Completing Plans For Parish Fall Festival

Regular meetings are being held by the various committees, who are working hard to complete plans and make arrangements to show everyone a real enjoyable time at the big fall festival to be sponsored by Holy Trinity congregation in the parish school hall on Sunday afternoon and evening, Dec. 14. The party begins at 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

A large number of postcards were printed in this office the past week containing an invitation to the festival. These cards are for distribution by the parishoners. The cards will be placed in the rear vestibule of the church Sunday morning and members of the congregation will be asked to help themselves to as many cards as they can make use of and mail them out to members of their family, relatives and friends out of town. A blank line has been left on the cards for the sender's signature. Posters announcing the event were also printed and have been distributed.

There will be all sorts of entertainment for young and old, including bingo and other games of amusement. Lunch and refreshments of all kinds will be served. In the evening at 10:30 o'clock a drawing will be held for the awarding of 49 valuable cash and merchandise prizes, donated by the businessmen of the village. Tickets for the prizes are being sold in advance by all members of the parish. Nearly 10,000 tickets were issued to the parishoners and most of these already are sold. Tickets will also be sold on the day of the festival. One member of the church alone has sold in the vicinity of 90 books or a total of 2,080 tickets. Although most of the stubs have not yet been returned, over $300 has already been turned in. Those with tickets are requested to turn them in before Dec. 14. A list of the prizes will be published next week.

All members of the congregation are donating toward the affair. Due to limited facilities no dinner will be served. A beautiful quilt made by members of the St. Theresa's sodality will be raffled off. Chances are being sold by the members and the quilt is on display in the show window of Miller's Main street furniture store.

71 Cars of Sugar Beets Shipped Here is Record

The harvesting and hauling of the annual crop of sugar beets grown in this community was completed last week after going ahead for the past five weeks. The beets were hauled to Kewaskum where they were loaded into freight cars on the local conveyor and shipped to the Menominee Beet company in Michigan. Shipping began on Oct. 22.

A new high of 71 carloads of beets were shipped out of the village, topping last year's record of 62 cars by 9. Each car contained approximately 42 tons of beets, making a total of 2,982 tons shipped. Each year the amount of beets grown locally increases as more farmers turn to this source of income. The production of beets under the supervision of Ervin Schmitt, fieldman for the Menominee Beet company. Work on the beets from their time of planting to harvesting is done mostly by Mexicans, who with their families migrate to this section of the country each summer. This territory is one of the leading sugar beet districts in the state.

Beet harvesting was delayed this year due to the heavy rains of the fall season. Being grown mostly on lowland, many fields of beets were under water until recently when colder weather arrived. The heavy rains increased the weight of the beets which were quite a bit larger in proportion than usual but the yield of sugar for each ton was 20 pounds a ton less. This in some degree offsets the record breaking crop. Sugar beet production increased by 30 per cent this year, the beets running 13 tons an acre as compared to slightly over 11 last year.

Sisal—'Good Neighbor' Product

Sisal, the fiber made from the henequen plant of Yucatan, touches upon the life of every American. For most wrapping twine around the mail or express package we get is sisal-made. And the bread we eat was made from flour made from wheat bound up in the field with sisal twine, for American farmers have never found an acceptable substitute. War, with its increased demand for wire and steel products, has forced twine and rope into new roles of importance, thus creating for sisal the greatest demand in history.

A big ship unloads 10,000 bales of Yucatan's "green gold," as sisal is known, in the Port of New Orleans, to be converted into binder twine for the nation's "breadbasket."

Left: A bale of sisal has just been opened in a New Orleans rope factory, and the strands are being fed into a breaker machine. Right: These long, golden strands are about to become yarn.

This machine is a preliminary processor, which cards out the fibers and lays them parallel to each other.

Now in yarn form, rolled on bobbins, the sisal is being spun into a small ball of rope by the girl at the machine.

Encourage strong root growth, so that plants will not be easily uprooted. Dig deep and make a good soil bed, so that roots will spread down and out, making an anchor against the wind. Give deep and thorough soakings, especially in areas that call for almost daily summer watering. Remember that light sprinklings make for surface root-growth and that shallow roots make for plant heaving when the high winds come.

Light-Door Equipment
This hardware operates the door easily and it is only necessary to turn the latch handle, pull lightly and let go and the door will rise to a full overhead position on its own power.

There had been a burglary, and a detective had been sent to investigate.
"H'm," he murmured, after he had been around the house and asked a few questions. "Looks to me like an inside job. The burglar evidently knew just where to find everything."

THE TWITCHELLS
There is trouble in the home of the Elmer Twitchells.
Ceiling trouble.

Elmer is establishing ceilings. Not that there haven't been ceilings in the Twitchell residence. The issue just now is a different kind of ceiling. The Washington kind. The prevailing type.

Elmer is trying to put a ceiling on Mrs. Twitchell's hats, for instance. (We heard that crack about them being funny enough as is.) He wants the ceiling established at two hats per season, a drop of about eight. And he thinks there should be a price ceiling too; somewhere around $3.50.

Elmer is for a fur coat ceiling, too, but the crisis hasn't arisen this season, because Mrs. Twitchell got a new coat last winter. She got it wholesale at above twice what it would have cost elsewhere.

