Millers Featuring Sidewalk Rug Test

Miller's Furniture store ad on another page of this issue pictures Major Fred Miller, in charge of sales for Miller store, explaining the added features of the new improved Argonne rug to their salesman, Cpl. Sylvester "Tiny" Terlinden and Pvt. Byron Bunkelmann, in featuring a sidewalk test. All three of the above ex-servicemen served their country overseas during the past great war.

Maj. Miller says the old Argonne rug was always noted for its wearing quality. The new improved Argonne is a better rug; it has a higher all wool pile, more depth giving added beauty and richer coloring. Note the back of this rug. The latex prevents skidding and makes the rug easier to clean. This new improved Argonne is guaranteed by the maker to give satisfaction. Here is what you have been waiting for. You have seen the Masland "At Home" ads in many leading magazines such as The Farm Journal, House and Garden, etc. Now you are seeing an actual demonstration.

This rug will lay on Miller's sidewalk for two weeks. Millers invite the public to walk on this rug.

Earl Kohler's British Wife, Baby Arrive Here

Mrs. Dorothy Kohler and 4 1/2-months-old daughter Judith Anne, British wife and daughter of Earl J. Kohler of this village, who arrived in New York last week from London, England, reached Kewaskum early Sunday morning to make their home with Mr. Kohler. Mrs. Kohler and baby were among a large group of British wives and babies of United States servicemen and ex-servicemen who arrived in the states aboard the U. S. A. T. Thomas H. Barry.

Mrs. Kohler, who resided at 65 Niton street in Fulham, London, and daughter left London on May 2 and sailed from Southampton on May 6. They arrived in New York on May 15 and came as far as Chicago as passengers on the Twentieth Century Limited. Mr. Kohler met them in Chicago Saturday night and brought them home the rest of the way by auto.

Mr. and Mrs. Kohler were married in London in April, 1944 while Mr. Kohler was serving in England with the army air forces. Before her marriage, Mrs. Kohler held a position as comptroller at the T. C. Jones Co. in London. The former Dorothy Owen, she has only her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Owen in Fulham, London.

In an interview with your reporter, Mrs. Kohler stated that she had a fine trip which she enjoyed very much and which her baby stood very well. She added that she likes the states much and was particularly surprised and pleased with the wonderful food we have here.

ST. BRIDGET'S MAY BALL IS SUCCESS; PRIZES AWARDED

The May ball sponsored by the St. Bridget's parish altar society at the Lighthouse ballroom Wednesday evening was a fine success. Members of the committee in charge, Miss Marie Hanrahan, Mrs. Allen Reindl and Mrs. Alex Sippel, thank all who took part in the dance.

The door prizes went to the following: 1st, Walter Schmidt, West Bend; 2nd, Miss Gloria Abel, Wayne; 3rd, Mrs. Alex Sippel, Kewaskum. The quilt went to Mrs. Adam Kircher of Barton, the pair of p' low cases to Byron Klein of Kewaskum, and the apron to Miss Mary Botzkovis of Kewaskum.

NOTICE TO DOG OWNERS

ALL dog owners in the village are warned to keep their dogs on their own property and tied at all times. Many dogs are running loose and destroying and damaging property. In the future all such dogs will be disposed of so if you value your dog heed this warning. When accompanied by their owners on the street dogs must be kept on a leash. Consider that our citizens go to great effort and expense to keep their shrubbery, lawns and gardens neat and trim.

MONA MERTES RESIGNS RED CROSS POSITION

Miss Mona Mertes has resigned her position with the American Red Cross and arrived home last Wednesday to visit her mother, Mrs. Minnie Mertes for several weeks. She had been stationed at the Percy Jones Convalescent Center, Battle Creek, Mich. Miss Mertes will remain here until June 15 when she will again leave to spend the summer at a girls' camp where she will serve as an instructor. She had served with the Red Cross the past year.

Kison, Cedarburg; Joseph H. Janzer, town of Polk; John A. Kirtz, town of Richfield; Arnold F. Puestow, town of Jackson. These men are in the 29 through 35-year group.

ATTEND CONFERENCE

E. M. Romaine, chairman, and Carl F. Schaefer of Kewaskum were among other members of the Washington county board, Red Cross, and county public welfare board who attended the district conference of the Wisconsin Welfare Council at Sheboygan last Tuesday. Several speakers were featured at the conference.

MARRIAGE BANS ANNOUNCED

Banns of matrimony were announced in the Holy Trinity church bulletin on Sunday for the bridal party of Theodore H. Schoofs of Kewaskum and Adeline Laatsch of Boltonville.

Rev. W. Schwemmer Takes Over Peace Church Pastorate

The Rev. William G. Schwemmer, who was engaged as pastor of the Peace Evangelical and Reformed church here last Feb. 4 to replace the Rev. R. G. Beck, who resigned to accept a call to take over the pastorate of the First Evangelical and Reformed church at Burlington, Iowa, moved to Kewaskum last Tuesday from Lancaster, Wis. He took over the pastorate of the Peace church. He conducted his first service in the church last Sunday. The Schwemmers' son, Roy, remained at Lancaster to finish the school term before joining his parents here.

The former pastor, Rev. Beck, left for Burlington on Feb. 18 and since then the Peace church has been supplied by ministers from the Mission House college at Plymouth. Rev. Schwemmer resigned his pastorate at Lancaster after serving there seven years. He has attended schools at Madison to become especially trained to serve as a rural pastor. Members of the Peace congregation and residents of Kewaskum bid the Schwemmers welcome and hope they will very much enjoy living in our little city.

NEW PASTOR, WIFE HONORED

A cafeteria style supper was served in the Peace church parlors on Sunday evening by the congregation in honor of the new pastor, Rev. Schwemmer and wife. The supper was followed with singing by the union choir which rendered four songs. Lehman Rosenhelmer Jr. also sang two solos. Clifford Stautz gave a short talk which was followed by an enlightening talk by Rev. Schwemmer. The treble choir concluded the program. The evening was closed with the singing of the Doxology.

Saturday is Poppy Day in Kewaskum

Saturday, May 25, is Poppy day in Kewaskum and in thousands of other cities and towns throughout the United States. Millions of Americans will pay tribute to the nation's war dead by wearing memorial poppies.

Millions will make contributions to aid war's living victims, and disabled veterans, and the families of the dead and disabled.

Preparations for the observance of Poppy day here have been completed under the leadership of Mrs. Al. Uron, poppy chairman of the Kewaskum chapter of the American Legion Auxiliary. Volunteers from the Auxiliary will be on the streets early Saturday morning with baskets of poppies which they will offer to be worn in honor of the dead of both world wars. They will continue to distribute the little red flowers throughout the day, endeavoring to give everyone in the village an opportunity to wear a poppy in memory of those who gave their lives for America.

No price will be asked for the poppies, but contributions will be solicited for the welfare and rehabilitation funds of the Legion and Auxiliary. All money received will be used for the benefit of disabled veterans and families of veterans.

The local poppy workers will be part of an army of more than 100,000 volunteers which will distribute poppies in the United States Saturday. All will donate their services for the day with no pay. The only paid workers in the poppy program are the disabled veterans who make the flowers. The poppies to be distributed here Saturday have been made by disabled veterans of both wars at Wood, Wis.

Highs Win Tri-County Title; Defeat Belles

The Kewaskum Indians won the undisputed baseball championship in the Tri-County conference this week by virtue of two victories over Campbellsport. On Monday at Campbellsport Glen Backhaus proved he was the league's best pitcher when he shut out the Belles with one hit, 5 to 0. With one out in the last inning and with his second consecutive no-hitter in sight, Backhaus gave up a single, the lone Belle hit. Glen hurled a no-hit game against Oakfield last week. The victory clinched at least a tie for the title. Then on Thursday on the home diamond Pitcher Tessar squeezed out a 5 to 3 victory over the Belles to give his team the undisputed crown.

The title gives the Highs a clean sweep of all the championships in the conference this year. Kewaskum also won the football and basketball titles, as well as the district basketball tournament. The final baseball standings follow:

Table with columns: Team, Won, Lost. Rows include Kewaskum, Lomira, North Fond du Lac, Campbellsport, Oakfield, Senn, Vande Zande, Guell, Pesch, Esser, Sook, Brown.

*Replaced Backhaus in 4th. Doubles—Guell, Bilgo, Triples—Koespe, Baumhardt. Hits—Off Backhaus, 3 in 3 innings; off Tessar, 5 in 4 innings; off Pesch, 7 in 4 innings; off Sook, 1 in 2 innings. Struck out—By Backhaus 6, Tessar 4, Pesch 2, Sook 4. Base on balls—Off Tessar 2.

