

Committee Ready For Third War Loan Drive

The reorganized War Finance committee is practically ready now for the opening of the third war loan drive which begins Sept. 9. As was announced last week, Washington county's quota is $2,475,000—over double what the quota was during the second war loan drive this past April.

The third war loan drive throughout the United States, as well as right here in Washington county, will be concentrated on a house to house farm to farm canvass for individual participation. The 500 Minute Men of the Washington County War Finance committee will contact every income earning person throughout Washington county immediately after the opening of the drive on Sept. 9. So that no one will be missed during this drive, a list has been made up of all the people 18 years and over who reside in Washington county. This has been broken down into blocks in the cities and into sections in the townships. An order blank is being typed out for each and every name on this list. These order blanks will then be distributed to the Minute Men who will work the various blocks or sections throughout the county. In this way everyone will be contacted and the control list will be checked by the city, village and township chairmen who are in charge of the house to house and farm to farm canvass in their own community.

The job is a big one this time and requires the all-out participation of every resident of Washington county to put this thing over the top.

Robert H. Rolfs, executive chairman of the Washington County War Finance committee, has announced his community division committees who are in charge of the house to house farm to farm canvass which will be made by the 500 Minute Men. Harold O. Leiser is general chairman of the community division. The local chairmen are as follows:

- CITIES: West Bend, Henry Arndt; Hartford, Armand Hauser.
- VILLAGES: Barton, G. E. Otter; Germantown, Alfred Schwalbe; Jackson, Elmo Rosenheimer; Kewaskum, L. P. Rosenheimer; Slinger, J. J. Bull.
- TOWNSHIPS: Addison, G. A. Eichman; Barton, John Van Beek; Erin, Thomas J. Manning; Farmington, Fred C. Weinreich; Germantown, Hugo Dhein; Hartford, John H. Frey; Jackson, Alwin Schowalter; Kewaskum, James Emmer; Polk, Alfred O. Staus; Richfield, Albert A. Ebling; Trenton, Dr. H. F. Weber; Wayne, Frank P. Wietor; West Bend, John N. Peters.

Fluoroscope Trailer to Hold Clinic at West Bend

The "health wagon" is coming on Tuesday, Aug. 31.

By the "health wagon" is meant the fluoroscope trailer of the Wisconsin Anti-Tuberculosis association. While the "wagon" will not bring health to anyone, its machinery is intended to find tuberculosis cases that they may be placed under treatment, thereby assisting the sick person in fighting disease and stopping the flow of infection to others.

The trailer will be parked in the back of the West Bend high school and will be open from 9:00 to 11:30 a. m. and from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. as only a short time is necessary for the examination. Those coming can be in and out of the trailer within a very few minutes.

It is hoped that the clinic will be attended especially by the following: those referred by physicians, former sanatorium patients, those who have reason to suspect that they have tuberculosis, members of families in which there has been tuberculosis and those who have been in contact with persons having the disease and reactors to the tuberculin test.

Individuals will not be charged for the fluoroscope. The clinic is being made possible by the Washington County Health committee through funds appropriated by the county board.

Moving 2-Man Jap Sub on Highway Some Feat

When the two-man Japanese submarine captured at Pearl Harbor arrives in West Bend Monday, Aug. 23, on its war savings national tour for the U. S. Treasury, it will have traveled around the rim of the United States, from San Francisco to the Oregon line, down to San Diego through Arizona, New Mexico and Texas south to the mouth of the Rio Grande, up to Fort Worth and Dallas via Houston and East Texas, through New Orleans, Biloxi, Mobile, Birmingham, Atlanta, through the Carolinas and Virginia to Washington, D. C. Thence it makes its way on the first overland submarine cruise in history up to Maine and then westward along the Great Lakes.

Beside the Salton Sea in the California desert it was 150 feet below sea level; snaking over the hairpin turns of the Mule Mountains highway into the copper town of Bisbee, Arizona, it was nearly 6,000 feet up. Motorists and truck drivers who passed it above the clouds were badly shaken by the experience; submarines are rare in the Rocky Mountains.

No equal load in length and weight combined had ever been hauled 9,200 feet in inter-state traffic. Including the tractor that hauls the semi-trailer on which the 81-foot submarine travels, the rig is 94 feet long and weighs 75,000 pounds.

When the treasury borrowed the submarine trophy from the navy last October, hauling experts had to solve five major problems: bridge load capacity, low underpasses, sharp curves, mountain grades and traffic safety. Even with the weight distributed among five axles and eighteen wheels on the tractor-trailer, the front axle carries 11,000 pounds, the twin drive axles 35,000 pounds and the twin rear axles 30,000 pounds, so that only first class highway bridges can safely carry

SUB COMING TO WEST BEND

This two-man Japanese submarine will be in West Bend, Monday, Aug. 30, from 10:00 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. at Sixth avenue and Main St. Tickets for a preferred inspection can be obtained at any bank, post office or savings and loan association. All you need to do is purchase a war bond of any denomination to obtain a free ticket.

The load. State highway engineers are consulted to lay out the route in each state it enters.

The problem of low underpasses and cross-beams overhead on bridges was solved by mounting the cigar-shaped sub on two huge rings. A power winch rotates the submarine in a jiffy, so that the conning tower lies over on one side, and the clearance is reduced from 15 feet 6 inches to only 10 feet 6 inches above the pavement. In cities this device is used to clear low trolley wires.

The problem of hairpin turns and narrow street corners was met by using a new device called a "stinger" in the center of the trailer. This automatically steers the wheels in the path of the front wheel and takes the place of the family tillerman on the rear of a hook-and-ladder truck going to a fire—the crew calls it the "iron fireman." Few Americans have ever seen one of these stinger reaches before the Japanese submarine comes to town.

The power to pull the load up steep grades was met with a 250-horsepower diesel tractor unit. The submarine has surmounted the grades on such dizzy, winding roads as those over Mt. St. Helena hump and the famed Redwood Highway, north of San Francisco, the Cuyama Pass north of Santa Barbara, and most difficult of all the tortuous highway that rises to near 6,000 feet and then snakes down into Bisbee from Tombstone, Arizona.

The traffic problem arose the first day on the road, Oct. 27. Going from Mare Island Navy Yard through San Francisco, the submarine switched its steel tall around a street corner and took all the windows out of one side of a loaded overland bus. Luckily, none of the bus passengers were seriously hurt. Again in Oakland, where a 22 feet behind the rear wheels of the "dolly" trailer, took a bite out of an unwary motorist's car. After that the state highway patrol added a second patrol car to guard the rear and there has been no accident since then, thanks to constant vigilance of state and local police.

SILK, NYLON HOSIERY PROGRAM TO CONTINUE

There have been rumors that the silk and nylon hosiery program is to be discontinued. This is not true. The textile division requests that we continue our silk and nylon program as long as possible. Surprisingly, collections of both silk and nylon hosiery are still coming in sizable quantities and we ask that you continue your effort on this program.

According to the last official bulletin which we received, Wisconsin was in eighth place nationally, with total shipments of 68,274 pounds. The grand total for the entire country to date is 1,771,588 pounds. Recent reports from Green Island, New York, indicate that the percentage of rayons in shipments from retailers is becoming greater. It is only reasonable to expect that some rayon will be collected with silk and nylon, but we want to keep the rayon collection at an absolute minimum and discourage it wherever possible. There are no facilities for reclaiming rayon

Sgt. Kohn Home After 1 1/2 Years in Alaska, Aleutian Islands

Master Sgt. Ralph L. Kohn surprised his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kohn, and friends here when he arrived home last Friday evening to spend a furlough after 1 1/2 years of service in Alaska and against the Japanese in the Aleutian Islands with the army signal corps. Several weeks ago Sgt. Kohn wrote his mother and asked her not to write until she heard from him again as he was being transferred, also that she inform us of his whereabouts until he walked in Friday.

