

U. S. Rangers in United Kingdom Train Under Combat Conditions

It is quite generally agreed that Germany will never be conquered until her army of occupation is driven out of Continental Europe. American forces, working shoulder to shoulder with Great Britain's, have long been preparing for the much talked of and vital Second Front. Above photo shows Sgt. Warren E. Evans (right) with one of the Commando sergeants with whom he is training somewhere in the United Kingdom.

Victory Parade

Live ammunition is used to create realistic effects, preparing the men for actual combat conditions, as shown in photo above.

One of the phases of Ranger beach landing operations, under the direction of Commando instructors, who are past masters at the art.

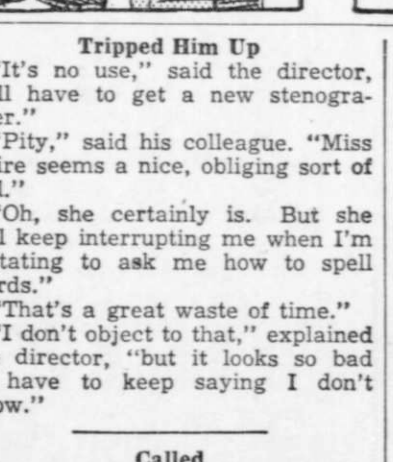

First Lt. Warren E. Evans, chosen as "Typical Ranger" of the battalion, is being congratulated by Brig. Gen. Lucian K. Truscott, U. S. officer on Lord Louis Mountbatten's Combined Operations Staff. Lieutenant Evans is 6 feet 4 inches tall and 24 years of age.

Axis Production Pounded
The bomber command of the RAF has been hammering at all key points in Axis-controlled Europe, with serious effects on Axis production. Apart from the colossal raids on Cologne and on Essen (the home of the Krupp works), the RAF has bombed Berlin, Milan, the Skoda works in Czechoslovakia, the Renault plant near Paris, Hamburg, Rostock, and Lubeck, Augsburg, and hundreds of other vital production centers and transportation points.

Meat
Secretary of Agriculture Wickard points out that current shortages of meat are due to unusually large demands for meat supplies for lend-lease, our armed forces, and increased domestic buying power coming during a period of seasonally light marketing of meat animals. He says that marked improvement may be expected about the last of September when this year's large crop of spring pigs and the range cattle start moving to market.

OUR COMIC SECTION

REVEALED
"It's no use," said the director, "I'll have to get a new stenographer."
"Pity," said his colleague. "Miss Faure seems a nice, obliging sort of girl."
"Oh, she certainly is. But she will keep interrupting me when I'm dictating to ask me how to spell words."
"That's a great waste of time."
"I don't object to that," explained the director, "but it looks so bad to have to keep saying I don't know."

Tripped Him Up
They had been quarreling because he had arrived home late again.
"Well, anyway," he snapped angrily, "I'm a man of my word. I call a spade a spade."
"Maybe, George," his wife retorted, "but you don't call a club a club—you call it working late."

HALTED
"I punctuated my tire the other day."
"Punctuated? You mean punctured, I suppose."
"Perhaps I do; but anyway, I came to a full stop."

Boomerang
The bride had finished throwing dishes at her hubby, then started to cry.
"But for one thing, I'd go home and stay with mother."
"What's that one thing?" demanded her husband.
"Mother's coming here to live with us. She's left father!"

Called
"Two bankers," she said, "were talking the other day about a financier who had failed."
"And did poor John take his failure like a man?" said the first banker.
"Exactly like a man," said the other. "He blamed it on the extravagance of his wife."

Like a Man
"Two bankers," she said, "were talking the other day about a financier who had failed."
"And did poor John take his failure like a man?" said the first banker.
"Exactly like a man," said the other. "He blamed it on the extravagance of his wife."

Too True
"It is easier to see the small defects of character than to see that they are small."
Veteran
Mrs. Gossip—So your daughter is about to marry. Do you really feel she is ready for the battle of life?
Mrs. Chatter—She should be. She's a veteran of four engagements already.

Playing Safe
A farmer and his wife were walking to the fair, the wife carrying a basketful of food. When they arrived at the fair, the farmer said: "Better let me carry the basket, Mary, we might get parted in the crowd."
Where It Hurts
"Come, come, son, this isn't going to hurt. Don't you know that Dr. Drill is a painless dentist?"
"Maybe he's painless, but I'm not."

