DEMOCRATS AND G. O. P. AT THE FAIR

Everybody knows there is a lot of fireworks in politics, but how many of us know that a whole lot of politics can be put into fireworks? The Thearle-Duffield Fireworks company of Chicago, pyrotechnical experts, who have a contract to put on the fireworks display at the coming county fair, have a side-splitting fireworks feature which is called "Grooming the Political Animals". This act will be very appropriate at the time it is staged when a national political campaign—the great quadrennial sweepstakes to the White house—is on.

The beauty of this fireworks display is that, regardless of your political beliefs or affiliations, it will bring you a laugh and cause no offense. It is the best kind of good, wholesome American humor portrayed in pyrotechnics. In this production our old acquaintance, the G. O. P. elephant, wobbles across the entire exhibition field in search of political hopes followed by the familiar Democratic donkey with its tail up and its ears wagging. You applaud according to the way you believe—and you will both laugh and applaud.

PLEASE, PAY UP

Quite a number of our subscribers have been remitting in answer to our last week's call in the Statesman. However, in checking over our list we still find a number of delinquents which we hope will heed this appeal. Everything in the production of a newspaper has increased mightily. Print paper has gone up three hundred per cent; job stock has gone up four hundred per cent; ink, oils, machinery, type, and everything else in proportion. It makes a very serious problem for your local paper.

FESTIVAL AT ST. MICHAELS BIG SUCCESS

The mid-summer festival held at St. Michaels last Sunday, under the auspices of the Catholic Church, there was a grand success both financially and socially. It is estimated that about 1,000 people attended the festival in the afternoon, and about 500 in the evening. Various stands, such as cane racks, doll racks, punching machines, etc., together with the splendid music rendered by Roden's orchestra, helped to complete the merry maker's most enjoyable time. In the evening the choir rendered a few songs, which were highly appreciated by all present. A supper, which received the hearty approval of all the celebrants, was served by the members of the Ladies' Aid society. All told the festival was the most enjoyable of any ever staged at St. Michaels, and the good work done by the committee in charge to make it such was well rewarded by the large attendance.

On last Tuesday while Charles Rucks was cutting rye on his farm he saw something wandering along the fence with four fuzzy little animals following it. Quickly hiding behind his team he watched for the approach "something" Alas! a mother wolf and four young ones came along.

"Charley" who had nothing to defend himself began to whoop and holler when the wolf began to advance towards him. Finally jumping upon the binder seat and madly waving his arms he succeeded in getting rid of the wolf and the young ones.

A number of other farmers near here also reported that they have seen a wolf sneaking along the grass a number of times always near sun down. Perhaps the Lomira sportsmen will have some real hunting this winter if that wolf litter grows up.—Lomira Review.

OLD VILLAGE LANDMARK SOLD

A deal was consummated last week Thursday, whereby the Farmers Market and Supply Co., of Kewaskum purchased the C. C. Schaefer saloon property and residence, located at the intersection of Fond du Lac Ave., and Main street. It is the intention of the new owners to change part of the building into a storage room. Later no doubt the building will be remodeled preparatory to operating a farmers equity store.

The selling and remodeling of the Schaefer saloon property, another of Kewaskum's old landmarks passes into history. This building was one of the first structures to be built in this village. The building was formerly owned and managed by Jos. Schmidt, Secretary of the Kewaskum Limited Fire Insurance Co. It was known as the Eagle Hotel for many years, the most popular hotel in this community. In the year 1914, Mr. Schmidt disposed of the property to Rosenheimer and Day, local real estate men, who in turn sold same to Mr. Schaefer. Mr. Schaefer is as yet undecided what he will do in the future. For the present he will continue to manage the place, as he has in the past, until he finds suitable work.

A COMING EVENT

On Saturday, July 24, 1920, death claimed as a victim Mrs. Regina Dickman, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Alex Sook, in the town of Auburn. Deceased had been ill only two days with lobar pneumonia. Mrs. Dickman was born on January 17, 1827 in Schoenberg, Germany. On March 28, 1856, she was married to A. F. G. Dickman. On July 13, 1866, the couple immigrated to America, settling on the present homestead. Seven children were born to this union, five of whom survive, namely: Frank of Cudahy, Wis., Otto, Gustave and Louise of the town of Auburn and Augusta of Campbellsport. Two daughters preceded their mother in death a number of years ago. Her husband died April 20, 1874. Mrs. Dickman was one of the town of Auburn's oldest and most estimable residents, coming to Wisconsin, when this state was still a wilderness. She was a congenial neighbor, possessed of a lovable disposition and had many friends in the county. The funeral was held on Tuesday afternoon, at one o'clock from the residence, with services in the German Reformed church at Campbellsport. Rev. Wm. Zenk officiated. Interment was made in the congregation's cemetery. The surviving relatives have our heartfelt sympathy.

MURDER TRUNK GIRL IDENTIFIED

Victim Said to Have Been the Wife of Eugene Leroy.

KNOWN ALSO AS FERNANDEZ

Established That Woman Disappeared Day Before Baggage Left Detroit for New York—Girl Originally From Starkville, Miss.

Detroit, Mich., July 27.—Clues, tied together from information developed here and received from New York and Birmingham, Ala., seemed to clinch the identification of the New York trunk victim as the wife—or intimate—of Eugene Leroy, alias Fernandez, alias Wood.

Leroy, said to be of the Spanish-American type, is being sought throughout the United States and Canada as the slayer of the girl.

He is described as an automobile mechanic, of dark complexion and with shiny black hair.

If the murder victim was the supposed wife of Leroy, her maiden name was Katherine Jackson and her home originally was in Starkville, Miss.

Development of this identification angle was achieved in Birmingham, Ala., when Allen A. Tatum, a linotype operator, in whose name the murder trunk was shipped, reported he had visited Mrs. Leroy in Detroit as late as June 5.

Police received Mr. Tatum's report and checked it with information obtained at the Wa-De-Na apartments here, from which an "A. Leroy" shipped two trunks June 10.

Mrs. Leroy disappeared a day earlier. The trunk and clothing and blankets which had been peddled about the unclad and mutilated body of the young woman were returned to Detroit.

Mrs. Lottie Brooks, keeper of the apartment, identified the murder trunk as one she had seen in the Leroy apartments.

She also identified two of the returned blankets as having been found missing from the Leroy apartment after the departure of the occupants.

Mr. Tatum, to whom the body of the victim was consigned in care of the American Express company at New York, gave himself up to Birmingham detectives.

He explained he had known Katherine Jackson in Birmingham, first in June, 1919. He said she had gone from there to Nashville, where she used her own name and that of Katherine Dixon. Later, he reported, he received letters sent by her from Detroit.

"She wrote me for money," Tatum said, according to the information forwarded here.

"I sent it to her and later received a request that I visit her in Detroit. I went there in May of this year and saw her off and on until June 5, when I lost track of her."

"She told me she was married to Eugene Leroy, a mechanical engineer employed in automobile works in the city. She intimated that Leroy was jealous of her."

NEGRO KILLED SEVEN

Convicted Murderer Confesses to Other Crimes.

Committed So Many Burglaries That He Cannot Enumerate or Remember Them.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 26.—Mose Gibson, negro, sentenced to hang for the murder of Roy Trapp, Fullerton, Cal., rancher, has confessed to seven murders and so many burglaries he could not enumerate them, according to a telephone message received by Sheriff John C. Cline of Los Angeles county from Sheriff J. E. Jackson of Santa Ana. Sheriff Jackson has just returned from taking Gibson to the penitentiary at San Quentin.

