

Miller Furniture Store Destroyed in $12,000 to $15,000 Night Fire

Friday One of Worst in Village History; Store, Living Quarters, Huge Stock Ruined

Mrs. Miller, Sr. Escape in Clothes; Hose Lines Block
for Two Miles; 140,000
Gallons of Water Poured On in Sub-Zero Weather

The most disastrous fire in the history of the village, and the largest since the big Kewaskum Mill company blaze about 32 years ago, was caused by a fire which broke out in the Miller furniture store and living quarters on Friday night and early Saturday morning. The fire, which was of undetermined cause, destroyed the Miller furniture store, the living quarters, and a large amount of stock. The fire was the most stubborn fire they have ever had.

The flames spread rapidly toward the front of the store, and up through the second floor and roof. When the fire reached the front of the building the plate glass front windows blew out, covering the sidewalk and one side of Highway 55, the main traffic artery through town, with broken glass. The store is nestled between the L. Rosenheimer department store and Rex Garage. When the blazing inferno shot out of the store front, the flames threatened to reach the gasoline pumps in front of the garage next door. At this danger point many of the hundreds of spectators who gathered at the scene retreated to a safer position as the firemen rushed back the flames. The fire broke out strongly on the roof at the rear of the building and with the streams of water, the firemen pushed the flames toward the front of the structure to protect the new portion of the store in back of the part ablate.

SUFFER FROM COLD

The firemen poured between 130,000 and 140,000 gallons of water on the store, enough to supply the entire village population with water for a month. Although the fire kept breaking out throughout the building, the firemen, handicapped by a below zero temperature, had the blaze under control in about an hour. The intense cold rapidly turned water into ice, which coated walks and streets with ice, making fire fighting very hazardous. The next day snowdrifts, winds, streets and the building itself were coated with a layer of ice an inch or two thick and the wreckage presented the appearance of a huge mass of ice. The uniforms of the firemen and clothing of others engaged in fighting the fire were also frozen stiff and icicles dangled from the apparel worn. Due to the seriousness of the fire and help needed by the firemen, many spectators took hold and assisted where needed.

TRAFFIC TIED UP

The fire and lines of hose across the highway held up traffic on Highway 55 for hours. Scores of transportation trucks and cars were held up for a distance of nearly a mile, both north and south of the village. The Greyhound bus was also delayed and was rerouted through the rear of the Walter Schneider and Rosenheimer store property and side streets in the Rosenheimer addition. A couple of hours later all traffic was rerouted and Washington county traffic police and volunteers directed travel.

Arthur Koch, President of A. G. Koch Firm, Business Leader Dies

Eminent in Public and Civil Life, He Was Bank Director, Insurance Co. Treasurer, Lodge Member, Formerly Public Official, Postmaster and School Board Member

Arthur W. Koch, a leading business man of this village, and prominently known in this section of the state, peacefully passed away at 6:45 p. m. Tuesday, Jan. 6, at St. Joseph's hospital in Milwaukee, following an illness of a year and a half with a heart ailment. He had been confined at the hospital since Christmas, where he was taken when his illness became serious. Mr. Koch was severely injured in an automobile accident last July and was confined to the hospital for some time then.

At the time of his death Mr. Koch was president of A. G. Koch, Inc., general store in Kewaskum, which firm also conducts a farm machinery and fuel business, elevator and mill. He was a director of the Bank of Kewaskum and treasurer of the Kewaskum Mutual Fire Insurance company. Formerly he was a member of the village board and served several terms as a public official in village offices. Besides the above mentioned, Mr. Koch was postmaster and assistant postmaster of Kewaskum for many years and also served as a member of the local school board for a number of years. Art was an active member of the I. O. O. F. Lodge No. 1091 of Kewaskum and the G. U. G. Germania lodge. He was well known in political circles.

A son of the late Mr. and Mrs. August Koch, he embarked early in life upon his business career, following in the footsteps of his father, founder of A. G. Koch, Inc., who died on Feb. 7, 1913, when Art was 28 years of age. It was at this time that he took over the responsibilities of his father, becoming leader of the Koch firm, director of the Bank of Kewaskum and treasurer of the Kewaskum Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was elected to the latter two positions on Feb. 20, 1913, and continued in that capacity for nearly 29 years, until the time of his demise.

Arthur W. Koch, a lifelong resident of Kewaskum, was born Sept. 1, 1885. He was married to Miss Meta Klug Sept. 21, 1910, at the Peace Evangelical church in this village by the Rev. F. Mohme. His widow survives, along with two sons, August and Harry; one brother, Ervin Koch, also a member of the Koch firm; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. August Koch, all of this village, and many other relatives.

The body lay in state at the Koch residence, where many people viewed the remains. Funeral services were held at 1:30 p. m. Friday, Jan. 9, at the Peace Evangelical church, the Rev. Richard M. A. Gadow, pastor of St. Andrew's Ev. church in Chicago, former pastor of the Peace church here, officiating. Burial was made in the parish cemetery. The services were very largely attended.

The high esteem in which the deceased was held was proven by the very large number of beautiful floral bouquets received. The village flag was placed at half mast during the funeral and the Koch store was closed Friday out of respect for the firm's president.

Six business associates and close friends of Mr. Koch acted as pall bearers. Carrying the body to its final resting place were N. W. Rosenkleimer, Theo. R. Schmidt, Clem. Kleinhaus, Jos. Eberle, Charles Miller and Lester Kohn.

Deceased was prominent not only as a businessman and public official but also as a civic leader. He was ever active in promoting improvements and activities in the community and took a keen interest in sports, serving as secretary and treasurer of the Badger State baseball league several seasons until the league disbanded a few years ago. He always conducted his business with honesty and integrity and his congenial and sunny disposition won for him many friends and patrons who sincerely regret his early demise. Art was very well liked by all and he will be sorrowfully missed by his family, relatives, acquaintances, and business associates. Our heartfelt sympathy is extended to the bereaved survivors in their hour of sorrow.

FBI Offers Opportunities

With the volume of work constantly increasing as a result of the war, the Federal Bureau of Investigation is seeking qualified personnel for many different types of positions, from clerks to G-men. Young men who are high school graduates may qualify as clerks at $1,440 per year even without typing or stenographic ability. For full details write either to E. P. Foxworth, assistant director, FBI, 607 U. S. Court House, New York City, or J. Edgar Hoover, director FBI, Washington, D. C.

Picture Parade

Special agents of the FBI (G-men) must qualify in the use of various types of firearms, and must also know their mechanics. G-men start at $3,200 per year.

On mimeograph and multith machines operated by FBI clerks instructions for the FBI field force are printed.