And he thinks there should be a ceiling on all the wife's expenditures. "I told her last night that there must be a ceiling on bridge losses," said Elmer today. "Every time she goes to one of them Tuesday Ladies Bridge parties she loses money on a pre-defense emergency level. Maybe the best way to solve this would be to put a ceiling on her bids."

He wants a ceiling on the wife's contributions to causes, also. "I am all for being charitable and fair," he explained, "and my heart is no mustard seed when it comes to reacting to the worthy appeals of today, and there has gotta be some limit. The old lady just subscribes to everything. Last week she put me down for $10 to the American Fund to Save Icelanders From American Army Slang. She ain't got no judgment. I've imposed a ceiling. Everything she subscribes above $4 a week is void."

"Me and the wife ain't speaking just now," confessed Mr. Twitchell. "Yeah, it's more ceiling trouble. Pin money ceiling. I used to give her $10 a week, but this is a time of crisis. The future is uncertain. Nobody can tell what may happen next in this world war. So I told her the new ceiling on pin money would be $7.50."
"What did she say?" we asked.
"What didn't she say!" exclaimed Elmer.
"Did you explain inflation to her?"
"No."
"Why not?"
"I don't even understand it myself," concluded Elmer.

The Journal of the American Medical Association reports that experiments at Harvard prove that women suffer from cold and heat more than men because they do not dress as warmly. This makes the opinion unanimous and presumably official. C. P. Yaglou and Anne Messer, who conducted the experiments had a group of men sit in an air-conditioned room in men's trousers and then change to women's lingerie. Then they had women go through a similar test. Nothing can convince us that the whole thing wasn't arranged by a couple of Yale men.

Washington, in its new tax proposals, may subscribe to the notion that it is impossible to get blood from a stone. But it thinks the idea is good.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

In bringing you buying information on prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and on the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy. It gives us the most precious thing in the world; the feeling of being adequately prepared.

When we go into a store, prepared with a list of what we want to buy, and an expert buyer, filled with well-earned confidence, it is a pleasant feeling to have the feeling of advantage. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. The world is full of people who are making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Vanished Men

By GEORGE MARSH

THE STORY SO FAR: Bound for the Wisconsin gold country, six men lost their lives on the Nottoway river. Red Malone, Garret Finlay, brother of one of the six, and Blaise, half-breed guide, were at Nottoway posing as surveyors.

There was the scuffling of moccasins in the trade-room below. "Sergeant," called McNab, in a voice full of excitement, "Who do you think is heading in here in that canoe?"

"It's Tete-Blanche, McNab, watch your step. Have David and his boy stand by, outside. We can't see much through these cracks."

"It's Jules Isadore!"

"Isadore?" The three in the left hand of the trade-room looked at each other. "Who's Jules Isadore?"

INSTALLMENT THIRTEEN

Suspicion prevails that Isadore, rich fur man has made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out of the country. En route to the Hudson's Bay post they visit Isadore in his palatial home, meet his wife and Lise, Isadore's stepdaughter.

treasure syndicate to locate our placer strike.

"To avoid a rush of prospectors in here we've never registered our claims. The minute we did that the lake would be over-run. But they've found out we ship gold to Montreal. So they're out to jump us. Of course he can make a map. He's a mining engineer."

Red's fingers closed on Finlay's arm as McNab exploded: "Well, I'll be skinned! A gunman! Killer! That's what he's here for! To locate your gold strike!"

"Exactly!"

The conversation below was approaching the boiling point for the three men rigid in the fur-loft.

"Well, I'm waiting for your proposition, Isadore."

"Just a minute until I give you the picture. Finlay's going back up the Waswanipi to hunt for our placer beds. And he's going to disappear. He'll either drown as the other men did, in that white-water, or the Montagnais will wipe out his party. When the police are sent in here to investigate, they'll blame me for losing control of my Indians and not notifying the authorities. They may even charge me with knowing too much about those men who were drowned!"

"All right! Where do I come in, Isadore?"

"You're going to say when they take your testimony that you know that the river is almost impassable water and you believe that the other parties and Finlay's men drowned. But to your knowledge the Indians went completely out of control this summer over this evil eye superstition; that your own Indians brought you rumors that the Waswanipi Montagnais were hunting for Finlay and the trader laughed, "You think I'm crazy, Isadore?" he blurted out, and Finlay was relieved. "Leave the police to me, man. I'll handle them. We're partners now, aren't we? You've cut me in on a bonanza! Don't worry about Duncan McNab!"

The two men left the trade-room bound for the shore. Shortly the put-put of the outboard motor drifted up from the lake. With a grunt of relief Red rolled over on his back and stretched his long arms as Blaise and Garry sat up.

"So it's placer gold on the Waswanipi he's covering up, after all! What a line of hokey he handed McNab! And did McNab do a job on him?"

"McNab's a genius," said Garry. Red chuckled: "When he told Isadore to put it in writing, I nearly bit my thumb off!"

"We may have use for that fake bill of sale, some day. Well, Blaise, how about it?"

"Kiputch!" Blaise grunted, regretfully. "We make a mistake to let that faller go! He hunt us all de more hard now he tink he got McNab in his pocket!"

