AUG. BILGO SAVES CHILD FROM DROWNING AT LAKE

August Bilgo Sr. of this village, rural mail carrier, proved himself a hero early last Sunday afternoon when he saved a child from probable drowning at Lake Seven. Mr. Bilgo was fishing at the lake. Three children were occupying the pier near where Mr. Bilgo was fishing from shore when one of them fell off the pier into the lake. August heard the splash and then noticed there were only two children left on the pier. When the third youth failed to appear on the surface of the water Mr. Bilgo ran to the pier according to reports, leaped into the lake and pulled the child to safety. We were unable to learn the name of the child having the narrow escape but the rescuer was forced to cease fishing and come home to change his clothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Geidel and son Johnny this week moved from the home owned by Mrs. Emil Backhaus just north of her home on South Fond du Lac avenue into the Geidel home on North Fond du Lac avenue, formerly occupied by the late parents of Mr. Geidel.

TOM ETTA DIES

Mr. and Mrs. John Etta of the town of Kewaskum and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Koerble left early Thursday morning of this week by auto for Loyal, Wis., to attend the funeral of Tom Etta, which took place the same day. Mr. Etta, who was 79 years of age, was a brother of Mrs. Elizabeth Koerble of this village. The Etta family were former residents here.

SCHRAUTH BABY BAPTIZED

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Schrauth of the town of Kewaskum, born Friday, May 16, was baptized last Thursday afternoon at Holy Trinity church by the Rev. Philip J. Vogt. Sponsors were Mrs. Ben Volm and Martin Schrauth. The little lady received the name Marjorie Ann.

ANOTHER HOME GAME SUNDAY

This Sunday, June 1, the team again plays at home, entertaining the Cascade nine which won a surprise 6-0 shutout from the powerful Kohler team last Sunday for its first victory. Before this game Kohler had scored 39 runs in two games. Then A. Ninnemann blanked them on 4 hits. Ninnemann will probably be on the mound against Kewaskum Sunday and the boys may have their hands full. However, they intend to smack the pill better than Kohler did. It'll be a great battle so come and support the team.

Final examinations will be given on June 2, 3, 4 and 5. All children should try to be present at the holy sacrifice of mass every morning to invoke the assistance of the holy school. All should be present at the mass on Friday morning, the close of the school term.

Paralysis Drive in County Nets $810.25

Total receipts of $810.25 were realized in the 1941 campaign to fight infantile paralysis in Washington county, according to a financial statement submitted this week by Michael J. Goring, West Bend, who was general chairman of the campaign in this county. Total expenses were $162.50, leaving net receipts of $647.75.

Of the net sum of $647.75, fifty per cent, or $323.88, was sent to the national foundation to fight infantile paralysis. The other 50 per cent, or $323.87, is retained by the county committee for local humanitarian disposition as demanded and as the committee see fit. This split of the net proceeds is in accordance with an agreement between the national foundation and local committees throughout the nation.

Most of the money in Washington county was raised through the sale of tickets for a gigantic president's birthday party and dance, which was held in the West Bend grade school gymnasium on Jan. 30 as a climax to the fight infantile paralysis drive in this county. Each year President Roosevelt, himself a victim of the disease, has dedicated his birthday anniversary to a nationwide party to raise funds for fighting infantile paralysis. Additional funds in this county were raised by means of coin collectors distributed throughout the county.

Mr. Goring proudly reports that the amount raised in Washington county this year is the largest in the history of local fight infantile paralysis campaigns. He has asked this newspaper to convey his sincere appreciation and thanks to the public of Washington county for so liberally supporting this great humanitarian work, as well as to the members of the committees and to all others who had a hand in making the campaign the outstanding success it proved to be.

Local Men Open Bar-N, Only Wild West Ranch in Wis. at State Park

Situated near the entrance to the Kettle Moraine state park, about seven miles northeast of Kewaskum, the Bar-N-Ranch, only wild west ranch in the state of Wisconsin, recently opened, is attracting many visitors from different parts who enjoy riding horses. Bride paths are being constructed over about 1200 acres of state park among beautiful lakes and streams and through virgin forests.

Two Kewaskum businessmen, Dr. F. E. Nolting and Attorney Lyle W. Bartel, are the owners of the Bar-N and they have engaged Harry Koch to be in charge of the ranch. Harry, formerly employed by A. G. Koch, Inc., took over his duties at the ranch this week. A formal opening of the ranch, which is open to the public, will be held about the middle of June, after it is entirely completed. The Bar-N is open every day and evening.

Other accommodations are also offered at the ranch, such as lunch and soft drinks, camp facilities, rifle, archery and trap shooting ranges. In cooperation with the state park facilities this unusual ranch offers relaxation to vacationists and lovers of outdoor sports. Further information will follow in a later issue.

If They Had Gone 'Musical'—

In the course of giving musical instruction over a period of twenty years, Arthur T. Cremin, director of the New York Schools of Music, has evolved certain basic rules governing the instruments for which people are best fitted, according to their individual personality and background. Here we have eight world leaders as they would appear if they had suddenly gone musical. The pictures are all composites.

People with quiet hobbies, like stamp collecting, are ideally suited for strumming on stringed instruments, such as the mandolin or guitar. The No. 1 stamp collector of U. S. looks pretty natural behind a guitar here.

THAT MAN! Nervous, tense people like Der Fuehrer make ideal piccolo players.

Ambition and the bass viol go together. Here is Henry Ford as he would look with the big fiddle.

NEW NOTE IN "MY WEEK"... Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is the ideal type for the violin. Simple, sincere people, says expert Cremin, should take up this instrument.

Affectionate people like Queen Elizabeth of England should be at home with the accordion, we are told. And Good Queen Bess seems to be.

Statesmen whose main mission in life is telling other people where to head in are ideally suited to be band conductors—always waving the stick. So here is Il Duce directing.

Winston Churchill has played many roles in his exciting life and played them all well. It is reasonable to suppose he would make a good rhumba player.

Skunk in Hero Role

The lowly unpopular skunk has been hailed as the new woodland hero of the land by the American Wildlife institute. Grub worms were harboring on the New York conservation department's Saratoga Nursery, world's largest forest tree production plant. Along came the skunk and found himself overwhelmed with a delicious plenty of the things he holds best in life. And grub worms make a tasty morsel for skunks.