Here is the FBI baseball team. FBI teams are tough competitors in every sport and win many championships in government leagues.

Clerks with typing ability may be assigned to teletype operation.

'Root, Hog or Die'
Expression "Root, hog or die" had its origin in America in middle of last century as inelegant, slang, pioneer substitute for "work or starve." It apparently had no political connections. J. H. Beadle wrote in his volume "Life in Utah"—"Root, hog or die. This is the refrain of each of the nine verses of the Bull-Whacker's Epic." It means an idler has no place in a frontier country.

Retires After 53 Years
After standing guard for 53 years outside a Gloucester, Mass., tobacco shop, a real cigar store Indian statue went into retirement recently along with the proprietor, Henry C. Brown. Mr. Brown sold the place but would not let the Indian maiden go with the deal. He is taking the Indian to his home at Magnolia. He says the Indian is now recognized as a museum piece, and that he has already refused an offer of $750.

When grinding dry bread, tie a paper bag over the outlet of the grinder to prevent crumbs from going over the table and floor.

It's better to wash soiled woolen garments through several sudsy waters instead of just one. It is easier on the garment.

Cook carrots in just a little water so you won't have to drain off any of the minerals and vitamins before serving.

Don't sprinkle mustard loosely into water when preparing a foot bath for a patient. It will not dissolve quickly and may adhere to the skin and blister it. First mix mustard to a paste. One tablespoon of mustard to a gallon of water is the proportion used.

Toast water is simple to make and appeals to those, especially invalids, who like toast. Toast stale bread and cut into squares. Powder into crumbs and add a pinch of salt and a cup of boiling water. Let it stand an hour. Rub through a sieve and serve hot or cold with a little cream and powdered sugar.

Winnie Apparently Had Been So Reproved Herself

"Come upstairs and let me wash your hands," said the mother when she arrived with her little daughter for a tea at grandmother's.

"I don't want to go up," wailed Winnie, aged four.
"Let her wash them in the kitchen," called grandmother. "She can do it there just as well, I am sure."
"No," her mother said, firmly. "I insist that she come up with me."

Winnie went upstairs slowly. Turning to her mother, she asked: "Why don't you obey your mother!"

Hoarded Currency

Although the treasury department began to retire the old, large-sized paper currency on July 10, 1929, there were $100,000,000, or 43,896,647 pieces, still outstanding on August 31, 1941, which means that these bills had not been handled by a bank during these 12 years.

Oil Burner Success

MANY of my correspondents are planning to equip their house heaters with oil burners, and ask my opinion of the various makes that are offered to them. As a matter of fact, all oil burners can give good service. The choice is not among the different makes, but among the local oil burner installers. The best oil burner made will not work well if it is not properly installed, nor will a burner continue to give satisfaction unless it is under the supervision of a competent service man. The first step in buying an oil burner should be to inquire among oil burning friends for their opinions of the local installers, with the idea of selecting an installer who is competent, skillful, likely to stay in business, and will give quick and good service in times of need. A man of that type will have the agency for a reliable burner and can be depended on to recommend the type and size of burner best adapted to the heating plant. I have often spoken of the false economy of buying at cut prices, for it is likely to lead to poor service and dissatisfaction. This is especially true of oil burners; for if one is offered at a suspiciously low price, there is reason to believe that the manufacturer may be going out of business, in which case there will be no source for spare parts. A good burner is worth paying for.

Linoleum on Rough Floor

Linoleum that is laid on a rough, worn and uneven floor will not last, for the roughness will quickly wear it through. When linoleum is to be laid on a floor in that condition the wood should be smoothed by scraping, or better yet, by sanding with a heavy floor machine. Another method is to cover the floor with plywood. This can be one-half inch thick, and for convenience in laying, should be in pieces not more than four feet square, with the edges making tight joints. This forms a smooth and excellent surface, and linoleum cemented down over it should last almost indefinitely. The newly laid plywood will look so well that the home owner may well wonder about covering it with linoleum. He should do so, however, for if not protected by a floor covering, the surface will quickly chafe and splinter.

Squeaky Bedspring

Question: Several months ago the coil spring of a bed was soaked with rain coming through an open window. Ever since, there has been a terrible squeak. Oiling does not help. What can we do?

Answer: You probably did not get the oil where it would do the most good. Using an oil can, put a drop of oil at every point where one piece of metal touches another. Then jounce the spring several times, so that the oil will work into the joint.

Streaked Lampshade

Question: I washed a silk lampshade with soapy water and a sponge but when it dried the result was streaky. How can I clean it?

Answer: Fill your bathtub with tepid water, with a few handfuls of soap flakes dissolved in it. Draw the lampshade through this slowly several times, and then rinse with clear water. Pat with a bath towel and hang up to dry. Brush and ornaments that may come off can be stuck back with glue.

Kitchen Wall Finish

Question: Walls of an old kitchen are uneven, being partly plastered and partly wallboard. Would plastic paint hide the roughness?

Answer: Plastic paint made of gypsum mixed with both plaster and wallboard, but you should give it a smooth finish. You can then enamel it, or use washable wallpaper or wallcloth.

Rusted Tools

Question: What is the best way to remove rust from household tools? Could I use some kind of acid?

Answer: Rub with emery cloth, wet with kerosene. You can also get rust-removing liquids at an automobile supply store. I do not recommend an acid.

Crumbling Mortar

Question: Brick mortar in house walls has been crumbling and washing away until part of the brickwork is bare. Why? What is the remedy?

Answer: The mortar is porous, possibly because too much black coloring was used in proportion to the cement. Have it replaced by a competent mason.

Finish for Stucco

Question: Cement stucco over brick and stone must be repainted. What paint should we use?

Answer: You can get a cement paint intended for that work. Any good paint store has it.

Flour Worms

Question: My kitchen cabinet has a sifter type flour bin, which tilts forward slightly to fill, and is difficult to reach into. I have several times found white worms in the flour. How can I get rid of them?

Answer: Although the flour bin is built in, there is undoubtedly a method for releasing it and taking it out for cleaning. Scour well with strong soap, and give it a good sunning and airing. For surest results, abandon the bin and keep your flour in a tight canister. This is the real answer.

