Fire at Driessel Home Results in Huge Loss

Damage estimated at between $1,000 and $1,500 resulted from a fire at the Driessel estate home on the corner of Main and West Water streets early Wednesday evening. Most of the damage was confined to the upstairs rooms, attic and roof of the house. The firemen were called out at 6:25 p. m. and battled the blaze nearly two hours.

The fire was discovered by neighbors who saw flames and smoke pouring out of a sun room located on the second story at the southeast corner of the building. The blaze had gotten a good start by the time firemen were summoned and was spreading rapidly through the second story of the frame building. Soon after the firemen got several streams of water on the building the flames were brought under control but they were unable to get at the source because of the thick clouds of smoke pouring out. Several windows were knocked out and a hole was chopped in the roof. Water was thrown on the flames through these openings and the fire was checked.

Many articles of furniture and other household belongings were removed from the house by the crowd of people attracted to the scene. Many others were destroyed or damaged. The interior of the rooms on the second floor and attic was badly burned and charred and the roof was damaged considerably on the inside. First floor rooms and furnishings were also damaged by water. Mrs. Ursula Runte and Mr. and Mrs. Wilhelmschlosser, occupants of the house, were unaware of the fire when the siren sounded and the latter two came outside to find out where it was. Mrs. Runte, who is convalescing from a stroke she suffered some time ago, was carried from the burnished house. She was taken to the Al Runt home where she is now staying. Mr. and Mrs. Schlosser are now residing with their parents.

The fire is believed to have been caused by a kerosene heater left burning and unattended in the sun room which probably worked up and the flames ignited some household furnishing. The occupants of the house were downstairs at the time. The Schlossers had intended to do some work in the upstairs room that evening and lighted the heater to warm it up. It was the third fire at the home in the last few years.

The $5.00 defense stamp given by Rosenheimer's for the largest amount brought in was won by Kenneth Opengrath of the town of Kewaskum. He brought in 2,408 pounds. The $7.00 in stamps given at Koch's was divided into four prizes. First prize of $25.00 stamp went to Peter Schell, Kewaskum, R. D.; second of $20.00 went to Wilmer Bunkelmann, village; third of $15.00 went to the Sisters of St. Michaels parish, St. Michaels, and fourth of $10.00 went to Harley Backhaus, Campbellsport, R. D.

The "MacArthur week" drive was conducted throughout the state at the instigation of Gov. MRS. ALEX SCHNEPP The relatives and many friends in Kewaskum and vicinity mourn the sad death of a young wife and mother, Mrs. Alex Schnepf, 23, of West Bend, nee Elizabeth Backhaus, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Backhaus, Sr. of this village, which occurred at St. Joseph's Community hospital, West Bend, at 11:45 p. m. Friday, May 1. After giving birth to a baby daughter, Jean Alice, a week before, on April 25, Mrs. Schnepf was stricken with scarlet fever in her weakened condition. Although the best of medical care was given the young lady and everything possible was done, her life could not be saved.

Mrs. Schnepf was born June 27, 1918 in Kewaskum and resided here until her marriage. She graduated from the Kewaskum high school with the class of 1935. Her marriage to Alex Schnepf took place in West Bend on July 2, 1938. Besides her grief stricken husband and baby, Mrs. Schnepf is survived by her parents: two sisters, Henrietta (Mrs. Lloyd Lynn) of Milwaukee and Belinda of West Bend; and three brothers, Herbert, Jr. of Kewaskum and David and Richard at the home of their parents.

Funeral services were held at 8 a. m. Monday, May 4, at Holy Angel church in West Bend, the Rev. Edw. Stehling officiating at the requiem mass. Interment was made in St. Mary's Catholic cemetery at Barton. Private services were held from the Schmidt funeral home, West Bend.

Pallbearers were Art Taylor, Geo. Raab, Russell Diekmann, Art Novotny, Hilbert Schnepf and Howard Backhaus.

The untimely death of this beloved young wife and mother is felt with deep sorrow by all the bereaved survivors and numerous friends. It is a terrible blow that such a lovable person with so much to live for should be called away from her husband, her darling, helpless little baby whom she was so fond of, and the other survivors. She was true, kind and loving and her friends, relatives and classmates will miss her. To those she left to carry on our most heartfelt sympathy is extended.

Farewell, dear; but not forever, There will be a glorious dawn, We shall meet to part—no never! On the resurrection morn. Thou'rt darling form lies sleeping In the cold and silent tomb, Thou shalt have a glorious waking When the blessed Lord doth come.

