STHE FREAK HOUSES

By JACK LAWTON, The woman in shabby black stopped before a house set back on a rolling lawn to read again the address on a paper she carried. Yes, this was undoubtedly the place she sought. "A freak house," the employment agent had called it, "built in imitation of an old thatched cottage in Ireland." "These singers are mostly freaks themselves," the agent added, "even If they do have lots of money." The woman smiled as she gazed at the house and a wistful, eager light came into her eyes. The freak house was a good imitation upon spacious lines. The low, drooping roof over a rear flower-framed doorway brought back poignantly a memory of her own girlhood. In such a doorway she had stood, looking down the long road, over which at evening her handsome lover lad had been wont to come. She remembered the musical lilt of his voice as he praised the "soft blue eyes of her," or touched adoringly the rose of her young cheeks.

"They are wild Irish roses, Nance." her lover would say. Nan's roses had fuded long ago to faint pink shadows of what they had been. The wonderland of America where she had come so hopefully failed to bring fulfillment of her dreams. Nance had pictured easy independence here as she closed forever the door of the thatched cottage upon her desolated home.

The laughing Irish lover lad had long gone on his fortune-seeking way, Nance lost her buoyant health in the great city, as years had taken her youth's freshness. Work suitable to her strength was hard to find, but somehow she managed, and her bright spirit lived through all the broken dreams.

Last evening the advertisement had caught her eye; she had been sewing in a hot city room, and the promise of country air and green fields was sufficient to form her decision. She would answer in person the advertise-

But as she stood there seemed no need for hurry in this peaceful scene. She passed to the rear flowerframed door and mised a wooden knocker. It was a uniformed maid who led her into the comfortable room of the resigning housekeeper. That person, after one keen glance, sighed relievedly.

"At last," she said, "I see my way clear to go. You have the appearance of capability. Intelligent help is almost impossible to find these days, especially in this lonely spot. It's all right for the great folks who go and come from the city. For servants the situation is not inviting. Your difficulty will be in keeping cooks and finding maids. However, that's up to you. Mr. O'Nell is away from home so much on his singing tours that you will probably be able to manage-at least while he's here-"

Nance put out an interrupting hand "This is Mr. O'Neil's home?" she asked unbelievingly. "Not Larry 'Neil, the Irish tenor

The housekeeper nodded. "Didn't you know?" she asked. "Everybody hereabouts has heard of his early Irish home and how when he made his money he tried to imitate said Tiny View. "I was only asking a the thatched cottage as well as could be done in grand style. His old mother lived with him here till she home-loving one too, though none of those idolizing women have tempted him to give up his bachelorhood. to get away." She was efficient in her new work; the departing housekeeper with satisfaction discovered this fact before the second day of trial was over. The singer's especial sanctum took on an inexplicable air of homeness upon that second evening. His cigar stand was just where It should be, and an Irish ballad lay upon his piano. Idis he sat and played it through, the tamplight glinting his silvering hair-

"When I dream of old Ireland," he saug. "I'm dreaming of you." A woman stood behind him when he turned, a little woman in a sprigged lavender dress. She was holding toward him respectfully a tray with a cup of coffee on it. But Larry

O'Neil jumped unbelievingly to his feet. "Nance," he cried, "Nance, dearafter all these years!" And when later the great singer and the happy woman sat hand clasped in hand the woman smiled with the old shyness he remembered so well.

"And so, Larry," she said, "I decided not to be a drag upon you when you were finding your wonderful oice and making it perfect."

"You ran away," the man reproached her, "and none could tell where you'd gone." "I was never far away from you,

dear," Nance said. "Often as you sang I listened. It was joy to learn that, even in the possession of your beautiful home you still remembered the old-

SIAM'S ROYAL ELEPHANT HUNT

King's Order for Round-Up Is Signal See Big Show.

When a king of Siam finds that the stock of tame elephants in the government stables is getting low, he sends out an edict that a royal elephant hunt will take place. This order is received joyfully throughout Siam, for a royal elephant bunt is enough of a spectacle to induce people from all over Siam to come to Ayutha, where the unimals are to be rought, when captured.

Days, sometimes weeks, are required o locate and surround the herds to e captured. Then they are skillfully driven in the direction of Ayutha. So lowly do the great beasts travel that four or five miles is sometimes the daily rate of advance. When Ayutha is reached the herd is driven into a corral, which is a large walled-in court, and here it is kept until the desirable easts are selected. The rest are then allowed to wander back to their jungle

Prepared by the United States Depart-

Thousands of dollars' worth of seed are wasted in unsuccessful attempts to revive the waning stand of alfalfa. Specialists recommend that fields on the decline should be plowed up and reseeded.