THE STORY SO FAR: Six men traveled the Chubbagan trail and six of them were reported missing. Later they were reported as having been murdered. Murder is suspected. One of the six; Finlay, brother of one of the six; mounted Police officers, and Blaise, half-breed guide, posing as surveyors, arrive at Nottaway to investigate. Isadore, rich fur man, is thought to have made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out. Later they visit Isadore at his magnificent home and meet Lise, his stepdaughter. Finlay falls in love with her. Later they land on an island and are attacked by Indians. They learn that Isadore's men are hunting them and tense themselves as they hear the gunmen approaching.

with his own from the night air. "I've worried so—been half mad!" "It was too terrible, there! They're drinking and worried! I had to threaten to shoot Blondell. He wouldn't let me alone. Mikikis has disappeared. I got your note this morning—went for it myself. They've taken my canoe and hid the others. So I had to swim to you, sweetheart. Do you mind my coming in my bathing suit?"

"His arms tightened around her. "Mind? I love it, beautiful!" "You seem to!" she laughed up at him. Then she called out to Red whose thoughts were far away at Matagami as he drove his long paddle. "Not going to speak, Mr. Malone?"

"It's Red to you, Lise! If you knew how glad I am to have you here! We've been pretty worried! I want to say they don't come any gamer than you!"

"Thanks, Red!"

Blaise started open-mouthed as Garry led a girl wearing his coat over a one-piece bathing suit up to the fire.

"Blaise, this is Lise. We picked her out of the lake, swimming to the island."

"You swim—in de dark?" demanded the astounded Brassard.

"By gar, you are brave girl! Tieni! She swim from Isadore's in dis black night?"

"Yes," said Finlay proudly. "Now hop into the tent, Lise, and crawl into my service tugs while we start the fire and get some tea and soup going."

Shortly the group of men smoking by the fire burst into laughter. Stiff in front of the tent with hand at salute stood a mounted Policeman.

"So you're Mounties? I've wondered what you really were. Jules Isadore has been wondering, too. He's pretty worried about it. Now that I've fallen into the hands of the police, what am I charged with?" she laughed.

"You are charged with the felony of scaring two policemen half to death by swimming to this island, young woman."

"I had to." For a space her face was serious, then a smile broke through as Finlay handed her a steaming cup of tea.

The others left Lise and Garry by the fire while she told him her story.

"Since Felix Blondell came it's been hellish, Garry. They do nothing at night but drink and quarrel. I've learned what I could from Corinne. She's absolutely petrified. When Tete-Blanche returned, Jules was mad with rage at what happened. It seems Kinebik is dead. Did you know that?"

Garry's arm tightened about her waist. "Yes, I know it."

"Well, Tete-Blanche brought back a lot of drunken young Indians to hunt for you. Blondell is getting scared. He wants to return south. He told Corinne he was not in favor of what had been done. He says Jules has ruined the whole business by giving whiskey to the Indians. It's too dangerous. I avoided him—all ways carried my pistol. One night I had to fire it—to scare him. After that he was afraid of me."

"Good! Too bad you didn't shoot straighter!"

"They're anxious about that plane from the Bay. It's overdue. They think, now, that that's what you came here for—to get that plane. Corinne asked Blondell if that was the plane that carried the gold south and he looked at her queerly and said: 'Yes, that carries the gold. That's highjack it, but we've got enough men here to shoot them out of their canoes if they try that.' Garry, you're not going to try to take Isadore—just you three, are you? He's got a lot of Indians over there and he's desperate."

He drew her red-coated shape close and kissed the velvet eyes that searched his bronzed face. "Don't worry about that, Lise. You don't think I'm going to risk losing you when I've only just got you here—safe?"

INSTALLMENT EIGHTEEN

and Blaise, half-breed guide, posing as surveyors, arrive at Nottaway to investigate. Isadore, rich fur man, is thought to have made a gold strike and aims to keep prospectors out. Later they visit Isadore at his magnificent home and meet Lise, his stepdaughter. Finlay falls in love with her. Later they land on an island and are attacked by Indians. They learn that Isadore's men are hunting them and tense themselves as they hear the gunmen approaching.

"Beeg cano' wid wing like gull!" In his remorse Finlay crashed Lise's note in his hand. Blondell's plane had reached Waswanipi! He found a scrap of paper and wrote:

"Just got your note! I'll wait at the nearest island, tonight, tomorrow and every night following, for your canoe. Courage! I love you!"

"Garry."

That night, before the twilight died, Finlay and Red lay in the thick alders of the shore of the island opposite Isadore's with binoculars focused on the anchored sea-plane and the post. Later, lights, like stars, glowed in the trade-house and the living quarters. The lights died. Hour after hour the two men waited. But Lise did not come.

"She'll come tonight, Garry. Don't worry."

"Somehow we've got to learn why that plane comes here from James Bay before we go after Isadore."

"We know she carries flake gold and nuggets from the river bars when she finally heads south. Isadore admitted that to McNab, at Matagami."

"Get shot for our pains and, besides, spoil the whole show? No, I'm going to learn more about that plane from the Bay first. We can't arrest Isadore without a gun fight."

"Very good, Sergeant Finlay! What are the orders?" laughed Red.

"You'll get them, constable, when that plane shows up."

At daylight the faint hum of a plane's engine brought the police from their hidden camp to the shore. Far across the lake, above Isaadore's, they saw a sea-plane spiraling for altitude.

"They'll make it hot for us, now."

The plane started for the outlet, twenty miles to the west, and, later appeared following the south shore.

"Tete-Blanche is back with the news and they're out for revenge," said Red. "They'll make it hot for us, now."

The plane passed overhead following the lake shore and the concealed police could see a man leaning from the cockpit searching the shore below with glasses. Shortly it faded into the east.

"It's the middle of August, Red. That plane from the Bay is due."

That night they waited on the shore of the island for Lise's canoe. Hour after hour drifted past but through the murk came no welcoming sound of a paddle prying off a gunwale.

Finlay slouched on a stone, head in hands. What had happened to her? She had said she wouldn't stay a day after the plane arrived. She had begged him to send for her. She had had two days to get the note. What had happened to Lise?

He looked at the illuminated face of his watch. It was one o'clock. They had waited five hours. "She won't come tonight, Red," he said, rising.

"No, she won't—Malone did not finish."

"Hear something?"

"Didn't you? It was pretty faint—might have been a loon!"

The two men stood rigid—with checked breaths.

They padded hard for a minute, then stopped to listen. Suddenly out of the gloom, ahead, wavered the cry: "Gar-ree! Gar-ree! Help!"

Eyes stabbing the gloom in search of the crippled canoe, the two men approached the sound.

"Where are you, Lise? Where's your boat?"

"Here I am,—here!" There was a faint splash of the bow of the canoe and Finlay's straining eyes caught the dim outlines of a head and bare shoulder.

"Hold it, Red!" he cried. "She's here—swimming! Steady the boat while I get her!"

"But your canoe? Why did you try to swim it?"

