FORMER BEECHWOOD RESIDENT ROBBED

Michael McBride, former resident of the town of Scott, where he was the owner of a large farm a few miles north of Beechwood, was robbed of $3,000 at midnight on Tuesday at 27th street viaduct. Mr. McBride is well known here. He disposed of his farm at Beechwood several months ago, when he left for Milwaukee to make his future home. The Milwaukee Sentinel of Wednesday morning has the following to say of the holdup:

"The holdup was the unconscious and robbed of $400, Michael McBride, 55 years old, 2439 Sycamore street, half staggered and half dragged himself across the Twenty-seventh street viaduct at midnight on Tuesday. He crawled into the Waukesha Inn, 28 Twenty-seventh street.

His head was bleeding from an ugly cut inflicted by a thug's billy, and he was weak from shock and loss of blood.

Arthur Roenich, proprietor of the Waukesha Inn, stopped the bleeding, and notified the police. McBride was sent to Emergency hospital, where he told a broken story of the holdup to detectives.

Still dazed from his experience, he was able to give only a scant account of what had occurred.

He had been walking at the south end of the viaduct, he said, when he was suddenly seized from behind, thrown forward on his face by a blow on the back of the head, and for a few moments he lost consciousness.

When he came to his senses, he found that $400 which he carried in a wallet had been taken. Seeing the light of the Waukesha Inn, he staggered here, and collapsed as he reached the place.

After being cared for at the hospital, he had recovered sufficiently to be sent to his home.

Three young men suspected of being connected with the robbery of Mr. McBride, are now being held under bail of $3,000 each. The men are Jas. Lindstrom, aged 29, Emma Falls, aged 22, and Clifford McKenna, 41, but the latter, who the police believe is a newcomer to the so-called Merrill park gang of Milwaukee, have police records. Falls was under probation for three years in connection with the burglary of a garage in March. Despite their plea of being not guilty the police state, they have a confession from Lindstrom, who they say admitted of having struck McBride over the head with an empty soda water bottle three times.

SALVATION ARMY IN WASHINGTON CO.

At a meeting held at the Commercial Club rooms by a number of citizens of West Bend last week Thursday morning, it was decided to extend the work of the Salvation Army into Washington County. A. C. Camp of the Salvation Army headquarters at Milwaukee was present at the meeting and explained in detail the work of the organization as planned for this county. In his explanation he stated that all that was necessary to secure the help of the Salvation Army is the organization of an Advisory Board, whose duty it will be to correspond with the headquarters, at Milwaukee, giving information where assistance in solving social problems of the territory under its jurisdiction is needed. The Salvation Army is ready to help any county in the following classes of cases: Pauperism (dealing chiefly with the infirm), dependent delinquency, and indigent cases, prison work and missing persons. The advisory board appointed at the meeting for the eastern part of the county consists of the following officers: Chairman, Dr. Wm. Urkari; vice-chairman, Judge P. O'Meara; secretary, business places, F. W. Bucklin. Another Advisory Board was formed at Hartford, which will take care of the western part of the county. It will be the duty of these two boards to report from time to time any cases coming under the above mentioned heads.

THEN AND NOW

Do you remember the days before we had telephones or automobiles, the days before the movie came into existence, the days when the very rich? They're not so far back in the dark ages as that. Scarcely a generation in fact.

When the modernizing changes did take place, the cities were the first to benefit. First, the telephone, which put offices and homes in communication in easy and finally private homes, into easy communication with each other. Then electric lights, spreading with the telephone from stores and public buildings to private residences.

Next the automobile, beginning with the old "one-lungers" that chugged along the streets and stalled frequently, and at the most inconvenient places. And last of all the movie, which has grown to its present proportions from the "nickle theater" beginning. While all these things came first to city people, it is gratifying to note that they are now nearly as common in the country as in town.

Telephone lines were extended quite rapidly, until now practically every farm house is in easy communication with neighbors and with the city. A great improvement over the days when it was necessary to hitch up and drive several miles in order to deliver a short message or transact some simple business. Then, as soon as the automobile had been proved practical, as soon as there was a fair chance of expecting it to run several miles without attention and to get along without constant repairs, it was taken up rapidly by the farmer, until today there is scarcely a farm without a car, and many with trucks and tractors as well.

Electric lights and the movies were late in coming to the country, but their day has finally arrived. The farm electric plant has been developed to the point where it gives complete electric service, light everywhere and plenty of power for pumping, milking, separating, washing, sweeping and other kinds of farm work. And these small plants have made possible movie theaters in every village.

Electricity is the force which has placed the country even with the city's enjoyment of every modern convenience.

CELEBRATES 25th ANNIVERSARY

On Tuesday of this week, July the 6th, Rev. Philip J. Vogt celebrated his silver jubilee as pastor of the Holy Trinity and St. Bridget congregations. At 9 A. M. solemn high mass was read for him as a Thanksgiving offering for the members of both parishes, which were most impressive. He was assisted by Rev. Roman Stoffel as deacon, Rev. Stupfeld of Lomira as sub-deacon and Rev. Beyers of St. Michaels as master of ceremonies. The choir sang the Preiss Mass, and the services were concluded with benediction and Te Deum. On Wednesday morning there was a requiem high mass for all the deceased members of both parishes during his pastorate here. After the services Tuesday some of the neighboring clergy were entertained at the parsonage during the day, and in the evening a reception was held at the South Side Park by both congregations, with a very large crowd in attendance. Congratulations in abundance were showered upon the highly respected pastor, and the evening was pleasantly spent in congenial good fellowship and social intercourse. Refreshments were served by the ladies of the congregations after which John Marx gave a few words appropriate for the occasion, at the same time, in behalf of the people, presenting Father Vogt with a bag of silver as a token of their high esteem in which he is held by all. In response, Father Vogt thanked the people, and dwelt somewhat on his life as pastor here. Interesting talks were then given by Rev. Stoffel and Rev. Beyers, respectively, who voiced the sentiments of the people and with them we express the desire that we meet again thirteen years hence when the occasion will be the golden jubilee of Rev. Vogt's ordination to the priest hood.

ASKS $10,000 FROM COUNTY Mrs. Regina Bechtler of Milwaukee, through her attorney, Wm. Schroeder and Horace Walwley, has filed a claim against Washington county with County Clerk Kraemer, asking $10,000 damages for the death of her husband, Robert Bechtler, who was killed in an automobile accident near St. Lawrence on the afternoon of May 31. Bechtler, it will be remembered, was among a party of autoists, members of the Adelphi quartette of Milwaukee, which was on its way to Lomira to participate in the Memorial Day celebration. Their machine left the road at a point a mile and a half north of St. Lawrence, killing Bechtler and injuring George Fink, Louis Raffenstein, Mich. Raffenstein and George Tyrone, the other occupants of the car. The complaint alleges that the accident resulted from insufficient and want of repair of said highway, which runs north-westerly through St. Lawrence. The Raffenstein and Walwley, Messrs. Frank and Tyrone filed separate claims of $1,500 each. Nothing will be done with the claim until the County Board meeting in November. Whether that body will agree that the parties are entitled to damages is presently uncertain, the evidence presented by the plaintiffs. Should the Board decide that they are not entitled to damages, the case will very likely be taken to circuit court by the plaintiffs.—West Bend Pilot.

At noon a five course dinner was served by the Misses Rose and Sophia Strobel. The table was decorated with cut flowers, a table fern, and a large number of candles. Mr. Strobel has resided on his farm all his life, and although enduring many of the hardships of pioneer days, Mr. Strobel is still enjoying the best of health. During his younger days he took a deep interest in public affairs and for a number of years served as a member of the county board. Those present from afar were: Mr. and Mrs. Peter J. SOME TWINE OUTPUT

The end of last month closed the fiscal year at the Wisconsin State Plant and the record of the twine plant shows that it has been a busy year. About five and a half million pounds have been produced for the year. The price this year is between 13 and 14 cents, and this makes the value of the year's product reach three quarters of a million of dollars. Shipments have been in progress for the past two months, and Warden Town tells us that July 1 will see the warehouse practically empty. Wisconsin users have been supplied with twine first, and the surplus has been shipped to other states, about one-fourth going outside the state this year.—Waupun Leader.