GIRLS' SOFTBALL NOTES

Our manager and the assistant manager have been giving us some good practices the last two weeks. Yes, we've now got an assistant manager, too. At the meeting in Boltonville last Monday night, which Marian, Dorothy, Mae and our two managers attended, the first half of the schedule for this season was drawn up. This first half will be played here and two away. Five other teams have joined the league, are Boltonville, Silver Creek, Beechwood, Fillmore and Adell. Remember our opening game is to be played here at 2:15 p. m. on Memorial day, May 30. This game will be played on the school grounds against Boltonville.

SCHAEFER BUYS RESORT

John L. Schaefer of Milwaukee, son of Mrs. John E. Schaefer of this village, recently purchased Muskie Cove resort at Pelican lake, Pelican, Wis., located about 25 miles north of Antigo. Mr. Schaefer, who now holds a position as chief of plant protection at the Seaman Body Co. in Milwaukee, will move to Pelican lake with his wife and family after June 15 to take over the resort.

SHOWER FOR MISS SCHAEFER

A surprise shower was given for Miss Kathleen Schaefer of this village at the home of Mrs. Alex Laubach on Saturday evening, May 18. Luncheon was played, prizes being awarded to Mrs. Wm. Guenther, Mrs. Paul Schmitt and Mrs. Albert Hron Jr. At 11 o'clock a plate lunch was served by Mrs. Roman Kral and Mrs. Laubach. Miss Schaefer will become the bride of Paul Kral on June 15.

Graduation Exercises to be Held Next Friday; 11 to Receive Eighth Grade Diplomas

Thirty-three students of the 1946 senior class of Kewaskum high school will receive their diplomas at commencement exercises to be held next Friday evening, May 31, in the school auditorium. The class, which consists of 12 boys and 29 girls, is larger than last year's group of 81 graduates by two students. Eleven eighth grade graduates of the Kewaskum public school will receive their diplomas in conjunction with the high school exercises.

Dr. Ludwig Freund of Ripon college will deliver the commencement address. Dr. Freund is a German immigrant who left Germany when the Nazis came into power. He has spoken to many different groups and is in demand as a luncheon and club speaker. The class motto is "May the Best of Our Past Be the Worst of Our Future." The class colors are blue and silver. Attendance at the exercises will be by special invitation. School will close for the summer months next Friday.

Kathleen Norris Says: Companionship Doesn't Just Happen

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

"Truly, a girl of 19 may have a wonderful companionship with a man of 38, even as his wife. But only when he can pet her, spoil her, treat her as a doll."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

ONE of the richest blessings life can win any one of us is companionship. Never underestimate it. No matter how burdened your life is with duties, responsibilities, interruptions, distractions, financial and domestic worries, don't complain as long as you have someone with whom you can share them.

Certain professional and business women are enormously successful. Some of them are rich. But if life hasn't brought them companionship they have nothing worth having, and they know it. They go in for nervous disorders, for bitterness, for strange extravagances. They keep reaching blindly about for the precious, the inestimable treasure that is companionship with some other human soul, and they never find it. They cannot find it. They have destroyed the secret of possessing it, of winning it.

Yes, I used the word "winning" in this connection, because a part of that secret of companionship is that it never comes ready-made. You have to work for it, to preserve it. That's why letters like this one from "Francoline" are so pathetic in their innocence and so sad in their certainty of disappointment.

"Francoline" is 19; she is going to be married. This is part of her letter:

"Mother objects to Paul. He is just twice my age; not that 38 is old for marriage, but mother thinks it's old for the man who wants to become my husband. He has been married before, and he says he has learned consideration the hard way. He has two boys, aged 10 and 8, and he adores them, and so do I. Their mother has moved away and left them here in school.

"Complete Sympathy." "We will not have much money, and that worries mother. I tell her I am not marrying Paul for money. I am marrying because of the complete sympathy there is between us. We laugh at the same things, we like the same shows, we love to plan what we will do someday when we are rich. Our feeling for each other is based on something much deeper than a mere 'crush,' and we have known each other ever since Paul was in college and I was born.

"You feel, and you've often said," the letter concludes, "that companionship is the real base of a happy marriage. We are sure of it. I am not taking Paul away from his wife; except for her monthly alimony check he has no correspondence with her at all. He says he never has really loved before; I know I never have, and that I never will again. I feel much more capable of giving advice about marriage than accepting it, but I would like to know if you don't think this may be a successful marriage?"

Francoline is 19, but she sounds younger. She sounds about 12. She is reveling in her first rapture of young love, a time of dreams and delusions—beautiful, inevitable, but pitiful, too. It is Paul that I blame for this situation; Paul, who has two boys, and a divorced wife, and who is twice Francoline's age.

My answer is: certainly you may make a success of this marriage. There is no marriage that may not be turned into a success. A strong,

I love the boys, too. . . .

HEADED FOR MISERY

A woman with a powerful personality can make a success of any marriage, says Miss Norris in today's article. Such women are rare, however, she goes on. The 19-year-old girl who asks for advice in the letter quoted does not seem to be one of them.

Francoline is madly in love with a man 38 years old. He has been married before, but is divorced. The two sons, 8 and 10 years old, are in his care. What Francoline finds in Paul is a deep companionship; a similarity of tastes and ideals. This is the first time she has ever been in love, Francoline says. Paul claims that he is feeling the tender passion for the first time, too, and that he never really loved his wife.

Miss Norris cautions Francoline that she is headed for a lot of shocks and disillusionment if she enters this marriage. A young woman must give up too many pleasures that are normal at her age; she must put up with too many difficulties. In this particular case, the children, the former wife, the earning power of the husband, all present problems that will probably grow worse as time advances.

self-controlled, sensible woman may marry any man she pleases and win through all the dangers and whirlpools and pitfalls of matrimony to a serene and happy middle age. But possibly Francoline hasn't the necessary qualities to get into that class.

Many Sacrifices Ahead. The responsibility of supporting another woman and two boys does not grow easier as the months of marriage turn themselves into years. Francoline will have to make many sacrifices, will have to be ready for grave decisions. The shortage of money will cramp her from the first, and unless she is of a really generous nature, she will resent that constant drain on Paul's resources; one boy will need dental work, another may come home from night nursing after an illness. Paul may crush her by hinting that as he already has children he is none too eager to welcome more.

This marriage robs her of the dancing, the house parties, the new frocks and new friendships that are natural at her age. It means that she grows mature before her time. Truly, a girl of 19 may have a wonderful companionship with a man of 38, even as his wife. But only when he can pet her, spoil her, treat her as a doll. To Francoline none of these pleasant flatterings will come. She will be at once the second wife, stepmother, housekeeper, cook and manager in the house of this much older man. If there is any spoiling done she will have to do it; if there are any concessions, she will have to make them.

Lots of crying details will have to be settled before you can come to companionship with your husband, Francoline. This particular setup doesn't seem to promise much hope of their settlement.

Tasty 'Gray Bread'

"Gray bread" may become so popular the public won't want to return to white bread, says Frederick Sharer, a veteran baker.

He said that when flour regulations ended after World War I bakers went right on making dark bread because customers had grown to like it.

The baker says the use of the "Truman-loaf" may increase bread consumption so much that it offsets the grain saved by switching from pure white flour.

Is Now Rheumatic Fever

Children's Greatest Menace Today rheumatic fever kills more children than measles, whooping cough, scarlet fever, meningitis, and infantile paralysis combined! Symptoms: the child may appear extremely nervous, with uncontrollable twitchings, wriggings and facial contortions; he may have low-grade fever and complain of aches and pains, especially in the legs and knees; he may be thin and listless and have no appetite; he may have a sore throat frequently.

When one or more of these symptoms is found, the parent should call a physician. Usually, rheumatic fever can best be handled in a special institution, since treatment is complicated and requires a long time. Unfortunately, few communities outside of large cities have these facilities. Acute cases are usually treated in hospitals. But if the child is being cared for at home, the public health nurse should be called for a daily visit.

VERMONT

Green Mountain State

ONE of the few places where people speak of thrift with respect . . . Vermont, a small state pulling its full share of weight with the rest of the nation and making its own budget meet!