Expensive
"It's as cheap as dirt."
"Dirt isn't cheap, when you figure in the laundry bills it makes."
Admiration
"I envy the man who sang the tenor solo."
"Really? I thought he had a very poor voice."
"So did I, but just think of his nerve."

FARM SHORT COURSE SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE
More than forty scholarships having a value of $15.00 to $75.00 are available to students who enroll in the farm short course at the College of Agriculture. These scholarships are made available by the regents of the University of Wisconsin, Sears-Roebuck & Co., Oscar Mayer Packing company and the Pure Milk Association of Chicago. The purpose of these scholarships is to assist young men in preparing themselves for more responsible positions in adult life. The requirements to obtain them vary somewhat with the rules set down by the donor, but all include these three requirements:

1. Average or above marks in school.
2. A short essay on a farm topic.
3. Good recommendations.

The farm short course opens on Nov. 16. Any one of the above mentioned scholarships will pay for one-third to one-half of the expenses. All applications for a scholarship must be in the county extension office by Oct. 12. Every deserving boy wishing to continue his schooling should avail himself of this opportunity.

PUT ONLY DRY POTATOES IN STORAGE
Many fields of late potatoes were heavily infected by blight and care should be exercised when digging them. Blight infected tubers will rot and spread the infection on to healthy ones. Potato growers will find it advantageous to leave potatoes thoroughly dry in the field after they are dug. In fields that have considerable blight infestation it may be desirable to store them temporarily on the barn floor or in a shed where there is ample ventilation. By spreading them over a large floor space, they can be thoroughly dried. Also much of the dirt will fall off and rotted tubers may be more readily detected and removed before they are placed into permanent storage. After the potatoes are placed in the cellar, keep them cool and dry. Much ventilation is necessary to remove moisture. Open the windows nights and keep them closed during the daytime when the weather is warm. This helps prevent the spread of blight rot in the bin. Potatoes should be stored in shallow bins this year.

FIELD BINDWEED
October is a good month to apply chemicals to kill field bindweed commonly known as Creeping Jenny. This weed is a vine which grows flat on the ground unless other plants are there for it to climb. Its leaves are from one to two inches long and are shaped somewhat like an arrow. The flowers have a pinkish-white color and have the same shape as the wild morning glory except that they are smaller. Its roots are about the size of a number 6 wire and penetrate deep into the ground. The weed spreads by seeds and by shoots growing from the underground lateral roots. Small patches of the weed can best be controlled by spreading evenly over the ground four lbs. of sodium chlorate per square rod.

STORING ROOT CROPS AND CABBAGE
The emphasis placed upon the family garden this year has resulted in the production of more than usual home grown vegetables. Many of these have been consumed during past months. Large quantities have been canned, dried, or preserved in some form for winter consumption. There is still much remaining that will be stored in the home cellar. Precautions used in properly storing vegetables will return big dividends in providing fresh vegetables for winter use.

The first requirement of good vegetable storage is to carefully examine all vegetables to see that only sound vegetables that are of good quality be stored. Damaged fruit should be sorted out for early fall use. The root crops that may be stored with reasonable success include beets, carrots, rutabagas, winter radish, turnips, and parsnips. It is advisable to leave all root crops in the garden as late as possible without heavy frosts. Remove the tops when harvesting; if excess dirt is present on the roots, it should be removed, care being taken to prevent injury to the skin of the vegetable otherwise rot may set in.

All root crops lose moisture when stored and shrivel in proportion to the loss of moisture. Keeping a high moisture content around the roots will prevent much shriveling. For this reason it is advisable to store such vegetables in separate containers where moisture can be added or controlled. Suitable containers for this purpose include jars, large cans like discarded milk cans, tight wooden boxes and other similar containers. All containers should be lined with several layers of heavy paper. The paper will help regulate the moisture content. Several layers of paper make a good cover for the stored vegetables. Do not use a tarred paper as the tar odor will be taken up by the vegetable.

Low temperatures from 35 to 40 degrees provide the most desirable storage temperatures. Moisture evaporation is slight at these low temperatures. Cabbage stores best when the temperature is kept low and when the roots are left attached.

Let's remember that root crops and most vegetables store best when the temperature is kept cool, and the air fairly moist. The average basement is much too warm for best storage conditions. It will pay to build a special storage chamber and properly insulate it from the rest of the cellar. Then

FARM AND HOME LINES

Wisconsin is the leading producer of vegetable crops for canning.

