Red Cross Schedules Two New Home Nursing Classes

Continued interest in the home nursing course given by the Red Cross instructors at the Labary building in West Bend during the past several weeks has resulted in the scheduling of two more classes for the period of July 8 to 15. Enrollment in these classes can be made by calling or writing the West Bend chapter office.

The new classes will be instructed by Miss Anna Jenkins from 7 to 11 p. m. One class will be held on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, and the other on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. Miss Jenkins is splendidly qualified for this work. She was formerly director of the school of public health nursing at Wayne university, Detroit, Mich.; consultant on public health nursing in the eastern area of the American Red Cross, and is now consultant for the midwestern area.

With the total of 44 women who have been trained during the last several weeks under Red Cross instructor Beth Ohmedt, the number of certificates issued by the West Bend chapter now totals 487. This is the highest in the midwestern area for chapters of its size.

SCORE LAST SUNDAY

Campbellsport 4, Kewaskum 0 (All other games postponed, rain) GAMES FOURTH OF JULY A complete schedule of games was played on the Fourth of July, results of which will be published next week.

SCHEDULE THIS SUNDAY

Kewaskum at Belgium Adell at Sheboygan Plymouth at Boltonville Campbellsport at Random Lake Cascade at Gienbeulah Sheboygan Falls (bye)

In the only game played Sunday, the Campbellsport Belles, composed of several Fond du Lac players including the battery, handed the Kewaskum Utensils their first shutout of the season, 4 to 0, before the largest crowd of the year. The game was delayed an hour and 15 minutes by a heavy rainfall and did not get under way until 3:30. The drizzling rain was sufficient to call off the game and left the field wet and muddy. Both the Kewaskum manager and umpire favored postponing the affair but the Belle manager, with his strongest team of the season on hand, insisted on waiting for the sun to come out, covering the base lines with sawdust and finally playing. The defeat dropped the locals to fourth place.

Chuck Schramm was in rare form and pitched his best game of the season in setting down the Utensils with five hits. With Manager Stan "Buck" Hodge leading the way with four straight hits, the Belles pounded the ball for 11 hits. Schramm fanned 8 batters and walked 2, while Honeck local hurler, whiffed 3 and walked 1. Schladweller got the lone extra base hit, a double. Wachs, Belle cleanup batter, drove in two runs with two hits. Irv. Ninnemann, a Campbellsport umpire, worked the bases and some of his decisions brought much dispute.

Campbellsport pushed over one run in the third on 2 hits and another in the sixth on 2 bingles. The score remained 2-0 until the ninth and that's what the final score should have been. Kewaskum gave the winners two unearned runs in the ninth with an error. The Utensils had good chances to score with men on the bases in the fifth, seventh and ninth but couldn't drive them home in the pinches.

This Sunday the teams will start play in the second half of the split season with Kewaskum playing at Belgium. Since adding a number of Milwaukee players to their lineup, Belgium has been going great guns and climbed to fifth place, right behind Kewaskum. On the Fourth the first half was completed with Kewaskum playing at Random Lake against the second place team of that village. Results will appear here next week.

Guard Sugar Supply; Use It Carefully When Doing Canning

Cherries red, cherries ripe yield bright jewel-colored jams and jellies to brighten the table. Make a small quantity this year to save on sugar. Short cooking protects their fresh color.

One of our longest-lasting shortages is still with us this summer when we do our canning. Yes, it's sugar. Those of you who before and during the war learned of the great usefulness of the well-stocked canning cupboard will again make your plans for canning this summer. And, in spite of sugar difficulties, the canning cupboard can still be filled to the brim to help tide over those days when you have just to reach out and get fruit, jams, pickles or vegetables.

Tomatoes were mighty scarce this past year for folks who did not have their own supply. We don't know yet what the supply picture is for the coming year, but home-canned tomato juice is so delicious it would be well to put up your own. Here's how:

Tomato Juice.

Use firm, red-ripe, freshly picked tomatoes. Discard any that are bruised or specked with decay and fungus. Wash carefully and leave whole to steam; or, cut into small pieces and cook until soft. Press hot tomatoes through a sieve and reheat to the simmering point. Pour into hot, sterile jars and process for 20 minutes in a hot-water bath at the simmering point, or 10 minutes at the boiling point.

If you like to use tomato puree for cooking during the fall and winter, you'll want a supply of that on hand, too. I'm giving you a recipe for the seasoned type which is perfectly delicious to use for casseroles and meat dishes. Don't forget that a supply of homemade tomato soup and vegetable soup comes in mighty handy on busy days, and there's no time like the present to can it:

Tomato Puree.

- 4 quarts chopped tomatoes
6 onions
3 carrots
2 cups chopped celery
2 sweet peppers
Salt and pepper

Wash, chop and measure firm, ripe tomatoes. Steam until soft. Press through fine sieve and cook until thick and cook until thick. Chop other vegetables, cover with boiling water and cook until soft. Press through a sieve and add to tomato pulp. Reheat and pour into sterilized jars. Process 60 minutes in a boiling water bath.

Tomato Soup.

- 1 teaspoon mixed spices
6 quarts chopped tomatoes
1 cup chopped parsley
1 onion
2 sprigs parsley
1 1/2 cups water
1/2 cup butter or substitute
1/4 cup flour
1 tablespoon sugar
Salt and pepper

Wash, chop and measure firm, ripe tomatoes. Steam until soft. Press through fine sieve and cook until thick and cook until thick. Chop other vegetables, cover with boiling water and cook until soft. Press through a sieve and add to tomato pulp. Reheat and pour into sterilized jars. Process 60 minutes in a boiling water bath.

Take Your Tips From the Man When Furnishing His Rooms

By MARION ATKINS

Ask most men what they want in their homes and two points ahead out, comfort and simplicity. Tables that tip over, fussy gadgets, delicate upholstery, extreme colors are out, say the men.

The chairs should be comfortable and the tables should be the kind that a man doesn't have to be too careful about, in the room you plan for the man of the house. Materials that have plenty of "wearability" should be chosen for the upholstered pieces. There's a new multi-weave material woven in stripes of velvet, corduroy and nubby textures that would be ideal. Space for "a room of his own" may be a problem when living conditions are so crowded; but a portion of the living room could be dedicated to a "club corner" where a man could relax and enjoy an evening. Besides the "everything within easy reach" plan, you might add a bulletin board on one wall. This

Lynn Says:

Don't Waste Fats: Those extra household fats are still needed for making soap, rylons and other essentials. What you cannot use at home, store in a can and give to your butcher.

To render fat, collect any excess fat trimmings from uncooked or cooked meat and store in refrigerator until you have collected a goodly portion. Grind or chop them fine, then render over a slow flame, a double boiler or in a slow oven (while you roast meat, for example). Strain through a cloth and keep refrigerated.

Use cured pork rinds for seasoning vegetables, casserole and other cooking.

Skin excess fat from soups, gravies and stews and use in making gravies and sauces.

Rendered fats may be used in all types of frying at home or for spiced cakes and cookies. Add spices to vegetables and water and simmer until soft. Drain and save juice. Press vegetables through a fine sieve. Melt butter, add flour, stir until blended and add juice. Stir until smooth and thick. Add vegetables, sugar, salt and pepper. Cook until thick. Pour into sterile jars and process 35 minutes at 10 pounds pressure or 2 hours in a hot water bath. Thin with water or soup stock before serving.

Peach Jam

- (Makes 6 6-ounce glasses)
2 1/2 cups fruit
2 1/2 cups sugar
1/2 bottle fruit pectin

Peel and pit about 2 1/2 pounds fully ripe peaches. Crush or chop very fine. Measure 2 1/2 cups into a large saucepan. Add sugar to fruit in saucepan and mix well. Place over high heat and bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard one minute, stirring constantly.

