passing me up like I was the army's choice for permanent K P duty. I look and feel more like a hardship case than most of the crumb hunters who are being released and I keep telling the officers that I am no more use to the army than if I was married on account of I am in love.

Every time I argue that I am needed at home they just laugh at me so I gess they must have investigated and found out that I always let you and pop bring up the coal and wood and was not no help to speak of. When I think of how I used to squawk about tending the furnace it makes me sick all over. Believe me ma if I ever get out of this and back in my own home I will think it a priverlage to tend the furnace.

It makes me soar to see a lot of boys being released every day. But they certainly get checked up on and three days before they go they get a complete going over by the doctors again. I can't figure this out unless they want to be sure no jeep gets out of the army in any better shape than he was when he came in. I asked Sergeant Mooney and he said it was the rules that every soldier must be exactly like he was when he was accepted. He said one reason why I could not get out was that I was in such lousy shape when I reached camp that it would be impossible for a army to ever get me back in the same condition again.

Attic Ventilation

A HOME owner has just wriften me of having had his old shingle roof covered with prepared shingles. He expected that the greater thickness of the roof would make his attic cooler, and he was much troubled to find that the attic was much hotter with the added roof thickness than it had been before. The reason was in the greater tightness of the new roof. The old wood shingle roof was probably none too tight, and air could circulate through it. This circulation carried off heated air in the attic, and air circulation in an attic is, of course, one of the best methods for keeping an attic cool. The new roof shut off this circulation, so that heated air could not escape. One good move would be to put louvres in the attic walk, as high up toward the peak of the roof as possible. My own attic has three peaks, and a year or two ago I put a louvre high up in each one; a kind that has slanting slats to keep out rain, and protected with insect screening. These stay open all summer. They can be closed in winter by hinged doors. If the owner who wrote me would do something of the sort in his own attic I am sure that his difficulty would be Old Floor Finish.

Question: During the years, the floors of our school have accumulated a thick coating of dirt, oil, seals, wax, etc., that we now wish to remove. A floor machine would chemical do the job without injuring ical inspection he was told he wood the wood, which is maple? As we

Apply in two coats to bare wood; it will penetrate and the final finish will be hard and resistant.

Casement Windows.

Question: Will you tell me if casement windows are practical? Are they better than the wood frame type, which have weatherstrips? Answer: Casement windows are made in steel or wood. One advantage of a casement type of window is that it may be opened to the full extent of its area, which may be particularly desirable in the summer. A possible disadvantage of a window of this kind may have in the winter is that it may be difficult to open a small enough area for ventilation during very cold weather. Otherwise, there is no particular advantage or disadvantage in either types of windows. All of them can be weatherstripped. For certain architectural effects it may be more desirable to use a casement than a double hung window.

Basement Wall Finish.

Question: Some time ago you spoke of a finish containing salt, used for basement walls. Would this be suitable for the walls of a basement apartment, which sometimes are damp?

Answer: You probably refer to the use of salt in whitewash, by which ordinary whitewash is improved and made less likely to rub. Use 15 pounds of salt to 50 pounds of lime for a basement apartment, especially with damp walls, this would not be suitable. It would be much better to remove all present finish and to apply cement paint, which is intended for masonry, and resists dampness. It can be had in white and in colors. Refinishing Furniture.

Question: I have an old birdseye maple dresser and chest of drawers that I should like to refinish in pale green enamel. How? Answer: Go over the surfaces first with medium coarse sandpaper wrapped around a block of wood, and then with fine sandpaper. With all of the gloss thus removed, and the surface smoothed, put on one or two coats of enamel undercoater, and follow with a finish coat of enamel. The undercoater and the enamel should be made by the same manufacturer. If the present finish is chipped and marred, take it all off to the barewood with a varnish remover. Directions on the label should be carefully followed.

