

Village of Kewaskum Second in County Over Top in 7th War Loan

During the first week of the seventh war loan drive in Washington county, four of the twenty local units reported going over the top on subscriptions for war bonds to be purchased during the drive. We reported last week that the town of Addison went over the top the first day of the drive. Since then the village of Kewaskum, the village of Slinger and the town of Erin have gone over the top.

Lehman Rosenheimer, the community chairman of the village of Kewaskum, reported that their village went over the top on Wednesday, May 16. Morris Rosenheimer is the banking co-ordinator of the village of Kewaskum. Lionel Bull, the community chairman of the village of Slinger reported on Monday, May 21, that Slinger had over-subscribed their quota. William Kratz is banking co-ordinator in Slinger. The same day Ray Jeffords, community chairman of the town of Erin, reported that Erin was over the top. Owen McCollow is the banking co-ordinator in the town of Erin. These three communities in Washington county are now leading in the town of Addison. The chairman of these communities and the minute men who have done the job and the people who have purchased the bonds are to be commended on the fast job that they have done.

The object of the Washington County War Finance committee in this drive is as it always has been to see every local community in Washington county go over the top. There are now four over. There are twenty local communities in Washington county. That means sixteen to go. 20% of the goal has been reached. The other communities are all carrying on with their work in fine fashion. It is hoped that as the weeks go by all of them will add their name to the honor roll "over the top" as shown on the front page in this paper.

Robert H. Rolfs, executive chairman of the Washington County War Finance committee, announces the actual sales, as reported by the Federal Reserve Bank for Washington county—that is sales to individuals only—now stand at $297,382.25. He adds that this is 27% of Washington county's quota of $1,170,000.00. All of the issuing agents in Washington county report their sales direct to the Federal Reserve Bank. These sales are then accumulated and daily reports are sent to the county chairmen showing their actual sales as made.

Of course, Rolfs explains that the actual sales always lag subscriptions, for there is always a lapse of time between the time people subscribe and the time they actually buy. But, in the last analysis, the report that really counts is the report of actual sales as put out by the Federal Reserve Bank.

WHY ADVERTISE?

Hundreds of national firms today are busy producing war materials—others cannot begin to meet public demand for their product... yet these manufacturers feel it is important to maintain their advertising—but why? Business history and extensive advertising research have proved that advert of a firm's name can be far more destructive than a bombing of a plant. And as a retailer you can't afford to let the public forget YOU! Perhaps you can't supply the buying public with everything it wants, but for the post war prosperity of your business you must maintain your place in the public's eye... and it is your responsibility to take part in preserving our national economy.

My eyes are filled with burning tears As I clutch you to my heart; FATE has played a trick on us— And today, we two, must part! Thoughts of you, my sweet, each day Will make the hours drag— But I'll be brave as I bid farewell To my EMPTY sugar bag!

English Youth Thanks St. Bridget's Pupils for Gift

The school children of St. Bridget's school, town of Wayne, have received the following letter from Ted Mason of Hertfordshire, England, thanking his American friends for the Junior Red Cross gift box which they sent to him last Christmas:

Barkway, C. of E. School
Royston, Hertfordshire
England, 16th Feb. 1915
"Dear American Friends:
"Thank you very much for the presents. I could not wait 'till I got home to open the box. There are about 90 children in this school from five to thirteen years old, there are three teachers. Christmas the Americans gave us a party. One day all the scouts went in a Flying Fortress. The first one we went in had bombs in it. We had to go in another one. Our farms in England are three hundred to fifteen hundred acres. Most of our houses in the country are thatched and the walls are of lath and plaster. I once lived in London but our house was hit by a bomb. My mother, dad and I were away at the time, but two of the up stairs people were in the air raid shelter and were saved. We are in the country now but we still get a few buzz bombs over. Yours sincerely,
Ted Mason"

Youth Fatally Hurt When Gun Carried by Companion Goes Off

Russell Huck, 15, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Huck, 32 Sixth street, Fond du Lac, former residents of Kewaskum, and a nephew of Philip McLaughlin of this village, died in St. Agnes hospital, Fond du Lac, at about 10 p. m. Sunday from a rifle bullet wound sustained accidentally about a half hour earlier as he was walking along County Trunk Highway B near its intersection with State Highway 41 south of that city.

Russell's mother is the former Miss Louise Knoebel, a native of Kewaskum, who made her home with the Joseph Mayers and Joe Eberles in this village until the time of her marriage. The Huck family resided in Kewaskum for about a year several years ago when Mr. Huck was employed by Joe Eberles. At that time Russell attended Holy Trinity school here.

The youth and a companion, Marvin Sonntag, 15, of 517 South Main street, Fond du Lac, had been on a fishing trip to a nearby creek and had become lost. Sonntag told Coroner R. S. Timmons and Sheriff Arnold Soak of Fond du Lac county, the boys had taken 23 calibre rifles for target practice during their outing and it was already dark by the time they reached the park and were walking home.

Sonntag was carrying both guns which the boys left loaded as a precaution in case any dogs would attack them. While they were walking Sonntag mentioned to Huck that one of the guns seemed to be coming apart and as Sonntag started to tighten the weapon the barrel fell off and the gun discharged. The bullet from the gun struck Huck in the left cheek and went up into his head. This correct account of the accident is contrary to the one which appeared in the daily papers stating that Russell was carrying the gun when it discharged.

Sonntag ran to a farm house nearby and called the sheriff's office. Huck was taken to the hospital in the latter ambulance and died a short time later without regaining consciousness. No inquest will be held.

Active in school and Boy Scout activities, the youth was born Nov. 16, 1922, at Berlin, Wis. He moved to Fond du Lac with his parents when 10 months old. The family lived in that city since except for a short time when they resided in Kewaskum. After graduating from St. Mary's parochial school he entered Senior high school where he was a member of the sophomore class.

He belonged to St. Mary's troop 15, Boy Scouts. Russell was unusually active in scouting, having gone through the rank of scoutfoot, first and second class scout, Star scout, life and life scout. He had made an appointment with his scoutmaster for this past week to take tests for the final, highest badge, the Eagle Scout rank.

Besides his parents, Russell leaves a brother, Billy, 9, his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Max Huck of Mayville and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Knoebel Sr. of West Bend, uncles, aunts and other relatives.