TRIPOLI CLUB PASSES THROUGH VILLAGE

Twenty-six automobiles, bearing members of the Tripoli Motor Club of Milwaukee, passed through this village on Monday afternoon, on their way back to Milwaukee, after a trip through Door County. The party left Green Bay at an early hour Monday morning, and reached here about six o'clock. While here they stopped for a few minutes for refreshments and lunch, after which they proceeded on their way home. The party went far north as Ephraim. Erich Meyer is secretary of the Club.

GORED BY INFURIATED BULL

Henry T. Moth, a prominent farmer of the town of Farmington, was badly gored by one of his Holstein bulls last Monday morning. Mr. Moth was in the act of driving the animal into the barn when he became infuriated and charged upon Mr. Moth. The latter was knocked down, trampled upon, tossed into the air, and used so roughly that he still congratulates himself that he is still alive. His face is one mass of bruises, his upper jaw and nose are fractured, his right ear torn off, and six of his ribs are fractured. Luckily his son came to the rescue and using a club was able to drive the bull away.

MILWAUKEE CHEMIST CAUGHT HERE

Fredrick L. Baumbach, former chemist at the Industrial Chemical Institute, who was taken to the Oconomowoc institution last Friday, suffering from a nervous break down, escaped from that institution, late Sunday. At one o'clock Sunday afternoon attendants at the sanitarium carded bed clothing hanging over a chair and a note pinned to his belt stating that he "could stand it no longer." The proper authorities were notified of the escape, and a search followed, but no clew of Mr. Baumbach could be found. On Tuesday morning at about 8:30 o'clock a stranger walked into the L. Rosenheimer store, acting strange and upon being interviewed by D. M. Rosenheimer, he stated that he had been walking all night in the rain, his clothes were wet, and he apparently seemed to be all tired out from his night's hiking. He told Mr. Rosenheimer that he was stranded, having left his pocket book at home, and asked to be allowed to telephone to his wife at Milwaukee to lend him aid. This permission was granted. Mr. Baumbach, while waiting for his call, evidently forgot to answer the phone, which together with his strange talk aroused Mr. Rosenheimer's suspicion. Theo. Schmidt, book-keeper at the store, in answering the phone, received instructions from Mr. Baumbach's wife to hold her husband here being the man who had escaped from the sanitarium. Later in the forenoon he was taken to Milwaukee by his wife and brother-in-law, who had come here via the Milwaukee train. Mr. Baumbach is 33 years old and lived at 2015 Grand Ave. He has been identified with the Industrial Chemical institute for 10 years as a chemist.

ANNOUNCES HIS CANDIDACY

Attorney Henry P. Schmidt of West Bend was in the village last Saturday, announcing his candidacy for the office of District Attorney for Washington County. Nomination papers for this week were circulated throughout the county. Attorney Schmidt is a native of Washington county, and for many years practiced law in a most efficient and capable manner in Milwaukee. His return to this county as a citizen is highly approved by his many friends. Being well known in every section of the county makes his chances of winning at the fall election look favorable.

NOTICE

The dental office of Dr. Wm. X. Klumb will be closed from July 1st to August 2nd, instead of July 15th to August 1st, as stated in our last week's issue, and which was an error on the part of the Statesman. The doctor left on Saturday for Okauchee Lake, where he will spend a few days, when he will take a trip to points of interest in the northern part of the state.

LOCAL NIMRODS SOME ANGLERS

When it comes to catching fish and where to get the big ones, we'll have to take off our hats to Fred Andrae, Joseph Eberle and Fred Buddenhagen. The trio, while on a fishing expedition at Long Lake last week Thursday, were successful in getting twenty-one large sized pike. The largest of them was about two feet long and weighed about eight pounds, while the smaller ones averaged all the way from one to five pounds. The trio now hold the record for catching the largest amount of pike ever caught at any one time at Long Lake, and perhaps in any of the lakes in this vicinity. It certainly was one of the finest messes of fish any one wanted to look at, and no doubt Messrs. Andrae, Eberle and Buddenhagen, will long be the title holders of being successful in capturing the largest mess of fish ever caught here. Any one who is anxious to go out and catch a mess of fish, will do well to call on anyone of these men for they will surely accommodate you.

CAR TURNS SIX COMPLETE SOMERSAULTS

An Oakland car driven by Wm. Haase and occupied by his brother Richard, Seno Seip and Edward Kludt, all of Hartford, while on their way toward West Bend last week met with an accident, the kind of which may be frequent, yet few survive to tell the story. When they had reached Weller's hill about three miles west of West Bend they met a truck coming in an opposite direction. Mr. Haase turned out of the road too far, and as a result the car rolled down a fifty foot embankment, and turned six complete somersaults, stopping upright at the bottom of the hill. Outside of being severely cut and bruised the occupants suffered no serious injury. The car was badly damaged. However, it was able to be driven back to Hartford the next morning on its own power.

The medal is of bronze 1 1/4 inches in diameter, suspended from the ribbon by a ring. On the obverse side is a winged figure representing Victory standing full length and full face. On the reverse side is the inscription "The Great War Civilization" and either the name of the arms of the allied and associate nations. The possession of a battle class entitles the possessor to wear a small bronze star on the service ribbon. In accordance with the principle that senior decorations take precedence, silver citation stars should be worn to the right of bronze stars on the service medal.

BELGIUM BANKER NOW IN JAIL

F. J. Witmeyer, erstwhile cashier of the Belgium State Bank, is now lodged in the county jail, according to the Port Washington Pilot. Prospects of securing his liberty by furnishing bail at the present time are everythings but flattering. As was announced recently, he was arrested, but immediately secured his release by furnishing bail. This was not very favorably received by those who had deposits in the bank. On Friday Mr. Witmeyer was again arrested and again he succeeded in raising the required amount of bail. This aroused the ire of those who wanted to see him in jail. On Saturday night a warrant was issued on still another charge. This warrant was served at midnight and the man was lodged in jail immediately. Bail is now out of the question and he will be compelled to remain in jail.

ANNUAL SCHOOL MEETING HELD

The annual school meeting of Joint School District No. 5, of the town and village of Kewaskum, was held in the school house on Tuesday evening. The meeting was largely attended which shows the keen interest that is being taken in educational work by the members of the district. The meeting was called to order by Director Dr. N. Edw. Hausmann. Dr. Hausmann was appointed chairman of the meeting. Treasurer Arthur W. Koch read his annual report and same was found true and correct by the auditing committee. After the reading of the report, the election of a new clerk was taken up. L. D. Guth being a candidate for re-election, received 58 out of 98 votes cast, and was therefore duly elected clerk for the ensuing three years. It was decided by the district to raise an additional sum of $2,000 to be placed in the sinking fund, which will go toward the building of a new high school. It was also decided that the term of school shall be nine months, and that there shall be no free text books. The new auditing committee appointed for the ensuing year is as follows: L. P. Rosenheimer, N. J. Mertes and Emil C. Backhaus. The board reported that all teachers except one have practically been hired for the coming year.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Pass the Critical Period Safely and Comfortably by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Summit, N. J.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during Change of Life and I think it is a good remedy in such a condition. I could not digest my food and had much pain and burning in my stomach after meals. I could not sleep, had backache, and worst of all were the hot flashes. I saw in the papers a bottle of Vegetable Compound so I tried it. Now I feel all right and can work better. You have my permission to publish this letter."—VICTORIA KOPL, 21 Oak Ridge Ave., Summit, N. J.

BEANS MADE HIT WITH HIM. Confirmed Woman Hater Finally Succumbed to Culinary Ability That Reminded Him of Home.

When I worked on a cattle ranch in Wyoming I chummed with a cowboy named Hank, who was a genuine woman hater, writes a correspondent. His mother died when he was a child, and a stepmother, stepsisters and step-aunts had treated the boy so unkindly that he learned to distrust and dislike women. If by chance any woman stopped at the ranch house Hank would seek other quarters.