Fully ripe peaches are best for making luscious jams. They will not turn dark if cooked quickly with pectin added to insure jelling quality.

Remove from heat and stir in bottled fruit pectin. Stir and skim by turns for three minutes to cook fruit slightly, to prevent floating fruit. Pour quickly into glasses. Paraffin at once.

Sour Cherry Jam: make as directed above, using 1 1/2 pounds of fully ripe sour cherries to get 2 1/2 cups of fruit. Use 3 1/2 cups of sugar.

Jams are made by cooking crushed fruits with the sugar until the mixture shows little or no free liquid. They require about 3/4 pound of sugar to each quart of fruit. One-half of the sugar may be replaced with honey or corn syrup in the following recipe, which may be used for blackberries, dewberries, loganberries, raspberries, boysenberries or youngberries.

Berry Jam.

Wash and crush the berries. Add 1/4 cup water to each quart of berries. Cook until soft. Press the cooked berries through a strainer to remove seeds, if necessary. Add 3/4 pound sugar (or half sugar and half corn syrup) to each pound of berries. Boil until thick. Pour, boiling hot, into sterile jars and seal at once.

Any of the current crops of fruits may also be used for jams. Use 3/4 as much sugar as fruit and make sure the jam is cooked until thick, with no free liquid. You'll have to stir frequently to keep the jam which is a very thick mixture, from burning.

WESTERN EUROPEANS REJECT COMMUNISTS IN ELECTIONS

WASHINGTON.—The European elections have projected a new political course for the western half of the continent. The surprise in France was the growth of the popular Republican movement, which is best described as Christian democracy (parliamentarism, freedom for all parties, individual liberty). Thus it represents the same trend as the unexpected size of the vote for the monarchy in Italy and the successes of the Catholic Centrists and Christian Democrats in Holland a few weeks earlier. In each instance, a similar new political force came rising up out of the electorate to challenge the grasp of the Communists for control. Earlier the Socialists had been the most important challengers of Communism.

Now the Communists are trying to arouse anti-Catholic sentiment by calling this new challenge a religious movement, and attributing it largely to the Catholic church, but it is not religious in nature. The issues it raises are not religious in character and of no religious significance except in common resistance to stateism as a religion, which has been atheistic in character. There are no available forces of Christian democracy in France, Italy and much of western Europe outside the Catholic church, to which the bulk of the Christian population adheres. But this bulk includes many Socialists, and indeed is unified politically only in its resistance to Communism.

The only change in truth then, is the growth of the power of Christian democracy in this bulk. The Socialists had heretofore demonstrated the greatest political power against the Communists, but they compromised their position by collaboration in France and elsewhere.

RELIGION SMALL FACTOR.

It would be a serious mistake for us to fall for the Communist propaganda and misinterpret the precise nature of results which are going our way at long last by calling them religious in character, as the Communists and their propagandists wish us to do. The Communists are simply centering their attack upon the Catholics, in order to have their own resistance joined by other religious denominations such as Protestants and Jews, not only in Europe but throughout the world.

Behind the simultaneous report of the United Nations committee's investigation on Spain lie the same discernible strings. The report peculiarly held that Spain's Franco was not a menace to world peace now, but would be when the U. N. assembly meets in September (for reasons not stated), and he should be kicked out then. Now there are few believers in Christian principles in Spain who also are not Catholics, but Gibraltar is more important to the world than Spain in the matter of peace. As Gibraltar will still be there presumably in September, the report drawn by the chairmanship of a British politician, Australia, created much perplexity. Indeed, inspired stories immediately came to the press from responsible American diplomats that the committee had exceeded its authority in recommending action because it was appointed to find the facts about how much of a threat to world peace Franco really was.

Few authorities think Britain will join the UNO to rout Franco by the provided means (bombs, etc.) or others so soon and thus open another nation to Russia, which, if it came to power in Spain, would sit upon the biggest link in the British lifeline. A growth of a Christian democratic movement in Spain, which would assure some future moderation, is unquestionably what is needed first.

Whether this development had anything to do with the resignation of the immediate father of UNO, Edward Stettinius, as our man in its leadership, is subject to legitimate speculation because it developed immediately after the report. My personal opinion is that there are some American and British diplomats who have found the promised incessant haggling with the Russians as hardly a desirable life prospect. Some may feel there is no future in it, in view of the stand of the Russians resisting compromises common to western civilization.

However I have no personal knowledge beyond the announcement that Mr. Stettinius decided to hold Mr. Truman to a personal promise to let him go when the organization got definitely under way.

The election results demonstrate only that political arguing with the Communists is entering a new phase. Also demonstrated is the fact that in free and open elections the Communist program has widely lost popularity since the end of war. Even in Czechoslovakia Russia barely squeezed a majority.

BALL PLAYERS DON'T KNOW HOW TO PRESENT DEMANDS

The trouble with the Pittsburgh Pirates was they were new at this racket.

This is understandable because they are downtrodden, being next to last in standing in the National League, which some authorities consider the weaker of the two big leagues. In fact, some Pittsburgh fans who buy tickets to the athletic exhibitions of the Pirates from 3 to 5 p. m. each day had earlier suggested they should be in the minors.

Famous Artist Used Spoon, Rag or Broom as Brush

Few artists in history have employed such a variety of unorthodox methods of applying paint as did Francisco Goya (1746-1828), famous Spanish painter, says Collier's. He often used the nearest object, which was sometimes a rag, a broom, a sponge or a spoon. An outstanding example was the preliminary sketch for his celebrated May the Second, depicting the massacre of Madrid civilians by Napoleon's troops which Goya witnessed that day in 1808. Inspired, he dipped his handkerchief in a pool of blood and with it painted a large outline of the picture on the wall of a building.

"LOST COLONY"

Historic Roanoke Island Has Opened Summer Theater Season

MANTEO, N. C.—With a new and spectacular stage which includes Roanoke Sound, "The Lost Colony," Paul Green's great drama, has been revived for the 1946 summer season and is now playing to capacity crowds. It is an epic of the first attempted settlement of the Carolinas.

First shown in 1937, this symphonic drama became nationally famous and was seen by more than 400,000 people before the war forced its suspension in 1941.

The story of Sir Walter Raleigh's attempt to plant an English colony in the New World is presented in a large amphitheater on the site of the original settlement itself. Performances will be given each week, Wednesday through Sunday, during July and August.

The audiences of the new performances will see the first colonists row, in small boats, right up to their feet at the very spot the landing was made in 1585. The new plans fulfill the original staging ideas of playwright Paul Green, who wrote the opus in 1936 to commemorate the 350th anniversary of the first English attempts to settle America.

Will Play Forever. At first only an "extension" of the anniversary celebration, the production of the play is now a North Carolina state agency by special act of the legislature, and "Lost Colony" will be played forever on this windswept island.

"Lost Colony" re-enacts one of the most poignant tragedies in American history, but leaves unanswered a mystery which has fascinated historians for over three centuries. It is the mystery of "CROATAN," the word found carved on a tree in Fort Raleigh by a relief expedition in 1591, only legacy of the men and women who had dared the wilds of America. It was the only clue to the disappearance of Raleigh's colonists and little Virginia Dare, first child of English parentage to be born in the New World.

Hundreds of stories based upon possible solutions to the mystery have been written and legends about it still abound in the region of the Dare country, but Paul Green wrote the drama which was so compelling that it grew from a one-season commemorative drama into an institution. And it was Green who set the piece to music and dance, music of the old Elizabethans and the wild dances of American Indians with a background of organ and choir, in a combination which was

RIGHTLY PROUD . . . This chubby Tar Heel has just caught a trout. He used a hook, pole and worm in the Linville river in North Carolina.

