danger of foreign competition now threatens American industries. Our country has emerged from the war less disturbed and less weakened than any of the European countries which are our competitors in manufacture. So far from there being any danger or need of accentuated foreign competition, it is likely that the conditions of the next few years will greatly facilitate the marketing of American manufactures abroad. Least of all should we depart from the policy adopted in the tariff act of 1913, of permitting the free entry into the United States of the raw materials needed to supplement and enrich our own abundant supplies.

"Nevertheless, there are parts of our tariff system which need prompt attention. The experiences of the war have made it plain that in some cases too great reliance on foreign supply is dangerous, and that in determining certain parts of our tariff policy domestic considerations must be borne in mind which are political as well as economic. Among the industries to which special consideration should be given is that of the manufacture of dyestuffs and related chemicals. Our complete dependence upon German supplies before the war made the interruption of trade a cause of exceptional economic disturbance. The close relation between the manufacturer of dyestuffs, on the one hand, and of explosives and poisonous gases, on the other, moreover, has given the industry an exceptional significance and value. Although the United States will gladly and unhesitatingly join in the progress of international disarmament, it will, nevertheless, be a policy of obvious prudence to make certain of the successful maintenance of many strong and well-equipped chemical plants. The German chemical industry, with which we will be brought into competition, was and may well be again, a thoroughly knit monopoly capable of exercising competition of a peculiarly insidious and dangerous kind.

"The United States should, moreover, have the means of properly protecting itself whenever our trade is discriminated against by foreign nations, in order that we may be assured of that equality of treatment which we hope to accord and to promote the world over. Our tariff laws as they now stand provide no weapon of retaliation in case other governments should enact legislation unequal in its bearing on our products as compared with the products of other countries. Though we are as far as possible from desiring to enter upon any course of retaliation, we must frankly face the fact that hostile legislation by other nations is not beyond the range of possibility, and that it may have to be met by counter-legislation. This subject has, fortunately, been exhaustively investigated by the United States tariff commission. A recent report of that commission makes very clear that we lack and that we ought to have the instruments necessary for the assurance of equal and equitable treatment. The attention of the congress has been called to this matter on past occasions, and the past measures which are now recommended by the tariff commission are substantially the same that have been suggested by previous administrations. I recommend that his phase of the tariff question receive the early attention of the congress.

"Will you not permit me, turning from these matters, to speak once more, and very earnestly, of the proposed amendment to the constitution which would extend the suffrage to women and which passed the house of representatives at the last session of congress? It seems to me that every consideration of justice and of public advantage calls for the immediate adoption of that amendment and its submission forthwith to the legislatures of the several states. Throughout all the world this long delayed extension of the suffrage is looked for; in the United States longer, I believe than anywhere else, the necessity for it, and the immense advantage of it to the national life, has been urged and debated, by women and men who saw the need for it and urged the policy of it when it required steadfast courage to be so much beforehand with the common conviction; and I, for one, covet for our country the distinction of being among the first to act in a great reform.

"The telegraph and telephone lines will of course be returned to their owners so soon as the retransfer can be effected without administrative confusion, so soon that is, as the change can be made with least possible inconvenience to the public and to the owners themselves. The railroads will be handed over to their owners at the end of the calendar year; if I were in immediate contact with the administrative questions which must govern the retransfer of the telegraph and telephone lines, I could name the exact date for their return also. Until I am in direct contact with the practical questions involved I can only suggest in the case of the telegraphs and telephones, as in the case of the railways, it is clearly desirable in the public interest that some legislation should be considered which may tend to make of these indispensable instrumentalities of our modern life a uniform and co-ordinated system which will afford those who use them as complete and certain means of communication with all parts of the country as has so long been afforded by the postal system of the government, and at rates as uniform and intelligible. Expert advice is, of course, available in this very practical matter, and the public interest is manifest. Neither the telegraph nor the telephone service of the country can be said to be in any sense a national system. There are many confusions and inconsistencies of rates. The scientific means by which communication by such instrumentalities could be rendered more thorough and satisfactory has not been made full use of.

"The demobilization of the military forces of the country has progressed to such a point that it seems to me entirely safe now to remove the ban upon the manufacture and sale of wine and beers, but I am advised that without further legislation I have not the legal authority to remove the present restrictions. I therefore recommend that the act approved November 21, 1918, entitled "An act to enable the secretary of agriculture to carry out during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the purpose of the act entitled "An act to provide further for the national security and defense by stimulating agriculture and facilitating the distribution of agricultural products," and for other purposes," be amended or repealed in so far as it applies to wines and beers.