His Business in Post Office. The commercial traveler met Sandy, the canny one, emerging from the post office. "Ah, Sandy!" cried the commercial. "It is good to see as prosperous a farmer as yourself—not forgetful of his country? You have been in the post office to purchase war bonds?"

The Rage. The movie star was sobbing as if her heart would break. "What's the matter, dearie?" asked her friends. "I want to get a divorce," replied the teary one, "but my husband is so good to me that I cannot find any grounds."—Film Fun.

SCORE ONE FOR MRS. JONES

Neat Retort That Certainly Should Have Made Her Better Half Do Some Thinking.

How he ever happened to do it, heaven only knows, but Jones really brought home a small box of candy and gave it to his wife with a lordly and gracious air. Mrs. Jones managed to overcome her astonishment sufficiently to thank him, but evidently Jones did not regard her expressions of appreciation as adequate to the occasion, for he observed:

"I happened to be with Smith when he gave his wife a present yesterday. Now, there's a woman who can really show a man that she appreciates a thing! Her expressions of thanks were really charming."

"Boutlishly, but consider how much practice she has," Mrs. Jones responded sweetly.

ANIMALS END THEIR LIVES

Collie Dogs Said to Become Despondent and Weary of Existence When Usefulness is Over.

Some animals really commit suicide, says a writer in London Answers. A dog either from old age or suffering from an incurable malady, will leap into the sea. Especially is this true of collie dogs. A kind of melancholy seems to take possession of them when their activities and usefulness are impaired.

The writer has known a Scotch collie to take, as it were, a farewell look at the old herding hills one day and then to plunge into the sea with a whining cry, and thus end its misery.

Hunters have known the elk buck and other big game to leap over precipices deliberately and mangle themselves when the man-enemy was within steady range of his prey.

A stork has been known to perish in a configuration rather than desert her little, helpless brood.

A swallow was seen flying back and forth to its nest after a wicked wrecking of her nest by some mischievous wretches. She was running the same risk as her birdlings, and seemingly faced the prospect of their fate unflinchingly.

All Titled.

The doctor's family had just moved into a more exclusive residence district and all the members were much given to boasting over this. Even the nine-year-old daughter told of it to her small playmates at school. "Why, it's just like having a title," she ended.

"Everything that comes to our place has written on it after our names, 'Collet place.'"

Another little nine-year-old sniffed very disdainfully. "Oh, if that is what you mean, we've got one too," she informed the audience, "and it's almost like yours. Right after our name on everything that comes to our house, they write, 'Collet, please.'"—Exchange.

No Wonder.

Otis—You say that something at the banquet last night disgusted you? Chester—Yes! had too much climate. Set between a California native and a man from Florida!—New York Evening Post.

WISCONSIN STATE NEWS

Madison—That a gravel pit owned by one governmental organization cannot be taken by the state by its right of eminent domain was the substance of a ruling of the attorney general to the state highway commission. Manitowoc owns a gravel pit outside its corporate limits and the state has been unable to make satisfactory arrangements by which it may use the gravel for a trunk highway near which the pit lies. The question was asked if there were some way by which the state could obtain the pit in case no satisfactory mutual arrangement could be reached. The answer was in the negative.

Racine—The city of Racine has made a complaint to the state railroad commission at Madison against the Wisconsin Gas and Electric Co., charging that the company, the only public utility furnishing gas to Racine consumers, has refused to supply mains to persons desiring to erect homes. Complaint is also made regarding the quality of gas supplied. The electors have voted in favor of municipal ownership and the company has declared that no extensions will be made until such time as the city determines whether or not it will take over the property.

Green Bay—Neil Joseph, local restaurant man, was found guilty on a charge of manufacturing intoxicating liquor in municipal court here. Federal prohibition agents testified that not only a still and a quantity of moonshine were taken in a raid on his home, May 28, but that mass was cooking in part of the still at the time of the raid. The defense testified that the alleged still was used as a bathtub for Joseph's daughter and was in that use at the time the raid was made.

Lancaster—Muriel Long, 21, prominent young man of this city, was drowned while going to the rescue of Richard Rand, a friend with whom he was swimming in the Wisconsin river. Rand was saved. The loss is estimated at $50,000 and is partly covered by insurance.

False Claims.

WE hope there is no Mother who thinks she can treat her sick baby without calling in a Physician, or with remedies that she uses for herself.

Most Mothers know that Baby requires remedies especially prepared for babies, yet there are some who think that what is good enough for them is good enough for Baby, and it is to these Mothers we appeal to give nothing to their babies that is not specially prepared for babies or recommended by their Physician.

False claims may kill, but false claims can never restore your child.

For over thirty years Fletcher's Castoria has been aiding in the reduction of the deaths among infants as Mothers have become more and more acquainted with it. Always keep it in the house.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA

Mothers Must Use Care. Why do we so often call your attention to imitations of Fletcher's Castoria? Because it is a baby's medicine and imitations are always dangerous, particularly imitations of a remedy for infants.

Your druggist may not keep an imitation but they are to be found on drug-store shelves. Reliable druggists think only of the welfare of their customers. The other kind only of the greater profit to be made on imitations.

Your own judgment tells you that Fletcher's Castoria having for over thirty years at great expense held up its reputation, must jealously guard it. Then, it follows that this company must use the very best of material. Must employ experts in the selection of the herbs. Must retain skilled chemists in its manufacture.

Your same good judgment must tell you that these irresponsible imitators are trading on your credulity and the reputation built up by Mr. Fletcher, during all these years, for his Castoria.

Your druggist sells a tiny bottle of "Freezone" for a few cents, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, or corn between the toes, and the calluses, without soreness or irritation.

To Mend Broken China. A cheap and easily prepared cement for broken china is lime mixed with the white of an egg. Only take sufficient white of an egg to mend one article at a time, and mix thoroughly with a small quantity of lime. Apply the mixture to the place where the article is broken, and in a short time the cement will set and become quite hard.

They embrace every advantage known to other similar machines, and many vital features which are original with us and can be had only in the "Plymouth Self-Feed." Below are some mighty strong points for you to think about before you buy a feed cutter:

AUTOMATIC SELF-FEED—This feature consists of a traveling feed chain, made of heavy iron links securely riveted to a chain which passes over the lower feed roller. Throw the fodder into the feed box and the "Plymouth" does the rest.

DANGER-PROOF SELF-FEED ROLLERS—Here's another strong feature original with the "Plymouth." It consists of four large rollers of cast iron. The traveling feed chain passes over the lower hind roller, just passing the lower front roller, which is six inches in diameter, and smooth. The two upper and lower hind rollers are ribbed. The 8-inch automatic roller at the top, to the rear, is a special feature of the "Plymouth." It acts as a lever or weight to keep the fodder passing through continuously, depending on its own gravity to keep the material going through without a hitch. Two coil springs serve to exert an even and steady pressure on the automatic roller as the volume of fodder increases in going through. The spring feature is entirely automatic, and is only to be had in the "Plymouth." It absolutely prevents clogging.

HOW DEMOCRATIC DEADLOCK WAS BROKEN AND J. M. COX NOMINATED

Story of National Convention at San Francisco and the Fight Over Credentials, Platform and Ticket.

SECOND PLACE GIVEN TO F. D. ROOSEVELT

Battle Between Cox, McAdoo and Palmer, Surged Forward and Backward, Until Attorney General Released His Delegates and the Three Times Governor of Ohio Won on 44th Ballot.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD.
For President—James M. Cox of Ohio
For Vice President—Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York.

Emerging from a struggle that has had few if any equals in American political history, the Democratic party assembled in convention in the Golden Gate city, has placed the above ticket before the voters of the country. Governor Cox was nominated on the 44th ballot, at 1:45 o'clock in the morning of July 6. The vice presidential nominee was selected at the closing session of the convention which opened at noon that day.