Bait That Looks and Smells Like Shrimp

NEW ORLEANS.—Frank W. Manning of this city has used his imagination to the point of genius in designing an artificial bait or lure to catch fish. His idea has resulted in the moulding of natural-looking shrimp out of plastic. The plastic shrimp are hollow and in addition to their outward similarity will carry with them the perfume and flavor of real shrimp by having their perforated bodies filled with either shrimp meat or powdered dried shrimp. Counterfeit shrimp have been made and sold before, but Mr. Manning's idea of a hollow shrimp, the body of which unscrews in the middle and provides for a generous-sized piece of shrimp or a filling of odorous dried shrimp meal, is something new. This feature and the perforated body, which allows the flavor and effluvia of the real article to leak out and leave a trail in the water, was, of course, the feature of final tragedy in a new land. It starts with the historical landing of the colonists and their establishment of a new homelace in cabins around the chapel in which they give thanks to Providence for a new life. It proceeds with the little things which go into the making of homes, and a nation, and to the birth of Virginia Dare, first new life in a new world.

Final is Tragic. Mysteriously, the brother of Chief Wanchese is killed; the Indians become hostile, and the tragic finale of the "Lost Colony" plays itself out in mystery. But the dramatist's dialogue, rampant with stirring lines and inspiring music, leaves no doubt that the colony was really the beginning of a new nation, of America. Paul Green wrote "Lost Colony" as his contribution to the culture of his home state. He presented it in toto, to the people of the Virginia Dare country, and received no royalty from its production, nor has he allowed rights to any dramatic or cinema companies. The entire performance was broadcast by the Columbia Broadcasting company in 1939, and the author has prepared a book on the text which is on general sale.

FDR Saw It. First presentations were sponsored and managed by the Roanoke Island historical society, a local group organized to take care of the multitudinous details of the actual staging. In five years, almost a half-million spectators, among them President and Mrs. Roosevelt and Lord Halifax, brought an estimated $3,000,000 in total revenue to the Island of Roanoke and the Dare country. As it begins its new, "perpetual" series of seasons, the books of the organizations are evenly balanced.

The new association, headed by former Gov. J. Melville Broughton and operating under especially enacted laws of the North Carolina state assembly, present the opus through a five-man committee, all of whom reside in Manteo, near Fort Raleigh, scene of the production, during the season. Melvin R. Daniels is chairman of the committee, which is composed of I. P. Davis, secretary, C. S. Meekins, treasurer, Theodore S. Meekins and Dr. Seiden, the director.

G.I.s Attending Church

Religious services in veterans hospitals are not being neglected. Veterans administration reports that during March, attendance at these services reached an all-time high with 102,024, an increase of 27,000 over the previous month.

Chaplain Crawford W. Brown, director of VA chaplaincy service, said the 83 hospital chaplains, representing 18 religious denominations, also made 10,465 ward visits and 103,400 home visits during the month. Further knowledge will be gained also in the fields of radio, photography, geology, fish life and all the sciences which apply to ocean life.

Questions and Answers

Q. My son was a second lieutenant in the army air corps for two years. In parachuting from his crippled plane over China, he received a fractured leg and was carried back 400 miles to the nearest hospital without benefit of anesthetic. Since being honorably discharged, he has married and the first child will be born the latter part of this summer. With only one leg, he managed to save $2,000 after paying his expenses in the service. This he has used to make a down payment on a farm. Eventually he will receive government aid, but in the meantime his only income is from two cows. We are glad to help them establish their home, but my point is that he has been told he owes $100 in income tax. Can this be possible? He was just a school boy when he was taken for training, a freshman in college, and didn't even finish out the year. He has never had a trade or business and never worked a day away from home.—Mrs. E. R. Spooner, Wis.

A. Income taxes on salaries of men in the armed services have not been waived except for the duration. Where men serve overseas, a waiver is usually issued, but the due date of income taxes is the 15th day of the third month after official termination of the war. Exemptions include $1,500 of service pay and mustering out pay. Would suggest that you consult the nearest office of the Internal Revenue bureau and they can tell you the exact status of your son's income tax.

Q. My brother died in the service November 8, 1945, and I thought his insurance was made to me because he told me it was. But when he died, I wrote to the Veterans Administration and found that he had made his insurance to a lady he only worked for, not a relative at all. He has a father living, also five brothers and myself, the only sister. He stayed with me and worked for this woman and he had given her and her husband as foster parents, although he was in my custody and I had to look after him until he went into the navy at the age of 18. This woman got around him and had him to make his insurance to her. She is about 38 and he is 18. Is there anything I can do about this insurance to get it for myself, father and brothers? His National Service Life Insurance amounts to $10,000. Please tell me what I can do.—A. T. Seaford, Del.

A. If I were you, I would consult a lawyer. From your letter, it could be that your brother may have misinterpreted his beneficiary since the law limits beneficiaries to a certain range of next of kin, except where persons have been adopted as foster parents, or in parents. If a lady and her husband were not acting as foster parents, you may have a legal case. But consult an attorney.

Q. I was wounded and am drawing a total disability pension of $115 a month. Now I have a chance to take a job and as I feel able to work, will taking a job result in getting a cut down on my pension?—V. H., Detroit, Mich.

A. As long as you are rated 100 per cent disabled. Q. Is there any chance of the army discharging men over 37 years of age soon with only eight months or little more of service?—A. N. P., Red Wing, Minn.

A. Men 38 years of age or older are eligible to apply for discharge. Q. Will it be permissible for an honorably discharged World War II veteran, aged 21, to go to college one year under the G. I. bill, then work a year and then go back and complete his college course?—A. Yes.

Q. Our son entered the army June, 1944, and the last letter we received was dated January 20, 1946, from Jensen, Korea.

A. In many instances the army and navy have stopped flying the mails to Pacific areas and mail is being dispatched by boat, hence the longer delays.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This dispatch was filed from the atomic bomb testing area only shortly before the first test bomb was scheduled to be dropped.

ABOARD USS APPALACHIAN—BIKINI ATOLL (Via Navy Radio)— This reporter does not intend to delve into the scientific aspects of this atomic bomb test, leaving that to the scientific writers and the scientists themselves. This test is primarily a military experiment to determine how the United States navy and other armed services can figuratively "keep its powder dry" in the face of any future atomic warfare.

The experiments however by their very nature and the various tests which are to be made of atomic energy will produce by-products of knowledge in the fields of biochemistry, biology and medicine.

Further knowledge will be gained also in the fields of radio, photography, geology, fish life and all the sciences which apply to ocean life.

struments. The release of atomic energy at the given point of the bomb burst will in the opinion of these scientists release heat and energy at that spot of a nature never before experienced upon the surface of the earth but its effects will be confined to a relatively very small area. One scientist declared that the radio activity released from the bomb, if absorbed by living tissues, would result in chemical changes in the proteins of the tissues, in some cases of sufficient intensity to kill the tissues and in other cases likely to produce a new kind of living tissue or a new variety of organ. It is a well-known fact that X-rays have created this phenomenon in living tissues and the radio-active rays from the bomb are practically the same as X-rays. Thus a man who comes in contact with these radio-active particles may well become sterile and be chemically changed as to other characteristics. On the other hand, some scientists predict a tremendous tidal wave as result of dislodging a huge landslide along the slope of Bikini atoll which rises some 14,000 feet from the floor of the ocean. Another predicts the bomb will crack open the ocean floor and let the water into the molten matter beneath the floor resulting in a tremendous volcanic explosion. These predictions, however, are generally discounted.

In modern candy and cigarette vending machines, the mechanism subjects each nickel and dime to eight separate tests in one and a half seconds, says Collier's. These tests determine whether the coin contains metals not used in genuine five- and ten-cent pieces, and whether it is of the proper diameter, thickness and weight, and has no holes.

