Above: Approaching one of Great Britain's formidable forts of the sea. These giant masses of steel and concrete, literally bristling with guns, are a new departure for war, and so far as England is concerned, a good investment. They are planted in "strategic" spots around England.

Right: On the gun deck of a floating fortress the crew prepares a 3-inch anti-aircraft gun for firing against enemy planes.

A sentry, a 12-inch cannon, and a lookout pictured on a floating fort somewhere in the southern command. Living quarters are located deep in the bowels of the fort.

Picture Parade

Top: A glimpse into the magazine of a floating fortress. The shells are sent to the guns above on a chain belt. Lower: Sleeping quarters. Men not on duty are shown at ease in double-decker cots.

Looking down into the deep hole that leads to the living and working quarters.

Washbasins Easily Cleaned
Washbasins can be one of the most dangerous of all household "danger zones," especially after brushing teeth. A washbasin cleaned with sodium hypochlorite solution, available in bottles at your grocers, is safer, for this ultra-refined product has intensified germicidal efficiency. When there is sickness in the home, the washbasin should be so cleansed after each use, for this solution makes porcelain and enamel surfaces hygienically clean.

Humans Have Same Traits
All human beings have the same traits and capacities, a noted psychologist recently stated. Everyone has the ability to solve problems; all have some mechanical ability, some will power, some foresight, and some ability for salesmanship or self confidence, he states. The difficulty, he declares, is that the average person does not know how much of these abilities he has, or else he thinks he does not possess them.

BUSY FARMER

Manslaughter Impossible
Lawyer (patiently) - Now, you know what to do in the courtroom, don't you?
Client - Yes, I guess so.
Lawyer - When the judge asks you if you are guilty or not guilty of manslaughter be sure you tell 'im "guilty."
Client - I won't say that. My conscience wouldn't let me.
Lawyer (exasperated) - Why not?
Client - Because I didn't kill a man - I killed a woman.

VERY FOOLISH
"A man always looks foolish when he is proposing marriage."
"Well, in a great many cases he is."

Changing Times
It used to be the bedtime-story broadcaster who topped off a tale of gore with "Sweet dreams, my little ones." Now it's a news commentator who glooms over the world's plight and signs off with "Cheerio."

Unusual
"The telephone girl next door landed a husband a week after she met him."
"Pretty quick connection for a telephone girl to make."

Disagreeable First
Jane - Did you observe that Perry Wilmer gave me his first dance last evening?
Gracie - Yes, he told me later on he believed always in getting disagreeable things done as soon as possible.

Never Again
"Why don't you give a house party some week-end at that wonderful country place of yours?"
"Never again. The last time I did that the party was snowed up and I had to feed the whole bunch for nearly a week."

AIR TRAVEL ON CREDIT

Seventeen air lines have announced an installment plan for air travel. No down payment is required. You get a ticket to go up if your credit rating proves you are the sort of person who will come down and make good.

The idea should bring many more customers. Lots of people would fly if they knew it wouldn't cost them a cent until after they had landed.

This is the first time in flying history that it has been possible to risk your neck on a credit basis.

It is almost like hoping, collect-on-delivery.

And it is going to seem strange but highly satisfying to get out of a clipper and just say, "Put it on my bill."

When you have to plank down your money before you even get by the iron gates at a railroad terminal it takes something out of the trip. No matter how good the scenery is you discount it on the ground that it ought to be better for that much money.

If you are jerked out of an upper berth by a green engineer or bad brakes it is all the more exasperating when you know the discomforts have been paid for in advance.

But if you owe the railroad for the trip it's not so annoying.

The same will be true of airplane travel. Your hair may stand on end at the thought of a cross-country flight, but it becomes much easier to handle with a brush and comb when you know the company can't take a dime of your dough in advance.

And if you are dropping down by parachute, think of the satisfaction of knowing that it's all being done on the deferred payment plan!

There will be the kick, too, of getting a bill from the air lane company with a "please remit" notation and dashing off a little note:

"Gentlemen: Your bill for flight to Chicago received and in reply I beg to state that I did not enjoy the trip. It was very bumpy, the plane was two hours late and it was so cloudy that I did not see half the scenery I was entitled to. I was not satisfied and hope there can be an adjustment."

"P. S.—The hostess wasn't good-looking, either. I should say she wasn't within $10 of the good looks of the hostess on my previous trip so you can take something off my bill for this, too."