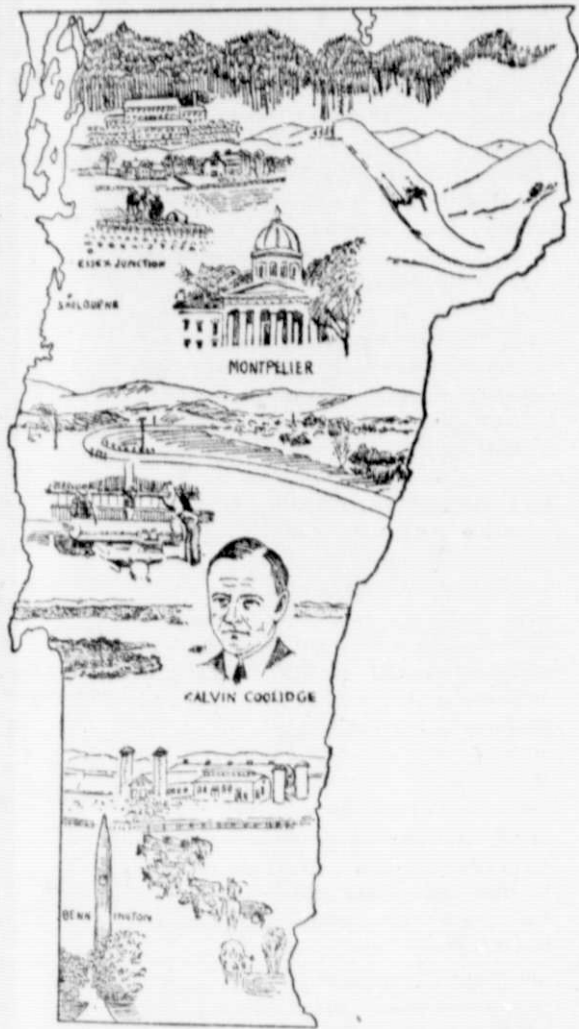

The world has marveled at Vermont's scenic wonders. Many have witnessed the spontaneous explosive splitting of quarry blocks at some of its quarries, where great blocks of granite suddenly snap loose with a sharp report. But the world should know Vermont's people, too. They were first to express constitutional prohibition of all human slavery! They were first in the nation to provide universal manhood suffrage, with voting not dependent upon property, owned or rented, or a specified yearly income.

Vermont always hated slavery, and its legislatures adopted annual resolutions against it. Southern states grew more angry each year. The Georgia legislature requested President Pierce to employ enough abed-doned Irishmen to dig a ditch around Vermont and float "the thing" out to the Atlantic ocean! A Virginia newspaper gravely commented that Vermont was "always foremost in the path of infamy."

Years later, Robert T. Lincoln, son of the Great Emancipator, came to Vermont to make his home at Manchester. A marker now stands on the lot in Bennington where William Lloyd Garrison lived, and where he edited the "Journal of the Times" early in the 19th century. Also, Bennington was the birthplace of John F. Winslow, builder of the "Monitor," the steel ship of Civil War fame.

Vermont is a pleasant place. The climate is cool and the atmosphere dry. The summer season, between frosts, is from 110 to 160 days, depending on location and altitude. Evidences of the ice age still prevail in rounded and grooved ledges, polished rock surfaces, ice-borne boulders and great deposits of unsorted sands, clays and gravels. The range of scenic interest is vast, with mountains and broad valleys, river and lakes, and abundant forests. There will often be 10 feet of snow-cover in the central part, and 34 to 46 inches of rainfall through the year. Lake Champlain is 120 miles long, and there are many others, including Lake Willoughby, Lake Dunmore and Silver Lake.

From Mount Mansfield, 4,393 feet high, there is an excellent view of the White Mountains and Adirondacks, with Lake Champlain visible 30 miles away. Vermont has over 900 peaks with an altitude of 2,000 state and each section has its scenic attractions. Vacationists find almost every kind of allure in Vermont, including hiking on the famous Long Trail and horseback riding on the thousand-mile bridge trail system.

In Poultney, when a lad, Horace Greeley set type in a small print shop. Salmon P. Chase lived and studied law at Randolph. Peacham was the boyhood home of Thaddeus Stevens. Eugene Field, with recollections of his boyhood in New-fane, based several of his poems on local life in Vermont. Few states have produced so many notables in all lines of endeavor as hardy, mountainous Vermont.

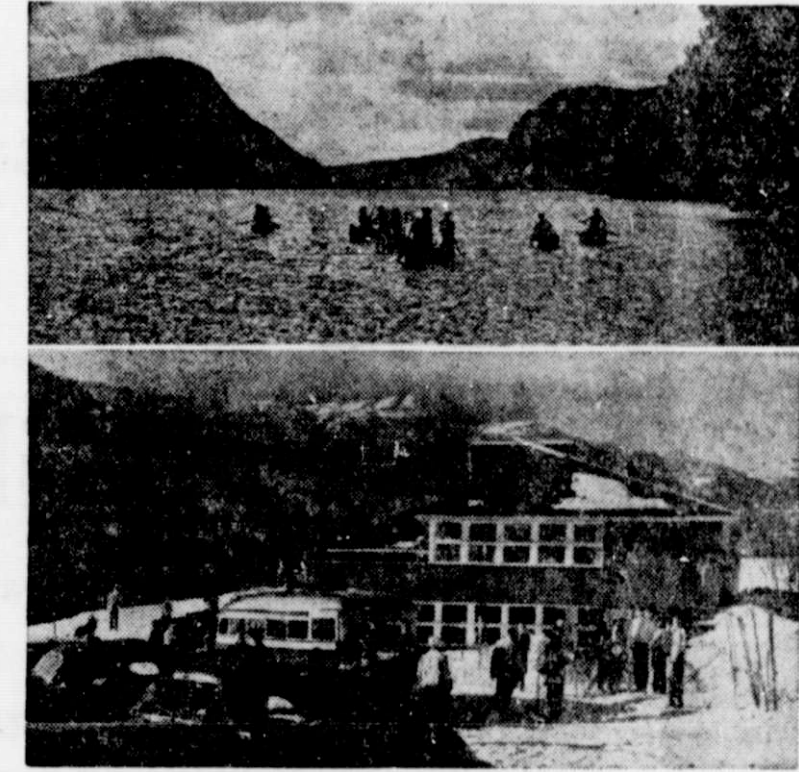

Samuel Champlain, French explorer, was the first white man known to have seen any part of Vermont. When coming from Canada, in 1609, he went up the long lake that bears his name. The first settlement in Vermont, though short-lived, was also by the French, when Captain La Motte built a fort and a shrine on Isle La Motte. In 1690, Capt. Jacobus de Warm established an outpost on what is now Chimney Point. In general, however, Vermont was a no-man's land in the 17th and 18th centuries, a mere passageway for French and Indian raiding parties seeking the English farther south and east.

From the earliest days, Vermont gave attention to primary education. The University of Vermont was chartered in 1791. Other institutions for higher education include Norwich university, Northfield, the second oldest military college in the nation; Bennington college; Middlebury college; St. Michael's, Winooski; Trinity, Burlington. There are three normal schools and two junior colleges in the state.

One of the crowning features of Vermont is the province of the Green mountains. Here are found the highest peaks—Killington, Ellen, Lincoln, Camel's Hump, Mansfield and Jay. The physical geography of the state is diversified, however, with the Vermont lowland on the west and much rolling country eastward. The state's geology is complex and extremely fascinating. Vermont is nicknamed "The Green Mountain State." Its motto is "Freedom and Unity." The state flower is the red clover; state bird, hermit thrush; state song, "Hail, Vermont."

feet or over. There are over 400 lakes in the state, and forests and forest parks cover over a half-million acres. Hunting, trapping and fishing are always available to the rugged outdoor man.

There are recreational activities in Vermont all through the year—skiing into April, fishing and other vacationing from May to late fall, and touring and hunting to the opening of the winter season. Tourists penetrate to every corner of the

For 12 Years Vermont Was Independent Republic

One of the outstanding features of Vermont is that it existed as an independent republic, with Texas the only other state so distinguished.

Vermont was claimed by both New York and New Hampshire, and was called by some the New Hampshire Grants. A convention of the settlers was held in the Cato-mountain tavern at Bennington in 1795 to discuss this controversy. Already the militia, known as the Green Mountain Boys, had come into being. At a convention in Westminster in 1777, Vermont was declared an independent state and the name of New Connecticut was adopted, but shortly afterward the name was changed to Vermont. Verd-Mont had been suggested several years earlier. The Green Mountain Boys took part in all the conflicts of the Revolution, and Bennington monument, 302 feet high, commemorates the battle of Bennington.

From 1777 to 1791 Vermont was a completely independent republic. When all the ancient disputes were settled, the state adopted the constitution of the United States and was admitted as the 14th state—the first to be added to the original 13. The capital was established in Montpelier in 1805.