The different types of cars that make up passenger trains vary considerably in their average weight and cost. In weight, they range from 52 tons for baggage cars to 84 tons for diners, and in cost from $30,100 for baggage cars to $98,600 for sleeping cars.

WASHINGTON.—The army ground forces absorbed 81 per cent of the U. S. army's battle losses; they captured nearly all of the prisoners and won an overwhelming majority of the medals for heroism. And that, says Gen. Jacob L. Devers, chief of the army ground forces, proves that machines failed to lessen the importance of the man who fought hand-to-hand in World War II. He believes the same performance will be true in the event of another conflict.

"The infantry, which comprised only 20.5 per cent of the total strength overseas, took 70 per cent of the total casualties," Devers reported. "The ground army captured and disarmed 8,150,447 enemy troops."

"Ground soldiers made more than 40 major landings on hostile shores. Of the 276 men thus far granted the nation's highest award, the medal of honor, 239 have been members of the army ground forces, almost all of them from the infantry. Nearly half of them died in their heroic service."

FIRST ANNUAL MEETING OF COUNTY DAIRY HERD IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION

The first annual meeting of the Washington County Cooperative Dairy Herd Improvement Association will be held in the court house in West Bend on Tuesday evening, July 9. The meeting will begin at 8:30 o'clock. All members of the cooperative who are doing testing work and other dairymen interested in dairy herd improvement are invited to attend. ## COUNTY FAIR DATES AUG. 1-4

With the opening dates of the 89th annual Washington county 4-H club fair less than a month away many of the preliminary arrangements for the fair have already been made, according to E. E. Skalsky, secretary of the fair.

Copies of the premium book have been mailed to all 4-H club, vocational agricultural members, and to former exhibitors. Anyone wishing to receive a copy may obtain one upon request. Those who plan to exhibit at the fair must follow the rules governing such exhibits. These are fully explained in the premium book.

The Snapp Greater Shows feature a large choice of rides, shows and concessions and will provide the midway. Four bands will present concerts during the evening fair dates and including Sunday afternoon.

Many changes have been made in the premium book for this year's exhibits. These changes will affect practically all of the departments.

Indications at this time point to capacity exhibits in every department. Several tents will be erected to house livestock, poultry and other exhibits.

Commercial Display Tent

To provide space for commercial exhibits a 30x60 ft. tent will be erected along the midway. Space in this tent is still available for rental. Anyone desiring space should phone or write the secretary, E. E. Skalsky, post office building, West Bend.

WEED KILLING DEMONSTRATION PLOTS

Several demonstrations to show the effectiveness of 2, 4-D weed killer on Canada thistles in grain fields are planned for spraying very soon. Farmers who will cooperate in these demonstrations are: Joe Walter, Hartford; A. J. Rettler, Hartford; John Tennes, Route 4, West Bend; Erwin Peters, Route 4, West Bend; Ewald Schwulst, Richfield; John Kurtz Sr., Route 1, Slinger; Victor Barile, West Bend.

Contests to Select State Dairy and Barley Queens

After being "queenless" during the war years, the Wisconsin state fair will again select and honor a state dairy queen. The state queen will be chosen from county winners, and elaborate ceremonies honoring the state queen and her court of honor will take place during state fair week Aug. 17 to 25.

Washington county will select and honor her dairy queen during the county fair Aug. 1 to 4.

To be eligible to compete in the dairy queen contest, a girl must be seventeen years of age but under twenty-two years of age by Aug. 23, 1946, and unmarried. She must live on a farm and have been raised on a farm. Further requirements are that at least ten girls must compete in the county contest.

County dairy queens will be given an all expense paid trip to the Wisconsin state fair for the dairy day celebration. This event usually requires two days during which time the dairy queen contestants are banqueted and feted.

Any Washington county girl meeting the requirements stated above and who is interested in becoming a contestant should phone or write the agricultural extension office, post office building, West Bend, for an application blank.

Queen of Wisconsin's Barleyland

Washington county has been chosen as one of three Wisconsin counties to select a "Queen of Wisconsin's Barleyland." This invitation was extended to the county for having the largest number of contestants in the state barley contest of any county in the state.

The rules governing this contest will be the same as those for the dairy queen contest. The girl winning second place in the dairy queen race will be named "Queen of Washington County's Barleyland" and will be given an all expense paid trip to the Wisconsin state fair for the Governor's Day celebration on Aug. 21. The county barley queen will be the guest of the Wisconsin State Brewers' association.

Utah Has Set 1947 as Year For Centennial Celebration

SALT LAKE CITY.—On July 24, this year, Pioneer Day will be celebrated in every community in Utah to mark the date when, 99 years ago, Brigham Young and his 142 travelers entered Great Salt Lake valley.

As on each July 24, the 1946 celebration will be one of the biggest events of the year. Since July 24 is a state holiday, all business will be suspended and covered wagons, Mormon handkerchiefs, and old-timers will pass in review in parades all over the intermountain territory.

But the big celebration will be held in 1947, which marks the 100th anniversary of the arrival of Brigham Young and his group. The state legislature in 1939 passed a bill setting apart the year 1947 for the centennial.

'This Is the Place.'

One of the features will be a wagon train of pioneers, starting at the site of the winter quarters of 1846 near Omaha and following the original pioneers' trail into Salt Lake valley. The train will enter at the spot where Brigham Young looked out over the desert and said: "This is the place." That was on July 24, 1847.

The centennial commission appointed by Gov. Herbert Maw include John M. Wallace, chairman of the finance committee; Ward C. Holbrook, John F. Fitzpatrick, Frederick P. Champ, Judge James A. Howell and Gus P. Backman, members. Backman was also selected as director of the centennial celebration, Albert J. Southwick, Salt Lake City musician, is chairman of the Days of '47 pageant committee.

The rich Salt Lake valley of today was a bleak desert when the pioneers arrived. Only one tree was to be seen on the site of what is now Salt Lake City. The pioneers built dams in the mountains to store water and dug ditches to carry it to their crops.

Great Salt Lake Will Dry up in Next 300 Years

SALT LAKE CITY.—If the general downward trend in the level of the Great Salt Lake for the past 96 years continues for another 300 years, the lake will be as dry as the famous Bonneville salt flats, according to Ralf R. Woolley, senior hydraulic engineer, U. S. geological survey.

Supporting this speculation is the fact that Great Salt Lake is a mere remnant anyway—all that is left of a once great fresh water lake that, in ages past, covered as much area as the present Lake Michigan. Evidence of this lake are numerous in the geology of the region, noticed by practically everyone living here.

The recording of Great Salt Lake elevations started in 1850, three years after the arrival of the Mormon pioneers. Since that time, although there have been ups and downs, the general trend of the lake has been a loss of one foot of depth every 15 years.

Found a Cure for Plant 'Wilt' and 'Athlete's Foot'

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The department of agriculture scientists started out to find a way to battle troublesome tomato plant "wilt." They discovered a chemical called "tomatin" which combats the wilt. But they discovered something else, although they insist it is still "in the test tube stage." Tomatin will combat fungus organisms which plague human beings, and may be the source of a new drug to fight "athlete's foot!" They have found it powerfully active against the widely prevalent ringworm fungi, which often attacks the feet, hands, face and scalp.

Roosters Motored to Town for Night Life

VALENTINE, NEBR.—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Roe parked their pickup on Main street one evening recently, and shortly afterward Buck Junod, who was standing near by, heard roosters crowing. "But we don't have any roosters in the pickup," protested the Roes. Junod made an investigation, however, and found three roosters. They were perched on the drive shaft beneath the car where they had gone to roost and ridden to town with the Roes.

