Mechanizing the Farms

With mechanization going on everywhere it is but natural that we should find this trend in evidence also on the farm. Although the farm horse is by no means "through," he is less in evidence than formerly. In a tour of the Philadelphia area several farms were found being conducted entirely mechanically, as shown by these pictures.

Bad Breath in Dogs Bad breath in dogs may be caused by several different things. Usually it is the symptom of a deranged stomach. The dog may be suffering from hyperacidity, in which case anti-acid tablets will help. Excess tartar on the teeth at the gums may be responsible. If this exists, have it removed. Worms may be the cause. A stool analysis will tell you if worms are present. Decaying teeth and ulcerous gums will also cause an odorous breath.

New Water Heaters

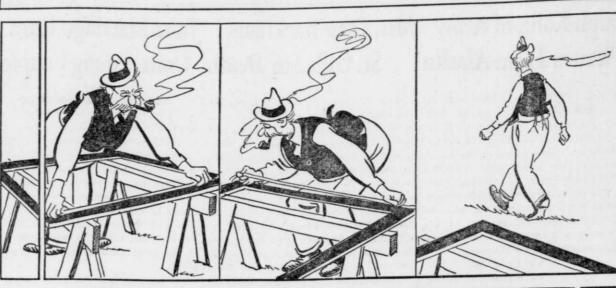

Any of the new, modern water heaters would look well and would take up little room. There is a low, square water heater, however, that is especially designed for use in a kitchen. Its height is just right for setting beside a cooking range or sink and the smooth table top will be found convenient as an extra work surface for use in the daily kitchen and laundry work. It is an efficient heater able to heat enough water for a bath every 15 minutes.

SERVING HINTS:

the serving plate. The tomato cole slaw salads may be arranged on lettuce leaves on a platter and each person can serve himself from hours? this platter. Peas and carrots always offer a good color combination. Arrange them in a bowl tossed together or separately arranged with carrots in the center and peas surrounding the carrots. The dessert had better be served in a rather deep dessert dish. Place a square of cake in each dish, then top with a ball of ice cream. Over all pour the rich looking blueberry sauce. Prepare this dessert just before it is to be served. The whole family will love it. USE OF LEFTOVERS:

Here's what to do with that bowl of leftover vegetables. Say you have peas, carrots and mashed potatoes. This a fine combination for Vegetable Puffs. Mix 1 cup leftover mashed potatoes with 2 eggs, 3 tablespoons milk, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 11/2 cups peas, carrots, mashed, 1/2 cup flour and 1 tablespoon chopped parsley. Mix thoroughly together and drop by teaspoons into hot deep fat -350 degrees F. Cook until brown. Drain on absorbent paper. Makes 8 to 10 puffs.

Salt Solution Spray Relieves Sinus Trouble

Dr. William D. Gill, San Antonio, Dr. Barton Texas, in the Medical World also advises the use of foods which leave an alkaline ash in the body and in addition advises cutting down on starch foods. As starch foods are necessary to the system to provide energy, Dr. Gill advises that they be cut down but slightly and only those starch foods which experience shows cause head colds and sinus disturbances: cane sugar, beet sugar and maple sugar sects. apparently causing more disturb-

Dr. Gill is one of a number of treating both early and late cases of sinus infection by X-rays, when other methods have failed to relieve the pain. Also, as recommended by most nose specialists now, Dr. Gill recommends ordinary salt solutiona teaspoonful of table salt to a pint of water-as a spray to help shrink the swollen lining tissue of the nose. Ephedrine is the most effective shrinking solution for spraying the nose but it should be used only in the strength recommended by the physician in charge of the case.

The point is that, aside from treating the nose or sinus direct, it should be remembered that the individual may be sensitive or allergic to foods and also that, in general, foods which are acid should be eaten in less quantities.