Sgt. Kohn has completed his three year period of enlistment. He served in the states 1 1/2 years before being assigned to overseas duty. After leaving the states he was stationed at Anchorage and other bases in Alaska. At January when he was sent to the Aleutian Islands. He saw service in the combat areas in the Aleutians since that time. Ralph was stationed only 40 miles from Japanese held Kiska Island, scene of much aerial bombing, and could hear the exploding of the bombs from his base when they were dropped on Kiska. Many times the bombing raids were as frequent as twice a day.

Although he did not get a chance to actually fight the enemy, Kohn saw many of the Nips and came in direct contact with them. Those he saw were mostly Jap flyers and prisoners, some of whom were penned in a prison camp on the island. He often picked up Jap broadcasts and listened to them jabber over the radio. Ralph claims that the Yanks have the men and equipment and all that is holding them back from driving the Japs off Kiska Island is the intense fog and poor flying conditions. He says this climate isn't bad but as for drinks and girls, he didn't see either one during his many months on the island.

Ralph has three decorations, one for duty overseas, one for pre-Pearl Harbor service and the third for good conduct. He has also earned the stripes of a master sergeant. Modest and saying little, he wears neither the stripes nor decorations—just a plain army uniform. His work in the army is with radar, secret new weapon of the Allies.

Sgt. Kohn came as far as Edmonton, Canada, by plane on his furlough and the rest of the way by train. He was given a 15-day furlough but after arriving asked for and was granted an extension and now can remain home until Sept. 7, the day after Labor day. His 3-year period of enlistment ends with the present furlough, following which he will go to California to re-enlist. Ralph intends to enlist for overseas duty again.

'They Advanced Our Operations by a Week'

High above Sicily groups of gliders dip earthward as silently as the air which flowed smoothly over their streamlined surfaces. They swoop to a stop in some remote farm field. Men, heavily armed quickly step from the gliders, then dash for cover. The only sound is the booming of nearby enemy and invading force fire. At the rear, enemy lines are thrown into confusion by a barrage from grenades and howitzers. The glider borne troops are at work. With its fire divided the enemy fails to stop the invading troops who take a beachhead and rapidly advance inland.

The training of glider pilots begins in light planes like this. After eight weeks they progress to larger sailplanes, the transport gliders.

Victory Parade

The sudden morale shattering attacks of glider borne troops which dropped out of the night sky so disrupted enemy defenses in Sicily that General Sir Bernard L. Montgomery said: "They advanced our operations by a week."

Troops leap from the glider and charge through a protective smoke screen to take nearby enemy installation by surprise. Just such attacks marked the largest air borne troop operations in history which began at about 10 p. m. the night of the Sicilian invasion.

Weeks of practice train every man for the specific job he is to do upon landing. This fighter drops into prone position and sights his rifle.

High over enemy territory tow lines are released and gliders swoop downward. A glider released at 20,000 feet can reach a field 60 miles distant.

Mussolini's Meteoric Career Recalled as He Makes Exit

How Italy's Master Rose to Power and Why He Collapsed

By ELLIOTT J. PINE

On July 25, 1943, Benito Mussolini, dictator of Italy for 21 years, tearfully resigned his offices, and turned his government over to King Victor Emmanuel. The immediate reason for the dictator's relinquishing of power is said to be his inability to obtain greater military aid from Germany. The Fascist council voted 19 to 7 against accepting his plan of abandoning more than half the country to the Allies, and of establishing a defense line in the north. When Mussolini realized that he could not enforce his will as he was accustomed, he stepped out, or according to other accounts, was forced out.

More basic than this dispute on war plans, however, was the increasing and bitter distrust of Mussolini, and the Fascist party he headed. The Italian people, most observers say, never wished to enter World War II. Defeats, losses and hardships have turned the people of Italy away from Fascism, and revolt was brewing ever hotter. When Mussolini went, Fascism ended too.

King Victor Emmanuel, who has always retained the shadow of authority, has given the official version of the situation in this statement: "His Majesty, the King-Emperor, has accepted the resignation from the office of chief of government, prime minister, and secretary of state, which was tendered by His Excellency, signor Benito Mussolini, and has appointed as chief of government, prime minister, and secretary of state, His Excellency, Marshal of Italy, signor Pietro Badoglio."

At the time this statement was made public, it was pretended that Mussolini's ill health was the reason for his leaving office, but this rather weak excuse was soon dropped.

The new government thus established by the king and Marshal Badoglio is generally considered to signify the end of the Fascist party. The structure that held Italy tightly for two decades apparently has collapsed by the removal of one man. Actually the party has been crumbling from within for years, say informed correspondents.

Fascism Began 24 Years Ago. "Fascism" as a name dates from March 23, 1919, when Mussolini and 145 others organized the "Fasci Italiani di Combattimento" meaning, "Italian fighting groups." The word "Fasci" comes from the old Roman symbol of authority, the "Fasces," a beheading ax with a bundle of scourging rods bound on the handle. It can be seen on the reverse of an American dime.

During the following two years, this little party increased rapidly. While Mussolini did not actually found it, perhaps, he at least was one of its earliest and strongest leaders. He soon came out in front, a vigorous man of 38, with a compelling manner and oratorical persuasiveness.

He was born in 1884, the son of a village blacksmith and country school teacher, in Predappio, Romagna province. When he completed grade school, he became a teacher in a neighboring village, and soon took to stumping speaking for the Socialist party. His political activities brought him into several clashes with the law. He became a writer, and rose to be editor of the Socialist organ, "Avanti."

During World War I, he served as a corporal, and participated in the Fiume campaign of 1919. Soon after being discharged from service he met a few kindred spirits, and began the organization of the Fascists.

It was a time of great unrest and unemployment. Although victorious in the war, Italy had suffered heavy losses, and was oppressed by a ponderous war debt. Being a country naturally poor in resources and only slightly industrialized at the time, the post-war depression bore down more heavily than on other nations. Many were embittered about their frustrated hopes for territorial gains through the Versailles treaty. They blamed Britain and France for leaving Italy out.

The wealthy and conservative class feared the spread of communism, and many churchmen added their voices to the clamor. The national assembly was divided into numerous bickering and log-rolling factions, and the premier, signor Facta, was not a strong enough man for a crisis.

The March on Rome. Assembling the Fascist militia, the party's private army, in Civitavecchia, on October 27, 1922, he began the famous "March on Rome."

When he approached the capital with 250,000 armed men, Premier Facta, and Marshal (then General) Badoglio begged the king, the same Victor Emmanuel, to stop the marchers with machine gun fire and the bayonets of the regular army. The king, who hated bloodshed, refused to give the order. Three days later, he acceded to Mussolini's demands, and appointed him premier. From that day onward, Mussolini has been continuously in complete control of Italy, until the other day. Ironically, he turned his power over to Victor Emmanuel and Badoglio, who might have stopped him 21 years earlier.

As soon as Mussolini found himself firmly in the saddle, he set about making himself and his party absolute. All political parties were banned except the Fascist, and many social, cultural and religious societies were closed down under the force of these laws. Party members were placed in every position of authority in the civil and military administration. Business and professional men soon found it to their advantage to join the party, or to get on good terms with some important member.