Waxing Floors. Question: My floors were newly scraped and given two coats of shellac. I find that constant application of wax takes away the fresh look. Will the floors be spoiled if I omit the wax from now on?

Answer: Floors do not need continual waxing. Frequent polishing should keep them in good condition, with new wax needed only when wear begins to show in doorways and similar places where traffic is heavy. Wiping the floor with liquid wax-not water wax-should remove some of the present heavy coat.

MAKING SMALL REPAIRS

If shingles are missing here and there from a shingled roof, new shingles may be inserted if they are available. If they are not at hand, pieces of rust-resistant metal may be used, or even, in case of emergency, pieces cut from a tin can. When metal pieces are used for repair they should be painted on both sides and slipped under the shingles in the upper layer, taking care not to loosen any shingles in the proc-

When a new building is under construction, or when an old one must be completely re-roofed, the question arises of what type of rcofing to apply. The answer to this question will depend upon what the owner can afford to spend, the size and type of the building and the knocked out but I still do not feel alcohol in the proportion of 2 parts shape of the roof. Rigid shingles are very durable Wood shingles, if of a durable wood and if they are properly laid, are both durable and attractive. They are, moreover, of comparatively low cost and have considerable insulating value. Slates, which make an extremely attractive and very long-lasting roof, may be had in a variety of colors. It must be kept in mind, however, that they are much heavier than wood shingles, weighing from 700 to 900 pounds per square (100 square feet), consequently the frame beneath them must be of stronger construction

Asbestos shingles, made by compressing asbestos filler and Portland cement under great pressure, are very durable and have the added advantage of being fire-resistant. They may be obtained in a wide variety of colors and surface tex-

HOME HIDE TANNING

A recent government bulletin says that "depending upon the size of the hide, the kind of leather, and the tanner's prices and profits, the charge for tanning a hide with the hair on or making it into leather varies from $1.50 to $4.00 for calfskins, and from 25 to 50 cents a square foot for hides made into harness, lace, or glove leather." Since it is so difficult and such a risk, home tanning is advised only for cheap skins and for making the coarser grades of leather.

Roofing and Roof Repair

In late autumn, when the pressure of summer work is over and the rains or snows of winter are imminent, the mind of the householder turns automatically to the condition of his roofs.

If small holes are found in metal roofing they can easily be filled with drops of solder; if larger holes exist they should be repaired by soldering over the hole larger pieces of the same kind of roofing. If soldering tools are lacking, use plugs of elastic roofer's cement for the small holes and cover the large ones with a piece of canvas (or several thicknesses of cement sacking). Use thick paint for an adhesive to fasten the canvas or sacking down, and cover also with several thicknesses of Kinebik and this evil eye mumbo-jumbo to do it." "Well, what's our next move, chief?" demanded Red, fidgeting like a bear on a chain. "After what they tried today I'm not sleeping sound until I get my hooks on this white head."

"Don't underestimate that bird, Red," warned Garry as he sat stripped to the waist by the fire, rubbing his tormented body with the soda solution. "He's quick as an otter. I was sure I had him today. He wasn't ten yards away and coming in, head on, when I threw the gun on him! I never made a worse miss.'

"You don't make many, Garry. Now what are the orders?"

"I'm going to Matagami to have a report for headquarters relayed by canoe to the railroad. It's my alibi and last will and testament," said the blinded man, nursing his puffed face. "With these wild Montagnais crazy with Isadore's whiskey and fed up with the idea that we've sickened their children, we've got the chance a rabbit has with a snowy owl."

Malone stopped his pacing, bent and peered anxiously into the fire-lit face of his friend. Then he faltered: "You're-you're not sending-for help? An effigy of a smile touched Finlay's distorted features. "Do you think I am, Red?"

"Not the Sergeant Garrett Finlay I wintered on the Liard River withnot the man I saw bluff those miners at Fort McLeod!"