Four murders to which Jackson said Gibson confessed are: Roy Trapp, rancher, Fullerton, Cal.; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Earheart, Phoenix, Ariz., last month, and J. R. Revis, white restaurateur man of Baton Rouge Junction, Ala., 12 years ago.

Sheriff Jackson later said the three other murders admitted by Gibson were those of a woman at Orange City Junction, Fla., killed in November, 1919; a watchman at a sugar mill at Gramercy, St. James parish, La., murdered in November, 1910, and a storekeeper at Wagoner, Griddle county, La., killed in November, 1910.

Admissions that he committed "thousands" of burglaries, obtaining sums from a few cents to $100, were made by Gibson, according to the sheriff.

Gibson was arrested in Topoca, Ariz., for the murder of Trapp, and for an assault on Mrs. Trapp. He was brought here, pleaded guilty to the murder charge, and was sentenced to hang September 24.

U. S. INCOME TOPS EXPENSE

Total of $1,185,184,692 is Cut From the National Debt.

NEW REDUCTION IS EXPECTED

Secretary Houston Issues Statement Covering Operations of the Government for Fiscal Year Ended June 30—$2,297,380,180 Under Peak.

Washington, July 26.—The government's income for the fiscal year ending June 30, exceeded its expenses for the first time in three years, Secretary Houston declared in a statement in which he announced a reduction in the gross public debt and forecast a further "important reduction" for this coming twelve months.

While the annual operations of the government showed a surplus of $201,221,547, the more important change, treasury officials said, was the cutting of $1,185,184,692 from the gross public debt during the year. The net debt aggregated $24,296,321,467 on June 30 and $25,484,508,160 a year previously, but in the meantime the obligations of the nation had mounted to their highest point—$28,506,701,648 on August 31—due to the operations incident to the handling of certificates of treasury certificates of indebtedness. Thus, a reduction of $2,297,380,180 from the peak is shown.

Outside of the transactions involving the gross debt, treasury receipts for the year aggregated $6,694,565,888, while expenditures totaled $6,403,343,841. The statement revealed, however, that the surplus was due largely to a partial liquidation of the assets of the war finance corporation. Exclusive of the surplus, the income from that source, there was a deficit of $17,879,072 in the actual handling of income and expenditures.

"The operations incident to the handling of the maturities of treasury certificates from June 15 to July 15, have now been completed," the statement said, "and have resulted in further reductions in both the gross debt and the floating debt of the United States. The gross debt on June 30, 1920, on the basis of daily treasury statements, amounted to $24,296,321,467, as against $25,484,508,160 at the end of the previous fiscal year on June 30, 1919, and $28,506,701,648 on August 31, 1919, when the gross debt was at its peak.

In other words, the gross debt on June 30, 1920, has been reduced by $2,297,380,180, from its peak on August 31, 1919, and by $1,185,184,692 from the figure on June 30, 1919. On July 20, 1920, on the basis of daily treasury statements, the gross debt amounted to $24,284,309,321, showing a further reduction of about $35,000,000 after taking into account the $201,061,500 face amount of treasury certificates issued under date of July 15.

The floating debt (loan and tax certificates unissued) on June 30, 1920, amounted to $2,552,590, as against $3,287,875,500 at the close of the previous fiscal year on June 30, 1919, and $3,957,225,000 on August 31, 1919. On July 20, 1920, the loan and tax certificates outstanding amounted to $2,453,046,500, showing a further reduction of about $31,000,000, as the result of the redemption of loan certificates since the close of the fiscal year, 1920, in the amount of some $232,000,000, and the issue of loan and tax certificates dated July 15, in the amount of some $201,000,000.

"Further issues of treasury certificates will be offered as necessary from time to time to provide for the current requirements of the government, and to meet maturities of treasury certificates now outstanding.

"The amounts of these issues will depend in large measure upon the extent of the borrowings imposed upon the treasury by the transportation act, 1920, in connection with the return of the railroads to private control, including particularly the liability on the guaranty, which is as yet unascertainable. While, as the result of new issues of treasury certificates in the intervals between the large income and profits tax installments, there may be temporary increases in both gross debt and floating debt, the treasury expects, though it is impossible to speak positively, that both gross debt and floating debt will, during the first two quarters of the current fiscal year, be reduced below the figures outstanding on June 30, 1920, and that unless additional burdens should be imposed by legislation, there will be an important further reduction in the last two quarters of the fiscal year."

KILL IN BELFAST RIOTS

Unionists and Sinn Fein Clash, Despite Military.

Bitterness of Feeling in the Irish City Seems to Be on the Increase.

Belfast, July 26.—Soldiers found it necessary to use machine guns against rioters in fighting throughout the city. In the Falls road district the Sinn Feiners were sniping soldiers and police from roofs and windows of houses. The troops returned the fire. It is stated that the wounded persons in the night's fighting total more than 100. Thirty arrests were made.

Three unionists were shot dead by Sinn Fein snipers and another man's head was blown off. A man helping to carry the body of one of the dead men into a house was slain. Ten persons have been killed in the rioting.

Shooting was renewed during the morning in the Kashmir street area, where bitter fighting occurred Thursday night in clashes between unionists and Sinn Feiners, with military intervention. Early in the renewal of the hostilities in this district one man was reported wounded by a shot that passed through the window of his home.

The disorders, which started Wednesday, after some Sinn Fein workers in a shipyard were attacked, were renewed at frequent intervals. Throughout the afternoon the military was engaged on Falls road in erecting barbed wire entanglements across the fronts of shops wrecked in Wednesday night's disturbances and putting large detachments of troops at certain danger spots.

Soldiers with fixed bayonets patrolled the disturbed streets and many demonstrations which might have led to serious results were thus interrupted. Looting and smashing of windows prevailed, spirit, groceries, and licensed premises being especially singled out.

There was serious rioting at Balobridge, the home of Colonel Smyth, who was assassinated a few days ago. The offices of a news agency were set afire and destroyed.

COOLIDGE ASKS LAW AND ORDER

Governor Accepts Nomination as Harding's Running Mate.

SAYS G. O. P. IS NOT NARROW

Sets Forth His Ideas of the Country's Problems—Demands Steps for Peace and Relief of Economic Distress.

Northampton, Mass., July 26.—Republican party leaders gathered here for the ceremonies when Governor Coolidge was formally notified of his nomination for the vice presidency. The program officially opened with a meeting of the notification committee at 12:30, but the city began its celebration several hours earlier. Thousands of visitors arrived during the forenoon and marching delegations testified as to their loyalty to the vice presidential nominee.

"Law and Order" Is Slogan

The city, with its office buildings and its residences decorated with flags and bunting, with pictures of its candidate, under the slogan, "Law and Order," prominently displayed in hundreds of windows and with its clubs maintaining open houses, gave evidence of its intentions to do its full part in its tribute to its most distinguished citizen. The notification exercises took place at Allen field on the Smith college grounds. Dr. L. Clark Seelye, president emeritus of Smith college, presided and the invocation was delivered by Rev. Kenneth H. Welles, pastor of the Edwards Congregational church, which Governor Coolidge attends. Michael K. Fitzgerald, the Democratic mayor of Northampton, who has just arisen from a sick bed, delivered the address of welcome and Governor Morrow of Kentucky the notification address.

Governor Coolidge's Speech

"America must be rescued from all the reaction of the war," declared Governor Coolidge in his speech of acceptance. With the emergency for "voluntary autocracy" over, he said, the nation must be restored to the people of their government and property, eliminating the "menace of seizure that hangs over private enterprise, blighting in its effect, paralyzing in its result, to the public detriment."