"That's true! He'll make the lake hot for us, now, but we haven't got the evidence I want, yet. What puzzles me, Red, is this plane from the Bay. It doesn't fit into the picture."

"No, it doesn't. And I don't savvy why Wabistan has never heard of them working the sand-bars."

"It's a long river and the Indians avoid it. That may be the answer." McNab found his guests waiting in the trade-room. "Well, how was that?" the Scotchman chuckled.

"McNab, you'd have made a great actor! It was perfect!" Finlay grasped the trader's hand.

"A fifth interest in Waswanipi Gold, when issued!" exploded McNab. "He must think I'm a numbskull to swallow that. It'll never be issued. If he gets out of this scrape, all he has to do is incorporate under another name and McNab holds the bag. It took will power, Sergeant, not to smash that sneering face of his. He forgot I'm Scotch."

"So am I," Garry laughed. "But Isadore's badly worried. He knows he'll need your help with the police. After you'd given him a hand, though, he'd have Tete-Blanche murder you. It was a sweet job you did. If we get out of this, I'll see your company hears of it."

"Anyhow, I'm richer by a thousand dollars, if it's not counterfeit." "That's also evidence we may use," said Garry. "Well, if this storm blows over, we're going to paddle all night, so we'll say good-by."

Red lingered behind as Garry and Blaise left the room. "I want a word with you, Mr McNab, before we go," he said. The trader stared curiously into Red's candid, blue eyes. "Well, constable, what's on your mind?"

"Thistle!" "What, you've only known her since yesterday?"

"That's true," Malone's eyes were dark with the intensity of his feeling. "But it didn't take us long to find out. I just want to tell you that I'm coming back here. She'll be waiting for me."

McNab's bushy brows pulled down over his searching eyes as he studied Malone's bronzed face, shot with freckles. "I didn't realize—you two—"

"It seems sudden, I know. I've never believed in it. But it's true. Thistle and I knew last night that it was—that way with us. I love her, and don't fear. I'll come back through hell for her!"

Finlay's elbow found Malone's ribs. There spoke the true Scot. "Get him on paper, McNab!" Garry breathed. "We'll use that some day—we live!"

"Ah—yes, of course," Isadore assented. "Give me a pen and paper."

Shortly the men in the loft heard McNab read aloud:

"For value received and in consideration of his future services I, Jules Isadore, President of Waswanipi Gold, Limited, of Montreal, hereby bargain, sell and assign one thousand shares of the common stock of said company, when issued, to Duncan McNab, now of Matagami Lake.

"Waswanipi Gold, Limited
"By Jules Isadore,
"President."

"How's that, McNab?"

"Fine! And it's mighty generous of you, Isadore. I'll never forget it."

There was the sound of voices outside the trade-house. The door creaked on its hinges.

"What's the matter, Labelle?" asked Isadore.

"Comin' on to blow, soon! Beeg wind cloud en sou'-wes'! We gotta start to camp at de inlet."

"All right, I'll be with you in a minute!"

The men left the trade-house. "McNab," said Isadore, pushing back his chair, "you're a shrewd man and know where your bread's buttered. Stick with me and I'll make you rich!" The ice suddenly returned to Isadore's voice. "But if you change your mind—if the police scare you and you double-cross me, you won't live long! Understand me, McNab?" Isadore snapped his fingers. "You'll disappear like that!"

The room below was packed with silence. Finlay could hear McNab's breath sough through his teeth as he breathed. It was hard medicine for the stiff-necked Scotchman to take. Would he lose his head?

But the trader laughed, "You think I'm crazy, Isadore?" he blurted out, and Finlay was relieved. "Leave the police to me, man. I'll handle them. We're partners now, aren't we? You've cut me in on a bonanza! Don't worry about Duncan McNab!"

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

by Roger B. Whitman
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Rough Concrete Floor.
A CONCRETE floor of a cellar is usually laid with no special smoothing of the surface, and may be too rough for dancing. One way to smooth it is to have it ground down with a floor machine, such as is used for finishing terrazzo floors. The job can be done by a flooring contractor at no great cost; his only charge will be for time. It is sometimes thought that the same effect can be had by laying a surface of concrete over the old floor. This is possible only under certain conditions, however. Concrete is not sticky, and a new layer will not bond on top of an old one without making special preparation. To secure a bond between the two, the surface of the old concrete must be roughened by gouging with a cold chisel or a pointed hammer. New concrete in hardening will then become attached to the old, and the two will become practically one. Before laying the new concrete, the old floor must be thoroughly soaked with water, and as soon as the surface hardens, it must be wet with water and kept wet for several days. This can be done by covering it with a layer of sand, or with old burlap bags that are frequently sprinkled. In this continued dampness the cement will "cure" and attain full density, whereas if it dries out too quickly the coating will be soft and powdery.

Drying Out a Cellar.
Being in contact with the earth, the walls and floor of a cellar will remain at about the same unchanging temperature. In humid weather the masonry will be cooler than the air, and condensation will take place on it as warm and damp air is chilled by the contact. Condensation will often be so heavy that pools of water may collect on the floor. This can sometimes be overcome by running a low fire in the heater. Another method is ventilation. For this, opening the cellar windows may not serve, for being in the upper parts of the walls, drafts through them do not disturb the mass of damp air lying on the floor. To get the air circulation that is needed, an electric fan can be placed at one end of the cellar, blowing along the floor toward open windows at the other end. This should be done on dry days. In humid weather, and at night, cellar windows should be kept closed to keep out damp air.