For ballot after ballot a deadlock existed, the leaders being Cox, William G. McAdoo and Attorney General Palmer. Neither of them seemed able to accumulate enough votes to win and no one of them appeared willing to quit the field. At last, after the 38th ballot, Congressman Carlin, manager of the Palmer forces, mounted the rostrum and announced that Mr. Palmer was unwilling longer to tie up the convention and therefore he unconditionally released all his delegates. This left the fight to Cox and McAdoo, and though the supporters of the latter were still confident, the Ohioan gained steadily on each succeeding ballot. When the 44th was nearly completed it was apparent that he was the victor, and in the midst of wild excitement and tumult Kansas moved that he be declared the nominee of the convention by acclamation. The motion was carried with a mighty roar, and the long contest was ended.

An Unbowed Convention.

Without bosses, without real leaders, without any to direct their actions, the representatives of the party, 1093 in number, struggled for eight days with the great problem of selecting candidates who might be expected to command the entire party vote and whose chances of defeating the rival Republican ticket named at Chicago would be best. Under the time-honored rule of the Democratic party, a two-thirds vote was required to nominate, and through session after session it seemed impossible to find the man upon whom so large a proportion of the delegates could unite. The final result was brought about by clever political management, combined with the weariness of the delegates and the fact that many of them were running short of money and were anxious to start back to their homes. Nearly all of them had come a long way and were under heavy expense and several days before adjournment some of them had tried to break away and go home.

Really, this was an unbowed convention so far as the nominating of the ticket was concerned. It is true that the administration forces, represented by several cabinet officers and many other federal office holders, controlled the proceedings of the earlier sessions and the construction of the platform, exercising this control, however, smoothly and in a way that usually was devoid of offense to those who were controlled. But when it came to selecting the candidates, the delegates had their favorites, and they stood by them through the long series of ballots with remarkable steadfastness.

Strategy of Candidates.

The strategy of the various factions was interesting. The Palmer forces, headed by the attorney general himself, were active from the beginning, with entertainments and argument and with the assistance of many charming women, but it was evident all along that many of the instructed Palmer delegates would break away from him when their duty had been performed and when they saw a chance to make a winning combination. The Cox boosters came with music and banners and noise, pervaded the city, never weakened in their claims that the Ohio governor was the winner and never overlooked an opportunity to impress that idea on the minds of the convention and the city generally. Mr. McAdoo's methods were declared by veteran politicians to be the cleverest of all. In the first place, he telegraphed his friends that he did not wish his name presented to the convention and that he was not seeking the nomination. He had no regular organization or headquarters here, and the whole McAdoo movement was started and carried on apparently quite without his consent or desire. A few of his admirers began it as soon as they arrived, and they speedily gathered in thousands of others, all of whom worked untrillingly, though not obtrusively for the success of the former secretary of the treasury. The McAdoo boom appealed to the galleries and the people in the street, and especially to the women, who campaigned day and night everywhere.

As for the favorite sons, the strategy in their behalf generally took the form of quiet determination to keep on voting for them until the rest of the convention, finding none of the leaders could win, should come to one of them as a welcome compromise. Of course, in many cases the favorite son was dropped after he had received the proper number of complimentary ballots.

As has been said, the administration forces controlled the organization and early doings of the convention. It was called to order by J. Bruce Kremer, vice chairman of the national committee, at noon Monday, June 28, and in his address he was so volubrious that it seemed there would be little left for the temporary chairman to say. That official, who was Homer S. Cummings, chairman of the national committee, did find that Mr. Kremer had anticipated many of his points, but he delivered a speech, nevertheless that won the hearty praise of all who heard or read it. Of course, he devoted the usual amount of time to denouncing the Republican party and its doings, and he did it in fine style. Also he naturally extolled all that his own party has done. The vast audience listened to all this with interest, but it evidently was awaiting the speaker's pronouncement on the great issue of the League of Nations. This may be epitomized by the quotation of three sentences:

"We will not submit to the repudiation of the peace treaty or to any process by which it is whittled down to the vanishing point."
"It is not reservation that the president stands against, but nullification."
"The trouble with the treaty of peace is that it was negotiated by a Democratic president."

Lively Action in Committees.

The committee on credentials got busy at once, with only two important contests to settle. One of these was the case of Georgia. The Palmer delegate from that state was seated as regular, despite the tremendous protests of the delegation representing the Hoke Smith-Tom Watson combination. This did not take long. Then came the fight over the seat claimed by Senator James Reed of Missouri. For three hours the debate raged, and a resolution was adopted that Reed "is not legally accredited and is not entitled to a seat in the convention." There was little effort then, or later, to conceal the fact that Mr. Reed was excluded because of his opposition to the president and his policies, but there were few mourning his fate. On Tuesday, when the credentials committee reported to the convention, Joseph Shannon, the other delegate from Reed's district, took the platform to protest formally against the "steamroller" of the senator. He was greeted with a storm of hisses and derisive howls to which he replied with some vigorous language, but the committee report was adopted with only a few opposing votes. Soon after Senator Reed went home, still protesting that he was a Democrat and was unalterably opposed to the League of Nations.

The second day of the convention was again devoted largely to oratory, for the program included the installation of Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas City as permanent chairman and the delivery of his address. Robinson was the administration's choice for the position and at no time was there reason to regret the selection. He presided throughout the many sessions with dignity, firmness and fairness. In his speech he went over most of the ground covered by Mr. Cummings, but he put more pep into his denunciations of the Republicans and aroused greater enthusiasm in the audience.

Because the committee on resolutions was having so complicated a struggle with the platform, it was decided that the nominating speeches for president should be heard before that committee reported. Therefore those oratorical efforts began Wednesday and ran through a part of the Thursday session. On the roll of states Arizona yielded to Oklahoma where the nomination of Senator Robert L. Owen was the first heard. His name was presented by D. E. Linebaugh, in well chosen phrases, but the small demonstration showed Owen's following was inconsiderable. Next appeared U. S. G. Cherry of South Dakota, full of strange language and headed like the pard, to offer the name of James W. Gerard, who had the distinction of defeating the German kaiser. Connecticut was the next state heard from, John S. Crosby, offering the name of that state's "greatest son," Homer S. Cummings. Mr. Cummings' popularity is unquestioned, and he was given a flattering ovation.

Two Days of Speech Making.
As Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska had won the preferential primary in his state it was necessary that he be

HOLDS OFF HIS STATEMENT

Governor Cox Declines to Comment on Victory Until Notification is Received From Convention.

Gov. James M. Cox, who was nominated for the presidency by the Democratic national convention, declined to make a statement regarding his victory until after he has received notification from the convention.

The governor received the news of his nomination in his newspaper office, the Dayton News, surrounded by fellow newspaper workers and a few relatives and intimate friends.

When the press wires flashed the news of his nomination, his first act was to cross the room and kiss his wife. He then left the building, walked a few blocks to the home of his closest personal friend, John A. McMahon, aged 87, dean of Dayton lawyers, to whom he wished personally to give the news.

Mr. Cox was highly elated over the nomination of her husband, and immediately sent a telegram to her father, Thomas J. Blair of Chicago.

Gov. Cox following the news of victory visited the grave of his mother, Mrs. Gilbert Cox, who died at the age of 85, several years ago. She lived to see him inaugurated governor for the first time.

His followers boast that in his six years as governor he has effected more constructive changes in Ohio's government than any three or four of his predecessors. Most of this legislation was enacted in his first term.

placed in nomination, and this was done by Governor Shallenberger, after which the heavier guns, came into action. Florida yielded to Pennsylvania and Palmer was presented by John H. Bigelow in a vehement speech which was frequently interrupted by the friends and the opponents of the attorney general. He emphasized especially Palmer's successful work as alien property custodian and defended him against the attacks of a section of the labor party because of his course during the coal and steel strikes. The demonstration that followed was long continued and fairly well sustained through the efforts of cheer leaders, but it lacked genuine spirit. Cox came next on the list and the supporters of the Ohio governor fully sustained their reputation as noise makers. "Simon M. Johnson was the nominator, and after he had told the two points of his state and its chief executive the Coxites began their hallelujah. The band they had brought from Ohio was stationed in one gallery and a group of singers in another, and whistles, bells and other noise producers helped make bedlam in the hall for more than half an hour while the state standards were carried through the aisles in endless procession.