"No, we'll play this through, the four of us, as we started," said Finlay. "I'm going to report that we've found the bodies of two men who had been shot, not drowned, and were, ourselves, fired on, on the Nottaway; that I was ambushed and, finally, that we're going to stick until the arrival in August of a mysterious plane from the Bay when, if we live that long, there'll be a showdown. Because of the gravity of this Indian situation, I am advising the dispatch of a police plane in September to view our graves and clean up the case. This looks to me like the Waterloo of Sergeant Finlay and Constable Malone.' A look of incredulity lay on Malone's freckled face. He squinted curiously at his chief: "You're not talking like your old self, Garry. You've taken a tough lacing from those bugs. You're in misery. And you're naturally sore over the scurvy trick that Jane played on you. But when the poison's worked out of your system you're going to feel better about this jam we're in. I tell you we're going to bust Isadore wide open and if those Montagnais start to hunt us, there'll be plenty of red widows in these parts. "You may be right, Red." Finlay raised his face with its closed eyes to his friend. "But if we're licked, we'll go down with our colors flying!" And he crawled through the cheesecloth mosquito drop of the tent to thrash through a sleepless night under the raw torment of his swollen body and the deeper misery of stung pride and the bitterness of disillusion. In the morning Wabistan left for the head of the lake to carry on his losing fight against the medicine man. For two days Garry's physical condition kept him in camp, then the swelling began to leave his eyes and he could see. The afternoon of the third day, on his return from the gill-nets with Moise Wabistan, Blaise announced: "Cano' movin' up de shore!" Red got his glasses from the tent. "Well, I'll be whip-sawed if that double-crossing Jane hasn't had the gall to send that boy hunting for us, again!" snorted Malone.

"Sure it's the one who brought that message?" asked Finlay, alive When we leave Was- to the sudden tightening of his throat, the jump of his pulse. He anche in the ground was again deep in the spell of those take Isadore with us! He has last moments with Lise Demarais.

men start out on the Nottaway, and visit Isadore in his magnificent home. Finlay meets Lise, Isadore's stepdaughter, in response to an appeal to save her. He is ambushed and knocked unconscious. Malene and Blaise find him.

"Absolutely, and he's scared into a cold sweat," said Red, his binoculars at his eyes. "Got to hand it to that kid! He's game to show up here after what happened."

A hundred yards from shore the canoeman held his paddle with spread hands above his head, the Montagnais gesture of friendlinesa. Then he drew something white from his shirt and waved it.

"He's shaking like a bush in the wind," commented Malone. "Tell him to come in Moise. He's safe." The canoe moved in to the beach.

"Well, here's where she tries to alibi herself out of it." His freckled face sour with disgust Red handed Finlay a skin wrapper containing a "What a nerve that little deletter. coy duck packs in that swell shape of hers! She's as tough as raw-hide but who'd guess it with that face!" Finlay ignored his friend's characterization of Lise Demarais. He began to read:

"After what has happened you have good reason never to trust me again. The very thought drives me frantic. But I had to write you. I swear I did not know they had followed me. If I had, could I have acted that way before those breeds? Could I have lost my head-done what I did? Do you think me as cheap as that? But I'm not sorry. I'm terribly glad. Believe it or not, I was honest. I was carried far out to sea. I've never met a man like you, Garry Finlay!

"That night Labelle rushed in and called Jules from the table. When he returned, I knew by his face something awful had happened. You met Finlay this afternoon, damn you!' he roared. 'Now three men are dead and another hurt! But this fake surveyor paid for it tonight!' Then he struck me in the face!

"It was all so sudden-so ghastly. He wouldn't tell us what had happened. I didn't know whether you were alive or dead. He accused me of trying to betray him. When I asked him what there was to betray he started towards me and I ran to my room to get my pistol. He'll never strike me again-never!