"I had to swim! They hid the canoe! I—I couldn't stay! I thought I'd never make it!" She shivered in his arms as he kissed her wet face and hair. He wrapped his coat around her bare shoulders, his blood around her bare shoulders, his blood around her bare shoulders, his blood around her bare shoulders.

"Why did you do it? It was too—"

"With a laugh she threw back her head and kissed him. "That's why! Because I love you!" she whispered, while Red paddled hard for the camp.

"Oh, my dear! My dear!" murmured Garry, shielding her body

CHAPTER XIX

The following night six canoes drifted silently up to the hidden police camp. It was Wabistan and his friends. Finlay decided that it was the old man. He drew him to one side with Blaise.

"Tell Wabistan who we are, Blaise, and why we are here."

The eyes of the old chief glowed like black tourmalines.

"Wabistan navare forget. He come to help his 't'en."

"We must wait until the flying canoe comes from the North," said Finlay. "Then we'll go to Isadore's."

"Yes, we wait," he turned to Blaise and spoke rapidly in Montagnais.

"Wabistan say he go to Matagami for flour, shell and tobacco. He come back in 'tree-four day. He start now."

On the morning of the fourth day after Wabistan's departure for Matagami, Finlay and Red were watching the post through binoculars from the shore of one of the islands.

"He's got a regiment of Indians over there, Red," said Garry.

"It looks as if we'd bitten off a large chunk of trouble."

"We sure have, Red."

"But we're going in just the same and grab that ship."

"We are, Red."

That night, on returning from the lake with water, Blaise called to Finlay where he sat with Lise by the fire. "Come to de shore! I show you somet'ing."

CHAPTER XVIII

That night, when Wabistan's men found the hidden camp of the Indians, the eyes of the old Indian shone with triumph.

"I'm not hurt!" he asked, squinting at the faces of his friends as they swung his hand.

"Not a scratch, chief!" Red patted the old man's shoulder.

"I'm glad we got clear of that without using our guns," said Garry. "Too many men have been hurt here this summer."

"But it was their lives or ours, Garry. Tete-Blanche and his whistling crew would snuff us out as fast as a candle!"

"I know, but headquarters may see it that way. I'm sorry it had to be done."

With Flame and young Patamish, who was devoted to Finlay and would be useful as a scout, the Petersboro started at once through the woods, hugging the shadows of the stream shores, for the moon was low on the ridges.

Once they cleared the islands the "churn-swish" of four paddles rose eased until dawn caught them far down the great lake. And throughout the long hours, Finlay had been commotioned by fear for Demarais. He would send Patamish at once in the birch-bark canoe had left at the hidden camp a message for her to come at once to the islands opposite the shore. It would not be long now before he'd have her in his arms—

The following night they reached the old camp and Patamish started with Finlay's message. Before Garry was waked by something pulling at his blanket.

"Patamish!" whispered the boy. "I had his undair stone."

Finlay's hand shook as he took the stone, lit a candle lantern and read:

Dear Garry: I have seemed so long—this waiting for you Blondell is expected every day. Everyone except Lise and Labelle are at the head of the lake. I tried to learn what was happening there, but could not. Garry haven't returned. Jules is looking hard. Corinne heard him tell Labelle that if you saw that plane arrive from the North and get away with the information, the plane was up. I don't understand for she knows that people in Montreal expect he's shipping gold south by plane. That's no secret. I've tried to find him but he cornered me last night and said: 'You'll never see me again. He's walked away from a trap, hanging around this lake. I'll take care of him this time. When Felix comes, you'd better get away from here. He's got plenty of money and you can give me anything you want. If you won't be reasonable, you can take the consequences.'

Dearest, I'll not stay a day after the plane arrives. I'll take Louis and camp somewhere in the bush. Let me hear from you, send for me! Let me know, quick, that nothing's happened to you! With all my love,

"Lise."

"You went to the post to find Mikikis?" asked Finlay. He could feel the throb of his heart in his throat.

"Ah-hah! Mikikis was gone. Something strange was there, on de water?"

"On the water?" The news he heard hit Finlay like the chill of the "what was it?"

To plan meals ahead of time not only makes for efficiency and ease in feeding the family but it's also fairly good insurance that the meals will be well-balanced, say home economists at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

If a really severe winter follows the present scarcity of feed in the fields, the result might be a serious depletion of game birds, cautions Aldo Leopold, game management authority at the Wisconsin College of Agriculture.

Wisconsin flocks this winter are made up of a larger number of old hens than usual. Poultrymen in response to the call for more eggs have increased flock sizes by keeping more old birds, as well as by raising pullets.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

Manila Falls to Japanese Invaders Following Strong Last Ditch Defense By Greatly Outnumbered U. S. Troops; U. S. Bans Sale of New Cars, Trucks

EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper. (Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MANILA: Falls

Since the first detachments of Japanese troops had landed on the island of Luzon in the Philippines and had begun their push toward Manila, Americans had been hoping that the outnumbered forces of Gen. Douglas MacArthur would be able to hold out in their defenses outside the capital city.

But despite a strong last ditch stand Manila finally fell to the invaders. Dive bombers and tanks had smashed the American lines. Greatly outnumbered, the Americans had fallen back as the Japs succeeded in gaining control of the air.

In its communique telling of the city's fall, the war department said that all U. S. and Philippine troops had been withdrawn from the city several days before and all defense installations removed or destroyed.

"The loss of Manila, while serious, has not lessened the resistance to the Japanese attacks," the communique said.

As it appeared that the Japanese pressure on the Philippines was driving our Filipino-American defending forces steadily backward, despite the arrival of a certain force of American planes as reinforcements, the war of nerves was giving Tokyo the "jitters."

Although there were no direct dispatches from the Jap capital, in the Tokyo broadcasts there was considerable evidence of confusion, of an anxiety to learn what the Allied grand strategy was to be.

President Roosevelt, in his press conferences, was mentioning reinforcements, plans that had been made in collaboration with all the Allies.

He talked of Kamchatka, a peninsula which reaches down to within easy plane reach of Japan itself. The Tokyo radio was warning Japs to be ready for air attacks during the New Year period, was talking of an American effort to get planes to Siberia via the Aleutian islands.

The news from Manila and the Philippines generally was creating great anxiety in this country, which wanted to see the islands successfully defended and to remain in close touch with Hawaii and the American mainland.

But though the war news generally was favorable, including both that from Russia and North Africa, the dispatches from the Far East told of increasing Jap pressure all along the line, and of a general repeated success for the invader's arms, though bitterly contested on all parts of the 5,000-mile front.

General MacArthur, showing the effect of lack of air supremacy, had grimly acknowledged that Japanese dive bombers had gained control of all roads from both fronts, making the defenders' task still more difficult.