One of the Cox seconding speeches was made by Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi and the crowd liked so well his lively sentences and his attack on local newspapers which he said were trying to dictate the nomination that an incipient boom for Harrison for vice president was started. Bourke Cockran, beloved orator of the Democracy, now exiled to Gov. Al Smith of New York and when he closed there was a demonstration which was rightly interpreted as an ovation to the speaker rather than to Smith, and the band played "The Side-walks of New York." "Missouri" called the reading clerk, and Rev. Burris Jenkins of Kansas City, stepped to the platform in the midst of wild yells. He explained that William G. McAdoo has insisted that he be not placed in nomination, but his admirers had decided that he should be drafted for the service of the country and he promised that if the convention saw fit to select Mr. McAdoo that gentleman would not decline the high honor, all reports or telegrams to the contrary being false. Then he retired, and Mr. McAdoo's boom was in the hands of his friends. They certainly did their part, for the demonstration was extraordinary, both on the floor and in the galleries.

It was difficult to get the crowd quiet after all this riot of enthusiasm, and Charles F. X. O'Brien of New Jersey found it hard to get a fair hearing for his candidate, Gov. Edward I. Edwards. The galleries were restive and the speaker was frequently interrupted, especially by those who resented the supposed "wet" policies of Edwards. This closed the nominating speeches for the day, but Thursday morning the grand resumed. Senator Simmons of North Carolina, Senator Carter Glass of Virginia, Ambassador John W. Davis of West Virginia and Francis B. Harrison, governor general of the Philippines, being offered for the votes of the delegates.

Bryan Versus Cockran.
The platform committee was not yet ready to report, so a recess until evening was taken. Again word came that Glass and his associates had not completed their task, and after music to appease the audience, the gathering adjourned until Friday morning. At that time the platform was submitted to the convention and the great battle between William Jennings Bryan on the one hand and those who opposed his ideas on the other, was staged. Mr. Glass read the platform entirely through and moved its adoption, and at once Mr. Bryan took the platform to present a minority report. This included dry planks drafted by himself and Richmond Pearson Hobson, Bryan's planks on the peace treaty, national bulletin (a government-owned, nonpartisan newspaper), on military training and on profiteering.

He spoke on all these topics, devoting himself mainly to the treaty and dry planks, and from the start he showed he was in fine debating form and thoroughly in earnest. His prohibition plank called for a pledge to enforce the amendment and Volstead law in good faith, without any interference in the alcoholic content of beverages or any weakening of its other provisions. In another minority report Bourke Cockran offered a plank for cider, light wines and beer for home consumption. The committee report was silent on the subject of prohibition. So it was a three-sided battle, and the committee won. Bryan's plank got only 1554 votes and Cockran's got 356.

A plank pledging recognition of the Irish republic, offered by E. L. Dooney, was rejected by a vote of 6754 to 4024. Bryan's profiteering and national bulletin planks and one in favor of compensation for soldiers were lost by six vote vote. Then Mr. Glass and Secretary of State Clegg spoke at length for the committee report and it was accepted with only one opposing vote.

Ballooting Narrows to Three.

This brought the convention to the balloting, and two ballots were taken Friday evening. There were fifteen candidates and on the first ballot they stood as follows: McAdoo, 266, Palmer, 258, Cox, 134, Smith, 107, Edwards, 43, Owen, 38, Marshall, 37, Davis, 32, Meredith, 27, Glass, 26½, Cummings, 25, Simmons, 24, Genard, 21, Hitchcock, 18, Harrison, 6.

Before many ballots had been taken Saturday the contest had narrowed down to Cox, McAdoo and Palmer, with about a hundred scattering votes, but no one of the leaders was able to command anywhere near a two-thirds vote. At times efforts were made to start a switch to some dark horse, but these were futile. All day and until a few minutes of midnight the voting continued, and it was necessary to adjourn until Monday. After the Saturday rest the struggle was resumed, with the final results told above.

Long Struggle Over Platform.

Because there were several great issues on which the party leaders and the party generally were sharply divided in opinion, the committee on resolution had an unusually difficult task in building a platform that would, in all its parts, command a majority vote of the convention. For several days and nights the committee, which included an unusual number of very eminent men, struggled and debated and at times quarreled. Every one who demanded it was given a hearing, whether he wanted to tell what to say about the League of Nations, the liquor question, the Irish republic, or one of the many minor matters under discussion. The administration forces made it clear from the start that what they desired was virtually a reproduction of the Virginia platform, so far as it went, and with Senator Carter Glass as chairman, the administration forces were in control of the committee. William Jennings Bryan, as chief protagonist of the bone-dry plank and the plan to advocate ratification of the treaty with reservations, fought manfully through many sessions of the platform builders, but got nowhere. When it was presented to the convention Friday afternoon the platform represented in almost all respects the ideas of Senator Glass and his administration associates.

League Covenant Indorsed.

Starting with greetings to President Wilson, the platform promptly tackled the League of Nations, favoring it as the surest if not the only practicable means of maintaining the permanent peace of the world and terminating the burden of great military and naval establishments. It commends the president for steadfastly standing for the covenant agreed to by the allied and associated nations and condemns the Republican senate for "its refusal to ratify the treaty merely because it was the product of Democratic statesmanship." The words of Senator Lodge, in 1918, condemning the idea of making a separate peace, are quoted to confound him in his later attitude. The party advocates the "immediate ratification without reservations which would impair essential integrity, but does not oppose the acceptance of any reservations making clearer or more specific the obligations of the United States to the league associates." The insertion of the latter clause was the only point yielded to the opposition. It was drawn up by Senator Walsh of Massachusetts.

Concerning the conduct of the war, the platform gives praise to President Wilson for entire lack of partisan bias and scores the Republican party because, notwithstanding that, it "has meanly required the consideration of the chief magistrate by savagely defaming the commander-in-chief of the army and navy and by assailing nearly every public officer of every branch of the service intimately concerned in winning the war abroad and preserving the security of the government at home."

Due admiration is expressed for our soldiers, sailors and marines and all men and women who aided in winning the war.

G. O. P. and Living Cost.

The high cost of living and the depreciation of bond values are attributed primarily to the war itself and the Republican party is held for the post-armistice inflation through failure to restore peace and peace conditions in Europe. Attention is called to "vain and extravagant investigations" that have revealed nothing beyond the incapacity of Republican politicians to cope with the problem. "The Democratic party is pledged to a policy of strict economy and to the enactment and enforcement of legislation to bring profiteering before the bar of criminal justice."

The traditional policy of the Democratic party in favor of a tariff for revenue is reaffirmed, and the creation of an effective budget system favored.

Considerable space is given to agricultural interests, the plank reciting the things the Democrats have done in the way of farm loan banks, the Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, and other legislation. It favors legislation to confirm to primary producers the right of collective bargaining and of co-operative handling and marketing of the products of the workshop and the farm.

The accomplishments of the party for the benefit of labor are held up to admiration, and it is asserted that the national security and safety depend on a just recognition of the rights of those who labor and on the conservation of the strength of the workers and their families. At the same time, it is declared, those whose labor creates the necessities upon which the life of the nation depends "must recognize the reciprocal obligation between the worker and the state." The party pledges itself to continue, if possible, a fair method of composing the differences that lead to strikes and lockouts, but compulsory arbitration in private industrial disputes is opposed. With respect to government service the platform holds distinctly that "the rights of the people are paramount to the right to strike."

The woman suffrage amendment is heartily indorsed, and the states that have not ratified it are urged to do so in time to let all the women of the country vote in the fall elections. Federal co-operation with and assistance to the states for the protection of child life and the advancement of women in industry is urged.

It is asserted that the federal government should treat with the utmost consideration every disabled soldier sailor and marine of the world war. The work of the war risk insurance bureau is praised, and the enactment promised of soldier settlements and home aid legislation to afford the service men the opportunity to become land and home owners.

The vital importance of improved roadways to commerce and industry and to agriculture and rural life, is emphasized. The platform favors the continuance of the present federal aid plan; it promises the use of rural free delivery to the maximum of its capacity to help reduce the high cost of living and strongly favors the increased use of motor vehicles in the transportation of the mails.