For a time, the Fascist regime appeared to be a decided benefit to Italy. Domestic order was restored, business and finance stabilized and encouraged, employment stimulated by public works, and a program of social benefits put into operation. The Fascist regime floated international loans, built hydroelectric plants, opened mines, drained swamps, introduced new manufactures, and in many ways brought temporary advantages and prosperity to Italy, accustomed to backwardness and poverty.

DON'T BOTHER THE PILOT—A propaganda poster showing Mussolini at the controls of a big bombing plane (he is an amateur flier), warned Italians in 1933 "not to disturb the pilot, especially when he is engaged in tempestuous navigation; nor ask the way at every turn."

This appeal for blind and unquestioning faith in the wisdom of the leader is the keynote of Fascism, as of all dictatorships. Mussolini "piloted" Italy into the war, then when the navigation really got "tempestuous" he "bailed out."

But the Italians soon discovered the price of these gains was the loss of liberty. In 1925, Mussolini, or Il Duce, "the leader," as he liked to be called, had a law passed legalizing his position as prime minister, and rendering him responsible to no one but the king. This meant, in effect, that he could do as he pleased.

During the twenties Italy shared somewhat in the prosperity of the post-war world, but the great depression fell heavily on the nation, the more so because of its reliance on international trade. Its artificial prosperity began to crumble, despite tight controls, and unrest and dissatisfaction began to fester here and there, under cover.

Land Hunger. Meanwhile Mussolini was thinking of expanding Italy territorially. The League of Nations had prevented him from undertaking any small wars of conquest, such as were common in the 19th century. In 1923, he had a "casus belli" against Greece, but he did not push the issue to open war. Nothing occupied his large army excepting patrol action in North Africa.

In 1933, Adolf Hitler rose to power as chancellor of Germany, as head of the National Socialists, or Nazis, a party that had much in common with the Fascists of Italy. Mussolini soon welcomed his imitator, and began to plan international adventures.

Nevertheless, a year later, when Hitler began to threaten Austria, Il Duce offered to support that weak state. Next year Italy declared war

'Let Us Live Like Lions'

IN HIS SECOND YEAR of rule, 1923, Premier Mussolini was already showing his yearning to rattle the sword. He sent such a sharp diplomatic note to Greece on the murder of members of an Italian commission on the Greek-Albanian frontier, that world cancelleries feared a war was near.

on Ethiopia, Mussolini's first openly imperialistic move, and a successful defiance of the League.

Italian and German policies were moving closer together through similarity of interests, and Hitler and Mussolini began concluding a series of treaties and agreements that culminated in the formation of the "Rome-Berlin Axis."

Both Italy and Germany sent troops into the Spanish civil war. The Italian troops showed even then their distaste for fighting, but the officers gained valuable experience with new weapons and tactics, especially airplanes and tanks.

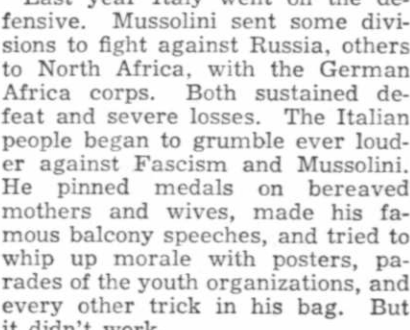

Mussolini joined in signing the Munich Agreement that was supposed to assure "peace in our time" as Neville Chamberlain put it. Knowing that a great war was around the corner Mussolini then turned his attention to bringing his army, navy, and especially his air force to full strength.

'Stab in the Back.' When France was staggering to defeat in the spring of 1940, Mussolini thought he saw the long sought opportunity for important territorial acquisitions without much loss or risk. He entered to war on the side of Germany, hoping to get a few French islands. President Roosevelt characterized this move as a "stab in the back." From then on, Italy was in World War II. All looked rosy as long as the German blitzkrieg continued to smash ahead, but in 1941 English troops defeated the Italians in two widely separated African campaigns, and the Italian navy lost heavily in several actions.

Last year Italy went on the defensive. Mussolini sent some divisions to fight against Russia, others to North Africa, with the German Africa corps. Both sustained defeat and severe losses. The Italian people began to grumble ever louder against Fascism and Mussolini. He pinned medals on bereaved mothers and wives, made his famous balcony speeches, and tried to whip up morale with posters, parades of the youth organizations, and every other trick in his bag. But it didn't work.

Then came the North African campaign, when the Italian soldiers surrendered in large masses, plainly revealing their war-weariness. The invasion of Sicily moved so swiftly, not only because of the weight of armaments, but because of feeble resistance at many points. Everywhere the people welcomed the Allied troops.

When Rome was bombed, Mussolini's long hypnotic spell was broken. If he could not even protect the capital, said the people, how could he hope for victory? The Italians were tired of war, tired of privations and restrictions. Il Duce got out, just in time, according to majority opinion, to avert a civil war.

FASCISM ON THE RUN—A photograph showing Mussolini setting the pace for his army officers during maneuvers in September, 1938, ironically symbolizes the hasty exit of Fascism in July, 1943. This time, too, the running was fittingly led by Il Duce.

A SUBDUED AND TIRED OLD man, Mussolini, nearing 60, met Hitler a few months ago in a war conference. The former dictator, who once regarded "der Fuehrer" with disdain as an upstart imitator, has been forced to recognize the German as his master. For the last four years, Italy has been practically a vassal state.

Shrewd and realistic Mussolini probably could foresee his own downfall during the course of these anxious discussions.

WITH FEATURES GRIMLY SET under his steel helmet, Mussolini fancied himself a "modern Julius Caesar." But he did not have the fighting spirit of the Roman empire behind him. Emil Ludwig, the biographer, says he failed because: "He aspired to military conquest with the help of an unmitigated people. His armaments and threatening speeches in the end drove him into this alliance with Germany, without which he never could have challenged Britain and America."

"He knew England's power, but had ludicrous ideas about America. He hated the Germans and said to me once that Europe's history would have been a better one if the Teutons had been beaten by the Romans and not vice versa."

"He spoke to me with envy of the military spirit of Germany—a spirit to which he could never rouse his people. That is why he fell for the giant war machine of Prussia as some delicate women fall for a prizefighter."

Kathleen Norris Says: No Husband Is Perfect

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

Carol reads his paper at breakfast; I read mine. We both keep an eye on Jackie, and she finishes his milk and gets off in time. This five days a week.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

NOTHING weakens a woman's will like a love affair. Nothing so completely turns reason topsy-turvy and breaks down the principles she codes that have been years of training.

When it comes some years after marriage, to a wife who has begun to doubt her own charm, begun to fear that her day of compliments and thrills is over, what a love-affair does to her spirits, how it brightens her eyes and renews her zest for life!

And what a terrible pity that is, like strong drink, gambling, horse-racing, firms and turnip in a new passion has to be used with extreme caution, or it ruins everything.

That's the way civilization has wrecked it out; a hard way, but the only safe road to follow. One man for one woman, and fidelity from both, and no teasing and playing with love along the sidelines. If you have a husband who is even 50 per cent satisfactory, you've done as well as most women, have no more to desire than they have, and would be wise to draw most of your happiness from other sources.

What Love Causes Suffering. It would be pleasant if an attractive wife could have an affair with a strange man—say a handsome young captain recently stationed in her neighborhood. Pleasant if no body would be hurt. But the catch is that somebody is hurt—the other husband and wife suffer the tortures of Purgatory; children suffer, neighbors and families are disappointed if not scandalized, and in the end the lovers pay, too. Neither one, all the rest of his or her days, is particularly proud in looking back to those delicious hours of passion.