Southern Girl Is Mechanical Engineer

KNOXVILLE, TENN.—Odds were pretty heavy in September, 1942, when a 17-year-old freshman, Mary Porter Fain, entered the school of mechanical engineering at the University of Tennessee, that she would change her course before completing requirements for her degree. At least that is what the professors thought. But on May 3, this year, when Mary got her bachelor of science degree and became the first girl to finish in mechanical engineering at the university, the professors had to eat their words. During her entire four years, Miss Fain managed to keep up with her male classmates. Mary intends to use her knowledge, too. She wants to do design and research on engines or household appliances. A native of Murphy, N. C., she hopes to work somewhere in the south, but she will go north among the Yankees if the right job is offered.

Farm Couples Get Fewest Divorces

CHICAGO.—Records here show that if a girl wants to stay married she should choose a farmer. Traveling salesmen and actors are a poor bet, for they lead in divorces. Farmers get the fewest peacetime divorces of all. One fallacy, says Circuit Court Judge Elmer J. Schnackenberg, is that wartime marriages cause most divorces. Of 324 divorce cases heard by him, 82 per cent represented pre-Pearl Harbor marriages, while only 18 per cent were war marriages.

The average married age today lasts six years and eight months. Childless couples separate often than those with children. City rates are lower than those in the country, and the city divorce rate is proportionately higher than among couples who live on farms

BAUKHAGE DISCUSSES OLD 1944 'FIGHT'

Reads Right Meaning Into Barkley's Break With FDR

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

Continually I encounter evidence of the importance of semantics, as I have mentioned before in this column—the importance of words, of their meanings, and of the necessity that the meaning in which the speaker or writer uses them is the same attached to them by the listener or reader.

A few days ago I received a letter from a listener lamenting what she called "one of our greatest troubles today"—lack of faith in our leaders.

She then described her "consternation" when she heard Senator Barkley's "gushing and gawky talk" nominating Franklin Roosevelt for President in 1944, after hearing the senator's famous "revolt" speech sharply criticizing the President's veto message in the tax bill the previous February.

To Washington, there was nothing inconsistent in those two performances at all. What happened was that two persons who had worked together in a common cause fell out. Amends were made, and still loyal to that cause, the man who had been affronted registered his complaint, and then, feeling that the virtue of his position had been recognized, took up his labors in the common cause again.

Perhaps that explanation would satisfy my disillusioned listener, had it not been for the fact that she not only misinterpreted the significance of Senator Barkley's speech, but actually put into his mouth words that he didn't use.

She said that Barkley had said that the President was dishonest, and that he (Mr. Roosevelt) knew he was dishonest.

Now, by interesting coincidence, something that Senator Barkley said to my attention only a day or so before I received the letter.

A loyal toiler in the Democratic party had remarked to me that the senator from Kentucky, having served as majority leader longer than any man who has held that job in the senate, had increased tremendously in stature in the eyes of supporters and opponents. And, my friend explained, it was his "revolt" of February 23, 1944, which marked the moment when Barkley began to wax in the favor of opponent and supporter alike!

As a result of the coincidence—the letter and the remarks of my friend—I reread the revolt speech.

Nowhere in it did Senator Barkley accuse the President of being dishonest. But it is easy to see how a listener might have missed the shades of meaning in the speaker's words. However, those words, correctly interpreted, I feel certain-tain, reflected precisely the feeling of the senator. Had he wished to go further, he could easily have done so.

Resent Personal Slap at Congress

There were two especially sharp passages in Barkley's talk. The President had charged in his message (vetoing the tax bill) that "it is squarely the fault of the congress of the United States in using language in drafting the law which not even a dictionary or a thesaurus can make clear."

There was a biting, personal flavor in that sentence which congress as a whole, and Barkley individually and as majority leader, could not help resenting.

Barkley said: "If it (the above statement) was made by anybody who ever sat in a tax committee meeting, it was a deliberate and unjustified mis-statement in order to place upon congress the blame for universal dissatisfaction with tax complexities and in order to produce the illusion that the executive departments have in vain protested against this complexity."

Here one can see that Barkley is defending the integrity of the congress. He did not spare his anger at the affront. But, since he knew FDR had never sat in a tax committee meeting, he was placing the onus entirely on the President.

There was one other sharp riposte in which Barkley came still nearer to making, but did not actually make, the "dishonesty" charge.

He said the President used a method of calculation "which obviously was handed to him by a mind more clever than honest."

It was natural to assume that some White House advisor had produced the data, and in all likelihood, that some literary aide had written the veto message. Indeed, one of the columnists omnisciently announced at the time that it was the work of Judge Rosenman.

As a matter of fact, I can state with absolute certainty that that was not the case. The fact remains, however, that he said what he meant and meant what he said. Nowhere did he call the President dishonest. He did establish his own independence, and that of congress, and probably did the President a favor by warning him against allowing his emotions to get the better of him.

Whether Senator Barkley would have replied with greater or less vigor had he known the actual authorship, I do not know. The fact remains, however, that he said what he meant and meant what he said. Nowhere did he call the President dishonest. He did establish his own independence, and that of congress, and probably did the President a favor by warning him against allowing his emotions to get the better of him.

Brakes Save Mr. Truman

Very little publicity was given to something that almost happened the day Secretary of State Byrnes departed for the foreign ministers conference in Paris. Something which might have given us a new President.

Mr. Truman, in order to emphasize the importance of the mission, rode with Mr. Byrnes to the airport to see the delegation off. There was no motorcycle escort, and while the car was moving along Constitution avenue at a fair speed, there came very near to being re-enacted an accident similar to that which cost General Patton his life. A truck dashed out of a side street toward the official automobile. Fortunately the brakes of the Presidential car held. The party had a bad shake-up, but that was all.

It might have been otherwise. The newly appointed and not over popular Secretary of the Treasury Snyder might have had to move next door. After the secretary of state, who shared the near-miss with the President, the secretary of the treasury is next in line of succession.

This is not the first time Mr. Truman has taken risks. But he is by no means the only President who has worried Secret Service men to whose care the lives of the Chief Executives are entrusted under the law.

Three times, newsmen, trying to keep up with Presidents, have been in serious automobile accidents. A certain amount of speed is desired at times when a presidential party is passing through strange territory but, as a rule, the White House chauffeurs who are specially picked men, "loaned" by the army, if left by themselves, lean to the safe and not the sorry side.

At least one President was forced to change his automobile habits. President Hoover had a fishing lodge at Rapidan in Virginia, some 85 miles from the Capital. Hoover believed that time was money. He was always a hard worker, and when he'd finished fishing, he wanted to get away from there and back to his desk. It was a job for the Secret Service men and newsmen to keep up and keep on the road.

Those mad chases were the subject of considerable conversation by the correspondents and also their wives. It was not considered a choice assignment. Finally there was a bad accident that sent one reporter to the hospital.

After that, the presidential car proceeded at a more normal pace. The Alexander Hamilton institute says that during 1946 will be considerably lower than last year's. Fine, if it reduces inflation pressures; but if it goes too far and the consumer doesn't consume, the producer can't produce, and we are back to 1929 once more.

PAY MORTGAGES

Farm Debts Lowest Since 1915

WASHINGTON.—American farmers are getting out of debt at the most amazing rate in the history of this nation. The department of agriculture has reported that the United States' farm mortgage debt dropped this year to the lowest level since 1915.

The total debt was estimated to have been approximately $5,081,000,000 on January 1 or less than half the record high of $10,786,000,000 set back in 1923.

A department statement said the debt had decreased $1,500,000,000 or 23 per cent since 1940. This reduction is in sharp contrast, it pointed out, with developments during and

When Japs Strike They Take Over Plant Profits

JAPAN: Laborers Strike

Japan's new democracy is bringing strikes to many manufacturing plants. But even in labor trouble Japan's give an Oriental twist to their methods. In 26 of the larger industrial plants in Japan the laborers have struck. But instead of quitting their jobs and forming a picket line, the workers have merely tossed out all management personnel taken over the entire operation and will pocket whatever profits are made!