Full funeral rites of Boy Scouting were accorded Russell when services were held at 8:30 a. m. Wednesday from the Geo. M. Dugan Funeral home and at 9 a. m. at St. Mary's church, Fond du Lac. The Rev. William Mayer, assistant at St. Monica's church at Whitefish Bay, and a son of the Jos. Mayers of this village, was celebrant of the solemn requiem mass. Assisting him were the assistants at St. Mary's, the Rev. Robert Kirchner, who was deacon, and the Rev. Raymond Fox as sub-deacon. Burial was in Calvary cemetery.

The funeral was one of the largest ever held in Fond du Lac. Nearly 100 Boy Scouts formed an escort both at the church and at the cemetery. The boys formed in line from the street to the altar of the church, opening ranks as the casket was taken into the edifice and removed from it. The Scouts formed a guard at the grave. Six members of the Junior Holy Name society of St. Mary's were honorary pallbearers. Serving as active pallbearers were six members of Russell's troop. Color guards were also Scouts and a Scout sounded taps. At the end of the service Al Meixensperger, scoutmaster, removed from the casket the youth's merit badge sash and presented it to his mother. The church was filled, the congregation including hundreds of high school students and former classmates at St. Mary's parochial school.

Persons attending the rites included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Knoebel and Mr. and Mrs. Elsmere Huck and children of Berlin, Mr. and Mrs. Max Huck, Birr of Mayville, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Knoebel of Milwaukee, Mr. and Mrs. Philip McLaughlin and daughter Joan, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Mayer and daughters, Alexia and Mary Jane, Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Eberle and daughter Lorraine and Mrs. William Eberle of Kewaskum and Henry Knoebel of West Bend.

Weather Enters Big Business Field of World's Armies, Navy, Trade and Farms

By WALTER A. SHEAD
WNU Staff Correspondent.

There is one thing in which the nation's farmers and our military leaders have a common stake... an element which can upset the most carefully laid military plans and the most meticulously planned agricultural program—the weather.

The farmers' success in planting and harvesting and American combat success in combined land-sea-air operations can come only through close observation of the scientific predictions of the weatherman. For the weather is often used as a military weapon by our military strategists, and our farmers are dependent upon the vagaries of the weather to harvest a record production, or a crop failure.

No military operation—whether it is a minor sortie by a group of fighters, a bombing mission on an enemy city, naval bombardment of a Japanese island, a ground attack in China, or a large scale invasion—is ever blue-printed unless latest weather information is first consulted. Success of an attack is oftentimes dependent upon clear weather, though American forces have profitably exploited bad weather to make offensive strikes against the enemy.

Our military strategists were quick to recognize the importance of accurate meteorological data, and so have greatly expanded the network of observation posts, trained thousands of officers and enlisted men and adopted new technological devices to guarantee reliable forecasts.

Together, the AAF, the navy and the U. S. Weather bureau weather systems form a vast network of information, research, observation and forecasting reaching from the United States to all parts of the world. Observation units vary in size from two men occupying a hut on an isolated Atlantic or Pacific isle to a major research station with a full staff of specialists.

The AAF maintains several major research centers and more than 1,000 observation and forecasting stations reaching from the Arctic to the Antarctic, and its weather report system spreads and moves as rapidly as the fighting fronts. The nerve center of this vast, scattered weather force is in the Pentagon building in Washington where approximately 50 persons watch the weather in all regions of the world and prepare long-range forecasts and special studies to guide our high strategy planners.

Navy Maintains Stations. The navy maintains about 1,400 observation and forecasting stations, including 14 major weather "centrals." In some instances aerological units may be aboard flagships or aircraft carriers, or on advanced island bases and the units may consist of one man on a small ship or a full fledged "central" with a full complement of 100 or more officers and men.

How the navy weather bureaus have grown since 1940 may be seen by the fact that in that year navy aerology under the bureau of aeronautics consisted of less than 200 officers and men in about 50 units, whereas today the personnel totals about 6,500 officers and men assigned to the 1,400 units. The AAF staff of weather specialists numbers 20,000 officers and men, and the force of observers alone has grown from 50 to 10,000.

cludes technical operation and interpretation of results recorded by radio-sonde, a small box containing a single-tube short wave transmitter. Sent aloft on a balloon, the transmitter gives temperature and humidity readings at various heights. There are also repair technicians schooled in the maintenance of delicate weather instruments, communications men who radio or teletype weather reports back to headquarters, and aircraft weather reconnaissance fliers, who observe conditions along the flying routes.

According to our military men ac-formation, the AAF and the navy weather forces have been made possible by the careful selection of men from the ranks to specialize in weather information, by intensive station training and by releasing personnel from the weather bureau for military duty and replacing them by new civilian recruits.

Weather Important Weapon. According to our military men ac- curate evaluation of weather, plus the constant flow of up-to-the-minute meteorological information from all theaters of war, make it possible to use weather as an important weapon. Cited as examples of weather strategy is the Sicilian invasion. Plotting of prevailing winds and of the movement of cold air front over Italy indicated our invasion ships would encounter rough seas on the Germany took advantage of bad, overcast weather, with rain and snow to make their counter-attack in the Belgian bulge in the Ardennes. Low visibility and cold kept our superior airforce grounded, until clearing weather gave us a break.

Methods used by various countries in weather forecasting vary. The AAF and the navy use the Norwegian theory of air masses and polar fronts and the long series of daily weather charts of the world prepared by the weather bureau as a basis.

Research Essential. Almost endless research was necessary to code the world's weather data. Starting in 1942 the weather bureau, in cooperation with the military services, started in this task using all available weather information in the northern hemisphere for each day since 1899. This information was replotted and reanalyzed, transferred into a standard code and into a punch card system. In this way 30 years of weather were charted and analyzed within a year. From the areas studied by the army, high priority sections, where military action would most likely take place, a similar card system was evolved and total weather tabulations to date cover about 55 million cards. At present about 500,000 cards are recorded each month.

By comparing the current day's maps with the finger-print maps, chosen by weather experts from those maps indicated by the card-machine selection, the weather expert most nearly like that of May 15, 1945, is chosen. It may have been February 23, 1929. With this map and the map for the succeeding days in 1929, the weather expert can see how the high and low pressure groups moved, can study other meteorological data.

The weather data, and the new methods will be invaluable for civilian use both for farmers, for aviation and for many peace-time pursuits in the postwar era. For weather forecasts under the method adopted is likely to be more accurate than ever before. In the meantime the weatherman has been doing very well for the farmer these past four war years. It has been almost perfect on a nation-wide scale and has contributed beyond measure to the record crop yields. Elmer Twitchell says they've got everything arranged at the Frisco parley except naming the referee and the knockdown timekeepers. Anyway, let's hope so.