CAN YOU REMEMBER
Away back when an invitation to get off the earth was practically an isolated instance?

Defense workers are being housed in trailers in some parts of the country. After a night in a trailer a man must be pretty glad of a chance to go to the shop where he can get a good rest.

The horse seems to be finished in the army, but it requires a lot of imagination to picture anybody shouting: "A tank, a tank, my kingdom for a tank!"

Two hundred thousand workers in the printing trades want radio advertising curbed. In this they have the hearty support of at least 90 per cent of the radio audience.

In this department's opinion radio advertising is, most of the time, offensive, annoying and a darned nuisance. Elmer Twitchell, for instance, is so bothered by it that he lists all the products ballyhooed on the air waves so he will remember what NOT to buy.

"Hellzapoppin" was performed for the draftees recently. This gave the boys a chance to laugh at the jokes that cheered their fathers up 25 years ago.

We can't be very close to war yet. George Cohan hasn't written a song for it.

An average of $30 was spent by every family in the country for amusements last year, mostly moving pictures. That's a lot of money to spend for souvenir soup spoons.

CHECKMATE
Consider the way,
When you've hardly stopped munchin',
You tussle to pay
Both checks for the luncheon:
You pounce and you clutch,
You connive with the waiter,
And the hubbub is such
That you blush at it later.
A polite song and dance,
But what does it get you?
There's always the chance
Your companion will let you.

—Richard Armour.

Hawk in the Wind

BY HELEN TOPPING MILLER © D. APPLETON-CENTURY CO. W.-N.-U. Service

The thin, blue winter dawn came late. She had already given up hope of rest when the east began to beat pearly and aquamarine. She got up and dressed, putting on her good blue suit, her best silk blouse. She would have preferred going into action in her old corduroys and boots, but this fight today was to be one of wits, of law and shrewdness—not to be conducted in a disreputable old hat jerked belligerently over one eye.

At least, thank goodness, her enemy was now standing forth in the open. The secret hawk that beat dark wings between her and the sky was a thing of form and definition.

And she felt sure that if she could keep Payne and Hooper and Wallace Withers from getting possession of the timber area on Hazel Fork, she could defeat their schemes. She knew every inch of land, every standing tree, every foot of available pulp wood for a hundred miles around. What little Wallace Withers owned, even counting the acreage he had bought from Perry Bennett, would not go far. No man in his right mind would put money into a mill, with so scant a supply as that in prospect. And the rest, except for Tom's rich heritage, was tied up by leases by power concerns or lumber people—or by the great Champion mill, except what she herself controlled.

She knew that Wallace Withers would extend himself to destroy her. No pestilence ever set loose in any time could work the havoc wrought by an ignorant, bigoted man, working ruthlessly for his own ends, especially when under this fierce, cold passion for eminence there burned the moving fury of a personal spite. Wallace was a vain and unscrupulous man, disdained. No ethics would deter him, no reasoning touch him. He would break her if he could, because only by reducing her to suppliant meekness could he rebuild the brittle tower of his own prime conceit.

She made a cup of coffee, in the kitchen, and drank it black and hot. Lottie came scuffling in her bedroom slippers, her hair plastered stiffly in a net.

"My goodness," she exclaimed, "you going to the mill this early? Why'n't you call me to get you some breakfast?"

"I'll eat later. I've got a lot to do. I don't know when I'll be back."

Her old car roared down the hill. The early morning fog was lying in great white scarves of feathers down the slopes of the mountains. The steam of the mill drifted like wings against a dawn-quickened sky, as she approached the gate.

Suddenly she found herself deeply moved, loving that shambling building, the windows burning in the wan, wintry sun, the ranked piles of wood, even the choking, sulphide smell that lay along the ground so insistently. The mill was her life—all the rest of her life. It was David—what was left to her of the man she had loved.

She would fight for it. Stiffly she set her chin on that thought.

The night men, not yet gone off shift, stared at her as she walked, eyes ahead, face grim and resolute, across the frozen yard.

At the mill office he found Virgie already at her desk, with Lucy and Daniels standing about, their faces worried.

"Come along in," Virgie ordered as he opened the door. "You'll have to know about this. Seven men quit this morning."