Use of Bile Salts For Gall Bladder

FOR years physicians have been slow or sluggish liver and a slow emptying gall bladder that better than all kinds of medicine is avoiding large meals, especially the foods rich in starch or fat. By eating small meals, four times a day instead of three large meals, there will be less work for and less congestion of the liver.

exercise, exercises that squeeze the straight, deep breathing exerciseswill stimulate bile flow, prevent congestion of liver, and empty the gall bladder in less time.

What, however, can be done for those who continue to eat heavy meals or for those who will not or are unable to exercise?

If there is not enough bile being manufactured by the system or if the bile is not flowing freely, then the use of bile or gall from cattle is coming into considerable use by physicians. When there has been an operation that has interfered lates bile formation and bile flow. Drs. A. C. Ivy and A. L. Berman, Chicago, in Minnesota Medicine, state that many of the tablets containing bile salts contain other laxatives or purgatives also, whereas it is the bile salt (or gall) that is needed in liver or gall bladder patients.

When it is desirable to give patients bile salts some dried animal bile or some preparation of bile salt should be given. These physicians point out that bile salts should not be given unless the liver or gall bladder are not working properly. The bile or gall acts as a self-starter to the liver and gall bladder.

No one should go to the druggist and ask for bile salts, because many prepatations contain other purga-

. . . QUESTION BOX

Q .- What causes warts? A .- The cause of warts is thought to be a small virus or organism. Q.-What causes my temperature to be subnormal? Is one plus sugar considered serious?

A .- It may be natural for you to have a subnormal temperature. It runs in some families as does low blood pressure. Your physician will advise you if he considers the amount of sugar too high. Have you had your blood sugar tested? Q.-What diet would you recommend for arthritis? A .- Plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables. Cut down greatly on starch foods-bread, potatoes, sugar. Cut down slightly on fat foods -butter, cream, egg yolks and fat meat.

Q.-Please tell me the meaning of 'neurasthenia" and what causes it? A .- Neurasthenia is mental and physical tiredness. It is often due to some slight "conflict" in patient's mind, some nervous stress. Perhaps some infection is causing the ired feeling.

Lice and Mites

with sufficient care, avoid a poultry parasite infestation, but his first consideration will have to be to select a site for his operations which is isolated from other poultry. He will then have to fence the site completely and construct entirely new build-ings and runs. He should begin with incubator-hatched chicks, and neither other fowls nor second-hand crates must be allowed on the place. Even then, he will need to be vigilant to prevent insects being brought in from infested quarters by means of clothing, trucks, wagons, etc.

Since very few poultrymen are able to start in this manner, the result is that practically all of them must wage constant battle against the lice and mites which commonly infest domestic fowls.

The chicken mite is a red or gray, blood-sucking insect which feeds during the night and secretes itself in cracks and crevices of walls and roosts during the day. Because of this habit, its presence is sometimes not suspected until a decreased egg production and a generally poor condition of the poultry betrays the ravages of the insect. In heavily infested coops chickens grow droopy and weak; their combs and wattles are pale, and sitting hens are sometimes found dead on the nest, having succumbed to the attacks of thousands of the blood-sucking in-

Infested Quarters.

Take down all roosts and remove all boards and boxes that may be lying about. Then, with a hand pump, if the place is small, or with a bucket pump or knapsack sprayer for larger houses, spray the entire interior thoroughly with a suitable physicians who have had success treating both early and late cases insecticide. The spray must be drivthe floor, too, must be sprayed to kill any mites which may have fallen when the roosts were removed.

The carbolineums or anthracene oils, derived from coal tar, are extremely effective. It is true that they cost more per gallon than other materials but the number of treatments required to control an infestation is less than with other insecticides, and the effect of the carbolineums is very lasting. Another coal tar product, creosote oil, is cheaper than anthracene, is available in most cities, and is very ef-

It is well to reduce either the carbolineums or the creosote oils with kerosene, to facilitate spraying, using one part of kerosene to three parts of the other materials. Crude petroleum, although not so effective as the other oils mentioned, still is very satisfactory in places where the infestation is not excessive. If a sprayer is not available, it may be applied with a brush. Poultry should be kept out of the building until the oil is well dried into the wood.