Europe Also Had Mud Problems. Excessive rain has caused a landslide on a military road somewhere on the Italian front.

journey from North Africa, but at the same time our forecasters predicted tranquil waters in Sicilian harbors, and the almost miraculous calming of the seas as our landing craft neared the Sicilian shores has become a military classic.

Admiral Halsey took advantage of the cover of a "zero-zero" storm after raiding the Marshall and Gilbert Islands. With visibility zero and ceiling zero, his ships, large and heavy enough to ride out the storm, were meanwhile safe from enemy air attack.

At Rabaul detail plotting of the upper air strata enabled our forces to lay down a smoke screen to blot out our vessels and our planes from Japanese ack-ack and dive bombers. Low wind velocity was required so that our screen would not suddenly veer and cover our target instead. Conditions were exactly as predicted and ordered.

Many other instances of the use of weather forecasts by our militarists are given, for instance in the Normandy invasion, weather was bad and the sea choppy, but the forecasts were that severe conditions would prevail for at least 21 days after the D-Day chosen. Axis Are Weather Conscious. Both Germany and Japan are extremely weather conscious and both have used weather, particularly bad weather, to screen their activities. For instance, Germany's battle of the bulge in the Ardennes was undoubtedly arranged to coincide with bad weather that would keep our superior air strength incapable of decisive blows, while German ground forces, numerically stronger at that point, smashed through. A clearing break in the weather came ultimately and our air power went into action to help stop the German offensive.

According to the navy, the Japs are not as far advanced in weather technique as either Germany or our own military. In at least one instance a Japanese plan of action did not work out as scheduled because of their weather miscalculations. They attempted to bring reinforcements to New Guinea under a storm front so that our planes could not spot their movements. An unexpected or miscalculated shift dissipated the storm front. The troop and supply armada was spotted by our reconnaissance planes. They were attacked and destroyed by the AAF in the famous Battle of the Bismarck Sea.

THE END IN EUROPE

The war started by a screwball with a screwball book and a screwball philosophy, fought under a screwball emblem in a screwball cause ended in a screwball manner. The German surrender was like a panic hour on an ant hill.

The goosestep became the gander-gallop and the rabbit-gavotte. It was the first surrender in military history that resembled a slide for home without touching second or third.

It was not so much an unconditional surrender as an unconditional dive.

The Junkers became Tankers.

As you watched the Nazis give up you were seeing one of the great circus acts of all times: The attempt of Superman to leap from a 10,000 foot platform into a row of empty beer steins.

It was the first time our side ever had to employ whirling dervishes to keep track of events.

There was never a finish like this, except the time the house flies fell into the egg-beater.

What a spectacle! The army that terrorized millions when it had the upper hand became strictly an aggregation of safety-firsters. They wanted but one new weapon: A non-skid army shoe.

The Wehrmacht went to pieces like a paper napkin in an electric fan.

Its only question was, "May we surrender with positively no waiting? Or must we phone and make a reservation?"

It was not a surrender. It was just a notice to us that we were to have unwelcome guests for dinner.

There was no dignity, no color, no manhood in the Nazi picture. The books all called for field marshals drawing up impressively and handing over their swords, with appropriate words and music. All that the Allied generals had to do was to tag the marshals as they came into the bag feet first.

For once there was no material for great paintings. There is no appeal in a picture of men turning into mice.

A LAST WISH

Let me go out in the hills of my boyhood. . . . Amid the old fields and the homesteads. . . . Breathing the air of my forefathers Seeing the sun sink behind an old mill. . . .

Let me cross the great divide As a crossing of familiar pastures, Let the last scent be that of meadows. . . . The last sound that of a whippoorwill. . . .

For in the end, having all, I have little. Nothing consuming me like the spell of boyhood. . . . The love of farm and fireside and dear ones. . . . Please God, let me go now as through an old lane!

CAN YOU REMEMBER— Away back when a man was considered well fixed if he had money? And when a man would fore without protest a prospect of doubling his income for the year?

Point-Easy Patterns

Some of our homemakers feel that rationing has become so tight, it is difficult to set a tasty dish before the family. It's true we are learning to use a great variety of foods, but all these can be made delicious as well as pleasing as to appearance. Humble meats like hamburger and liver can be dressed attractively and made to taste like high-point foods. Imagine eating golden brown, water-thin pancakes, filled with a well-seasoned meat mixture. Good? Of course, pass the seconds, please.

You can stuff small slices of liver with your favorite celery or onion dressing and braise them in a savory tomato sauce. There's little better.

If you have taken it a little bit easy on the main course, you can always go the limit with the desserts. Cream pies are luscious even though their whipped cream toppings are missing. Frothy egg whites are just as pretty and tasty. Fresh vegetables and fruit platters are ideal for adding color to the table. Try a freshly cooked snowy white cauliflower in the center of a platter and surround it with slivered green beans and tomato cups with golden corn kernel center.

Tomato Fertilization In fertilizer tests with tomatoes the Wisconsin Experiment station found that the best treatment paid a net of $24 above the no-fertilizer treatment. The most profitable was a broadcast application of 500 pounds of a 6-8-20 plus 500 pounds of a 3-12-12 applied as a side-dressing. The fertilizer cost $20.80 and increased yields 69 per cent. These tests were made on a late variety and they suggest that on an early variety the results might have been better.

Catch T.B. Now officials of the department of agriculture warn dairy farmers to protect their cows against people with t.b. They report evidence in which four herds of cattle became infected with tuberculosis from one person. What's more they find that this human t.b. victim originally contracted the t.b. from cattle. They find that cattle t.b. causes tuberculosis of the lungs and that t.b. can be transmitted to cattle.

Household Insect The silverfish is a household insect that may eat stored cottons, linens or other fabrics containing starch or sizing. It also goes for bookbindings. To protect any of these things in storage from silverfish put them in tight packages or boxes in a dry, cool storeroom, wrapped just as you do woolens, with all openings closed tightly.

Painting Doors Doors that are open in warm weather frequently have both sides exposed to sun and rain, and should be kept well painted so that moisture will not seep into the panel joints and cause the door to fall apart. Likewise, window sashes should be given special attention, as the putty around the glass deteriorates if not painted periodically.

Retractive Ray The ancient Greeks believed that some kind of emanation, or rays, left the eye and that sight followed when the body rays touched an object, says the Better Vision Institute. Modern science has shown that the process is the other way around. We see by the light rays that are reflected to the eye by objects.