"Oh, I beg you to believe me! I knew nothing-nothing about those men! They saw my canoe leave for the swimming beach and followed. They never had done it before. I was sick not knowing what I had done to you. And I was so terribly alone-so helpless! I didn't dare trust Corinne. She talks too much. Finally I found Louis Mikisis, my messenger, and he listened outside Tete-Blanche's cabin and learned that you had been left to die in a swamp. If I had known where you were, Garry Finlay, I would have found you, that night. But I could only suffer and pray.

"In the morning I saw Tete-Blanche and Tetu returning in a canoe to the post. Jules met them on the shore and acted like a wild man. Later Louis told me that you had escaped. I went to my room and cried. You were alive-alive and free!

"Last night Jules was in the traderoom with Tete-Blanche, Tetu and Labelle. I listened at the open window. They are going to set a guard at the outlet of the lake, the Quiet Water. They'll try to ambush you. If you stay here, the Indians will surprise you at night, then claim you were all drowned in the Was-You must leave here at once for Batoche has gone to the head of the lake with whiskey and Kinebik is making magic. There's a strange epidemic among the children and he's telling the Montagnais you are the cause.

was honest that day, that I-that "Lise."

Finlay's brown hands were unsteady as he finished the letter. As wind driven surf pounds a beach, wave on wave of emotion had beaten through him as he read. He read the letter again while the waiting Malone and Blaise scowled.

Finlay handed the letter to the disturbed Malone. "We were wrong, Red. This letter is honest and explains the whole thing. It couldn't have been faked and, besides, they know it wouldn't work the second There's news here that'll interest you. When you read it, you'll agree that Isadore couldn't have had a hand in this. It's too damned straight!"

Malone slowly wagged his head as he took the letter. "What the women will do to a good man!" he sighed. But, gradually, as he read, the sneer on his incredulous face smoothed out.

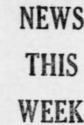

"Well, I'll be shot at sunrise if I don't think the kid is on the level!" exploded Malone, returning the letter to Garry. "I've handed her some pretty raw compliments, Garry, but I'm goin' to take them all back right here and now. Isadore'd never play it this way if he was behind this. That girl can sure write a letter, and boy! is she weak on Sergeant Garrett Finlay? Some medicine man, chief!"

The blood drifted up over Finlay's brown neck and cheeks as he met Malone's grin. "Red, we're go ing to take care of her!" he said

Malone thrust out a big-wristed hand and gripped Garry's. "We are, chief, and so is Blaise! Aren't you Blaise, you old sour face?"

bon society, of which Mr. Peterson is educational director, begins a drive for the protection of birds and other wild life in defense areas. At the age of 26, Mr. Peterson proved that bird lore can be made to yield a lot more thanmere bird seed. That was in 1934, when he published his book. Birds." As bird books go it was a best-seller, warmly praised not only by the somewhat esoteric cult of bird-fanciers, but

"Field Guide to the by a much wider public, which appreciated its clarity and simplicity. There came other editions and then his "Field Guide to Birds of the West," and his "Junior Book of Birds," of 1939. All in all, Mr. Peterson's books and magazine articles were so successful that he has had plenty of time to count birds-even five billions of them.

He not only writes but illustrates his books, having emerged from the New York Art Students' league as a highly qualified decorative artist. He is known as the best American authority on field identification of Mr. Peterson had an adventure at the convention of the society at Cape May last year, which, so far as we can learn, was not picked up by the news hawks at the time. It seems a group of ornithologists, Peterson included, got up at 4:30 to clock a scheduled hawk migration. It didn't come off and all were downhearted until a rumor got around that a black-necked stilt had been seen near the lighthouse pond. There had been no stilt in this section since 1870.

The party set out for the spot. Finally far across the pond. inaccessible to any dry land approach, the bird was sighted. Mr. Peterson said it would be necessary to approach as near as possible, disturb the bird, and then observe its flight care fully. He and William Fish volunteered to brave the mud and cold. They waded in, and at times were up to their armpits in slimy mud. Finally Peterson waved his arms at the stilt. It didn't move. Approaching nearer, they discovered it was as stiff as a plank.