The roots of field bindweed have been found to grow as far down into the soil as 20 feet.

Wisconsin cranberry production is estimated to be 115,000 barrels, which is 16,000 barrels above 1941 production.

A Wisconsin Holstein owner, J. J. Marshall of Cazenovia, has a registered herd descended from one registered Holstein female.

Four scholarships to the farm short course at the University of Wisconsin are being offered by the Pure Milk Association. The winners will be chosen from PMA families who want to attend the short course at Madison November 16 to March 13.

long, shrill cry lifted above the roar of the shooting: "They're down in the canyon! Behind us! Look out!"

Apparently, not all of the rustler defenders had taken to the guard rocks and shelves above the floor. Ducking, dodging, men began to appear straight ahead of the three.

The first fury of the charge slackened. The fight became a series of individual battles, between Con, Martino, and Step, each hugging his shelter, and men of the other side similarly covered. The advantage was even.

From the flat ground behind his boulder, Con felt himself falling. "It's certainly cold for this time of year," he said politely to someone beside him.

She stepped through the train and that seemed strange to her. He wanted to tell her that he was—but who was he? He tried to remember, but Uncle Hugh only looked at him with blank face and refused to answer.

"You're Mr. Norris' sister's boy, Con."

Although only 27 years old at the time, Davis was a veteran at covering wars. From 1861 to 1865 he saw the capture of Port Royal; the fight between the Monitor and the Merrimac; the great battle at Shiloh; the first bombardment of Vicksburg; the battle of Antietam; the surrender of Vicksburg; the battle of Chickamauga; the siege and battle of Chattanooga; and finally he accompanied Sherman on his famous "March to the Sea."

After the war Harper sent him on a tour of the Western Plains during which he traveled more than 2,600 miles by stage-coach and once barely escaped with his life when the coach was attacked by the Indians.

Davis has left us a pictorial record of all these events, including the tragic spectacle of the field of battle where Lieutenant Kidder and his command were wiped out—

DIGESTIVE DISTURBANCES When an individual refuses food or a second helping of food and states that he or she is "on a diet," in most cases it is because they are attempting to reduce their weight.

There are two of them—Theodore R. Davis, "artist-correspondent" for Harper's Weekly, and Henry M. Stanley who was serving the Weekly Missouri Democrat of St. Louis and the New York Tribune.

As to ourselves and our habits of life, Dr. Daly suggests: 1. Avoid excesses of all kinds—overeating, overdrinking, overfatigue and great excitement.

Drugs by Mouth And by Injection Perhaps you wonder why a physician uses injections of drugs under the skin, into a muscle, or into a vein, instead of giving it by mouth.

Think for a minute and you'll remember that in a heart attack, a gall bladder attack, or an asthmatic attack, the physician injects the necessary drugs instead of giving them by mouth because he wants immediate action to save life or give prompt relief from pain.

There are many drugs that can be taken by mouth, in fact most drugs are taken by mouth but larger quantities must be taken, and the relief is not as prompt or effective.

What are the advantages of the injection of drugs? First, the drug gets immediately into the blood stream instead of having to go through the digestive system, where much of its strength is lost before it is absorbed into the blood.

REPORTS ON CONFERENCE

"War and its Effect on Education" was discussed at the annual state conference of principals and superintendents at Madison last week according to Clifford Rose, supervising principal of Kewaskum schools. Six hundred city and county school officials attended the meeting which had been called by State Superintendent John Callahan.

At the opening session he commented on the long working hours and sacrifices of schoolmen necessary in the interest of the war effort. It will be necessary for administrators to take-out additional time for classroom supervision since many teachers now teaching are not so well qualified as in former years. Many experienced teachers, both men and women, have been drafted into military or government office service.

He reminded the administrators that "Nothing else matters in Wisconsin besides education and the winning of the war."

Major Harold W. Kent of the army public relations bureau contended in his address Friday morning that, "Ignorance is not bliss these days; it is disaster."

In the following five point program Kent advocated what the army air force needs from education:

1. Mathematics should be taught in terms of military aviation problems.
2. Science and physics should be revised to include intensive study of airplane flight principles.
3. The importance of physical fitness cannot be over-emphasized in sports such as football and basketball, that increase team work. Every boy should take a physical test on the army standards to help correct his weaknesses.
4. Men should have training in English composition and public speaking so as to learn to take and give orders.
5. Since every American should know what our country is fighting for each pupil should be taught the background of the war and the comparative values of life in a Democracy as compared to life under a dictator.