Credit is taken for the Democratic party for the rebirth of the merchant marine and the policy of the party is pledged to its continued growth under proper legislation. The party is pledged also to stand for equality of rates for the ports of the country so there may be adequate and fair facilities and rates for the mobilization of the country's products offered for shipment.

Promise is made of the further development of inland waterway transportation facilities and the importance of connecting the great lakes with the sea by way of the Mississippi and its tributaries is especially recognized. The Democratic congress is commended for passing the flood control act, and the extension of this policy to other flood control projects is favored. A strong plank in favor of the extension of the reclamation of arid lands is included.

The creation and work of the federal trade commission are heartily indorsed, and the enactment of legislation for federal supervision of the live stock markets is urged.

As finally formulated and adopted, the Irish plank, upholding the principle of national self-determination, repeats, "within the limitation of international comity and usage, the party's former expression of sympathy for the aspirations of Ireland for self-government." Sympathy, this time "active," is also expressed for the people of China, (Czechoslovakia, Finland, Poland and others who have recently established representative government and "deep and earnest sympathy" is expressed for the Armenians. The planks dealing with Alaska, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines are all the people of these regions asked.

Women in Prominent Role.

An outstanding feature of the convention, and one altogether delightful, was the prominent part played by the women. The Republicans at Chicago gave the sex considerable recognition, but the Democrats went much further. For the first time a woman presided over a national party convention when for a little while Chairman Robinson surrendered the gavel to Mrs. George Bass of Chicago. For the first time a woman placed in nomination a presidential candidate when Miss Bessie Dwyer of Washington and Manila presented the name of Governor General Harrison of the Philippines. Many of the seconding speeches were made by women and almost without exception they were good speeches, well delivered. One of these, by Mrs. Julia Brown of West Virginia, was voted the most charming speech made during the convention and it was no great surprise to learn that the graceful, pretty woman was formerly on the stage. She was Izetta Jewel in those days. Another woman, Mrs. Martha Nelson McCann, made the shortest seconding speech, using only eighteen words and she was cheered for her consideration. In all the demonstrations the women were to the fore and the choir loft and stage were always thronged with them. Altogether the women added immensely to the interest and picturesqueness of the convention.

City Sets Mark in Hospitality.

No one who was in San Francisco during the convention will deny that the Golden Gate city set a mark in the entertaining of conventions that never has been equaled and that other convention cities will find it hard to live up to in the future. Never before had any party held its quadrennial gathering west of the Rocky mountains and the wisdom of the national committee in selecting San Francisco was questioned by many. But now probably few of the delegates and guests regret the necessary expenditure of time and money which hesitated to travel again to California on the same errand.

Never were convention crowds more expeditiously handled or better housed, and never was a convention better handled and with so little confusion and fuss. The visitors were received hospitably and entertained lavishly by the people of San Francisco, and what is more remarkable, they were not "robbed." Rates and prices were not advanced to take advantage of the demand. A citizens' committee arranged frequent excursions to the many points of interest in and about the city, and kept the room of each delegate and correspondent beautifully supplied with beautiful flowers and luscious fruits. The main streets were handsomely decorated with bunting and flowers throughout the week.

As for the convention hall—the Civic Auditorium—it was almost ideal for the purpose. By the addition of a specially designed decorative canvas ceiling and the installation of the voice magnifying device used in Chicago, the acoustics were made practically faultless. The speaker's voice was carried to the farthest corner of the great edifice and did not have the phonographic quality that was noticed in the Chicago coliseum. Committee rooms, lunch rooms and emergency hospitals were beyond criticism. Most of the ushers were young women from the University of California, and they and the other attendants performed their duties with courtesy and efficiency.

All this may sound overenthusiastic, but it is the sober judgment of one who has seen many national conventions. (Copyright, 1920, Western Newspaper Union.)

Cannot Praise this Remedy too Highly

THE WAY ONE LADY FEELS AFTER SUFFERING TWO YEARS
Judging from her letter, the misery and wretchedness endured by Mrs. Charlie Taylor, R. F. D. No. 1, Box 144, Dillon, S. C., must have been terrible. No one, after reading her letter, can continue to doubt the great healing power of PE-RU-NA for troubles due to catarrh or catarrhal conditions in any part of the body. Her letter is an inspiration to every sick and suffering man or woman anywhere. Here it is: "I suffered two years with catarrh of the head, stomach and bowels. I tried two of the best doctors, who gave me up. I then took PE-RU-NA and can truthfully say I am well. When I began to use PE-RU-NA, I weighed one hundred pounds. My weight now is one hundred and fifty. I cannot praise PE-RU-NA too highly, for it was a Godsend to me. I got relief from the first half bottle and twelve bottles cured me. I advise all sufferers to take PE-RU-NA."

As an emergency remedy in the home, there is nothing quite the equal of this reliable, time-tried medicine, PE-RU-NA. Thousands place their sole dependence on it for coughs, colds, stomach and bowel trouble, constipation, rheumatism, pains in the back, side and loins and to prevent the grip and Spanish Flu. To keep the blood pure and maintain bodily strength and robustness, take PE-RU-NA. You can buy PE-RU-NA anywhere in either tablet or liquid form.

Burglary is Not Profitable.

When one reads in the paper an account of a burglary where the thief succeeded in securing $5,000 to $10,000 worth of jewelry, one is apt to think that the spoils were probably worth the risk, but investigation has shown that thieves never realize anything like the full value of their plunder. In England it was discovered that out of 468 burglaries reported in various parts of the kingdom the proceeds netted the principals an average of about $75 each. The value of the plunder was many times that figure. In addition to this, each one of the number had been sent to jail for his crime.

Open Sesame.

"Did you have any trouble in seeing that captain of industry whose time is reputed to be worth almost a million a minute?"

"None at all."

"How did you contrive to get into his private office?"

"I stood just outside the door and engaged his secretary in a loud conversation about golf, in which I displayed a superior knowledge of the game."

Tired and Worn?

Yellow Men Sleep

By JEREMY LANE

Copyright by The Century Co.

"WHAT A WORLD."

Synopsis — Cornelius Levinington, well-born, an orphan, comes to manhood through the devious ways of the underworld. He is saved for a better life by Andrew March, the strange adventures of "Yellow Men Sleep" begin when Con takes by force a small leather sack from Chee Ming, the Chinese cook of an acquaintance. This sack contains a Chinese map of the Gobi desert, which is precious beyond price to Andrew March. Eighteen years before armed men in the Gobi had taken March's wife and infant daughter from him. Now he sends Con in search of them. On the voyage Con finds Chee Ming a fellow passenger. Con is shot by a poisoned dart, and while he is in the consequent stupor his map is stolen. On the river boat to Feking he again sees Chee Ming, and realizes they are seeking the same destination. Con keeps faith with Andrew March and starts on his mission westward with instructions. After weeks of difficult travel he reaches the little settlement of Shan-sung and meets instructions from Andrew March to the effect that Con has been made a federal agent to search out Chee Ming, who has brought quantities of opium, a deadly drug, to San Francisco. At Shan-sung Con is unexpectedly joined by March. The two Americans press forward into the desert. Armed men swoop down on them, rob them of everything and leave them to die in the desert.

CHAPTER VI

Trepass.

This shred of a chance, half humorous, was despatch in anger and loss. Sand was a rasp to their bodies, and the slashed clothing gave scant protection. Already, in imagination, Con was in need of a drink. The thought of brandy was a horror now, and the idea of clear, cool water like a knife in the throat. Andrew March sat down and studied the bottom of his foot.

"How much do you think," Con inquired, "in miles?"

"Oh, not so very far. If we only had one camel."

"Yes—one with milk in her."

"Don't talk like that!" said the elder man, sharply.

The subject of drinkables was thus dismissed by the veteran, and Con bowed his head in acknowledgment.

Late in the day the sand-storm passed, and the air cleared. They went up along the vases of sand, fresh drifted, out of the gully, to gaze at large upon their world—a prison as vast as the horizon circle.

"The white race could wander in here and get lost," said Andrew March.

"Let's not talk about getting lost, either," said Levinington.

It was the elder man's turn to nod agreement.

