

Many Attend Farm Management Tour

About forty farm families grouped together on Wednesday, Sept. 4, with a view of visiting several Washington county farms where certain farm practices of special interest were being carried out. The tour assembled on the Harry C. Kissinger farm located one mile west of Gumus Garage on Highway 60. Here the visitors saw barn hay drier-chopped hay, permanent unloading structure for chopped hay and corn silage, automatic dairy cattle sprayer, feed grinding setup, and electric milk cooler.

The second stop was on the Christ Mellus and Sons farm where good orchard management in both a young and old orchard were observed. The results of a well carried out spray program for orchards and small fruits were pointed out.

The last morning stop was made on the Hoeft Bros. farm located southeast of Ackerville. Here a lowland pasture renovation program was studied. On this farm last spring about three acres of boggy lowland pasture was plowed and seeded to a Ladino clover, red clover, and timothy mixture. One and one-half bushels of oats were used as a nurse crop and were grazed down at frequent intervals during the summer.

At noon the tour assembled at the Schwartz at Hartford where a potluck luncheon was enjoyed.

In the program that followed County Agent E. E. Skalkisky who served as program chairman introduced the various persons who helped plan the tour. Among these were: Willis Freitag of Columbus who is the fieldman for the Washington County Cooperative Farm Management association; R. E. Reinke, area soil conservation association supervisor; Philip Baun, soil conservation representative for Washington county; Mr. Clark and Mr. McDonald, fieldmen for Kraft Foods company, Inc. of Hartford, and Milo Salter, Route 1, West Bend, president of the Washington County Cooperative Farm Management association.

J. F. Hall, farm management specialist of the College of Agriculture, spoke briefly on tried and approved farm practices.

The afternoon tour began on the John Klink farm, Route 1, Hartford. Here the visitors viewed a successful and well carried out upland pasture renovation project. Next the tour stopped at the Harry Pichard and Sons farm on the Polk-Richfield town line road. Here the program centered around the soil conservation program now being carried out on the farm.

Also, a mechanical wood splitter was seen in action splitting tough and knotty elm wood. The tour came to a close on the Elmer Casper farm located on Highway 35 near Rockfield, where much interest was shown in the poultry raising and housing program being carried out by Mr. and Mrs. Casper. Also viewed was the excellent hay in the Casper barn which was dried with a barn hay drier.

Much interest was shown by all in the foregoing and many other farm practices being carried out on the farms visited. A cordial expression of appreciation was extended by all to those whose farms were visited.

ACCIDENT ON RIVER ROAD

The left side of an Oldsmobile coach driven by Harold Schlosser, Campbellsport, until recently a resident of this village, was damaged Saturday night when it ran into a ditch on the River road about 1 1/2 miles north of Kewaskum in front of the Herman Baumman farm home. Because of a heavy rain the backstop road was in a slippery condition, causing Schlosser to lose control of the machine and it careened off the road and into a ditch. The driver was uninjured.

Three Rural Schools Closed for This Term

Three rural one-room schools in Washington county did not open last week when the school term began. Lack of pupils is the reason given for the closing of two, while the third was unable to secure a teacher.

The schools are Addison Center in the town of Addison, Werner's Pond in the town of Hartford, and Riverside in the town of Kewaskum. The Addison Center school board engaged a teacher but when school opened there was only one pupil. So the board settled the teacher's contract for $600 and let her go. At Werner's Pond there is a shortage of pupils and they are being transported to other schools. The Riverside school board engaged a teacher but she resigned before school opened and it was impossible to secure another in her place. The seven or eight pupils are coming to Kewaskum schools.

Fifty-five rural schools in Washington county are open this year.

Record Number of Local Young Folks to Attend College

The largest number of young men and women from this village and community ever to enroll in colleges and universities have already left or are making preparations to begin the fall term this year. Many of the local students who will enter school as freshmen or upper classmen are veterans of World War II and these vets will take advantage of the training program offered them under the G. I. Bill of Rights. The number leaving for school probably would be even larger if the college of their choice did not already exceed its capacity enrollment or housing was available.

Of the young folks who are going off to college, the following have come to the attention of this paper:

Robert Branchie has been admitted to the freshman class entering Lawrence college at Appleton on Sept. 12 at the beginning of the institution's 100th year. Bob left Sunday for Appleton, leaving several days earlier to join the college football squad and be a candidate for a position on the team.

The Lawrence enrollment this fall will exceed 1900, which is 300 more than an average year. Orientation for freshmen began on Sept. 12, upper class registration will take place Sept. 16 and classes begin Sept. 19. Bob is a discharged navy veteran. His sister, Rachel, who was a freshman at Elmhurst college, Elmhurst, Ill. last term, will not return to the college this fall. She will leave Sept. 23 to go into nurse's training at Wesley Memorial hospital in Chicago at which institution her older sister, Pat, also is receiving nurse's training.

At Marquette university, Milwaukee, Kewaskum will be represented by two army veterans. They are Paul Kral and Robert Schmidt, both of whom served overseas during the war and will leave next week to enter the freshman year.

Kral, a member of the Kewaskum Utensils baseball team and an all-around athlete, hopes to be a candidate for the Marquette basketball team this winter. Paul's wife will be with him in Milwaukee. She has a position there and already left for the city.

Glen Backhaus, a 1946 graduate of Kewaskum high school, has enrolled at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, and will leave next week to start his freshman year. Glen, better known as "Hefty," was the ace pitcher of the Kewaskum Indians baseball team this summer and was an all-around athlete in high school, competing in football, basketball and baseball on Kewaskum's championship winners in all three sports last year.

Wayland Tessar and his younger brother Allen, both navy veterans, will attend the Milwaukee State Teachers college this term as freshmen. They will begin classes on Monday. Wayland also was a member of the Kewaskum Utensils baseball team this summer and both boys participated in athletics in high school before entering the service.

Harold Bunkelmann and Ralph Krautkramer, veterans of the army and marine corps respectively, left on Sunday to resume their studies at the Platteville State Teachers college. Krautkramer attended the college before entering the service and returned to the school last year. Bunkelmann is starting his second year. Both attended summer school at the college and spent a three week vacation at home before resuming their studies.

Howard Schmidt, a student at Iowa State college, Ames, Ia., and his wife arrived last week end to spend a two week vacation with their parents before returning to Ames where the former will resume his studies in his second year. Howard, a discharged veteran, after completing his freshman year at State in spring, spent the summer continuing his forestry studies in the Kanisko National Forest in Idaho along with 95 others of the school's foresters. The camp closed Aug. 17, giving Howard a chance for a short vacation before returning to his studies.