Even though the seed germinates successfully, the plants mature at periods different from those of the old plants, while ordinarily the young plants are smothered out before they make much growth. Even where an alfalfa field is patchy and covered with practically bare spots, it is not advisable to attempt to reseed except

Not Profitable to Cultivate. It is always objectionable, according to the specialists, to cultivate or disk an alfalfa field irrespective of its age and condition, as carefully conducted experiments have shown that the only section in which it was profitable to cultivate the alfalfa crop in any way was in the irrigated belt of the far West.

Usually unfavorable results attend where alfalfa is disked under eastern conditions, although in the case of alfalfa fields which have been badly in-

Pays for Itself in Better Crops

Even if you have only a small farm the New Idea Spreader will make you enough money to pay for itself and give you a profit besides.

Scientists and experiment stations have determined that the value of manure is from $8 to $10 per animal. Ordinarily half of this is lost through absorbtion in the barnyard and through improper spreading with a fork. Save this half by using a New Idea Spreader and you'll save $300 to $400 a year even on an 80 acre farm-more on a larger place.

That's why you should increase your profits by spreading with the

Spreads 7 Feet—Across 3 Corn Rows

The wide spreading New Mea saves you half a mile of travel per acre. It spreads beyond the wagon tracks and you don't have to drive over the spread manure. It spreads uniformly and the spread can be varied 3, 6, 9, 12, 15, 18 loads per acre merely by pushing a lever.

The double cylinders and distributor take two whacks at the manure. Every particle goes onto the ground—none left to freeze or rot. There is no danger of clogging so the New Idea can be loaded as high as the ordinary wagon box. Strong chain conveyor brings the manure unfailingly to cylinders. Cannot slip from under load and will not race going up hill. Chain drive-no gears to freeze, break or strip. Power to conveyor and spreader mechanism is derived direct from rear axle—no side strain or lost power. The New Idea is made by spreader specialists with more than 16 years experience, who have the confidence to back their machine with a 1 year guarantee on workmanship and material. We unhesitatingly recommend it.

The state department's announcement

"The fall of Petrograd and the occupancy of both that city and Kronstadt by the Russian white forces has been officially reported by the general staff of the Finnish army to the Viborg representative of the northwestern government of Russia."

Mr. Phillips added that a direct dispatch received by the department from its representative nearest the old Russian capital reports that the Finnish official announcement has not yet been officially corroborated from other Sources.

Gompers Rises From Bed of Sickness to Deny Charge of Bolshevism.

ASSERTS UNIONSTRUETOU.S. WILL SHOOT IF NECESSARY

Declares Government of the United States Is Solidly Anchored in the Heart of Every True American, in Answer to Loree.

Washington, Oct. 20.-Samuel Gompers, weak from several days of illness, took the floor at the national industrial conference to bitterly assail an instruction that the workingmen of the United States planned an attempt to overthrow the government.

Mr. Gompers was moved to what was called the most eloquent speech of the conference by the remarks of L. F. Loree, who, speaking from the viewpoint of the employers, referred to what he said were attempts of bolshevism to gain a foothold in the United States through labor.

He added that "there is an element that believes that because it was easy to tear down the established government in Russia it will be easy to destroy the government of the United States. "That is not true." he asserted. "In Russia the government was centered in one czar and his ministers, but the government of the United States is solidly anchored in the heart of every true American."

When Loree, who is president of the Delaware & Hudson railroad, said that labor took advantage of the most critical period of the recent war to force important concessions from the war labor board. Mr. Gompers rose to his feet.

Speaking in a weak voice the feder ation president recalled the conference of 136 labor leaders on March 12, 1917, at which labor pledged itself, state department. Kronstadt has also three weeks before President Wilson asked for a declaration of war, to back the government to the limit, come what might. "And American labor made good its pledge," he added hoursely. Plainly drawing on his reserve of strength-lessened by several days of illness-the veteran labor leader re ferred with scorn to Mr. Lorce's insinuations that labor had enjoyed undue benefits from the war.

"Ah, we should go to the great cor porations, to the board of directors to find the phllanthropists of our time." he exclaimed sarcastically. "Perish the thought !" Asserting that "whether you like !!

or not, the masses of labor of the United States have at last found their ability to articulate through organization." Mr. Gompers told the delegates that the laboring people are producing the wealth of the world and that, without minimizing the great contributions made by men of thought and direction to that production, the time had come to gain a fair share of the rewards.