The country was fantastic in formation and color, reddish hills running in rows alone, like the spine of a world monster showing through. At intervals were cuts, showing the deeper layers of rocky blue and blood-color. Not so much as a dead twig anywhere, or a bird. The skyline was notched with tilted rocks. Levinington could not help wondering how soon he would wither and dry up, to bleach beside some colorful boulder.

Pain was gripping him. It was neither grief nor illness, but the current of life, deeper than many are called to feel. He met it silently, with a fortitude that perhaps his mother and father before him helped to integrate. Death had small part in this bitterness. It was a matter of life.

"Help me to keep sane," he said to March.

"That is mutual," said his friend.

"But you are not in any danger. I watched you a long while before choosing you for this task. You are not a materialist, and only materialists go insane."

"Yes, I suppose all the others are born with a touch of some kind."

"So I've heard," replied March.

They walked through the sand. Sometimes their feet sank deep and threw them backward, but perhaps the next step would find smooth and solid rock. Progress was a ruck of physical strain, and pitifully slow. The hills ahead, so hard to reach, were on a diagonal across their route. It started Levinington to find that this diagonal straightened out every hundred paces. This was simply the effect of the landscape upon their eyes. The hills were distinctly misleading, having a tendency to deflect the course that should lie at an angle over them. Without strict attention to their shadows, the two pedestrians must certainly have wandered off into sandy oblivion. The perennial hands of the ages had wrought cunningly to confuse.

"Our path should lead across those big humps to the southwest," said March.

They suffered the illusion of growing smaller, since there was nothing anywhere to "new familiar associations and comparisons."

Night drew down before they had made any noticeable progress. They rested upon the pink sands, and Con laid a pillow of proper shape, restful to the eye in its imitation, although it was solid rock. A dull substitute for sleep claimed their bodies. Levinington's dreams were wrecked by huge tumbling mountains that proved at the striking-moment to be riders, desert robbers with the fervor of a perverted religion in their ice-colored eyes. All through this wretched slumber, the white man ached and burned from the lashing of the storm, nerve-rob from the thought of their capture and plight. At daybreak the wind began again.

"Let's go," said Con.

"My understanding" — as March studied his tattooed foot, he made this pun—"derates plainly a continuance of that direction."

Levinington followed him over the unfriendly surfaces. An old wind, half asleep, hissed against rocks, and at moments burned their ankles. By the flying dust the sun was diminished to a far red-hot griddle. Con could not look at his friend for the hurt it gave him. He knew that he must himself look as bad. It was not vanity that made him care, but a simple desire to remain human, and not become a thing of rags and red and thirst.

Tolling up the unequal slopes, to arrive at a new point of confusion, they would note that their shadows no longer fell true beside them, and March would sit down and study the map in its inconvenient location. Then they would go on.

The crest of the first series of hills gave only a sharper wind, a howling vista of desolation. Levinington was desperately weary. His step slouched, and the once powerful shoulders lurched sidewise. Lonely thoughts passed through his mind, like birds in a ruined hall. His eyes were puffed. There was Memphis, and that mystic high board fence at the end of the blind alley. There was Bill the yellow cook, twisting his hands together in such a quick fascinating manner; or laughing with a voice like the cry of gulls; again, inquiring woe-tales in a language beyond translation. A phantom Shast stood at moments on the edge of the world. Then the unclean woman of Dowagie appeared, with oily black hair, straggling upon her neck, her body bulging with neglect—and suddenly Levinington was choking. March gave him a hand.

"Control yourself," whispered the older man. "It can be done. Same as walking straight when you're drunk. I've seen men in India go for ten days without water, and fifty days without food. It can be done."

"Thanks," muttered Con hoarsely. "I'll try. Ten days, you say, without water."

"And they haven't as good reason as we."

After a time Con turned again to March, and the twist on his face was meant for a smile. "Do you think it will be ten days this time?"

They pressed down into the narrow valley. The next miniature range did not lie parallel either to their course or to its dry sister range. Complexity of lines and contours increased. The two sun-caught men could no longer rely upon their own shadows, for time was passing, and they could not determine how much to allow for the shifting of the planes. Con's heart pounded with fear. It seemed old earth herself was no longer tolerant.

Much of the former Levinington was broken down. All the cells of his body that had ever cried for brandy were now dead and gone. He had been burned down to the pure primitive thirst for water. No trifling attachments could remain here to nettle a man. Desire, once red and full as the storms of summer night, had faded out. Con had been seared and whipped to a plane of humanity bare and solid and basic—a relation of man to the earth and sun—where the hands of the sea are but a sea zero. All the moist forces of Levinington were turned inward to sustain life itself.

"Is that that I hear thunder?"

"Maybe the pulse in your own ears," answered March.

They staggered up a third series of hills, which were spread fan-shape in the midst of the world. Looking back, they noted that the first range appeared to have turned partly about since they passed that way. The sun of afternoon showed in the wrong quarter of the sky. March sank to his knees and began to draw intersecting lines in the sand. To Con, as he sprawled near his friend, it was like forcing the solar system back into place. West and north were again established, almost against conviction. They dragged across the third range, but the instinctive flutter of hope in their hearts died quickly, when they saw that had miscalculated. Across a deeper valley was another monster bank of dust, another range.

Abruptly Con stopped and pointed down the slope. Directly below them something was moving.

Stones were rolling down the hill. It was not clear from what point they started. Perhaps a dragon had burrowed into the hill and was kicking out of red clay went flying down, below the two watchers. Levinington peered, forgetting the awful sun. It was like recovery from blindness, to find something in motion in the dead world. At length, from a hole in the hillside, a living creature appeared, resembling somewhat a man.

Now others of the same species emerged and stood on a sandy ledge, half-way down the slope. They seemed like fat, misshapen children, thin-legged, hunched of shoulder, with heads set close. Their caps were coils of their own hair. The arms of all were dwarfish. They had come out to raise the air after their labors within the hill. The falling clay had stopped. More and yet more of these dumb-humans came out into the sunlight, until the slope was darkly pattered with their leathern bodies.

March shook his head. Levinington noted the first sign of fear in the elder man, who remained silent.

From that distance they determined that the creatures were naked above the waist, but that they wore short, dark skirts like those pictured upon the ancient walls of Assyria. Their faces or staves proved to be implements resembling garden hoses, the faint sound of their conversation drifted up to the Americans. But this was drowned in the slow thunder of Con's temples.

"Cave men?" muttered Levinington. "Witches' children?"

"Aren't they solid? Have my eyes gone out?"

March did not hear, for he simply whispered to himself, "What a world!"

A dromedary was coming across from the further hills. Leisurely it followed a slanting way up to the cluster of creatures around the pit.

On the beast were strapped four baskets. Now many hands set about filling these with pebbles, or so it appeared. The camel-driver was another of the crooked dwarves. When the baskets were full, he led the animal down by the same path, starting across the valley toward the opposite barrier of sand.

The little men who had come out of the hill began to disappear. Their bare bodies were like rough nuggets of rock. Levinington's eyes twitched, and he brushed a hand across his face. He wanted to laugh and fling himself down hill. He would ask them for water. For an instant he hated Andrew March for being afraid, and an instant later realized this feeling was merely his own deep-stirring fear. He swallowed thickly. A tear stood in one eye, making humorous the pain in his heart.

"Didn't know I had it in me," he said, grinning.

March did not see the tear. He had grown pale beneath the grime.

"Oh, God!" he mumbled, "this isn't what we came for."

"Suppose we'd better not ask them for a drink," said Con. "We'll go on and hunt for it, because it must grow natural somewhere around here. Shall we follow the dromedary?"

The little men had gone in. Dust rose like smoke from the open shaft. The laden beast was etching his way across the valley. March had roused from his apathy. He looked at Con, who asked:

"Can you make it—down hill?"

"Boy," said March steadily, "you've got a tungsten nervous system."

Commanding their scant energies, the white men made a final play for life, and walked along the crest of the ridge, to keep the animal in view without exposing themselves. The afternoon was waning. The wind slackened. The valley beneath them was painted with soft purple shadow. The hunched little humans and the dromedary turned into a cleft in the great bank, and disappeared.

"There must be something to drink where he is going," said Con.