Dr. Barton... to all companies is very strict about the physical examination.

Some months ago Flight Surgeon M. Martyn Kafka, Scott Field, Ill., in asking the co-operation of family physicians stated that what might be considered minor or unimportant defects in civilian life might be serious defects in an air pilot who has to fly at high altitudes and changing temperatures.

Aviation medicine today is an attempt to keep pilots well while they are in the air as well as on land.

What to Do to Stop Bleeding

If during a boxing bout a boxer gets cut, the referee can decide whether it is severe enough to stop the bout.

As medical examiner and physician for a boxing commission and amateur athletic union, I encountered many cases of bleeding and tried to combine certain chemicals that would stop the flow of blood within the minute between rounds.

The Once-Over by H.I. Phillips

THE UNIONIZED MILK INDUSTRY... John L. Lewis is now trying to unionize the milk industry throughout the country.

Pattern No. Z9267... ATTRACTIVE holders for cactus and small plants are these which you may make yourself.

What would grandpa have thought if somebody had predicted that the walking delegate would win slowly o'er the sea, that the cow would jump over the moon only if it had a union permit and that the milkmaid's answer to 'May I go with you' would have been 'Not unless you are a member of the union in good standing, mister'.

Somehow we find it hard to gaze over the rolling country these spring days and take in the bucolic scene without feeling that, although he is not there in person, the spirit-form of John L. Lewis flits through the meadows, looks disapprovingly on the gusto of the rushing brook and, wielding an invisible rubber stamp, puts an "Okay J. L. L." on the flank of every moo.

Whispering into the ear of every cow the wonders of the five-day week and warning the bull to take orders only from its local board.

To revise Anne Emilie Poulsson's old verse:

At five o'clock he milks the cow, The busy farmer's man. At six o'clock the strains the milk And pours it in the can.

At seven there's a clamor and A merry little row, It's found the cow that gave the milk Was not a union cow.

The busy farmer's man is called— With him it goes quite hard; It's charged that when he strained the milk He lacked a union card.

At eight o'clock John L. appears, A frown upon his brow— And there will be no milk today— 'T'WAS NOT A UNION CAN!

ORCHARD SPRAYING

Because the last two weeks of April were much warmer than usual, apple trees are in bloom about two weeks ahead of the usual time. This has shortened the pre-blooming spraying period by a week or more. Under a complete spray program farm orchards should have received three lime sulphur sprays for apple scab and other fungus disease control by the time the trees are in bloom. Many orchards have received only one spray this year, others none. In view of this, it is highly important that the calyx spray be properly applied. The time to apply this spray is when the late blossoming varieties have dropped most of their blossoms. An omission or a delay in applying this spray will result in poor apple worm and scab disease control. Very little it to be gained by spraying while the petals are still on the flower.
 The spray solution should consist of a mixture of 2 1/2 lbs. of lead arsenate and 2 1/2 gallons of liquid lime sulphur and 100 gallons of water. The use of a half pound of finely ground soybean flour, which serves as a sticker, will improve the spray.
 Fruit growers who have not as yet made any arrangements to have their orchards sprayed may hire local custom sprayers. The county extension office can supply names of such sprayers upon request.

TRI-COUNTY BLACK & WHITE SHOW SATURDAY, JUNE 6th

The Tri-County Black & White show will be held on the Ozaukee fair grounds at Cedarburg on Saturday, June 6th. The three counties comprising the Tri-County organization are Milwaukee, Ozaukee and Washington.

The following four classes of registered Holstein animals will be shown: (a) Aged cows—4 years and older. (b) Young cows—2 and 3 years (milking). (c) Heifer calves under 2 years. (d) 5 to 6 calves under 2 years.

To give any and all Holstein breeders of Washington county an opportunity to exhibit at the show they are asked to notify the county extension office before May 10th of their desire to exhibit. Time will not permit a visit to all breeders to solicit exhibits.

FARM LABOR SHORTAGE

The coming harvest season promises to bring on a serious farm labor shortage. So far the labor shortage has not been acute as the seeding and planting operations are largely done with tractor and machinery. There are, however, a number of unfilled farm positions on file in the county agent's office. The farm labor problem will become more acute when the harvest season with its demand for hand labor will be here.
 To help those who are looking for work and those who want to employ workers the county extension office will be glad to serve as a clearing house or medium by which the two are brought together.
 Anyone desiring farm work for any length of time, by day, month, or year, should register with the county extension office. Farmers who want help should call or come to this office for possible available employees.