Calcium chloride is excellent for the drying of cellar dampness due to condensation, using it according to the method that I described in this column recently.

House Insulation.
Question: My attic is open, and has no floor; entrance is through a trap-door. If I put rock wool between the rafters, what would happen should the roof leak? How can it be kept from absorbing moisture from the house air? Should the attic be ventilated? If I cut holes in the ceilings of the rooms below, would heat pass to the attic and make the rooms cooler?

Answer: For an open attic insulation is best placed between the rafters. Rock wool should be laid in four inches thick covered with paper to keep out dust. If you cut boards between the rafters, there should be continuous ventilation all summer. Holes in the ceilings would not be practical.

Bulged Glass Panels.
Question: I have a number of art glass panels in doors and windows that have become bulged. Can they be flattened without removing them from the frames?

Answer: You will probably find that the panels will come out without difficulty, which would be the best thing to do. If you cut boards between the rafters, there should be continuous ventilation all summer. Holes in the ceilings would not be practical.

Termites.
Question: We have found termites in our house, and are at a loss what to do. What can you suggest?

Answer: There is far more to be said about termite control than I have room for in this column. Write for information to the U. S. department of agriculture, Washington, and to the department of agriculture of your own state.

Clothes Moths.
A careful housewife should not overlook the fact that while moths are at their worst in spring time, there is likely to be a second crop during the late summer. For this reason, wool clothes and furs that have been stored should be checked over and more moth crystals and moth flakes should be added to make up for evaporation.

Sand for Insulation.
Question: I own a cottage at the seashore and have been told that I can get good insulation by filling the spaces between clapboards and wallboards with beach sand. Have you any faith in that?

Answer: Not the slightest. Salt in beach sand would absorb moisture from the air, which would give trouble. Even sand that was not salty should not be used, for its weight would bulge the clapboards and the wallboard. I should not consider such a thing.

Cigarettes and smoking tobacco have moved rapidly to the forefront as ideal Christmas gifts with Camels as America's favorite cigarette and Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco, well to the fore. The beauty of these gifts for smokers lies in the fact that their cost is modest and their welcome always assured. Local dealers have been featuring Camels in the carton of ten packs of "20's" and a special gift of four "flat fifties." Prince Albert is available in the humidifier specially wrapped for Christmas giving.—Adv.

Smile Awhile

Conceited?
"What are you thinking about?"
"Nothing."
"Oh, thinking about yourself as usual."

Some girls rather like the strong, silent man—especially when his money does the talking.

Choice Spot
Jackie—Oh, Dad, I've got the best seat in the classroom.
Dad—That's great—where is it?
Jackie—Next to the radiator.

The Young Idea
There's more than meets the eye in this story of a youngster who, having learned to read during the last year, is now keenly interested in the newspaper headlines.
"Mummy," he asked, "did they have newspapers before the war?"
"Of course, dear."
"With what in?"

The Source
Native—That fellow Hewitt has a big net income.
Visitor—What is his business?
Native—Catching fish.

Even kisses are divided into two classes—the drys and the wets.

Slowed Up
"How old are you?"
"Just passed twenty-seven."
"What detained you?"

Telling Him
"Nothing but the law makes me keep my hands off you."
"Nothing but the law makes me keep your hands off a lot of things."

That's Two
"Willie, what is the plural of man?"
"Men."
"And the plural of child?"
"Twins!"

Liquid Sand
Silver sand is believed to be the only dry matter that behaves like a liquid. Any object that sinks in water, such as a bullet, will likewise sink in this peculiar sand.

EVERY TIME. THEY'RE EXTRA MILD AND THEY'VE GOT THE FLAVOR THAT ALWAYS HITS THE SPOT

THE SMOKE OF SLOWER-BURNING CAMELS CONTAINS 28% LESS NICOTINE than the average of the 4 other largest-selling cigarettes tested—less than any of them—according to independent scientific tests of the smoke itself!

Nature has exemplified the tropical movements of October and November in 1877. December was mild enabling the farmers to cultivate the soil to perfect on. Spring grain was seeded in February. All seeding of grain was completed in March, 1888. Only 65 years ago farms were fenced and consisted of rails. No wire or steel posts were known in building fences. Then came the innumerable depth of snow in the blockade of 1891. The writer experienced those remarkable changes since September 3rd, 1887.

Mechanized Troops Fight On in Libya As Nazis Show New Power in Russia; Arming of American Merchant Ships Indicates Change in Convoy Plans

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.) (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Above photo shows the first United States merchant ship as it was being armed under permission granted by terms of the recent congressional revision of the neutrality. Armed merchants are now permitted to pass through war zone to belligerent ports. This picture was taken at a yard near New York city as the gun was being lifted to the ship shown in the background.

JAPAN: Formula

As a Tokyo war cabinet framed its reply to Secretary of State Cordell Hull's "peace" formula reports began coming in from Shanghai...

BRITISH: Libyan Push

Those who had expected a swift and continuous British victory in Libya, similar to the great push by General Wavell's army which swept the Italians back into Tripoli, were doomed to disappointment.