Donald Koerble, who saw service with the navy overseas, Marjorie Schmidt, a 1945 Kewaskum High graduate, and Grace Zanow, a 1946 graduate, will attend the West Bend center of the University of Wisconsin extension division which opens Monday at West Bend. Courses to be offered are those of the freshman year only.

Jerome Stautz and Betty Jane Kraeger, both of whom graduated from the local high school last spring, have enrolled at Mission House college, Plymouth, and began classes last Monday. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stautz and son Floyd took Jerome to Plymouth Sunday. Stautz, a member of the Kewaskum Indians ball team and later the Kewaskum Utensils, this past summer, also was a regular member of Kewaskum High's championship football, basketball and baseball teams

Utensils-Sheboygan Ball Game Postponed

The Kewaskum Utensils last scheduled home game with Sheboygan Sunday was postponed because of rain and wet grounds. We have not been informed whether the contest will be made up later or not. Because Plymouth has first place clinched in the second half and because of the lateness of the season the game may be cancelled. Belgium forfeited its game to Plymouth last Sunday by not appearing on the field at game time. Kewaskum and Campbellsport are tied for second place. All other league games were also rained out last Sunday.

The regular schedule of games will end this Sunday with Kewaskum slated to play its finale at Glenbeulah. Other games scheduled are Cascade at Sheboygan, Campbellsport at Adell, Boltonville at Belgium, Sheboygan Falls at Random Lake, Plymouth bye.

Red Cross Chapter Given Certificate by British

A certificate of appreciation for its part in making hospital supplies for the British during the war period was received recently by the West Bend Red Cross chapter. It was announced by Mrs. M. McCargo, volunteer special service chairman.

The certificate was presented by the Central Hospital Supply Service of the War Organization of the British Red Cross and Order of St. John of Jerusalem. It was signed by her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Gloucester, who is president of the organization.

Included in the hospital supplies for Great Britain produced by local Red Cross volunteers were men's convalescent robes, layettes, and hospital gowns.

This output was only a small part of total war production by the local chapter which totaled 2,344 pieces during the war period. Volunteers from all chapter precincts participated. Included in the West Bend Chapter area are the villages of Kewaskum, Barton, Jackson, Kewaskum, Farmington, Wayne and Trenton, and the city and township of West Bend.

The certificates arrived as chapter officials were considering a new production quota for overseas emergency relief consisting of baby blankets.

"Despite the fact that the war has been over more than a year the needs of suffering people in Europe are still so great that we must continue to give them help," Mrs. D. E. McLane added.

TRUMAN COMMENDS OPA VOLUNTEERS OF COUNTY

This community has recently joined the president of the United States in paying tribute to our OPA volunteers. We are all happy to have the opportunity to honor these men and women who, quoting the words of Mr. Truman, "have demonstrated their loyalty and devotion in a period of great national danger." The letter of commendation which President Truman has given OPA volunteers in tribute to their work is reprinted below:

"On behalf of the grateful people of the United States, I thank you for your selfless service in your country's need as a volunteer worker for the OFFICE OF PRICE ADMINISTRATION. With your help, our nation has been able to protect its economy against the impact of total war and to assure its citizens fair prices and a fair distribution of needed goods.

"As a patriotic citizen, you have demonstrated your loyalty and devotion in a period of great national danger. Your community and your country will not forget your contribution to victory over our enemies and look to you now for leadership and example in the continuing fight against inflation."

There was another significant statement in the president's letter of commendation to each volunteer. He said: "Your community and your country will not forget your contribution to victory over our enemies and look to you now for leadership in the continuing fight against inflation. I have asked volunteers to remain at their posts and this, I can assure you, they are doing. And strange as it may seem, from all over the country are coming requests from people who have never served on a rationing or price control board, asking if they, too, cannot help now. It is an inspiration to have others offer their services."

Right here we want to congratulate our businessmen here in Washington county who have promised verbally and through their advertising, to keep prices down as much as possible.

Oklahoma Sets Sesquicentennial Noting First White Settlement Historical Pageant Planned As Highlight of State Fair

By WNU Features.

MUSKOGEE, OKLA.—To the astronomer and the geologist 150 years is the merest fragment of time. Even the student of recorded history stands in no awe of such a period. But to the more finite-minded people of Oklahoma it represents a considerable span of time. In fact, it measures the period that has elapsed since the first white settlement in their state. That is why they're going all out this year to celebrate the 150th anniversary of that event.

In accordance with a joint resolution of the state senate and house of representatives passed in 1939, Oklahoma will celebrate the 150th anniversary of the day when Maj. Jean Pierre Chouteau, a French fur trader, led a peaceful invasion into the uncharted Southwest and set up a trading post at the site of the present-day city of Salina in Mayes county of north-eastern Oklahoma some 50 miles south of the site of Chouteau's settlement, plans are being pushed for a celebration to carry out the legislative resolution.

Seeks Trading Post.
In the early spring of 1796, Chouteau left St. Louis, where he was a member of an influential family of traders and merchants, to find a suitable location for a new trading post among the Indians of the Southwest.

Traveling southward along the Grand river, the Frenchman found the site he had dreamed of—a place where an abundant supply of game, mostly deer and wild turkeys, abounded among thick timber which would provide a ready source of building material. By what is now regarded as providential good luck, the site also stood near an inexhaustible supply of salt, a vital necessity to his men and animals. To crown the good features of the location, the river itself would furnish transportation facilities.

The pioneer lost no time in constructing a large log trading post at what is now Salina.

Post Abandoned.
Economic reverses, however, disappointed the French explorer, who discovered that the territory was not the permanent home of any Indian tribe and that prospects of supporting a trading post, however propitious the location in other respects, were insufficient to justify making the venture a permanent settlement in the area.

Chouteau returned to St. Louis and for six years the little trading post stood silent and abandoned in the wild loneliness of a primitive country. But in 1802 events transpired that gave new life to the settlement. Through the traders' efforts the Osage Indians of the Missouri valley removed their homes to eastern Oklahoma.

It was a double victory for the Frenchman. He had sought revenge on the Spanish government which had taken his trading monopoly and given it to one of its subjects. By the migration of the Indian from the Spaniard's trade territory, his business was virtually ruined.

In addition, it created a market for Chouteau's abandoned trading post to which he returned to start the 150-year parade of progress which has made a great, modern state from a wilderness.