The convention finally ran down the story. The National Academy of Sciences at Philadelphia had had a housecleaning and heaved out a lot of stuffed birds. Some rival bird fans of the Delaware valley had retrieved the stilt and set it up across the pond.

UP IN Maine, on last summer's holiday, this writer talked with an old road-side philosopher who was concerned with problems arising from the Prof. Perry Boldly lengthening here," he said. "Down at West Newton, they had to shoot an old feller, just to start a graveyard." Professor Ralph Barton Perry, of the faculty of philosophy of Harvard university, is similarly concerned about old age, but for a different reason. In a brilliant essay in a recent issue of the Princeton Alumni Weekly, he rallies the oldsters against being "hustled around by their juniors in politics; he notes the capitulation of wise old age to bumptious youth, and chal-lenges Rabbi Ben Ezra by insisting that there's no use growing old with him, or anybody else, if old-age is to be merely a tolerated short-ender in the life sweepstakes. "The most striking evidence of the downfall of the aged," writes Professor Perry, "is to be found in the domestic circle."

"The authority of the father was first broken by the mother, and the children poured through the breach. The last remnant of paternal authority was the period in which the father was an ogre, who came home at the end of the day to deal with major offenses. He was no longer magistrate, only executioner.

"But even this role disappeared when domestic criminology was modernized and the child's insubordination was regarded as a personality problem, to be solved by love, hygiene and psychoanalysis."

B. POWELL, with a sheepskin J from the University of Missouri school of journalism, went to China in 1917, made a career in the thick "battle, murder and sudder death," and hung on until now, with the news that he was hit by a bomb -which didn't explode. During his residence in Shanghai, Mr. Powell has been editor of the Shangha Weekly Review. He and his weekly have been stubbornly holding out against Japanese aggression and the make-believe Wang government. He is on numerous terror lists.

Billion Dollars in U. S. War Supplies Is Pledged for Assistance to Russia As Stalin Asks 'New Front' in Nazi War; U. S. Warns Finland to Cease Fighting

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

RUSSIA:

U.S. Pledge

Same day the state department announced that a billion dollars worth of war supplies had been pledged to Russia, Josef Stalin in a speech deplored the lack of a second front in the battle against

Speaking on the eve of the twentyfourth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, the Soviet leader claimed that the Nazi blitzkrieg was a failure but added that his Russian forces were not doing as well as they could be expected to do because Germany had thrown her entire force on Russia believing there was no fear of a western front open-

He asserted that Russia was still strong and that the losses inflicted on Germany far outnumbered damage to U.S.S.R. troops.

About this time Moscow sources were announcing that the Nazis had been fought to a standstill around Moscow and Leningrad. Berlin claimed to have gained in both areas and reports from the South indicated a Nazi break through into the Crimea, more or less a gate-way to the Caucasus.

Yet it had become apparent that Russian defense ideas were not-basically founded on a defense of the Crimea, but that the Reds considered Rostov as the entrance to the Caucasus, and would hold as hard there as possible, perhaps as successfully as at Moscow and Len-

There had been no indication that the Nazis' early prediction of col-lapse of Russian resistance could be looked for, and observers felt that if that eventuality was likely, then Moscow and Leningrad would hardly have been defended so vigorously and successfully.

The developments pointed, on the other hand, to a real and serious fall-down of the Nazi blitz, perhaps Lozovsky called the situation "serious." and there was a rumor that Stalin had left Moscow, perhaps heralding its fall. There was little effort on the part of the Russians to minimize the danager of the loss of Moscow, Leningrad or both, with 100 divisions reported moved by the Nazis from occupied countries to the Russian front.

Neither did the Russian statements sound panicky, and the armies apparently were intact, in the main.