Governor Coolidge went on to outline how a return "to a thoroughly peace basis" should be brought about. He urged:

1. Strict observance of law and maintenance of order.

2. Elimination of extravagance of government and relaxation of private extravagance as the first steps in lowering the high cost of living.

3. Revision of "that great breeder of public and private extravagance, the excess profits tax," and recourse to customs taxes on imports.

4. Punishment of profiteers.

5. Reduction of the amount of money without curtailing necessary credits together with increased production.

6. Re-establishment of railroads "left by government operation disorganized and demoralized."

On Capital and Labor

7. Different public attitude toward industry, "a larger comprehension of the interdependence of capital, management and labor, and better facilities for the prompt and reasonable adjustment of industrial disputes."

8. Suitable reward to farmers because "the economic strength of a country rests on the farm."

9. Realization that victory in the war is "not a substitute for further human effort," but means more responsibility.

10. A helping hand and care of dependents to those who served the nation in every patriotic capacity in the world war.

11. More general recognition and defense from lynching of the colored races.

12. Quick ratification of the woman suffrage amendment.

Must Make Peace Soon. "But," he said, "the country cannot be securely restored to a peace basis in anything until a peace is first made with those with whom we have been at war."

Governor Coolidge endorsed the stand of Republican senators for reservations to the proposed League of Nations. He declared that persons and property of Americans wherever they may lawfully be must forever have protection, adding that "a government disregarding this invites the contempt of the world."

Scoring those engaged in "organized efforts to undermine the faith of our people in their government, stifle production and ultimately stir up revolution," and warning against the "attempts to create class distinctions," Governor Coolidge pointed out that the destiny of America lies in the homes of the people themselves, concluding: "Look well then to the hearthstone; therein all hope for America lies."

Daffodil Flower of the Wild

The daffodil, the glory of English lawns and cool pastures, has other qualities besides beauty to offer. It is not a bit fastidious either about soil or culture. It only requires to be planted and left at liberty, and it enjoys the constitution of a coltsfoot, says Maxwell. Only in one respect does it fail to rival most other flowers of the family—it is scentless. It is a true child of the field and the wood, never to be seen at its best in formal borders or plantings.

TRIES TO END MUDDLE

LEWIS ASKS THE OPERATORS TO MEET MINERS.

Union Chief Sends Invitation to Brewster Calling for a Joint Conference.

Indianapolis, July 26.—John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, sent the following telegram to Thomas T. Brewster, chairman of the operators' executive committee:

"The present disturbed situation in the coal industry is a matter of grave importance and of tremendous public concern. The commercial and social equilibrium of our country will be increasingly disturbed unless prompt remedial adjustments are made by those elements charged with such responsibility. It is my profound conviction that any remedies which must be applied should be done so by orderly processes and through the instrumentality of the existing machinery within the coal industry.

"I am accordingly herewith making an official request that you join me in a call for the immediate assembly of a joint conference of operators and miners of the central competitive field for the purpose of giving consideration to the confusion now existing in the coal industry and the national emergency which has thus been created and for the further purpose of applying practical measures designed to restore normal conditions.

"Please advise me at the earliest possible hour of your action."

Mr. Lewis said the telegram had the approval of the miners' international executive board, now in session here.

CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

As the girl knelt and drew her purple veil about her, losing herself within a poison that was scented like cinnamon and musty wine, an aged slave arose from the bower and came before the monarch, although the monarch probably could not see him for a cloud of blue butterflies. The slave bore a silver jar in his hands, and over his gaunt shoulder was a square of white satin. He spread the satin upon the eaves before the palanquin, and then deftly set signing upon upraised fingers the jar of dull silver. "Faster it spun, until its very stillness blent with the monotony of the drug. Levington knew that he should go away from the gate if he wished to keep from dreaming, but he was too curious to leave. The odor from the yellow bowl touched a shelf of memories in him and this pain was more real than the grace of the brown-limbed maid.

But the silver jar stood motionless on the polished gray floor. The juggler withdrew his arm, and the jar remained suspended near the monarch. Silence was heavy, and the spy perfume overspread the white man at the gate. Con tried to retain the solid world, to remember that this drug had been sold in Dory street, that it had killed his own father, and he breathed hard, with the old anger sharpened in his heart. He swore to settle this matter, either privately or for his government. But the moment he let go that thought he could not avoid seeing the juggler as he plucked the magic jar down to his bosom, and began to pour purple wine upon the square of satin. But the white cloth remained spotless and dry. At this conclusion, the gaunt performer dipped into the bowl and pressed the soul-dark upon his own sunken eyes.

Swift, strong hands had found Levington. They came out of the world he had been unable to hold. The rudeness of the hands was satisfying to him. It aided greatly in throwing off the effects of treachery.

They placed him upon his roof again and left a guard at the head of the stairs. Con cursed himself for having wasted his only chance to seek a way to liberty.

He trod about the high inclosure, unmindful of the sun, picking his way mentally between doubt and evidence. It was depressing to remember that long ago the monarch had ordered the March house. He longed to find March now and talk things out with him. Their best possibility was to find friends, somehow, by whatever policy. They would need to co-operate in such a plan, to play it exactly together. Chee Ming had no heart, but he possessed a brain. The monarch himself had not a clean thread of nerve anywhere, by which he might consider an appeal. And so Levington sought and sought.

Before noon a stranger appeared at the top of the stairway with a curt bow and greeting for the prisoner. He was perhaps a slave, and yet a person of privilege—a wizened man with narrow shoulders, Chinese, his face a desert yellow and furrowed, cheeks like fruit that has never fallen. He was noticeably clean, his tunic giving off the faint smell of recent laundering. The veins in his old hands stood out, blue cords, as he again signified Levington's superiority over all living men. This slow snail was merely the Tau Kuanian command to follow. A double scar was crossed upon the servant's neck suggesting the strokes of two swords on a single errand. Now the ancient lips formed the English word: "Come."

There was nothing to lose, so Levington was willing. It might be an opportunity, though he feared it was connected with his delinquency in the matter of race-blending. They proceeded through the inner corridors, past the ever-burning lamps of alabaster, but did not turn in beneath the darkened arch of his throne room. In the stead, they went on to the end of the passage. The old Chinese paused. Through a closed door Con heard the voice of Andrew March. He opened the door and entered.

A victoria stood beside a long mission table, on which were books and a yellow lamp. An American college pennant was pinned above a brown mission couch. There were sofa pillows and a shelf of books. A kodak and a riding crop hung from a dagger stuck in the wall. A Morris chair was set before one of the windows. March sat upon the arm of the chair, fingering the lace curtain. Con stood still.

Near March was a young girl who seemed subtly afraid of something—of Levington himself. She wore a silken blouse, open at the throat, and a skirt of the smartly defined mode of American avenues, following the line of her slender body. Her timidity was nevertheless brightened with pleasure. The face was sun-tanned, the eyes held a diamond light. Here was the lovely golden-brown hair that had flown free upon the gray cloak of the rider, the same that the princess of yesterday had bound up high in court fashion. She was looking at him again.

It was March who spoke first, and the young man saw that he had tears in his eyes. His voice was unreliable just now: "I have found my little girl." Levington bowed, struggling with an inner tidal wave. Andrew March seized the girl's hands, and she turned to him frankly. He was saying: "But our little mother—Elthana—He kissed her hair, and she placed her hand upon his arm as if to ease his pain. She was frail beside the veteran of the sands. She did not embrace him, and March seemed not to expect any demonstration of sentiment. He regained self-control and faced Con with an effort to smile.