A celebration to be held in connection with the annual Free State fair at Muskogee, scheduled for the week of September 29 through October 6, will bear Gov. Robert S. Kerr's stamp as the "official" Oklahoma commemoration of her sesquicentennial.

Pioneers to Participate.
During three days of the fair, a colorful pageant will be presented. Several hundred eastern Oklahomans, many of them direct descendants of early-day pioneers, will appear in the pageant, which will portray the arrival of Chouteau in the state and the story of the little trading post.

C. E. Chouteau, an official of the Indian agency at Muskogee, will fill the role of his illustrious ancestor. The fair, a gala panorama of mid-way gaily and agricultural and educational exhibits, yearly draws thousands of visitors from eastern Oklahoma and adjacent Arkansas.

In addition to the sesquicentennial pageant, fair visitors will be able to view a comprehensive display of the state's agricultural and industrial outputs. The fertile farms which dot Oklahoma will contribute their animal and vegetable produce to the fair and the modern educational institutions of the section will present exhibits.

Fairgoers may see the original site of Chouteau's landing by a short drive from Muskogee and may visit other interesting historical spots near this city, the original capital of the Five Civilized tribes.

ORIGINAL SETTLER . . . Founder of the first white settlement in Oklahoma was Maj. Jean Pierre Chouteau, French fur trader.

War Treks Fail To Lead Farm Youths to City

Life in the armed forces, which introduced thousands of farm youths to glittering cities and far-away lands, did not dim their love for farm life. More than a million veterans of World War II have returned to farm work throughout the nation, it is revealed in a bureau of agricultural economics report.

Veterans on farms by July 1 totaled 1,045,000, according to the bureau report, the number including 713,000 farm operators or members of farm operators' families, and 332,000 hired workers.

Veterans comprised 9 per cent of all persons employed on the nation's farms.

The number of veterans on farms was slightly more than three-fourths the number of warm workers who enlisted or were inducted up to July 1, 1945.

In the Northeast and on the Pacific coast, the number of veterans returning to farms was larger than the number who entered the armed services. In other sections they were from 70 to 80 per cent.

A total of 11 million was engaged in farm work.

Program To Stress Value of Citizenship To New Prospects

WASHINGTON.—Plans for a nationwide program to emphasize the "worth and meaning of American citizenship" to prospective citizens were announced by the justice department.

The department said the program "will be a continuous effort to stress the ideals of this country and the significance of American citizenship from the time of entry of a potential citizen to the moment when citizenship is granted him by the court, and even beyond that."

A national advisory committee on citizenship is to be named by Atty. Gen. Tom Clark to assist with the program.

The program will include:

1. Publication of a pamphlet containing significant facts about the United States to be given to prospective citizens and visitors to this country.
2. Preparation of a booklet to be given to each new citizen to emphasize his responsibilities to this country.
3. Enlisting the aid of the bench and bar, civil and educational authorities and patriotic organizations in the effort to stress the significance of citizenship.

The Wild Animal Crisis

Wild animals are now on the "we can't get the stuff" list. Inflation has struck the jungles. Reconversion snafus rages on the veldt. The waterhole needs ceiling prices.

The highest prices in history are being quoted to zoos seeking beasts of the fields. You may think you are being soaked for cowmeat, but suppose you wanted elephant-steak!

African lions are bringing $10 a snarl, Bengal tigers are being sold by the stripe, giraffes are higher than ever and camels are quoted at $2,500 for single humped ones. A double-humper brings twice as much and no deliveries until 1947!!

A seal with no ear for music is up 80 per cent and one that can only toot three notes of "My Country 'Tis of Thee" sells higher than used to be asked for a seal that knew Irving Berlin's repertoire.

"Why is this?" we asked John Kieran, the well-known animal, fish, bird and bug man.

"Production line troubles," said Kieran—presto, like that—"Africa hasn't reconverted yet at all. It's the old story of supply and demand."

"What, no OPA in the bush or at the waterhole?" we asked.

"They sent some OPA fellows into the lion country to study the situation, but nothing further was heard from them," he replied.

"A lion can resent that sort of thing," we suggested.

"You just try to put a ceiling on one," said the Sage of the Airways. "Once when I was on a safari I encountered . . ."

"But what about elephants?" we interrupted.

"What about 'em?" he repeated.

"An elephant with his controls off is harder to get than any other kind," he said. "In 1927 I was bicycling through India when I encountered . . ."

"What will happen to American economy if it can't get elephants?" we put in.

"Oh, the GOP can't get back anyhow, I fear," he replied. "I remember one night encountering . . ."

"Have you been able to get any wildcats lately?" we asked.

"No, but a friend of mine got one."

"How?"

"He says it was in a hamburger."

"What do you hear about black panthers?" we asked.

"You can get 'em, but not in colors. Black is as hard to find as white."

"What do you think about the wild animal market for the next few months?" we inquired.

"I dunno. There may be a big animal backlog, but on the other hand it may all be due to a slow up on the production line."

"Do you suspect anybody is holding back wild animals?"

"Not the really wild ones."

"Is there anything in the story a scientist is making a rhinoceros out of the soybean?"

"I consider that as unlikely as the plastic hippopotamus."

TRAVELERS ARE 'JOLTED'

Vacation Costs Soar to New All-time Peak

War-weary Americans, reveling in the lifting of travel restrictions, gasoline rationing and steady wartime duties, are hitting the highways and byways by the millions this summer and fall bound for their first vacation jaunt in long years.

Not only on the highways are they receiving a jolt, however, for vacation costs, which climbed throughout the war years, now have soared to a new all-time high.

Thousands are being jolted by boosts in the rates of resort hotels, inns and cottages. A few resort places haven't raised the ante since last year, but virtually all charge substantially more than they did in prewar and early war years.

Surveys of hotel directories show that the increase in rates range generally from 15 per cent to more than 100 per cent since prewar days. Many inns which were abandoned before the war because of guest shortages have reopened and are doing a capacity business at rates as high as $50 a day for two persons.

Travel experts say an increase amounting to more than 50 per cent is quite typical in most sections.

A few old inns, apparently desirous of maintaining the goodwill of patrons, have made surprisingly small increases. At the other extreme, say officials of travel organizations, are some unscrupulous operators who have used room shortages to gouge the vacationing public.

Food Costs Hiked.
Food sold along the highway also costs more. Boat and bicycle rentals, in many instances by more than 100 per cent. Fishing and hunting guides also are asking bigger pay.

Barring a business slump, vacation costs probably will be as high or higher next year. The American Automobile association expects that many potential vacationers, now hesitant about driving the old car any distance on poor rubber, will have new cars or new tires by next summer.