Men of Vermont have a noble heritage, a love of liberty and independence that is deep-rooted, and full appreciation of human rights. He was educated at Black River academy and Amherst. As mayor of Northampton, Mass., he started his political career, later becoming governor of that state, vice president and President of the United States.

Calvin Coolidge died in 1933, and now sleeps in the sidehill cemetery at Plymouth beneath a severely simple stone. "Silent Cal" was considered a typical Vermonter, a homespun person who appealed strongly to all people.

'Silent Cal'

The sign reads: "Plymouth, Altitude 1420, Population 331." Thousands of visitors stop every year to visit the cross-roads store, which has been turned into a sort of museum. Little Plymouth is a shrine in a remote section of the Vermont hills.

On Independence Day, 1872, Calvin Coolidge was born in the cottage attached to the rear of the combination store and post office.

WORLD WAR II VETS LEARN OF EDUCATIONAL OPPORTUNITIES

To give World War II veterans an opportunity to learn about the varied training programs available to them under the G. I. bill, a meeting of veterans who are interested in agricultural training will be held in the West Bend high school gym on Monday evening, May 27, at 8:00 o'clock.

Ivan G. Fay, state department of vocational and adult education will discuss the provisions of the G. I. law and explain how discharged servicemen can secure training while continuing their present work. All World War II veterans interested in agriculture are invited to attend.

OLDER 4-H'ERS MEETING GREAT SUCCESS

Sixty older 4-H boys and girls from all parts of the county enjoyed a fine recreational evening Wednesday, May 15, at the Wisconsin Gas and Electric company. Verne Varner, assistant state club leader, presented an inspiring talk on what older 4-H members can do to make their 4-H work more interesting and helpful to the community. Folk games and square dances climaxed an inspiring evening.

The group has selected a committee to plan the next get-together consisting of Clarence Jenz, Route 4, West Bend; Donald Lutz, Route 5, West Bend; June Lemke, Route 1, West Bend; Earl Schoenbeck, Route 1, West Bend; and Marjorie Mayer, Route 1, Slinger.

Electric Co. Uses Two-Way Radio to Improve Service

If a radio listening survey agency were able to call one of the many Wisconsin Gas & Electric company service trucks and ask the usual question, "To what station are you listening?" the answer would be "WQHK." These are the call letters for a special emergency radio band station recently placed in service by the company. The transmitter is located on a high hill near Barton and operated by remote control from dispatching headquarters at West Bend. Fourteen two-way radio communication units have been installed in trucks of the northern division of the company and constant communication can be maintained whenever the trucks are in the field.

The new sets are of the frequency modulated type and operate on a frequency of 28.86 megacycles. Company employees using the radio equipment have passed required tests and been licensed by the Federal Communications Commission.

The system has successfully completed a trial period of operation and results indicate that the installation will benefit service conditions in this area by materially decreasing the length of any unavoidable electric outages. An example of the way the radios are used occurred recently when a car hit a pole on U.S. Trunk Highway 41 at 1:09 a. m., taking a transmission line out of service and four substations with it. A transmission was called out and sent in the general direction of the suspected trouble. Radio communication with him was immediately established and he was ordered to do certain switching thereby localizing the trouble. When he reported via radio that this had been completed, service was restored to three stations. Shortly thereafter a customer called dispatching headquarters reporting the exact place where the line was down. Two troublemen then in the field were notified by radio of the location and immediately performed the additional switching necessary to restore service to the fourth station.

Behind-the-scenes dramas such as the one described are frequent in the life of a troubleman but with the coming of emergency radio communication they will be of shorter duration. Without radio, the series of events described above would have taken an estimated two hours. Actually, from the time the careening car first hit the pole, only 23 minutes were needed to rouse the troubleman from his slumbers, get him on his way, locate the trouble, do the necessary switching and restore service to hundreds of customers, most of whom were entirely unaware of the exciting events taking place while they slept.

FAMINE RELIEF COMMITTEE OF COUNTY ISSUES APPEAL

A letter by R. D. Lepien, chairman of the Washington County Famine Emergency committee, which all school children will be asked to take to their homes, states the need for saving wheat, fats and oils for the starvation stricken areas in Europe, Africa, and Asia.

Each child will also receive a bulletin entitled "How Homemakers Can Help Save Food to Fight Famine." Quoting the President's famine emergency committee it calls on families to "reduce your purchases of wheat products by forty percent and fats by twenty percent."

Potatoes should replace bread whenever possible. An average serving of oatmeal, even without sugar and cream, is equal in nourishment to two slices of bread. If every man, woman, and school child will replace two slices of bread with a serving of oatmeal each week, this alone would mean 135,000 tons of wheat for the famine areas, the bulletin points out.

The use of corn meal, pearl barley, and buckwheat, instead of wheat products is urged. Using dry bread for toast, bread puddings, and in other ways will help to conserve wheat. In no case should the crusts be thrown away in this period when an estimated 500,000,000 people are not only gravely undernourished, but are facing the threat of the greatest famine in human history.

In pointing out the need for saving fat, the bulletin says that a teaspoon of fat saved by every child and adult would make 1,950,000 pounds available for people overseas.

WASHINGTON COUNTY VETERANS ORGANIZE

On Monday evening, May 13, a group of World War II veterans from Washington county met at West Bend for the purpose of outlining the first steps in the organization of a Washington County Veterans association. The veterans felt that there is no group in the county which adequately represents the veterans in civic and political affairs throughout the county.

Attorney Steve O'Meara of West Bend was elected temporary chairman. According to O'Meara the first executive meeting was to be held on Friday, May 17, at West Bend and the county-wide meeting of all veterans will be held on Monday, May 27, at Goring's resort. A complete resort in regard to the county-wide meeting will appear in all the Washington county papers next week.

STARAL, SCHOOL PRINCIPAL, CANDIDATE FOR COUNTY CLERK

Anton P. Staral, village clerk and principal of the Barton state graded school where he is completing his tenth term, last week announced himself a candidate for the office of county clerk for Washington county on the Republican ticket. Staral has been clerk of the village of Barton for the past four years.

A native of Kewaskum, Staral graduated from high school there and also the Oshkosh State Teachers college. He taught nine years in the town of Polk before coming to Barton. He was formerly president of the Washington County Teachers association two years. Staral is married and has three children.

Pickhard Farm Constructs 1200 Foot Diversion Dike

Harry H. Pickhard & Sons, Slinger, have just completed construction of a 1200 foot diversion dike on their 220 acre farm in Park and Richfield townships.

An ordinary farm tractor, plow and scraper was used to construct the dike. A complete soil conservation plan as worked out by the Pickhards, in cooperation with the Washington county soil conservation district, called for the construction of this dike to prevent excess run-off from flooding over some 50 acres of bottomland planned for drainage.

Other features of the Pickhard's plan, according to P. J. Baum, soil conservationist, include contour strip cropping on 60 acres of cultivated land, seeding 40 acres for permanent pasture, planting 15 acres to trees, and draining 60 acres. The bottomland to be drained and placed under cultivation will permit the retiring to pasture and woodland of steep land subject to severe erosion.

AAA ISSUES 252 DRAFTS FOR DAIRY PRODUCTION PAYMENTS

The Washington County AAA committee has, as of May 21st, issued 252 draft checks for dairy production payments making a total payment of $236,467.40 covering approximately 56,977,960 of whole milk produced and sold by Washington county farmers during the months of January, February and March, 1946.

Farmers are to be reminded that all applications for dairy production payments for the first quarter of 1946 must be filed before May 21st, 1946, as no first quarter payments can be made after this date.

Huge Profits Found in Black Markets

Truman Urges South American Nations to Join Defense Plan; Loophole Caused Alcatraz Riot

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

BLACK MARKETS: Huge Profits

Indicative of the huge profits being made in the black market, the Chicago district collector of internal revenue disclosed that approximately four million dollars in delinquent income taxes have been paid by black marketers since March 15. Payments of two illegal operators totaled one million dollars each.

Because the treasury is concerned with the collection of taxes that are due rather than in the legality of the source of income, black marketers may escape prosecution if the revenue bureau has not opened investigation of their cases.

Meanwhile, reports from Washington, D. C., indicated that the department of justice plans an all-out attack on the black market, with Atty. Gen. Tom Clark holding that the best means of throttling illegal operators is by nailing them on tax evasions. At the same time, OPA has doubled its enforcement staff to 850 and is receiving FBI aid in assaulting the black market in meat.