So make up your mind before the affair really gets under way, that what is being the law for strong and self-respecting folk for generations is the right law; faithfulness to that promise made on a June day of radiant happiness and confidence so many years ago.

Here is a letter from a woman who wants to jump the ropes after 11 years of marriage. Of course I am going to advise her not to do it, but the chances are she'll do it anyway. She has only to look at the pitiful failures of some of the men and women who have done it to see what she is letting herself in for, but no one ever does when an affair has gotten a good start.

"TILL DEATH US DO PART"

Strict adherence to the marriage vows as a foundation for self respect and the respect of others, is the basis of this week's advice by Kathleen Norris. She reminds a woman, who is about to bring tragedy to her child through divorce, that all men, even her husband, have faults, and that if she has a partner who is even 50 per cent satisfactory, she has done as well as most women. In her letter, this woman writes that she and her husband "simply don't exist for each other." She believes she can find happiness by marrying another man.

with them, and walk back to a quiet house to wait for the others. "About two months ago I met an army doctor of 51; I am 34. From the first moment we two liked each other, and now our feeling is something much stronger. Harry is married, has two grown girls; he and his wife have been estranged, though living together with every outside appearance of harmony for many years. He is a commissioned, will go back to private life after the war, and lives in a distant suburban town. We want, I will say frankly, to get divorced and be free to marry; I to keep Jackie with me. The lawyer to whom I spoke about it said that with a minor child that was customary, but I would have to make it very clear, as Carol has a sister with young children, who would gladly take Jackie.

Plans Home With Doctor. "My problem is, to find some place in the West where I could take my boy, and where we could live quietly during the processes of divorce. Meanwhile Harry would write his wife and set the wheels in motion there. Then, if he is sent, as he expects to be, overseas, I will go to his own town, establish myself and Jackie there, and begin at once to make friends and prepare a home for his return. What do you think of that plan and where would you advise me to go? I have not attempted to tell you what this inrush of new happiness and love means to me, how good life suddenly seems, how miraculously changed is the world; I will spare you that." And she signs it, "Joyfully yours."

Poor Winifred, her letter is one of the most pitifully deluded I ever read, the most childishly blind. Does she imagine for one moment that a doctor—of all professions!—is going to re-establish a good practice in a suburban town whose every resident knows that when he went off to war he threw over his wife for another woman? Does she really think that, having completely failed to hold her first husband's interest and companionship, she is capable of starting off with a new, almost unknown, husband, and making a success of it? If she does she is heading for a terrible disillusionment.

For one thing, Carol, with a good sister to whom to send him, is very unlikely to give up his child. Pang first for Winifred. Then in Harry's unknown suburban town she has not a friend. She would be homesick and strange, disliked from the start and suffering a heavy handicap. More pangs. Then when she discovered that a dull life makes a dull husband, that Harry wasn't so very different from Carol, and that at least part of the trouble in her first marriage was her fault, she would really begin to suffer.

Far better for her to change herself than change her situation. Change into someone amusing and intelligent, and above all, affectionate.

Change the way she does her hair and the things she talks about at dinner. Change Sundays so that she goes to the club with husband and son, and swims and plays bridge and gets interested in other lives, as they do.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

You Can Stretch Meats and Have Delicious Meals

Leftovers need not reline on the refrigerator shelf when you can make them into delicious meat pies like this, simply and easily. Use leftovers from a roast with a few fresh vegetables and gravy to tuck inside the flaky piecrust.

Short on red points at the end of the week? There are several answers to the problem and I'm devoting the column to those suggestions today.

It's a good idea to be smart in your use of leftovers, and this is particularly true if you've splurged at the beginning of the week by purchasing a roast. After using with the roast twice, you still have a bit of meat left on the bones, and if you fix it with an eye to camouflage, you can have a savory meal out of it.

Best way of extending meat when there's little enough of that is by using vegetables generously. Cut off what pieces of meat you can find on the bone and combine these with some lovely, fresh-cooked vegetables such as carrots, peas, onions, potatoes and perhaps a few strips of green pepper for flavor. Combine all together with some of your favorite seasonings and tuck the whole mixture into these individual meat pies. In this way, your leftovers won't languish in the refrigerator.

Making Meat Pies. Sift together 2 cups all-purpose flour and 3/4 teaspoon salt. Cut into this 3/4 cup lard with spatula and work until the particles are the size of a small pea. Sprinkle 4 tablespoons water over the mixture, working it lightly with a fork until all the particles are moistened and in small lumps. Press dough into a ball, handling as little as possible. Flour board lightly. Divide pastry in half, roll lightly to an eighth-inch thickness. Using a 3 1/2-inch pie plate, cut circles from pastry.

Cut 1/2-inch wedge from circle to insure better fit into muffin tins. Press the pastry lightly to fit tins and lap over wedge. Fill with meat-vegetable mixture. Roll out remaining dough, cut in circles to fit over top of each muffin tin. Press edges of crust together. Bake in a hot oven (400

Here's a lovely, luscious dessert that will go with any of the above main dish suggestions. It's easy to make and very nutritious:

Apricot Whip. (Serves 6 to 8)

- 1 No. 2 1/2 can apricots
- 2 cups milk
- 2 eggs
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Drain apricots. Mash with spoon. Chill. Scald milk. Beat eggs slightly, then add sugar and salt. Add milk slowly, mixing well. Cook in double boiler stirring constantly until mixture coats metal spoon. Take from fire, add vanilla and chill. When ready to serve, fold in chilled, mashed apricots.

Frugality Is a Virtue Again, And the Going's Fun, Too!

By ELIZABETH MacRAE BOYKIN

Making something out of nothing gives one a fine glow of achievement, especially these days when we're all conscious of the rebirth of old-time frugality—and finding the going more fun than we expected. And making something beautiful and eye-filling out of snips of paper, sharp scissors and paste is not only following in the tried and true footsteps of an ancient art known as decoupage but is a fine way to solve the problem of a lobbey-gone-to-war. This is the art of decorating trays, furniture, boxes, screens and panels with designs cut out of paper and pasted on. If priorities have cut deep gaps in your leisure-time homework (such as photography), and might turn your hand to this ancient art and achieve not only beauty—but practical results too.

Right now you may be wondering what to do with all these tools, but let your eye wander about your home and your imagination will do the rest. For example, make a gay fireplace camouflage for summer living out of a piece of wall-board cut to fit the opening of your fireplace; decorate this with a magnificent decoupage flower bouquet to hide the fireplace opening—and to bring summer indoors. There is no limit to the exotic effects you can achieve; with a sort of mad abandon you can mix your flowers with never a thought to climate, season or chemistry.

When armored knights met, it was customary for each knight to raise the visor of his helmet as a means of identification. This gesture has come down through all armies in the form of the salute. Traditional, too, is the Army man's preference for Camel cigarettes. With men in the Army, Navy, Marines, and Coast Guard, actual sales records in their service stores show that Camel is the favorite. It's one of the favorite gifts with service men. County Agent Notes

ROTONONE MADE AVAILABLE FOR CABBAGE DUSTING
Rotonone has been made available as an emergency control poison for cabbage insects. The cabbage worm is unusually plentiful this year and victory gardeners will find it necessary to use control measures. Dusting cabbage with rotonone is the best method of controlling these insects. Also rotonone is not poisonous to humans and can, therefore, be used on plants after the heads of cabbage have formed.