"Yes, because the dromedary is natural, at least wait here," continued Levinington, "and I'll run on to make sure."

"We'll go together," said March.

They descended to the valley, and crossing, entered the ravine. Con was light-headed now. He had no further thought of avoiding discovery, by no matter what enemy. Instinct began and ended in thirst, and even the idea of death meant a possible drink. This pervasive dryness was a question of the soul, a thirst far deeper than the body. Reckless intent shone in Levinington's eyes.

March looked at him sidewise, and Con heard only the latter fragments of his speech:

"Cincinnati—you were going like this when I first saw you. I knew then how Washington needed you in the Gobi. God needs you—this is it—"

"Cincinnati," said Con, uncertainly, "met me the best friend in the world."

He stumbled headlong in a returning wave of weakness, quite the opposite of a moment since.

Dust of the dromedary was rising a net far ahead. It required a furious expense of will power to gain upon it. Then, something like a loving hand touched their faces. This was a cool breeze from the far upper end of the ravine. The pathway was wide and well graded. In the sunlight colored strata wallled high and various on either side, as might appear to an ant traversing a lane of birthday cake. The breeze was soft upon their cheeks.

Perhaps the peculiar halting person beside the dromedary felt that he was being followed—a most fabulous event to him. Some antenna of his wretched consciousness was troubled, and he glanced behind him, through the dun cloud. His throat closed upon a cry of horror. Convulsed, he fled up the rise, and out of sight. His pale scream came back.

"Announcing us," whispered Con, grimly.

"But look!"

Another figure waited at the end of the upward road—some one upon a horse, motionless. The sunlight was a rain of black dots for Levinington now, but his muscles were galvanized to a forward motion. It was not in him to stop. He took time to note, stupidly, that though his feet were bleeding, they were insensible as boots. He guessed that the mounted figure might be a sentinel. The sequence of what followed was never afterward clear to Con.

A Rushing Cloud of Horsemen Thundered into the Ravine From the Upper Levels.

Closer, he saw the glitter upon a long gray cloak. The sentinel had no weapon, and gave no sign other than to watch with curiety the two jaded wanderers. The pony was well groomed and restive. Arabian in build. From beyond the crest of the road a volley of shouts came down into the ravine, and the swift beat of hoofs. All these on-coming riders were as yet invisible, but the cries were resonant with hate.

March called out to the gray sentinel, in the best Chinese he could frame with swollen lips. In response, the left arm of the rider came up, glittering, to shield the face below the eyes.

A rushing cloud of horsemen thundered into the ravine from the upper levels. Swords were flashing in the ruddy light. Harsh battle-chanting filled the dust. The riders swooped down to trample the intruders.

Levinington was not accountable. He leaned forward to breast them. His hands worked with strange power. Something elemental lived in him; something like the centaurs that had peopled the night horizons. His throat rattled the challenge. The first of the wild horses swerved as if he were a crouching wolf. Con rocked forward, and seized a sword-wrist as it swung low at March's head. And abruptly all strength left him. He fell in the road.

"In a large part the insubordination of servants arises from the growing sense of unwillingness to be directed and governed by the individual. It is the spirit of the age which rebels against the dictates of the individual, and submits freely to the despotism of an organization."

SEASONABLE DISHES.

When fresh fruits are plentiful one need not ask what to have for dessert, for these are nothing more acceptable than a dish of fresh berries, or fruit of any kind. They are more wholesome than rich pastry and puddings.

For variety one may like to try: Strawberry Fluff—One egg white, one cupful of powdered sugar and one cupful of strawberries into a deep bowl. Whip with a Dover egg beater until the mixture is stiff enough to stand up and keep its shape. It will take about twenty minutes' beating. Serve in sherbet cups with this custard for a sauce.

Scalloped Celery—Cook two cupfuls of celery in water to cover, until tender. Save one cupful of the stock; add to it one cupful of milk. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add two of flour and when well mixed add the milk and stock. Cook until smooth and thick; season well with salt and pepper, then add the cooked celery and one-half cupful of cheese. Line a buttered baking dish with buttered bread crumbs, pour in the celery and sauce and cover with crumbs. The dish may be prepared in layers of celery, cheese and sauce, if preferred.

But Timbals—Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter; add one cupful of soft bread crumbs and three-quarters of a cupful of milk; cook until smooth. Add one cupful of nut meats, one tablespoonful of minced parsley and two eggs, well beaten. Season with salt and pepper. Fill buttered individual molds two-thirds full, set in a pan of hot water and bake 20 minutes, covered with a buttered paper.

Chicken à la Reine—Melt four tablespoonfuls of butter, add three tablespoonfuls of flour, and when well blended add three cupfuls of milk; stir and cook slowly, then add two cupfuls of diced chicken, one-half cupful of mushrooms, one cupful of asparagus tips, one-fourth cupful of pimientos minced, one teaspoonful of salt, a dash of mustard and paprika. Keep hot over hot water until ready to serve.

Dreaming of Old Age.
To dream of old age is a sign of coming good news. To see an old man is a sign of love for the young dreamer, a sign of success for the mature person. To see an old woman in one's dream foretells an immediate pleasant surprise.—Chicago Herald and Examiner.

SOMETHING ABOUT SOUPS.

In a meal where soup begins the dinner and the dishes following are substantial, the soup should be clear, light and hot, but not in excess of nutritive. But in meals where the soup is to form the main dish of the family it should be nutritious in character.

To make stock use bones left from steaks, roasts and poultry or the liquor in which they have been boiled; keep in the ice chest. They may be added to from day to day. The bones should be cracked so that all the marrow may be dissolved. Cover the bones and any meat with cold water and simmer gently for several hours. Skin and at the end of the third hour add any favorings such as herbs, any of the onion family, cloves, carrot, turnip, celery tops, bay leaves and a teaspoonful of peppercorns to each four quarts of soup. The delicate flavor of soup is ruined if it is boiled, as the volatile oils and other flavors pass off in the air. The stock is strained at the end of four hours and set away to cool so that the surplus fat can be easily removed. To clarify stock allow one egg white with the shell for each quart of stock. Crush the shell and beat it with a little cold stock and the egg white until well mixed. Add to the stock just brought to the boiling point and then strain through cheesecloth wrung out of cold water. In summer stock will keep better with no vegetable favorings added.

Consommé.—Take a shin of beef and a shin of veal, wipe with damp cloth. Cut all meat from the bones. In a kettle add one teaspoonful of caramel or a teaspoonful of sugar to brown, then add half a cupful of chopped onion and the same quantity of water. Cook five minutes, then add the bones which have been well cracked, the meat, and cover with five quarts of cold water. Let simmer and follow the above directions and finish in the same way.

Either beans or peas make a most nutritious soup. Cook the vegetables until very soft, with an onion. Put them through a sieve and bind with flour and butter cooked together. Add milk and serve well seasoned and hot.

A puree is a thick soup. For the preparation of this soup a sieve and wooden spoons are necessary as the vegetables if put through the sieve become fine enough to be well blended and does not sink to the bottom of the kettle. The milk is slightly thickened and holds the fine particles of vegetable in suspension.

"In a large part the insubordination of servants arises from the growing sense of unwillingness to be directed and governed by the individual. It is the spirit of the age which rebels against the dictates of the individual, and submits freely to the despotism of an organization."

Tire Problems Solved.

Did you ever think that some day some one would invent a device that would solve the Tire Problem? The "Maxotire" is the answer. Thousands are using "MAXOTIRES." Some, of course, with the first casing but many with the second, third and even the fourth. Surely, "MAXOTIRES" must be saving owners considerable money, time and eliminating grief, or there would not be such a great MAXOTIRE demand. No difference how much they save others, they will do you no good unless you USE MAXOTIRES. They will save you buying tires and tubes so often. You can wear your tires down to the last thread—often more than doubling the mileage.

What "Maxotires" Are

They are not "Reliners." They do not reline the casing but encircle the tube completely—holding the pressure within themselves—GET THE DIFFERENCE.

"Magic Rubber Mend"

is successfully used for repairing casings and inner tubes in place of the expensive process of vulcanizing.