"The Spains—and the two Andersons," Lucy added. "Billy Mount and his boy and Lucius." Her eyes were sorrowful and accusing. Her manner said louder than words, "This is your fault." Daniels was fiddling nervously with the bunch of keys in his fingers. For an instant Branford Wills got the impression that Daniels was evading, that there was something defensive in his manner, but he put that aside. They were all worried, Virgie most of all.

"That West Virginia stuff has to go through," she said. "We'll have to have somebody to tend the decker." For twenty years Billy Mount had tended the great machines, taken a fierce pride in the texture of the pulp that rolled through the presses.

"Could I do it?" Wills volunteered. "I have ordinary intelligence. I think I could do what Billy Mount could do."

"I need you outside," Virgie said. "With the Andersons gone we'll need somebody to get stuff in."

"But—why should those fellows quit?" Wills asked. "There's no other place for them in town. You treated them well—"

"They probably had reasons—fairly good reasons," Daniels was a trifle dry.

"Look here—if I'm in any way responsible for this—" Wills began vigorously, but Virgie waved a hand.

"Sit down—and keep your head on and your shirt-tail in! I'm responsible for this. Wallace Withers wants to buy this mill. Somehow or other he's working against me. How, I don't know yet. But I will know. It's a fight. Wallace says he'll put me out of business if I don't sell. Maybe he will—but he'll have a merry little time doing it. If you people want to stick with me—"

"Of course we'll stick," said Lucy eagerly.

"It might," Stanley Daniels suggested, "be possible to compromise."

Virgie blazed at him. "Compromise? Do I look like a woman who would compromise?"

"Business," Daniels defended, "is built on compromises. It has to be. Individualism cannot always survive."

"And so you think," Virgie cut back, "that I ought not to fight? That I ought to let Wallace Withers threaten to ruin me and never lift a hand? Is that what you think?"

"I think you are fighting a definite trend, Mrs. Morgan. You're living in an era which will see the death of the small business, of individual enterprise—personal control. There is an inevitability in it that you do not recognize. It may mean defeat for you and I think you are the sort of person who would suffer pretty badly in defeat."

"So you're thinking about my feelings, are you? Well, these are my feelings, in case any of you are in the dark. I had rather see the mill that David Morgan built destroyed—every brick, every wheel, every bolt in it—than to haggle with Wallace Withers—or surrender. If that's crazy, I'm crazy! Now, get to work, all of you! Lucy, get Champion on the wire and let 'em I want seven hands for a few days. Decker men and outside hands. They've got part-time people always on hand they can spare. We won't grind today, we'll clean the mill. Come along, you boys."

She was fiercely executive all day. The atmosphere of the mill, already tense, grew galvanic as she cracked the whip of her indomitable will. Lucy Fields went about breathing excitedly but Wills, helping old Frank Emmet to clean and oil the drum-barkers and the toothy cables that snaked the green wood in for grinding, kept a thoughtful watch. Even granting that this man Withers, who coveted the mill had, somehow, been able to engineer the various calamities that had descended on the plant in the past few days, there remained to be discovered the means by which he had worked. Wills was not satisfied. He meant to do some sleuthing on his own.

He waited till the whistle blew at night and Lucy had put on her shabby green coat and gone out, then went to the office where Virgie sat studying a map on her desk. Outside murky lights burned in the yard and steam drifted down to lie in torn, cold wreaths along the ground.

Virgie looked up at him, and it appeared to Branford Wills that there was something deeper than weariness in her strong face. She looked a little stricken, as though something had been taken away from her that could not be returned.

She showed him the map. "This is what worries me," she said, "this land that belonged to Tom Pruitt. This is what Withers is counting on—this timber acreage. He and Payne and those other fellows—the fellow Tom shot—have got a court order allowing them to cut timber enough to satisfy their claims. And you know what that means. The court can't go up there and scale up stuff. They'll strip it and with what timber is standing there they can set up a mill and run it for three or four years. Long enough to worry me, anyway."

"And you're convinced that Withers is at the bottom of all your troubles?"

"What else can I think? He came to my house last night and made threats. Maybe they're just using him to handle local contracts and connections that outsiders couldn't put over. Mountain people are peculiar. They're suspicious of a stranger but a home-talent crook can do quite a lot with 'em. I reckon Wallace thinks he's in."

"Let me see that map again," Wills said. He had been a maker of maps, Virgie remembered. He anchored the colored sheet with an inkbottle and a slide rule and studied it.