KEEPING APPLES FROM DROPPING
The apple crop in Washington county is fairly good and a harvest considerably larger than the one of a year ago may be expected. Early varieties are now available on the market and are selling at a good price with a ready demand. It is still a little too early to predict with any degree of certainty what the late varieties will yield. We may still have a heavy dropping of the fruit due to dry weather or to severe winds. Growers can protect themselves somewhat against excessive apple drop by a hormone spray.
During the past few years a number of Wisconsin fruit growers tested several different kinds of harvest spray materials which were applied for the purpose of keeping apples from dropping. Most of the testing was carried out on Wealthy, McIntosh, Snow, Golden Delicious, and Jonathan varieties. Reports from these growers indicate that the results are as much dependent on the kind of spray material used as upon the timeliness and thoroughness of application. For best results with McIntosh the spray should be repeated every eight to ten days. The first application should be when the fruit shows a tendency to drop.

FARM FIRE LOSSES ON DECLINE
Farm fire losses are on the decline according to information released by state fire insurance companies. This reduction in fire loss is largely attributed to the application of fire prevention measures by farm people. These measures consisted largely of the elimination of rural fire hazards, the mobilization of fire fighting resources and equipment, and the education of rural people in fire fighting methods. The elimination of fire losses is a worthwhile contribution to the war effort.

SAVE USED BROWN PAPER AND CORRUGATED BOXES
Again there is a critical shortage of used brown paper and corrugated boxes for the paper box industry. The Washington County Salvage committee is co-operating with the general salvage branch of the War Production Board in urging everyone to save brown wrapping paper and corrugated boxes.

Wisconsin is one of the leading states which produces special boxes for war materials going to the armament forces. This state has five paper box mills working on war contracts and all of these mills are experiencing a shortage of the necessary scrap paper needed for this special box.
All types of scrap paper are not suitable for the manufacture of these special containers and, therefore, efforts are being directed to brown wrapping paper, brown paper bags, corrugated boxes and brown fibre containers. Every citizen is, therefore, asked to save only these types of papers and corrugated boxes. Arrangements for a collection of this material will be announced by the county salvage committee later.
This salvage of brown paper and boxes is not to be confused with the previous paper to be collected. At that time other types of paper were included in the drive. It was so successful that carloads of waste paper were shipped to the paper and cart manufacturers, who stored it in large quantities until it was needed. It was a one-time campaign which served the purpose very well.

Now, however, it is planned to make this a continued program for the duration. And by collecting only the brown paper and corrugated boxes the mills will be able to salvage and use all the paper as it is turned in. Everyone is urged to start saving this material immediately. As soon as sufficient savings have been indicated in the homes and industries, the salvage committee will arrange for a collection which will be repeated at regular intervals for the duration.

ATTENTION Horse and Cattle Owners!
Dead animals are essential to help win the war as they are processed into a high grade feed for Poultry, Cattle and Hogs which in return produce essentials which we must have to win a war. Glycerine is taken out of all Fats and Oils from dead animals and this is made into T. N. T. for high explosives, and only Rendering Plants produce these products; so all dead animals buried or used otherwise are a waste to our country. Call your Render, Wm. Laabs, to collect your dead animals and you will be paid a fair price for them. Renderers can not pay an inflationary price as there is a ceiling on all of the products of rendering plants. Call at your nearest Phone West Bend 75 or Campbellport 25F1 and reverse charges when you call. Yours truly, Wm. Laabs, Renderer.

Therefore, we will regard it as a special favor if you will return kegs and cases as soon as they are empty.

Catania's Capture Marked Beginning Of Axis Last Stand in Sicily Battle; Red Offensive Crumples Nazi Flanks; Yanks Continue Gains in Pacific Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysts and not necessarily of this newspaper.) Released by Western Newspaper Union.

TELEFACT

WHERE THE AVERAGE CIVILIAN INCOME WENT

SICILY: Last Stand

Forty thousand Axis troops were all that were left to stand between the Allies and complete conquest of Sicily as the last phase of the battle developed. Of the 40,000, it was estimated that 35,000 were German and the rest Italian.

Although heavily outnumbered by the 10 Allied divisions reported in action, the Axis relied on strong natural entrenchments hewed into the rugged mountains to hold up the British-American drive.

After being stalled for two weeks in front of Catania, the British 8th army spilled into the city after overcoming strong Axis positions set up along the several rivers winding through the country and in the tall fields of grain.

When American planes failed to sufficiently reduce the Japs' hidden pill-boxes hewed in the jungle brush, 13-ton tanks were called into the fray, and these cracked through the dense foliage to advance on the enemy's well-concealed positions and draw their fire.

With strong Jap points overrun on the east, American warships and airplanes then moved in along the coast to the west and laid down a thunderous volley into the enemy's positions. As this combined barrage shook up the Japs in their pillboxes and caves, American troops picked their way northward, to ring the enemy from the west.

As of July 1, the department stated that there was a supply of 290 million bushels of oats; over 200 million bushels of barley, and 46 million bushels of rye.

In relation to livestock, feed supply is reported to be 20 per cent smaller than last year and 14 per cent below average.

RUSSIA: Offensive Climax

The height of the Russians' summer offensive was reached with the fall of Orel. After a month of hard fighting, Marshal Timoshenko's forces swept into the city, even as the bulk of 250,000 Germans was being withdrawn to new positions to the west.

Held by the Germans since October, 1941, Orel stood in ruin as the Russians moved in, with Nazi rear-guards tackling the Reds in hand-to-hand fighting in delaying action in the streets of the city.

In taking Orel, the Reds threw the full weight of their artillery, planes, tanks and infantry into the battle. Slowly, they ground down German resistance on the north, south and east sides of the city.

On the other end of the central front, the Reds announced capture of Belgorod.

The American attack on Munda in the Solomons stands out as a classic of military strategy.

In the final stages of the battle against a fanatical enemy resisting to the death, American forces drew a tight noose around the Japs, with one column moving to the west of the defenders' line while two other columns hammered in from two ends on the east.

When American planes failed to sufficiently reduce the Japs' hidden pill-boxes hewed in the jungle brush, 13-ton tanks were called into the fray, and these cracked through the dense foliage to advance on the enemy's well-concealed positions and draw their fire.

Faster Than Sound

To Lt. Col. Cass S. Hough of Plymouth, Mich., fell the rare distinction of traveling faster than sound, or more than 780 miles per hour, while undertaking two experimental flights for the U. S. army air force.

Last September, Col. Hough's P-38 Lightning climbed up to 43,000 feet. Then, he cooly nosed the plane into a power dive and the speedometer at the record speed before being leveled off at 18,000 feet.

According to the 36-year-old daredevil, he made his first flight on impulse. As his plane went screaming downward, he said, it felt as though a ton of bricks lay on his back, and he could barely lift his arms to write down the recordings of his instruments.

Between March and July of this year, farm real estate rose another 3 per cent. The increase occurred throughout all of the geographical regions and in two-thirds of the states.

With commodity prices up one-fourth within the last 12 months and farm income for 1943 expected to exceed 1942's record levels, farmers were said to be active buyers in the market.

Of the government's planned construction of 14 1/2 billion dollars of war plant facilities, approximately 12 billion dollars has been completed.

Production of armaments and other goods needed by the army is lagging seriously, Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, chief of army supply services, warned. He said that 300 million dollars' worth of supplies have not been delivered according to schedule in the last three months.

Output of factories has been going down steadily, he continued, with July figures "decidedly worse" than those of June.

At the same time the treasury reported that actual war spending during July was half a billion dollars less than in June, this being the first month in which war costs have turned downward.

Urging all contractors to fulfill their contracts, General Somervell said: "If as a manufacturer, you are scheduled to produce a certain quantity of war material by a specific date, you have undertaken a specific military obligation."

