69 Given Certificates at Citizenship Program

A small audience heard a very excellent Citizenship Day program last Sunday evening at the auditorium of the elementary grade building in West Bend. Sixty-nine young people of Washington county finished the necessary instruction to qualify them to receive a citizenship certificate, of which thirty were present at the induction ceremony.

The colors were presented by two Sea Scouts, Henry Wilkens and George Altendorf. Mr. Wilkens led the 21-ers and the audience in a salute to the flag. The two young men presented the colors in a dignified and effective manner.

Rev. H. C. Melius gave the invocation after which Walter Moutin of the town of Erin and chairman of the 1940 21-ers of the county, made the introductory address. Mr. Moutin was very idealistic in his address and he made a plea for a fuller appreciation of citizenship in America.

A brief response to this address was made by Roland East of Germantown. Mr. East is county chairman of the 21-ers of 1941. It was his first appearance before the county organization. He and his associates hoped to carry on the work on the level set by the officers of the last two years. The program was continued by a vocal trio composed of Misses Marguerite, Marie and Lorraine Weiss. They made a distinctive impression with songs evidencing ability.

The main address was delivered by the Hon. Fred R. Zimmerman, secretary of the state of Wisconsin. Mr. Zimmerman was at his best and made the usual appeal for the readiness necessary to meet the needs of democracy when it was at the crossroads.

Judge F. W. Bucklin inducted the young voters into active citizenship and before the induction he gave some very sound advice. After the induction M. T. Buckley presented the certificates of citizenship. He indicated that there was no need of discouragement and that the citizenship program requires time to develop. He reported the interest is more active in Washington county than generally in Wisconsin. The benediction was given by Rev. H. C. Melius.

In a free hitting and loosely played contest at Adell Sunday Kewaskum lost its first game away from home, 11 to 9, dropping the team from among the leaders. The team got off to a bad start and a late rally fell short by two runs.

H. Marx started on the mound for Kewaskum and pitched the first four innings, in which Adell got all of their 11 runs. He was nicked for nine hits in the four frames he worked and three errors by his teammates hurt the cause considerably. Honeck entered the game as relief hurler in the fifth inning but it was too late to save the game although he did a fine job. Honeck allowed only two hits in the last four innings and had the Adell sluggers eating out of his hand as he struck out seven opponents. Six of Adell's hits off Marx were for extra bases.

DeGroff did all right for himself on the hill for Adell until he weakened late in the game and Kewaskum poured on him for seven runs in the last two innings, three in the eighth and four in the ninth. In the first seven innings DeGroff allowed only two runs and gave up six hits. Kewaskum's four run rally in the ninth fell short when Bunkelmann was called out trying to stretch a double into a triple. From the spectators viewpoint he looked safe by plenty. Had he been called so, well, the boys were hot at the time and might have gone on to win.

Kewaskum outhit the opponents 12 to 11 but nearly all of Adell's hits came in the pinch when they were needed in the most. Nine errors were made, six by Adell and three by Kewaskum. Kilib paced Adell's attack with a triple and two singles in four trips while Koepeke got a long home run. Four players got two hits apiece for the losers.

Trailing 7 to 6, Kewaskum made one run on an error and two singles in the third. Adell made one the same inning and finished their scoring on a single and Koepeke's homer in the fourth. The locals added one more on two walks and a hit in the sixth. Then in the eighth three were added on an error, two walks, single and double. The four run rally in the ninth resulted from two singles, error and two doubles.

KEWASKUM WOMAN'S CLUB TO SPONSOR CANCER FILM
The last meeting of the club this year will be held at the home of Mrs. O. E. Lay Saturday, May 24. Our year's traveling will end with Miss Bratz presenting "Haiti and the Dominican Republic—Homeward Bound."

The general public is urged to attend the film describing the development and danger of cancer as well as education in its prevention. The film will be shown at the high school auditorium at 8 p. m. on Monday, May 26.

Just as deaths from tuberculosis have been reduced by a nationwide campaign so it is hoped that cancer deaths may be reduced as well. This movement is only beginning what it hopes will be an important work in aiding the public in recognizing early symptoms and thus, with proper medical attention, in effecting its cure.

Plans Completed for Picnic of Co. Tavern League Here June 15

Plans were practically completed for the second annual gigantic picnic of the Washington County Tavern league at a meeting of the board of directors held in this village Monday afternoon. The picnic will be held in the beautiful Kewaskum village park on Sunday, June 15, afternoon and evening. Urban Gehl of West Bend is secretary of the county league.

The tavernkeepers of the county, hosts at the event, are offering a fine program of entertainment. The Kewaskum Community band will give a concert in the park in the afternoon and evening. There will be all of the usual concessions and amusements, including music, kiddie rides, games, lunches, ice cream, refreshments and other attractions. There will be plenty of entertainment for the kiddies.

In the evening the feature will be a grand dance at the Kewaskum Opera House, with modern and old time music furnished by Earl Etta's orchestra. The admission price to the dance will be 30c, including tax. Admission to the park will be free at all times, the only charge that to the dance.

$100.00 in cash prizes and many other merchandise awards will be given away absolutely free in the evening at the park. The drawing will get under way at 8:30 o'clock. Tickets are being given away free now at all of the member taverns in the county with every purchase of 50 cents or more. All patrons have to do is sign their name to the tickets to become eligible for the prizes. After signing just drop the ticket in the box at the tavern you received the coupon.

It is stated on the tickets that winners must be present to win. This has been changed by the directors and winners do NOT have to be present but will be notified, according to Mich. Goring, who paid the Statesman office a call Monday. Other members included Orin Klassen of West Bend, and Jac. Habermacher, Germantown.

The league members extend a cordial invitation to all to attend this picnic. Bear the date in mind and come for a grand time. All will be royally entertained.

Pvt. Schmidt Promoted Again; Leaves for Tenn.
Private Howard Schmidt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. H. Schmidt of Kewaskum, who is with the fifth signal corps of the U. S. army stationed at Fort Custer, Mich., was again promoted this week, this time to a third class specialist as a radio operator and therefore receives another increase in pay. Howard's new rating is the highest that any member of his company has received. This was Howard's second promotion within a month and he is very jubilant about it as he has been in the army only three months.

According to a letter received by his parents the third division left Fort Custer on Tuesday for Camp Forrest, Tenn., where they are expected to remain for about a month, after which they will return to Fort Custer. Private Schmidt was among those transferred to Tennessee. It is expected that the trip will take nine days and the men will travel through the states of Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee. If they all left together it meant a conveyance of about 75 miles. The reason for the long time it will take to make the trip is because the infantry will march on foot part of the time every day.