Daily Occurrence Japan has about three-and-a-half earthquakes a day on the average. Over a test period of 13 years, seismographs recorded 17,750 tremors in Japan, according to Encyclopaedia Britannica. Most of these earthquakes are imperceptible.

Rabies Cases Cases of rabies in the U. S. have been increasing rapidly in the last two years. A total of 7,165 cases of rabies were reported in 1942 but the total had jumped to 10,540 in 1944. The totals included 28 human beings in 1942 and 53 in 1944.

Hanging Rayon If a rayon garment is to be hung, it is better to hang it over the line so that the weight is even on both sides. Rolling it in a towel is more satisfactory than hanging it. If only a few rayon garments are being washed, this is easily done.

Separating Lettuce When lettuce heads are tight and whole leaves are difficult to obtain, cut the core out, turn the head upside down and allow cold water to run into the center of the head of lettuce until each leaf is separated.

Explosive Ingredient The sodium or chlorine of salt enters into the making of high explosives, ethylene, glycol, poisonous gases, sulfur drugs, aluminum, synthetic rubber, and tetraethyl lead for high octane gasoline.

Covers Scratch To cover scratches on furniture, if the wood is dark, rub the scratch with a freshly cut walnut meat or touch it up with iodine. This will make the scratch less noticeable.

Basket Lining A removable clothes-basket lining protects clothes on wash day. Use a washable, durable cotton material or oil cloth for the lining.

Prevents Tarnishing A light coating of clear nail polish put on the metal parts of a handbag when the bag is new will keep them from tarnishing.

Careless Shaver Small cuts appearing in bathroom towels may be traced to the man who wipes his razor on any towel that is handy.

Tax Obligation A family man who earns $5,000 a year spends about as much on taxes as he does on food—about $1,000 yearly.

Transmits Malaria The anopheles is the only kind of mosquito that transmits malaria from person to person.

From Arctic to Antarctic Vast Army of Weather Experts Work for the United States

Combined military operations plans are contingent on ideal weather conditions for all four participating combat sections: air, ground, sea and amphibious. Weather plans for air operations must include pre-invasion conditions for softening up as well as air support on the invasion day. Ground conditions will include soil trafficability, whether or not soil will support movement of heavy vehicular equipment, air stability and wind velocity, for use of chemical warfare, smokescreens, etc. Sea conditions must be favorable enough to permit the large ships to launch small craft with safety and amphibious commanders are concerned with on-shore and off-shore winds and surf conditions. So the weatherman's task is to discover conditions which will be most nearly ideal for all four operations and how many days such conditions will prevail. Plans can then be made accordingly.

For either long or short range forecasting, the army makes use of its so-called "finger-print maps," the result of weather study back to 1899. For example, the weather for May 15, 1945, has been mapped through the network of observations from weather outposts. A representation of the map is punched on cards. To select the day in past history when the weather over a certain section was most similar to May 15, 1945, cards punched with historical weather information are run through a machine and the days with the closest similarity are selected.

Kathleen Norris Says: The Disappointing Homecoming

By Kathleen Norris

"He thinks there is too much fussing in the way Lina does things; flowers on the table and beauty parlor every week and taking Jane to dancing school—what the heck does all that matter, anyway?"

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

LINA and Robert Adams were married five years ago. They had a little daughter two years old when Bob went off for navy duty in March, 1943. Now, after more than a year's service he is home again, to stay, and has taken up his life where he left off, as a junior member of his uncle's law firm in a small town.

Lina wrote Bob constant and affectionate letters while he was away, sent clippings and snapshots and presents every week. She was lonely; she loved the memory of their marriage, their home, their perfect companionship. And of course, as so many mothers and wives are doing, she idealized the thought of Robert; he was perfect. Every night she and little Jane looked at his picture and said, "Goodnight, Daddy. Come home safe to Mummy and Jane."

Robert got a great reception when he finally did come back, but almost immediately things began to go wrong and they haven't straightened out yet. Both husband and wife write me their respective feelings.

Robert says that he hasn't changed at all; he never did like meeting people and going places, he never was especially fond of kids. If Lina would let him alone he'd be all right. He doesn't sleep any too well, and he hates arguing. He thinks there is too much fussing in the way Lina does things; flowers on the table and beauty parlor every week and taking Jane to dancing school—what the heck does all that matter, anyway.

"Muses by the Hour." Lina's letter says, in part: "He used to be sunny, easily amused, ready to fit into my plans. He simply used to adore Jane. Now he never notices her, and of course, at the age of four, she hasn't sense enough to be friendly with him in spite of it. He muses by the hour, staring at the floor; not hearing me, apparently, if I speak, and not answering if he does hear. He won't go anywhere, and even with clients he has a sort of 'what's-the-difference-anyway' attitude that doesn't help him in business.

"The other night," Lina's letter goes on, "I had a dish he likes for dinner and he said to me briefly and shortly, 'Good.' This encouraged me to say that there ought to be a mixed green salad with it, but that I had hunted all over for chives, chicory and cress without success. 'So you hunted all over for chives, chicory and cress, did you?' he said in a dreadful voice. And he got up and slammed out of the house. He came back late and apologized in a sort of grudging way, and I cried all night. I'm so sorry for him, and yet I feel that I can't stand this.

"Yesterday I asked him if he simply didn't like me, I seem to irritate him so, and he answered that I could draw any conclusion I liked. I asked him if he would like me to go to my mother for awhile, and he said that he had seen that coming, and knew I was crazy to get away.

"Do you think this shows actual derangement, or is it another wom-

Any Odd Space Can Be Converted Into a Guest Room

Few homes offer the extra space for a guest room, but many have an existing room, now used as a den, sewing room or all around catch-all, which could easily become a hospitable spot without lessening its present usefulness.

A simple way to convert such a room is outlined by Better Homes and Gardens magazine. One whole wall consists of storage cabinets and closets offering plenty of space for traveling accessories

BATTLE NEUROSIS

Robert has come home, discharged honorably, after a year's active duty in the navy. Like so many other veterans, he seems constantly moody and depressed. He is cold to his pretty wife, and unappreciative of her efforts to please him and to help him fit into the old ways of life. His little daughter doesn't interest him, nor his law practice, nor anything that used to delight him.

Robert is suffering from the well-known effects of the terrible strain and horror of war. Only time will cure him.

an, or is it my fault? We're both writing you, and we want a fair answer. Who is right and who is wrong?"