WARNING:

To Finland

The United States had acted parallel with Great Britain in sending to Finland a stern warning that continuance of the Finnish participation in the Nazi attack on Russia would be considered an unfriendly her natural territory. America's viewpoint was that if Finland goes on fighting, then Russia's strength will be impaired and through Russia the strength of Britain and the United States. There was seen in the move a tacit guarantee of after the war aid to Finland if she should stop fighting.

The tragedy of Finland was that of a small country caught between naturally hostile and powerful neighbor empires-Germany and Russia.

NEUTRALITY:

Fight Bitter

Foes of changes in the neutrality act, which included not only all the regular anti - administration stalwarts but one or two new acquisitions to the fold had turned out to be a bitter-fighting group, though hardly a member of it had expected to see victory perch on its banner.

The effort seemed to be not so much to defeat the administration, generally conceded to be impossible, but rather to whoop up a general anti-foreign policy sentiment, using every argument and White House word as ammunition and target, respectively.

Senator Walsh of the navy affairs committee, typical of the arguments against the amendments repealing two important provisions of the act, said it would hurt the navy. The navy didn't have ships or men requisite for an entry into the war. "And this is an entry," said he, 'unless we already are in."

With its differences of technic the stand of the minority was ever the same, however-that the President had gone far beyond the authorizaalready taken, and that the White House was, in effect, asking an O.K. on these and tacit permission to go

A list of "must" terms for the United States to abide by or get into trouble with Japan had been laid down, chief among which was Rationing? the immediate stoppage of economic and military aid to China.

The list: "Stop all military and economic aid to Chungking and cease all propaganda or military missions to keep Chungking at war with Japan. America could advise Chungking to

Luck Smiles

When the torpedoed U. S. tanker Salinas limped into port under its own power, one of the luckiest fellows aboard was Phillip McBride (above) of Chicago. It was the third time he had missed death by inches. He was transferred from the S. S. Greer to the S. S. Kearny shortly before the Greer was attacked and then was transferred to the Salinas just before the Kearny was torpedoed. So far he is still one jump ahead of a torpedo.

'NEST':

Near Iceland

Somewhere south and west of Iceland it had become evident that Germany had established a big "nest" of submarines preying upon convoys, and apparently giving especial interest to American warships. What inroads this country's navy had been making on it was not re-vealed, the published "score" being totally in favor of Hitler, though the navy department had early announced that no successes against U-boats would be reported. The loss of the Reuben James, the navy said, entailed 95 casualties, all of the officers being missing as well as half of the enlisted men. Only two known dead, one survivor dying of his injuries and the other a body picked from the water, were reported.

Reports of the torpedoing of the destroyer were that the vessel was struck in the center and broke in two, the forward half sinking at once, and the afterpart going to the bottom a few minutes later. Evidently most of those saved were aft, and succeeded in picking up a few of those hurled into the ocean from the other part of the ship. The navy said:

"It is probable that the attack took place during darkness. From the terrific force of the explosion it curred in the forward section, al- state officials. from that part of the ship."

Latest incident was the torpedoing of the Salinas, navy tanker, in the same district where the others day? had occurred. The Salinas made port. The navy would not give details of her damage, but published no casualty list among the crew.

FOOD:

A rumor which had been worrying housewives-that the United States, in addition to seeking price control, would also start food control and rationing, was categorically denied by Donald Nelson, who said "I should know."

He is priorities director of the nation, and said that any rationing of any type of material, whether edible or not, would normally go through his office. That the matter had been considered, he denied, then showed his own awareness of the situation by stating that he had known that there would be shortages of certain foods, but that a rationing program had not been talked of.