"I sincerely trust that I shall very soon be at my post in Washington again to report upon the matters which made my presence at the peace table apparently imperative, and to put myself at the service of the congress in every matter of administration or counsel that may seem to demand executive action or advice.

"WOODROW WILSON."

MERELY PIECE OF FOOLING

Course Taken by Germany Resembles Closely Neat Trick That Is Credited to Sheridan.

"The Germans, by fooling us with German bolshevism, hoped to escape the payment of war indemnities," said a congressman.

"It reminds me of a story about Sheridan, the spendthrift playwright. 'Gunter, the confectioner, left his statement with Sheridan one morning, and a few hours later Hanson, the ironmonger, called.

"Hanson was very pressing on the subject of his account. He harangued and he harangued. Sheridan, broke, as usual, paced the floor in despair.

"But suddenly an idea struck the spendthrift and he said: 'You know Gunter?' 'One of the safest men in London,' Hanson replied.

"Then you will be satisfied if I give you his bill for the amount?' 'Certainly.' 'Sheridan thereupon handed the ironmonger Gunter's neatly folded account, snatched up his hat and rushed forth."

Suffered for Years Miserable From Kidney Trouble. Doan's Made Mr. Barnett Strong and Well

"I suffered untold agony with my kidneys for years," says John Barnett, 30 Virginia I feel that I would burn up with fever, but every now and then would have a severe chill. Often my clothes were wringing wet with perspiration. The kidney secretions were unnatural in color and odor and burned terribly. At night my shoes were so tight on my feet that I could hardly get them off and my hands swelled so I couldn't hold a teacup. My back! Oh, how it ached! I walked with two canes and all my bent over like an aged man. When the terrible pains started through my kidneys, my knees would give way and many times I had to be lifted to my feet by people on the street. I didn't care whether I lived or died. I was so miserable. I finally used Doan's Kidney Pills and they cured me of all kidney trouble. Doan's made me strong and well."

Mystery Explained.

He stood amid the blaze and splendor of his magnificent mansion, and in his hand he held the portrait of a beautiful woman. His face was pale and haggard, and his lips moved convulsively. What was this mystery. Was this the picture of his departed wife? No. Was it the portrait of his dead but dearly remembered daughter? No. What, then, was the cause of his haggard face? Was it not the same portrait that two minutes ago had fallen from its nail, and raised a lump as big as a hen's egg on his head? It was.

A Diagnosis.
"Oh, doctor," said a worried looking agrarian, "My wife is in an awful condition! From a medium fat woman she has been reduced to skin and bones. She talks incessantly in a loud squawking voice, begins a sentence and never finishes it, and jumps from subject to subject without uttering anything that has the least sense to it."
"H'm! I see!" returned the physician. "Go home, Mr. Gableby, and take out your party line telephone at once. Your wife has been listening in on it too much."—Kansas City Star.

Lots of people make fortunes out of other people's curiosities.

Keeping It Up.
A maid servant applied for a week-end off, as her home was distant, for the purpose of being at home on her parents' silver wedding day.
The leave was granted, and the maid returned.
"Well," said her mistress, "did everything go off satisfactory?"
"Oh, yes, thank you, ma'am," said the girl, "and mother told me to say she is very grateful to you for letting me off."
"And what did your father say?" asked the lady.
"Oh, lor! ma'am," replied the girl, "he wasn't there. He's been dead this 20 years."
That Friend!
"Mother doesn't think she'll go to the theater with us tonight, Albert."
"Is that so? I have got three tickets. What shall I do with the third one?"
"Give it to the man you always go out to see between the acts. He can sit with us and you won't have to go out and see him."
Complimentary to Him.
He—But I asked you, dearest, to keep our engagement a secret for the present.
She—I couldn't help it. That hateful Miss Oldum said the reason I wasn't married was because no fool had proposed to me, so I up and told her you had.—Brooklyn Citizen.

GIRL OF MYSTERY! HOUSE OF MYSTERY!

An American story of love and patriotism, of plot and counterplot, that enthralls the reader and keeps him guessing.

CHAPTER I.

The First Wayfarer and the Second Wayfarer Meet and Part on the Highway.

A solitary figure trudged along the narrow road that wound its serpentine way through the dismal, forbidding depths of the forest—a man who, though weary and footsore, lagged not in his swift, resolute advance. Night was coming on, and with it the no uncertain prospects of a storm.