"This is Con Levington," he said to the girl. To Con: "My daughter, Helen."

Her name leaped in Con's heart. He bowed over her hand and found himself murmuring, "Princess." In the blur of his inward excitement her voice was like sunlight as it falls rich and mellow across an oak staircase. He was strongly affected by it. There was an embarrassed moment during which Con glanced out at the window at the moving branches of the white tree. Quickly he swung back, to add: "It is a great privilege to be summoned."

Helen said simply: "I am not sure how to speak. I never saw a white man up to this hour."

She intended this to be a compliment for she was smiling; yet he could not forget the fact that she was the royal creature who had glanced across the throne-room yesterday.

"Why have they been so extremely careful to keep us away?" he wondered aloud.

"It is Asia," she replied and, truly, he had forgotten that.

There was no mistaking the grandchild of the aged Stephen March. She was the embodiment of all that men hold dear. Her eyes made bold to tell all that in another world had been held secret. It was the old story of Asia. Perhaps her days in this desert fastness had been a monotony of innocence, but they had not made her smile a blank. Con could not estimate any thing beyond the fact that when she swayed slightly beside her father, deeply searching for the right word, her young grace was matchless.

"Do not be sorrowful," she whispered to her father.

March nodded. "Yes, that is right," and his face brightened as he regarded her.

She crossed the room, lightly, a rapid titling gait that somehow expressed the far Eastern feminine. Yet the clean whiff of the West was there also and through her personality these qualities were a smooth, soft madness to Levington. He was aware that on the journeys of his life had either ended here or just begun.

All the alluring intimations that had troubled the old Stephen March, when he had crossed America before the days of railroads, were enfolded in Helen, the same that had drawn him against the winds of the Pacific so long ago, the kingly unrest that had led him deep into Cathay, beyond the Tartar wall, to the sands of mystery and death. Perhaps in some dim way he had foreseen this daughter of his line, with her shining fatal dominion, a princess in the Gobi.

"It is most delightful—you—coming here," she said to Con.

"I think I've always heeded this way," he said, because he believed it.

"I cannot imagine the courage that brought you," said the princess. "Sha Mo is very—confusing."

"Yes, it might have been simpler if I had known," replied Levington. And March was smiling broadly now.

She had finished rearranging the tawny shells on the table and, with a courteous Oriental movement of the arm, she indicated a deep chair for her guest. Levington went to it, turned it from the window and offered it to her. He felt nearly royal himself as she accepted. Andrew March sat in the window-seat and Levington contented himself with the leather sofa that had been brought in pieces, like the mission furniture, from Grand Rapids, Michigan. The college pennant was over his head.

"I have learned," said Helen, "that white men are really white. How?"

"We are a bit tanned," admitted her father, "but for that matter, so are you. White people usually stay under cover when the sun shines."

"That is a part of tradition I had not known," she said. "I shall tell Chee Ming."

"But it is not written, and all the tradition of the world is written here, since the days of the Tower of Babel. You know that Tau Kuan is to be the school for the perfect age. Chee Ming says tradition is the treasure of life."

"Rather an Oriental statement," suggested March.

"Yes," rejoined Con, "I could mention one or two things to be written into his library."

"You are laughing at me," said Helen, sternly.

"Not at all," replied Con hastily. "Only the world is such a large place."

"I understand," said the princess, conciliatingly.

"I did not suppose," her father said, "that anyone considered Chee Ming as seriously of you do."

"Oh, yes!" Chee Ming," Besur hid an acorn under Levington's collar. "This is far better than pretending to speak English with Chee Ming," continued the princess. "He is full of hesitation and rules. I do not like to be corrected when he is wrong. I have tried to speak English with Besur. Then there are no corrections. I have tried it also with Prince Yekutol, but he will never master it. He prefers to practice with his arrows. He is pure Mongol."

Con remembered that this was her first social moment in white company. Her father endeavored again to change the subject.

"Does Chee Ming make many journeys to the United States?"

She shook her head. "He has gone but three times within my memory. Also he has gone to Egypt and Rome two times, and one time to Paris. He died before he could be married and begin his family."

Con began to realize afresh how different her training had been, to speak calmly of these matters. In America, the subject of breeding is with propriety discussed beforehand only in regard to cattle and pups, but concerning human beings never until afterward, when, too late, Levington said drily: "You have no difficulty with the English speech."

Helen's intentions were bridging the gaps of loneliness in her life. She was enticed up with the world of her father, and this was a breathless business before strangers. She was meeting the unknown in Levington. The quality of him, the way he talked and moved, were matters new and stimulating. She openly studied his face, and beneath her calm of the Orient was a warm confusion. According to her studies, they had no princes in America.

Trusting to alter the direction of their conversation, the father observed: "All these things seem to have come from the United States."

"Yes, Sir Father, the music machine only a week since. I cannot comprehend it; it may be a devil, but what of that? Chee Ming learned in San Francisco to produce sweet singing from it."

Con rose to meet this occasion, approached the "music machine," and chose a record. He glanced back at the princess, who was awaiting with pure interest the result of his activity.

She had quite naturally crossed her ankles as a white woman should, but her eyebrows had a deceptive upward slant—the Mongol mark that chilled Con unreasonably. Her hands became idle. He set the record going, and into his own emotions came the hot-house sentiments of the big American tenor, who sang strenuously. Con was glad for this further touch of home, and Helen was pleased; yet neither was moved by the singing. They were pitched more intensely than the music. And for the girl, there was a yellow web of tradition between the Western song and herself. She found Asia.

That is difficult to answer—to you," said he. "Perhaps he is not a devil in the sense of cryptic hierarchy. To do him justice, I must say that he has shown some taste in your education. He has given you the highest mode of life in his kingdom. Also he has risked a great deal in trying to bring America to you. It was thoughtful of him to converse with you in English, so you would not lose the mother tongue. His plan to blend the races of all mankind into a perfect empire is founded upon a deep spiritual law. But he does not understand that idea properly. He does violence to the hearts of his people. If you were a little older, you would see at once what I mean. It does not matter that Tau Kuan did not participate in the building of Babel, if that be a true story. Tau Kuan is false now, and Chee Ming's notion of blending is cold and outrageous. He may be chaste and obedient to his gods, but he is terrible. He is not human. He may not see himself as a devil, and there is none to stop him, but—"

March paused, and Helen reflected a moment, her eyes shadowed. She glanced at Levington, but turned away hastily, as if he would divide something too personal. She carefully replied:

"When Tau Kuan had woven every human element, and has become balanced, and a perfect race of men has arisen, they will all go forth to the four quarters, carrying new life and pure tradition to all the world."

"Splendid!" said Levington, "but the United States of America is doing that now, has been making a success of that idea for a hundred years, with a hundred million people."

UNIQUE FEATURE OF WEDDING
Japanese Couple, at End of Ceremony, Kiss the Feet of All Their Relatives.

A festival procession through the village, headed by two monstrous figures with arms and legs agitated by men hiding inside, forms part of the marriage ceremony in the Island of Java. The music in the procession is supplied by the gamelan, the national orchestra, consisting of drums, bells and other noisy instruments, while an additional noise is made by a group of men on horseback striking with all their might in the native "angkoen," which is something like a tambourine, made of bamboo.