It was evident that there was plenty of fight in the German mechanized forces, even when apparently hopelessly trapped.

Yet Berlin had not been cheering over the situation. The British sweep at least temporarily had knocked the German-Italian formations back on their heels, and there was little evidence but that the Rommel army would be extremely fortunate to extricate itself from the trap even with heavy losses.

But there was also evidence that the British tanks, many of them American manufacture, were unable to cope on better than even terms with the German machines.

The battle, once the two armies had made actual contact, was confusing in the extreme, and it showed in sharply etched lines just how possible it is for very small groups of mechanized forces to throw much larger bodies of men into complete confusion.

A rather large South African contingent was so knocked out by a German mechanized attack, even within the so-called iron ring of the British that it was practically disbanded, though some parts of it were able later to attach themselves to the New Zealand forces.

Yet this very Nazi group which had accomplished the maneuver later was shot into hurried retreat and practical dismemberment by a smaller group of British tanks. It seemed that the element of surprise and speed counted for far more in modern warfare than did numbers of men or machines.

Chief favorable report from Libya on the British part was that all reinforcements sought to be brought up by the Germans had failed except those furnished by air.

There was considerable hope among the British that this factor might decide the battle, perhaps very swiftly. Some Nazi tanks were found immobilized because of lack of fuel, and there were reports that the Germans were forced to fly supplies to their men by transport planes towing gliders.

But the British losses admittedly had been heavy, and only a complete victory would be regarded as reward for the expenditures of men and material in the sudden and dramatic drive.

STRIKES:

The sudden end of the coal strike had been followed swiftly by the announcement that the threatened strike of the long-distance telephone operators also had been removed from the picture by a reported $3,000,000 pay increase.

That there was to be a new trend in the picture was seen when President Roosevelt called together majority and minority leaders in congress, and gave them the "green light" as far as anti-strike legislation was concerned.

The President made few suggestions, and those he did make were chiefly concerned with an enforced "cooling off" period before strikes in defense industry were to be initiated.

CONVOY: Changes

As reports began to come in of the arming of American merchantmen, and the belief grew that they would be sent direct into British waters, it was said that the whole relationship of the United States and the British on the convoy question in the Atlantic was to undergo a change.

There were no definite details as to what this change would involve other than it would be a more considerable taking over by this country of the whole problem of supply of lease-lend materials.

Considerable interest was evoked by the Harriman speech in London in which the American envoy said that the U. S. navy was "shooting German planes," though there had been no detailed reports of such engagements.

The general feeling was that before Christmas American ships would be going all the way to Britain, armed merchantmen, protected by the American navy to a point close to the British isles, and from there in convoyed by British naval vessels and British planes.

SEVEN: Join Nazis

Seven smaller European nations, most of them those regarded generally as more or less favorable to Axis domination of Europe, formally joined the new Axis anti-Comintern pact at a conference in Berlin which was spotlighted by Von Ribbentrop's claim that the Russian war "already had been won."

The remainder of the struggle, Von Ribbentrop said, was solely between the Axis powers and Britain, together with her transatlantic helpers.

He said: "If it should some day come to war on the one side between the United States of America and Europe and Asia on the other side, I state once and for all that the responsibility lies with President Roosevelt."

"Whether the United States comes into the war or not, it cannot alter the Axis victory."

RUSSIA: In a Bad Way

The Russians were being forced back on their heels in the Moscow territory by the German system of shifting their chief attack forces from one front to another, vastly complicating the Red's defense problems.

After a long attack which had been concentrated on the southern front, and during which the Soviet defense of Moscow had been carried on with such success that the Germans were reported on the retreat in many sectors, the Germans then suddenly smashed back at Moscow, and broke through the lines in several important districts.

The Russians were frankly worried again by the situation, and said that the weather, which had been a strong ally during the past weeks, had again turned more favorable to the attackers, who were taking the advantage to shove home bitter assaults all around Moscow.

At one point they had been reported within 30 miles of the city, and from at least four different sectors came dispatches telling of break-throughs by the Nazis.

The Red's southern armies, taking advantage of the forces thus shifted to the north, were on the counteroffensive, and were driving westward at a good clip, having made in one line a distance of about 120 miles.

But experience had shown that such advances by either side could be quickly lost again should the pressure change once more.

The Germans said, "We know that the Russians have had even more opportunity to mine Moscow than they did Kiev. The fate of the city therefore may be left to the imagination."

The Russians, defending step by step, did not have time to do any imagining. They reported that British and American tanks at last were in action on the front, and that their armies were still intact.

Casualties had been frightful, they admitted, passing the 2,000,000 mark.

Entering Protest

Mathew Wolf (left) and William Green, a vice president and president, respectively, of A.F.L., pictured as they called on President Roosevelt to protest against anti-strike legislation. Bristling with defiance, Green stated that A.F.L. has been co-operating with the defense program but that now it is in a position of being penalized for "acts of some irresponsible leaders" outside his organization—presumably a dig at the C.I.O.

COMMANDOS: Make Sortie

The British Commandos tipped in these columns as about to become active again, worked a sortie on the Normandy coast, and returned with only one man wounded.

British sources felt that the official recognition by the Germans of the attack made by the group was the best proof that at least some of its objectives had been accomplished.