BAN: On Autos Earlier than anticipated came the order from the government banning the sale of autos and trucks in the United States.

RUSSIANS: Back in Crimea

The southern Russian front, which had been subjected to extra German pressure while the Nazis were on the retreat in the central and northern sectors, suddenly turned the tide with the recapture of Kerch and Feodosya.

The first-named port was opposite the rich Caucasus oil region, separated from it only by two miles of water. These two miles the Germans had not been able to cross because of Black sea fleet activity.

Feodosya is about 100 miles further west, and landings were made simultaneously at both points, the Germans driven back, and an uncounted number of Nazis trapped between.

The German high command acknowledged the Russian landings "in force" and said that counter measures were being taken. Stalin complimented his general on the south, and then urged that the advantage be grasped and pursued.

"Free Crimea next" he urged his troops. The Russians still were holding on at Sevastopol, and Moscow hoped that the successes farther east would release pressure at Sevastopol and permit the garrison there, aided by sea-borne reinforcements, to take the offensive.

The Crimea was held by a combination of German-Italian-Rumanian troops, admittedly not the hardest to beat if the Russians are able to get a high-pressure drive going.

COMMANDO: A Hero's Tale A story of black-clad, burnt-cork-faced Commandos on the North Africa front was the most thrilling story of the war thus far.

It told of the attack on General Rommel's headquarters by a small band of British "suiciders," and of the killing of the Commando's own commander, Colonel Keyes, son of the man who originated the idea.

The British Commando group hid in an arroyo during the night before the zero hour, within running distance of Rommel's headquarters.

At the time when the whole imperial offensive was to flare up along the line, they dashed forward, roused a sentry who opened a door, shot him dead and entered the building.

As Keyes, leading his men, threw open the main door behind which were Rommel's aides, he was shot dead, but a sergeant leaped over his body, hurled two hand grenades and then slammed the door shut, letting the bombs wipe out those within.

By this time the shooting and shouting had roused the whole garrison, who did not know what to make of it all. In the resulting confusion most of the Commandos escaped, but only after fighting a two-hour pitched battle.

Rommel, unfortunately for them, was away at a birthday party, and was not killed. The whole of his staff who remained at headquarters, was wiped out, however.

DUTCH: Steal Show

Dutch sea and air arms under the command of Vice Admiral E. E. L. Helfrich, above, have inflicted severe losses upon Japan's invading forces. He is chief of the Netherlands navy and air force in the Indies. Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten is commander in chief of the armed forces.

The Dutch airmen and submarine crews continued to "steal the show" in the Pacific war, the fighting forces ranging far out over the Pacific, largely in American-made planes, seeking Jap tankers reportedly loaded with oil stolen from north Borneo.

The N.E.I. commander in chief, Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, pledged America that the Dutch alone could turn the tide against the Japs in the south Pacific if only they could get more planes and more anti-aircraft guns with which to fight off the Japanese warplanes.

Apparently there was no lack of Dutch bombers, nor of skilled pilots to man them, the shortage lying chiefly in fighter planes.

The submarines, keeping intact their promise of more than one ship a day, had sunk four more. That they were faring far afield and not just protecting home shores was seen in the announcement that these latest sinkings had been far from Batavia, way up at the east coast of Thailand. The vessels sent to the bottom were troop transports, landing Jap soldiers for the fight against Singapore.

In the meantime, the Dutch had sent a successful naval raiding party against the Japs near the central provinces of their own islands. The Batavia radio said several launches were destroyed, others were seized and that the Japanese living on the island were taken prisoners and interned.

When the British got out of north Borneo, they were said to have destroyed all the oil wells, or damaged them so that they could not be used. The Dutch revealed, however, that several Japanese tankers had been seen leaving there loaded.

The air force had been sent in pursuit, the Dutch pledging themselves to sink the tankers or not return.

HAWAII: 'Ready' Victims of the Japanese "sneak attack" which decimated their strength in a few hours, Hawaiians had rejoiced finally that reinforcements to the plane and ship garrison now had the islands ready to meet all comers.

Although the exact nature of the reinforcements was kept a secret it was revealed that the army on the islands had enough planes to give any invaders a "lively reception."

Hero of the December 7 attack, Lieut. George S. Welch, 23, of Wilmington, Del., who shot down four Jap planes though he had to drive 10 miles to get to his plane, said he was "itching for another fight." He said: "All of us would like to see them come back."

LIBYA: British Get Tanks The British were polishing off General Rommel's remaining forces in North Africa at a fast rate, aided by a "rash sally" made by a force of nearly 100 tanks.

The British met this assault with such a withering fire from its mobile artillery and its American tanks that 22 of the enemy tanks were destroyed and 20 others put out of action with damage.

It was a demonstration that Rommel's retreat had been cut off, and that the sortie by the German tanks from the spot where Rommel's men were surrounded was a desperate adventure.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—In his new novel, "Storm," nominated by some reviewers for the Pulitzer prize, George Stewart notes that man is 24-Hour Alert in an air animal and not Weather Building, a land animal, as we have commonly supposed. We live at the bottom of an ocean of air but that doesn't make us a land animal, any more than a crab is a land animal because it lives at the bottom of a body of water.

Dramatizing a storm which gathered up north of Japan, and clocking it down this way, and recording the resulting inter-play of human nature and meteorology, Mr. Stewart's book is an incidental, perhaps not intended, reminder that the politics have been far behind the meteorologists in grasping the full implications of man adding wings to his breathing apparatus.

Francis W. Reichelderfer, the lean, baldish, chief of the U. S. weather bureau, seems to have had something like that in mind for many years, and that's all to the good just now, as our fighters, on, under and above the sea have the best weather service in the world. It was in the aerological service of the navy that Commander Reichelderfer carried through his "air mass" analysis which revolutionized weather forecasting. Bringing meteorology into focus with modern communications, aviation and revised military science was a little heeded but supremely important assignment, and Commander Reichelderfer made good.

He isn't dealing bullets in the way he used to. The most authentic weather news now is low-down, deep from Sibyl's Cave of the Winds, slipped out quietly to the armed forces and a touchy job it is, with the seven seas to cover. The commander is putting on forced draught the full 24 hours in the old red brick weather building in Washington.

In 1918, the youth from Harlan, Ind., two years out of Northwestern university, newly commissioned ensign in the navy, was sent to Lisbon to dig weather reports for the wobbly crop-hop of the NC-4 across the ocean. Thereafter, joining the aerological service, he was the weather consultant of polar fliers, gave Lindbergh the gun for his historic flight to Paris, cleared or held Dr. Ecken's blimps, served from 1922 to 1928 as head of the aerological service, and became head of the weather bureau on January 16, 1939.