My dear Lina and Bob, my answer is that neither is wrong. The deep and bitter wrong is when the sons of men turn to world war as a preliminary to establishing world peace. It is as stupid a solution of international differences as was the old custom of men and women going in cheerful groups to a pest house to have smallpox all together and so immunize themselves. But the smallpox inoculation affected only a few persons, and this war is touching us all.

Love Lives On

I believe that under this present trouble your old love and companionship live on. But Robert—as was inevitable, has come back with a mind and soul and heart scarred by the terrible realities of modern warfare. He has seen the men beside whom he worked, the men who were his companions, blown to pieces, maimed, drowned, frozen, hungry, exhausted. He has gone for months—not days, not weeks, but months, without those common luxuries Lina has taken for granted; a warm house, a good reading light, quiet meals, the blessed security of America. When he sees Lina concerned for a hair—she has a pair of dancing slippers, for the Hollandaise sauce at the flowers, a sort of madness at the insane contrast comes over him, and he can hardly breathe the air of home.

Lina, on her side, is justified, too. She believed that all he wanted, when he went away, was for her to keep the home fires burning, go on with her nursing twice a week, keep up with her Red Cross work, scrupulously watch for tin and fat and paper salvages, obey the food and fuel laws—all these she has done. She hasn't complained of loneliness or dullness or food shortages. She expected praise and she didn't get it.

Give time and patience to your problem, Lina and Bob. It can be solved by a determination to understand and help each other. There will be a million more like it for the women of America to handle. Render this last aid to your government; that you lift just one of these difficulties from the great total, that you lessen just by so much the fearful crisis of postwar days.

Keeping Eggs Fresh

Do not wash eggs until you are ready to use them. An egg shell has a protective film which helps to keep bacteria and odors from getting through the pores. Washing removes that film, and the egg then spoils rapidly. To wipe off soiled spots on eggs, use a rough, dry cloth. Keep eggs in a refrigerator or other cold place to hold their freshness. Because eggs absorb odors readily, store them away from strong-smelling foods such as onions, cheese, pickles and kraut.

Harry—I figure my dog can always help me with my ration problems.

Jerry—How come?

Harry—He's a pointer!

One day in New York, Mark Twain had a luncheon engagement with his wife at a downtown hotel. He showed up at the appointed hour. His wife had not arrived. For an hour he waited, then ordered his meal. Before departing, he left a note for his wife with the waiter. When she appeared later in the afternoon, she discovered with amusement that it read:

"Never the Twains shall meet."

Father—Now look here, Jackie, if you aren't a better boy you'll never go to heaven.

Jackie—I don't want to go to heaven; I want to go with you and mother.

Boy—Give me a kiss.

Girl—Nay, nay!

Boy—Give me a hug, then.

Girl—Nay, nay!

Boy—Were you ever scared by a horse?

Jones—You know Brown has never been away from home in twenty years. That's what I call perfect love.

Smith—It sounds to me like paralysis!

Taxi Driver—It's not the work I enjoy.

Rider—No?

Taxi Driver—It's the people I run into.

Mrs. Jones—My husband is an efficiency expert at the office.

Mrs. Smith—Just exactly what does he do?

Mrs. Jones—Well, if we women did what he does, they'd call it nagging.

Jimmy—I don't like this cold weather.

Johnny—Why, it's nothing.

Jimmy—What do you mean? It's zero!

Johnny—Zero's nothing, isn't it?

Small Daughter—Mommy, may I have some water to christen my doll?

Mother—No, darling, you mustn't play with water.

Small Daughter—Then may I have some wax to waxinate her?

Slim—Did the teacher mark your math exam closely?

Jim—I'll say. He took off five per cent just because I had a decimal point upside down.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Never hem a dress until it is completely finished even to the side fastenings. You're certain skirt will hang better if hem is left until last.

A housemaid's basket in which to keep all necessary cloths, small brushes and cleaning agents needed to do the morning's work saves steps.

Just before you start painting apply cold cream or vaseline to your hands. The paint that gets on your hands can then easily be washed off.

Leftover fish can be made into a dozen good dishes, so it is more economical to buy a good sized whole fish and to make it last for two days, rather than to buy a small fish that is just enough.

The blackening on the brickwork around the fireplace can be removed with any scouring powder with only enough water to form a thin paste; then rinsing.

Cocoa may be substituted for chocolate in cake recipes if a small piece of butter is added to the cocoa.

Before driving nails in the wall for picture hooks, first see where the nails for baseboards were driven. These are always placed in the studding which gives support the plaster does not.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

It is difficult to detect the ordinary "slow leak" in time to prevent destructive "roadside flats." The Office of Defense Transportation recommends an effective cure for stealthy leaks: (1) Make sure valve caps have been screwed on finger tight. (2) Before adding air be sure to test pressure in each tire. (3) Check variations in tire pressure—a marked difference in pressure indicates a slow leak, which should be repaired immediately.

To help relieve the critical need for military tires, men who work in a large rubber plant in Los Angeles (B. F. Goodrich) have sworn not to miss a day's work, and, like submarine crews, not to shove for 120 days.

PETERMANN BACK IN STATES FROM SEA DUTY; WRITES FOLKS

Mr. and Mrs. Art. Petermann of the town of Auburn received word from their son Orville, 23, that he has returned to New York after several months of sea duty in the Atlantic with the Navy. In the letter to his folks, Seaman Petermann tells of some of his experiences. It has been given to us by his mother and following are a few excerpts from the lengthy letter, in which we have omitted the personal things:

April 24, 1945
Saturday

"Dearest Mom:
Well, I'm back in the States again. We got into New York day before yesterday. It sure feels good to be back too. I suppose you haven't heard from me for quite a while. Well, that is because we were at sea so long. I'm sorry I can't write often.
Yes, I'm sure getting around. But this ship I'm on now I don't like at all. I got on this ship in Norfolk, Va.; it is a tanker. We went with a convoy over to North Africa. You see we refuel destroyers at sea. We also carry high test octane gasoline. We went over to Casablanca, Morocco, North Africa. I did a little sightseeing while I was there. Saw where Pres. Roosevelt had his conference, also where he stayed. The city is a pretty big place. Lots of Arabs. Very poorly dressed. Tell you more about it when I get home once. We were there four days. Then we came back to the States. We ran into a storm on the way back or I should say hurricane. Most of the ships we sailed with got lost. While I was on the other ship we made two trips to South America which was Porto La Cruz, Venezuela. It was very warm down there. I didn't get seasick yet, even in that storm.