Intellect Based on Chemistry

Scientists have found that the water balance of the brain is intimately bound up with the acid base equilibrium. The epileptic brain is an alkaline brain, it was discovered. Recent experiments at the University of Maryland indicate there is a "chemistry of human intelligence." It was further learned that the diabetic brain is an acid brain and, if not balanced by proper treatment, results in retarded mentation and stupor.

"Well, I'll tell ye, sir, 'ow I make up my mind," replied the man, "I'm a plain man and a reasonin' man, and I ain't influenced by anything the lawyers say, nor by what the judge says. Household Hints

Rinsing hair brushes in a solution of alum water will stiffen up the bristles.

Oven-burned dishes can be cleaned by soaking them in a solution of borax and water.

Granulated honey can be restored to its natural form by placing it in hot water.

To keep fruit from falling to the bottom of a cake try adding the fruit before you have stirred in any flour. Do not dredge it with flour.

To prevent the sides of ice bags and hot water bottles from sticking together in storage, sprinkle a little talcum powder inside them after they are thoroughly dried.

Diner Turned the Tables On Conviving Couple

Upon receiving his bill, the diner added it up and found that he had been overcharged $1.

"How come?" he asked, looking sharply at the waitress.
"Well, you see, sir," she replied, "the cashier bet me half a dollar that you wouldn't see it and I bet him you would. Just a friendly little wager."

With a smile the customer took something on the back of the bill, folded it, and said: "Take this to the cashier."
She did so, and on opening it the two were startled to read: "I bet $5 I shall not be here when you get back."
And he wasn't.

Are Women Better Shoppers than Men?

GRANTING a woman's reputation for wise buying, let's trace the methods by which she has earned it. Where does she find out about the advantages and details of electrical refrigeration? What tells her how to keep the whole household clean—rugs, floors, bathroom tiling—and have energy left over for golf and parties? How does she learn about new and delicious entrees and desserts that surprise and delight her family? Where does she discover those subtleties of dress and make-up that a man appreciates but never understands?

Why, she reads the advertisements. She is a consistent, thoughtful reader of advertisements, because she has found that she can believe them—and profit thereby. Overlooking the advertisement would be depriving herself of data continuously useful in her job of Purchasing Agent to the Family.

For that matter, watch a wise man buy a car or a suit or an insurance policy. Not a bad shopper himself! He reads advertisements, too.

A PICNICKING WE WILL GO... (See Recipes Below)

IT'S PICNIC TIME!

The soft, sunny days of late May and early June tempt even the most conscientious to turn their backs on work and, since "the only way to get out of a temptation is to yield to it," a picnic is the answer!

The reason for the nationwide popularity of picnics is that they're easy on the lady of the house... sliced tomatoes and green onions for salad... corn-on-the-cob... a vegetable "roasting ears" may be cooked in the water...

...allowing 20 minutes to a half hour for the best flavor... milk or coffee, or all three... and dessert—it's as simple as that!

...to wash afterward... for the laundry bag... in fact, it's almost a case of "work and all play!"

...that "something hot" which is "must." I suggest picking up some hamburger... probably won't look like above picture, but they'll no doubt taste the same.

...to wash afterward... for the laundry bag... in fact, it's almost a case of "work and all play!"

Torn Painting

QUESTION: An oil painting has a tear about an inch and a half long. What do you advise on repairing it? Can I do it myself, and thus avoid the expense of professional restoration?

Answer: The method is to cement a piece of canvas on the back. But before doing this, the fuzzy edges of the tear must be clipped off or pushed through to the back with a needle or other instrument. With the fuzz disposed of, the edges are brought together as neatly as possible, and secured by the patch on the back. The painting is then touched up with the necessary colors. On a painting of any value, however, the job should be done by a professional; if without experience, the result is likely to be a blotch.

Repairing a House QUESTION: Eight years ago I had my house painted. Wooden shingles all around. The mixture was composed of white lead, linseed oil, turpentine and color in oil, also dryers. I expect to have it painted again. The painter wants to use oil, turpentine, color, dryers and very little white lead. What would you suggest?

Answer: Paint for exterior use should contain a large portion of a metallic pigment, to give it body. Paint containing a large proportion of color will have no substance, and the paint film will be weak. Exterior paint should have a large percentage of white lead.

Condensation on Floor QUESTION: The floor of a dining-room is about four feet below the ground level; the floor is laid over concrete. The problem is that on humid days in warm weather the base of the walls and floor are wet with condensation. Advice is asked on the possibility of preventing the condensation.

Answer: A wood floor stuck down over a damp-proofed floor should prevent condensation. Mop the floor with a liquid tar or asphalt; then put down a layer of heavy asphalt saturated felt, overlapping the sheets half their width, and cementing the overlaps with liquid tar or asphalt. The wood floor is then stuck down with an asphalt mastic cement. Reliable flooring contractors are familiar with this method of laying wood floors.

Gurgling Water Pipes QUESTION: In our four-year-old bungalow we installed a washtand in the upstairs closet. The pipes are in line with the kitchen sink. Every time water is used upstairs or down there is a horrible gurgling sound that can be heard all over the house. Plumbers have not been able to correct it. Can you give me a remedy?

Answer: If you get the gurgling while water is draining out of a fixture, it is because air in the pipe ahead of the water can escape only by bubbling up. This could be prevented by putting in a vent-pipe to give the air another way to escape. If the noise occurs when a faucet is being opened, it is because the faucet washer is loose or worn.

Care of Venetian Blinds A reader sends in the following suggestion: "The original finish of Venetian blinds can be preserved by an application of paste wax rubbed on and then polished. This preserves the finish against stains from rain in the summer and provides a smoother surface, which can be dusted more easily."

Exercise That Is of Benefit To Weak Heart

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

YEARS ago what was known as the Nauheim Bath and Schott System of Exercise was the treatment for a weak muscular heart. The patient raised his arm, leg, hand or foot against the resistance of the hand or hands of the physician or nurse who could thus regulate the amount of work or exercise the patient was allowed to do.

During the last few years there has been a tendency among physicians, including heart specialists, to give these patients with a weak muscular heart, no exercise whatever, believing that as men and women grow older it is rest the heart needs, not more work.