The women, their hands filled with power birds, flowers and feather fans, and wearing peacock plumes, follow on foot, and are in turn followed by the priests, solemnly singing their prayers. The bride is carried by four men as she sits on a wooden platform surrounded by a few girl friends. After the procession goes around the village twice, it finally stops before the house of the groom, and the bride is carried into the house in the arms of her father-in-law.

The whole family then assembles in a circle and the young couple, holding on their knees, kiss the feet of all the relatives. The kissing of the feet marks the end of the ceremony. The feast lasts late into the night and women and men celebrate separately, only the young couple being allowed to eat together.—Detroit News.

Life's Failures.
Many think that fortune and luck give all the plums to the favorites. So they make no effort to get ahead. Their philosophy gives them no vision and life holds out to them no promises. It's no wonder they just pester along complaining as they go. They pour their woes into every idle ear that has nothing to do but listen. Sometimes they even rant at length against the very agencies that make possible their poor existence. They may be true in ascribing their existence to luck and their continuance of life to fortune, but as to getting along among others—that's neither; luck nor fortune. To move up demands pluck and energy.—Exchange.

The KITCHEN CABINET

If we trod the depths of ocean, if we struck the stars in our flying. If we wrapped the globe intensely with one hot electric breath, "Twere but power within our lethargy, no new spirit power compelling. And in life we were not greater men, nor bolder men in death."
—E. B. Browning.

SEASONABLE GOOD THINGS.

Soup is reasonable the year round in any climate. The following will be found to be quite worth while:

Royal Soup.—Soak one cupful of bread crumbs in one-half cupful of milk. Add the yolks of three hard-cooked eggs rubbed through a sieve and the breast of a stewed chicken, rubbed through a sieve; add three and one-half cupfuls of stock, highly seasoned, one and one-half cupfuls of scalded milk, and two and one-half tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter cooked together. Season with salt and pepper.

Pressed Beef Flank.—Wipe, remove superfluous fat and roll a flank of beef. Put into a kettle cover with boiling water and add one tablespoonful of salt, one-half teaspoonful of peppercorns, a small piece of bay leaf and the bone of a steak of veal. Cook slowly until the meat is very tender. There should be very little liquor in the kettle when the meat is done. Arrange the meat in a deep pan, pour over the liquor, cover and press with a heavy weight. Serve cold.

Chicken a la Stanley.—Melt one-fourth of a cupful of butter, add one larger onion thinly sliced and two broilers cut in pieces for serving. Cover and cook slowly for ten minutes, then add one cupful of chicken stock and cook until the meat is tender. Remove the chickens, rub the stock and onions through a sieve and add one and one-half tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour cooked together. Add cream to make the sauce of the right consistency. Season with salt and pepper. Arrange the chicken on a serving dish, pour around the sauce, and garnish the dish with sliced tomatoes dipped in flour and sautéed in butter.

Boiled Dressing.—To one cupful of beaten eggs, a mixture of white and yolk, add an equal quantity of mild vinegar. Cook over hot water till thick. Season when ready to use. Will keep for weeks in a jar well sealed and placed in a cool place.

If we have whispered truth, Whisper no longer. Speak as the tempest does, sterner and stronger.
—John G. Whittier.

SUMMER MEATS.

Chicken, veal, sweetbreads and lamb are the summer meats most commonly liked and served.

Broiled Chicken.—Clean a tender chicken and split it down the back. Break the joints, take out the breast bone wipe clean, sprinkle with salt and pepper and rub with soft butter. Broil and serve with melted butter.

Breaded Veal Cutlets.—Have the cutlets less than an inch thick, parboil and drain, then cool. Season with salt and pepper, dip in beaten egg and crumbs and fry until brown. Serve with tomato sauce or with a border of green peas.

Chicken Gumbo.—Cut into dice two medium sized raw potatoes. Put into a fryingpan two tablespoonfuls of olive oil and when hot add the potato dice. Stir to keep from burning and cook five minutes. Then add a dash of paprika, a cupful of boiling water, a crushed bean of parlie, a cupful of cooked chicken chopped fine or a can of baked chicken; salt to taste. Cover and cook until the potatoes are done, stirring frequently.

Mayonnaise dressing, using olive oil, is the salad par excellence, but a tasty substitute can be prepared from corn oil, using the same method of mixing.

The secret of a good mayonnaise is freshness of the egg and well-chilled ingredients and utensils. Drop a fresh egg yolk into a well-chilled bowl placed in a pan of ice water; add a half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of powdered sugar, a pinch of mustard, a dash of cayenne and a tablespoonful of lemon juice. Beat well before adding any oil, then but a few drops at a time, beating well between each addition. Thin the mixture with vinegar or lemon juice, adding more oil until three-quarters of a cupful has been used. Mayonnaise to be good should be thick and creamy. When serving it in the salad it may be thinned with cream.

Wood Fibers.
The common ideas concerning wood fibers are not justifiable by the extended tests of the United States forest products laboratory. Each species of wood does not have its characteristic fiber length, but a greater difference may be found between the fibers of an individual tree than between the average lengths in different species. The length of fiber does not seem to affect the strength of the wood, as the longest fibers often belong to the weakest material.

Peruvian Idea of Dignity.
The mayor of the smallest town in Peru feels that it is incumbent upon him, in order to make the proper display of official dignity, to be accompanied by a band of pipers whenever he appears on any state occasion. These musicians have instruments which consist of a series of reeds strung together and make a weird music.

THE STERLING HOME

By IDA W. GOULD.
(© 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Her name was Zarella How, and she was neither young nor pretty. Her dishevelled hair and ink-stained fingers were not attractive. Over her desk hung a motto, "Nothing worth winning except by hard work."

The fruits of this woman's work surrounded her. A bust of Clytie, earned by the sale of "The Sailor's Revenge," stood near the set of Dickens, resulting from the "Midnight Mystery." Once her energy slackened, then she let her eyes refresh themselves with the sight of her real antique prayer rug, bought by the sale of "Another Child." Over the piano hung a well-earned water color, one made possible for her by selling "The Double Murder." Upon the mahogany table were fine bits of pottery. The very robe Zarella worked in was a Japanese kimono, delicately embroidered in artistic fashion. That resulted from "A Temperance Tale."

With splendid health and a small income from investments, she lived in a top room of a house that sheltered many other business women. Her courage was supreme; no amount of rejected manuscripts restrained her audacity.

As early dawn glimmered, the woman flung her last production aside, put out the light, and slept till noon. Every afternoon she sent the work off to the editors of a limerick contest which had been running some weeks. She aspired to build a small home like one illustrated in "Sterling Homes."

A faint odor of heliotrope pervaded all her belongings. In her plan of a house a bed of heliotrope plants just outside her workroom was indicated. Heliotrope was her mother's best-loved flower. Zarella always bought heliotrope perfume instead of the more common violet.

She remembered her mother, working at the common tasks in the old homestead, and a saying of her mother's brought the most vivid and tender memories to her.

"Always keep something sweet smelling that grows about you, to take your mind off your drudgery."

She would have a Dutch colonial home, box trees (like prim old maids) on each side of the brick wall. She would have plenty of heliotrope plants in her home. She would have a brass knocker on her front door, a lilac bush, a shelf for pitchers, and a cupboard like one described in a New England story of long ago. There must be a high shelf with brass candlesticks, and a banjo clock. Outside, she desired a duck pond and a few weeping willows gracefully reflected in the small sheet of water. She knew she could gather fresh material for more stories in such surroundings. She pictured herself lying in the hammock, looking at the fleecy shapes above her, inhaling perfume from her flower beds.

She would paint her house white, with green blinds. She loved glistening white paint.