IT PAYS TO INOCULATE SOYBEANS

Contrary to the general opinion, soybeans, units they are inoculated before planting are hard on the soil. That is why most Washington county farmers are inoculating their soybean seed, so that the crop may get its nitrogen from the air rather than drawing entirely on nitrogen in the soil.
 Tests run by the university bacteriology department show that plants from inoculated seed are larger, healthier, and have more protein. Field tests also show marked increases in the yield of soybean seed from fields that are inoculated.
 The fact that the soil was once planted to a crop of inoculated soybeans does not relieve the necessity for inoculating again. Soybean bacteria are rather sensitive and die off readily in the soil. They therefore cannot be depended upon to inoculate the following crop.
 Inoculation material can be purchased through local seed dealers. Those who grow soybeans for either hay or seed purposes will find it profitable to inoculate the seed before planting.
 Soybeans are a warm weather crop and require a warm soil before they will germinate well. They can best be seeded shortly after corn planting.

PASTURING ALFALFA DELAYS HAYING TIME

Clipping or pasturing part of the alfalfa crop when it is from three to six inches high—usually around May 1—has a number of practical advantages, according to L. F. Graber of the University of Wisconsin.
 Most important, they found that spring-clipped alfalfa usually produces a fine-stemmed, high-quality crop, free from lodging, and reaches the right stage for cutting in early July.
 Graber is urging Wisconsin farmers to meet the labor situation in part this year by clipping part of the crop and not the rest, thereby spreading the work of making hay and grass silage from about June 20 to July 10, and at the same time harvesting it all in good condition and with little danger of bringing disease into the second crop.
 During some years it may be satisfactory to cut old alfalfa fields by the middle of June. However such early cutting during an average year may result in serious leaf hopper injury and cause the alfalfa field to be short lived.
 While it is recognized that clipping has some disadvantages, their experiences and observation still leave them championing the method.
 Graber says that many alfalfa growers accomplished the clipping without labor and without waste by pasturing the alfalfa heavily for five to seven days after it reached a height of about three inches. The grazing should be quick and thorough, using four to six head of cattle to the acre. Pasturing can injure the alfalfa if it is prolonged beyond a week, or if the alfalfa is more than seven inches tall when the cattle are turned in.
 Since clipping is somewhat hard on the stand, it should be used only where the alfalfa is strong, healthy and vigorous. Usually that means two or three year old seedlings on fertile soil, where alfalfa is likely to become rank and coarse.

Haul YOUR PIGS to MARKET IN A WHEELBARROW?

Speedy trucks and fast freights carry hogs to these days. Feeding hogs on corn and grains is as inefficient in feeding as hauling hogs in a wheelbarrow. Feed KOCH'S IDEAL Hog Balancer along with your corn and grain. Your hogs will do better and you'll make more money.

No one can take her place in the heart of son or daughter.

So we are happy indeed to have this opportunity to remind you that next Sunday, May 10, is Mother's Day, and to suggest that you honor HER as you think she would most appreciate.

Lighted Windows

She took careful aim. Fired.

Wrecked on a desert island.

He flung his wet blue coat over the chair-back. Axe in hand he smiled at her from the threshold. Good, but not good enough. Did he think she didn't know that the outside fire was more to keep off marauding animals than to signal the boat, that she had forgotten those banshee howls? She steadied her lips and smiled back at him. This last hour had aged him unbelievably. It had set deep crow's feet at the corners of his eyes, etched lines between his nose and lips. Except for war service, all his luxurious life he had played hard and worked little. His once immaculate buckskin shoes oozed mud; his soaked white flannel trousers were criss-crossed with black lines, where wet shrubs had lashed at him; little green rivulets, sponsored by his necktie, were carving down the front of the silk shirt which was plastered to his body. His eyes with a laugh in their blue depths met hers.

"I don't like the suggestion of criticism of my appearance in your expression. You're not so hot yourself."

The liking she had felt for him during the first weeks of their acquaintance, which had flamed into love or fascination—crumbled into gray ashes of doubt and distrust, stole back. It warmed her voice.

"I'm a sight. I feel like a rag doll which has been left out in the rain."

She heard the crackle of brush under his feet. She lifted a rusty cover from the stove. Her thoughts raced on as she laid a fire of dry leaves and brush. Billy and Bruce had taught her woodcraft when they had taken her with them on their fishing expeditions. If only Bruce were with her instead of Ned Paxton.