Here's Fish Stories—but These Didn't Get Away from Census Takers

LONG BEACH, CALIF.—Here's another fish story—it concerns size—but not those that got away. At least, California fish and game commission hopes none got away, for the story deals with the commission's semiannual population census of fish.

The commission takes its census by three major methods, the results of all three being correlated to determine estimated number of fish to be offered for sale or taken to canneries.

In the first method, a list of commercial fishing boats, together with their time and place of catch, is kept.

As the second step, five samples of 50 fish each are taken from catches throughout the fishing season to check the average size of fish in each catch. Size is determined by counting the rings on the scales, following the method utilized by archeologists in checking tree rings to determine a tree's age. For each year a fish lives a ring is seen on its scales.

Third method involves tagging samples of 100 fish taken from a representative catch, the fish then being turned loose until the next season, when researchers check catches to determine percentage of older fish reappearing.

Hat Mistaken for Turtle Causes Woman's Death

LOGANSPORT, IND.—A crownless hat which a squirrel hunter mistook for a turtle was blamed for the death of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Plaff, 40, of Logansport, as she was fishing in the Wabash river.

Carl W. Copperrill, 28, told Prosecutor Harry V. Tutwiler that he fired at what he thought was a turtle along the river bank. The bullet struck Mrs. Plaff.

and Tutwiler said he probably would file charges of involuntary manslaughter.

The hunter told the prosecutor he could barely see what he thought was a turtle on the bank and could not see the woman, who was fishing from a boat. He said his brother, Wesley Copperrill, who was hunting with him, warned him not to shoot, but at that moment the object moved and he fired.

"First time in my 30 years as an auctioneer that I ever sold a wooden leg," Spahn said.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Marrying From Fear

Bell Syndicate.—WNU Features.

"Rose-Marie wishes to marry a fine young lawyer, who already shows signs of political advancement. He is rich, handsome, devoted."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

POVERTY was the cause of the miserable circumstance of which I am writing you," says the letter of a Portland mother. "My husband died in 1932, leaving me with two children, a boy of 14 and a girl of 10. Destitute, I had to work hard for some years to support them, and at 16 my girl took a job in a law office. The boy had then won a scholarship and was living in another town. "Four months after she started work my daughter confessed to me her love for the office boss, her relationship with him and that she expected a child. I was then keeping a boarding-house in which my oldest boarder was a man of 76 who had considerable property. He had long wanted to marry me, and in my desperation I now consented to the marriage, closed my house, and insisted that he and I and Rose-Marie go on a trip to Mexico. Where we really went was to a big eastern city, where the baby was born. At this time my husband was stricken with paralysis; we came back to our home, where all our interests were, and I represented the child as mine. At the time I was only 38, so that that statement was not questioned. This man lived until a few months ago.

"The situation now is that Rose-Marie wishes to marry a fine young lawyer, who already shows signs of political advancement. He is rich, handsome, devoted. Meanwhile the contemptible married man who was Rose-Marie's boss has been widowed; he is 61, a successful business man, but to me he would be personally disagreeable even if I did not bitterly resent his betrayal of my little girl when she was only 16. The man she has now promised to marry knows nothing of her story, and if I can prevent it, never will, but the older man, Harold—my splendid little granddaughter's real father, is quietly blackmailing me into a third marriage; the thought is unspeakably revolting to me, but by marrying this tiresome, self-satisfied little man of 61 I feel that I can absolutely safeguard my daughter's new happiness.

Rose-Marie's Future. "It is great happiness, it is real happiness," Mrs. Norris, Rose-Marie has grown, has developed in these bitter years. She truly loves this new man, she wants to share a dignified and interesting life with him; she can do it, I know she can—and she will. But it will be at terrible cost to me. Harold knows that this darling eight-year-old girl is his child, for my heart-broken Rose-Marie naturally told him of her agonizing plight. He can hold this knowledge over us all; he has letters to prove it. "Can you advise me? Just two points more. Jane, the little girl, intensely dislikes Harold. And Rose-Marie, believe me when I say this, is a gentle, fine, clean-hearted girl, far stronger in character than many girls her age who have been more fortunate. As I began by saying, poverty wrought this terrible and perplexing pattern

"This tiresome little man of 61..."

Take Precautions When Using Pressure Cookers
There are many makes and models of pressure cookers. All of them operate on the same general physical principles but vary in details of operation. Here are some suggestions from the National Safety Council to help you get the proper results from your pressure cooker and to use it safely:
First follow the manufacturer's directions exactly. Keep all openings to pressure release valves, vents and to pressure gauges clean.

A DREADFUL PROSPECT
Covering up the first false step generally means that a chain of difficulties has been started. So it was for the unhappy mother whose letter is answered in this column.
Rose, the daughter, is engaged to a young lawyer whom she loves dearly. He is handsome, rich and politically ambitious. A dark secret in Rose's past threatened to mar her happiness, however. She has a child, born when she was only 16. Her mother, a widow, married an old man, and passed the child off as her own to protect Rose's name. Now Rose's seducer, a middle-aged man who was her employer, threatens to expose Rose unless her mother will marry him.

and surely it is cruel to have the generations go on paying so bitterly for what is no one's fault."
Poverty is hard, my dear Janet; I know it well. But no girl gives herself to a middle-aged married man in the first weeks of their acquaintanceship just because of poverty. Rose-Marie should have been better armed for the fight with life.
Your idea of marrying her seducer is fantastic; he has no legal claim upon her or upon the child. Rose-Marie can clear this whole thing up—and I think in justice to you she must—by telling her present sweetheart the whole story.

Harold Can't Do Much Harm.
It is possible that he will break the engagement and leave her. Political careers and histories like this one don't mix. Or it is possible that he will look at the situation honestly and generously. Nobody knows these facts except Harold. Even if he were contemptible enough to start a whispering campaign, the probabilities are all against his getting very far with it.
Jane is established as your child, the child of your late marriage to the old man. To break out with evidence of her real parenthood would mark Harold as a scurrilous blackmailer, and hurt him incurably with all decent folk. The chance of his doing this is, I believe, negligible; that is, if he knows Rose-Marie has made it all clear to her promised husband.

If she marries him keeping these facts a secret then Harold really holds against her happiness and security a deadly weapon, that may well ruin her life. It is too bad that women must pay so high for the mistakes of girlhood, but we are made that way, and everything that emancipation and independence can do cannot seem to lessen that situation. For your sake and the sake of innocent little Jane I can only advise an honest explanation to Rose's young man, and then a confident going forward in the hope that any scandal started by Harold would react against himself more than against the girl he betrayed. For you to make two loveless marriages to save the situation would merely complicate everything.