That the heart needs rest after illness of any kind and needs four to six weeks absolute bed rest after a heart attack is admitted. That a weak heart should not be given any exercise is considered unwise by many physicians who point out that certain kinds of exercise can "aid" the heart without causing too much heart activity. It might be well, therefore, to recall the suggestions of Dr. Josef B. Nylin, Philadelphia, in Medical Record, who points out the exercises that aid the heart.

1. Massage, which presses the blood out of the veins and causes the little blood vessels carrying blood from veins to arteries to open more widely and let more blood move to and from the part being massaged.

2. Passive movements (where the nurse moves the arms and legs and thus exercises the muscles), which cause the heart to send more blood to the parts. This "sucks" the blood from the part exercised and sends it back to the heart.

3. Breathing exercises which increase the flow of used blood on the right side of heart to the left side, from whence it goes to lungs to be purified and to all parts of the body.

Now there is a great difference between the amount of work the heart must do when the patient takes exercise such as walking or games, and the amount done when the muscles are massaged or given "passive" movements, and the simple breathing exercises. But the heart does get exercise by these methods.

How Allergy Affects Stuttering I WAS a member of a group of students whose object was the acquiring of scholarships and medals in competition with groups from other schools. We remained for an hour every afternoon after school.

When the results were announced a member of our group stood first in the entire city yet she had never answered a question in class nor had she ever been asked to read. This was because she stammered.

We were all proud of her and yet she had something wrong with her tongue or her throat and would never be able to talk.

It is now known that stammering is not due to any defect of the tongue or throat but to due to nervousness or self-consciousness.

Drs. A. M. Kennedy and D. A. Williams, Cardiff, Wales, state that this tendency to nervousness and self-consciousness appears to be a factor in allergy also. These physicians investigated 100 stuttering children. In all cases except one, positive evidence of allergy was found in the personal or family history.

In a group of 1,000 school children who did not stutter, only about 2 per cent had a personal history of stuttering and a family history of only 9 per cent.

The thought is that in some individuals a portion of the nervous system can be so influenced that the blood vessel walls can be distended and allow swelling containing water to form and cause allergic symptoms—hives, head colds, hay fever. The blood vessel system, because it is under the control of the nervous system, may be influenced by fear, anxiety, anger and other emotions.

Look Before You Buy

By ELIZABETH MACRAE BOYKIN When you buy sheets and towels that do you look for? Selvages should be wide and strong to hold threads securely—the best type is the type selvage which has extra threads woven in to reinforce it. Sheets that are too small get extra strain in wear and cause needless wear on mattress and blankets. A double bed should have a sheet 81 inches wide; a three-quarter bed needs a sheet 72 inches wide; a single bed requires a 63-inch wide sheet. All should be 108 inches in length.

Both towels with too many loose pile yarns in proportion to the tight weaving will look stringy and unravel after a few washings, no matter how fluffy they seemed when you bought them. Watch to get firm pile yarns if you want towels that are strong and durable. The best weaving towels are woven with double top pile yarns. Still another "trick" in cheap towels is a too-close weave of crosswise yarns, resulting in frizzled pile after short use. Be sure, too, that the towels you buy have good selvages that won't fray before their time. (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

Good Wall Finish A good wall finish to use in an attic that is being made over into a bedroom is the use of a fiberboard insulating material for this purpose. It will make the room more comfortable as it will be insulated against heat and cold, and it will also make an attractive finish as it can be used in its natural color and is available in pastel shades that will form harmonious backgrounds for any type of interior decoration. It can be used on walls and ceilings.

JUNE—NATIONAL DAIRY MONTH
 June has been designated as national dairy month. As such an appeal is being made to farmers and to consumers. The appeal to farmers is centered around better quality production. The appeal to consumers is based on a possible increased consumption of dairy products in its various forms.
 It was recommended that committees be organized in every county for promoting local activities to increase the local consumption of dairy products. How about taking it into our own initiative to drink more milk, or eat more butter or cheese?

PRIZES FOR BEST ESSAY IN DAIRY CONTEST
 Five prize bull calves representing the five dairy breeds will be presented on dairy day at the Wisconsin state fair, Aug. 22, to the Wisconsin youths who write the best essays in a statewide purebred cattle essay contest, the state department of agriculture has announced.
 The contest is open to all boys and girls in the state ranging from 13 to 20 years of age. Each contestant will write on the merits of his favorite dairy breed, limiting his essay to 1,000 words or less.
 A bull calf fit for a future herd sire will be donated by each of the five dairy breed associations in this state for the first place award. Each calf will be from a dam producing not less than 100 pounds of butterfat. The associations will also contribute valuable articles or commodities as second and third prizes.

WHEAT MARKETING QUOTA REFERENDUM
 Declaring that wise and economical management of the nation's wheat supplies, an important defense measure, the secretary of agriculture has proclaimed a marketing quota for wheat and has announced Saturday, May 31, as the date of the referendum.
 Eligibility to Vote—To vote in the wheat referendum a wheat grower must meet the following requirements:
 (1) Be engaged in the production of wheat for harvest in 1941 on a farm on which the normal production of the acreage planted to wheat is 200 bushels or more. Both landlord and renter are eligible to vote. All voting must be done in the central office which in Washington county will be the agricultural conservation office in West Bend. The polls will be open from 9:00 a. m. to 5:00 p. m., Saturday, May 31.
 Marketing quotas for the basic farm crops including wheat are provided by the Agricultural Conservation program. These quotas enable farmers to safely store their surplus for future use as needed. According to the U. S. Crop Reporting Service this nation will have enough wheat on hand after harvest this year to supply the nation's expected needs for nearly two years.

HOLSTEIN BREEDERS BLACK & WHITE SHOW, PICNIC JUNE 21st
 Plans for the Tri County Black & White show and picnic are rapidly progressing. The show is a joint project of Milwaukee, Ozaukee and Washington counties. Each county will show a total of 16 animals. All animals to be shown have already been selected. They are grouped in one of the following four classes: Heifers under 2 years and not milking, sires under 2 years, young cows over 2 years and under 4 years of age, and aged cows. In selecting the animals for the show only one will be included from a given herd. By limiting purebred breeders to only one animal, more of them will have a chance to participate in the show. Plans are to have one or more nationally known speakers present which along with the ranking of the livestock and local judging contests should provide a full day's entertainment. Ribbons only will be awarded livestock exhibitors.