What made the landing on the French coast particularly notable, however, was the issuance of a statement of sharp criticism against the British high command by a retired naval officer and hero of the last war, Admiral Keyes, founder and trainer of the Commandos.

He accused the staff of preventing the use of this body of men for several months when their use properly "might have changed the character of the entire war."

Also included was a brief description of the Commando which made the Normandy attack, men wearing black uniforms, their faces blacked with burnt cork, choosing a moonless night, armed with Tommy guns, Bren guns, knives and clubs, and sworn to achieve their objective no matter what the outcome.

They returned with only one man wounded slightly through the arm by a machine gun bullet. The Germans said they "had been repulsed with heavy losses."

EXPLOIT: By Nazis

Two Nazi armies will go down in history as two of the most daring and imaginative of prisoners of war.

Escaping from a British prison camp, they got British flying coats, copied the buttons by carving them from wood, and covering them with tinfoil, and had them sewed onto their under uniforms.

They then walked brazenly into a British airdrome, announced they had been assigned to bomb Dutch airports, got into a bomber and took off. Knowing they needed more fuel to get to their destination, they landed again 100 miles away and asked for gasoline.

Suspicious, airport attendants suggested they have a bath and a luncheon before taking off. The Nazis were reluctant to take off their clothing.

While they were in the bath their garments were examined and the false buttons discovered. They were arrested and sent back to the prison camp.

BULLITT: A New Job

William C. Bullitt, former ambassador to France, had been given a new and important assignment by the President, that of special envoy to the Libyan area, especially to study lease-lend needs.

The former ambassador's mission was to cover the entire Near East, including the Nile river area, the Red sea and possibly the Persian gulf.

The campaign in north Africa, President Roosevelt felt, is an important and severe testing ground for American-made arms, and the ultimate success of the effort there may depend on the rate at which replacements of damaged machines can be made.

The President was asked by the newsmen where Mr. Bullitt's headquarters would be, and where he could be reached. The President chuckled and said "In a plane."

Bullitt was to fly there and fly back and make his personal report on his observations to the President as soon as possible.

BRIEFS:

Paramaribo: American troops occupying Dutch Guiana in behalf of the government in exile, received a hearty and simple welcome. French press reports pointed to the incident as a forerunner of American attempts to occupy Dakar. The troops in Dutch Guiana were sent there to protect bauxite mines.

Chicago: Twenty-five hundred A. F. of L. freight haulers ended their strike here under terms of an agreement which gave them a 12 1/2 cent an hour pay increase.

Palo Alto, Calif.: A change in a mighty Pacific warm current of water has caused alarming changes in climate, notably in the Galapagos islands. This group has been changed from a bleak island desert into a steaming jungle of vegetation. Even dolphins are coming in from the sea to play in rainwater pools.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON (Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—On the bestowal end of the Maria Moors Cabot Latin-American Journalism award, recently presented, is the 80-year-old Dr. Godfrey Lowell Cabot of Boston, also a generous contributor to democratic enterprise.

For many years, he has been a steady ground-gainer against the disturbers and trouble-makers, not in the field of science and the humanities. He not only bankrolls progress, but helps it over the hurdle by his own resourcefulness and inventiveness—the true Yankee genius here.

South America ought to be particularly interested in Dr. Cabot's now successful and working scheme to bottle sunshine and keep it in the cellar, like jelly or preserves. His 1937 grant of $616,773 to Harvard university was a great help in storing solar energy and today, in Florida and other southern states, household hot-water rigs, fuelled by trapped sunshine are almost as common as oil burners up north.

The next year, Dr. Cabot gave a similar amount to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, for the same purpose. His many contributions to the useful arts of peace, including his enthusiastic co-operation with aviation, may well be put down as an antidote to war. He learned to fly a seaplane in his late years and invented a system by which a plane can pick up fuel in flight.

He attended M.I.T. two years, finished at Harvard in 1882 and, after leaving the foundation of his fortune manufacturing lamp black in Worthington, Pa., branched out in gases and carbides. He has always insisted that democracy, to survive, must plow a lot of its gains back into the business—which he steadily does. His Latin-American journalism awards are in honor of his late wife.

IN 1913, Carlos Davila covered murders and fires for El Mercurio of Santiago de Chile. He was a good reporter and told what happened, rather than what he thought ought to happen. Later, as president of Chile and ambassador to Washington, he maintained much of this same detachment.

One thing that he observed in 1936 was that the world was going to hell in a hand-basket unless there could be a successful collective "organization of peace." He also observed that it would be foolish to think that treaties would be an effective stopgap against the oncoming apocalypse. He was away out in front in urging bold affirmations and aggressive action, instead of pacifistic negotiations as the survival technique of democracy—in which he is a fervent believer.

One of the four Latin-American recipients of the Maria Moors Cabot prize in journalism, Dr. Davila has exemplified his faith in a militant and crusading democracy, which faith he expounds in the public functions attending the prize award. As editor of the Editors Press service, he is possibly the most important journalistic liaison in the new cultural and to a degree, political entente between North and South America.