Eddie Rozner, one of the most popular and hottest jazz band leaders in the Soviet Union, has been brought sharply to task by the government newspaper, Izvestia, which declared that his programs were trivial and had "nothing in common" with what Soviet audiences love.
Rozner directs the White Russian state jazz band, and tickets always are sold out for his shows. He says he picked up his technique in his youth in New York's Harlem.

High Costs Feared
A "strong likelihood" that the current residential building boom will collapse within 12 to 15 months is seen by Ramsay Wood of the division of research and statistics, board of governors, Federal Reserve board.
"If prices turn down before costs have overtaken them, building may be sustained, but if, as seems more likely, costs are as high as prices when the decline comes, building will be curtailed," Wood says.
If successful steps are taken to protect the victims of such a collapse, the prospect is for a postwar residential building boom of perhaps four or five years' duration rather than for a sustained high level of residential building "unless basic conditions in the housing market are considerably improved."
Wood's treatise on housing is one of three papers published in the board of governors' sixth volume of "Postwar Economic Studies," made by the Federal Reserve System.

Residential Mortgage Debt For '47 to Reach 41 Billions

COST of construction, purchase and credit in the housing program field by the end of 1947 will result in a net increase in the residential mortgage debt in the nation of 41.2 billion dollars, according to estimates of the Veterans' Emergency Housing Administration.
Of this stratoplastic figure, Expediter Wilson Wyatt says that new homes and apartments planned under the VEHA will need credit of 15.4 billion dollars and that existing homes not under the program are expected to require an additional 14.5 billions; or a total of 22.9 billion dollars for the period.
Add to this figure costs for purchase and repairs of existing homes of 8.3 billions this year and 5.5 billions in 1947, plus 730 million dollars in long-term new homes begun in 1945 and subtract the repayments, and you get the estimate of 41.2 billion.

While these figures seem astronomical for the two-year period, it is pointed out that in 1930 the net residential mortgage debt totaled 30 billion dollars and for 10 years during the thirties there was little home construction and some reduction in the total debt.

Far Behind Schedule
At the end of the first six months of 1946 out of the goal of 1,200,000 housing units for the year, only 406,000 units had been started with 225,000 homes completed. With shortages still continuing in some construction items and deliveries still slow and fitful, it can be seen that to complete the task set out for themselves, VEHA has a herculean job to do.

In a recent report the housing expediter says:
"Purchase and repairs of existing houses, as well as other non-program home financing needs, will take approximately 8.3 billion dollars of lending in 1946. In addition there are 730 million dollars in long-term mortgages on new homes begun in 1945. For 1947, non-program lending requirements are estimated at 5.5 billions, one-third less than in 1946."
"Almost half of the total need of 29.9 billions will be filled by repayments on outstanding debt, allowing for advance as well as scheduled amortization. Trends for the first four months of this year indicate that a large volume of refinancing, together with sustained high income, will result in a volume of repayments in 1946 approximately 40 per cent above the 1945 volume. In 1947, however, repayments probably will return to a level near 1945."

"Subtracting those needs which will be met by repayments, the net in the home financing field would be 15.2 billion dollars by the end of 1947, or a total net increase in residential mortgage debt of 41.2 billion dollars. Since the total net public and private debt in 1930 was 190 billion dollars and the residential mortgage debt amounted to 30 billion dollars, the estimate of 41.2 billion dollars 1 1/2 years hence is not excessive when compared with the present total net public and private debt estimate of 400 billions."

Plenty of Money Ready
Wyatt points out that the needs in the home financing field, insofar as VEHA is concerned, can be met from three major sources: net increased savings of individuals in lending institutions; liquid assets held by lending institutions, and potential direct investments by individuals and the secondary credit facilities of the Federal Home Loan.
With this huge jackpot of billions of dollars in the construction industry, one would think that the "take" in the usual way would be sufficient, but government already has filed several hundred suits against lumber and material companies alleging illegal practices. These include diversion of lumber to the shipper himself at a fictitious address to be held for resale; resawing without upgrading; refusing to produce standard size and turning out oversize lumber commanding a higher selling price and requiring regrading for construction use; charging for more lumber than delivered; cutting and delivering short lengths; illegal wholesale selling at retail prices and plain over-ceiling sales, accomplished through on-the-side cash payments or similar devices.

On-the-Farm Training

One year after V-J Day saw 1,250,000 veterans of World War II enrolled in some form of education or training under the two laws providing such facilities for war veterans.
According to Gen. Omar N. Bradley, VA director, the greatest problem facing the G.I. educational and training program is that of the colleges in securing teachers and in providing classrooms and living quarters for this tremendous influx of students. General Bradley predicted that in the next year this figure would be doubled.

One of the newer forms of education is on-the-farm training, combining class work with practical supervised farming. To supplement the educational program, VA has prevailed upon the army and navy for release of more than 2,000,000 text books for veterans studying under Public Law 16 and the G.I. Bill.
General Bradley expressed concern over failure of the veterans to take advantage of the educational program. Less than one out of four veterans has premiums up-to-date on government insurance and almost 10,000,000 eligible veterans are now without National Service Life insurance, while originally 95 per cent of them carried the insurance when they were in the armed services. In other words, 90 billion dollars worth of economic security has been permitted to lapse. One of the important objectives of VA during the coming year will be help to veterans in reinstating their insurance.

Questions and Answers
Q. My husband joined the army April 1, 1946. We have two children, two and four years of age. Also a good farm, cows, pigs, boys and chickens. I must care for all of these things. We got the farm worked this year by my helping to do much of the work, which I was unable to do. My health is not good. I am 26 years old and he is 29, will be 30 in February. I have no one to stay with me except his 70-year-old mother. He wants to get out of the army and work his farm next year. Is there any chance? Please help me.—Mrs. D. W. T., Moulton, Ala.
A. He should have no trouble obtaining his discharge since he is a father. Suggest he contact his commanding officer and apply for his discharge.