The Everglades—Once a Waste Now Center of Sugar Industry

A dozen years ago the Florida Everglades were barren and unproductive. Today they are the center of a sugar industry which provides more than 5,000 people with employment and which spent over a million and a half dollars in 1940 for materials purchased in 19 other states. The ten plantations of the United States Sugar corporation spread over thousands of acres of these glade lands. These photos show what goes on during the harvest season at Cleveiston, Fla.

The girls at the left look very industrious, but they are only out for a frolic in the sugar cane.

This worker knows how to cut sugar cane.

Picture Parade

As grown in the Everglades sugar cane is cut in the field, loaded in tractor wagons to the railroad, and hauled by train to the raw sugar mill at Cleveiston.

Right: The "Casey Jones of the Everglades" having a bit of fun riding up the company locomotive.

The harvest garnered, the cars are locked to the rails and tilted. The sugar is now on its way to become sugar. Planting is planned to provide crops which mature on a regular schedule during a six-month period.

The raw sugar flows into sacks from automatic weighers, each sack getting the same amount of sugar when the boy releases a trigger. The sacks are weighed again, later.

The long journey starts. Up the escalator go the sacks to the freight cars, then to the refinery, where the yellowish raw sugar is refined into the white table product.

Harvest season in Florida's Everglades is a season of merry-making.

LEAVES from Uncle Sam's Notebook

Some Insect Pests

One of the most common and destructive of all insect pests is the aphid or plant louse. Aphids are tiny, sap-sucking insects which swarm on terminal shoots of plants, on the tender sides of leaves, or on any tender spot of the plant giving fluids. Among the common garden vegetables which are subject to aphid attack are potatoes, peas, lettuce, cabbage, kale, spinach, string beans, musk melons, and water melons. Many of our common flowers such as roses, sweet peas, nasturtiums, and chrysanthemums are natural feeding grounds for the aphids.

When the gardener finds that the leaves of plants are curled or distorted, that the plants have a tendency to droop and wilt, that flowers are malformed, or that ants or other insects swarm among the plants to eat the honey-dew dropped by the aphids, he will know that he is up against an aphid infestation. As a matter of fact, the insects themselves are readily recognized, since they are tiny things, soft-bodied, pear-shaped, and range in color from pale green to pale pink, to blackish; bean aphids are black; spinach aphids are pale yellowish-green and carry three dark lines on the back of the abdomen.

APHID INFESTATION

Since aphids draw their nourishment from within the plants, they can not be controlled by stomach poisons but must be attacked with contact insecticides. The one most commonly used is nicotine solution or nicotine dust. The basic nicotine solution may be bought at any pharmacy or any seed or plant house, and comes usually in a concentrate of about 40 per cent nicotine. It is then prepared for use in the following manner: For a small quantity of spray, dissolve an ounce of common laundry soap in one gallon of water and add 1 to 1 1/2 teaspoonfuls of the nicotine concentrate. For a larger quantity, prepare the soap solution in the same proportion and, to such soap solution, add one fluid ounce of the nicotine concentrate to eight gallons of water. Apply with a strong, direct spray, from various angles, so that all insects on the under parts of the plants will be reached.

If a nicotine dust is preferred, mix a half ounce of the nicotine concentrate with 9 1/2 ounces of hydrated lime and dust the plants thoroughly with the mixture. Dusting should be done when the plants are dry and when the temperature is above 65 degrees F.

Caution. The operator should avoid inhaling the dust as it will cause nose and throat irritation.

CUTWORMS

The villainous cutworm, that "terror that walks by night," is well known to all gardeners. They are fat, white worms, the larvae of certain brown moths, that hide under the soil at the base of plants by day and come forth to their nefarious work by night, cutting off young plants at or near the surface of the soil.

Preventive methods for control of cutworms. (1) Keep the garden well cultivated, leaving no grassy or sodded areas where the moths may lay their eggs; (2) spade or plow the land in the fall, thus turning the young larvae up to the attacks of birds and weather.

Control after infestation. If the garden is small it is possible to control cutworms by digging around the roots of the plants that have been cut down, dragging the culprits out and killing them. For larger areas, or for sure destruction anywhere, use a poison bran mash, made as follows:

- Paris green.....2 level teaspoons
- Wheat bran.....5 pounds
- Molasses.....1/2 pint
- Water.....5 quarts

Mix the paris green and dry wheat bran together very thoroughly, making sure that every particle of the bran is coated with the poison. Mix the molasses and water and add, slowly, to the poisoned bran, making a rather dry mash. Scatter this mash, thinly, at sundown, around the plants to be protected. The worms will crawl out at night and consume the mash. If there is reason to suppose that your garden may become infested during the coming season, it is a good plan to cover the entire area with this poison bran mash, just before the planting is done.

For further information on plant diseases and pests, send 10c to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1746.

MARSH MARIGOLD FOR GREENS

The Cowslip or Marsh Marigold makes a delicious pot of greens if it is gathered when the leaves are still small and tender. This is, however, more easily said than done and the gatherer will need a pair of rubber boots, for this early spring flower grows in bogs and marshes. The plant's leaves are a smooth, glossy dark green. They may be cooked with pork or bacon and served as hot greens, or cooked simply in salted water and served, with a suitable dressing, as a salad.

A HYPOCRITICAL INSECT

The praying mantis, so-called because he seems to hold his fore legs in an attitude of prayer, is not praying, but is holding himself in readiness to catch and devour any insect that comes within his reach.

THE INEXPENSIVE GOOSE

Geese are the least expensive of all fowls to grow. They require little shelter, needing protection only during cold or storm, and—given sufficient range—will get their entire food supply from grass.

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MARCH OF TIME camera-men went on a long and perilous voyage to film some of the material used in "Crisis in the Atlantic"—they went from Canada to England aboard a tanker in convoy. The film also includes the first pictures to arrive here from Greenland since that strategic island has become so important.

"Crisis in the Atlantic" vividly portrays the many aspects of the struggle to keep the sea lanes open so that war materials and food can be sent to Britain, and depicts as well the joint U. S.-Canadian defense efforts involving bases from the Arctic to the South Atlantic. It's a film scoop; don't miss it!

Brian Donlevy has been spending a lot of time learning to do something that will be quite useless in private life. In "The Great Man's Lady," a Paramount production, he plays the part of a professional gambler, a master hand at cheating. And what makes it all the more painful is the fact that Donlevy has an abhorrence of all card games, even the game of Authors.

Bette Davis is at it again, playing one of the most unpleasant women ever seen on the screen. It's for "The Little Foxes," RKO's screen version of the tremendously successful play. It was RKO, you may recall, that set Miss Davis square on her feet, dramatically, by casting her as the heroine of "Of Human Bondage"—a role few actresses would have had the courage to take. She took it, and made movie history.