"I filed an injunction to keep them off this morning," Virgie said. "Filed it for Tom, of course. It may not work. They may have the judge sewed up. Tom does what I tell him usually—but I don't always get there quite soon enough. I went over at daybreak—but I should have gone yesterday."

"They'd been there ahead of you? But surely he wouldn't listen to them?"

"I don't know. It's worrying me." She breathed wearily, like a spent runner. "They sent a lawyer to scare Tom, late yesterday. They told him that Cragg was filing suit against him for fifty thousand dollars' damages. Perhaps they can do it, in law—I haven't looked into it. That's not the point. They gave Tom a good scare—and then they offered to settle. So he signed something—and he doesn't know what he signed."

"So everything you have done for him may be lost? Doesn't he understand that you're looking out for his interest?"

"You couldn't understand a mountain man, I'm afraid. Up to a certain point they'll listen. Beyond that—they're rampant individualists, as young Daniels says. Tom has always been a helpless old body—David looked after him. But no mountain man believes that a woman could know more than he does."

"Is there a blue-print of Pruitt's tract anywhere?"

"It's here in the safe. Do you want it?"

"I want it—and I want to see the land. Could I have a car and some one who knows the way to go over there tomorrow?"

"I'll send you a car—and a driver. What do you want to see it for? Even if I keep those men out of it, it will go back to Tom. I'll never timber it."

"I think," Wills said, "that I was once lost in that region. The outline on this map is somehow familiar. It gives me an idea. I'd rather not talk about it till I'm sure of it."

"Most young chaps," Virgie was dry, "want to talk first and do something about it afterward."

At home that night Virgie stretched her slippers feet to the fire and faced her daughter resolutely.

"I said you were going!" she stated grimly. "Who else can I trust? This is more important than your silly personal prejudices."

Marian stood stormily, staring out a dark window.

"How do you know it is important? Because he says so? Oh, Mother—can't you see that all this Wallace Withers business is just a coincidence? Wallace Withers heard about the trouble in the mill and he thought it was a good time to jump in and try to bluff and scare you. The Spains and the Andersons and Billy didn't leave because of Wallace Withers—I'll never believe that. They didn't want to work under Wills and they resented his Sherlocking around the mill. You won't believe me—but Lucy thinks the same as I—and so does Stanley Daniels."

"So—you've all got your heads together and decided that I'm a senile old fool, eh?"

"Mother, I didn't say that. Please—"

"So you're thinking about my feelings, are you?"

CHAPTER XIV

The men at the mill had worked all night, unloading the wrecked car, repairing the track, loading again. Disregarding the raw wind that blew through the valley, the occasional spit of snow, Branford Wills had worked with them, observing and listening, making himself as helpful and unobtrusive as possible. He did not deceive himself. Something was wrong at the mill. There was much shouting and rough talk, but there was also a secretiveness, a watchfulness. It appeared to Wills that among the older hands there was also an uneasy discomfort.

They were uncertain of each other. And a few had an air of insolence, a tendency to swagger. But Wills could not discover that any definite animosity was directed toward him. They were curt and one or two were a bit scornful of his ability in matters of strength or skill, but there were no goading or insults. He was a tenderfoot and an outsider and they let him know it, but that was all.

It was growing day when he returned to his room at the Clark cottage to snatch a few hours of sleep. His legs were a trifle shaky, his throat felt raw, but he was grimly resolute. Some undercurrent was working in the Morgan mill and he intended to know what it was and what force impelled it. He had a double motive. He was indebted to Virgie and if he could solve this riddle of sabotage and put an end to it, it was little enough to do to repay that debt. And there was Marian.

Somehow he had to repair his blundering, make himself a man again in her eyes. He slept uneasily, awakened when the morning whistle blew.

Ada Clark's mother protest! as he set out again, sheepskin collar shrugged high around his ears.

"You'll be down again and worse than ever if you don't take better care of yourself," she declared. But he gave her a one-sided grin and tramped off, his two sandwiches in his coat pocket.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

1313-B

ONE little, two little, three little fashions—all in one easy pattern (No. 1313-B) that even inexperienced-at-sewing mothers can make with more fun than effort. This design includes a sleeveless pinafore, a brief trifle of bolero and a sunbonnet, all as cute as a baby in a bathtub! In the flaring pinafore alone, your tot can be as carefree and hoydenish as she could wish, playing on the sands or the greensward or her own backyard. When she adds the bolero, she's as demurely dressed for a visit to grandma as you could wish. The eye-protecting bonnet, of course, goes beautifully with either or both. Thus, by repeating this one pattern time and again, you can outfit your small daughter for spring and summer fun.