New developments prompted the army's cancellation of contracts for all wooden transport airplanes and the return to metallic construction.

The wooden craft were designed to operate from small, unimproved landing fields and carry 4,500 pounds of cargo at medium range.

Consolidated Features—WNU Release.

NEW YORK—Officials counting the ballots in the South African general election flash the word that Prime Minister Jan Christian Smuts and his pro-war regime have gained a clear majority, and there is rejoicing in all the Allied capitals.

It was he who crushed a Boer uprising at the start of World War I and went on to conquer the Germans in East Africa and become a British general. He saved South Africa for the United Nations, too, in 1939, routing the pro-Nazi forces of the late Gen. J. B. M. Hertzog at the polls to become prime minister for the second time after a 15 year lapse.

Son of a poor and tough Dutch farmer who trekked across the veldt with a Bible in one hand and a gun in the other, Smuts had reached his teens before he could read. Later he won high honors as a student at Cambridge university.

PENNANTS have been flown for the WAVES' first anniversary and Navy Secretary Frank Knox button-holed congressmen to win for the organization's lieutenant commander.

When we went into World War II after Pearl Harbor, the word "isolationism" was forgotten. Today it has come back into our vocabularies and is being batted about, like other political footballs.

Washington Digest Definite Foreign Policy Essential to America

The Issue: Shall Nation Adopt Policy of Participation in World Affairs or Shall We Aim at Nationalistic Goal?

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building Washington, D. C. Today America faces its first real problem as a world power. Italy lies before us. General Eisenhower, as commander of the Allied forces of invasion, suddenly became a statesman. He is a soldier. He can win battles. Now, he is the man ultimately responsible for directing American world policy.

These men have to face the question of committing the Republican party to a definite foreign policy. And paradoxically, by committing their party to a definite foreign policy, they may free both political parties of all commitment on foreign policy.

The issue which America faces is simple: shall we, as a nation, underwrite a policy which will implement our participation in world affairs or shall we retire unto ourselves and pursue the nationalistic policy which says in effect: let the rest of the world stew in its own juice?

Until we took the Philippines, America was able to leave the great and vital problems which should have no political tinge, outside partisan politics. We have had other problems which have remained essentially non-partisan.

When we went into World War II after Pearl Harbor, the word "isolationism" was forgotten. Today it has come back into our vocabularies and is being batted about, like other political footballs.

Let's get back to that hot and perennially burning question in Washington late last month when Deneen Watson and his colleagues in this self-appointed Republican organization, the Republican "foreign policy association," walked across quiet Lafayette park opposite the White House and

THEY WERE EXPENDABLE

by W. L. White W.N.U. FEATURES

Commander, squadron commander; Lieut. R. B. Kelly, second-in-command; and Ensigns Anthony Akers and George E. Cox Jr. Manila has fallen, and our naval base at Cavite is gone. Lieut. Kelly has been in a hospital on Corregidor, but has finally persuaded the doctor to release him. He has gone out on patrol. They have broken up a Jap landing party and have now come alongside a landing barge which has surrendered after a heavy barrage.

CHAPTER VII

It was empty except for three Japs who had been discharged from the hospital and were being taken to the beach. One was dead, two were wounded, and one of these two was a Jap officer. Bulkeley had his 45 in his hand and was looking at the Jap officer with a steady gaze. The Jap officer was looking at Bulkeley and began to call, "Me surrender! Me surrender!"

"Of our original six boats, two had already been lost, DeLong's over Subic Bay, and the 33 boat while I was in the hospital—she'd been going full speed ahead investigating what looked at night like the feather of a Japanese submarine's periscope, only it turned out to be a wave breaking over a little submerged and uncharted coral reef."

"Immediately this Jap officer went to his knees." Bulkeley's eyes were fixed on the Jap officer while they were cleaning that saboteur's wax out of her strainers and tanks, so that now she was held together with braces and wires, and running on only two engines. But pretty soon we sighted a ship dead ahead about three miles away. I was maneuvering to put her in the path of the moonlight on the water so I could make out what she was. But now she seemed to put on speed, heading up in the direction of Subic Bay—maybe, if she had seen us, to get under the protection of the Jap shore batteries there.

"Early in February they started sending submarines up from Australia, and our boats would always meet them outside the mine fields and bring them in—Bulkeley getting aboard to ride as pilot. The subs had news. They said America was building a big Australian base—that supplies were rolling down there. The submarine Trout would bring in ammunition for army's 3-inch guns on Bataan and take out gold which had been brought over to Corregidor from Manila before it fell. The unloading, of course, would all be at night, and then Bulkeley would take them out and show them deep water, where they could submerge and hide from Jap bombers during the day. Quezon went out on one submarine to Cebu, and a week later High Commissioner Sayre left on a submarine. It seemed like a good many prominent people were leaving Corregidor. And the army had been pushed back to what we knew were its last and strongest defense positions on Bataan. None of it looked too good.

"The next day the army told us we'd broken up a 7,000-ton cruiser's landing party on Bataan near the village of Moron, which was then in no-man's land, and said their planes reported the Japs had had to beach their seventy-five miles up the coast. Still later the planes reported the Japs were breaking her up for scrap. But we brought the 33 boat back safe to the base at Sisman Cove. Our headquarters there was a reformed goat slaughter-house, about one hundred feet long and thirty feet wide, with a concrete floor. We'd scrubbed it out with creosote. It still smelled some, but was habitable. We'd also acquired a tender—an old hulk tug called the Trabajorado—put her in charge of DeLong, who'd lost his ship."

"Then we all sat around envying him," said Kelly, "because here he was, living like an admiral—a cabin, a wardrobe, a real galley—not just a hot plate, which was all we had on the MTB's, and even a mess boy who could bake pie. It was big-ship life, and Bulkeley and I used to find some excuse to go every night and eat his dessert and drink coffee. DeLong liked it so much he later decided to stay on Bataan rather than leave with the rest of us."

"Our plan for making a run for China when our gas was almost gone still stood, and Bulkeley had got hold of some landing-force gear which we knew might be useful on the Chinese coast if we missed connections with our Chungking friends and had to fight our way through the Japs. So we began drilling our men in landing-force procedure. "This got them very curious. They knew our gas was running out, and we had almost no more torpedoes except the ones which were in the boats. So we told them we were thinking of going south to join the Moros if Bataan fell, and it satisfied them for a while. We let only two other persons in on the secret—Clark Lee and Nat Floyd, newspaper correspondents who had been authorized by the Admiral to make the trip with us."

"The food situation was getting tough. Our breakfast was always hot cakes made without eggs—just flour, water, and baking powder—and the syrup was sugar and water. We hadn't seen butter since the war started. Then for dinner, it was always canned salmon and rice, and you don't know tired you can get of canned salmon until you eat it regularly for a few months. We welcomed any change."

"The one high spot in our diet was the Canopus," said Kelly. "She was an old sub tender, so slow she'd been abandoned, but she had a fine machine shop. She was tied up at the dock and already had been hit twice by bombs, so they worked her at night and abandoned her by day. But among her stores were barrels and barrels of ice-cream mix and a freezer. And her skipper would let anyone in the navy who came aboard eat all the ice cream he wanted as long as those barrels lasted—they held out until the week we left."

"But what we wanted most of all was fresh meat and vegetables, and along about the second week in February the first blockade-runner arrived. We piloted her in at night—rendezvous twenty-five miles out and as daylight came, our mouths watered as we saw her cargo strings of bananas piled high on her decks, and below, fresh meat and fruit for Corregidor. That afternoon I went over to see Peggy, and they were all busy slicing steaks and candling eggs. By yelling, screaming, and haggling, I got enough fresh meat to serve our crews two meals that week. She was a welcome little ship, that blockade-runner—made two more trips before the Japs sank her."