She struck a match to escape the memory which set her heart pounding unbearably. She watched the dry leaves ignite before she clapped on the rusty cover. She listened. The fire roared. Had she put in too much fuel?

How the pesky thing smoked. She wiped her smarting eyes as she hunted for a damper. Her throat stung. It was humiliating not to be able to start a dinky little fire, but she would have to ask Ned to help. She stepped to the entrance for air.

What was that? Good grief! What was that behind the tree near him? A dog? A gray dog? A wolf? His eyes wouldn't be green. A wolf! What was hanging from the creature's cruel mouth? Cloth! A piece of plaid cloth caught on one yellowed fang. Sicken! She tried to call a warning. Her tongue dried to the roof of her mouth. Her body took a lurch with horror. The animal took a stealthy step toward the man on the stump. Stopped. Not a muscle rippled under its skin. Ned would have no chance to save himself.

Eyes on the motionless creature, Janice backed to the table, seized the revolver. On the doorkill she dropped to one knee. "Steady! Steady! Remember Jimmy's instructions," she warned herself. She took careful aim. Fired.

Man and beast leaped simultaneously. The wolf soundlessly slunk into the shadows. Paxton ran toward her, caught her shoulder. Shook her.

"Why in heaven's name did you do that?"

She steadied trembling lips. "It was a wolf—just back of you—he was watching you—hungrily. I thought—I thought—"

She dropped her head in her hands. Shuddered uncontrollably. "I shot at him? You shot him?"

"I shot at him? There was a touch of hysteria in her laugh. "I'm not too good."

ble creature moving toward you, land stuff."

He loosened the fingers still clutching the revolver, laid it on the table.

"Did you care when you thought me in danger, Janice?"

Her heart flew to her throat. Blue eyes aflame could be more terrifying than fierce green eyes.

"Care! Wouldn't you care if you saw a human being in peril of his life? Isn't the smoke stifling? Can't you do something to stop it?"

"I—!" He coughed, sneezed, wiped his eyes. "What's the matter with the infernal thing?"

Lids half shut, tears marking grimy furrows down his cheeks, he poked about the stove. Tears brimming from her smarting eyes, Janice tried to help. He shook that seemed to be a damper. The portion of the pipe which pierced the roof fell with a clatter which set her already taut nerves twanging like violin strings under the fingers of an impassioned virtuoso. A vicious orange-red fang shot from the standing smoke-stack, licked at the rotting branches of the roof. Damp as they were, they ignited. Fire ran from twig to twig.

The man and girl stared incredulously.

"We've done it now! Quick! Out of this!"

Paxton pushed her to the door, caught up the revolver as he dashed by the table. Janice grabbed her camera, snatched the tin of crackers. As they jumped to the mossy log she heard the crackle of wood. The walls of the shack were on fire.

Side by side they watched the lurid light inside flicker, flame, wane. Heat poured out as through the door of a furnace. Janice turned her back.

"I'm thoroughly toasted on one side. 'Tis an ill wind, etc.' It would have taken hours before an ordinary fire to dry our clothes. What is the next feature on this peppy program? It ought to be announced over a coast-to-coast hook-up."

Paxton's eyes shone blue and clear in his smoke-grimed face. "Janice, you're the best sport in the world. You set a great pace. He steadied his voice. "The fire's dying down. We'll have a warm, charred shack at our backs. That will be some protection."

"Protection from what?" She hated herself for the terrified catch in her voice.

"From prowlers. You heard the native pilot say that the volcano smoke would drive animals to the water. They will come down the bed of this brook from the interior."

Hours passed. Hours filled with nerve-racking suspense, listening, listening for the sound of a boat which did not come, with the drip of rain, the pelt of hail, flash of lightning and detonations of thunder. Janice dropped to the mossy log in front of the shack which gave out an acrid odor of smoldering wood.

Paxton carefully laid a heap of brush beside him as he dropped wearily to the log. The fire had died down to red coals.

He opened a gold cigarette case. "One left." He snapped it shut. "Glad you don't smoke. Otherwise I would have to sacrifice that on the altar of civility. Any crackers?"

She drew one grimy piece from her pocket. "The last?" She nodded.

"Put it back. I have indulged in too many calories already. I'll lose my boyish figure if I don't watch out."

"What's that?"

"What? Where?"

Janice gripped her sleeve. Pointed. Two lambent green dots glowed between low alders.