Anna Neagle does an entire dance number while submerged in a glass tank filled with water in her new picture, "Sunny." Back in England she won medals for swimming and diving, so she got into a scanty sequin costume and combined her talents as a swimmer and a dancer. The story's laid in New Orleans during the Mardi Gras, and Ray Bolger and John Carroll head the supporting cast. The under-water dance is a stunt new to pictures—new, as well, to Miss Neagle, we might add.

At the age of 97 Bob Hope's grandfather is helping to extinguish incendiary fires in the English village where he lives. "My health at present is much better than my disposition," he wrote his grandson. "I don't mind staying up at night to see your pictures, but I hate to have to miss my sleep just to put out some fires."

Meanwhile Bob is slated to do another of those hilarious comedies with Paulette Goddard; it's called "The Murder Farm," and sounds as if it might even top "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers," their previous collaborations.

Agnes Moorehead, who plays the mother in Orson Welles' remarkable "Citizen Kane," first encountered Welles when he was five and she was not much older. He strolled into a hotel lobby with his father, describing a concert which he had just heard, and doing it so dramatically that she never forgot him. She makes her film debut in "Citizen Kane," and gives a beautiful, sincere performance. In fact, the whole cast does that—you forget that the people on the screen are acting, because they seem so real.

Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor didn't tell even their best friends that they were going off on that West Indies cruise, waited until just before the boat sailed to send telegrams announcing their plans. It's their first vacation together in 18 months, and their second trip together since they were married three years ago. They sailed as Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Brugh, hoping to avoid advance plans for ovations at their various ports of call.

ODDS AND ENDS—Warner Brothers drafted college students to man the guns in "Dive Bomber" and "The Flight Patrol"—the army draft left a shortage in the ranks of extras. "Robin Hood" is going to be a Republic serial, with Roy Rogers in the title role. Robert Cummings will be Deanna Durbin's leading man in "Almost an Angel." Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy are beginning their fifth year with that coffee program—and when they started, Bergen wasn't at all sure that he could turn out a script a week. "The Pause That Refreshes on the Air" has been renewed for another 26 weeks—one of the few network shows to run all summer.

Paramount says it's going to let the public help cast "For Whom the Bell Tolls"; through the medium of circulating libraries they'll give the public a voice in the selection of players for the principal roles, and in the presentation of the more difficult and delicate scenes. Past experiences makes one very wary about such announcements; they whip up interest in the picture involved, of course, but naturally the highly experienced studio executives are the ones to make final judgments.

By limiting food calories to around 1,200 a day, she not only loses—as much as 24 pounds in three months—but feels radiantly younger. And the lovely part is that while reducing you eat as much as ever!

Make an oilcloth cover for your ironing board. Put over cover on ironing board when brushing and sponging garments.

Painting the top and bottom cellar steps white may save many falls.

Most silk lamp shades may be successfully washed with lukewarm soapsuds. Dissolve soap flakes thoroughly before adding them to the water and use a very soft brush to apply the suds to the shade.

Don't keep honey in the refrigerator. It keeps better in the cupboard.

Heat spots on table tops and other furniture will disappear if rubbed with linseed oil and later polished.

Always use bread crumbs to cover articles to be fried. Cracker crumbs absorb the grease.

To remove chocolate stains from table linen, sprinkle the spot with borax and then pour boiling water through the cloth.

Cotton corduroys look best after laundering if they are not ironed, but are merely brushed along the direction of the ribs while still slightly damp.

Out-of-door pillows, used for the canoe or porch swing, should have an inner covering of oilcloth and an outer one of some attractive cretonne. These will remain uninjured through a rain.

"Lift-All" lifts or lowers the entire implement at the flick of a finger. It is the handy control. But that is not all—"Lift-All" goes "way beyond that! It enables you to: (1) Lift or lower front beams of cultivator first. Delayed action automatically actuates rear beams when they reach point where front beams were lifted or lowered. (2) Lift either side of the implement independently of the other side. (3) Hold implement to any desired working depth. See this great new attachment for Farmall-H and Farmall-M. WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Reports of Hess Flight to England Fill News Columns and Radio Lanes; Convoys Plus Strikes Plus Priorities Equal Headaches in Defense Program

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BOMBHELL: Human Variety

The Rudolf Hess incident was the dropping of a bombshell into the news of Scotland which went up with a louder explosion than any of the tons of TNT that Hitler's aviators had yet sent across the channel.

Imaginations ran riot—the house of commons was in a dither—more than 20 basic theories were advanced to explain why Hess fled Germany in an airplane and dropped to earth in a parachute, and with the interweaving and variations of these, one had several thousand stories to choose from.

To list the British theories and those of neutrals would be futile because they were not only limited by the imaginations of their creators. To list the German explanations also would be futile because they obviously were the propagandic outbursts of a government whose nose was temporarily out of joint.

Outside of this, all was speculation, all was guesswork, but the guessers, most of them being paid at so much a word, let themselves go and endless columns were printed.

Yet the story was not being "overplayed"—most thinking newspaper men being at a loss for earlier comparisons in journalistic history, which, one must recall, doesn't go far back when history is considered.

But outside of the type of story that history presented in the Middle Ages and during the days of Caesar and Hannibal, and Anthony and Cleopatra, and Cassius and Brutus, and Helen of Troy, Hess' flight was unique.

Most newspaper commentators were willing to call it the biggest story in centuries and let it go at that. They wagged their heads and said, "What if Cordell Hull were to fly to Germany, or what if it had been the other way over the channel and Anthony Eden had made the trip?"

This was enough to settle the point as to the magnitude of the news to their own satisfaction, anyway.

Basic explanation of the Hess incident, on the standpoint of logic, brought personal considerations and personal safety to the fore. It was pointed out:

RUDOLF HESS 'A louder explosion than bombs.'

a. Hess had evidently wanted to escape Germany for some reason for he was practically under a debarment sentence by Hitler's having grounded him.

b. If his reason for escape was sound, then to pick out a spot where he would be utterly safe from retribution, England was the one and only spot in the world.

c. If personal safety was his motive, then an inescapable parallel was that something must have been wrong with the unity of the Nazi party of which he was No. 3 fuhrer.

This was enough explanation for British serenity over the incident, also for German perturbation. It was significant that most German dispatches covered these three points.

Point No. 1 was covered when Hitler announced Hess was crazy and had been detained for his own safety. No. 2, that he should select England, Germans explained by saying that the nature of his insanity was that he believed that he, single-handed, could bring about peace.

Point No. 3 was handled by a straight-out denial that anything was wrong with the Nazi party. Hess was a "good Nazi but crazy."