Treatment to Control Lice.

Lice are not blood-suckers as are the mites, but they feed either on feathers, or on scales from the skin, and cause serious injury. Treatment may be either by dipping or by dust-When the patient is willing to ing, the latter method being favored by the majority of poultrymen beliver-bending exercises with knees cause dipping soils the feathers and in some cases injures the skin of the fowls. One of the most effective, if not, indeed the most so, of all dusting materials is sodium fluoride. It may be bought at from 30 to 60 cents per pound, the price varying with quantity bought and with distance # from manufacturing centers.

How to Apply the Powder. The so-called "pinch method" has been found to be most effective. When the material is applied by this method, the procedure is as folwith the manufacture or storage of lows: Place the powder on a table in bile, giving bile or bile salts stimu- an open vessel; hold the fowl by the base of the wings with one hand and with the other apply small pinches of the chemical among the feathers, next to the skin; place a pinch on the head, one on the neck, two on the back, one on the breast, one below the vent, one on the tail, one on each thigh, and one scattered on the underside of each wing when spread. Distribute each pinch somewhat by pushing the thumb and fingers among the feathers as the powder is released. One application of sodium fluroide to all fowls on a given premises will completely destroy all lice present, but it is necessary that the treatment be thorough and that every fowl be treated. For more extensive information relative to the control of lice and mites, send five cents to Superintendent of Documents. Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 801.

SHORTAGE OF HORSES AND

NUTRITIVE VALUE OF CEREALS A convenient and inexpensive way to add nutritive value to cereals is to mix the dry cereal, before cooking, with dry skim milk, in the proportion of one-half to one cup of dry skim milk to each cup of cereal.

It is rather easy to distinguish the insects from all other creatures. They have bodies which consist of three segments; they have a pair of antennae; they have three pairs of jointed legs; when adult, they have, usually, one or two pairs of wings.

Benefits to Our Readers

THE PUBLIC nature of advertising benefits everyone it touches. It benefits the public by describing exactly the products that are offered. It benefits employees, because the advertiser must be more fair and just than the employer who has no obligation to the public. These benefits of advertising are quite apart from the obvious benefits which advertising confers—the lower prices, the higher quality, the better service that go with advertised goods and firms.

Current War Front Shifts to Syria With Oil Fields of Iraq as Prize; 'Draft Everything' Legislation Aims To Break Strikes in Defense Plants

(EDITOR'S NOTE-When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) sed by Western Newspaper Unio fall next.

On New Front

DEFENSE:

Production

Returning foreign correspondents, making a junket of the defense production industries as guests of the war department, found that airplane motors, considered one of the potential bottlenecks, are being rushed into production at one plant in Connecticut to the tune of 1,400,000 horsepower monthly.

One official of this concern, reviewing what he knew of the potential production of this industry, predicted that between 70,000 and 100,000 airplane engines will be turned out during 1941-42.

The total airplane industry, from a motor standpoint, should eventually be turning out 10,000,000 horsepower a month

While these producers had no accurate figures on Axis production, it was figured that it might be between 3,000,000 and 5,000,000 a month at the present time, with future capabilities unfigured.

In addition to the three great American aviation motor concerns' output, the automotive industry has been asked for some, and while not ment with the Petain government in production yet, they will eventually contribute a large percentage of

This turned the pages back to World War I, when America's most important fighting airplane motor, the Liberty, was turned out in quantity in a leading automotive factory.

This factory also, by the way, was making the recoil mechanism for the 75-millimeter gun-then a war bottleneck.

DRAFT:

'Everything'

A stiff fight against President Roosevelt's "draft everything" measure sent to the congress closely following his "freedom speech" appeared likely, though the administration forces seemed willing enough to modify the measure from its first

The President softened the shock of the measure, which at first sight looked like an effort toward a complete economic dictatorship, by a later announcement that its major purpose was to permit the administration to break strikes in defense industries, which were still a knotty problem all over the nation.