"Our ship pulled into dry dock. They are having it all fixed up. We should be here about a week and a half. I didn't get a chance to call you yet. Lloyd (Petermann) sure must be seeing him for quite a while. I didn't hear from him again. So he is near Guam now. He sure gets around, too. I've been in almost every big city on the east coast. I'll tell you about them when I get home. Such as Philadelphia, New York—I've been all around in New York, Baltimore, Norfolk, Newark, New Jersey, Jersey City, etc.

"So Oliver (Petermann) is in training again. He sure is foolish not to come home on his furlough. I guess I'd go home if I'd get five days. Maybe we will yet. If I'm not home by the time this letter gets to you, well, then I won't be home. You see when a ship goes in dry dock the crew usually gets a port directors leave. But I don't think our ship will be in long enough. They say it should be done by Monday, the 29th.
"I bet there are going to be a lot of things happening before I get home. And gee, more of them dying. Was I surprised to hear that Mrs. Pirks died. Oh, yes, we heard that Mrs. Roosevelt died when we were about half way across the Atlantic. Yes, we have the flags at half mast, too, for 30 days. I don't think I'll get to see Lloyd. He's in the Pacific and I'm in the Atlantic but I never know where we go next. I'd sure like to see him once. And I sure would look him up if I got out there once.

"On Easter day we just pulled into Casablanca. I got your card and quite a bit of mail before I left Casablanca. I didn't get to go to church. We got liberty in the afternoon. I sure would like to go once. We don't have any services of any kind aboard ship. It isn't like the ship Lloyd is on or any other big ship. There are only 24 navy guys on it. The rest are merchant men—about 25 of them. I haven't been to church since January. It seems we are never in port on a Sunday.

"Gee, it certainly is too bad that Sylvester Harter got killed. I bet the folks feel bad, their only boy.

"Your letters sound as if I'm in the Pacific. Well, I'm not as yet but maybe it will be soon. The war in Europe should just about be over. So then we'll all go to the Pacific. I sure do wish this war was over and I guess many more wish that too. You said you hope it isn't so windy out on the water like your windy days. Well, to tell the truth, it isn't windy at all compared to the storm we ran into on the way back. It lasted six days. The ship really did rock. The waves went about 50 to 60 feet high. The water just ran across the ship. I'll tell you more about that too when I get home.

"Some of the guys wanted to get off the ship. You see on a tanker you have to have at least seven months' sea duty before you can get off. And when you have about seven months' sea duty so it will be a couple of months yet until I get home. I have three months in now. So maybe I should be home by this fall some time. At least I hope so.

"Yes, I'm O. K. and feeling fine. Hope the same of you and the rest of the family. Well I guess this is just about it. I'll write yet before we pull out of New York. Oh, by the way, when we pulled into New York harbor the other day we anchored just about 50 feet from the Statue of Liberty. Gee, it sure is a big thing when you are close.

TESSAR HOME; HEARD ON AIR

Wayland D. Tessar, A.M.M. 2/c, who is stationed on an island off the east coast and whose address is Martha's Vineyard, Mass., arrived home Wednesday to spend a 6-day leave, plus traveling time, with his parents, the Jack Tessars, and sons. Seaman Tessar meant to surprise his folks but the secret that he was coming home was given away Tuesday evening when he was interviewed over a Chicago radio station while he and a buddy from South Dakota were visiting the Chicago Servicemen's Center. A number of local people were listening to the broadcast and heard Wayland talk when the announcer called upon him.

ELLIS HAS EMERGENCY LEAVE

leave which he was granted because of the illness of his father, Arnold Prost, of the town of Kewaskum, who underwent a serious operation. Seaman Prost, veteran of a big share of sea action, will be home for 20 days before returning to duty.

spend a week's leave with his wife in Milwaukee, visited last Wednesday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Marx here.

Neither here at home nor across the ocean is there time yet for dress parades, even though Nazi Germany has surrendered. There still is a war to be won.

On the home travel front that means Greyhound must apply itself ceaselessly to the job of serving the hundreds of thousands who will continue to rely on buses for their wartime transportation. Sometimes there just aren't enough seats to go around. And sometimes Greyhound must ask its passengers to smile at inconveniences which neither you nor we would tolerate in normal times. As a result, we ask you not to judge us by today's ride.

However, we all trust there will soon be an end to equipment shortages and wartime restrictions. Then we'll be happy to place ourselves on dress parade. For we have plans to serve you with the most enjoyable highway travel you've ever known—in the finest super-coach equipment ever designed.

A Bell for Adano

By John Hersey

THE STORY THIS FALL: The American troops arrived at Adano, a seaport in Italy, with Major Victor Joppolo, the Amiot officer in charge. Sergeant Borth, an M.P., was in charge of security. The Major set out to win the trust of the citizens and promised to replace the town bell stolen by the Nazis. General Marvin, chief of American forces in that section, became enraged at the carts on road leading into the city and ordered the Major to keep them out of the city.

Hearing that the city could not get water without the carts, Major Joppolo told Captain Purvis to let them enter the city. Purvis, to protect himself, reported the matter to headquarters. The letter was held up in the office.

CHAPTER VIII

"Giuseppe," the Major said, "I want to see Tina's father because you said he was the most respected of all the fishermen. I want to start the fishermen going out again, so that Adano will have something besides pasta and tomatoes and eggplant to eat. That's all there is to it."

"Boss, you're a kid Giuseppe."

"Giuseppe, do you want me to get another interpreter?"

"Okay, a boss, you're not a kid Giuseppe."

"I do want to see the old man. Will you fix that for me?"

"That's what I'm sorry, boss."

"What do you mean?"

"Tina's old man Tommasino no want a see you, a boss."

"Why not? Did you say something about my wanting to go out with his daughter?"

"Oh no, a boss. Old man Tommasino say he never been in a Palazzo di Citta in a life. He hate a Fascist a crooks. He don't know you're a different. He won't come a here."

"That's easy, Giuseppe. We'll go see him." The Major looked at a pad of appointments he had begun to keep on his desk. "Be ready to go at three this afternoon, Giuseppe."

And so it happened that another precedent was broken in Adano. Never in the memory of anyone in the town had an official gone calling on a citizen on business. Either the citizen had come willingly to the Palazzo, or else the citizen had been arrested, and had come against his will.

Between the time of this conversation and three o'clock Giuseppe told several people about this amazing flexibility on the part of the Major. And therefore when it came time for them to go down to the port looking for old Tommasino, quite a large crowd had gathered in front of the Palazzo, and the crowd followed the Major and Giuseppe as they walked.

"Where do these people think they're going?" the Major asked Giuseppe.