Kent added, "If all boys know more of mathematics and physics prior to their induction, the number of 'wash-outs' would be greatly reduced. The army is finding American men are in none too good condition, deficient in mathematics and physics and lacking in knowledge of aerodynamics. More shop training should be given for both boys and girls."

Refugee Dr. Reinhold Schairer of the United States Committee of Education. Reconstruction warned against post-war isolation. He fled Germany when Hitler came into power.

"The greatest test of America," he said, "will be the work of reconstruction of Europe. If Russia is defeated Hitler will turn on England, then on South America, believing that if it could win these, it will check American power. Post war education requirements would demand that much more be spent for education than during war or peace time."

STUDENT COUNCIL MEETS

Student council members met on Tuesday in the commercial room to discuss the following problems: Election of officers. Operation of an information desk. Provision of a school newspaper and magazine. Plans for homecoming and pep meeting.

The meeting was conducted by Robert Brauchle, student council president, under the supervision of Margaret Browne, faculty advisor.

The information desk, a service begun three years ago, will again function. A council member is in charge each hour of the day to answer the school phone, welcome visitors, and take charge of lost and found articles.

David Bartelt and Bernice Meyer were elected vice-president and secretary of the council respectively.

The council's suggestion that a daily newspaper and magazine be provided for student use will be presented to the faculty for consideration.

MALE CHORUS ELECTION

Male chorus members elected their officers Tuesday. They are: President—Arthur Buss; secretary—treasurer—John Stellpflug; librarian—Leona Peter.

A ruling was passed that one absence a month will be permitted each member.

Rehearsals are devoted to polishing the theme song, "Stout-Hearted Men" by Hammerstein-Bombardier. Work has begun on an old sea-chanty, "Bells on the Sea," by Lamb-Solman.

A Christmas spirit hangs about the girls' choruses for they have started practicing their Christmas music.

PLAN ALL-SCHOOL SHOW

An all-school show of student composition and student production is being organized to replace the usual fall performance of an operetta, announced Clifford Rose, supervising principal of the Kewaskum high school. Although a definite date has not been set, the general theme, fall activities, and a theme song, "Shine On Harvest Moon," have been selected as the nucleus about which to build the program.

Rachel Brauchle, general chairman appointed the following committee: Publicity: Bob Brauchle, Glen Abel, Music: Allen Kleinhans, Harriet Stoefel, Beatrice Hafemann, Narrative: David Bartelt, Bernice Meyer, Joy Zanow, Marjorie Bartelt, Lighting: Tony Bach, Glenway Backus, Stage Director: John Stellpflug.

The faculty advisors are Miss Georgia Simmons and Miss Hulda Kohlbek.

KEWASKUM HIGH COMEDY HITS

Sophomore biology students were busily engaged in a discussion of leavening agents. Upon being asked, "What is an enzyme?" one nautically inclined pupil replied, "An enzyme's an officer in the navy."

And then there was the boy who didn't know that one subject of study may have two names. It so happened that the young man in the case had received an unusually low grade on a test in social problems, the title of the course as indicated on his program. Seeing him sitting in study hall the day following the test obviously doing nothing, the social problems teacher remarked to him, "I suppose you received that low grade in sociology because you study so hard during your study hall period."

With a questioning look the boy uttered an almost inarticulate, "Huh?"

The teacher repeated, "It must be because you study so hard this way that you got that low grade in sociology."

In a tone of disgust the boy replied, "What do you mean? I don't take sociology!"

The oft-repeated maxim, "A pun is the lowest form of wit," means nothing to one of the senior English students.

When the class had been asked in general, "What is a metaphor?" the punster replied, "For cows to eat in."

DO AIR RAID REGULATIONS

Senior girls taking secretarial practice have finished cutting stencils and mimeographing air raid regulations for the village. For the last two weeks they have been in this way getting practical experience in office work under the guidance of Miss Margaret Browne, commercial teacher. The secretarial practice class is a small group of six who meet second hour. They are: Lorraine Eberle, Delores Fick, Marion McElhatton, Evangeline Schmidt, Rose Ellen Schmitz, Lorraine Zuehlke.