He came to the "pike" and there was a signpost. A huge, crudely painted hand pointed to the left, and on what was intended to be the sleeve of a very stiff and unfinishing arm these words were printed in scaly white: "Hart's Tavern. Food for Man and Beast. Also Gasoline. Established 1798. 1 Mile."

On the opposite side of the "pike," in the angle formed by a junction with the narrow mountain road, stood a humbler signpost, lettered so indistinctly that it deserved the compassion of all observers because of its humility. Swerving in his hurried passage, the tall stranger drew near this shrinking friend to the uncertain traveler, and was suddenly aware of another presence in the roadway.

A woman appeared, as if from nowhere, almost at his side. He drew back to let her pass. She stopped before the little signpost, and together they made out the faint directions.

To the right and up the mountain road Frogg's Corner lay four miles and a half away; Pitcairn was six miles back over the road which the man had traveled. Two miles and a half down the turnpike was Spanish Falls, a railway station, and four miles above the crossroads where the man and woman stood peering through the darkness at the laconic signpost reposed the village of St. Elizabeth. Hart's Tavern was on the road to St. Elizabeth, and the man, with barely a glance at his fellow traveler, started briskly off in that direction.

He knew that these wild mountain storms moved swiftly; his chance of reaching the tavern ahead of the deluge was exceedingly slim. His long, powerful legs had carried him twenty or thirty paces before he came to a sudden halt.

What of this lone woman who traversed the highway? His first glimpse of her had been extremely casual—indeed, he had paid no attention to her at all, so eager was he to read the directions and be on his way.

She was standing quite still in front of the signpost, peering up the road toward Frogg's Corner—confronted by a steep climb that led into black and sinister waterlands above the narrow strip of pasture bordering the pike.

The fierce wind ruffled her skirts to her slender body as she leaned against the gale, gripping her hat tightly with one hand and straining under the weight of the bag in the other. The ends of a veil whipped furiously about her head, and, even in the gathering darkness, he could see a strand or two of hair keeping them company.

Retracing his steps, he called out to her above the gale:

"Can I be of any assistance to you?" She turned quickly. He saw that the veil was drawn tightly over her face.

"No, thank you," she replied. Her voice, despite a certain nervous note, was soft and clear and gentle—the voice and speech of a well-bred person who was young and resolute.

"Pardon me, but have you much farther to go? The storm will soon be upon us, and—surely you will not consider me presumptuous—I don't like the idea of your being caught out in—"

"What is to be done about it?" she inquired, resignedly. "I must go on. I can't wait here, you know, to be washed back to the place I started from."

He smiled. She had wit as well as determination.

"If I can be of the least assistance to you pray don't hesitate to command me. I am a sort of tramp, you might say, and I travel as well by night as I do by day—so don't feel that you are putting me to any inconvenience. Are you by any chance bound for Hart's Tavern? If so, I will be glad to lag behind and carry your bag."

"You are very good, but I am not bound for Hart's Tavern, wherever that may be. Thank you, just the same. You appear to be an uncommonly genteel tramp, and it isn't because I am afraid you might make off with my belongings." She added the last by way of apology.

He smiled—and then frowned as he cast an uneasy look at the black clouds now rolling ominously up over the mountain ridge.

"By Jove, we're going to catch it good and hard," he exclaimed. "Better take my advice. These storms are terrible. I know, for I've encountered half a dozen of them in the past week. They fairly tear one to pieces. You are a stranger in these parts?"

"Yes. The railway station is a few miles below here. I have walked all the way. There was no one to meet me. You are a stranger also, so it is useless to inquire if you know whether this road leads to Green Fancy."

"Green Fancy? Sounds attractive. I'm sorry I can't enlighten you." He drew a small electric torch from his pocket and directed its slender ray upon the signpost.

"It is on the road to Frogg's Corner," she explained nervously. "A mile and a half, so I am told. It isn't on the signpost. It is a house, not a village. Thank you for your kindness. And I am not at all frightened," she added, raising her voice slightly.

"But you are," he cried. "You're scared half out of your wits. You can't fool me. I'd be scared myself at the thought of venturing into those woods up yonder."

"Well, then, I am frightened," she confessed plaintively. "Almost out of my boots."

"That settles it," he said flatly. "You shall not undertake it."

"Oh, but I must. I am expected. It is import—"

"If you are expected why didn't someone meet you at the station? Seems to me—"

"Hark! Do you hear—doesn't that sound like an automobile—ah!" The hoarse honk of an automobile horn rose above the howling wind, and an instant later two faint lights came rushing toward them around a bend in the mountain road. "Better take than never," she cried, her voice vibrant once more.