IN ANOTHER, and possibly more enjoyable, century, Cret Charles M. Wesson, known as "The Bull," was a famous line-bucker at West Point. For 34 years in the ordnance department of the army, he has been bucking congress, trying to break through the line for an appropriation touchdown, and almost always thrown for a loss. But now, as Major General Wesson, chief of ordnance since 1938, he finds his appropriation upped about 1,600 per cent to around $5,000,000.

General Wesson, bulky, muscular and appropriately beetle-browed at 63, has been a glutton for punishment, trying to get goods and gear for the armed forces. But he stands up well under it, with no come-back other than an occasional very wisecrack. Away back in 1920, he made an earnest plea for anti-aircraft guns, insisting that the bombing effectiveness of planes was increasing rapidly and we would be in a bad way if we didn't keep ahead of it. The general might just as well have asked for caviar and champagne for the daily army ration. It was pretty much that way for the next 20 years. And now, all at once the man who blew in Brewster's Millions is a skin-fint, compared to the general.

He was born in St. Louis, Mo., and was graduated from West Point in 1900.

In 1907, he joined the ordnance department, made good on his job as a hard-working and competent technician and passed quite a few miracles in keeping the U. S. arsenal at Watertown, Mass., kicking out fighting equipment during the World war, with or without congressional appropriations. As commandant of the Aberdeen proving grounds in Maryland, he spent much time explaining to congress why the army found it difficult to patch up old Springfield rifles, or get its shoes half-soled. In some manner or other he gets along with congress.

MAJ. GEN. GEORGE GRUNERT, commanding the Philippine department of the army as General MacArthur's right-hand man, served two years there, around 40 years ago. From that time on, he has been gravely preoccupied with the fifth-column danger in the islands. In 1898 he marched off to the Spanish-American war. He was commissioned with the regular army in 1901. He was on the Mexican border in 1914 and with the army of occupation in Germany. He is known as a soldier's soldier.

Farm Labor Situation Is Given Careful Study

Government Devises Plan for 'Complete Utilization' of Local Workers to Aid in Nation's Food-for-Victory Campaign.

By BAUKHAGE

National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N.W., Washington, D. C. As the New Year starts, reports are beginning to come in to the Federal Security administration here from supervisors of farm placement in the 48 states. These reports state just what the farmers in each state are going to need in the way of labor this spring, and how these state supervisors who are on the ground studying the question, feel the problem ought to be met.

Meanwhile, Washington has been working on a general program whose goal is the "complete utilization" of all local labor. This means that every conceivable reservoir of man-and-woman-power is to be tapped to make this good earth of ours yield its utmost for the food-for-victory campaign. Students, members of the CCC and the NYA and every other group, organized or unorganized, is to be called upon to keep the chow line going for democracy at arms.

Nobody knows better than the folks who are out recruiting for the farm battalions that you can't just push a man through the barn door or into a pasture and call him a farmer. It takes training and that is part of the master-plan which is now being worked out.

But meanwhile there are a lot of people who have had farming experience who are available, skilled or semi-skilled. And then there are some jobs which don't need skills, but do require mass employment for short periods.

An Oregon Plan Take what happened out in Oregon this last fall for instance. Oregonians have already taken hold of this "farm placement" idea and made it work. Along came the snap-bean crop and a drastic shortage of hands. They were found in every walk of life. It meant temporary closing up of a lot of shops and businesses and other enterprises but they got the crop in and they didn't paralyze the communities. It couldn't have been done, though, with the best of will, if there hadn't been a sound plan behind it.

The farmers now have two competitors for labor, the factory and military service. Industry has always offered higher wages. But present farm wages are up higher than they have been in 11 years. So the farm hand can't complain on that score. And the real patriot is the one who does what he can do best for Uncle Sam.

As a Nation Went to War As the new year begins and I look back at the times I wrote down after that climactic Sunday when we received word that the Japanese had made their surprise attack on Hawaii, they seem very dull and drab. But some of the memories are very keen. This in spite of the fact that ever since then life has been running at such a rapid rate each day, each hour and frequently each minute, that it has been difficult to see anything but the very vivid present.

I have a memory of Sunday, of a brisk, sunny winter day. Then leisurely breakfast, the morning papers, the radio, the preparation to lose myself in the outdoors for a few hours—a walk which might have made me miss those first dramatic moments at the White House. But I stopped to chat with my father who lives near me. The phone rang while I paused, hat and coat already on. In the span of a few moments, I was standing with a half a dozen other reporters, hurriedly hailed from their Sunday rest, in the office of Stephen Early in the Executive Wing of the White House.

"First," said Early very seriously, "are there any correspondents of German or Japanese newspapers here?" There were not. He read us a few details of the Hawaiian attack which he had just received from the President hastily pencilled on a memo. The first announcements, which he had received at his home, he had phoned to the press associations and radio networks; and then he had hurried to the White House.

As soon as Early's brief announcement was over, we rushed out of his office, across the lobby and into the press room where the press associations and the radio companies have private telephone lines, to their local offices. A little later an NBC engineer had a microphone attached to one of our lines and I was able to make the first news broadcast ever sent from the White House.

From then on I hardly left my chair, except for moments to relieve my assistant and one of the NBC newsmen, who were keeping in touch with the state department across the street and later interviewing members of the cabinet and congressional leaders at the front entrance of the White House.

The White House press room is arranged to accommodate about a dozen men who are regularly stationed there. Within a few hours after the first announcement of the Japanese attack it was jammed with 50 or more people—reporters, radio men, messenger boys. The noise was so great that the microphone had to be stepped down to avoid catching the roar and confusion, and I was forced to speak in a low voice—which gave the effect of suppressed excitement which was greater than I really felt, although the events were exciting enough.

Outside the crowds were solemn, quiet. The sidewalk immediately in front of the White House was roped off and the side streets were closed. The crowd edged as near as it could, peering at the lighted windows across the wide lawns. They could see nothing, but they were satisfied to watch. Only very late, as they began to break up, did they begin to sing. Their emotions needed an outlet then.

The Thirty Years' War lasted from 1618 to 1648. Seven Greek and Roman wars extended well over 20 years, and the Hundred Years' war, between France and England, lasted from 1337 to 1453.

Life is the one food that most for your body's health. Why? Because milk does the following:
Promotes growth and maintains the body's resistance to infection through vitamin A.
Stimulates appetites and nerves in top-notch condition through vitamin B1; promotes rest and keeps the skin supple through vitamin B2 (G).
Builds calcium and vitamin D for strong teeth and bones.