Whether crazy or not, when they took off his shoe and sock to attend to his fractured ankle, he was found to have painted toenails, hardly the American idea for hard-boiled Nazi leader's personal decorations.

Everyone who ever had any contact with Hess told his paragraph or two, from the palmist who said he was "superstitious" to the newspaper commentator who took five minutes "coast to coast" to tell how he had seen Hess go skiing two years ago.

The British expected that Hess would talk, that Hess would and could "tell plenty" and that before the incident was over, the German high command "would sweat."

It was generally conceded that Hess was close to Hitler, and many who professed to know felt sure that if his military knowledge was sketchy, his awareness of diplomatic intrigues and party machinery and conditions inside political Germany was extensive, and that Hess, if actually sane and co-operative, would be of immeasurable value to the British.

PRIORITIES: And OPM

A new difficulty in the U. S. handling of defense work loomed when William S. Knudsen, motor official and head of OPM, seemed to take as a personal issue the question of taking priorities out of his hands and giving them to a special organization answerable only to the army and navy chiefs.

Knudsen was quoted as saying that he would quit if the plan went through.

Thus the question of priorities lifted its head as a vital defense issue, further complicating the picture.

Priorities were becoming a very real issue in business, also, many manufacturers finding that this one question might easily keep them from success or failure in carrying out contracts. The right to a priority of delivery of machine tools might alone answer an entire question of manufacture.

Knudsen took the attitude that if the work of production management was his, that to remove from his hands a vital tool like the right to decide questions of priorities, would be to make his task impossible, and to rob him of his prime prerogative.

WILLIAM S. KNUDSEN He forced an issue.

It seemed likely that unless this question was ironed out swiftly to the liking of the Danish-born production expert, the government might be looking for a new man.

STRIKES: Up-Grade Again

The labor trouble tempo in the United States defense industry was on the upward curve again, with a $30,000,000 order for Browning machine guns held up at the Colt factory at Hartford, Conn., and other old labor difficulties threatening to break out anew, including the coal strike.

Always rearing its head was the threatened General Motors strike, which would, if it occurred, affect millions of dollars in defense work and about 160,000 employees, and John L. Lewis said that if the coal contract with southern operators was not forthcoming soon, he would call the 400,000 coal miners out again.

This brought the strike news back onto the front pages with a bang, and Representative Thomas of New Jersey, a Republican, called for a roundup of Communists in labor groups, and to order them all arrested on treason charges. This was the most drastic step suggested thus far.

SHIPS: Britain Bound

President Roosevelt assured the nation that the administration's objective of 2,000,000 tons of merchant shipping for Britain would be realized by mid-June.

This assurance carried with it the important promise that the bill permitting the President to take possession of foreign vessels idle in American ports was in the category of "sure things."

The senate and house engaged in a desultory effort to write into the bill amendments chief among which was the Tobey amendment forbidding the use of convoys.

The whole convoy issue, as indeed all other news of the war on this side of the water took a back seat during the news ascendancy of Rudolf Hess, but the issue was there, ready to rip itself out into the open at an appropriate moment, and to become the central point of a whole congressional debate on the President's general foreign policy.

The 2,000,000 tons of ships for Britain within a month came as the Nazis were claiming 10,000,000 tons of British ships sunk by U-boats since the start of the war, and with the British, while admitting losses of at least half that amount, generally showing the pinch sharply.

Further drastic reductions in the meat ration (and little is as dear to the Britisher as his beloved beef and mutton) were announced and the general trend of commons debate indicated that Britain was feeling the ship pinch tremendously.

Postponed

For some reason, however, the White House seemed not quite ready to have the issue come to grips, for after Hull, Knox and Stimson had done the spade-work and the President was all set to follow this up with an address to the people, he suddenly postponed it.

As nothing but Hess had happened, most commentators saw in the excitement over the Hess story the President's reason for wanting to wait until this furore had died down before speaking.

Gold Star Mother

When American Gold Star Mothers conducted their annual ceremonies in Glendale, California, Mrs. Anna Barnbrock, 94, oldest of the group in the nation, participated in the ceremonies. Mrs. Barnbrock is pictured standing before the marble statuary, "A Compassionate Mother," which was unveiled.

DRAFT: Bars Lifted

Of extreme import was the decision of congress to lift all bans to the size of the army or to the question of selective service for any purpose for which it might be used in the national defense.

Also vital was the decision immediately to classify the 10,000,000 young men still unclassified in the first call, and to set up the second call for an early date, probably in July.

Two things were highly likely as a result—that the draft would be used to call men of a younger age than before, and that it would also be used to hunt out "missing links" among the skilled trades for use in defense industry.

The first eventuality naturally would follow the report of army chiefs after a few months' experience and draftees that the younger men were far more adaptable than the older, and could take their training quicker and better.

The second resulted from the realization that many men in the uniform would be much more productive to defense in shipyards or munitions plants and that the classification lists, if turned over to defense production men might result in discovery of these facts before the uniform was donned.

The lifting of any ban on the size of the army tended to indicate that there was justification for the growing belief that the end of a calendar year would not very likely mean the end of a man's military service, under present conditions.

VICHY: A New Role

More and more it was becoming apparent that newest German propaganda was to convince the world, especially the United States, of one fact—that the war was over and Germany was about to undertake the difficult task of reconstruction.

In effect the story to (as one German writer put it) "poor daddy Roosevelt" was this: "All British have been chased from the European continent except at Gibraltar.

"Thus Germany's prime objective has been achieved. We shall now try to cement these 300,000,000 people into one force, working for Germany."

"With this force we shall confront the United States and defeated Britain."

First move in the "war is now over game" was to lighten, somewhat, the armistice terms for France—and to ask deeper collaboration.

This, according to dispatches, Vichy accepted unanimously. The German plan called for the return of some prisoners of war, the raising of the line between occupied and unoccupied France, and a list of demands on the French for co-operation which might never be made public.

Most observers believed that Germany, in order to get and hold the Mediterranean, would give almost any concession to beaten France to grab the French fleet, but this did not appear on the surface as a condition.

Why a Change?

What did change Vichy's role in the world? Up to that moment the world had pictured Vichy and unoccupied France as a saddened, hungry nation, bled white by the Nazis, and hoping against hope for the day when a British victory would return the country to peace, prosperity and freedom.

Now the world had to picture a France which had further surrendered, which was sending Darlan to repeated close and secret conferences with a "high Nazi authority," and which was prepared to tell the United States, in effect, just what the Germans were claiming:

"The war is over, Europe now is dominated by Germany, and France is going to collaborate politically and socially, to see what she can gain for herself in the reorganization of Europe. If you go into the war on the side of Britain you are against, not for us."