 Guido Schroeder of West Bend has been selected as manager of the show. Walter Ahlers of Grafton and E. C. Thompson of Wauwatosa will assist with the management in Ozaukee and Milwaukee counties respectively.
 Arthur East of Rockfield will have charge of the 4-H club judging contests and, R. C. Swanson, county agricultural agent of Milwaukee county, will supervise the breeders judging contests. E. E. Skallskey, Washington county agricultural agent, has charge of publicity.
 Junior farmers, 4-H club boys, and high school agricultural students are urged to be present and participate in the livestock judging contests. Suitable prizes for the best judges in these contests will be awarded.

MANY INSECT PROBLEMS THIS SPRING
 Many calls are coming to the county agricultural agent's office concerning insect problems. Because of the continued warm weather during May there have been more than the usual number of insect problems arising. Below are brief suggestions and control methods of insects causing damage to garden plants and trees.
 (1) Plant aphids or plant lice—These are sucking insects and are best destroyed by dissolving one (1) small table spoonful of nicotine sulphate (black leaf 40) in a gallon of water. Apply as a very fine spray. Be sure and spray the underside of the leaf as that is where the plant aphids live.
 (2) Strawberries—Many strawberry fields are affected with small insects known as leaf rollers. This insect tends to curl up the leaf of the plant. It infests. Dust with a rotonone or a pyrethrum compound. In no case should a poison like lead arsenate be used on any berry plant after the fruit has formed. Rotonone is poisonous to insects but not to humans.
 (3) Cankerworm—The cankerworm or several other similar kinds of worms are causing much damage to shade, forest and fruit trees. These insects are what are known as biting insects and can easily be controlled by applying a spray containing lead arsenate. Dissolve one pound of lead arsenate in 20 gallons of water and spray as a fine mist.

GRASS SILAGE AND SILOS
 Alfalfa silage and other grass silages were widely used in Wisconsin last year and, from the amount of interest expressed this past winter, an even wider use is expected during this coming season. New machinery and new methods promise to aid this growth in use.
 Grass silages, especially when made from a succulent crop with the addition of molasses, are quite high in moisture content and exert considerably higher pressures against silo walls than does ordinary corn silage. In extreme cases, the pressure may be almost twice as much as would be expected from corn. Therefore, some attention must be paid to the silo and its condition. Very little trouble has been experienced where it is well reinforced with steel bars, not too tall and with a successful record of holding corn silage. On the other hand, in extremely tall silos or where there is no record of reinforcing and no way of checking such as the solid-wall rock, concrete, tile, etc., the silo should be closely watched and in many cases extra reinforcing should be placed around it for a part of its height. This is especially the case where the silo is to be filled entirely to the top with one run of grass silage.
 Salesmen for the various types of silos can help to figure the necessary reinforcing or information can be secured from the College of Agriculture. In some areas, a considerable number of silos are cracked. Nearly always this condition is due to insufficient reinforcing. Any cracked silo, regardless of the kind of silage to be filled, should be repaired. The common method is to place a new or second hand steel hoops around the wall from the ground to several feet above the crack or to the top of the silo. These bars will commonly be spaced to fall over each door bar for half to two-thirds the height of the silo and then every second space to the top if it is necessary to go that high.
 Many new silos will be built this year. If grass silage is being considered it would be well to have the reinforcing figured on this basis. In the solid concrete silos, it is important that steel bars or steel mesh reinforcing be used as twisted wire cable has given trouble in a good many instances.
 In cases where silos have been successfully holding corn silage but there is doubt as to the adequacy of the reinforcing, it is possible to use the silo without any changes. To do this, fill only half full at one time with the grass silage and give this at least two weeks to consolidate before additional silage of any type is placed in the top half.

TRIPLE SUPERPHOSPHATE MAY BE APPLIED TO PEA FIELDS
 In the interests of the national defense program, it was determined that larger supplies of the canned vegetables were necessary. To encourage the necessary increased production of these vegetables for canning, the classification of canning peas, snap beans, tomatoes and sweet corn was changed to non-depleting. A strict interpretation of the provisions of the farm program indicates that soil-building credit may be permitted for the application of fertilizer to new seedlings where one of these vegetables for processing is used as a nurse crop. Since peas is the only one of these vegetables which is used as a NURSE CROP for new seedlings, the application of triple superphosphate to tomatoes, sweet corn and snap beans would NOT be permissible under any circumstances. However, peas for

UNCLE SAM WANTS ACREAGE OF DRY EDIBLE BEANS INCREASED
 The United States government is asking for a 35% increase in the acreage of dry edible beans. To insure producers a good market the government will establish minimum price levels. These levels have temporarily been established at $5.00 per cwt. and will be in effect until May 1, 1942. To further encourage growers who increase their white bean acreage no deductions will be made from their AAA payments because of their over planting of depleting acreage.

NEW CHEMICAL DESTROYS WILD MUSTARD
 The agronomy department at the University of Wisconsin recently announced that wild mustard can be successfully destroyed by spraying with a commercial preparation named Sinox. It is said that fields sprayed with Sinox show no injurious effects on the small grains, but a high percentage of the mustard was destroyed.

 The best time of application is when the wild mustard plant has from 2 to 6 leaves. At this time the small grain is usually from 4 to 6 inches tall. Use one gallon of sinox, which can be purchased from chemical companies, and dilute with 100 gallons of water. Apply with a power sprayer, such as a potato or orchard sprayer, at a rate of about 100 gallons per acre.
 It is recommended that fields with a legume be treated with Sinox as the chemical is somewhat injurious to the legume seedling.

SWEET CORN, CANNING PEAS NOT DEPLETING CROPS IN 1941
 The Washington County AAA office has received word that acres planted to sweet corn, canning peas, tomatoes and snap beans will be classified this year as conserving crops and NOT as depleting crops as they formerly have been.

Also farmers may sign up any time in the near future for participation in the farm program. May 1st formerly was set as the dead line for signing up for participation, however that has been extended indefinitely. To participate in the farm program a farmer must sign an agreement with his local committeeman. To avoid unnecessary delay farmers are urged to sign their intention sheet as soon as possible.
 This new ruling will permit many farmers to qualify for maximum or at least partial participation in the agricultural conservation program. The farmers should contact their community committeemen and sign their intention sheets as soon as possible. The change in classification of canning peas and sweet corn will permit many farmers to qualify fully or in part, at least, with the provisions of the farm program.