PAN-AMERICA: Defense Plan

In asking congress to authorize U. S. training, organization and equipment of South American countries, President Truman declared that such aid would enable them to participate in hemispheric security as envisaged in the charter of Chapultepec. As the strongest Pan-American nation, it is natural for the U. S. to assume defensive leadership, he said.

As precedent for close U. S. and Pan-American military relations, Mr. Truman pointed out that this country has collaborated with other hemisphere republics for several years within the framework of the good neighbor policy. Military and naval training missions have been sent south of the border and limited supplies were lend-leased during the war.

Implementation of the program would not result in an arms race or materially increase the level of armaments in South America since this country would not countenance uncontrolled distribution of munitions, the President said.

COAL STRIKE: Congress Stirred

Congressional clamor for restrictive labor legislation mounted as the soft coal strike continued after the breakdown of initial efforts to bring the United Mine Workers and operators together and government seizure of the properties loomed.

Having consulted with the UMW's 250-man policy committee, John L. Lewis stuck by his demands that the negotiators first discuss a health and welfare fund before considering wage and safety issues. Reiteration of the UMW demands followed federal conciliator Paul W. Fuller's attempt to break the deadlock in the parleys and get the miners back into pits while a new contract was being drawn.

As the strike dragged on and dwindling fuel supplies slowed transportation, Senator Knowland (Rep., Calif.) demanded early consideration of labor disputes legislation if the deadlock was not resolved. Seeking to forestall restrictive measures, Senator Barkley (Dem., Ky.) administration floor leader, cautioned against hasty action just because congress "mad at somebody," meaning Lewis.

ALCATRAZ: Prison Flaw

Designed to house the nation's most incorrigible convicts, the prison cells at Alcatraz possessed one small—very small—loophole which permitted a scheming and wily desperado to attempt the sensational jail-break that resulted in the death of 5 and wounding of 15.

Atop a tier of cells in Cell Block C runs a gun gallery for guards with the horizontal bars enclosing it 18 inches apart. While in the cell block on prison duty, wily, little Bernard Paul Coy, Louisville, Ky., bank robber, spied the spacing and figured that he could wriggle through if he could only bend the horizontal bars.

When released for cleaning duty in the cell block the first day of the break, Coy watched until the guard passed on his rounds and then clambered up to the gun gallery like a monkey. Equipped with a "spreader" devised from odd pieces of pipe, Coy managed to bend the horizontal bars enough to wriggle into the gallery, where he waited until Guard Bert Burch appeared. Slugging him with his "spreader," Coy then took his coat and keys and a 30.06 Springfield rifle, with 50 cartridges; a .45 caliber automatic pistol, with 21 cartridges, and several gas "billys." It was with these weapons that the desperado held out after being released from their cells with the captured keys.

As a result of the rejection of the proposed constitution, elections will have to be held June 2 for the selection of another constituent assembly to frame a new charter.

FOREIGN MINISTERS: Work Hard
The Big Four's foreign ministers, meeting in Paris to speed up the formulation of peace treaties for Saudi Arabia into the Arab camp since long cultivation of this powerful monarch resulted in development of friendly relations between the two countries and U. S. acquisition of valuable petroleum concessions. By taking his stand beside the Arab league of the near east, embracing 33 million Arabs, Ibn Saud could wield potent influence in negotiations with the U. S. and British over Palestine.

Native Christians as well as Moslems joined in protest against the admission of 100,000 Jewish refugees into the Holy Land. In protests to King George VI of England, Pope Pius XII, Premier Stalin, Generalissimo Kai-shek and President Gouin of France, Arab Catholics declared that enforcement of the commission recommendations would result in crowding of Arabs from Palestine.

FRANCE: To the Right

Though greatly strengthened by France's rejection of the proposed new constitution supported by the leftists, the rightist Popular Republican Movement (MRP) pledged to remain in the coalition government so that the country's representatives at the foreign ministers meeting in Paris would enjoy united backing in the diplomatic negotiations.

The popular vote on the constitutional issue came at a time when French delegates to the Paris conference pressed their claims to parts of the Italian border and demanded an arrangement for controlling the vital Ruhr and Rhineland to prevent the rebirth of German militarism and threat of future aggression.

As a result of the rejection of the proposed constitution, elections will have to be held June 2 for the selection of another constituent assembly to frame a new charter.

FOREIGN MINISTERS: Work Hard

enemy countries, worked feverishly on Italian and Balkan problems in an attempt to avert a deadlock which would further aggravate the economic disorganization of the continent.

While there were indications when the foreign ministers first met that the troublesome question of Trieste would be settled between Italy and Yugoslavia along racial lines, Molotov of Russia balked at the proposal. In seeking to have the strategic port and its surrounding area turned over to Soviet-sponsored Tito of Yugoslavia, Molotov offered to have Russian reparations claims against Italy and relinquish demands for a trusteeship over Tripolitania in North Africa astride Britain's Mediterranean lifeline.

Quick to reject Molotov's offer, the U. S. and Britain asserted no Italian government could sign a peace treaty giving away predominantly Italian Trieste, and Russia possessed no title to Tripolitania and could not consider the colony as its own for bartering.

WASHINGTON DIGEST

Columnist's Thoughts Turn To Squirrels

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Summer was creeping toward the Potomac, the flag over the White House hung limp as a wilted petal, a hot sun, burning through the infrequent gaps in the heavy foliage, made yellow patches on the lawn. The fountain splashed faintly, falling like warm, futile tears.

I moved slowly along the drive, wondering if I could garner even a modicum of answers to meet emptiness left by the thousands of unanswered questions the world is asking.

I looked under the Japanese oaks whose tightly laced leaves, only a little above the ground, smother the young grass, hopefully starting up each spring, withering in the shadows before July. There, bored and half asleep, I could make out the form of the old gray squirrel.

Often this winter, he had come to my rescue when other "dependent sources" and "authoritative quarters" refused to yield up their secrets. But this time, he barely nodded, and looked away, deep in his meditations, probably a nuclear problem of some sort.

A few moments later, I was taking down notes at a not very newsvul press and radio conference. The President, I feared, did not feel as cheerful as he looked. The handkerchief in his breast pocket was neatly folded in his customary three flat, razor-sharp triangles. (Sometimes his answers were almost as sharp.) The great red carnations on the table behind his desk, which holds the photographs of members of his family, were already drooping. The low hum of the mowing machine came in the open windows that look toward the Potomac.

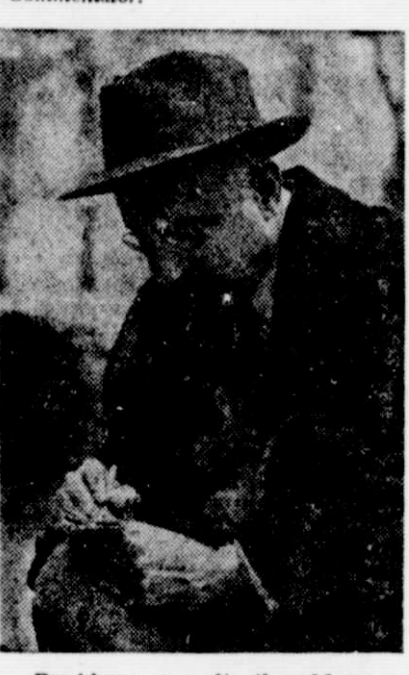

Of what was said of import to the nation and the world, you will have read by the time these lines are printed. The rest was trivia.

We walked out of the executive offices. I glanced under the Japanese oaks, but my friend, the squirrel, had gone, the vista looked very bare and cheerless. So I went back and talked about it.

As soon as mail could reach me from Sturgeon Lake, Minn., I received a letter and a package. The writer said that as I had mentioned that it seemed impossible to raise grass on the shaded parts of the White House grounds, I might be interested in this sample of quack grass which she offered, and she wrote: "If it won't grow there, I'll be glad to know there is some place it won't grow."

The next day, I acknowledged the gift, and opined that quack grass must be another name for crabgrass which I remembered as the bane of my lawn-mowing experience. Soon I received other communications.

A landscape designer in Akron, Ohio, informed me that "quack grass is not crabgrass. The former is a perennial; the latter is an annual. Quack grass (agropyron repens) propagates by seeds and creeping rootstalks. Crabgrass seeds itself each year."

Another letter came from Robert L. ("Pop") Davis, "Amateur Mulch Gardener" of Thorsby, Ala. He referred to my mention of crabgrass as a pest, and then he went on: "Having spent years at my hobby of looking for the most useful plant for growing summer mulch in my gardens, and deciding that crabgrass was it, I cannot resist a challenge. Even though millions of gardeners agree with your remarks, I still challenge them. At present, I have a spring garden growing without any hoeing on land covered with a thick layer of last year's dead crabgrass. Scarcely a weed can grow through it, not even this year's crabgrass.