After becoming editor-in-chief of La Nacion, he came to Washington as ambassador, in 1928 at the age of 34. He became president of Chile in 1932, in a period of political upheaval, helped incline his country to its present liberal trend and landed back in the United States where his daughters were educated and which he considers the world's hope for democratic leadership. It is doubtful whether we have in South America any U. S. A. citizen who can match Dr. Davila's penetration of the mind and institutions of another country.

Living in New York off and on for quite a few years now, he mixes around casually, knows a lot of people, speaks quite a lot of our idiom and demonstrates hemisphere solidarity in his small, compact, alert person as few North or South Americans have ever done.

Bombs and bullets were sometimes an obligato to his rapid rise in Chilean statesmanship. He helped build the Chilean state and knows that democracy is not easily come by. He says we were soft, but are toughening up and getting back our "crusading spirit and stoic fiber."

DR. BERNARD GLUECK, distinguished American psychiatrist, addressing the annual meeting of the National Committee for Mental Hygiene, in New York, urges a "psychological counter-offensive" against Germany's psychological war. He would have a large scale mobilization of psychological techniques against "the nascent Hitlerisms and Quislingisms of our own nature." That fits in with the work of the National Psychological Re-armament committee. Dr. Glueck is a lecturer and author.

Serious Labor Situation Hinders Defense Effort

Members of Congress Also Demanding Facts On Charges That Big Business Plays Favorites in Defense Contracts.

By BAUKHAGE National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

The explosion in the defense set-up in Washington foreshadowed in these columns two weeks ago is about to take place. At least, if this is written, the fuse is being laid if not lighted. Senator O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Representative Coffey of Washington are both demanding facts connected with charges that big business is playing favorites in the defense contracts.

But an equally amazing story lies behind the labor has been dealt with in the defense program. Part of the facts have leaked out piecemeal, some are still very much under cover. Put together they make an amazing revelation of what was behind the President's delay in taking action in the captive mine strike and also how bungling all along the line forced the administration into the worst labor situation that has arisen since the defense program started.

The trouble began when it was decided to take the settlement of certain labor disputes out of the United States Conciliation Service and place it in the hands of the Defense Advisory commission with branches headed by William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman. Up to that time from 95 to 98 per cent of the labor disputes were settled by the Conciliation service. But the remaining 2 to 3 per cent were slowing down defense and it was decided that Mr. Knudsen's staff representing labor could settle the labor industry and Mr. Hillman's staff representing labor could settle the labor industry and Hillman's on labor. But it didn't work that way. Each favored his own kind.

So the National Defense Mediation board was founded. All went along smoothly for awhile, although more and more criticism was heard that the board was exceedingly pro-labor and achieved settlements by the simple process of conceding to labor's demands.

Then the board made a mistake. It handed down one decision which opened the way for the United Mine Workers union shop demands which smashed the board, threatened the administration's foreign policy and created the worst labor crisis that the country has faced in many a long day.

The decision I refer to was in the case of the Bethlehem shipbuilding plant in San Francisco. The A. F. of L. union demanded a union shop, that is, that any man working for the company a certain period would have to join the union. The board granted this demand, thus forcing 20 per cent of the plant's non-union workers to join the A. F. of L. One member of the board, Cyrus Ching, representing industry, held out against the decision. He foresaw that it would create a precedent. When the decision was announced it was stated that it should not be taken as a precedent. This pious statement was like giving the baby a piece of candy "if he won't ask for another."

Once the A. F. of L. had received this concession the C.I.O. stepped up and said: "I want one, too." The result was the famous Federal Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company case of Kearny, N. J., this time a shipyard on the East coast. Against the vote of the members of the National Mediation board representing industry, the union was given "maintenance - of - membership" which is a diluted union shop. The company refused to accept the decision and the navy took over.

Another precedent. Here was another precedent, whether the board meant it or not. And it didn't take long for John Lewis to take advantage of it and put in his demand for the union shop in the captive coal mines. If he had planned it that way he could not have been provided a better opportunity to vent his ancient grievance against the President and set himself right in the middle of a national issue.

If the case of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding workers was good, Lewis' was far better. C.I.O. has a 95 per cent membership in the captive coal mines. But not the kind of a 95 per cent that most people think it. Not 5 per cent non-union workers scattered here and there in all the mines. But full 100 per cent membership in many mines and none perhaps in a very few small ones. The National Defense Mediation board voted down Mr. Lewis' demand for a union shop and pandora's box flew open. One of the things that emerged was a highly paradoxical and highly painful situation. For the board, by taking this rare anti-labor step, had virtually left the operators in the position that if they had yielded in the later negotiations they would be in the position of supporting Lewis against the government. Still the situation might have been saved if something had not happened when the President called the operators and Lewis and Secretary-Treasurer Kennedy of the United Mine Workers to the White House.

When the men came in the President did what his labor advisors hoped he would. He made a brief appeal to both sides to get together and settle the question, since a strike must be avoided. If he had stopped there all might have been well. But he went on and said what Lewis felt was prejudicial to his case. This not only woke all the smoldering anger in the breast of John Lewis but when the committee of 200 C.I.O. advisors heard about it they were just as mad. His feeling was reflected when he turned down the President's later proposals.

President on the Spot And the President was on the spot. Congress was insisting on strike legislation. Speaker Sam Rayburn had promised it. Others were demanding that the troops be sent into the captive mines at once. That, wiser heads who knew the temper of the miners believed, would mean a strike in all the mines and the army would have to beat its bayonets into pickaxes.