German Air Blitz on Island of Crete Results in 'Defense to Death' Fighting; U. S. Attitude Toward France Changes As Vichy-Berlin Strengthen Relations

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK.—One of the U. S. navy's new torpedo boats (foreground) and a coast guard cutter are shown cutting through the water of the Hudson river during recent maneuvers.

CRETE:

An Air Test

The big island of Crete, which Prime Minister Churchill said would be defended "to the death" by an army composed of General Freyberg and New Zealand, British and Greek troops under his command suddenly became the center of the war when a dramatic and unexpected invasion of the island was made by air-borne Nazi troops.

There were some early reports that the Germans were coming along in normal transports, but there was little doubt that the air test was pre-emptive, and that the world was witnessing the first large-scale such endeavor since the days of the invasion of Norway, and of the Low Countries, particularly Holland.

British reports that the first 1,500 soldiers who landed in Crete were wearing the New Zealand uniform, and coldly announced that "they could expect to be shot." All of them, it was quickly reported, were either killed or rounded up rapidly.

Germany promptly retorted that if any of the parachutists were treated as spies and shot, Germany would reply "ten to one" in kind. But the British and Greeks didn't have long to wait or long to contemplate what to do with the first 1,500.

By the second morning of the invasion the British radio was reporting that the Nazi invasion force was 7,000, and on the second afternoon hiked this figure to 11,500. This brought the German force to at least one full division, and a good way into the second division. And the British quickly estimated that this figure meant that the Germans had from 2,000 to 3,000 airplanes on duty in southern Greece.

The usual silence and mystery as to what actually was transpiring immediately was clamped down by the British ministry of information, which contented itself with issuing such generalities as "the situation is in hand," leaving it up to the Germans to give the world what information could be gleaned.

The German claims, as usual, were broad, the Nazis asserting that many important points had been captured, and that many British planes had been destroyed "on the ground."

British sources seemed willing to admit that the Germans had utter mastery of the air, but General Freyberg said that every hilltop had its sentinel in Crete, that an elaborate method of signaling had been worked out, and that even those parachutists who arrived at night were promptly spotted, reported and given action from the ground forces.

Neutral observers, however, pointed out that in order to effect large-scale landing of troops who were not parachutists, the Germans must have obtained at least temporary control of landing fields, or must be using emergency fields.

British reports told of many transport planes shot down with their cargoes of men, both on the island and into the waters surrounding it. However, they also told of huge, unwieldy transport planes towing numbers of gliders loaded with men and munitions, a mode of transportation not reported in wide-scale use before.

How large the force on Crete was remained a military secret of the Greeks and the British, though there was considerable figuring done by those who had followed the course of the invasion of Greece. The British claimed that most of its army in Greece had been taken back to Egypt, there to rejoin the army of the Nile, and to be rearmed from new supplies, part of which had come from the United States.

While it was known that some forces got into Crete, and that the Greeks salvaged considerable portions of one of its armies, the quantity was largely a matter of guesswork.

Most of the troops who got back to Egypt were Australians and British, hence most observers believed there was probably about one division of New Zealanders in Crete, and possibly the same number of British, and perhaps two or three times that number of Greeks.

British dispatches admitted practically complete control of the air by the Germans over Crete, and hence it was considered still more likely that the Germans, who had no particular need of Crete, might be trying the attack to test out in actual warfare what the parachutists could do when well-supported from aloft.

VICHY: A Turning Point The flop of Vichy strongly into the Nazi encampment proved likely to prove a turning-point as to America's entry into the war. For one thing, it flopped one popular poll on convoys from a minority to a majority, and the administration in Washington, which had been accused in some quarters of watching these polls before acting, promptly announced that the convoy question has practically been settled.

President Roosevelt, it was said, does not like the word convoys, and is more in favor of the navy taking over portions of the Atlantic and Pacific, even as far as the Red Sea, for instance, and helping to create protective lanes through which aid-Britain ships could move safely.

This is the method American shipping experts have liked from the start, but it was significant that America's course was charted along these lines the day after the polls reported 52 per cent in favor of convoying and 41 per cent opposed, and the other 7 per cent "undecided."

Public attention then turned to Vichy, and Secretary Hull warned France that she would have to give this country a plain and honest statement of just what her collaboration with Germany would consist of before France could hope to restore Franco-American relations to a state of amity.

This attitude was indeed a far cry from the days of 1917 and 1918, and the time when the first doughboys landed in France with "Lafayette, we're here" as their slogan.

Hull's strong declaration came at the same time when it was announced that a British flotilla was hovering about the ports of Martinique where the French aircraft carrier Bearn and other vessels were bottled up. There was some disquiet over the report that these ships had been out at sea, but the British reported they were "simply on maneuvers."

But if they were poised for an attempt to run the British blockade, it was likely that there would be either fighting or scuttling or both in the South Atlantic, well within our "sphere of influence."

Mr. Hull's message to Vichy showed plainly that the state department has utterly lost faith in verbal pledges transmitted by the French envoy to this country, Gaston Henry-Haye.

The report that Ambassador Leahy would be recalled gained in stature, and writers on the continent or recently returned from there believed that possibly this action, which could not fail to get across to the body of the French people, might sway them to take a firmer stand toward Germany.

Big Job

This is General B. C. Freyberg, a New Zealander, who was in charge of the Greek-British defense of the island of Crete when the Nazi forces first loosed their air blitz against that stronghold. When the British were forced to withdraw their air force his duty became a gigantic task.

PLANES:

And Months

Statistical proof that thousands of planes, like Rome, can't be built in a day was given by Admiral Towers, who reported to Secretary of Navy Knox that in the past 10 months the navy has gained 1,304 planes of all types.

The navy now has 3,476 planes of all types, including trainers, and this compared with the British estimate that Germany was operating about 2,000 to 3,000 planes in the Battle of Crete alone, not counting those in use in other theaters of the war.

It also was significant that Admiral Towers' report to Mr. Knox was that the navy already is experiencing a shortage of pilots, which compared with Germany's reported 100,000 pilots trained before the war started. In fact, it was this pilot training program which first called the attention of the world to Germany's rebirth as a military power in spite of the restrictive efforts of the Treaty of Versailles.