As an excellent source of vitamins, it also works to keep the body's proteins coming to the aid of repairing worn-down tissues and boosting energy.

IDEAS FOR WINTER EVENINGS

But if you can possibly arrange it, a permanent table is the thing; there are many smart ones in maple, mahogany and walnut. If your family is seriously game-minded, you'll have to do something about a ping-pong or billiard table.
What about that rarely used sun parlor that's gotten to be a catch-all? Couldn't it be pressed into use as a family game room? A monotone color scheme is especially effective for this sort of room. Select one color that is used in the adjoining room and have the whole game room done in this color. Suppose green is the color you choose. . . have a plain green waxed linoleum floor, light green walls and woodwork, green sateen or homespun curtains made to pull back and forth on rings, furniture painted or upholstered in green.
If you have a regular game room upstairs, downstairs or on the main floor of the house nothing is nicer than a sit-down game . . . for a permanent set-up.

TO YOUR Good Health by DR. NATHAN S. DAVIS, III

PAIN OVER HEART DUE TO NUMEROUS CAUSES

Not infrequently a very worried individual consults his doctor complaining of a pain or an ache or of some type of discomfort in the left lower anterior part of the chest. He is certain that this is due to heart disease and that his days are numbered. However there are many causes for pain in this part of the chest only a few of which are due to heart disease.

There are so many causes because several organs in addition to the heart, skin and muscles are supplied with nerves from the same segments of the spinal cord. Pain over the heart (precordial pain) may be due to a spasm of the muscle at the inlet or outlet of the stomach, to high acidity of the stomach juices (heart burn) or to an irritable bowel. Pain due to diseases of the pancreas and spleen may also be referred to this region.

Irritation of the lining of the chest cavity and either surface of the diaphragm may cause it.

One of the most common causes of pain over the heart is inflammation of the nerves between the ribs or their irritation by bony overgrowths in the spinal column. Pains in the muscles between the ribs due to their being strained by lifting, reaching or coughing or to their being injured are the most frequent of all. Broken ribs may also cause pain over the heart.

Syphilitic disease of the heart and aorta not infrequently causes a narrowing of the openings of the coronary arteries and a diminished blood supply to the heart. It frequently is the cause of chest pain. As it may also cause a leaky aortic valve, it, too, may cause serious disorders of rhythm. Fortunately, due to the improved methods for the treatment of syphilis and to the vigorous campaign being waged against it by Surgeon General Parson of the United States Public Health Service, this kind of heart disease is becoming less of a menace.

Spasm Pains. Hardening of the coronary arteries which in places results in a narrowing of the vessels, limits the flow of blood and may cause some precordial discomfort. A spasm in such a vessel due to a cold wind or to exertion, anger, or excitement may cause very severe pain which usually subsides quickly when activity is stopped. Certain drugs which relieve the spasm of the artery and cause it to dilate, cause the pain to cease almost miraculously. This type of heart pain is quite common in older people especially during cold weather. It often appears for the first time when a patient goes out in the cold after an attack of "flu."

The most serious and most severe heart pain and the most lasting is that which usually develops when one of the arteries of the heart is blocked by a blood clot. This cuts off the blood supply and destroys a part of the heart muscle which after several weeks is replaced by scar tissue. Most of the people who develop clots or spasms in the hardened coronary arteries recover, but are rarely able to carry on as they did before.

If you have a pain over your heart, even if it is not severe or alarming, see your doctor and find out what is causing it. Then follow his advice and so remove its cause or prevent its return.

"Is it the pain you mind, or something it stands for?" - Austin Fox Riggs, M. D.

QUESTION BOX

Send questions to Dr. Nathan S. Davis III, Winnetka, Ill. (Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.)
Q.—My little girl has a rash like eczema on the inside of both arms, at the elbows. Also on the back of the legs, at the knees. All of the various eczema treatments have had no effect on this rash. What would you suggest?
A.—That a skin specialist be consulted who would make a more definite diagnosis and prescribe accordingly. Do not wait too long to consult the specialist.
Q.—What is the best aid for chapped hands and chapped lips?
A.—W.
Q.—The best prevention of chapped hands and lips, is to dry them thoroughly before going out, to wear loose fitting gloves, or put your hands in your pockets. Cold creams also protect against chapping.
Q.—What remedies would you suggest to care for a "charley-horse"?
A.—Heat—dry or moist—and after a period of rest, gradually increasing exertion.

Defense Uniforms Can Be as Smart as They Are Practical

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that thousands of women are engaged in defense service that takes them into factories and plants, or that keeps them busy on the farm, designers are confronted with a new challenge to create practical clothes that are also chic and becoming.

In this program of clothes that are able to resist wear and tear, the first problem to be considered is necessarily that of finding materials that will give satisfaction from the standpoint of wearability plus laundability. Since sturdy cottons can "take it," they naturally are first in fabric choice. Denim holds forth at the top of the list in either solid colors or stripes (either combined for contrast). Then come coverts, manish tweed cotton suitings and that favorite of favorites—corduroy.

White duck, which holds an enviable record for perfect laundering, is particularly smart for young girls who like snappy fashions and who are stationed in surroundings that demand they look immaculate. This fabric is suitable not only for overalls, but also for overseas caps, to keep straying locks from the eyes. To the left in the illustration above is a costume especially designed for American women at work in defense industries, on farms, or in the air. This "civilian defense suit" is cut on a pattern of simplicity that any woman can make for herself, even if she is a novice at sewing. Note that this suit of washable white duck is one-piece. This garment has convertible trousers which may be worn full or snuggled in to insure protection from possible entanglement in machinery.

Uniforms for women must have certain basic protective details such as those mentioned above, and they must also be designed for freedom of movement. They must be easy to take off and on, with straps caught at the back so that overalls will not slip off at the shoulders, with snap fasteners at the ankles for comfort and protection.

Corduroy mix-mates give opportunity for bright color, style and service and all in one. They meet the farm girl's needs to perfection, and they are equally as useful and smart in the factory. Not only is the never-wear-out quality of corduroy a convincing argument in its favor, but corduroy has that something attractive about it that measures up to any wear required of it from work to play. It goes about town or trudges along country roads with equal adaptability.

The attractiveness of corduroy is shown in the illustration above by the culotte ensemble centered in the group. In this instance, a bright plaid cotton shirt is teamed with a corduroy culotte and vest. Corduroy shoes and cotton stockings complete a perfect outfit for all sorts of active wear. In this smart, good-looking ensemble one can confidently go about town on a shopping tour, feeling suitably dressed for the occasion.