Also a part of it was "on Papan's public statement as he entered Ankara to confer with the Turks. He said:

"I am come as a dove of peace. You Turks may relax and spend the summer in peace at your beaches. War will not come."

Yet most observers believed that he was in Ankara to lay the diplomatic ground work for the passage of German armies through Turkey. A flat refusal to this proposal, most observers felt, would bring anything but peace to Turkey and the Near-East.

Washington Digest U. S. Plans Broadcasts In German for Aliens

Prepare Campaign of 'Counter-Propaganda'; Russo-Japanese Neutrality Pact Cools U. S. 'Friendship.'

By BAUKHAGE National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street N. W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—You hear more and more talk in Washington these days about total defense with the accent on the total.

Another way to say it would be "all-out" since that is the popular phrase of the day borrowed from the English who usually borrow their slang from us. A better way to say what officials are now calling for is "everybody out." If there is to be a final test between this democracy and totalitarianism it will be a race and totalitarism it will be avengeance.

Already the ramifications of the defense effort are reaching into all corners of national activity. While our factories are filling the air with bombers and fighters for England, the government is planning a little peaceful air-offensive of our own against Germany.

When you feel around on the dial of your radio set some day you may suddenly pick up a voice in German broadcasting from Washington.

Do not worry. That will not mean that the fifth columnists have arrived on the Potomac. The voice will be coming forth not in spite of, but because of, the department of justice. The words may be as persuasive as those of Propagandist Goebbels or as pleasing as those of the Poet Goethe but they will be boosting democracy.

If you can understand what the broadcaster is saying, you can learn some good things about your country and its customs that you may have forgotten even if the message is not meant for you. It is meant, as a matter of fact, for the German-speaking foreign-born of this country and the broadcast has been planned for two purposes.

The first is to remind these more recent arrivals on our shores who may have been listening to the short wave broadcasts from Berlin that there are a lot of good points about the country of their adoption which they may have overlooked. The second is to try to unite the newcomers and their offspring in an effort to use their influence, if they have any, to pass on some of these points to the people in the old country with whom they may still be in touch, directly or indirectly.

The idea has the support of Attorney General Jackson but he would carry it still further. He believes in fighting fire with fire and shooting counter-propaganda right at the Germans in Germany.

Of course, news reports from the United States are being beamed at Germany and France and other European countries, as well as South America right now. We know how difficult it is for the Germans and people in the occupied countries to listen to foreign broadcasts. It may mean a life sentence. But we have ample evidence that the American stations have listeners—a great many more than would be expected under the circumstances. The people in those countries are starved for the news. They know that the newspapers they get are simply rubber stamps from the censor's office. They know our news is authentic, unbiased, accurate.

But some people think that we ought to go much further in this battle of the ether than merely broadcasting news. They think that, in addition to the newscasts, there should be interesting feature broadcasts which would contain material planned to counteract the propaganda which the Germans are sending out to their own people and to others abroad.

There are those, of course, outside the government who are openly demanding that we go even further than this. They say that we should not limit our efforts to defeating German propaganda by a counter attack on the air waves, but that we must take over some of the Goebbels methods in foreign countries where his fifth-columnists are busy now—that we should match dollars against marks where they will do the most good, organize secret agents of our own, especially in South America.

Right now American business men in South America on their own initiative have bought time on the air for programs of news and other material concerning the United States.

What further steps the department of justice, or whatever government agency might undertake the work, may do or may be doing now for that matter, is not officially revealed. But this we do know: the stations of the National Broadcasting company, Columbia, Westinghouse, General Electric and the privately owned station WRUL in Boston expect greatly to increase the number of newscasts they are sending out to foreign countries in foreign languages.

Soviet Diplomats Hold an "At Home"

Many a Washington official who speaks of Russia's dictator with a curl of the lip has a secret admiration for the wily Comrade Stalin. Some call him the "Volga Goat-man"—because he gets so many diplomatic goats.

Recently it was the policy of the state department (following the British lead) to make up to the czar of the Soviets. Russia wanted machines and tools. We wanted Russia to growl at the Japanese. And so the anything-but-proletarian Sumner Welles, our undersecretary of state, was forced to let his chin down at least one hitch and converse pleasantly with the anything-but-aristocratic Tovarisch Oumanski, charge d'affaires of the Soviets.

Then came the sudden announcement of the Russo-Japanese neutrality pact. It broke upon the dignified diplomatic world with all the indignity of an over-age egg exploding on an immaculate shirt front.

About that time of the month there occurred an "at-home" at one of the Sixteenth street's most prominent residences (to quote the official guide book). This mansion, built originally by the widow of the Pullman palace car millions and later palace of the perfumed and benomoned emissaries of the Romanoffs, is now the Soviet embassy.

The "at home" was a great success. The great and the near-great from belligerent and peaceful nations were there. In fact, it was quite a job keeping the Canadian diplomats out of one salon while swastika and hammer and sickle tete-a-tete over the tall tea-glasses.

Earlier that day the state department had minimized to inquiring reporters the importance of the Russo-Japanese pact. But diplomats, as you know, use words to conceal their thoughts. Their actions speak much louder than their official statements. At the Soviet "at home" state department officials were exceedingly conspicuous by their absence.

Germans Prepare To Invade England

Will the Nazis try to invade the British Isles?

Most experts say, yes. The question is when?

Recently some information has come to my ears which touches on this point. It comes from two sources which are sound and reliable. One is a story which was told to me by a French newspaper woman who is Hitler's Private Enemy Number One. She is Madame Genevieve Tabouis, and she escaped France ahead of the hungry Gestapo and is here in the United States.

She told me that the Germans had held a practice maneuver in France which consisted of pouring oil on a certain river. They then ignited the oil and hundreds of German soldiers, dressed in specially prepared fireproof clothing jumped in. The next day the river was full of corpses and the hospitals full of frightfully burned soldiers.

The experiment did not work. Spreading burning oil at invasion points is said to be one of the methods of defense the British are planning against invasion.

Now the second story comes from a man whom I cannot name but who has recently been in Germany. He says that the Germans have been working a long time on perfecting amphibian tanks—tanks which will actually float. He believes that there will be no invasion until these tanks are ready.

He also says that a psychological moment will be chosen. One when British morale is at a low point. For instance, if both the Suez and Gibraltar were captured the Germans might feel that this was the moment.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

If you want to be an army officer, you pretty nearly have to be literary as well as literate. At least, a 16-page circular advising us to the type of books officers should read include books on philosophy, political science, military science, history, international relations, Stalin's Secret Service and Hitler's Mein Kampf. Others are representative works of all the leading countries.

An army officer in the war department can no longer indulge in the princely prerogative of the tycoon in having his secretary get people on the phone for him. He has to make the call himself so he will be there when the other party answers.