He grasped her arm and jerked her out of the path of the oncoming machine, whose driver was sending it along at a mad rate, regardless of ruts and stones and curves. The car careened as it swung to the pike, skidded alarmingly, and then the brakes were jammed down. Attended by a vast grinding of gears and wheels, the rattling old car came to a stop fifty feet or more beyond them.

"I'd sooner walk than take my chances in an antediluvian rattletrap like that," said the tall wayfarer, bending quite close to her ear. "It will fall to pieces before you—"

But she was running down the road toward the car, calling out sharply to the driver. He stooped over and took up the traveling bag she had dropped in her haste and excitement. It was heavy, amazingly heavy.

"I shouldn't like to carry that a mile and a half," he said to himself.

The voice of the belated driver came to his ears on the swift wind. It was high-pitched and unmistakably apologetic. He could not hear what she was saying to him, but there wasn't much doubt as to the nature of her remarks. She was roundly upbraiding him.

Urged to action by thoughts of his own plight he hurried to her side and said:

"Excuse me, please. You dropped something. Shall I put it up in front or in the tonneau?"

The whimsical note in his voice brought a quick, responsive laugh from her lips.

"Thank you so much. I am frightfully careless with my valuables. Would you mind putting it in behind? Thanks!" Her tone altered completely as she ordered the man to turn the car around—"And be quick about it," she added.

The first drops of rain pelted down from the now thoroughly black dome above them, striking in the road with the sharpness of pebbles.

"Lucky it's a limousine," said the tall traveler. "Better hop in. We'll be getting it hard in a second or two."

"You must let me take you on to the Tavern in the car," she said. "Turn about is fair play. I cannot allow you to—"

"Never mind about me," he broke in cheerily. He had been wondering if she would make the offer, and he felt better now that she had done so. "I'm accustomed to roughing it. I don't mind a soaking. I've had hundreds of 'em."

"Just the same you shall not have one tonight," she announced firmly. "Get in behind. I shall sit with the driver."

If anyone had told him that this rattling, dilapidated automobile—ten years old, at the very least, he would have sworn—was capable of covering the mile in less than two minutes he would have laughed in his face. Almost before he realized that they were on the way up the straight, dark road the lights in the windows of Hart's Tavern came into view. Once more the bounding, swaying car came to a stop under the stars of the most hair-raising ride he had ever experienced.

Not a word had been spoken during the trip. The front windows were lowered. The driver—an old, hunched-faced man—had uttered a single word just before throwing in the clutch at the crossroads in response to the young woman's crisp command to drive to Hart's Tavern. That word was uttered under his breath and it is not necessary to repeat it here.

The wayfarer lost no time in climbing out of the car. As he leaped to the ground and raised his green hat he took a second look at the automobile—a look of mingled wonder and respect. It was an old-fashioned, high-powered car, capable, despite its antiquity, of astonishing speed in any sort of going.

"For heaven's sake," he began, shouting to her above the roar of the wind and rain, "don't let him drive like that over those—"

"You're getting wet," she cried out, a thrill in her voice. "Good night—and thank you!"

"Look out!" rasped the unpleasant driver, and in went the clutch. The man in the road jumped hastily to one side as the car shot backward with a jerk, curved sharply, stopped for the fraction of a second, and then bounded forward again, headed for the crossroads.

"Thanks!" shouted the late passenger after the receding tail light, and dashed up the steps to the porch that ran the full length of Hart's Tavern.

A huge old-fashioned lantern hung above the portal, creaking and straining in the wind, dragging at its stout supports and threatening every instant to break loose and go frolicking away with the storm.

He lifted the latch and, being a tall man, involuntarily stooped as he passed through the door, a needless precaution, for gaunt, gigantic mountaineers had entered there before him and without bending their arrogant heads.

CHAPTER II.

The First Wayfarer Lays His Pack Aside and Falls in With Friends

The little hall in which he found himself was the "office" through which all men must pass who come as guests to Hart's Tavern. A steep, angular staircase took up one end of the room. Set in beneath its upper turn was the counter over which the business of the house was transacted, and behind this a man was engaged in a corncob pipe.

An open door to the right of the stairway gave entrance to a room from which came the sound of a deep, sonorous voice employed in what turned out to be a conversational solo. To the left another door led to what was evidently the dining room. The glance that the stranger sent in that direction revealed two or three tables covered with white cloths.