Q. During 30 months of army service I sent my parents an allotment every month. Now my parents are dead. Can I collect the amount I sent them from their estate when sold?—C. W. J., Green Pond, Ala.
A. This is a legal question and you should consult a lawyer.
Q. I am a widow with one son who is now 16 years old, an aged father-in-law, aged 82, and another son serving overseas. I get a family allowance which is insufficient to supply the needs of our household and the stock, etc. Living expenses have risen, as you know. Would I be permitted to take a job to supplement the family allowance and still be entitled to it?—Mrs. M. A. M., Dana, N. C.
A. There is no reason why you shouldn't take a job.
Q. Can you tell me where the 383rd Infantry is now? Are they discharged? They trained in Camp White, Ore., and later went to San Luis Obispo, Calif., and were shipped to the Pacific.—M. P., Wood, Calif.
A. The army says the 383rd Infantry was inactivated February 3, 1946.
Q. I was discharged with a medical disability from the navy in World War I with tuberculosis and am unable to do manual labor. Can you help me in any way?
A. You should apply to your nearest office of the Veterans' administration and ask for a disability rating. If your illness was the result of your navy service it would be a service-connected disability, but even if it is not service-connected, you likely would be entitled to a disability pension.
Q. My father entered service nearly three years ago, claiming he was a single man and not naming his children as dependents. He was discharged a few months ago, and we never received allotments during the entire time he was in service. We were all under 18 years of age. Is there anything we could do about it now?—Miss M. L. C., Ceredo, W. Va.
A. I am afraid there is nothing to be done now. To be sure, however, you might write to the Office of Dependency Claims, War Department, Newark 2, N. J.
Q. My son went into service in May, 1944. He went overseas in December of the same year and has served 19 months overseas in the European theater. He has two dependents. Could you tell me how soon he will be eligible for discharge?—Mrs. J. W., Washington, Iowa.
A. If your son is a non-volunteer enlisted man he should be home not later than September 30, 1946. If one of his dependents is a child, he might be able to get home sooner by making application as a father.

YUGOSLAVIAN INCIDENTS PART OF REDS' PLAN

WASHINGTON.—The Tito claim that the killing of American air passengers was "an unfortunate accident" offered an imposition upon the intelligence of an imbecile. It was a step in Russia's "peace of nerves" program, a step which went too far.

The "peace of nerves" which Russia has been conducting against western civilization is not new, and made no one nervous. The devices used were first invented by Hitler and Mussolini. As any important questions came up internationally, the Nazis and Fascists created disturbing incidents in order to threaten and weaken their opposition, thus to win easier concessions. Such diplomatic tricks are really as old as Machiavelli, yet the innovation of utmost pressures was contrived only by the modern totalitarians.

The recent haggling, nagging and rattling of nerves according to plan evidently is designed to weaken Anglo-American resistance to Communist demands and to promote the cause of appeasers among us who wish to give the Communists everything they wish. These appeasers do not realize the nature and purpose of the attack which is to make us surrender the post of the world to Communism. They do not realize that such surrender will only lead to larger and larger demands—as was our experience in dealing with Hitler and Mussolini.

WHAT'S BEHIND IT ALL
Any fair mind can see this so plainly as to bring the point beyond the possibility of contradiction. Behind these developments are the following facts:

The air is free over our zones. Commercial planes and military transport may travel peacefully there. But the air is closed in Russia, and by Russia in every nation in which she is influential in the government. Permits to travel must be sought in her zones, and these are seldom granted. When allowed, restrictions are imposed as to time and occasion. Russia and her satellites, the Yugoslavians, are completely isolationist in the air as on the ground. That is why these incidents can occur to us—but not to their planes.

The nerve-pressure incidents are whopped up by the Russians and their satellites in various available ways. You may recall that one of our embassy men in Moscow was charged with "hoaxing" (undefined specifically) against a Russian girl. Moscow made as much of it as possible, although immunity is the rule with foreign diplomats on our side. The Yugoslavians have been crossing the line and kidnapping some people (not Americans) back into Yugoslavia where they disappear. From our mission in Romania, a girl employee suddenly disappeared. It developed she had been jailed with no charge filed, but our diplomatic people were not allowed to communicate with her. Another male employee of ours there (a Romanian) was arrested at his home and convicted without a public trial. In typical Nazi ways, the Russian types practice grimaces continuously at our diplomacy.

With affronts to fairness which are almost laughable, Russia similarly demands entry in the United Nations for her Outer Mongolia, but opposes entry for Britain's Trans-Jordan. When the Paris peace conference opened, the Communist dictator of tiny Albania fortified it in a bristling way, which naturally had no effect—upon the Trieste situation, which his act was supposed to influence.

RUSSIA WANTS DARDANELLES
But what made the Yugoslav incident development even more serious than its surface indications were the private reports available to officials here that the Russians planned to move against Turkey and take the Dardanelles. Her soldiers on the Turkish border had started firing in the air over the Turks in recent days, even as the rockets from her part of Germany had been flying over the Swedes (the rockets brought an immediate answer in a large Swedish loan to Russia).
Now Russia does not need to fortify the Dardanelles, unless she expects to go to war against Turkey. She has no navy of consequence, but what she has may operate with free passage in and out of the Black sea.

Our note rejecting her demands for fortification could hardly have been otherwise than firm, as we could hardly be to a plan for her to seize the territory of neutrals for purposes of fortification by her. This added grimness to the Yugoslavian tragedy. If Russia invaded Turkey and took the Dardanelles (as she can do at any time because she has more troops there) she thereby would create the first threat to world order since the war and offer the first real case for the U. N.

These are the reasons behind State Secretary Byrnes' decision to call in Vandenberg and Connally, and to let the Paris peace conference go entirely, if necessary—to stand his ground. Of what good is a peace treaty in the face of such tactics? How long would a treaty (in which we are guaranteeing Russian conquests forever) exist in a peace of nerves which has become only an armed truce?
If Russia wanted to find out how much we will stand for, Byrnes gave answer in his indications that his patience had reached a limit.

time on old pastures that are to be re- novated. The latter part of the month is also a good time to begin tearing up the old bluegrass sod. The best machine to use is the digger, although a spring tooth harrow will also do a good job. The more of the old sod that will be destroyed this fall, the less preparation will be needed for preparing the seedbed next spring. Renovated pas- tures should receive heavy fertiliza- tion—about 300 to 500 pounds of an 9-20-20 fertilizer per acre. Remember you are fertilizing for a period of ab- out five years.

A lot of cases of coccidiosis are be- ing confused with Newcastle disease in St. Croix county flocks. So far only a couple of cases of Newcastle disease have been diagnosed in the county.