With a muttered imprecation, Paxton threw on the pitifully inadequate pile of brush beside him. The fire flared. The sinister torch of light retreated. From near at hand the blood-curdling wail was answered.

FIRST-AID to the AILING HOUSE

ROAD DUST CAN BE LAID WITH CALCIUM CHLORIDE

DUST on a road, a tennis court or other open space can be laid with calcium chloride flakes. This chemical can be obtained in many hardware stores and from dealers in mason materials and road supplies, and is inexpensive. It should be scattered on the surface at the rate of a pound and a half to the square yard. Even on a dry day the chemical will be liquefied by moisture picked up from the air and the liquid in combining with the surface dust, will form a crust. A few days later, another application should be made at the rate of a pound to the square yard. The crust formed by these two applications should last for some weeks. The crust will not be injurious to the paws of dogs and other small animals or to horses' hooves. Calcium chloride draws water from anything with which it is in contact. For instance, shoe leather will be dried out. For protection, rubber boots or overshoes should be worn when working with it, also gloves.

Wet Streak on Wall

Question: There is a wet streak on the wall of the entrance of a small apartment that starts about the middle of May; it dries out in clear warm weather, but appears in any humid period. It does not show when the furnace is going. A plumber blamed the roof, but the roofer claims that it is from the plumbing. Neither of them can locate the leak. What can you suggest?

Answer: From your description the wet spot is evidently from condensation. The spot where it appears is at a lower temperature than the house air. This may be because some part of the masonry wall projects through and is in direct contact with the plaster, or because openings in the wall subject that portion to a current of cool air. To check on this, compare the temperature of that portion of the wall with that of another portion that remains dry. The remedy depends so much on construction that it can be told only after an inspection.

Worn Shellac

Question: Several years ago our floors were given one coat of shellac, but owing to conditions, we were unable to do more. The shellac has now worn off in spots, but under furniture and in other protected places it is as good as new. Must the floors be sanded again?

Answer: That will not be needed. You can take the remaining shellac from the worn places by wiping with denatured alcohol. Then apply two coats of top quality shellac, not more than six months old—get the assurance of the dealer on this point—thinned with two quarts of denatured alcohol to every three quarts of shellac.

Moving Walls

Question: Foundations of our walls are hollow concrete block. The walls seem to be moving out, and the inside wall finish is cracking. The contractor recommends a concrete retaining wall on two sides from the ground level to below the footings. Do you think this would be wise?

Answer: The ground under your house evidently is filled in, or in the nature of quicksand. If the contractor knows his business and has made a thorough examination, his recommendation probably is correct. If possible, ask him to give you a written guarantee of satisfactory results.

Water Softener

Question: For the last five years I have been using a water softener that I bought second-hand. For this reason I do not know how old it is. For the past two years the zeolite has had to be regenerated with increasing frequency. I use about 100 pounds of salt per month. Can the efficiency of the zeolite be restored? Or must I purchase a new filling?

Answer: The zeolite has undoubtedly lost its efficiency. Considering the length of time the softener has been in use, I think that it has done very well. Write to the manufacturer about procuring another charge.

Wasps

Question: Wasps have made a nest under the eaves of our house. They did this last summer. What can we do now to drive them out and keep them from returning?

Answer: At dusk on a cool evening, when the wasps will be dormant, spray the nest heavily and suddenly with kerosene, which will stun them. Provide a stout paper bag, big enough to enclose the nest, which can be broken off inside it and then burned. Should the wasps show signs of returning, either this season or next, swab that section of the eaves with kerosene.

Field Mice

Question: We have just bought a summer home and have heard that field mice might get into the mattresses and couches. How can this be prevented?

Answer: As the last thing in closing the house at the end of the season, scatter one or two pounds of moth balls or even more over the furniture and in every room. Provide a box to fit over the top of the chimney, for that is one path by which mice and chipmunks might get in.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—It appears to this onlooker that there is a lag in this war in issuing pencils and paper to song-writers and putting them on

It's Time We Call a full-time Out Song Writers singing get-away in the first crack of the guns.

Possibly we are at least getting under way with Geoffrey O'Hara limbering up his writing-wrist with a ditty calculated to start a rush of bond-buyers to the neighborhood post office. Mr. O'Hara is a veteran song-leader of our 1918 singing and fighting days and the author of "K-K-K-Katy."

He has a copyright on "The Star Spangled Banner," taken out and duly recorded in 1929. This was his stepped-down version of the National Anthem. The copyright is a bit of a joke which, says Mr. O'Hara, will enable him to bequeath a singable National Anthem to his country in his will.