Also, when he is called on the phone he has to say: "Captain Jones," and not "hello." That is just army custom anyhow—but the new regulations are meant primarily to relieve some of the unnecessary congestion on the war department's swamped switchboards.

"Too dumb to fight!"

That's a new one, but it is what the army says about draft registrants who cannot read and write. After trying to teach illiterate selectees the complications of modern military machines, the Selective Service administration has ordered that a fourth grade education or its equivalent is now necessary before you can get into this new army.

The department of justice has just received 250,000 more non-criminal fingerprint cards in one month. The folks who sent them know they can come before justice with clean hands or they wouldn't dirty them with finger-printing ink.

How can a school develop and operate a health program? The superintendent of public documents, Washington, D. C., will send you United States office of education bulletin 1939 No. 12 on this subject, for 15 cents.

IMAGINARY DIALOGUES: GARGANTUA AND TOTO

("All efforts to get Gargantua, the circus gorilla, and Toto, the Cuban gorilla imported to be his mate, to be friends have failed." — News item.)

Gargantua (after one look)—Am I seeing things?

Toto—That's just what I was asking myself.

Gargantua—I don't know what you are, but do me a favor and scram.

Toto—Listen, Funny Face, I'm not here of my own accord. This visit isn't my idea.

Gargantua—Well, it certainly isn't mine. Gee, but you're a homely dame.

Toto—That goes double for you. If I was as ugly as you I'd do something about it.

Gargantua (sadly)—There's only one thing you can do about it, and that's join a circus.

Toto—That's what I'm here for now!

Gargantua—So that's it! They're trying to co-star me! Well, they can't do that to me.

Toto—Calm yourself. It's not my idea.

Gargantua—Nobody could get you here if you didn't want to come.

Toto—A dozen men brought me here.

Gargantua—You could have licked 'em all!

Toto—You must have read Arthur Brisbane.

Gargantua—Aw, go away, please! It was tough enough around here when there was only one of us.

Toto—Didn't you ever think of getting married?

Gargantua—No, that's my press agent's idea.

Toto—Two can live as cheap as one, Gargie.

Gargantua—Yes, but what do I care what I cost this circus. It's got plenty of dough.

Toto—What you need is a nice wife.

Gargantua—Where would I find one?

Toto—How about me?

Gargantua (with a look of horror)—I'm not monkey enough to marry a girl with a mug like yours.

Toto—You're no jungle Clark Gable yourself.

Gargantua—Maybe not, but I've got prestige. I'm probably the most famous gorilla in the world.

Toto—You're just another big gorilla to me.

Gargantua—Where did you come from, anyhow?

Toto—Cuba.

Gargantua—Now I know what caused all that unrest there!

Toto—Listen, you can't insult me like that. I wouldn't take you for a husband. If I was your wife I'd give you poison.

Gargantua—And if I was your husband I'd take it.

Both (in a fury)—You BIG GORILLA!

BANKING BY TIMETABLE

A bank has been opened in a railroad depot at New Rochelle, N. Y., and it is at least a novel idea. The country has always wanted to see a demonstration of how money could be withdrawn or deposited at full gallop by a man with his arms full of garden tools and his coat half off. Elmer Twitshell wants to know if the depot banks runs on eastern standard or daylight saving time.

And there is sure to be the confused commuter who isn't certain whether he was to deposit $8 just before the 7:55 a. m. or deposit 7:55 just before the $8 pulled in.

The U. S. treasury announces that, despite metal priorities, it will continue to issue nickels. This country has got to have a coin that will do the work the penny used to do, or nearly so.

Congressmen grow gabby at cocktail parties and spill important war information, it is alleged. And probably it's true. Congressmen are talky enough when they're cold sober, let alone when they're on their fourth old-fashioned.

ATTACK ON AMERICA

searched Mile Ducos' drawers. "Boggio told me that you had a great deal of money," she answered.

"I brought their dance partner," she said. "I have a harmless platitude."

"You know this isn't some trick?" Benning asked. "I am a trusted officer before you or anyone else."

"Mr. and Mrs. Boggio," she said. "Don't you credit me with anything?"

"I suggested for you a pair of pillow slips and a small corner rug from the apartment designs. They are gifts for you."

"Under these circumstances did he tell you of the air bases?"

"He sat down and a cold sweat came over his face. He looked at the resentment in my eyes."

INSTALLMENT FOUR

Bromlitz, an American traitor who had been captured in Paris, and soon gained the confidence of Fincke, another officer. Benning was accepted as an officer by Van Hassek, leader of the foreign armed forces in Mexico. Several days later Benning was joined by Luetze, were figures of five digits.

He sensed rather than heard the returning Bavarian. Instantly he thrust the map into the breast of his loose khaki tunic, closed the open drawer of Van Hassek's desk. Benning strode through the curtains into the reception room at the identical moment that the Bavarian reentered.

Although as an essential of his business, he had learned control of his emotions, Benning was unable to put down the racking suspense of the next few moments. Would the Bavarian discover at once that Van Hassek's desk had been tampered with? Benning's brief survey of the map had given him the vital information for which he had been playing. If no alarm came now, he could slip away in the night, haul out the Fernando plane from his hangar, and fly through to the border.

The Bavarian came driving through the portieres, black tragedy in his distended eyes. His cheeks ruptured by a sudden noisy commotion, the half-hysterical cries of a Mexican girl who was being thrust into the ballroom from Van Hassek's bedroom. The staff colonel marched across to Van Hassek and handed him the stolen operations map.

"Excellency, I found it pinned under the lace flourishes of this wench's gown," the colonel reported.

Van Hassek took the map with a casual hand, opened it for identification, and slowly smiled. He tucked the document into the gold sash at his waist, and with a toss of his hand indicated that the prisoner be taken away in close arrest. The Mexican girl, loudly protesting innocence, was bundled out of the room. Van Hassek slowly turned to his remaining guests with a cool bow.

"Good night, my friends," he said gravely. "I regret it if your pleasure has been spoiled tonight, but on some other evening I'll expect to make amends. Now I must busy myself with the details of what has happened. Buenos noches."

Mile Ducos did not speak as Benning took her home in a cab. When they were alone, Benning saw her undergo an unexpected transformation. Her eyes filled with tears and she sobbed softly to herself. Presently she recovered her self-possession and dried her eyes.

"I suppose I shouldn't have such scruples about that girl when so many lives are at stake," she rationalized. "But I had no alternative than to do what I did. I only hope she convinces Van Hassek of her innocence—or he decides she is too attractive to die."