BEING THE AUTHENTIC NARRATIVE OF A TREASUR DISCOVERED IN THE BAHAMA ISLANDS IN THE YEAR 1903. NOW FIRST GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC.

"JUST A GIRL!"

Synopsis—The man who tells this story—call him the hero, for short—is visiting his friend, John Saunders, British official in Nassau, Bahama islands, Charles Webster, a local merchant, completes the trio of friends. Saunders produces a written document purporting to be the death-bed statement of Henry P. Tobias, a successful pirate, made by him in 1859. It gives two spots where two millions and a half of treasure were buried by him and of treasure were buried by him and his companions. The conversation of the three friends is overheard by a pock-marked stranger. The document disappears. Saunders, however, has a copy. The hero, determined to seek the buried treasure, charters a schooner. The pockmarked man is taken on as a passenger. On the voyage somebody emples the gasoline tank. The hero and the passenger clash the passenger. and the passenger clash, the pas-senger leaving a manifesto bearing the signature, "Henry P. Tobias, Jr." The hero lands on Dead Men's Shores. There is a fight, which is followed by several funerals. The hero finds a cave containing the skeletons of two pirates and a mas-sive chest-empty save for a few pleces of eight scattered on the bottom. The hero returns to Nassau and by good luck learns the location of Short Shrift island. Webster buys the yawl Flamingo, and he and the hero sail for Short Shrift island. As the Flamingo leaves the wharf a young fellow, "Jack Harkaway," jumps aboard and is allowed to remain. Jack proves an interesting and mysterious passenger. The adventurers hunt ducks on Andros island, with an eye out for Tobias.

CHAPTER IV-Continued.

Besides, I had my wonderful young friend, to whom I grew daily more attached. I found myself feeling drawn to him as I can imagine a young father is drawn to a young son! and cometimes I seemed to see in his eyes the suggestion of a confidence he was on the edge of making me-a whimsical, pondering expression, as though wondering whether he dare to tell me

"What is it, Jack?" I asked him for once when, early in our acquaintance, we had asked him what we were to call him, he had answered with a laugh: "Oh, call me Jack-Jack Harkaway. That is my name when I go on adventures. Tell me your adventure names. I don't want your prosaic every-day names." "Well," I had replied, entering into the lad's humor, "my friend here is Sir Francis Drake, and I, well-I'm Sir Henry Morgan." "What is it, Jack?" I repeated.

But he shook his head. "No!" he replied, "I like you ever so much-and I wish I could; but mustn't." "Somebody else's secret again?" ] ventured.

"Yes!" And he added: "This time it's mine, too. But-some day perhaps; who knows?-" He broke off in boyish confusion.

"All right, dear Jack," I said, patting his shoulder, "take your own time.

We're friends anyway." "That we are," responded the lad, with a fine glow.

I mustn't be too hard on Charlie, for Charlie had another object in his trip besides duck. As a certain poet brutally puts it, he had anticipated also "the husting of man." In addition, though it is against the law of these Britannic islands, he had promised me a flamingo or two for decorntive purposes. However, flamingoes and Tobias alike kept out of gunshot and, as the week grew toward its end, Charlie began to grow a little restive.

"It looks," he murmured one evening, as we had completed our four ger sloop that dropped in here yesterteenth meal of roast duck, and were musing over our after-duck cigars, "it looks as if I am not going to have any use for this."

"Not much to tell: too easy altogether. I waited a couple of days at the mouth of Goose river. Then I got tired and left the sponger with the captain and two or three men, while I went up the river with a couple of guns and Sailor, and a man to pole the skiff-just for some duck-shooting, you know. We lay low for two days on the marshes and then Sailor got sniffing the wind one morning, as if there was something around he didn't care much for. He grew more and more excited and, at last, as we neared a certain mangrove copse to which all the time he had been pointing, he barked two or three times and I let him go. Poor old fellow!"

As he told the story, Sailor, who seemed to understand every word, rubbed his head against his master's hand.