Foods he mentioned were cheese. of which huge quantities are being sent to England, and salmon, which has been short for a good while, and which also is a favored lease-lend

DRUG: New Wonders

It was announced formally that gramicidin, new drug dug out of the soil three years ago by Dr. Rene DuBose, who had modestly declined any public claims for the medicine, and had given it out for testing to a dozen medical schools and hospitals, has turned out to be the wonder drug of the age-far more powerful in germ-killing than the now-famous "sulfa" drugs. Its potency is from 1,000 to 100,000 times as great as sulfanilamide, which has saved thousands of lives. One millionth-teaspoonful, or about the size of a drop of mist or fog, has been sufficient (of gramicidin) to protect a mouse from 10,000 lethal doses of pneumonia germs.

First reports of its use on humans came from two Boston university medical researchers, who told of curing ulcers in three weeks which had defied all drugs for 15 years; of curing a chest infection which is almost 100 per cent fatal ordinarily.

LA GUARDIA:

Fiorello H. LaGuardia, two-term mayor of the nation's biggest city, had won election to a third term by a somewhat smaller majority than before, but facing the opposition of practically every leading Democratic candidate with the exception of the President himself.

The only effect of all this opposition was to cut LaGuardia's plurality somewhat. But he won handily, by more than 133,000 votes. Of the five buroughs he lost two but won the any other flag.

Agriculture Has a Role In Post-War Planning

Government Gives Serious Consideration to Problems of the Farmer When 'Reconstruction' Period Begins.

By BAUKHAGE

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N-W, Washington, D. C.

The people of the United States, through their representatives in Washington, have just begun spending another six billion dollars for tanks, guns, shells, and ships. When these products are used up for the purpose for which they are produced, what will the world have to show for it? Just what the farmer has when he is done fighting a blitz of grasshoppers, beetles or other varmints—a lot of ruined property and a lot of dead things to bury, burn, or plow under-the result of wholesale destruction.

But along with all this spending to kill and destroy, the nation is also planning to build and create. Currently thousands of Americans are gathering in state capitals, county seats and rural communities to talk over some brass-tack ideas for reconstruction after destruction. Post-war planning, it's called.

"We visualize a post-war world," says Secretary of Agriculture Wickard, "in which we will make full use of our manpower and our resources for the benefit of the American people.

That's a nice visualization. What's being done to make the vision real? The National Resources Planning board in Washington is centralizing post-defense planning efforts, not A Message only of the federal government but of the country as a whole. In September Secretary Wickard set up an inter-bureau committee in the department of agriculture on postdefense problems to help work out some of these plans. The committee has three jobs:

1. Keeping in touch with and making what contribution it can to the developments that affect the national economy as a whole. 2. Developing rural works programs in the capital improvement field. (That means improving the farmer's "plant.")

3. Developing publicly sponsored programs of rural welfare ("serv-

Mediums of Action

How does this committee get action? Through state and local landuse planning committees already set up, with the co-operation of department field representatives. These are state committees, county committees and committees of is a possibility that the magazine neighborhood groups. The latter exploded. It is a probability that are made up of farmers; the others the majority of the casualties oc- are mixed farmers and federal and the American farmer has to face in the post-war world as the department of agriculture sees them to-

First, there is likely to be a great demand for foodstuffs as the United States feeds a starving Europe after the war.

Secondly, there will be an effect on the domestic market when military service and defense work ends, for the farmer's income swells and shrinks in direct proportion to the size of the employee's pay envelope. Of course, every effort will be made to create jobs on public works projects while industry is changing over from defense to civilian production. But it is freely admitted that the tremendous defense effort in the industrial world cannot be duplicated by "made" work. Therefore, the emphasis in planning is to be placed on jobs that will produce jobs, and agriculture must expand to carry its share of the effort, say the planners.