"You see, I am 'Pop,' the laziest gardener in the world, and I refuse to gather, haul and spread mulch when crabgrass will do it for me, and do a better job of it. I make it mulch the land for me by leaving it strictly alone. I may even encourage it with fertilizer. After I have gathered my early spring vegetables, I let the crabgrass take over. In early fall, when the crabgrass stops growing here, I mow it down. I then have that mulch gardener's delight, a mellow mulchy spot where most anything can grow without using spade or hoe. I use a potato digger to dig planting holes."

But that is not all. "Pop" may be the laziest gardener in the world, but he is a vigorous poet. He enclosed a poem of which (alas) I have room only for one verse and refrain. Here it is: "Bring me a hoe; pull 'em all up! Chick weed, crabgrass, dig and cut! Stoop down low! Nothing but trash, Goosefoot, pigweed and Johnson grass; Just no time to look at the sky, Fleece clouds a-floating by; Work 'til you're such a crook in the back That gardening pleasure's gone, alack!

"Wisdom may have a foolish sound; Crabgrass mulch is good for the ground, Let the weeds grow! Bring me a chair! Crabgrass mulch is everywhere, Soft and thick and brown."

Flame Cultivator Is Used To Hoe Weeds from Cotton

COVINGTON, TENN. — A revolutionary "flame cultivator" has been produced in TVA workshops and is being demonstrated by W.C. Harris, who is trying to grow 50 acres of cotton without the use of hand labor. The flame cultivator, which uses butane fuel, is similar to the burner used by railroads to destroy weeds along the tracks. The farm model, however, is mounted on a tractor. Three feet or more ride on the ground to support the cultivator and keep the burners at the level desired. Taking two rows at a time, four burners barely skim the ground, a burner on both sides of each row. "The flame cultivator has been in use in the Mississippi delta for some time," Harold B. Jones reported. "Tests there have proved the cultiator will clean the weeds from an acre of cotton at a cost of four cents per acre.

"The flame cultivator has a capacity of 20 acres per day. The model shown is a two-row model and is the model which will accomplish this 20-acre per day cultivation."

"How do you keep from burning the cotton?" was the question asked by several observers.

"The flame cultivator is not used until the cotton is from 6 to 8 inches high and 3/16 of an inch in diameter. The cotton is tough enough then to withstand the heat for the short time it is exposed to it," answered Mr. Jones.

The demonstration in the Covington area is the first in the state of Tennessee.

VETS ARE LUCKY

Colonial Mansion Used by GI Couples at University

NEW YORK CITY.—Three couples from Midwestern and Western communities who planned to live in New York City while doing graduate study at Columbia university are beating the critical housing shortage by sharing an old colonial mansion on a country estate an hour's drive from the school.

And they readily admit they enjoy their leisurely country living much more than city dwelling, "because it's so much like home."

The couples are Mr. and Mrs. Donald Murray of Wausau, Wis.; Mr. and Mrs. John McDonough of Seattle, Wash., and Green Bay, Wis., and Mr. and Mrs. Cameron Bremseth of Leeds, N. D.

They and 11 other married veterans and their wives live the part of country squires in Nevis, a 20-room mansion built in 1835 on an oak-studded 75-acre tract which gently slopes down to the Hudson river. The mansion, located at Irvington-on-Hudson, New York, was converted into single room apartments by Columbia university to help solve the student veteran's housing difficulty. The estate was acquired by the university from Mrs. T. Coleman Du Pont in 1935 and had been used as a botanical experiment station before its present tenants moved in.

Mrs. McDonough, the former Marie Morand, who was brought up on her father's farm near Green Bay, summed up the attitude of the couples from west of the Mississippi.

"Country life is the life I'm used to and although I wanted to live in New York City while my husband was studying, I far prefer Nevis," she said. "Just to feel more at home, I'm raising vegetables on a small plot of land. It helps the shopping problem."

Caught Some Whoppers In Cumberland River

JAMESTOWN, KY. — When John S. Osborne, his wife and his twin brother went fishing near Lock 21 in the Cumberland river recently, they caught 11 fish weighing a total of more than 600 pounds.

They were sturgeons, John said, and it is only once in a blue moon that the condition of the river and the spawning period of these fish coincide so that they may be caught in such quantities. The trio used a single large hook on a drag line, and for the line they used a No. 14 electric light wire. It took four men to land one of these fish — one on top of the lock to throw the hook and snag the fish, one to hold the fisherman to keep the fish from dragging him off, and two down in the water to get the fish into a boat.

Once a Hobby, Rugs Now His Business

LARGO, FLA. — Several years ago S. M. Rife started making rugs from rags cut and torn by his wife. It was just a hobby which he enjoyed after his hours at the post office. He enjoyed working out new patterns so kept it up.

Today Mr. Rife is in the rug business. Church organizations and individuals began buying his product, and the demand grew steadily. Soon he purchased a loom, bought carpet warp and started in earnest to supply his customers. Recently he bought a house and has turned a shop in the rear into a utility house devoted to his former hobby, which is now a profitable business.

'Possum for Dinner'

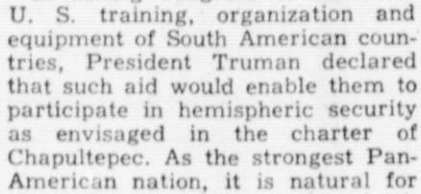

PASADENA, CALIF. — Sunday dinner walked into Carson G. Bell's back yard recently when an eight pound opossum came in to sample the grapevines.

Bell rounded up sweet potatoes and called in Van Williams, famed Negro chef, and invited his friends. The opossum was presumably a descendant of some brought to California in 1900 by Tennesseans who wanted their favorite eating imported.

Captain Kidd's Loot

DAYVILLE, N. J.—It all started when a bulldozer uncovered a jug of silver coins while widening a road. The coins, buried three feet deep under a tree, dated from 1787.

And now the residents of Barnegat bay are digging for what they hope will be a part of Captain Kidd's buried treasure. So far approximately 30 coins have been uncovered, ranging from American colonial silver shillings to Spanish pesos

CIVIL SERVANTS:

Municipal employee organizations were formed in 88 cities last year, the civil service assembly reports. With that increase, nearly 60 per cent of the nation's cities over 10,000 population now have such unions. Big cities are ahead of smaller municipalities in municipal employees organizations. All 14 cities over 500,000 have municipal employees groups or unions, while less than half the cities between 10,000 and 25,000 have similar units.

Quotes in the News...

"One person who saves a slice of bread a meal may not be able to see just how that will help feed people in Europe. But—such savings, multiplied in millions of American homes each day, will most certainly enable this country to load the ships with the food that is needed to prevent famine overseas." —Chester C. Davis, chairman of the Famine Emergency committee.

DOAN'S PILLS

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane is called upon by sheriff Sam Flick to track down a gang of train robbers. The sheriff tells Jim that he believes the gang is led by a girl, daughter of Pio Alvaro, a former rancher. Jim starts to trail the robber band from the point in the desert of San Lorenzo county where the hold-up took place. His horse is bitten by a rattlesnake and Jim has to shoot him. Jim trudges through the sand, until, overcome by thirst, he collapses. Four horsemen led by a girl rescue him. From their conversation it is plain that they are Spaniards or Mexicans. Jim awakens three days later in a comfortable bed. When he calls for water a tall man responds.

CHAPTER III

Doane saw a tall, languid man enter. He was dressed in a cheap, dark suit that still, somehow, gave him a dapper, suave appearance. He smoked a cigarette, lazily, his eyes squinting against the rising curls of smoke. Even so, they were the first thing Doane noticed about him... those odd, gray-green eyes, and the supple ease of the man's every gesture. The face was pallid, "Well, my friend," said the languid one, with the accented intonation which the Spanish mother-tongue gives to later acquired English. "It is still more water? I think we pour most one well full into you already. But it is still more, yes?"

Doane felt back on his pillow. A great sobbing sigh escaped his lips. "Thank God!" he muttered. "When the languid fellow stood beside his bed, questioning Doane with his eyes, he found him that swiftly in a profound deep slumber. The man finished his cigarette, watching Doane, a half-smile on his lips. He shrugged his flexible shoulders. "So it is not water after all, my friend? An' what will happen now, I wonder?" he asked aloud. "Eh? I wonder!"