This little outfit looks adorable in red-checked gingham, flowered percale, plaid or striped seersucker and buttercup yellow chambray, outlined with bright ricrac braid to match or contrast.

Pattern No. 1313-B is designed for sizes 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 years. Size 3 requires 2 1/2 yards of 35-inch material without nap and 8 yards of ricrac. Send order to:

TIPS to Gardeners

GARDENING AS HOBBY

GARDENING as a hobby can be made to pay excellent dividends. As an example, a Missouri woman reports she made a net profit of $300 from her two-thirds-acre garden in a single season. Figured at market prices, food used fresh was $230; food canned, $80; and food stored, $71. Seed and sets cost her only $20.

There are two major requisites to obtaining garden profits of this kind. They are, willingness to work and the use of quality seed. It is important also to devote considerable space to multiple purpose crops like beets, onions, and tomatoes—crops that can be used in a variety of ways.

Here, briefly, are the uses of principal multi-purpose crops; Onions—green, as relish; mature bulbs fried, stewed, or as seasoning; bulbs for pickle, and relish making; tops for seasoning; bulbs for storage. Tomatoes—fresh fruits for slicing or stewing, for immediate table use; for canning, or for making tomato juice, or tomato catsup; green tomatoes for frying, or for use in pickle, relishes, or in pie filler (like mince meat); yellow fruits for preserves, juice, or immediate table use.

Cabbage—fresh in slaw, or salad; cooked for table use; canned as kraut, or stored. Beets—tops for greens; roots cooked fresh, canned, pickled, or stored.

A REPORT to America

The Ford Motor Company's business has always been to serve the needs of the American people. In providing them with low-cost transportation for the past 38 years, we have developed one of the country's largest and most useful industrial units. During a national emergency, we feel that these facilities should be devoted without reserve to our country's needs. Toward that end we started rolling months ago, with these results:

1 A $21,000,000 Ford airplane engine factory, started only 6 months ago, is nearly completed. Production will start with an initial order for 4,236 eighteen cylinder, air-cooled, double-row, radial engines.

2 We are building a new $800,000 Ford magnesium alloy foundry, one of the few in the country. It is already producing lightweight airplane engine castings.

3 Army reconnaissance cars—military vehicles of an entirely new type—are rolling off special Ford assembly lines at the rate of more than 600 a month. We have produced Army staff cars and bomber service trucks.

4 The government has given the "go-ahead" and work is now under way for the fast construction of an $11,000,000 Ford plant to produce bomber airframe assemblies by mass production methods.

5 Several months ago work was started, on our own initiative, on an entirely new 1500 horsepower airplane engine especially designed for mass production. This engine is now in the test stage and plans are being developed for producing it in large quantities when and if needed.

6 A Ford aircraft apprentice school has been established, to train 2000 students at a time.

That is a report of progress to date.

The experience and facilities of this company can be used to do much of the job which America now needs to get done in a hurry.

Our way of working, which avoids all possible red tape, enables us to get results and get them fast. This benefits users of our products and workers who produce them.

We are ready to make anything we know how to make, to make it to the limit of our capacity if need be, to make it as fast as we can go, and to start the next job whenever our country asks us to. And to this end, we know we have the full confidence and loyal support of the workmen throughout our plants.

Shaking Liver Good Exercise For Mind, Body

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

A FRIEND asked me to look at an "exerciser" for which he had taken the agency. It consisted of a square box on which he asked me to sit or stand.

I told him that this was the same idea as the mechanical horse found on shipboard or in a gymnasium which "shook up" the whole body.

For a long time I wondered how these men with country estates kept as well physically as they did, despite the fact that they were often very heavy eaters.

For years it was believed that exercise that shook up or squeezed the liver would make the bile flow and this was proven a few years ago by research workers at McGill University.

On returning from summer cottages it is the "usual" thing for many individuals to develop head colds. It is agreed that it is the leaving of the outdoors to live indoors whether in Maine or in California that is the cause of a great number of colds.