"Just a bunch a busybody," Giuseppe said.

The Major turned around. "Go home, you people," he said in Italian. "Don't you have anything better to do at three in the afternoon?"

But the people kept right on following Giuseppe and the Major.

At the corner of the Via Dogana and the Via Barrino, the Major turned again. "If you people have nothing better to do in the middle of the afternoon than this, I have something better for you to do. I am looking for laborers at very low wages. I will put you all to work."

But the people kept right on following. In fact the crowd grew as the Major and Giuseppe moved forward. Whenever a head popped out of a window or a person stepped curiously out of a door, the crowd shouted invitations.

"Come along," they shouted. "The Mister Major's going to hold office hours down at the port."

"You'd better come, he's going to call on old Tommasino, who hates authority," they shouted.

"The mountain is going to Mohammed," they shouted. And the crowd grew.

Giuseppe led the Major, and therefore the crowd, down to the harbor and past the stone pier, past the sulphur loading jetties, past the patent slips, past the Molo Martino to the Molo di Ponente, where the fishing boats were tied up.

The Major sensed that he was going to have a tough time with old Tommasino, so he said to Giuseppe: "Interpreter, unless you keep this crowd well back, you will lose your job."

It was therefore with considerable enthusiasm that Giuseppe ran back to the crowd, holding up his hands and shouting: "Stop, do not move forward, you are ordered to stop!"

"By whom?" people in the crowd shouted. "By the man who is favored just because he can speak two languages?" The crowd had come quite a distance for his show, and it was not to be denied now.

"Please stop," Giuseppe said. "If you do not stop, Ribaldo Giuseppe will lose his job."

"What is an interpreter to us," people said, "when we have a chance to see something new in Adano?" This has never happened before. What is the non-employment of one man? And they kept moving forward.

Giuseppe shouted: "The Major will be very angry if you do not stop right here."

"Come along," they shouted. "The Mister Major's going to hold office hours down at the port."

"You'd better come, he's going to call on old Tommasino, who hates authority," they shouted.

"The mountain is going to Mohammed," they shouted. And the crowd grew.

"That is not true," the Major said.

"Then why have you brought this informer, Ribaldo Giuseppe, who asked me to go see the American Major, and to whom I refused?"

"I am the American Major, Tommasino."

Tomasino did not bat an eye. "Why have you brought this crowd, if you were not planning to arrest me?"

"I didn't bring it, Tommasino, it just came. I don't want the crowd any more than you do. I just want to talk with you about fishing."

"I do not believe it," the morose man said. "All men of authority are alike. You came to arrest me, or perhaps to shoot me."

"I beg you to believe me," the Major said.

Giuseppe whistled to himself and ran back to the crowd. "It is amazing," he said impressively. "The Major said to Tommasino: 'I beg you to believe me.'"

"Beg," said the people in the front of the crowd. "Amazing."

"There has never been such a begging," others said. "The Mister Major is willing to be a beggar to this Tommasino."

"What did he say?" shouted people in the back of the crowd.

"He said: 'I beg you, Tommasino.'"

"Hello, Captain," the Major said when he walked into Lieutenant Livingston's office. "Can I use your phone?"

"Good morning," the Lieutenant said, "what are you doing down here?" The tone of the Lieutenant's Kent-Yale voice indicated that he thought the Army ought to stay on Army ground, and let the Navy stay on Navy shore.

"Can I use your phone?" the Major said. The Major was a single-minded man.

"Sure, help yourself."

The Major called Rowboat Blue Forward.

While he was waiting, he said to the Lieutenant: "I'm trying to get these fishermen organized, got to get rid of a mob first."

The Lieutenant did not look particularly pleased with this summary of the Major's activities.

"Hello, this the M.P.'s? Purvis? Listen, I want you to come down here. I got a mob to break up. Bring your Colt along. I think if you fire six into the air, that's all we'll need to send 'em home."

"We're down at the port, over by the breakwater on the western side. Okay, hurry down."

The Major thanked Lieutenant Livingston for the use of the phone. Lieutenant Livingston said: "Uh, Major, seems to me this fishing racket is more or less a Navy deal, isn't it?"

The Major said: "Yeah, I'll be back to see you, I'm in a hurry now. Thanks for the phone, Captain. See you later."

As the Major and Giuseppe passed the crowd on the way back to the Tina, Giuseppe said to the crowd: "As a friend, I advise you to go home."

People in the crowd, delighted with the mystery of the Major's hurried visit to the Port Captain's office, mocked Giuseppe. "Poor Ribaldo Giuseppe," they said, "speaking two languages has weakened his head."

"All right," Giuseppe said, "I have advised you as a friend."

At the Tina, Tommasino was sullen again. "I see you gave your hired crowd their instructions," he said. "Go ahead, take me, what have I to lose?"

Major Joppolo said: "They will all go home soon, Tommasino. I have given instructions for them to be sent home. Now about the fishing. Do you think you could get together crews for five or six boats?"

Tomasino said: "Who is to be the protector of these crews? What criminal?"

"Protector?"

"To whom do the fishermen have to pay tribute this time?"

"Don't mock me, fisherman. What are you talking about?"

"Hah," said Tommasino, a man who could be amused with the most gressomely sad face. "Hah, does the man of authority pretend he doesn't understand the system of protection?"

Major Joppolo spoke harshly: "What are you talking about, fisherman?"

"The whole crowd shouted then: 'Live the Mister Major!'"

Tomasino on the boat heard this, and it made him suspicious. "Why have you hired these people to come and jeer at me? No, I will not go fishing."

Major Joppolo shouted to Giuseppe in English: "Make the people go away! They are ruining everything."

Giuseppe passed on the Major's request, but the people just laughed at him. "Now?" they said. "You are crazy, interpreter. Speaking two languages has made you crazy."

Giuseppe shouted to the Major: "I'm a can't do nothing, a boss."

So the Major said to Tommasino: "Wait for me, Tommasino, I will show you that I mean well toward you." And he jumped down on the mole and went to the crowd.

"Do you want fish?" he asked the crowd.

"Yes!" the people shouted.

"Then you must go home," the Major said. "It is not easy to persuade Tommasino to go fishing. You must choose between this stupid gaping and having fish."

The crowd chose. Watching this unprecedented conversation and getting bulletins on it from Giuseppe was immediate, it was now. Eating fish was future and uncertain at best. The crowd chose staying to watch.

When he saw that he could not argue them into going home, Major Joppolo said to Giuseppe: "Where is the nearest telephone?"