"He went into the mangroves, just as he'd go after duck, but he'd hardly gone in when there were two shots and he came out limping, making for me. But by this I was close up to the mangroves myself, and in another minute I was inside; and there was Tobias-his gun at his shoulder. He had a pot at me, but before he could try another I knocked him down with my fire and- Well, we've got him all right. And now you can go after your treasure as soon as you like. I'll take him over to Nassau and you can fool around for the next month or so. Of course we'll need you at the trial, but that won't come off for a couple of months. Meanwhile, you can let me know where you are. In case I should need to get hold of you." "All right, old man." I said, "but I wish you were coming along with me." "I've got all the treasure I want," laughed Charlie. "Send me word where you are, as soon as you get a chance; and good luck to you, old chap, and your doubloons and pieces

It was impossible to imagine a cay better answering to my couchologist's description of Short Shrift Island, Its ituation and general character, too. bore out the surmise. On landing, also, we found that it answered in two important particulars to Tobias' narrative. We found, as he had declared. Wilson in Vigorous Letter to that there was good water there for passing ships. Also, we found, in addition to the usual scrub, that cabbage-wood trees grew there very plentifully, particularly, as he said, on the highest part of the island. So, having talked it all over with Tom, I decided "I'll tell you what we'll do," he said that here we would stay for a time

But, first, having heard from the sponging captain that he was en route for Nassau, I gave him a letter to Charlie Webster, telling him of our whereabouts, in case he should have sudden need of me with regard to To-

The reader may recall that Tobias narrative in reference to his second 'pod" of one million dollars had run: On the highest point of this Short Shrift island is a large cabbage-wood stump, and twenty feet south of that stump is the treasure, buried five feet deep and can be found without difficulty." But which was the highest point? There were several hillocks that might claim to be that-all about equal in height.

However, as the high points of the island were only seven in all, it was no difficult matter to try them all out. one by one, as we had plenty of time and plenty of hands for the work. For. of course, it would have been idle to attempt any concealment of my object from the crew. Therefore, I took them from their shell-gathering and, having duly measured out twenty feet south from each promising cabbage-wood stump, set them to work. They worked with a will, for I promised them a generous share of whatever we found. Alas! it was an inexpensive promise, for, when we had duly turned up the ground, not only twenty feet, but thirty, forty and fifty feet, not only south but north, east and west of the various cabbage-wood stumps on the seven various eminences, we were none of us the richer by a single piece of eight. Then we tried the other cabbage-wood stumps on lower ground, and any other likely-looking spots, till, after working for nearly a fortnight, we must have dug up most of the island. And then Tom came to me with the news that our provisions were beginbefore we returned to Nassau, we should have to put in at Flying Fish Cove-a small settlement on the larcessities.

"All right, Tom," I said, "I guess the game is up! Let's start out tomorrow morning. You may as well have your sucking fish back, Tom," I said, laughing in self-disgust. "I shall have no more need of it. I am through with treasure hunting."

"I'd keep it little longer, sar," answered Tom; "you never know."

I had made up my mind to star I had dropped into the little settle fore. ment's one store, to buy some tobacco, the only kind that Charlie Webster declared fit to smoke. I stayed chatting with the storekeeper-a lean, astute-looking English the employer, labor and public groups, man, with the un-English name of might smooth out the differences, but to the poor natives, on the good old promising. business principle of supplying goods of the poorest possible quality at the highest possible prices.

While he was attending a little group of customers I had wandered toward the back of the store, curiously examining the thousand and one commodities which supplied the strange needs of humanity here in this lost corner of the world; and, thus occupled, I was diverted by a voice like sudden music, a voice oddly rich and aughing and confident for such grim and sinister surroundings. It was one, too, which I seemed to have heard before, and not so very long ago. When I turned in its direction I was immediately arrested, as one always is by any splendor of vitality; for a startling contrast indeed-to the spiritless, furtive figures that had been coming and going hitherto-was this superb young creature, tall and lithe, with proudly created head on glorious shoulders, Her skin was a golden olive, and it had been hard to say which was the more intensely black-her hair, or the proud eyes which, turning presently in my direction, seemed to strike upon me as with an actual impact of soft

SAYS AIMS MUST BE REACHED

Washington, Oct. 22.—President Wilon, despite his illness, took a hand in he national industrial conference in n effort to avert a break, which is breatened as a result of the inability the capital and labor groups to each a satisfactory agreement on the ollective bargaining issues.

In a 600-word letter to Secretary ane, chalrman of the conference, dicated from his sick bed, the president utlined his views as to the confernce situation. The letter was immeliately dispatched to Mr. Lane, who, was explained, was to use it at his scretion.

The conference was not in session hen Mr. Lane received the communiation, having adjourned at the request f the labor group after two resolulons had been presented.

May Hold Little in Reserve.

It was said the letter might not be resented to the conference immediately but held in reserve to be used only when danger of the conference's breaking up became acute.

The serious situation in the conference was reported to the president after a conference between Chairman Lane, Secretary Wilson of the labor department, Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the public group; Thomas L. Chadbourne, chairman of the commit tee of fifteen and Secretary Tumulty