Doane slept deeply, in a dreamless peace, for nearly twenty hours. During this time an elderly woman replaced the man's watch and care of him. She sponged Doane's body; she placed damp cloths against his forehead. He slept on, unknowing. Then he awoke at last, there was a shaft of bright afternoon sunlight peeping through one of the windows of his room.

Doane hoisted himself again on an elbow. There was a stand and a pitcher of water within reach of his hand. He was steady enough and strong enough to lift the pitcher to his lips and drink. He was surprised to find he wanted no more water. He lay back, content, considering his surroundings with sharper interest.

Perhaps it had been the sound of muffled hoofs in the garden outside that had awakened him. He heard a horse stamp fretfully. Then low voices, coming nearer, wafting in softly through the open window to his ears. The speech was Spanish. "... And last night before Monte goes to work at the station, the stranger awakes," said a woman's voice. "But when Monte goes into the room, it is different. The man looks at Monte and he mutters, 'Gracias a Dios! That's all. He falls to sleep again that soon. And ever since he sleeps just like a baby. Like a child, senorita, with a smile on his lips. To see him so, you would not think him the evil man he is.'"

There was a low, musical laugh in answer, and a second voice said: "Ah, I am glad. He looked so terrible when we found him. He was like some animal, some mad, crazy animal—like some ferocious crawling beast, when we gave him the first taste of water. Ugh! It is horrible to see a man like that!"

This second voice likewise was feminine, but there was the lilting quality of youth in its sound, as there had been in the soft, low laugh. It was the youthful voice that continued.

"I think I would like to see this man we rescued now. Perhaps—one can never know—it would be well to look carefully and remember him."

"While he sleeps so, you mean?" "Yes. No other way, to be sure. While his eyes see nothing in return."

Footsteps along some outer veranda, and the older woman's voice saying: "Monte shaved his face yesterday. You would not know him as the same man. While he sleeps, he looks so—like a gentle child. It is true. He looks like my own Monte when he was young."

The low laugh again, in mild derision. "But it is the heart of a man that counts, senorita. This man's heart is known—it is steel! Monte's is gold. His name is Doane. I know many things about him."

The door opened to Doane's room. The elderly woman glanced in; then walked softly to the bed. She looked down upon a man who breathed deeply, as though in sleep. The man's eyes were closed.

"Fast! Come now. Light steps across the room. Silence. At length—

"No, I would not have recognized him as the same man."

"Just so. He is even handsome, senorita. A caballero."

"If one forgets to think of the heart," said the softer voice. "But... well, I am glad to have saved him from the way to die. That is a horrible slumber. Monte is come," said the older woman as she glided softly from the room. "And he is hungry like the wolf." Doane heard the door close noiselessly, and he realized with a start of satisfaction that the younger girl had tarried behind, the girl with the soft voice. His eyes were glued shut, but his straining ears told him she had come to his bedside, that she was standing there looking down at him. Seconds crawled past, like weary centuries, as he fought back a smile and the temptation to open his eyes. At last, softly, she spoke, as though to herself:

"A caballero, yes! You are a handsome one, mio amigo; what friends we might be, if the gods had not made us enemies. You come to put the handcuffs on Dolores, yes?" She laughed, and her laugh made Doane think again of a babbling mountain brook; or was it the low tinkling beauty of a vesper bell? She laughed, and she went on, musingly: "You come for that, but the desert put his chain first on you, yes? And the desert throw you at my feet, half dead. The fortunes of war, my caballero!"

She stood in utter quiet for another second, and then Doane sensed that she was moving toward the door. He opened his eyes and looked at her.

"Buenos dias, senorita."

The girl whirled, and her hand flew to her hip. She smothered a little cry of exasperation as she discovered she had no gun, and she leveled her blazing eyes on the grinning face in the bed.

His grin faded as Doane's eyes met hers. His heart stopped. Her face came clear to him, as though through a rising mist; he thrilled at the firm red lips drawn now in a hard straight line; he almost gasped aloud as he caught his first glance at that dark olive skin, framed in a gay kerchief at the full round throat and crowned above with raven hair as black as midnight.

He had seen a picture of Carmen once, on an opera handbill; this, he told his racing heart, was Carmen, in his room; he saw Carmen whirling in her dance, flinging her red shawl; he heard the lilting gypsy music of old Spain, and the clink of castanets. Glorious! He rubbed his eyes and looked again. No, it was no dream.

She backed against the door, her eyes like glowing coals of black, smouldering fire; she fretted at her belt, still pulling at the gun that was not there.

"These you shall never put on me, mio amigo."

"You would shoot your caballero, your prisoner, senorita?" smiled Doane as he lifted himself on one elbow. "I offer you my gun. You should find it in that holster, on the chair."

"You—you did not sleep. You tricked me!"

"Tricked you, senorita? No man with eyes to see and half a heart could stoop to trick one so beautiful. And immediately he had said it, he knew he had blundered, and he knew also that he meant it. These were not mere words; they were the echo of something buried deep within him, the echo of a still small voice that told him this was the most beautiful girl in the universe. A ruddy flush crept under the olive skin of her cheeks, and she spoke deliberately:

"Ah! Now you are insulting, senor. I would not believe it, had these ears not heard you say it. My men tell me you are brave, that you fear no man alive. But your own words make you... a fool. The gallant deputy Jim Doane it is to laugh!"

Doane chuckled. "All's fair in love and war, my friend. I think you spoke of the fortunes of war? Correct. We may have nothing to do with love, but we are at war, senorita you and I? You know why I have come?"

"Si, I know. I am told you come to catch the train thieves."

The mere hint of a smile crept into her eyes. "And have you captured them, Mr. deputy Doane?"

"Not yet," replied Doane evenly, holding her eyes. "But I am close to them. If I were strong enough, I might put my hands on one of them, right now."

It was a shot in the dark, but it went home. The girl moved one hand swiftly to her heart, and her eyes wavered as she turned away. In an instant she was back, frowning at him, her eyes afire again.

"Listen to me, my brave one. I know who you are, and all about you. You know me, but not so well. I am not the one you think I am; I am not the one you want, not the thief you have been sent to capture. I swear it. Even if I am, you have not one little tiny piece of evidence against me. And without evidence... what?"

She picked up his handcuffs from the footpost of the bed, and jangled them while she smiled at him. "These you shall never put on me, mio amigo. And if you are not wiser than you are today, you shall never put them on anyone."

Doane grinned.

She flung the bracelets away from her with a final gesture of contempt, regarded him lovingly for a moment, then turned and opened the door.

He sent one last jibe at her. "Adios, senorita Dolores Alvaro!"

She turned, with her hand on the door; she walked swiftly back to him and looked at him once more, with eyes that no longer burned, but that were suddenly soft as black silk.

She ran a nervous hand through her jet hair, then dropped it to his arm.

"Please... go back. Go away. Get out of this country when strength comes back. These men you seek... they are merciless... they will stop at nothing... they will kill you. I know! Please..."

She spun on her heel, and fled from the room.

Doane stared after her, opened his mouth to call to her. But words would not come. He dropped back onto his pillow and closed his eyes, for a long time he lay there, looking into space. Again he slept, and dreamed of gay senoritas dancing in the sun, and hearing lilting gypsy songs, and tambourines, and castanets.

Before slumber conquered him, he told himself again that this girl had brought him back from the tortures of hell; that she had picked him up at the very gates of death, knowing well that he was her sworn enemy, and that he had come to her. He owed his life to her. A man's life meant... everything. It was the greatest of his possessions.

He slept.

The hour was approaching sunset. Doane awoke and lay quietly as a man came into the room with a bowl of broth. He was the slim man of the day before.

"The hand of God upon you, senor," he said smoothly. "Broth?"

Doane saw that in age he might be anywhere between fifty-five and forty-five. He noted the peculiar, easy grace of movement, sensing in the stranger, more than seeing it, the feline suppleness of strength that rippled beneath the bright shirt. The man's hands were white and slender, tapering at the fingers as though an artist had moulded them of strong white wax. He put down the bowl of broth and took out a cigarette; he lit it with all the grace and eloquence of a priest at his ritual. The odd gray-green eyes met Doane's with piercing directness through the spirals of smoke as he dropped his match.

"And who are you?" asked Doane.

The man made a gesture with his white hands. He bowed slightly.

"Me—I am called Garcia... Monte Garcia, senor. An' in return, senor, who are you?"

"You don't know?"

"Me, know?" exclaimed the one called Monte Garcia. "Senor, you flatter me with divine powers. You are, of course, a gentleman of importance. That is obvious! So. But more than that... ah, how could one say?"

"Where am I?"