Benning busied himself with maps and pencil. From time to time as he worked he closed his eyes to examine the sensitive film of his memory. A Van Hassek arrow thrust its point across the border at Laredo. Behind its shaft was the figure 50,000. At Brownsville was the figure 10,000, at Eagle Pass another 10,000. On the California frontier were two arrows joined together behind a curved line, their points aimed at Tecate and Tia Juana, in the region of San Diego. The figure here was 60,000.

Four arrows thrust from the Pacific, behind them no legends. One pointed to Seattle, a second at the mouth of the Columbia River, a third just north of San Francisco, a fourth at San Diego. On the Atlantic side, groups of red arrows pointed at critical points from Boston to New Orleans. Here, again, there were no figures.

Benning handed his reproduction of Van Hassek's key map to Mile Ducos. He saw the blood drain from her face as she studied it. She looked up at him with startled, staring eyes.

"Mon Dieu, monsieur!" she gasped. "This means the very worst is to happen! Such attack upon you will set the whole world in flames!"

Benning got up and put on his cap. "I am leaving Mexico at once, mademoiselle," he said calmly. "You are welcome to come along with me if you don't mind taking some chances with a pilot who's somewhat out of practice."

She answered gravely: "My instructions require me to remain in Mexico, monsieur. But it's important for you to reach your government as quickly as possible! I learned from Boggio today that he can't see me tomorrow. All leaves of absence are being suspended, which means you'll not have long to wait for Van Hassek's attack. Au revoir, monsieur, and bon voyage."

A folded linen map.

were flushed and heavy veins welled at neck and forehead. The Bavarian strode to a colonel of the staff and whispered avidly. The colonel hurried over to Van Hassek.

Mile Ducos picked up in Benning's face some hint of his suspense. She left Van Hassek, now yawning drunk, and crossed the room.

"Something has gone wrong, monsieur," she whispered anxiously. "You have been up to mischief in Van Hassek's room."

"Concealed in my tunic," Benning answered at once. "I have Van Hassek's operations map—the most dangerous secret in Mexico. You must drop me at once."

"Let me have the map, monsieur," she whispered.

"I took a desperate gamble," Benning coolly rejoined. "If I've lost, it's my funeral, not yours."

With a quick decisiveness the French girl threw her arms about Benning's neck and kissed him to screen the deft movement in which she stripped the map from under his tunic. She stood close to him while she concealed the document in her dress. Then she stepped back, spat at him, and angrily slapped his face.

"Very well!" she raged, in a voice that reached through the room. "If that's the way you feel about me, you can go to the devil!"

Van Hassek slowly drew himself erect and his face went livid as he received the alarm from his staff colonel. One moment Van Hassek was drunk, the next moment coolly sober.

"No one will leave my quarters, Colonel," Van Hassek calmly instructed. "With the help of my aides you will search every person, including our own officers, until you find the spy and recover my map. At once!"

Outdoors were promptly locked, windows put under guard. All were required to assemble in the ballroom, thence to be taken one at a time to Van Hassek's bedroom for examination.

Benning was taken first. The colonel sharply demanded explanation. Why had he sent the Bavarian officer away from his post of duty? Benning confessed bad judgment, for which he offered apology. His only thought had been that the Bavarian was a neglected guest who should be given a drink. He insisted that he be searched immediately.

The Van Hassek guests had been jolted into sobriety. One by one they were taken for search. Van Hassek stood to one side, smoking a cigar, his face grimly contained as if he waited in supreme confidence on the unmasking of a spy.

Benning's thoughts were interrupted by a sudden noisy commotion, the half-hysterical cries of a Mexican girl who was being thrust into the ballroom from Van Hassek's bedroom. The staff colonel marched across to Van Hassek and handed him the stolen operations map.

Benning looked up with a start, then sprang to his feet. He hesitated for a moment, and stalked toward the portieres and bowed toward the door.

Benning's eyes were riveted behind the door. He saw the key in the top drawer of the desk. He had already found that he was there, a key to the door.

Benning's face went taut as his eyes were riveted on the key. He saw the key in the top drawer of the desk. He had already found that he was there, a key to the door.

CHAPTER VI

The sun was moving over the jagged Washington skyline on the second morning thereafter when Benning was put down at Bolling Field by a fast observation plane from Kelly Field. After his landing at Randolph Field from Mexico City the day before, he had passed the alarm to Eighth Corps Area Headquarters and sent a code report of details by wire to Colonel Flagwill.

A military car was waiting for him at the airport. It sped him to the War Department where Flagwill was waiting in the G-2 office.

The colonel showed the effects of strain and sleeplessness, but was gravely contained.

"A fine bombshell you've exploded in the War Department, Benning," Flagwill said solemnly.

"I've reported only what I learned, sir," Benning answered. "Of course, the final appraisal of my information is up to the General Staff."

"General Hague took your report at once to the President," Flagwill said. "As a result the President had an ultimatum sent to Ruiz yesterday by the State Department. Our ambassador at Mexico City was instructed to say that Mexico must explain fully its European army within forty-eight hours, and give our military attaches at the embassy full authority to visit all troop concentrations to view first-hand what is going on."

Rheumatism And Use of Vitamin D

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

LOOKING back but a few years, physicians today feel that they have much for which to be thankful as they treat and are able to cure the disease which physicians of former days found "incurable." Tuberculosis—consumption—meant slow, but certain death. Pernicious anemia and diabetes also meant certain death within a couple of years. Relief for asthmatic attacks was often possible, but how to cure or prevent attacks was unknown.

Notwithstanding all these advances in medicine, the oldest disease known to man, rheumatism, still is a thorn in the side of physicians. Rheumatism has well been called the stepson of medicine.

Not only is rheumatism the oldest disease, but it is also the most common disease of man, according to a survey made by the United States Public Health Service. "There is almost twice as much rheumatism (arthritis) as heart disease."

In former days it was considered almost the natural thing to develop rheumatism as one got older, but this survey showed that half of those permanently disabled by rheumatism were under 55 years of age. If permanently disabled at 55 it means that many were partly or almost completely disabled some years before they reached 55.

Infection Still Commonest Cause.

In my early years in medicine it was thought that infection—teeth and tonsils—was the cause of most if not all cases. Today it is known that, while infection is still the commonest cause, there are other causes—coldness and dampness, wrong diet, injury, emotional disturbances and others.

While the cause is being sought, treatment today consists in use of pain-relieving drugs, application of heat, diet rich in vitamin B1 and D, and physical therapy.

Dr. Roger T. Farley, Chicago, has had great success by use of massive doses of vitamin D. Other physicians then tried this method, but reported little or no success. Today the reports on the value of this method are more favorable and it is taking its place as almost routine treatment in some hospitals.