So the President paused, wrote a conciliatory letter to both parties. Meanwhile, congress could stew but the President was pretty sure that its members would not take the initiative of alienating the labor vote with primaries coming up in the spring and elections next fall. The prospective candidates for reelection wanted the onus to be placed squarely on him.

Whether the Conciliation service could have handled the captive mine strike as it is still handling the other 98 per cent of the cases of labor disputes no one can say. But it is clear that it was mishandled by the Mediation board and it is likewise clear that if critical congressmen finally crack down on Mr. Knudsen's dollar-a-year men for showing favors to business they have plenty of grounds for cracking down on Mr. Hillman's stalwarts who created the pattern of labor partisanship that came near severely injuring not only the defense program but the administration's foreign policy as well.

A Rip-Snortin' Texan Comes to Washington Another Texan has come to Washington and the moment of his arrival was an historic one. We have had a lot of rip-snortin', ringtailed wildcats from all parts of the country, some human, and some not quite. Now we have something that will make even the Texas delegation in congress sit up and take notice, for this unwilling delegate from the Lone Star State is the wildest of them all.

He is a Texas long-horn. A steer with an eight-foot spread of horn. He is 12 years old. He weighs 1,200 pounds and he is admittedly wilder than anything in the zoo where he has been given the place of honor—right up near the entrance.

Most people do not know that the Texas long-horn is rarer than the buffalo which he once displaced on the Texas plains. He is a direct descendant from the wild cattle which the Spaniards brought to America when they came. Those cattle could walk endless miles to water. They were bred and developed to meet conditions that existed a hundred years ago in the great Southwest. Then water was piped and ditched into the great ranches and the fatter, easier going Herefords were introduced. The long-horn had the muscles and the endurance but he did have the meat, so he began to disappear.

George Stimpson, a Washington correspondent from the Middle West, who is also a correspondent for Texas papers and a keen devotee of America's flora and fauna, started out three years ago to get a Texas long-horn for the Washington zoo.

He had his troubles. He simply could not get hold of a real, simon-pure long-horn. There were semi-domesticated beasts but none of the real, wild-eyed, rip-roaring variety that have made the long-horn as much a symbol of America as the eagle itself.

Finally, after three years' effort, he went to Wright Patman, chairman of the Texas delegation and a real go-getter. Patman got to work. He put the screws on the Texas Cattle association. He said, "get me a steer."

And so at last, Tom East, brother-in-law of Representative Kelburg of King Ranch fame, who is a rancher himself, spotted the animal. He reported to Stimpson. Stimpson passed the word on to Curator Dr. William M. Mann of the National Zoological park. He was delighted.

HARPIST ENTERTAINS

On Monday, Dec. 1, George Lyons, noted harpist, vocalist and song writer, entertained the student body of the Kewaskum High school. Mr. Lyons has been starred on the radio programs of well known actors and orchestra leaders such as Rudy Vallee, Paul Whiteman and Jack Hylton. He played both classical and swing music on the harp.

The harp which Mr. Lyons demonstrated his talented ability cost him $2,500 when he purchased it. This shows that knowing how to play a harp is not a very common practice.

Mr. Lyons also played and sang the song that he wrote and which he popularized in 1922—"Why Should I Cry Over You."

The program proved to be very successful and was enjoyed by everyone who saw and heard it.

High Cagers Nosed Out Again in Last Seconds

In their second Tri-County conference game at Lomira Friday evening Kewaskum High school's basketball team again was edged out in the last few seconds of play, the score being 17 to 16. Kewaskum led 16-15 in the last minute of the thriller, only to lose when Muehlus, Lomira's fine guard, sank a basket just before the horn ended the contest. In the team's first game here the week before, they lost an equally tight game to North Fond du Lac, 32-29. This battle was also lost on a last minute bucket.

The setback dropped Kewaskum to the bottom of the heap in the loop and gained a first place tie with Rosendale for Lomira. Both teams won their first two games. Lomira trounced Campbellsport last week. Rosendale easily defeated Oakfield last week and on Tuesday upset the big North Fond du Lac Engineers on their home court in handy fashion by a 36-23 score. The first two games showed that six of the seven teams in the conference are strong and well matched with Rosendale looming as the strongest. Lomira and North Fondy also are strong contenders with Brandon. Campbellsport and Kewaskum right at their heels. Anything may happen before the season ends and all of the teams have a chance with the possible exception of Oakfield.

In the nip-and-tuck affair at Lomira the Kums trailed at the half 10-5. The lead changed many times, especially in the last quarter and the last hectic minutes of the game. G. Muehlus, who dropped in the winning points, was high scorer in the tight game with 12 points. Tessar and Brauchle each made 5 points for the losers. As in the North Fondy game, Kewaskum again lost Brauchle on personals.

In the preliminary of the Kewaskum B's tipped Lomira's B's 12-11 in a game as close as the varsity battle. O. Petermann made 9 points for the locals.

Kewaskum has its busiest week of the campaign in the next week with 3 games in 8 days. Friday night Brandon played on the local floor and next week the boys leave twice, going to Campbellsport Tuesday, Dec. 9, and Rosendale Friday, Dec. 12.