"Close to Sand Wells. Under my roof, senor, and quite safe."

"Well, come on. Let's have the story."

"Of how you came here, you mean, senor? But yes, of course. Of course, you would wish to hear that first. It is—ah—the beginning."

Garcia made another fine gesture with his hands. Doane tossed in his bed.

"Quit stalling. Let's have it."

"I am employ' in Sand Wells. I have hands with which I work the telegraph instrument, ver' fast and without mistake, like it should be. So the railroad he like me, and I work for them. It is night work. Now, four days ago I walk home in the early morning, and what do I see, senor? None other but you. You stagger, you fall, you fall many times, you cry for water. You do not know how close you are to the town of Sand Wells, so close to houses an' water. I bring you here. An' that is all."

MOTION picture versions of Shakespeare's plays have never been very successful, but Laurence Olivier's new production, "Henry V," is likely to break records. It introduces the Bard in a new light—as an action writer with a flair for the "boy meets girl" theme. Henry was a madcap youngster, a superb warrior, a great lover and a conscientious king what more could anyone ask, especially with talented O's at the role? Since England was at war when the picture was made, the terrific battle scenes were shot in Ireland, where they wouldn't have to stop work every time a plane roared overhead.

Did you know that Burgess Meredith has "the perfect American voice"? According to more than 150 tests made by David O. Selznick, he has, so he'll record the legend of Pearl Chavez which is the finer in a new production of "Duel in the Sun." It's a United Artists release.

The movies are dicking with Isabel Manning Herson regarding a picture to be based on her Mutual program, "Land of the Lost." Regarded as the finest show for children on the air lanes—certainly it's one of the first five—it has caught on so well that a comic book in color based on it will appear next month. Parents rest easy when Junior's listening to "Land of the Lost."

David Bruce, who played opposite Deanna Durbin in "Lady on a Train" and opposite Yvonne De Carlo in "Salome," has been signed by Columbia Productions to co-star with Cleatus Caldwell, ex-wife of Ken Murray, in "Miss Television." Mind you, Miss Caldwell is a "co-star," despite the fact that "Miss Television" marks her screen debut! How times have changed!

"And who are you?" asked Doane.

The man made a gesture with his white hands. He bowed slightly.

"Me—I am called Garcia... Monte Garcia, senor. An' in return, senor, who are you?"

"You don't know?"

"Me, know?" exclaimed the one called Monte Garcia. "Senor, you flatter me with divine powers. You are, of course, a gentleman of importance. That is obvious! So. But more than that... ah, how could one say?"

"Where am I?"

"Close to Sand Wells. Under my roof, senor, and quite safe."

"Well, come on. Let's have the story."

"Of how you came here, you mean, senor? But yes, of course. Of course, you would wish to hear that first. It is—ah—the beginning."

Garcia made another fine gesture with his hands. Doane tossed in his bed.

"Quit stalling. Let's have it."

"I am employ' in Sand Wells. I have hands with which I work the telegraph instrument, ver' fast and without mistake, like it should be. So the railroad he like me, and I work for them. You do not know how close you are to the town of Sand Wells, so close to houses an' water. I bring you here. An' that is all."

Monte Garcia dismissed it all like that, with yet another gesture of his graceful hands. He pulled his knees up under him and took a long, deep pull on his cigarette. He was intimating that the matter was closed and done, once and for all.

"All?" roared Doane, beside himself.

"All, I assure you, senor," came the calm answer. "Unless you would include the hospitality of my little house, such as it is. You are welcome, senor. Up to this time I have found you a ver' quiet and courteous guest."

"Bien!" snapped Doane. "I thank you for that. But listen! Deep in my mind I have another story. It differs from yours. Four men and a confederate held up an east-bound train out of Sand Wells at dusk. They hit north. I followed. Three mornings later, in the desert, five riders found me, dying of thirst. One was a girl. They brought me here. The girl is called Alvaro—she is the daughter of one senor Miguel Alvaro—and there is a warrant issued for her arrest. The warrant is sworn to by Star La Rue of Maxmillia City, and the charge is stock theft from his ranch. This girl saved my life!"

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON
Released by Western Newspaper Union.

CIO LEADERS MANEUVER TO OUST COMMUNISTS

WASHINGTON—The epochal movement within leftwing labor to shake off the Communists is being quietly helped by the White House. What is behind it can now be set forth as follows:

Since Mr. Byrnes firm his back against further Russian encroachments in world affairs, the more radical CIO-PAC crowd has been arousing criticism against President Truman and the administration...

The latest rousing of criticism got under Mr. Truman's skin, as well as some very big union labor hide.

Important labor leadership immediately became involved in an internal conflict, the ramifications of which have not yet been disclosed.

The CIO-PAC director, Sidney Hillman, has been conspicuously laying low, while some unions in CIO have been taking steps to revise their constitutions to bar Communists from office and membership.

Hillman has close relations with the American Labor party in New York, for whom the Communists have been the most active doorbearers and vote-fixers.

Apparently this element of labor hates to lose its Communist schemers with an election campaign in the offing.

MURRAY 'TIRED OF IT'

But CIO Pres. Phil Murray is reported getting tired of Communist use by CIO-PAC, or what might more accurately be called Russian use of them for international policy purposes.

Some labor authorities report him coming toward Hillman, suggest Hillman may be replaced as head of CIO-PAC or predict a showdown between Murray and Hillman.

Regardless of these reports, any level eye can plainly see Mr. Hillman is caught in an enigmatic whirlwind. If he lets the Communists go, he may lose his organization; if he keeps them, the organization may crack.

I would not be surprised if the White House aided in the cracking, strange as this may sound. Latest appointments of an undersecretary and three assistants in the labor department went the AFL way.

CIO has one labor undersecretary and is pressuring Truman through him. The latest appointments, however, have been followed by reports that AFL no longer intends to split administration patronage with CIO on an equal basis, but will see what it can get for itself.

Then AFL is going into the south to organize unions on the greatest scale of opposition it has yet presented. CIO plans in the south are supposed to call for 200 experienced organizers working under leadership of the Textile Workers union, men who have been trained in the Hillman school of action.

In competition with this activity, AFL is planning an even greater organizing campaign in the south, and the catch-all district 50 of John L. Lewis has marked out an anti-CIO organizing campaign to get in all the loose unions otherwise unclassified in AFL.

INTENSE RIVALRY COMING

Thus an intense organizing rivalry is springing up which may reach its bitterest proportions in the fields of textiles, telephones, chemicals and plastics. I say these are apt to be the sharpest fields because few observers expect the rivalry in the south to be of great industrial consequence.

In the first place, there is not much industry in the south which is not already organized one way or another. The field there at least is limited by comparison with the greater industrial sections of the country.

Southern organizing, especially the CIO-PAC kind, is apt to cover political activity (ousting of southern congressmen and senators who have resisted labor legislation) rather than develop any great new numbers for the unions.

Out of this high pressured situation, observers are commonly predicting a new wave of many hundreds of small jurisdictional strikes during coming months, and a period of exceptional labor unrest.

I want to find the man who changed UNO to UN.

UNO is a collection of letters in euhonistic order conveying the thought of unity. It is not cumbersome. It is accurate for the "United Nations organization."

UN is negative. Alone it cannot be pronounced except as an enigmatic word. And, as it signifies the opposite of what the United Nations organization stands for, the mystery surrounding its origin may be worth perusing by authorities who have greater facilities than I.

BLAME SECRETARY

My limited investigation suggests the secretary took it upon himself to make the change. There was no action by the security council. His motives are described by officials here somewhat vaguely. The idea of sponsoring UN, they say, sprang from difficulties over previous use of other initials, for example UN-CIO, to describe the San Francisco gathering of the conference of international organization. They wanted to get away from that which sounded "laboresque."

HERE'S one of the most exquisite crocheted doilies ever made—it's an heirloom piece lent me by a friend who collects lace. The Irish crocheted doily is 14 inches in diameter, has 19 "roses" around the edge and 16 "almonds" radiate from the center rose. Makes an ideal centerpiece for a luncheon table—use plain white linen oblong place mats edged in a plain "picot" to complement the centerpiece.

Do You Know all the Specifications Required to Build a New Home?

HARRY H. MAASKE SAYS:
That to build a home it takes the following specifications, and without these your home is not complete. Clip this out of this paper, someday you may want to build and a lot of these are forgotten. Check with your contractor at that time.

You concentrate your efforts in developing a home of individual character. Many homes are small and inexpensive, but even these embody the same craftsmanship and beauty that one finds in the more expensive, large homes.