Of the 1,304 planes which the navy has added to her forces, only about 600 of them are combat types, Admiral Towers revealed.

The goal of 50,000 fighting planes for the American army and navy combined was, therefore, envisioned as far in the future, Admiral Towers revealing that not until January, 1942, will the existing shortage of pilots be relieved. Not until then will the number of pilots begin to catch up with the number of planes.

DRAFT: A New Plan Pennsylvania called out in excess of 18,000 young men in the draft, trying out what was called a "new plan" aimed to "give the selectee a break."

The plan was this. The 18,000 were to be called out, and immediately given a searching examination along all lines, including their final medical examination by the army doctors.

Then they were to be returned to their homes and jobs, those who were eligible to army life being placed on call in from 10 to 30 days, and the rest of them to return to their normal jobs, secure in the knowledge that they would not be called.

This was aimed to remove much of the uncertainty which grew out of the previous method of selective service picking. Dr. William Mather Lewis, selective service director of Pennsylvania, said he was advised that if the experiment proved a success there, it would be applied to the entire nation.

At the same time President Roosevelt put into being the OCD, or Office of Civilian Defense, with Mayor Fiorella LaGuardia of New York its head, working without salary, as will all of his intermediaries.

Also plans for the home guard were worked out at Washington, this group to function entirely separately from the OCD, which would ostensibly have a membership of millions of American men, women and even children.

One of the tests of the United States against possible war was an entirely complete blackout of the Hawaiian islands, where even the isolated hamlets were darkened, and planes of the American army and navy flew overhead to inspect the situation and to see how complete it was.

LABOR: The general handling of the strike situation rapidly by the Defense Mediation board continued, though widely criticized in certain quarters as being achieved at a price which eventually would make this nation a prey to inflation and rapidly soaring prices.

Hess Known for Loyalty To Hitler, Nazi Germany

Was to Succeed Goering as Nation's Leader; Washington Legislators Closely Study Letters From Constituents.

By BAUKHAGE National Farm and Home Commentator.

(WNU Service, 1343 H Street, Washington, D. C.) WASHINGTON.—It's a mad world these days and Washington is a nervous corner of it.

Outside the iron pickets which surround the White House, human pickets walked. Their banners protested against convoys, against sending American soldiers abroad to fight.

Soldiers who may be sent abroad to fight charged the protesting pickets, knocked down the men, pushed the women around. Home-returning theater-goers stopped to cheer the soldiers.

On Capitol Hill mail protesting against convoys poured in. That afternoon Washington was stunned to hear that a young farmer in Scotland helped a German officer who had just dropped from the skies, into his cottage and gave him a glass of water. The officer was Hitler's trusted lieutenant, Rudolf Hess, and the news of his sensational flight dropped into the midst of the Washington melee, to make confusion worse confounded.

The fighting pickets, Hess in the headlines, pushed history back for me. Pickets were attacked in front of the White House at the beginning of World War I. I saw Hitler lay the accolade of succession to Nazi leadership upon Hess the day World War II began.

Some of the fighting pickets of 1914 are staid grandmothers today. HESS PARTY LEADER If you had asked me, in 1939 when I was broadcasting from Berlin, who of all men in the Nazi party would be the least likely to desert its leader I would have said Hess. He was not a striking figure, he did not parade in the brilliant uniforms of Herr Goering, he did not make the fiery speeches of Herr Goebbels. But he was the real head of the party, the inside man. And so when he suddenly turned up in Britain, I could not believe that he was there except to be about his leader's business.

I can see Hess that day in Berlin. It was a solemn sight, the hurriedly called meeting of the Reichstag in September, 1939. There may have been many in Germany then who still hoped that Britain and France would not fight for Poland. Hitler had promised he would gain his ends without shedding German blood. The bitter memory of the last war, the starvation, the defeat, the humiliation were still sharp in the memories of the people. Then they had had no victories to cheer them.

Hitler himself was pale and worn when he walked into the Kroll Opera house where the Reichstag meets. His speech was restrained, he seemed to me like a man who had made his will and said his prayers. He spoke almost apologetically, said his greatest desire was to be the Reich's first soldier. Then he announced that he was going to the front, "and," he added, "if anything happens to me in battle, Party-comrade Goering will be my successor." Goering, in a gaudy uniform, on his high pedestal, saluted. The crowd cheered.

Then Hitler turned to the right, where the tall, lanky Hess was seated on the stage in his simple brown uniform. "And if anything happens to Comrade Goering, Comrade Hess will be his successor." The crowd cheered. Hess rose deliberately, looked at his chief and saluted.

I could think only of a great, well-trained and faithful St. Bernard slowly and obediently answering his master's whistle. It is hard to believe that this man would desert his master. Hess was fervent. He may not have been as religious as his frequent calls upon the Almighty may have indicated, but he had a fanatical devotion to Germany. His loyalty to Hitler from the earliest contact with the Fuehrer-to-be was based on a great faith on a belief that Hitler, and Hitler alone, would save Germany.

Legislators Study Letters From Voters The senator I wanted to see was busy and I was waiting in his outer office talking to his secretary who was an old acquaintance of mine. He had a sheaf of letters in his hand. In spite of the rules for keeping the windows closed in order not to disturb the air-cooling system in the senate office building, the window was open. A breeze caught one of the letters. It dropped on the floor and I picked it up. "I don't want to lose that," the secretary said, "it's important. Read it."

It was an emphatic protest on the subject of a measure before congress, written in a firm hand, in good, straightforward English. "Notice the paper," said my friend, "see that hole in the corner. There was a string through that. The pad was fastened to the telephone. And it was written with the pencil tied to another string. I happen to know the man who wrote it. He runs a flour and feed store, but I'd know just about the type of writer it was from the paper."

"Why," I asked him, "is it that important?" "It's important because the people who write on that kind of paper, with a pencil, are important people to us. They elect us."

(This secretary always said "us" because he had been in politics with the senator for 10 years, ever since his chief was a member of the state legislature.) For the past few weeks letters like that—and other ones, too, which I'll speak of in a minute—have been flooding the post office in the Capitol building. They have concerned the question of convoys. And they have had a lot to do with how congress votes.