HOUSES: To Be Prefabricated

Prefabrication today, according to Walter Harnischfeger, Wisconsin manufacturer, "is one of the new basic industries in the country." Word comes from Washington and other lumber-producing states, too, that plants to build prefabricated houses are increasing steadily. Several plants are reported operating in the New England states. Harnischfeger estimates that from 8 to 10 per cent of ordinary building costs can be saved by prefabrication.

It is estimated that a builder can erect two or three prefabricated houses in the time required to build a conventional house. With a crew of four men, the builder can get a new house under roof in less than two days, according to Harnischfeger.

BUYERS: Go on Strike

When prices get too high, the public won't buy. For instance, when controls were removed from strawberry preserves they jumped to $6 a dozen jars wholesale, but the shoppers wouldn't buy them at that price and they declined to $4 a dozen. A large food company noted a type of buyers' strike in the fresh fruit and vegetable market. The price of such items as plums, potatoes, cherries, cantaloupes, lettuce and other fresh produce appear to have gotten "too steep," a company official stated, with the result that sales of these items fell off sharply.

POULTRY: Cull Half Goal

Poultry producers culled their flocks of about 28,000,000 birds in May and accomplished half of the culling urged by the department of agriculture as a national goal during May and June.

The 55,000,000 culling program, urged early in May, is an attempt to rid the nation's flocks of low producing birds and reduce poultry production in line with reduced feed stocks, officials said. Last year, producers reduced their flocks by 40,000,000 birds in May and June.

1946 MEAT: People Eat More

At least 3,000,000 more pounds of meat and meat products will be consumed, if available, by the American public this year, according to R. C. Pollock, general manager of the national live stock and meat board.

Official estimates point to a per capita meat supply of 145 to 150 pounds in 1946. While this is larger than prewar consumption, the public would buy from 165 to 170 pounds per capita, according to Pollock. He attributed the demand to greater buying power, increasing interest in better nutrition, and a growing appreciation of meat in an adequate diet.

SEWING MACHINES: Maybe Next Year

There is doubt that the demand for sewing machines can be met before 1947, in the opinion of Sir Douglas Alexander, president of the Singer company. His company will not reach production before the end of 1946, he declares.

The Singer factory at Bonifères, France, was seriously damaged during the war and will not be able to supply the French market for some time. The company's German factory has been taken over by the Russians, and the Italian plant is having labor trouble. Only the Singer plants in England, Canada and the United States will get into full production this year.

POTATOES: California Crop

Department of agriculture official forecasts indicate that California potato growers will produce a bumper crop of more than 30,000,000 bushels and achieve the biggest acre yield on record.

California was expected by the department to turn out nearly three times as many potatoes as New Jersey, second ranking early producer. California's average yield is expected to be 370 bushels per acre. The nearest rival to that mark was expected to be Nebraska with 210 bushels per acre.

DESERT ROSE

By ROLLIN BROWN

Deputy sheriff Jim Doane sets out to track down a gang of train robbers. After meeting Dolores Alvaro and Monte Garcia he resigns his office and goes to see Star La Rue. Jim forces La Rue to deed over the ranch he has stolen from Dolores' father. Later he encounters sheriff Flick in pursuit of five horsemen. Next day Jim is deputized again by the sheriff to assist in apprehending bank robbers. Jim fears that Dolores may be in the band. Next day

Jim and Garcia surprise five horsemen in the mountains and a gun battle follows. Both Jim and Garcia are wounded. One of the horsemen is La Rue. The sheriff's posse arrives just as Jim is shooting it out with La Rue.

CHAPTER IX

The shadow of the westerly wall had covered the floor of the tiny pass and climbed inch by inch up the easterly, giving the side wall formation a still more fantastic appearance. Monte sighed, turning his head. Doane bent over him. In Monte's sight lay the two handsome, pearl-handled six-guns, and he smiled slightly.

"Long ago La Rue gave those very guns to me," Monte muttered. "It was when I work for him in the Silver Palace, years ago, an' he was afraid of thieves. La Rue must have forgot what he give those guns to me for—eh? But the guns remember."

A count of twenty riders stood in the background, leaning forward in saddles, legs hooked up, or standing about in groups, to ease saddle-wear muscles. Little curls of smoke lifted from quiet cigarettes. This was Sam Flick's posse from Maxmilla City. Poles had been cut from desert mesquite and a litter constructed between two pack mules. Men finally lifted Monte up.

"But, Doane, my friend," it would seem I have one little thing to confess to you," Monte continued, smiling slowly. "Las' night when I go to my house, you know, for horse an' guns, it takes me a long while—you remember? These things also explain the real reason why I am so willing to ride at your side. You see? For there in my house las' night, talking mos' peaceful-like with my mothaire, I find Miss Dolores Alvaro. It is much surprise!"

Monte relaxed in the litter. Men looked on and listened.

"You see? At the time I think thees young lady have one ver', ver' hard time being in Maxmilla City, committing one robbery an' shooting, while at the same time she sits talking so peaceful with my mothaire. Mos' impec-ec-bull!"

Sheriff Sam Flick nodded suddenly and vehemently.

"You said a mouthful, Garcia!" Flick had already explained that if Doane and Monte had waited in Sand Wells a bit longer the night before they would have had his second telegram with full details. La Rue, meeting them in the pass, had most logically thought his only course was to shoot a way through.

"You see, this was to have been another one of the girl's crimes," Flick had continued his explanation. "Uh-huh! Yep, that's just what it was to have been! But the whole thing sorta worked out like this: "Then four one-time cowhands of La Rue's—my first posse!—come fannin' into Maxmilla City, reportin' the girl somewhere in the lead. So waitin' till along evenin'-time, La Rue in person simply opens up the bank. The five of 'em plunder the vaults an' start out. But right there luck ain't so good! Two men happen to be passin' in the street an' notice things. La Rue don't wait for nothin'. Starts shootin'! Drops one man; wounds the other."

La Rue's Wiles Finally Exposed

Sand Wells. Far west Doane could once again trace the high ranges of the Sierra Nueva, etched on a vivid sky. He remembered things that were past. He shuddered at the hell of thirst and the memory of a madman who was once himself, dragging himself toward those ranges over the desert floor. For a long while he thought of the girl who had saved him. The ranges faded.

Night shadow lay suddenly over the ghost land before the riders, over the fantastically formed ridges and barrens, the weird buttes and rock heaps.

"Doane, my friend!" Stiff and bandaged, Doane leaned from the saddle. The whitish spot of Monte's face lay below him in the litter, and Monte seemed to smile into the darkness in that curious, poker-faced way of his.

"Doane, my friend, las' night when I see her, Dolores Alvaro asks me to learn one thing from you. If possible."

"Yes," said Doane, and wondered if he could have heard rightly. "Yes, my friend. An' it did sound to me as though you have once kissed thees young lady already."

"The moon and the stars . . . they are bright tonight, senior."

considered Monte. "Or did she say twice? I forget. But if it is true this came from the heart, then I was given orders. I was to learn—an' I have learned. You see? That was why I did not wish to speak too soon."

There was silence, except for the riding sounds of the little cavalcade—the soft creak of saddle leathers, the muffled thud of hoofs, the tiny jingle of riders' spurs and bridle chains. Stars were low over the black desert. Monte coughed softly.

"But those orders—yes!" he whispered. "Doane, my friend, I am to bring you to her. She will be waiting. You . . . understand?"

Doane leaned low from his saddle, reached down and gently punched at the shoulder of his friend.