She remembered when her mother had taken her to visit a sea captain's wife in Newburyport.

The sea captain had an absolute passion for white paint. How kind everyone had been there. Perhaps she, Zarella How, might pass along those same happy memories to some little girl, when she really owned her Sterling home.

The captain had given her a bunch of catnip and a shell at parting. The shell still did duty as a paper weight. The catnip had long ago been consumed by cats long since deceased.

Zarella's musings were interrupted by a knock, followed by the entrance of the top floor matron:

"Good evening, Miss How. A speckled delivery for you, just come; boy's waiting."

Zarella broke the seal, read the contents of the letter, exclaiming in a delighted cry to the astonished listener:

"Mary, hear this; no, first tell the boy, here's the receipt for the letter."

"No bad news, miss."

"Good—good—nothing like it ever came my way; hurry, then come back, but don't tell anyone."

The Power of the Hour

MECHANICAL power is stepping swiftly into the breach that has been formed by restless, dissatisfied labor. This is true in the city and it is true on the farm.

Today Titan 10-20 Tractors are the labor-saving power of the hour on the farms of America. Everywhere, reaching to the farthest boundaries of agriculture, you will hear the steady chug-chug of these tireless toilers. They are displacing men and horses and getting more work per day from available farm labor. Soon summer fallowing will be under way in many sections of the country, and there you will find Titan 10-20 Kerosene Tractors working faithfully from sun-up to sun-down, undisturbed by heat or flies, turning the hard-baked ground in the interests of bumper crops.

New Titans are scarce just now, due to unprecedented demand, and the fact that every user of a Titan 10-20 is a Booster is the best of reasons for you to act at once to secure one of the very few available.

Come in and let us show you why you should buy a Titan 10-20 Farm Tractor.

A. G. Koch, Kewaskum, Wis.

The Samson Model "M" tractor is a close-coupled power unit all by itself from radiator to rear wheels.

'DRY' LICENSES EXCEED 57,000

Nearly 16,000 Physicians Have Received Permits to Write Prescriptions.

DRUGGISTS IN BIG NUMBERS

Only 238 Permits for the Manufacture of Intoxicants Have Been Issued, One-fourth of Them Being From California.

Washington. — More than 57,000 druggists, retail and wholesale, and manufacturers of proprietary medicines, flavoring extracts, syrups, etc., have been licensed in the United States and its insular possessions to date, under the national prohibition act, according to statistics just compiled in the office of the prohibition commissioner, John H. Kramer.

The records of the internal revenue bureau also show that nearly 16,000 physicians in the United States, Hawaii and Porto Rico have received permits to write prescriptions calling for the dispensation of intoxicating liquors for medicinal purposes and that additional permits at the rate of 1,000 a month are being issued to physicians.

Tabulation by states of the physicians licensed up to June 25 show that the prohibition director for Massachusetts has issued more than 15 per cent of the number of such permits distributed. New York state has another 15 per cent.

Massachusetts Leads.
The exact figures are: Massachusetts, 2,450; New York, 2,421; Pennsylvania, 1,525; Ohio, 1,479; Maryland, 1,225; Missouri, 1,150; Minnesota, 683. In states such as Illinois, Kansas and Indiana, where state codes will not permit of the use of such permits, no physicians have been licensed by the government so to prescribe.

Porto Rican physicians, apparently, are awake to their opportunities under prohibition. 176 licenses to physicians to prescribe intoxicating liquors having been issued in that territory, or more than have been issued in Missisissippi, Arkansas, New Mexico, Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota, West Virginia, Georgia, Florida and Maine combined.

New York state is far in the van in number of retail and wholesale druggists, manufacturers of proprietary medicines, extracts and other products requiring the use of intoxicating liquor as an ingredient. Permits for these dispensers of products containing considerable quantities of intoxicants have been issued to 16,000 in New York state alone, or about 28 per cent of the total in the country.

Pennsylvania ranks second with about 12,800 such permits issued up to June 25. Illinois is third with nearly 3,000. Massachusetts is fourth with about 1,800 and Ohio is less than a hundred behind in fifth place.

More than twice as many permits for the sale alone of liquors have been issued in Pennsylvania as in any other state. There are 602 issued in the Keystone state out of 3,243 for the entire country. These are issued principally to distillers and others, having intoxicating stuff in hand, but some wholesale liquor dealers and possibly some druggists may be found in this class.

Permits for Manufacture.

Only 238 permits for the manufacture of intoxicants have been issued, and more than a fourth of these, or 64, have gone to the wineries of California. Two permits of this class have been issued to distillers of whisky, both in Pennsylvania, according to enforcement officials.

Thirty-five of the sixty rectifiers' license have been granted to firms in New York state.

Ohio's state prohibition director has issued more permits for the transportation of intoxicating liquor than any other, with 350. Kentucky is second with 251 and Pennsylvania third with 190. Massachusetts ranks fourth with 147, California fifth with 140, New York sixth with 128, Connecticut seventh with 112 and Missouri eighth with 99.

All other classes of permits for the use in any way of intoxicating liquor, in its importation or exportation, for manufacture or use of intoxicating cider for conversion into vinegar, and for the sale or purchase of alcoholic preparations, syrups and beverages of more than half of 1 per cent alcoholic contents are issued direct from the prohibition commissioner's office, as also are permits to operate denaturing plants and rectification establishments.

Permits "H" for the use of intoxicating liquors—in the manufacture of medicinal preparations, extracts, sirups, etc.—have been issued up to the number of 45,908 and permits "I" for the "use and sale" of such liquors have been issued up to the number of 11,370. These two classes of permits take in both wholesalers and retailers of intoxicants—always with the qualification "for medicinal purposes"—and because of the confusion resulting from these similar classifications, "H" and "I" permits now are being consolidated in many instances so that druggists, for instance, may not only dispense whisky, etc., on prescription, but may also use it in concocting medicinal preparations of more than one half of 1 per cent alcoholic content.

At the present rate of withdrawal from bond it will take only five years for the available supply of whisky in the United States to be consumed.

FEUDS KILL TOWN OF 1,000

Ferguson, Okla., Dies Fighting—Had No Church and But Small School.

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Hate killed Ferguson. Fifteen years ago a town of 1,000 people, having a large salt factory, a gypsum plant and shipping facilities, Ferguson today is dead. By order of the post office department the office has been closed, and soon the railroad will be discontinued, with trains running only to Hitchcock.

Ferguson is said to have died fighting as it had lived. Main street fights were common. West of town alleged outlaws "Yenger" and "Black" had their rendezvous, from where they are said to have stolen horses and cattle of farmers and citizens.

Ferguson never had a church, nor talk of a church. The only schoolhouse in its history would not seat more than twenty-five children.

CATERPILLAR IS CABBAGE ENEMY

Imported Butterfly Is Most Destructive of Many Insects and Other Pests.

IS WELL KNOWN TO FARMERS

Frequently Secretes Itself in Immature Heads Where It Is Difficult to Reach With Insecticides—Sometimes Attacks Heart.

The most destructive of the many insects and other enemies of the cabbage family, is the caterpillar of the imported cabbage butterfly, sometimes called the white butterfly, a familiar object to nearly everyone. This is the imported cabbage worm, and is well known to farmers throughout this country and Europe as well, and the butterfly is generally recognized as the parent of the worms.