"But because of Peggy, my diet was a little better than the others. Since she was on Corregidor, she was entitled, under their rationing system, to buy one item per day from the canteen—a package of gum, a candy bar maybe, from the little supply they had left. "But Peggy pretended she never cared for them, and every time I came to see her, she'd slip me a pocketful. She bought and saved them every day—just something to nibble while I was out on patrol, she explained. "I began to feel funny about that break-through to China we were planning. Of course the Admiral had ordered it, and of course it was the way we could be most useful. But here were all these brave people on Bataan and the Rock, Peggy among them, realizing more clearly every day that they would never get out. Doomed, but bracing themselves to look fate in the face as it drew nearer, knowing that they were expendable like ammunition, and that it was part of the war plan that they should sell themselves as dearly as possible before they were killed or captured by the Japs. But a handful of us secretly knew that we, and only we among these many brave thousands, would see home again, and soon."

"And the more I liked Peggy—she was a swell kid—the guiltier I felt. Furthermore, I knew if we ever left it would have to be soon. Gas was getting dangerously low—barely enough to make the run for China. And so was our torpedo supply. We would have to leave with every tube full if we were to throw effective weight against Jap shipping on the China coast, and in addition to what we would need for this, we had only a few torpedoes left, enough for one good fight—and that was to come sooner than we knew."

STAGE-SCREEN-RADIO
By VIRGINIA VALE
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

A NOVEL contribution to Hollywood's and radio's war efforts is the "Sew and Sew" club, headed by Penny Singleton, who's "Blondie" of the air and the screen. Penny organized the club to perform emergency sewing jobs on servicemen's uniforms, ranging from simple repairs to alterations. She has enlisted some of Hollywood's outstanding movie and radio luminaries as members of her unique organization.

PENNY SINGLETON

And anyone who encounters thousands of servicemen on leave in a strange city will realize how valuable it is. Joe Howard, perhaps the oldest performer in radio, is still one of the most successful, judging by a deal that he recently completed. Joe, singing troubador of the "Gay Nineties Revue," over CBS Monday nights, scored Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer the film rights to "The Time, the Place and the Girl," a hit musical which he wrote and produced several decades ago.

On July 18 Dick Haymes made his debut on the air's "Here's to Romance." July 19 he made screen tests. At one o'clock on the 26th, 20th Century-Fox executives looked at the tests—and at 4:30 Haymes signed a contract to make two films a year for the next seven years. Three months ago he was singing with Tommy Dorsey's band.

Hollywood's oddest summer school is composed of four students—Bonita Granville, Anne Shirley, Kent Smith and Rita Corday. They study Chinese. Their teacher is Edward Dmytryk; he's the director who, following his success with "Hitler's Children," was signed to direct RKO's "Behind the Rising Sun." He began studying Chinese some years ago.

Lou Crosby, radio announcer, will make his film debut as a Nazi soldier captured by Russian guerrillas in "One Hour of Glory," Casey Robinson production for RKO. Announcer for the Lum in Abner program, Crosby has one of radio's best speaking voices.

Most radio executives think that summer radio fare should be light and frothy to succeed, but the latest survey figures indicate that the public doesn't agree. "Screen Guild Players," Monday night CBS dramatic series that stars Hollywood's top names, leads all the others in listener popularity, according to Hooper and Crossley survey figures. This is the program on which none of the actors and actresses are paid; the money they would ordinarily receive goes to the Screen Actors Guild, to aid indigent movie people.

Betty Rhodes has begun making her second Personal Album for OWI. These albums contain recordings of songs and informal talks and are sent to Alaska, Ireland, Africa—wherever American troops are stationed at a great distance from home. The singing star recently finished the feminine lead in a musical comedy called "Salute for Three."

Kate Smith, in her 13th year as a radio star, has signed a new three-year contract. Her contracts are unique in that they're always for three years, and the options fall due at the end of each season, when the old one still has two years to run.

Cecil Brown has no crystal ball—but on May 20 the news broadcaster said "The Italians might pop up with a chastened Count Ciano, or Dino Grandi... or a Marshal Badoglio with new-found courage." Just two months and five days early!

ODDS AND ENDS—Ella Mae Morse, singer on the Johnny Mercer program, was dickered with two film companies while a third dickered for the use of Ella Mae's four-month-old baby in a movie. "Feodor Chaliapin, son of the famous Russian singer, will play a Russian soldier in United Artists' "The Girl From Leningrad"... Neil Hamilton, old-timer of the movies, is staging a comeback; the first step will be the role of the husband in "Since You Went Away"... Thelma Snow, one of the most brilliant young actresses of the New York stage, has joined the cast of NBC's "Snow Village," the serial laid in rural New England.

It's just been announced that a giant Pan-American clipper will be named "Conant Nymph"; Jean Muir was chosen to christen it. Too bad Joan Fontaine isn't doing it, since she's starring in the delightful new screen version of the story.

When he has finished his current Hardy picture Mickey Rooney goes into "National Velvet," the swell story that's been awaiting production for so long. Elizabeth Taylor of "Lassie Comes Home" gets the coveted role of the heroine.

DRIPPING FLUSH TANK

Question: Water drips from my flush tank day and night. We are told it is from condensation, for there is no leak. How can the dripping be stopped?
Answer: Your water supply is evidently very cold, so that the flush tank becomes chilled; condensation results when warm and damp air is cooled by the contact. Usually, the dripping will not last more than an hour or two after each filling of the tank, for the fresh tankful quickly loses its chill. If the dripping continues, it is because of a leak in the tank by which the tankful of water is kept at its low temperature. The leak can be stopped by putting in a new inlet washer or repairing the outlet of the tank.

Gas Range

Question: I have had a gas range for about three years, but have found it unsatisfactory for baking. A mechanic who inspected it for a leak says that it is not getting enough air because it is too close to the back and side walls. Before having it moved I'd like your opinion on whether greater air circulation will make it better for baking.
Answer: I hardly think so; for the trouble is very evidently in the adjustment of the burners. Ask the gas company to send an engineer to make an inspection. He will make tests to learn the cause of the trouble and will correct it.

Drain Cleaners

Question: A plumber tells me that I should not clean a clogged drain with a chemical; for later it may become clogged in the pipes. Is this so?
Answer: Drain cleaners are either caustic potash or caustic soda. Caustic potash in boiling water converts the grease in the pipe to a soft soap, which washes away. Caustic soda, on the other hand, combines with grease to form a compound that is nearly insoluble. It is probably this which the plumber refers. The label of the can should state the formula used.

Septic Tank Care

Question: In my summer home I drain my plumbing in the fall and fill the traps with kerosene. In the spring I let the kerosene drain off into the septic tank. But a friend says that this may affect the bacterial reaction there. Is this so?
Answer: Yes, it is true, but can be corrected. Drain off plenty of water to flush the tank. Then dissolve six yeast cakes in tepid water in a wash basin and let it drain down into the septic tank. Repeat in a week.

Patriotic Prints

Question: I want to put up patriotic pictures in my boy's room. What do you suggest?
Answer: The Army-Navy Relief Campaign, Post Box 666, New York City, is putting out four-color prints of Paul Revere's Ride that should be appropriate. They can be had for 25 cents in coin or a 25-cent defense stamp. In addition to getting the prints, you would be supporting a most worthy cause.