'Business As Usual' on Capitol Hill

Busy Washington Knows No Rest Even in Summer

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N.W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON.—As soon as Labor Day is passed the business world settles down with a sigh of relief. The summer slump is supposed to be over. Most people, I suppose, consider that Washington in the summer is even more dormant and deserted than the ordinary city. If you believe the accompanying cartoon by Herblock which the Washington Post permits me to reproduce, you will be sure you sleep. But don't let Herblock fool you. True, it did seem that way for a while but actually this summer it was pretty much "business as usual" in the Capitol, the house and senate office buildings, the offices of the White House and the state department and other execu-

that if "Old Hickory" were here in this hectic period, his old flesh, blood, powder and brimstone self, he would have charged right up to the state department steps when he heard of American planes being shot down in Europe.

The United States has gone a long way toward world leadership since the year 1781 when a little, 14-year-old boy named Andy Jackson, along with his brother "continentals" was fighting the armies of the greatest nation of the day—Great Britain. Andy's two brothers were killed and he was captured but he lived to turn the tables when he led his "long-rifle" heroes to victory in the battle of New Orleans, 31 years later.

"Old Hickory" must be a little confused as he gazes across to the White House, beyond it to the Potomac and the Pentagon and beyond that and the Atlantic to Europe today.

As I pass Lafayette park in the twilight these days I seem to hear him rattling his sword and saying: "When these United States were in their swaddling clothes we remediately after the Queen Elizabeth completed her final voyage as a war transport last March 6.

Now a luxury ship, the Queen Elizabeth will be furnished with equipment and decorations ordered and delivered before the advent of war, then stored in other places throughout the world for the past six years.

Fittings include 21,000 pieces of furniture and equipment, 4,500 settees, 4,000 mattresses and pillows, 6,000 curtains and bedspreads, 2,000 carpets, 1,500 wardrobes and dressing tables and 10 miles of carpets.

As the final step in reconversion, the ship will enter the graving dock for examinations of the four propellers, each weighing 32 tons, the giant 140-ton rudder and other underwater parts.

One-way rates will start at $165 for tourist class, ranging up to $365 for first class.

A QUEEN COMES BACK . . . Thirty tons of paint bring peacetime colors to the Queen Elizabeth, Cunard White Star liner, now being readied for the trans-Atlantic run.

QUEEN OF THE SEAS

Luxury Liner To Make Maiden Voyage Oct. 16

NEW YORK.—With the greatest reconversion job in maritime history now nearing its final stages, the world's largest passenger liner, Cunard's 83,763-ton Queen Elizabeth, is being prepared to launch the career postponed by war for more than six years.

Transformed into a new ship, the Queen Elizabeth will make her maiden voyage starting regular service from Southampton to New York on October 16. The return voyage from New York is scheduled for October 25.

The gray war paint that shrouded the ship when she slipped across the Atlantic in March, 1940, on the first of many vital war missions, has been replaced by the colors of peace—shiny black hull, gleaming white superstructure, red and black funnels, colors of the Cunard line. Thirty tons of paint were required to cover the ship's million square feet of exterior surface.

Decks worn by the tramp of 811,000 pairs of military boots have been relaid. Blackout paint has been scraped off 2,000 portholes. Miles of temporary wiring and piping have been dismantled. The ship has been stripped of such military appurtenances as 10,000 stowage berths, temporary sanitary facilities, bulkheads, storerooms and troop fittings.

The reconversion job began im-

One-man School Expands as Veterans Flock for Ratings

DENVER, COLO.—The traditional old one-man school has been put on a wholesale basis here, giving 2,318 veterans the equivalent of a high school diploma in the last 10 weeks.

Operator of the school is a gray-haired, scholarly little man, Dr. John C. Unger, whose main job is that of superintendent of secondary education for Colorado. His present task is to put into practical operation one of the primary guarantees of the G. I. Bill of Rights—the opportunity for each veteran to continue his education.

He has turned the senate chamber of the state house into a school room with men and women of an average age of 21 sitting at senatorial desks and doing harder thinking than most state senators ever do.

In co-operation with the Veterans' administration and armed forces institute, Dr. Unger interviews and tests veterans from all over the state to provide them with certificates showing they possess knowledge equal to a high school education.

With such certificates, the veterans go confidently to employers to apply for jobs or enroll in colleges to study anything from the ministry to aeronautical engineering. The two-hour tests in grammar, mathematics, science, literature and social studies are not required of all applicants. Credits are allowed for training received in the service.

Oldest man to take the tests was a 47-year-old Trinidad naval veteran and the youngest was a 19-year-old Denver youth, who enlisted in the army when only 16.

Dr. Unger tests men still in the service who come in from such posts as Camp Carson at Colorado Springs and Lowry Field in Denver. He has visited Fitzsimmons General hospital several times to examine patients there. Those who can't pass are given friendly counsel on what they need to study to qualify for certificates.

Kansas Sun's Rays Ignite Glass on Bag

TOPEKA, KAN.—It's dangerous when the thermometer reads 105, Miss Ceora Lanham is ready to testify. As she stood waiting for a bus under the sweltering sun, her purse burst into flames. The sun's hot rays had passed through a glass handle on the bag.

BONE TO PICK . . . Two dogs, who have a bone to pick with Santa Monica city council over ordinance prohibiting them from doing anything more than sniffing on public sidewalks and in parks, picket city hall.

Wedding Drinks Tip Most Britons Off Wagon

LONDON.—Why do people take to drink? Drinking toasts at weddings is the principal reason for tipping a person off the wagon, say Britons who like a quick one now and then.

Tetotalers, however, say "not wishing to be different" is the hardest push off the wagon. Twelve hundred young people, including doctors, parlor maids, government clerks and miners, gave the answers to a questionnaire sent out by the British Temperance League. Tipplers gave these four main reasons for their weakness: Toasting at weddings, loneliness, not wishing to be different and enjoyment of the drinking fraternity's company.

All the reasons were among 17 "possible causes" suggested by Herbert Jones, league secretary, who is a non-drinker.

Man Kills Wife, 60, For 'Playing Around'

BURLINGTON, VT.—Accusing his 60-year-old estranged wife of "playing around" with other men, Peter Eamon, 33, fraternity house caretaker, fractured her skull with a revolver butt and pumped five bullets into her body, then reloaded his gun and shot himself twice.

The wife, Ellen, died in a hospital a few hours after he had waylaid her on the university campus.

Old Adage Is Wrong, Lightning Hits Twice

FORT GEORGE G. MEADE, MD.—The old adage about lightning never striking twice in the same place is wrong. Pfc. Harold Kehne can prove it.

Kehne was sitting on a steel chair leaning against a radiator during an electrical storm when a bolt of lightning struck, knocking him off the chair. Unhurt, Kehne was struck by another bolt in 15 minutes.

utive branches of the government, to say nothing of Washington's marts of trade, limited in comparison to other cities though they may be. Government isn't all congress, and the President and Washington aren't all government.