Both Senator Byrd of Virginia and Senator Tydings of Maryland had taken the floor to demand that the President himself take the leadership in halting strikes, Byrd saying:

"There are 60 to 70 strikes in defense industries, and new ones are occurring every day. I don't assume the government would want to take over and operate all these

"A prohibition against strikes and compulsory arbitration would be a better method."

The bill, which in its original form would give the President, under his proclamation of a state of unlimited emergency, power to seize and sell anything in the nation's long list of private property, found its first compromise offer coming from administration leaders in the form of a time limit on the President's powers, together with a proviso that congress must first itself declare a national emergency before they could be used.

Labor-minded members of both houses, wildly suspicious of the measure, started their own investigation to try to determine its origin.

U-BOATS:

Bigger Range

Sinkings of eight British ships by torpedoes fired from U-boats revealed that the German submarine. instead of being a smaller vessel with a shorter range operating in greater quantity, is becoming a bigger boat with a bigger range.

Some of these reported sinkings took place within 700 miles of the United States, well within the supposed neutrality patrol area.

Four of them, in fact, were apparently the victims of one commerce raiding submarine, at a position said to be 350 miles south of the tip of Greenland.

This point placed the submarines lease-lend aid.

Observers believed that the Germans, finding that airplanes were effective weapons against shipping, would concentrate on this method at short range and would send the submarines farther and farther

Citizens of Bear Mountain, N. Y., received a taste of what actual war attack might mean when the coast artillery and West Point cadets put on a dive-bombing attack and anti-aircraft defense of a big bridge near that point. Guns and equipment used were in same positions they would actually occupy in an actual battle

The collapse of the Greco-British defense of Crete was followed by a good deal of backing and filling as the forces of Great Britain wondered where the axe was going to

The preponderance of British belief was that it would be in Syria, and two things happened at once: The British started mobilizing toward Syria and began air attacks on Syrian points, and the French started propaganda efforts to prove that they needed German aid to repel British attack.

The British countered by announcing, via their Turkish friends, that Germany already had landed 20,000 men in civilian dress, who would doff their tourist garb and take up arms just as soon as sea-borne transports landed them.

Also the British asserted that 400 German planes were already at Syrian airdromes, ready for an attack on Iraq's British army from bases supplied, in defiance of Franco-British friendship, by agreeheaded by Darlan. The observers in this country were not fooled by this sort of diplomatic byplay, and were able to recognize the same maneuvers, with some variations, that had preceded the German occupation of the Balkans and the subsequent blitz attack upon

Britain's plan was not only a delaying action, but because of the peculiar location of the immensely Mosul oil field, to try to get into Syria first, while the German "tourists" were still unarmed, and to destroy the landing fields there

Home Front

Churchill's government, taking a great deal of criticism because of the Crete disaster, because many British people thought the Crete battle might have been won if better handled, now found itself with an intensely serious problem on its hands.

There were signs that "authorized sources" in Britain were preparing the public as gently as might be for a practical abandonment of the Mediterranean as a naval control area since the loss of Crete, and one announcement flatly said that American aid must hurry if it was to get to the Red sea and Suez in time to get to the British forces in North Africa.

The British were expecting airborne attacks on Malta, Cyprus, Alexandria and Suez, but whether the Germans would attempt parachute troop operations after their huge losses in Crete was doubtful.

In fact, the Turkish slant on the attempt to land in Syria was that sea-borne invasion would be carried out. A dozen or more large ships were to carry supplies to Syria via the Dodecanese islands, and from these it would be possible, Turkey said, to land in Syria by an overnight sailing under cover of darkness.

Five hundred motorized troops had made such a trip, Turkey said, though France vigorously denied it. Harking back to the days when Weygand's Near-East army was estimated at 750,000 men, figures were now being given out in allied circles that De Gaullet had an army of 250,000 men at the present time.

Loyal to Vichy?

The stories about the first Nazis landing in Syria, in fact, stated that they were being sent in to "straighten out" the French forces in Syria, whose loyalty to the Vichy government was in question.