"I understand, Monte, old man. 'Sia bien!' And as he straightened up again, Monte saw that his lips were parted in a wide, almost arrogant smile. Doane lifted his hat and jammed it down again at a cocky angle over one eye, with the air of a man on his way to collect a million dollars. . . .

The "City of Bahia" struck a reef in the Caribbean during a storm and went down. This was Dick Jordan's chance! Dick was being brought back by Hen Pettigrew to pay his debt to society. Hen had followed him half way around the world.

Pettigrew, also, was among the few saved from the wrecked steamer, but they were on different boats and Jordan hoped he would never see Pettigrew again. But he did. Before running into Pettigrew he fell in and out—with pirates, fought many a bitter battle, fell in love with Rose Bedford, captain of a derelict, and demeaned himself as honorably and bravely as any could have done under the circumstances.

Night had conquered the earth, and a great full moon rode high in the sparkling, starlit sky. Doane came through the front door of Monte's house and stood considering that old for a cigarette. He was about to speak to that moon when . . . someone spoke to him.

"The moon and the stars . . . they are bright tonight, senior." He was not startled. He did not whirl. Strangely enough, he had expected this voice. Yet as it came to him, a warm, pulsing fire welled up within him. He turned slowly, and peered calmly through the whispering shadows of the porch. Her back against the wall of the house, her head held high and her hands pressed against the clapboards, stood Dolores Alvaro.

Jim Puts the Cuffs On Dolores' Wrists

Doane moved coolly toward her, his jaws set, his hand fumbling at a hip pocket. A foot from her, there was a glint of bright steel, and the girl found her right wrist locked in a handcuff.

"I arrest you in the name of the law!" "But . . . senior . . . did not Monte tell youmit guff?" "But nothing," said Doane, fighting back a smile. "Not so many moons ago, seniorita, I lay helpless in that bed where Monte lies now. Helpless, and you laughed in my face and told me I would never put these bracelets on your wrist. Well . . . they're on now."

But something in his voice gave him away. Something that erased the look of hurt surprise and momentary fear from the face turned up to him in the soft moonlight, something that threw the girl's free hand around his neck and forced his lips down to her cheek.

"You . . . you have won, senior deputy Doane." "Senior Jim, to you." His arm crushed her close, and their lips met. When at last he lifted his head and stepped back, Dolores laughing held out to him her one unshackled hand.

"The other wrist, my caballero! You must not let your prisoner escape this time, you know." "Don't worry. I won't." He snapped the empty cuff about his own left wrist. He turned on his heel, gave a savagely gentle little tug at the handcuff, jerking the girl toward the porch steps. "Come on!"

"But where, my Jim? Not to that jail? I would not like it there." "Jail nothing," laughed Doane. "You're on your way to the nearest padre's. You'll like it there." They passed slowly down the winding, moonlit garden path, shoulder to shoulder. Now and then there was a gleam of steel from the tiny link that held them together. But neither seemed to notice it now; her hand lay in his, quite passive and willing and unresisting. Halfway to the gate, a voice halted them. It was Monte, at the window.

"My friend," he said, "you will need what you call it—the best man, for the wedding, yes?" They looked at Monte, at each other, and then walked through the gate.

There's been a lot of talk about how "Aunt Cissie" Bartholomew felt about Freddie's marriage; after all, she brought him up and promoted his movie career—made him what he is today." Well, now "Aunt Cissie" is promoting a career of her own; she's signed for a supporting career in Paramount's "I Cover the Big Town."

Remember Margaret Dumont as she usually appears, being chased by a Marx brother? She plays a comedy role in "Miss Television," but she's neither harassed nor pursued; instead, she harasses Cleatus Caldwell and Nita Hunter.

ZACHARY SCOTT's grand-father, a thrifty early-Texas settler, save not only the first silver dollar he earned, but the first two, and they brought him luck Scott, who inherited the lucky silver dollars and had them converted into cuff links, evidently didn't have them on the day he was riding an old mare for a scene in "Cheyenne" and pretending that he knew nothing about riding. Or maybe the luck brought by the dollars has worn out. Anyway, he acquired a dislocated sacro-iliac. Grandpa didn't even know he had one! Scott is taking no chances now; if you look sharp you'll see that he's wearing those silver dollars in Warner Bros' "Stallion Road."

Lou Costello has a hobby, followed between broadcasts of the Tuesday NBC Abbott and Costello show and picture-making. It's collecting his historic and unusual sheriff's badges. Recently he received one of his best, sent him by the High Sheriff of Nottingham, England. That brings the collection up to 100, and he's on the lookout for at least that many more.

Nita Hunter, a 15-year-old singer who was born in St. Louis, Mo., has been set by co-producers Buddy Rogers and Ralph Cohn to play the title role in Comet's musical, "Miss Television." David Bruce and Cleatus Caldwell are the picture's romantic leads. Nita plays a two-bit singer. Then, when Director Reginald Le Borg finishes, she marches off to the schoolroom!

Jerry Fairbanks, Paramount shorts producer, is lining up the shooting of Elliott Murphy's "Mr. Winkle's Holiday" in Technicolor, just as it's being presented. It's an Aquareta—a combination of musical comedy, revue, water show and operetta—appearing where Billy Rose staged his Aquacade during the New York World's fair. June Earing, the swimming star, is being eyed by the movies' talent scouts, who consider her a rival of Esther Williams; she's a former national and metropolitan AAU 100-yards backstroke champion.

Bill Slater, master of ceremonies of "Right Down Your Alley," is getting letters from bowling clubs all over the country offering to pay their own way to New York if he'll get them on the program. Unfortunately, Bill picks his contestants from those who are relaxing at a New York bowling alley on Sundays; like the other quiz shows, this one is strictly on the level.

Professor Quiz is still sorting questions listeners have sent him; during his first seven years on the air, he required questions from his listeners—so his hotel room is filled with files, and in his spare moments Quiz digs around in them for the queries we hear on the air. All-American football player Tom Harmon has been signed for a role in "Gentleman Joe Palooka," now before Monogram cameras. This is Harmon's first picture since he starred in "Harmon of Michigan." His wife, Elyse Knox, has the feminine lead.

ODDS AND ENDS—Golfer Bing Crosby has been nominated by Ohio Governor Frank Lausche to serve on the committee sponsoring the National Caddy Tournament August 19 at Columbus. . . . Eighteen years ago an advertising slogan from Hollywood thrilled movie-goers—"Carlin Talks!" . . . Maybe Johnnie Weismuller is getting tired of being "Tarzan"—but he signed a contract to do three more jungle thrillers, one a year. . . . To those of us who'd want to see Mildred Natwick appear on the stage or in a picture, it's elegant news that she'll be seen as "Amelia" in the motion picture version of "The Late George Apley."

Bill Demarest, after completing his role in "The Perils of Pauline," went fishing in the Pacific. His motor boat balked and Bill floated around two hours before the coast guard hauled him in. Total catch—one coq!

Commerce Commission Fails To Protect Public Interest

GOVERNMENT agencies which have been in business over a long period of years, particularly those agencies which deal directly with the affairs of Big Business, often lose their perspective.

A case in point is the Interstate Commerce commission. A long-time member of the commission, Clyde B. Aitchison, in a recent senate committee hearing let slip a remark which indicates the line of thinking of this guardian of the public's interests with reference particularly to railroads. The committee was considering the so-called Bulwinkle bill, which had already passed the house.

This measure would permit railroads to make their own rates and other agreements among themselves, subject to ICC approval, and would immunize the railroads from prosecution under the anti-trust laws as a result of these agreements.

During the questioning, Commissioner Aitchison referred to the railroads as "our clients and customers." Of course, the railroads are not their clients or customers and Senator Wheeler of Montana was quick to call Mr. Aitchison on his statement.