He scouted some interesting historical background in his professional Study of "The Star Spangled Banner" and how we got it. In England and Wales, in the late Eighteenth century, it was sung by tavern roisterers as "Anacreon in Heaven." They could reach the high notes easily. The explanation, Mr. O'Hara's researches disclosed, was that in a cold, foggy climate the larynx grows smaller, in order to keep out the weather. Therefore there are more tenor voices.

Mr. O'Hara probed still further and found that California had more basses and baritones than colder states. So he reset the anthem to a steam-heated singing range.

He came to the United States in 1904, at the age of 22 and worked four years as a clerk in the Canadian Bank of Commerce. All that time he was writing songs, surprised and happy when Caruso suddenly featured his "Your Eyes Have Told Me," and Al Jolson did the same for his "Tennessee."

Last month he was elected to membership on the board of the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers. He got his naturalization papers in 1919, and has been a diligent expounder of our democratic faith.

WE'VE asked a lot of philosophers, but we never could get it straight as to whether there could be any humor in a perfect universe.

Gets More Money Kidding Baseball Than Playing It

It is something to work with the Atlantic Charter millennium moving in after this war, there might not be any place for Al Schacht. His errant foolishness wouldn't do in such a perfectly ordered world.

But, in our present state of somewhat ostentatious imperfection, he still belongs, and today's good news is that the "Clown Prince of Baseball" is still clowning over in New Jersey just now, still touring the baseball circuits, making everybody happy with his durable pantomime.

We have an idea that if Al Schacht were shrewdly used he might be worth a brace of bat-fleeships to this country. As we see it many of the invocations of democracy which come from the Washington founts of erudition do not quite get the public ear; that they need a bit of "corn," in the Broadway lingo, or at any rate a widened public appeal and a dash of humor. If Al Schacht should take to ribbing Hitler before the baseball mobs, with an appropriate anticlimax for Der Fuehrer at the finish, it ought to help a lot in getting over the news that there is a war on.

He was a top-bracket player, bought by the Giants in 1917, and can still put a hop on a fast ball. He was literally born in left field—in the left field territory of what is now the Yankee Stadium. He was a whirlwind pitcher in high school baseball and was three years with Newark before the Giants bought him. He and Nick Altrock formed their famous comedy partnership with the Washington club.

He is a born comic and one of the best pantomimists in the country. When "Cash and Carry" Pyle of Bunion Derby fame was staging Suzanne Lenglen in tennis matches around the country, Al Schacht's act was a part of the program. It was a burlesque of Suzanne which set the crowds wild. Suzanne didn't happen to see it for the first few matches but when she did: "Meester Pyle, deescharge me!"

He had no trouble in making other engagements, his "take" rounding out about $50,000 a season.

A PATIENT fisherman who, at his Shadyside cottage in Maryland, prepares his bait carefully and waits for the big ones, has been given the fulltime job of co-ordinating the treasury's detective agencies.

He is Elmer Irey, treasury sleuth for 25 years, as head of the intelligence unit of the bureau of internal revenue. His unit, in prosecution of tax-evaders, liquor and narcotic racketeers, smugglers and other crooks, recovered $400,000,000 in 20 years. He netted Al Capone, Waxy Gordon and many others.

Balloons and Clouds

Unlike an airplane, a balloon has difficulty in going up and coming down through a cloud because the cold air in the cloud contracts the gas in the bag and reduces its lifting power, says Colliers. When the balloonist does not neutralize this quick reduction by throwing out the right quantity of ballast at the right moment, the bag will not enter the cloud during the ascent or will not drop through it at a safe speed during the descent.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To keep bacon from curling, cut ends into three or four strips with a knife.

A dibber is a good tool for bulb planting. Learn the knack of giving it a swinging twist to make the bottom of the hole round so the bulbs will not be "hung" with air space under them.

Try light brown sugar on any breakfast cereal. It takes less and adds greatly to the taste.

If the liquid from canned vegetables is drained before serving, it should be placed in the refrigerator in a tightly covered container. The vitamins will be better preserved if the liquid is not exposed to air.

Cookies that stand too long in the open will become crumbly. As soon as cookies have cooled, store them in a covered jar. The old-fashioned stone jar with heavy cover is one of the best of cookie containers.

THE POWER OF THE PRESS

Manufacturers and merchants sense the power of the press. Early they began using it to carry their advertising facts and ideas into homes.