LETTERS SPUR DEBATE When the letters stop, the debate stops. That's an axiom. And on an important question the number of letters grows each day until it reaches a peak. Then suddenly the number drops. The drive is over. It's time to vote and settle the issue. There are several kinds of letters which come in to congress, to commentators and writers. There are the "nut" letters which are easy to identify. They don't count. There are the form letters, or letters which, though sometimes they are individually written, all have the same phrasing. They are organized propaganda, easy to identify and to assay. Then there are the letters on expensive stationery. Usually their writers are known. They are in the minority. Then there are the letters I spoke about first. Not always in pencil or on scratch paper. But simple and spontaneously written. They count. But here is another interesting point. Just because there are more letters on one side of a question than there are on the other doesn't mean that the apparent majority is an evidence of the real attitude of the community. More people who are against a measure will take pen in hand than those who are for it. One senator, in a community where we all knew the sentiment for a particular reason was very much pro-convoys, told me his letters were running three to one anti. "They would have to run ten to one against a measure before it would mean that the majority of my constituency were against it," he told me.

PROPHET IN WASHINGTON A prophet has come to Washington—but he will not prophesy! He is John Maynard Keynes, tall, slim, precise. He was a member of the British delegation to the Paris Peace conference of 1919. With the ink hardly dry on the Versailles treaty he wrote that "... the Carthaginian peace (a peace of force) is not practically right or possible ... The clock cannot be set back ... without setting up such strains in the European structure and letting loose such human and spiritual forces as ... will overwhelm not only your 'guarantees' but your institutions, and the existing order of your society."

I asked Mr. Keynes, who is here in Washington as a British treasury official to consult on the lend-lease law, if he thought it was necessary to prepare for a new kind of peace. "Yes," he answered, "but I am much more concerned now with fighting the war."

Mr. Keynes believes that we must raise money for defense by a type of forced borrowing, a method by which a part of all salaries are deducted and turned over to the government. After the war, these forced savings, according to Keynes, would help tide over the period when defense production drops off and thus help to avoid a depression like the one that followed the last war.

Favored Breeds of Geese

It is not generally realized that all of the breeds of geese now raised in this country are descendants of the wild gray goose, having been domesticated many centuries ago. Six breeds are now recognized as standard in this country: namely, Toulouse, African, Chinese, Embden (sometimes spelled Emden), Canada or wild, and Egyptian, the most popular being Toulouse, Embden, African and Chinese.

CARE OF GEESSE

Geese are very hardy and are seldom affected by insect pests or by any disease. They can be raised at a profit, in small numbers, on any farm where there is running water and an abundance of good pasture. Grass constitutes the bulk of the food of the average goose and it does not pay, as a rule, to try to raise these fowls unless good grass range is available. Moist pasture land makes the best goose grazing, and, since geese are the closest grazers known, care must be taken not to overstock the land. To prevent over-grazing, with consequent damage to the grass, it is well to use two or more fields in rotation. A natural pond, or an artificial one, where the geese can swim is valuable at any time and is considered essential during the breeding season.

MARKET FOR GEESSE

In spite of the fact that in some sections of the United States, notably Minnesota, Iowa, the Dakotas, Missouri, Illinois and Wisconsin, geese are raised extensively and profitably, it should be noted that the market for geese is not so widespread as that for chickens. The demand and the price paid for geese is best in sections where fattening is conducted on a large scale. In Wisconsin, for instance, a special trade for specially fattened geese has been built up with New York city and other large eastern cities. Nevertheless, the price paid for geese is notably less than that obtained for other kinds of poultry.

HOUSING AND MATING

One notable and attractive feature about geese is that, when mature, they seldom require housing. Their necessities seem to be protection from snow in winter, and shade, for protection from the sun, in summer. In the North, geese raisers usually provide merely a shed, open on the south side. In sections where winters are unusually severe, poultry houses or barns are provided. Coops, barrels, or other dry shelters must be provided for the goslings, the geese houses must be kept clean, and it is necessary to provide plenty of clean straw for the floors in the winter months.

Geese should be selected for size, prolificacy, and vigor, when the mating season comes on, and it should be noted that the medium-sized birds are the best breeders. Since the birds should be mated several months prior to the breeding season, breeding stock should be bought in the fall. Geese have a genuine tendency toward monogamy and matings are not changed from year to year unless, as sometimes happens, a gander fails to mate with a certain goose. If geese that have been once mated are separated it is necessary to place them so far apart that they can not hear each other's voices.

VARIOUS BREEDS

The Toulouse goose is the largest and most popular of the standard breeds. It is a fair layer, grows rapidly and makes a good market bird. The Embden is pure white, slightly smaller than the Toulouse, more active, and tighter-feathered. It is somewhat less prolific than the Toulouse. The African goose may be recognized by the knob on its head. It is of the same size as the Embden, a handsome bird and a good layer. The Chinese goose is smaller than the other standard breeds and of a swanlike appearance. It is an excellent layer and a rapid grower, but is shy and somewhat difficult to handle. The Egyptian is small, brightly colored, long-legged, and adapted only for ornamental purposes. The Canada goose is very wild and can be kept in captivity only by close confinement. The gander is frequently crossed with the Toulouse, African and Embden breeds, producing a goose which, though a mongrel, is highly prized as a market goose. It grows rapidly, has a fine quality of flesh, looks like the wild goose, but is generally much easier to handle.

TRANSPLANTING LARGE TREES

In spite of the apparent difficulties in the way of transplanting full-grown trees, special equipment has been developed whereby trees may be moved which have attained a height of 40 feet or more, together with root-protecting balls of earth weighing many tons.

FAMILY MILK FROM GOATS

A goat will supply sufficient milk for the average family and can be kept where it would be impossible to keep a cow.

CHICORY

Chicory is a common perennial plant, growing along fences and in waste places. Fields are often blue with its showy flower heads. It is cultivated as a salad plant, and its root is often roasted and used as an adulterant in coffee.

PLANTS FOR SCREENS

Among the most useful annual plants for screening unsightly places are castor-beans, cosmos, sorghums, sunflowers, feretia, milo and broom corn. All are easily grown.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

The mosquito almost became a fifth columnist the other day—it might have caused a big fire in a defense plant. One hundred barrels of water had been placed around the plant to guard against fire—and then in order to remove the mosquito menace, five gallons of oil were poured on the water in each barrel.—FBI.

American Red Cross aid to Great Britain approached $16,000,000 at the end of April.—Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis.