Giuseppe said: "I guess she's in a Port a Captain's office. I show a you."

A thrill of curiosity ran through the crowd as the Major and Giuseppe went off. What had previously been the Italian Port Captain's office is now the office of the American Naval Lieutenant in charge of harbor facilities at Adano. This was Lieutenant Livingston, who had gone into the Navy's V-7 program early in the war, and had entered on his application blank as one of his main qualifications to be an officer and a gentleman: "Have had experience with small boats."

This experience, as a matter of fact, consisted of rowing on the crew at Kent School and at Yale. At Yale, Crofts Livingston was known as a fellow who would do anything for you if he liked you, but he was rather choosy in his friends.

Lieutenant Livingston had not yet decided to like Major Joppolo. The Major had not gone to either Kent or Yale. There was a rumor around that he had once been some kind of clerk in the New York City government, under Walker and O'Brien.

Lieutenant Livingston was inclined to the opinion that it was too bad the Army had sent such a meatball to be administrator of a town like Adano. And besides, when the Major saw a Navy officer wearing two bars, which anyone ought to know stood for Lieutenant Senior Grade, Major Joppolo would address him as Captain.

"Hello, Captain," the Major said when he walked into Lieutenant Livingston's office. "Can I use your phone?"

"Good morning," the Lieutenant said, "what are you doing down here?" The tone of the Lieutenant's Kent-Yale voice indicated that he thought the Army ought to stay on Army ground, and let the Navy stay on Navy shore.

Hedda Hopper: Looking at HOLLYWOOD

A COMMITTEE of connoisseurs in chic headed by Lady Mendel recently named Gene Tierney the best dressed girl in moviedom.

Just prior to that a national magazine listed Gene among the top four beauties of the screen, the others being Hedy Lamarr, Ingrid Bergman, and Linda Darnell.

And since 20th-Century-Fox's talent poll evidently puts her at the acting top—she's come off with all the best roles the lot has to offer in 1945—I thought it time to find out how Gene feels about life in general.

It's amusing to the next that Tierney releases will not display Gene's modern sartorial talents. When I came on the "Dragonwyck" set, where she was making a scene with Vincent Price, she was wearing the fashions of 1944. And in "A Bell for Adano," which is being shown in theaters this month, she's clad in the picturesque tatterdemalion of a peasant girl in a captured Italian town.

But not until "Leave Her to Heaven," which Gene begins in late spring, will she wear a chic modern wardrobe again—the sort of clothes that made "Laura" such a hit with women.

Take It From Me

Since nobody has gotten around to awarding Gene the medal for brains—such evidently not being included in obvious star assets—let me be the one to name her one of the most nimble minds in one of the steadiest little heads ever crowned by laurels. Designers love to create bizarre and extravagant whimsies to emphasize her intriguing face and rhythmic design. But in her private life and tastes Gene is conservative to a degree. Wears little or no makeup, and her shining brown hair is the precise shade nature gave her.

So, because she's young, superlively, mother of a 15-month-old daughter, Daria, and a happy wife, Gene's fans have come to think of her as a sort of high priestess of the modern theme. A girl of tomorrow. Nothing is farther from the truth.

"Hedda," she said, "sometimes I really think our fans believe we live in a sort of crystal and plastic dream world. But I'm not looking forward to jumping into a helicopter and landing on the studio roof instead of driving down the canyon each morning with good old Butch, my police dog, on the front seat beside me. And, aside from the fact in personal tastes, I'm really not looking forward to the day when television, all-out air transport, and chores done by robots in solar houses will be a reality. Think how much charm it will take from living."

Besides, few of the young things of today realize it will take years and years to develop such living. A lot of my friends seem to feel the post-victory year will be something worthy of Jules Verne's imagination.

I suggested she was probably influenced by the character of Miranda, the lovely heroine of Ernst Lubitsch's production "Dragonwyck."

Extremes Are Out

Gene has definite ideas about fashion, too. Although she has been named the best dressed woman in Hollywood, she frowns on extremes. Boiled down to a couple of essentials, her don'ts on dress come to:

"Don't be conspicuous. Conspicuous makeup, color, line, detail, and combinations violate the rules of good taste. The well dressed woman looks just right for the occasion—blends into the moment."

Gene is thrilled at playing the role of the evil sister in "Leave Her to Heaven."

"Ellen has acting quality, and that is what an actress should consider," she says. "The bad girls of fiction have given more opportunities to stars than the sweet young things."

I remember when Gene Tierney played half-castes, outlaw girls, Eurasians—for a time she was almost as typed in the sarong as Doty or Jeanette MacDonald. She didn't rise easily into the high place on the screen in which she now finds herself, although she is practically cameraproof, undoubtedly one of the best lens subjects in the industry today. She has graciousness and much personal charm, and a complexion of flawless beauty.

Chit-Chats on This and That

Some new buys indicate picture trends. Heywood Brown's stories, "The Sun Flower" and "The Boy Greedy Older" recently have been taken over by Hollywood. John Steinbeck's "Cannery Row" will be on the summer production schedule. . . . Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer will do three Sir Walter Scott novels—"Ivanhoe," "Quentin Durward," and "Kenilworth." . . . Joan Leslie definitely will play the Marilyn Miller role in "Silver Lining," and Bob Hutton in the Jack Pickford part.

More Horses for Bing

My Hollywood friends tell me Der Bingle (Crosby) is slated for another horse picture, this time "Stallion Road." It's about a vagabond who loves horses. But can he possibly do it without Bob Hope's ad libs? .

This is no time for half-way measures!

"Hit 'em twice as hard in the mighty 7th..."

"THE BIGGEST, MOST URGENT WAR LOAN OF ALL!"

"That's what I'm doing..."

"Hitting 'em twice as hard—buying twice as many bonds as I ever did before. Uncle Sam has got to raise in this war loan just about as much as he did in 2 war loans last year up to this time. That's why the 7th is the biggest and most important of them all.

"And I'm mighty proud—as every farmer ought to be—to have the chance to help!

"The way I figure it, at this crucial time in the war Uncle Sam is calling on all of us to go whole hog—to produce more food, to build more equipment, to do all we can to hit the enemy—HARD—without a let-up.

"And, of course, all that takes money. Money for thousands of giant new planes, money for those new concrete-busting tanks—for all the tons of ammunition and supplies our fighting men need to do the job up brown.

"Neighbor, that's where you and I come in.

"We can help in the chore of sending our boys everything they need—help by buying all the bonds we can... twice as many as we did last time!"