Head Colds From Indoor Swimming

MANY towns and cities are equipped with swimming pools. These pools are in the great majority of cases kept very clean by washing down the sides and floor once or twice a week, allowing the water to drain over troughs at the edges, and use of chlorine every 24 hours. Despite all these precautions the number of head colds and nose and ear infections is very large.

Because of these colds there has been much criticism of these indoor pools: the water is not changed often enough, too much chlorine is used, the air about the pool is too hot and wet causing a cold when going outdoors after the swim.

One of the causes of these head colds and infections is pointed out by Dr. H. Marshall Taylor, Jacksonville, Fla., in the Journal of the American Medical Association. "It is now an accepted fact that chilling of the body surfaces causes constriction (partial closing) of the blood vessels of the skin including the blood vessels of the lining of the nose." It is also an accepted fact that prolonged lack of blood to the lining of the nose (due to this partial closing caused by cool air) naturally reduces the local resistance of the lining of the nose, so that this lining is unable to fight off infection.

The cause of these head colds and infections in most cases is thus believed to be (a) breathing in when head is under water, and (b) sitting or standing around the swimming pool and allowing the skin and mucous membrane of the nose to get chilled instead of keeping body warm by moving around.

The remedy is to learn to take a long breath when head is out of water and breathe out when under water. Also, to keep the body active when not in the water.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—What causes me to have a burning spot of pain in my chest near my heart?

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SO MANY clever slip cover tricks are being used now that it is possible to transform an entire house with a few yards of gay chintz. Old chairs of all types step right out and become the life of the party in smart new frocks. Even tables and lamp shades are slip-covered but the best trick is to make something out of next to nothing by slip-covering it. A smart coffee table from a camp stool for instance.

The lower sketch shows how to make a substantial removable top for the stool. The 2-inch boards which are screwed to all four sides of the top fit down over the stool. Flowered chintz is used for the top of the cover and a plain 3-inch glazed chintz frill is added repeating one of the tones in the flower pattern. The seam allowance around the cover may be tacked to the removable top of the table and the whole thing may then be folded away in a small space when not in use.

NOTE: You will find directions for remodeling and slip-covering many types of chairs, as well as an out-moded couch in Book 5 of the series of home-making booklets offered with these articles. The new Book 7 contains a number of ways to use slip covers. In it boxes become ottomans; and an old wicker chair is padded and tufted. Each book contains more than thirty useful home-making projects with complete directions for making. Send order to:

One Cannot Stump When One Is Already Stumped

The first time a man speaks in public he probably suffers more agony than at any other part of his career.

A young man felt the truth of this very keenly when he found himself facing an audience at a pre-election meeting. He had prepared a fervid oration in support of his father's candidacy, but for the first few moments he could but gasp. Then:

"Mr.—er—Chairman," he stammered, "when I—when I left home tonight only my father and myself—knew what I was going to say; now—er—well, now only father knows."

CLASS TRIP
On Monday morning the senior class started out on their class trip at 7:30 in the morning enroute to Mount Horeb where they visited and explored the newly discovered Cave of the Mounds.
The class descended from 60 to 70 feet below the surface of the earth and over 250 feet back into the crevice which ran to the north and south of the entrance.

The cave is not yet fully explored and geologists are still opening new passages and penetrating further into the earth.

The next stop was made at the Federal Forest Products laboratory at Madison where they were conducted through the building by a guide. Here the class was very interested in the piece of lumber used in the Lindbergh kidnapping tragedy. It had been sent there for inspection. The class also visited the Poyette state game farm and arrived home at 8:30 in the evening.
The trip was very much enjoyed.

ches will be taken along. Every teacher and student is looking forward to a good time to close the school year.

FILMS SHOWN
On Tuesday, the juniors and seniors were shown two films in connection with their class work. The first was from the National Association of Manufacturers and was entitled "American Pattern of Progress" and "American Frontiers." The other was a film on "Safety in Driving" put out through the courtesy of the Ford Motor company. Both were educational but entertaining in nature.

CLASS PLAY
The senior class play, given Friday and Saturday nights, was a great success. A large crowd attended both nights and a great many laughs were heard. The play was well cast and all who participated in it deserve the highest praise. Miss Loeppke is to be complimented on her capable direction.

The two short skits between acts were immensely enjoyed. Miss Browne is to be highly complimented on their originality and cleverness.

DID YOU KNOW
That some senior boys were delayed for a few minutes at Columbus?
That "Kraut" made money in penny pitching on the class trip?
That Roger B. takes a delight in giving water to bears? (poor things!).
That the seniors had heat fog and took salt pills?
That Hank was interested in peacocks?
That Eva and Bunice turned green when crawling over a fence? (wet paint).

That ants and spiders were part of the seniors' dinner
That Joy Zanow is a favorite with ALL boys, not just one?
That Orville Petermann was royally crowned by a bench at the sophomores' picnic?
That the sophomores had a picnic at West Bend park Monday night?
That somehow or other the seniors in the band came back in time for practice?
That the senior class play was a grand success?
That most of the senior girls made a wish in the wishing well? (we hope they come true).

That Henry got a hair cut before the senior trip after letting his hair grow for six weeks?
That souvenirs from the Cave of the Mounds were seen Tuesday adorning the seniors? (Many were sent, too).

Highs Nosed Out 2-1 in District Tourney Finals

Kewaskum High's baseball team, defending champion, was nosed out 2-1 by North Fond du Lac in an extra inning game in the finals of the annual Tri-County W. L. A. A. district tournament at the North Fondy park last Friday. Kewaskum reached the finals by handing Campbellsport an 11 to 1 trouncing in the morning. Kewaskum would have won the tourney were it not for a balk by the pitcher.

Two seven inning games were played in the morning. In the first at 9 a. m.
North Fondy shut out Lomira 4-0 behind the 1-hit pitching of Yakaites.
Kewaskum's 11-1 win over Campbellsport in the other morning game at 10:
30 was the locals' third victory over the Belles this spring and all were by a decisive margin. Kewaskum banged out eight hits and took advantage of seven Campbellsport errors. The Belles got only two hits off Brauchle.

Lomira and Campbellsport battled for consolation honors at 1:30 p. m.
and Lomira won 4-3. In the championship final at 3 p. m. Duples pitched 5 hit ball as his mates edged out the locals 2-1 while Bob Smith performed a 5-hit job. Duples whiffed 14 Kewaskum batters for the best pitching job.

Kewaskum bunched two hits—doubles by Strupp and Reindel—to take a one run lead in the fifth inning of the title contest. Pitcher Smith then balked in the sixth with a man on third to send the tying run across. In the extra inning Senecal singled and G. Smith drove him home with the winning run and tourney championship with a triple, giving the locals second place. Kewaskum won last year's tournament held here.