"Why do you refer to them as your clients? I thought the public were your clients, or supposed to be?" was Senator Wheeler's observation. And Mr. Aitchison rather lamely and naively answered that he was merely being facetious.

"Transportation Department" Facetious or not, the attitude of Mr. Aitchison is too often the attitude of other agency members who are supposed to represent the public interest as against the encroachments of business and industry or any other factor. It is such an attitude which is causing some talk here proposing another cabinet post to be known as the secretary of transportation and bringing all forms of transportation under one head including air, shipping, railroads, bus and trucks and communications.

Another plan would be merely the setting up of a new commission to regulate all transportation facilities. The attitude of President Truman, at least his attitude while in the senate of the United States toward the transportation question, is well-known. He is on record as favoring the setting up of a transportation commission, for in a debate in the senate, he declared, "I believe that every kind of transportation should be treated alike by government, equally regulated, equally taxed. I think a transportation commission to control all transportation is coming. . . . all methods of transportation must be co-ordinated. If the government must finance them, let us face the situation and do it. Let us retire a lot of old fellows and give the boys a chance and a career to look forward to."

President Truman went so far as to co-author a bill introduced by himself and Senator Wheeler of Montana, which would, in his own words: "We are rewriting the entire Interstate Commerce act and are subjecting all forms of competing transportation to the regulation of a single independent regulatory agency."

The railroads have enjoyed unprecedented prosperity throughout the war years and government has been their biggest customer, and yet today, with reconversion only well started, the railroads are joining the procession in demanding increased rates amounting to 25 per cent.

During the past months, reams of propaganda has come from the railroad publicity offices to prepare the public for the recent demand of the railroads for the rate increase.

The Civil Aeronautics administration has done and is doing a creditable job in the regulation of air transportation, but they are now under fire from the shipping industry which is seeking transportation routes in conjunction with their steamship lanes although the CAA has confirmed its franchises to a select few air lines for these routes to foreign countries. Whether this is in the interest of the public or the interest of these few airlines is a matter for conjecture.

At any rate, such statements as come from the lips of Commissioner Aitchison, which he explained as facetious, raises the question as to whether or not the interest of the public or those of the railroads are paramount with the ICC.

The ICC has a tremendous job to do in this postwar era, so has the CAA and so has the Federal Communications commission, and unless the public interest is the primary interest, these agencies are merely paving the way for their own extinction and the setting up of a central regulatory agency.

Easy-to-Make Blouse Is Cool

Summery Blouse. COOL, summery wing-sleeved blouse that's wonderfully easy to make. It will be very attractive in a pastel rayon crepe with dainty white lace trim—in icy white pique with eyelet embroidery, in dashing flower prints, or in gayly checked cottons to wear with play shorts.

Kitten Tea Towels. LOOKING for some unusual designs for "pick-up" work these warm days? Here's a charming embroidered "romance" of two kittens to be transferred on tea towels. Use the cuffs from dad's worn-out shirts for making shoulder pads. They're firm and generally give you all the padding you need.

In order to get much Vitamin C, turnips should be eaten raw. Turnip sticks or slivers really are delicious in the relish dish or salad bowl.

To give your dinner party an air of the unusual, serve a small scoop of orange sherbet floating in chilled apple juice.

In patching underwear, use small cross stitches around the edge of the patch, say the experts. This makes for elasticity.

Here's a way to hang your criss-cross curtains so you won't have to use a double rod. Takes a little sewing on your part, but in the end none of the rod will show. Simply baste the top curtain to the lower one over the curtain's top row of stitching. Run the curtain rod through the heading on the under curtain. Top one gathers with it.

A False Alarm Brown was a very light sleeper. One night he was obliged to stop at a small hotel, and after much trouble finally succeeded in getting to sleep.

Two hours later came a loud knocking on his door. "What's the matter?" he asked, sleepily. "Package downstairs for you, sir," came a boy's voice. "Well, let it stay there! It can wait until morning, I suppose?" The boy shuffled down the corridor and after a long time Brown fell asleep again. Then came another knocking at the door. "Well, what's up now?" Brown demanded. "That package—'taint for you!"

Put some cologne on cotton and tuck it into your clothing for a delightful scent.

On any small apron sew numerous pockets. Into these slip your toilet articles. Fold the apron and put it in your suitcase. Then when you need a freshening up, toilet articles are where you need them.

When the edges joined in a seam are cut on the bias, it is helpful to baste a piece of paper in with the two edges of fabric. After the seam is stitched tear away the paper. This little trick keeps the bias edges from stretching.

To remove scratches on woodwork and floors, rub with a little lard, then rub off with a clean cloth.

PETER-MATENAER

Given in marriage by her father, Miss Beatrice Matcner became the bride of Leonard W. Peter at Holy Angels church, West Bend. The nuptial high mass was officiated by the Rev. Leo Belda on Thursday morning, June 27, at 9:30 o'clock. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Peter, Kewaskum, Route 2, and the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Matenaer, West Bend, Route 1.

The bride's gown combined white net and taffeta in a redingote style. The quaint tapered, four buttoned sleeves and the softly shirred bodice were of taffeta. Insets of lace formed the yoke and peplum, suggesting a Victorian influence. The same lace was used for the short peplum and edged the bodice which was buttoned to the waist, merging into and overskirt of net, also edged in lace. Her fingertip veil of illusion fell from a crown of seed pearl trimming. She carried a white satin prayer book and pearl rosary, which was a gift from the groom. Placed on the prayer book were carnations and stephanotis, showered with stephanotis. At the time the bride and groom left the reception her flowers were worn as a corsage on a blue gabardine suit. Prior to her marriage the bride engaged as a stenographer at the West Bend Aluminum company. The maid of honor, Miss Rita Matcner, a sister of the bride, was gowned in a white lace dress, white gloves and also a white headpiece. On the gown at the shoulder and opposite hip were red velvet bows. She carried white carnations. The bridesmaids, Miss Sylvia Matcner, also a sister of the bride, and Miss Harriet Stoffel, a friend, were gowned identical to the maid of honor. Both bridesmaids carried red and white carnations. Red carnations, asmine and ferns were placed on both sides of the church altar.

Ralph Peter attended his brother as best man. John Stelplflug Jr., a friend, and Sylvester Blietzer, cousin of the bride, were groomsmen. Ushering were Paul Hron, cousin of the groom, and Joseph Slesar, a friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Peter will reside in this village. They will make a trip to Yellowstone National Park next week. Upon their return the groom will operate his farm west of here.

Two hundred guests attended a dinner served at Holy Angels church parlors and a reception followed at the home of the bride's parents.

HAUSMANN-SCHMITT

When Miss Anna Schmitt, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Schmitt of St. Kilian, became the bride of Jerome F. Hausmann, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hausmann, Route 2, West Bend, on Saturday morning, she was attended by her sister, Rose, as maid of honor, and Miss Lorraine Hausmann as bridesmaid. LeRoy Hausmann served as the groom's best man, and Peter Schmitt as groomsmen. Ushering were Paul J. Schmitt and Joseph Wollner.

The Rev. John B. Reichel read the nine o'clock service in St. Kilian's church, St. Kilian.

Proceeding the bride down the aisle, the bridesmaid wore a pink frock with a lace bodice and satin skirt. The maid of honor wore a blue frock with lace bodice and net skirt. Their bouquets were of pink carnations, candy tuft, and blue delphinium, and their rhinestone earrings were gifts from the bride.

The bride was attired in a lace and net gown, entrain. Orange blossoms held her fingertip length veil, and the pearl rosary she carried was a gift from the groom, and her flowers were carnations, gladioli and candy tuft.

Before going on their honeymoon trip, the couple greeted 50 guests at a reception at the home of the bride. Following their return they plan to reside in Barton. The groom is employed as a mechanic at Van Beek Motor company, and is a graduate of West Bend high school.