American soldiers no longer have to salute their officers except when on the military reservations or elsewhere on duty.

Department of agriculture entomologists are obtaining good results by spreading poison grasshopper bait from airplanes.—Department of Agriculture.

A labor shortage in defense industries is now threatened, according to some authorities. But if present trends continue, John Studebaker, commissioner of education, predicts that 1,000,000 persons will have been trained for defense occupations by June 30, 1941. Up to January 1 of this year, 325,000 have been trained or were in training.

The chief causes for Army rejection in wartime are: hay fever, flat feet, bunions, ingrown toenails, bad teeth, enlarged tonsils, rupture, chronic appendicitis, heart disease, high blood pressure, defective vision, overweight, underweight, extremes of height, stuttering and sleep-walking. And now there's a new one—because you don't know reading, writing and 'rithmetic.

Legislative News Letter

—By—
Assemblyman
Jos. A. Schmitz
Washington County

(Week of May 30)

PUBLIC HUNTING GROUNDS

The assembly engrossed but refused to give final approval to the hunting grounds bill, which would raise hunt- ing licenses from $1.00 to $2.00, with the additional dollar going to the con- servation commission to acquire and maintain public hunting and fishing grounds.

The individuals backing the bill used the argument that in a few years the ordinary citizen will have no place to hunt unless the state takes some ac- tion. The author of the bill said that all the wealthy people are buying or leasing the best hunting and fishing grounds and are posting it, leaving the ordinary hunter without a place to hunt or fish. The hope of the sports- men is to establish state preserves that the sportsmen themselves will pay for.

POTATO GRADING

A bill repealing the state potato grad- ing law was passed without dissent by the assembly and sent to the senate. The repeal measure will permit the state department of agriculture to re- vert back to the potato grading act of 1921 which has been more successful than the 1939 act.

SELECTIVE SERVICE

Men of draft age may be interested in knowing that a recent order of the state selective service board provides that if any registrant is engaged in "necessary" work, such as the produc- tion of materials essential to defense work, and who was previously deferred, may be further deferred if his employ- er provides proof to the local board that conditions warranting his deferment still exist.

This was done because the need for defense material is now really greater than the need for personnel.

DECEPTIVE ADVERTISING

A bill which became law last week provides that persons who sell mer- chandise, program advertising or tick- ets of admission for any charitable purpose, organization, or fund, will have to include in their advertising, and on their tickets the percentage or amount to be donated to such charity or organization.

This law was aimed at promoters who go from city to city selling mer- chandise and tickets, the proceeds of which they claim are to be used for charitable purposes, when in reality only a very small amount or none of the money collected ever actually reaches the charitable purpose for which it was intended.

INCOME TAX RECORDS

After a long and bitter fight, the bill to prohibit public examination and publication of income tax returns was finally killed.

Killed also was a bill to reduce au- tomobile license fees so that automobiles weighing less than 3400 pounds would pay only a $5.00 fee, all over that $10.00.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

A special committee was appointed to study all old age pension bills in- troduced so far in both houses, and to draft a compromise measure to take care of the many conflicting proposals.

Today Wisconsin ranks second high- est in its payments to the aged. Just what this legislature will do about old age pension no one can predict.

There is, however, a definite trend in the philosophy of our legislators to increase old age pensions.

VISITORS FROM HOME

Paul Bartelt of Jackson and Ambros Wiedmeyer of Richfield were in Mad- ison in the interest of the fluid milk producers of the Milwaukee milk shed Mr. Bartelt appeared before the com- mittee which heard the bill.

Principal Anton Stal of the Barton graded school brought the mem- bers of his eighth grade class to Mad- ison last week.

Mrs. Stal and her two children ac- companied him, and together this group attended sessions of the assem- bly and senate and then went on a guided tour through the capitol. After this they visited points of interest in the capitol city.

(Week of May 19)

CONSERVATION SQUABBLE

The conservation controversy which has occupied the attention of the leg- islature, especially the senate, for so many weeks seems about settled, so far as legislative action is concerned.

With the withdrawal, at his own re- quest, of A. H. Pettigrew of Oconto, as the governor's appointee for mem- bership on the conservation commis- sion, followed by the confirmation by the senate of Guido Rahr of Manitow- ooc and Virgil Dickinson of Augusta, whom the governor appointed in place of Mr. Pettigrew, peace and quiet is ready to reign in the department.

The Frey report which uncovered little more than petty inconsistencies the unproven Catlin-Wirrey episode, and the testimony of conservation de- partment officials are in the hands of the attorney general for consideration and any action deemed necessary.

BUDGET PROCEEDURE

A bill passed last week by the as- sembly, but which must still pass the senate, provides for a new method of budget procedure for all local units of government.

It was introduced by Speaker Thom- son, and after having been vigorously opposed by municipal officials, it was amended to remove the principal objections.

It provides that counties, cities, vil- lages, towns and school districts must plan their expenditures ahead of time through regular budgetary procedure, listing all anticipated revenues and all proposed expenditures. Figures for the two preceding years must also be given to the taxpayers. These must be published and a public hearing held.

Changes in the budget after final ad- option are prohibited except by a two- thirds vote of the membership of the governing body and publication of such changes.

DRIVERS' LICENSE

The new drivers' license law which I spoke to you about in this column sev- eral weeks ago has now become law, and every driver of an automobile will have to obtain one of these new licen- ses by November 1, 1941. Cost: 25c.

LOTS OF LEGISLATION

In addition to the more momentous matters which received legislative at- tention last week were bills on frog dealers, deer farms, inland lake pollu- tion, muskrat and beaver farms, arti- ficial coloring of canned goods, non- resident licenses for bow and arrow hunters, and transportation of garbage and rubbish in towns. Legislators cer- tainly have to be versatile to pass up- on these minor and other far more serious matters.

SABOTAGE PREVENTION ACT

The governor last week signed a bill enacting a model sabotage act which imposes heavy penalties for intentional injury to or interference with property for the U. S. defense program, or for failure to report or identify defective materials or workmanship on defense orders.

It enables officials to post property against admission, permits the deten- tion of suspects and the closing of highways adjacent to such plants. Effective only until May 15, 1943.

ELECTRICIANS' LICENSE

The assembly passed and sent to the senate a bill which electricians have long been interested in.