Rural Works' Program

The first job which the department of agriculture is concerned with right now under "capital improvement" is a rural works program which will provide work in rural areas to improve the farmer's physical plant. And that is what the committees are now considering-"rural housing." When these committees have studied the question and given their suggestions, they will be reported back to the inter-bureau committee and the department will build its policy under the influence of these suggestions. Then the department will report to the National Resources Planning board which in turn will submit its program to congress whose duty it is to carry out the wishes of the

Many of the suggestions which the inter-bureau committee is throwing out for consideration are not new. Under the head of improving the farm plant, and back of it the resources on which the plant has to draw-are the well-known activities in soil conservation, flood control, water development. Many of these activities are now being carried on but, says Secretary Wickard, "not on a scale commensurate with the

These are the things that can be done. The defense effort has demonstrated here, as it has in England, that the United States has today a potential national income much greater than ever achieved before. It is stimulated by the forced creation of destructive products. There is no reason why the resources of this vast and rich nation cannot be utilized to create just as large an income derived from constructive endeavor whose benefits can be shared by all.

If it is not, then we servants of democracy have buried our talents and we may as well get ready to be banished, along with another certain "wicked and slothful servant," into outer darkness where, it is said on excellent authority, there will be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

The other day my boss handed me note from Hitler. Not, of course, of the fuehrer himself, but just a little reminder of what the Nazi Number One was doing to me.

As I scanned the formal note a picture came before me. I shall never forget it—but when I see it in my mind's eye I see it always like a scene from some exotic play-no part of the world in which we live. It is the picture of a little man, pale, determined, wearing a field gray tunic. He stands on a platform, his hands grasping a lectern, against a gaudy background of brilliant uniforms and red-the high priests of Nazidom. Before him is a sea of brown—the members of the puppet parliament.

"And I shall not take off this uniform" (or words to that effect), he is saying, "until victory . Hitler, it was, addressing the Reichstag on that day in 1939 when he launched his legions into Poland and started the war. But how could

Carrier Pigeon Useful in Emergencies

In a world where aviation has developed so rapidly that a plane is often obsolete before its construction can be finished, one type of flier, which is the oldest of all, remains supreme in its field. The carrier pigeon is still considered the best means of emergency communica-

Recently a new set of these feathered recruits started training for service with bombers at Mac-Dill, Fla. They are expected to prove useful in case of emergency landings-that is, if the pigeon can be released unscathed with a message it could guide rescuers to the scene of the crash. The officer who is training them is Lieut. Thomas Fulton. He is the man who received the message, borne by a pigeon, which caused the rescue of the famous Lost Battalion in the Argonne forest in the last war.

When the birds now training are grown they will be able to fly 60 miles per hour and keep it up for Thus the democratic cycle is 600 to 700 miles a day without land-

A "blue sky law" is a law enacted to provide for the regulation and supervision of the sale of stocks, bonds or other securities, so as to protect the public against such as petus are obviously unsound or as do not meet certain standards. MOST ACCIDENTS

IN YOUR BEDROOM

More serious accidents occur in your homes than or the highways and, still harder to believe-the bedroom is the most dangerous place in

Mothers worry about their children being injured on the highways while traveling to and from school, yet it is a fact that four times as many boys and girls are seriously hurt at home.

The most frequent of fatal accidents for children under 15 years of age were burns and scalds. For those in the 25-64 age range, falls were the cause of nearly one-third of the deaths and in the older age group they were responsible for 75 per cent of the fatal accidents. Between them, burns and falls cause two-thirds of the accidental deaths in the homes.

Of these deaths, 27 per cent occur in the bedroom; 14 per cent in the living room; 13 per cent in the kitchen; 9 per cent on stairways; 7 per cent in the dining room; and 4 per cent in the bathroom. Other places in the home account for 3 per cent while only 23 per cent of these accidents occur on the grounds and outside of the house.

A good deal is written about the danger of scalds and burns and of deaths from poisonous gases, especially carbon monoxide gas from automobile motors, but not nearly as much as about highway accidents. Perhaps one reason for this is that all automobile accidents are listed together whether they be those occurring at railroad crossings, at highway intersections, between intersections on highways, or jaywalking or those caused by children running in front of slow moving cars. On the other hand home accidents are written separately, printed in various sections of the newspapers and, consequently, are not so noticeable.