There had been many reports of disaffected troops leaving Syria before the German infiltration to flee into Palestine, there to join the Free French, but just how much of this had occurred was largely a matter of conjecture.

Cryptic reports from France said that the government had agreed to defend Syria against the Britishthen stated that the government also would not permit a German invasion-an invasion which the British 1,400 miles west of Ireland. One at | had reason to believe was actually least of the ships was loaded with taking place, and was not being resisted

Ambassador Leahy was continuing to ask France for a flat statement of her true aims.

Of all the attacks imminent-Syria, on the face of the evidence, got the call for the first battleground of the New Front.

Urges Arms Boost

Stacy May, research chief of OPM, is pictured as he told the senate defense committee that the gigantic American armament program must be doubled to aid Great Britain and other nations in overcoming the German advantage in production. He proposed that the goal of spending twenty billion dollars next year for arms be increased to forty

DOORN: End of Road

The death of former Kaiser Wilhelm at 82 of a blood clot on the lung and the elaborate military funeral accorded him by the dictator of Germany, Adolf Hitler, former Austrian paperhanger, brought an odd and dramatic close to a long and interesting career.

The man who was so much in the forefront of the last war that the slogan "Hang the Kaiser" was on the lips of half the Allied soldiers, died after 22 years of exile after a ripe and peaceful old age, even in the midst of a present war which had brought the conquering hordes of his former country in triumph to his point of exile at Doorn, Holland.

Yet, even in this triumph, though the Germans could have brought the Hohenzollern monarch back to his throne had their desire been to do so, this was not done, and the kaiser and his family remained in exile, there for death to find him while the issue of the fate of his country was still in doubt.

However, the relations between Hitler-controlled Germany and the former monarch were as odd as the position of the civilized world at the time of the kaiser's death. Hitler seemed filled with respect and homage to his former monarch, though what the kaiser thought of the humbly born Austrian who succeeded him was little in evidence, and mattered just as little.

Hitler's final move-to order a funeral with full military honors, was the last there was in the news about the lord of the Hohenzollerns.

GASOLINE:

An Issue

No sooner had Secretary Ickes suggested "gasless Sundays" as a means of controlling the oil supply of the country than administration critics began asking embarrassing questions. How could this country, with control of half the world's oil supply, be facing an oil shortage?

How did it happen that American concerns were selling oil and its products to Japan? To Russia? To other countries via which it might get into Axis hands?

The defense investigating committee in congress was asking some of these questions, and getting strange answers. The Standard Oil company had to explain the deal to its stockholders, and this brought the issue into more prominence.

The oil concern admitted the sale of oil and gasoline (except the 100octane airplane gas) to Japan, but said that when the agreement was made the British, American and Dutch governments were consulted, and that the terms were entirely acceptable to all three. It was one of the puzzling phases of America's defense effort.

SEA WAR:

Berlin, having claimed that half of Britain's entire merchant ship strength had been destroyed, asserted that the total had reached 11,000,000 tons.

Britain admitted six millions. Both agreed that British pre-war strength had totaled around 21 millions or 22 millions of tons.

The German claim was that, her ships sunk, Britain was "bleeding to death," and that a speedup of airplane attacks on merchant ships and war vessels might be expected.

The British, still anxious for shipping aid from the United States, expressed gratification that the United States, as announced, would immediately start picking up the British shipping lines in the Orient and the Pacific, thus freeing many vessels for the carrying of munitions abroad.

Most observers, while believing that the German claims were excessive, admitted that the ship losses were tremendously heavy, and that it was one of Britain's most serious challenges of the war. In fact, Secretary of Navy Knox, calling on shipbuilders for a "mirasserted that "it was now acle." plain" that one thing only could win the war, and it would be a combination of airplane and shipping strength.

This combination, he said, Britain and America could produce, but that them. it would take a great speedup in production.

He offered a plan of competition between men and companies in building ships, with offers of a governmental system of bonuses for any achievements along this line.

WASHINGTON.-The other day rumors began to spread around the capital that the United States had declared a war that nobody knew anything about-a war marked "private and confidential," the kind that nobody must talk about.