"Can you put me up for the night?" he inquired, advancing to the counter. "You look like a feller who'd want a room with bath," drawled the man behind the counter, surveying the applicant from head to foot. "Which we ain't got," he added.

"I'll be satisfied to have a room with a bed," said the other.

"Sign here," was the laconic response.

"Can I have supper?"

"Food for man and beast," said the other patiently. He slapped his palm upon a cracked call bell and then looked at the fresh name on the page.

"Thomas K. Barnes, New York," he read aloud. He eyed the newcomer once more. "My name is Jones—Putnam, Jones. I run this place. My father an' grandfather run it before me. Glad to meet you, Mr. Barnes. We used to have a hostler here named Barnes. What's your idea fer footin' it this time o' the year?"

"I do something like this every spring. A month or six weeks of it puts me in fine shape for a vacation later on," supplied Mr. Barnes whimsically.

Mr. Jones allowed a grin to steal over his seamed face. He reinserted the corncob pipe and took a couple of pulls at it.

"I never been to New York, but it must be a heavenly place for a vacation. If a feller c'n judge by what some of my present boarders have to say about it. It's a sort of play actor's paradise, ain't it?"

"It is paradise to every actor who happens to be on the road, Mr. Jones," said Barnes, slipping his big pack from his shoulders and letting it slide to the floor.

"Hear that feller in the taproom talkin'? Well, he is one of the leading actors in New York—in the world, for that matter. He's been talkin' about Broadway for nearly a week now, steady."

"May I inquire what he is doing up here in the wilds?"

"At present he ain't doing anything except talk. Last week he was treddin' the boards, as he puts it himself. Bustled. Up the line. Showed last Saturday night in Horville, eighteen mile north of here, and immediately after the performance him and his whole troupe started to walk back to New York, a good four hundred mile. They started out the back way of the open house and nobody missed 'em till next mornin' except the sheriff, and he didn't miss 'em till they'd got over the county line into our balltwick. Four of 'em are still stoppin' here just because I ain't got the heart to turn 'em out ner the spare money to buy 'em tickets to New York. Here comes one o' 'em now. Mr. Dillingford, will you show this gentleman to room eleven and carry his baggage up fer him? And maybe he'll want a pitcher of warm water to wash and shave in." He turned to the new guest and smiled apologetically. "We're a little short o' help just now, Mr. Barnes, and Mr. Dillingford has kindly consented to—"

"My word!" gasped Mr. Dillingford, staring at the register. "Someone from little old New York? My word, sir, you— Won't you have a—er—little something to drink with me before you—"

"He wants something to eat," interrupted Mr. Jones sharply. "Tell Mr. Bacon to step up to his room and take the order."

"All right, old chap—nothing easier," said Mr. Dillingford genially. "Just climb up the elevator, Mr. Barnes. We do this to get up an appetite. When did you leave New York?"

Taking up a lighted kerosene lamp and the heavy pack, Mr. Clarence Dillingford led the way up the stairs. He was a chubby individual of indefinite age. At a glance you would have said he was under twenty-one; a second look would have convinced you that he was nearer forty-one.

Depositing Barnes' pack on a chair in the little bedroom at the end of the hall upstairs he favored the guest with a perfectly unabashed grin.

"I'm not doing this to oblige old man Jones, you know. I won't attempt to deceive you. I'm working out a daily board bill. Chuck three times a day and a bed to sleep in—that's what I'm doing it for, so don't get it into your head that I applied for the job. Let me look at you. I want to get a good square peep at a man who has the means to go somewhere and yet is hoob enough to come to this gosh-awful place of his own free will and accord. Darn it, you look intelligent. I don't get you at all. What's the matter? Are you a fugitive from justice?"

"Barnes find the theatrical people entertaining, but as the storm rages does a good deal of thinking about the mysterious girl bound for Green Fancy."

Mystery in Plant's Presence.

The Chilean provinces of Atacama, Tarapaca and Tacna are in the rainless region, or desert country west of the Andes, and are entirely devoid of vegetation. The winds in all of this region are from the east, and in passing over the elevated perpetual snows of the Andes are stripped of their moisture and arrive on the coast perfectly dry. The last rain, a slight shower which fell in Antofagasta, in Atacama province, was the first rain which had fallen in 16 years. The last rain which fell in Iquique, in Tarapaca province, was the first in 24 years. With both of these showers a notable phenomenon occurred. The hills back of these cities assumed a green tint from a little plant which sprang up almost in a night. The query is: "From where did this plant come?"