Bane of Growers.
This cabbage worm has been rightly termed the bane of the cabbage grower and the dread of every careful cook and housewife. It begins work early in the season; the principal damage is therefore to young plants, and accrues through the necessity of re-planting, with attendant increase in cost of production, due to additional labor, cost of stock, and delay in getting the early or better prices in the market. After riddling the outer leaves, which remain afterwards attached to the stalk, the caterpillar attacks the tender inner leaves as they form, frequently secreting itself in the immature heads, where it is difficult to reach it with insecticides, and rendering the cabbage unfit for food because of the abundant dark green excrement which it deposits. As a result, cabbages before being sent to market must be examined carefully and the damaged leaves removed.

Look for Concealed Worms.

Before cooking it is frequently necessary to tear the heads apart to insure that no disgusting worms are concealed within, and even after the vegetable is prepared for the table there is danger of an admixture of animal matter with the vegetable food. In cool weather the caterpillar often feeds freely exposed on the surface of the leaves in the sunshine.

Frequently the caterpillar holes into the center of the cabbage, attacking what is commonly known as the "heart," and then the entire head is worthless for market.

ESTIMATE PLACED ON BEANS

Acreege of 800,000 Expected to Yield 8,250,000 Bushels—Below That of Last Year.

The bean crop of the United States last year was about 12,000,000 bushels. While only about three-fifths as large as the crop grown on the exceptionally large acreage of 1918 and 1917, the 1919 crop was almost equal to the crops of 1914 to 1916, which averaged between 12,000,000 and 13,000,000 bushels. The planting as now indicated—about 800,000 acres—with a yield equal to the average of the last five years would produce a crop of 8,250,000 bushels.

DELICIOUS CHRISTMAS SALAD

Endive Is Hardy and Can Stand Right Smart Freeze—Bitter Taste Removed by Bleaching.

Endive is quite hardy and can stand a smart freeze. As winter comes on more covering can be added and the family will be supplied with the most delicious salad until Christmas or later if it is carefully hilled and covered so as to turn the rills. This bleaching process not only insures tenderness, but takes out that bitter taste which is so objectionable to many.

GOOD KIND OF ADVERTISING

Neatly Worded Letterhead Is Favored by Progressive Farmer—Farm Name Important.

A neat well-worded letterhead is a good kind of advertising for the progressive farmer. The name of the farm is the big feature of the well-planned letterhead, the chief point second, and the farmers' name third in importance.

Keep Up Fertility.

If a man doesn't keep up the fertility of his land, he's spending his capital. Any good business man will tell you that can't be done without coming to grief.

The Duroc Jersey.

The Duroc Jersey swine were first bred in New Jersey and other Atlantic states. This breed from its early days has been noted for docility, fecundity and hardiness.

Sweet Potatoes.

The value of sweet potatoes for hog forage is in dispute. The roots alone are scarcely a maintenance ration, but when combined with a liberal grain ration apparently give good returns.

Splendid Sowing Crop.

Cane makes a splendid sowing crop, and perhaps yields more tonnage than any other crop when put up as hay. It is especially good for feeding during the fall and early winter.

ACREAGE OF ALFALFA LARGEST OF LEGUMES

Greater Than That of Any Other Plant Cut for Hay.

Significant Fact That More Than One-half of Tame Hay Area Now Devoted to Nutritive and Soil-Improving Crops.

Alfalfa now has an acreage greater than that of any other legume or grass cut for hay, not growing in combination with another. Of the total tame hay acreage in 1918, alfalfa occupied 21.1 per cent, timothy and clover mixed, 18.2 per cent, timothy 15.9 per cent, clover 12.3 per cent, pea 8.7 per cent, grain cut green, 7.7 per cent, and all others 16.1 per cent. If the acreage of the timothy and clover mixture is equally divided between those two plants, the timothy acreage becomes 25 per cent of the total of tame hay acreage and clover 21.4 per cent, so that timothy is still the leading hay plant and the clovers have second place, a little above alfalfa.

The leguminous plants, alfalfa, clover, one-half of clover and timothy, and pea are 51.2 per cent of the tame hay area, and it is a significant fact that more than one-half of the tame hay acreage is now devoted to plants of the nutritive and soil improving properties of the legumes, whereas, ten years ago, as the census testifies, hardly one-third of the tame hay area was leguminous. This comparison has been established by the bureau of crop estimates.

KILL OUT CANADA THISTLES

Small Patches of Noxious Plant May Be Destroyed by Cutting Them Off During Summer.

Small patches of Canada thistles may be killed by cutting them off with a hoe or spade several times during the summer or by covering the patch with tar paper or building paper and leaving it in place several weeks. To handle larger fields without losing a crop it is necessary to grow some early maturing crop, like clover, winter rye or barley.

As soon as the crop is harvested, plow the land very thoroughly and then for the balance of the season keep the land so well disked and cultivated that the thistles never have a chance to show their leaves above ground. This is the only way in which the roots can be starved out. The cultivation may be continued the following season until about corn planting time, and the land planted to corn or other cultivated crop so that any plants that may have survived can be killed or dug out.

ADVANTAGE OF CATCH CROPS

Too Late for Planting Good Yielding Variety of Corn—Sudan Grass Meets Emergency.

It is now too late to plant a good yielding variety of corn and resort must be made to such catch crops as Sudan grass, sorghum and millet. Of these three, sorghum will give the greatest yield, but Sudan grass yields a finer quality of hay and can be stored to better advantage in the stack or barn.

EXCELLENT CROPS FOR HOGS

Alfalfa and Clover Are Favored as Valuable Pasture for All Corn-Fed Live Stock.

Alfalfa and clover are both rich in protein, an element likely to be lacking in most of our farm feeds. It is for this reason both are so valuable as pasture for corn-fed animals, especially hogs. Another good hog pasture plant, which is not used nearly so much as it should be, is rape.

KEEP ALL GARDENS WORKING

Do Not Stop at Producing Spring and Summer Vegetables, But Get Supply for Winter.

Real gardeners will not stop at producing a crop of spring and summer vegetables, but will follow up the good work with a fresh supply for fall use. To make the garden more nearly efficient, do not permit good land to stand idle, so that fresh vegetables have to be bought from market the latter part of the season.

PROPER STORAGE OF ONIONS

Diseases Can Be Controlled by Practice of Sanitary Measures and Right Packing.

In general, storage diseases of onions are to be controlled by the practice of sanitary measures, the sorting out of diseased bulbs at harvest, protection from rain after harvest, thorough curing and storage in a dry, well-ventilated warehouse at 32 to 35 degrees F.

FORESHADOWING AUTUMN STYLES

NO ONE turns away from the beautiful and too-brief summer of the North, even to consider its glowing autumn, except from necessity. But those who must think ahead in the matter of the styles, have already given time and attention to frocks for early fall, because they must be ready for the young woman whose school work is resumed in September. They are fore-handed and blaze the trail that mothers from one ocean to the other will follow, in outfitting their daughters who are still in school.

Even when materials have gravitated to something like normal in price, only those of substantial quality and plain texture are chosen for school girls. Reliable fabrics and simple designing are for them. Many schools prescribe a uniform for everyday wear, and this makes easy sailing for those who must outfit the student. But there are other things besides the uniform to consider, among them frocks to be worn on the street and on occasions when the student is not in school.

Two new models that are pretty and practical ought to please their youthful owners, for they are becoming to the young figures. Brown is a favorite color and the frock at the left is successfully made in this color of any of the plain wool fabrics that can be depended on for service. It is a one-piece affair having a blouse ornamental with braid in the same color, that has the effect of embroidery. There are flaring sleeves with handsome braiding and a plain skirt set onto the blouse about six inches below the normal waistline. Covered buttons are set on in a loop at each side of the skirt. The plain round neck which youth may venture to wear, is slashed at the front with a tiny vest inserted made of lace, and there is a heavy silk cord finished with a knot, about the easy waist.