So everybody talked about it. At cocktail parties, in the Press club, in the corridors of the solemn buildings with the "closed doors." You have heard of them-the closed doors behind which all the real things happen that are not supposed Finally, since this was a highly private and confidential matter it soon got into the papers, labeled "economic war." Immediately the idea was roundly denied, disparaged, and generally abused. So I started out to try to locate it. There was smoke. Where was Since economic warfare is dollar warfare, I went to see the man who has a whole arsenal full of dollars which could be used as ammunition in such a battle, namely, Jesse Jones, federal loan administrator and secretary of commerce. I found him in his office. The tall, good-natured, hard-working Texas multi-millionaire was friendly, helpful, sympathetic, as he always is. But what he did not say about economic warfare would have filled a volume. Visits Leading Economist. So I went to another man, who if such a war is going on right now is sitting on the board of strategy. I Not, however, by a high officer of must not mention his name, but he knows the terrain perfectly. He has been all over the ground which, I might mention here is South America. He has served as a government representative and as a business representative, and in other capacities which I cannot catalogue without identifying him.

"Economic warfare," he said, "is impressed and were so loudly silent impossible, without war." that I could not help noticing them.

What he did not say was that undeclared economic warfare is impossible without wartime conditions, and right now, we seem to have enough of those to make possible some early skirmishes. This is the situation as it was "un-revealed" to me (officially) by a certain official.

In the first place, experts here are convinced that even if he takes Africa, Hitler cannot feed and clothe Germany and its acquired domain | Of course so many of my huswithout a strong trade foothold in South America.

As one German economist recently put it to a former American representative in Berlin: "South America is a natural com-America becomes the goal of their triple threat: economic, political and lar for a pony." military. Now what are we going to do Railway Employees about it?

Three Methods Open.

There are three methods which the United States can use to keep the totalitarian businessmen, the totalitarian trade methods, the totalitarian politics out of the Western world. We can deal with South America by means of:

Voluntary co-operation. Enticement.

Pressure. Number 1 is not warfare. Nor is it the old-fashioned "dollar-diplomacy" which exploited South and Central American countries for the good of the few and made us hated as the Colossus of the North. It is, however, "dollars PLUS diploma-

This method is already at work. It consists of loans to South America; cultural activities and good will propaganda, genuine co-operation in finding complementary outlets which will encourage a north-andsouth flow of goods.

When we come to number 2, we must be very careful. This method will never be mentioned in any official statement. We have to fight fire with fire, or to be more literal, fight marks with dollars.

In plain unvarnished language, a large part of method 2 is "graft." You slip a few well-chosen "gifts" into the right palms. It is not nice but after all we are talking about war-time conditions and it is far nic- | a line.

Crust on Bricks O UESTION: In our new house the foundation is red bricks, backed with concrete. We have recently noticed a gray-white coating on the bricks. The bricks are also spotted with cement and paint. How can we bring out the color of the bricks without injury? Answer: The gray-white coating is the coming to the surface of mineral salts in the mortar brought out by rain. Eventually all of the salt will come to the surface and will disappear. Washing the wall with a mixture of 1 part muriatic acid in 20 parts of water will take off the coating and the spots of paint; it will also soften the hardened cement, which can then be scraped off. Pour the acid slowly into the water and use a wooden or earthenware container. The acid wash should be quickly followed by rinsing with plenty of clear water. Legislative News Letter

Assemblyman Jos. A. Schmitz Washington County

LEGISLATURE ADJOURNS By adjourning last Friday at 12 o'session which was the longest in history, this was one of its shortest.

In the final hours many non-centroversial measures were enacted into law, while proposals on which there was a difference of opinion were shunted as ide and were refused to be given any

Whether the legislature finished at ticularly important. What really counted was whether the laws which were necessary for the state and its people were enacted or not.