Mixmate this vest of corduroy with slacks, shown to the right in the picture above, and you have a suit that gives the answer to a gay young farmerette as to "what to wear" about home during busy hours. Wear a corduroy beret with this suit if you must go into town on an errand, or whatever the call of duty may happen to be.

'LEAVES' from Uncle Sam's Notebook

Storing Ice for Farm Use
In any farm home an adequate supply of ice for summer use is indispensable for the preservation of food and for use in the preparation of frozen desserts and cold, refreshing beverages. On a dairy farm, if the product is to be properly taken care of and properly handled, the storing of ice for use during the hot weather is practically mandatory. In this article, therefore, some information will be offered relative to methods of storing ice.

SOURCES OF ICE
If ice is to be harvested from ponds or slow-moving streams where grass and weeds grow, it is desirable that the waters should be cleared of such growth before freezing weather occurs. If ice is harvested without such clearance, it will contain much decayed vegetable matter, with mosses and plant stems, all of which are a nuisance in the ice and may even be injurious to health. It is necessary, further, to destroy the green scum which may lie on the surface of such waters. This may be done by the use of copper sulphate (blue vitriol). Place the crystals (1 pound for each 13,000 cubic feet of water) in a cloth bag, hang the bag on a pole and trail it through the water until all the crystals are dissolved. One or two such treatments during the summer will keep down the growths of green spawn and algae.

QUANTITY REQUIRED
The quantity needed will of course depend upon the number of cows kept and the methods of handling the product. It has been found that, under proper conditions of storage and handling, a half ton of ice per cow is sufficient if the cream only is to be cooled. If, however, whole milk is to be cooled, 1 1/2 tons of ice per cow will be required in the North, and two tons in the South. Five tons of ice will meet the needs of an average family on a general farm.

PREPARATIONS FOR CUTTING
As soon as the ice is strong enough in the fall to carry the weight of a horse, the snow should be scraped from the surface, using a scraper. If the ice field is small, this snow may be scraped entirely off; on a larger field it will have to be laid up in windrows.

LAYING OFF THE FIELD
It is important to mark the field for cutting so that all cakes will be rectangular since this shape is the easiest to handle and pack.

CUTTING THE ICE
In order to facilitate the movement of ice from the center of the field to the loading place, it is customary to cut, first, a strip of ice, 22 inches wide, extending from the center of the field to the loading-way. This initial strip is then forced under the field, leaving open water through which succeeding cuttings may be floated to the landing place. In the parlance of professional ice-harvesters, this proceeding is known as "sinking the header." Succeeding strips, grooved two or three inches deep in squares, but not cut clear through, are then floated to the loading-way and there cut into squares for hauling and storing.

LOCATING THE ICE HOUSE
It is important to locate the ice house on porous soil, sloping in all directions, to facilitate drainage. It is well, also, to take advantage of trees, hillsides, or buildings, to protect the building from the direct rays of the sun.

VENTILATING AND WATERPROOFING
Whatever type of ice house it is finally decided to build, it will be necessary to provide for both ventilation and waterproofing. There is inevitably more or less melting in any ice house, which causes moisture to collect on ceiling and walls. If the building is of wood, such collection of moisture will cause decay; consequently the building should be equipped with ventilation to keep walls and ceiling dry. It is also important to waterproof the building on the inside, whether of wood, brick or cement. This may be done by using a suitable paint or one of the water-proofing compounds made of paraffin and asphalt.

SIZE OF HOUSE REQUIRED
Usually a cubic foot of space will hold 45 to 50 pounds if the ice is cut properly and piled in closely—less, naturally, if the ice is irregularly cut or thrown in at random.

For information concerning types of construction for icehouses and other important instructions, send five cents to Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D. C., asking for Farmers' Bulletin No. 1078.

CUTWORMS IN THE IRIS BED
In beds of iris seedlings, cutworms are frequently a great menace. When their deprivations are observed it is advisable to scatter about the beds a poison bran mash consisting of one-fourth pound paris green, 1 peck dry bran, 1 pint syrup or molasses, 4 to 6 quarts water. Mix the paris green and the bran thoroughly; in another vessel, stir the syrup or molasses into 4 or 6 quarts of water; then slowly add the sweetened water to the poisoned bran.

THE STRAW-FLOWER
The straw-flower, which may be dried and used for winter bouquets, is a hardy annual, bearing double lemon and yellow flowers an inch and a half across. It is an excellent choice either for beds or borders. It does well in any good garden soil but responds to plenty of fertilizer.

THE SHAD
Although the shad is one of our most valuable food fishes, little is known of its habits.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion reports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions, no more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and drastic medication would be more often employed.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Bright Wool

What with all the glitter of sequin and spangle, it is a relief to turn to the lovely color-bright soft wool classics that fashion elects for style supremacy this winter. Undoubtedly these flattering little wools, fashioned by the weeks to come. These lovely classic wools make color their theme, and worn under winter furs, they lead the first-in-fashion group. Picturest is a charming model of Fortmann wool in a subtle green that goes beautifully with any fur. There is a restrained accent of sparkling gilt on the belt and front closing. Wear a flaring hat and carry a beaver muff.

Dutch Bonnets and Hoods

Have Peasant Embroidery
A charming new fashion that is going the rounds this winter, to the delight of high school and college girls, is that of cunning little hoods or bonnets cut in the manner of Dutch bonnets or baby caps and made of bright felt. Or, if you prefer, they can be gaily crocheted. These are adorned with appliques of felt flowers in peasant colorings or trimmed in crocheted flowers. They tie under the chin, and they lend a most attractive dash of color to a wintry landscape. They're perfect with skating outfits, or to wear to and from dances, or to school.

Here's the Latest Style: Dresses With Apron Front

Here's the latest bit of fashion gossip. It's all about the dresses with cleverly designed apron fronts. This new fashion calls for a pencil skirt, at the front of which there is a tie-on apron effect. Sometimes it is achieved with a cascade drape of material. Again it is a pleated tie-on that makes the apron. However, the cleverest of all, because it introduces the right print accent, is the applique of cut out floral prints. The effect is just about as charming as fancy can picture, especially if a corresponding touch of the print appears on the sleeves.

Evening Capes Sparkle With Beads and Sequins

Just as new as the coming New Year are the new evening capes, some long and some short, that are made of bright colored woollens handsomely and elaborately embroidered with sparkling stones or sequins or vivid yarns. A favorite color for these gay little capes is magenta. Jet beading on black or white wool also ranks high in chic.

Turbans are still as popular as ever. But they are draped differently and worn at a different angle. Some of them are very high. Lace is in the ascendency, especially for the new siren-slim dresses that are so outstanding in the evening fashion picture this winter.