The vogue for accordion plating is to hold over into the fall, according to the pretty dress shown at the right. This is also a one-piece model with pointed skirt set onto a plain bodice having a short jacket with long sleeves over it. A very wide girde, finished with pointed ends falling from short loops, fastens at the left side. The jacket is outlined with two rows of narrow braid in white and the frock, in this instance, dark blue. There is a small sailor collar at the back. These are pretty frocks that will serve without a wrig for fall, and with a warm coat will last out the winter.

Caps for Morning Wear

THE woman who meets the acid test of the breakfast table and the bathing beach and succeeds in looking attractive at these places, is the envied of her sisters. It is no small undertaking, yet there are many who succeed—and there are many who fail in it. Almost everyone can manage the garb for early morning successfully, but the bathing suit is more difficult and takes considerable study. It is of less importance than the dress for the beginning of the day.

Morning dress must be suited to the morning's occupation. In these servantless days most women must engage themselves with the business of getting breakfast ready or helping to get it. It is not the hearty meal our forebears indulged in, for most modern households have learned the wisdom of a light breakfast, but it requires very practical dressing. Besides the one-piece, simple cotton frocks that come from the weekly laundering looking crisp and sprightly, there are popular breakfast sets that include a skirt and a jacket, or blouse, made of the same washable materials. These are the only wear for early morning working hours.

The woman who need not concern herself with housework may indulge in silk breakfast jackets or those of georgette or chiffon. Pretty as they are they are not more pleasing than those crisp cotton frocks worn by her busier sisters.

Combine Organdie and Voile.

In cotton frocks voile and organdie are attractively combined. The latter material falls into soft lines or draperies and character is added by the use of crisp organdie sash in contrasting color. Organdie in two colors is often combined also. One smart frock recently seen was of yellow organdie trimmed with shirred bands of gray self fabric.

German People Eager to Work

Lack of Food and Materials Prevents Their Working With Old-Time Vigor.

HAVE NO HATE FOR AMERICANS

Hope to Establish Friendship Between Two Countries, Says German Agent—Country at Present Has Nothing for Export.

New York.—The German people are eager to work and readjust themselves and pay their war indemnities, but they cannot do so until they have help coming to Otto J. Marum, the German agent for an American leather company in Milwaukee, who recently arrived from Germany. He says that the German workman is so underfed that he cannot possibly do a proper day's work, and that the high prices for all the necessities there, combined with the pay of the laborer with the mark at its present low rate of value, is causing hardships and great suffering among the working classes that can scarcely be realized.

"The visitors who come to Germany, put up at the best hotels where there is plenty of good food, and make a superficial inspection of some of the more accessible districts, cannot judge of the lack of food throughout the country," said Mr. Marum. "Deformed children are seen everywhere where the working people live, but one fails to take into consideration that their whole organism is underfed and that they will always bear the marks of what they have suffered in the last few years."

Nothing for Export.
"There is nothing at present for export, partly because of the great dearth of coal for factories and manufacturing purposes, and also because there are so few raw materials. The raw materials now available fill only a very small percentage of the domestic needs. The people are striving to attain their old-time efficiency, but living costs must go down in order that wages may be reduced for profitable production."

"The same general problems that confront other countries now are present in Germany in a more aggravated form. For instance, the housing problem had reached a much more acute state than here. The government made an effort to adjust this by obliging those with more rooms in their residences than were actually needed for their own families to take others into their homes—as renters, of course—but since they are allowed the use of the kitchens and laundries and other parts of the houses the arrangement has made for great confusion and much discontent."

ENRICHED BY DEED OF 1848

Finding of Ancient Document Raises Woman From Comparative Poverty to Wealth.

New York.—The finding of an old deed, dated November 21, 1848, has elated Mrs. Mary A. Barney of Jaggar avenue, Flushing, from comparative poverty to wealth. Her fortune is estimated well into five figures. The ancient document has been lost for more than 20 years. It gives ownership rights to 16 acres of property at Oyster bay, L. I., overlooking the sound.

The deed, which was found among some old papers, conveyed the property to Daniel Raymon, Mrs. Barney's grandfather, 72 years ago, but as it had been mislaid, Mrs. Barney was unable to obtain possession of the property. Upon its discovery, however, the present occupants agreed to vacate, and as soon as the legal technicalities have been gone through, Mrs. Barney will become undisputed owner.

Trade With Italy.
"Trade has been established with Italy and relations with that country are good, and gradually improving. If the people of this country could get real facts and correct statements, there would be little, if any, ill feeling between the two countries. The war feeling is rapidly disappearing and in Germany there is none of the hate that some of the newspapers speak of. There exists the best of feeling throughout Germany for the Americans in general."

"The influx of the Senegal negroes to Frankfurt and other places in Germany caused no end of ill feeling and misunderstanding, with keen bitterness. The negroes were quartered in the school houses and other public buildings and so much disorder resulted that finally the French were obliged to remove them."

"The German people are mainly law abiding, and the bolshevik will never take a strong hold there. The great mass of people are good workers and very industrious, if given a chance, and are not at all in sympathy with the methods of the present disturbers of Europe. Their ambition is to become a steady, progressive country, but they greatly need assistance to build up and grow strong again. Their coal fields are now owned by France; their farm lands have deteriorated, and much of their manufacturing machinery is gone. It is next to impossible for the farmers to operate, because of the scarcity of farm labor and the cost of that available. There is a great shortage of potatoes, as the potato fields of Posen are now owned by the Polish nation."

Sisters Meet After Years.

Springfield, O.—Mrs. Thomas Smith of Jackson, O., and Mrs. James Delaney of Pottsville, Pa., sisters, met here the other day for the first time in 58 years at the home of Mrs. Smith's son, Thomas M. Smith. Both lived in Pottsville when little girls. Fifty-eight years ago Mrs. Smith came to Ohio and settled in Jackson. The long separation was the result of both having large families which required their attention. Mrs. Smith has 17 children and Mrs. Delaney has 14. One of Mrs. Delaney's sons, Thomas, of Philadelphia, came here with her.

Loss of Appetite.

As a general rule there is nothing serious about a loss of appetite, and if you skip a meal or only eat two meals a day for a few days you will soon have a relish for your meals when mealtime comes. Bear in mind that at least five hours should always elapse between meals so as to give the food ample time to digest and the stomach a period of rest before a second meal is taken. Then if you eat no more than you crave and take a reasonable amount of outdoor exercise every day you will not need to worry about your appetite. When the loss of appetite is caused by constipation as is often the case, that should be corrected at once. A dose of Chamberlain's Tablets will do it.—Adv.

Tire Problems Solved.

Did you ever think that some day some one would invent a device that would solve the Tire Problem? The "Maxotire" is the answer. Thousands are using "MAXOTIRES." Some, of course, with the first casing but many with the second, third and even the fourth. Surely, "MAXOTIRES" must be saving owners considerable money, time and eliminating grief, or there would not be such a great MAXOTIRE demand. No difference how much they save others, they will do you no good unless you USE MAXOTIRES. They will save you buying tires and tubes so often. You can wear your tires down to the last thread—often more than doubling the mileage.

What "Maxotires" Are

They are not "Reliners." They do not reline the casing but encircle the tube completely—holding the pressure within themselves—GET THE DIFFERENCE.

"Magic Rubber Mend"

is successfully used for repairing casings and inner tubes in place of the expensive process of vulcanizing.