CLEAN READING BILL

The last bill to be passed was one which provides for fine and imprison. ment for anyone selling or offering for sale any indecent literature or pictures which would tend to corrupt the morals of our youth, and provides for hea- place at first base, going hitless. vy penalties for anyone violating this

MILK CONTROL

The legislature refused to enact a control law which would fix the price of milk and otherwise provide for the method of sale and distribution of milk in the fluid milk markets of the state. This means that after December 31, 1941, when the present law expires, the state will be without milk control of any sort, and farmers and dealers may cut prices and traffic on it as they see that we are now on a rising market as It is believed that due to the fact far as milk is concerned that farmers will receive a top price for their milk Theusch, c...... 5 2 2 under any circumstances, and if ever a milk control law was not necessary, this is such a time.

Among proposals in the legislature on this bill before it was killed were ones to provide for a 2 cent per quart difference in the state, and 3 cents in Milwaukee between the door-step and the over-the-counter delivery sale price. Another provision would have permitted half-gallon and gallon bottles to be used in the sale of milk while a third would have invalidated the law when the condensery price goes to $1.65.

TOTAL OF 1400 BILLS

A total of over 1400 bills have been introduced into the legislature this session, and of these only about two hundred will become law. During the last few days of the session, members were endeavoring to withdraw bills pon in an attempt to salvage them efore the final sine die adjournment. Very few, however, were successful in these attempts, and about 1200 such the best interests of the people and the state of Wisconsin and were allowed to die without action.

SPECIAL SESSION In view of the world turmoil in which we may become engaged, it is highly possible that the governor may find it ecessary to call a special session of the legislature within the next year and half to enact such laws as the emergency may demand. In this case the governor would is sue a call and the legislature would have to meet to consider and enact such measures as the case demanded.

MISSOURI VISITORS

Last week the speaker and 24 mem bers of the Missouri house of representatives visited our state capitol mainly to observe the operation of the electric voting machine which shortens roll calls from ten minutes to ten seconds They were highly impressed with what they saw, and said that our state capitol was a far more beautiful building than their cwn, which was constructed as late as 1917.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad and loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Emil Ramel, who passed away one year ago, on June 9, 1940:

Our dear wife and mother is gone to

To that home on high prepared for the blest.

Forget her? No never, for how could that be

Of one who has meant so much to us here. We miss her so terribly, and some.

times feel We're dreaming it all, that it cannot

But could she return, we can hear her say, Den't grieve, my dear loved ones, it's better this way I'm happier here, and its such a re-

To be free of pain, and to feel no grief.

When I was on earth, and your live; 'Twas a wonderful thing, but cannot compare

To the gictious privilege of living with Him In this blessed no sin.

So keep your faith and by his grace, We'll all be together again some day. Sadly missed by her husband, Emil Ramel, and children.

BELLES BEAT LOCALS AFTER TRAILING 6-2

(CONTINUED FROM PAGE ONE) pitch and passed ball. The last 2 of the 7 runs were scored with the bases fu'l and 2 out when Prost, after scooping up an easy grounder, got his spikes caught and fell down as he was about to throw the batter out.

Honeck kept the visitors well in check until the 7th, giving up only 3 hits and 2 runs before they got to him for 5 straight hits. He was relieved by clock noon, the Wisconsin legislature H. Marx who allowed 5 more hits and 4 walks in the last 2 and one-third insicn since 1903. In contrast to the 1939 nings. Campbellsport ran up the score with 2 more markers in the 8th and 1 in the 9th. The Belles went ahead 2-0 with a run in each of the 2nd and 3rd frames before the locals got 1 in the 3rd, Kewaskum went ahead 4-2 with 3 runs in the 5th and made it 6-2 with 2 more markers in the 6th. PLAY AT GLENBEULAH NEXT After three straight home games Kewaskum hits the road again this Sunday when the boys take one of the season's longest trips to Glenbeulah. Glen has shown improvement lately and beat Sheboygan Falls last Sunday. The team expects a good fight from their opponents, especially on foreign scil. Kewaskum must win to stay in the running this half and to hang on to second place. The following Sunday June 22, Kohler comes here for the final game of the first half.