Basement Playrooms

Question: Where can I get literature about basement recreation rooms?
Answer: Manufacturers of insulating wallboard and asphalt tile have photographs of basement playrooms in their catalogues. You will also find recreation room plans for basements in Popular Mechanics Magazine Yearbook; the publisher's office is at 350 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Space for Coal Bin

Question: What should be the height, length and width of a box I wish to make to hold one ton of stove coal? I feel sure that I have not received my full quota.
Answer: One ton of coal takes up about 36 cubic feet, but this is only an average; the dimension varies. A box measuring 3 by 3 feet by 4 feet high should hold a ton.

Ceiling Floor Paint

Question: How can I prepare my cement ceiling floor for painting, and what kind of paint should I use?
Answer: The floor should be cleaned and free of grease spots. The paint should be of a kind that is proof against the effects of lime; there are several varieties to be had at a large paint store.

Tire Care

Question: If a car is out of use for a year or more, can anything be done to preserve the tires, in addition to jacking the car up?
Answer: Protect the tires against heat and light, both of which are destructive to rubber—especially sunlight. Oil and grease are also harmful. Tires should be partly deflated, and they should be kept dry. If the air of the storage place is not reasonably pure, tires can be wrapped to protect them from gases, etc.

The Once Over

by H.L. Phillips

THE LIFE OF MUSSOLINI

Mussolini was once a tramp. Now he is twice a tramp. Forty years ago he was thrown off a caboose in Switzerland by railroad coppers. But that time he was able to get up. His father was a village blacksmith and Benito was born with a bellows in his mouth. His dad had biceps like iron bands in his arms but Benito had them in his throat. Papa Mussolini shoed horses but Benito was no help. He would always try to talk a horse out of the idea it needed shoes and convince it that it would look better in patent leather boots.

Benito was supposed to shoo flies but he preferred to outbuzz them. He never cared for the anvil or forge, finding it impossible to talk into an anvil or play recordings of his own voice in a forge. So he quit. Pop, whose front name was Allesandro, also kept a saloon. This proves there were always queer ideas in the family. It is the only recorded case where a blacksmith alternately cried "Whoa!" "Back up!" and "What'll you have?" with no change of voice.

All this made the picture pretty confusing in Benito's boyhood. He would often find a teamster's horse in the barroom saying: "I'll take a cigar this time, pop" while the teamster was entering the blacksmith shop on all fours and demanding drinks for everybody in the house.

Natives love to tell about the time when pop put a brass rail in the smithy for the horses to stand on and drew beer through a bellows in the tavern.

Young Benito ran away to Switzerland. He started out with a quarter. No man ever went farther on two-bits up to a recent Sunday afternoon.

He became a soapbox orator. Discovering that people were crazy enough to think they knew what he was talking about, he never stopped talking. He became a newspaper publisher. Benito ran his own picture in the paper and the sheet went big because the public always goes for funnies.

He fought in the World War, improving his diction by threatening superior officers. After the war he came out with a program for saving Italy through a sustaining radio program. It was the only case up to that time of a man being his own radio artist and sponsor.

King Emmanuel thought it was a premiere for an American movie comedy and named Benito headman before he found it wasn't all in fun. It took him 21 years to correct the mistake.

For 21 years he spoke only from high altitudes and announced himself as a new Caesar with vitamins and screen prizes thrown in. Then he met Hitler and everything went black. And we don't mean black-shirt.

PRIVATE PURKEY ADOPTS A CODE

Dear Mom—Well, I am now with my old Pal, Moe. (Just say them last two words over and think of a city in Sicily and it will give you a cue to where I am.) I can't come right out and say where I am so you will have to get it from hints. Like when I wrote to tell Annie to keep her big Trap closed it was a sort of code to tell you I was in a place called Trapani.

I guess we better agree on a code to keep track of me from now on. It will all have to be based on the idea that I will be able to keep track of where I am which is no easy trick on account of we get rushed around so fast in this globe war. For instance, mom, if I write a lot about mess you will know I am in Messina and if I should write a letter and talk a lot about an insurance company you will know I am near Mt. Aetna. Catch on?

I am well and only had one close call in the invasion of Sicily. This was when I took four prisoners. A little later I decided to release them. They became very quarrelsome and refused to let me release them. I had to call for help. I also had a little row in one town when the natives started abusing us for arriving too late. They had wanted to give up 48 hours sooner. It was all straightened out when we explained our watches was slow.

Well, everything is going fine. I hope you and dad are fine. Your loving son, Oscar.

When Japan meets its ultimate ruin it can at least have the satisfaction of stamping it "Made in Japan."

Ode to a Cow

She doesn't kick just once or twice. And even that is not so nice. But many times her cloven foot inside my milking pail is put. She doesn't stop at that, oh no, She heaves at me a mighty blow, And then quite suddenly I find I'm sitting on my never mind.

One of the funniest lines this department has heard in some time is the one in "Three Is a Family" where the spinster remarks: "Well, I'm only going to vote for Roosevelt one more time."

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Scientists have found that rubber is the only substance that can be stretched tremendously and resume approximately its original form. Too much stretching, such as in underinflated tires, causes "fatigue"—and deterioration.

The first manufacture of rubber footwear outside the United States took place in 1855 in Scotland.

If gasoline consumption is a gauge of tire wear, more miles are run in July and August than any other months. Of the gas used in 1941, 9.5% was consumed in August and 9.4% in July. February was the low month, with 6.4% of the year's total.

corps, G-2, U. S. Army at Hammett Field, Fresno, Calif.

"I was on duty at Hickam Field, Pearl Harbor, as inspector general of the Hawaiian Air Force, when the Japanese attacked on Dec. 7.

"Early the next morning I had a call from an air installation on the ocean side of a headland near Pearl Harbor that a Japanese submarine was just outside the reef a few hundred feet offshore.

"By the time I got there, a plane had dropped a light bomb on the seaward side of the sub and had washed it up onto the reef—a neat trick if you can do it. The idea was to capture the sub intact, instead of blowing it to the flowery kingdom come, which would have been easy.

"The officer who had been in the submarine, swimming ashore, had been captured by our men. He was in his underwear. He asked to be allowed to shoot himself, since he had failed in his mission, but our men did not seem to care for the idea. The prisoner spoke fairly good English, which he said he had learned in Japan. There was no trace of the enlisted man who had been in the two-man submarine with him.

"Air force and ground troops were then paddling out to the sub on the rubber liferafts that our plane carried and were attaching lines to the sub. A navy detachment, for which the army had put in a call, finally hauled it onto the beach. Len H. Root, Pacific News cameraman whom I knew, took pictures of the salvaging operation. When next I saw the sub, it was mounted on concrete cradles at the submarine base, Pearl Harbor.

"It seems to me an excellent idea for the treasury department to have borrowed this first trophy of our war with Japan and to be taking it around the United States on the first overland submarine cruise in history to stimulate the sale of war savings stamps and bonds.

"To me it is a symbol of the ruthlessness of the foe we face and will conquer in the Pacific. Those two men in that Japanese sneak-boat started on a one-way voyage, prepared to die a fanatic's death for their empire with two torpedoes and a demolishing charge as their only weapons. If they had managed to get into Pearl Harbor they might have sunk an American ship and killed many more Americans. I believe inland folk who have never seen a submarine will get a vivid idea of what we have to fight in the Pacific and a new determination to work, fight and save to make the world safe from that sort of fanaticism."

Captain Wilson is a son of Ernest M. Wilson, art teacher at Gardens high school, Los Angeles. His eldest brother William Wilson is a first lieutenant in the army; a younger brother is also a flier in the army air force and a sister's husband, Jack Townsend, is a lieutenant in the marine corps.