A year or two ago, William Kiplinger, gathering material for his book, "Washington Is Like That," stood in front of the Willard Hotel at Pennsylvania ave. and 14th street and asked 20 people going by who they were and what they did. Of the 20, only five worked for the government and none had jobs which were interrupted (except by vacations) in the summer any more than in any other season.

I have no idea how many members of congress or members of their staffs go down to the Capitol to work every day in the summer months but many offices on the "hill" are open. The regular departments are as busy as they ever are. The very week that the cartoon came out showing "Congress gone home," a sign on the White House door, "Back Labor Day," and another on the state department, "Gone to Paris," the state department was making public two of the most important communications it has dispatched in many a day. One was the ultimatum to Yugoslavia protesting the shooting down of our planes and the other was the refusal to accede to Russia's demand for joint control of the Dardanelles.

At the same time, the investigation of the war surplus sales was going on; the other investigation into war contracts had just closed and the department of justice was taking up the work where the Mead committee had laid it down, and the decontrol board of the OPA was holding hearings in preparation for its first and highly important decision which put controls back on meats and other products.

These were only a few of the activities—not to mention the bubbling campaign kettles assiduously attended by political chiefs behind closed kitchen doors. No, Washington doesn't hibernate in the summer. Herblock's conception of General Jackson, chin on chest, hunched up against his horse, like a lazy pup, is pure poetic license.

Herblock probably chose that particular figure for contrast because it is one of the most belligerent statues in Washington. Jackson sits there in Lafayette park, across from the White House, (as he does in New Orleans) waving his saber, his rearing charger with its front feet pawing the atmosphere. And I imagine that if "Old Hickory" were here in this hectic period, his old flesh, blood, powder and brimstone self, he would have charged right up to the state department steps when he heard of American planes being shot down in Europe.

The United States has gone a long way toward world leadership since the year 1781 when a little, 14-year-old boy named Andy Jackson, along with his brother "continentals" was fighting the armies of the greatest nation of the day—Great Britain. Andy's two brothers were killed and he was captured but he lived to turn the tables when he led his "long-rifle" heroes to victory in the battle of New Orleans, 31 years later.

"Old Hickory" must be a little confused as he gazes across to the White House, beyond it to the Potomac and the Pentagon and beyond that and the Atlantic to Europe today.

As I pass Lafayette park in the twilight these days I seem to hear him rattling his sword and saying: "When these United States were in their swaddling clothes we returned to the state department steps when he heard of American planes being shot down in Europe.

Trouble Flares in Greece; Vet Housing Gets Boost

GREECE: Big Stakes

Greece forged to the front of the troubled European picture as the scene of the latest tug of diplomatic war between the western allies and Soviet Russia.

Working boldly to establish supremacy throughout eastern Europe and adjoining Asia Minor, Moscow recalled Amb. Konstantine K. Rodionov from Greece as a mark of displeasure against the holding of a plebiscite to return King George II to his throne.

Because Britain, supported by the U. S., favored both the restoration of the monarchy and the Populist party government now in the saddle, Russia's move really was pointed against Anglo-American policy. The presence of 40,000 British troops in Greece has acted as a lever against a Communist inspired seizure of power, and the visit of U. S. warships to Grecian waters before the plebiscite was seen as a gesture of friendship for the rightist regime.

The tussle between the Anglo-American and Russian blocs in Greece is for big stakes: A government friendly to the British would assure them of a toehold in the Balkans and an advance base for the Near East and Suez canal, while Russian domination of the country would result in complete Soviet hegemony in the Balkans and a projected flank in the event of trouble in Asia Minor.

HOUSING: Aid to Vets

In ordering a 27 per cent reduction in commercial building and channeling greater amounts of material to new housing, the government sought to increase the construction of new dwellings and reduce the time for their completion.

Housing Expediter Wilson W. Wyatt and Civilian Production Administration John D. Small worked out the new controls after the building industry had warned of a serious bogging of the whole emergency housing program for vets.

Leaving a meeting with government officials prior to the announcement of the new program, Joseph Myerhoff, president of the National Association of Home Builders, declared that the industry had failed to get the flow of materials necessary for the completion of 200,000 to 300,000 homes under construction, and that the shortages have lengthened the construction time from 3 to 4 months to 9 to 12 months.

With Small agreeing to the transfer of all housing control to Wyatt, the government instituted sweeping directives to answer the widespread complaints.

Non-residential construction was cut back from over 48 million dollars weekly to 35 million dollars to divert more materials for home building.

Twenty-seven more materials, including stoves, linoleum and light fixtures, were added to the list of 25 already subject to vet priorities.

MEAT: Production Incentive

Taking advantage of the new OPA act empowering him to set live-stock ceilings, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson called for substantial boosts in cattle and hog prices to encourage feeding this fall and to assure adequate supplies of beef next winter and spring.

Declaring that prospects pointed to plentiful supplies of feed grains this year, Anderson stated that it was necessary to bring stock prices in line with feed costs to spur farmers into fattening stock. Otherwise, he said, large numbers of lean animals would be butchered, creating a serious shortage later.

Anderson's recommendation for a boost in the cattle top to $20.25 per hundredweight, Chicago basis, and in the hog ceiling to $16.25 ran counter to OPA Administrator Paul Porter's desire to establish prices around the old level of $18 and $14.85. As a result of the boosts, retail ceilings were scheduled to rise from two to eight cents on beef and about three cents on pork.

WASHINGTON.—Average per capita income in the United States reached an all-time high of $1,150 in 1945, a department of commerce report discloses.

The figure represents an increase of 2 per cent from the 1944 level of $1,133 and a gain of $575 per capita over the 1940 level.

Wages and salaries, income from unincorporated businesses and farms, net rent, dividends, interest, royalties and other items such as veterans' benefits, military and dependency allowances are computed in the per capita income payments.

New York Leads. New York led the states with a per capita income of $1,595. Mississippi was low with $558.

There was relatively little change from 1944 to 1945 in the per capita income of the various states. South Dakota with 16 per cent recorded the largest increase and Michigan with 6 per cent the greatest decline.

BABY LUNG: To Fight Polio

Designed to keep wounded fliers alive by supplying oxygen until they could be returned to their bases, the army's "baby lung" has been modified to accommodate children in the nationwide battle against infantile paralysis.

Whereas the regulation army masks through which the oxygen is sent were found too large for children, they were recast to fit patients from five to ten years of age and rushed to Minneapolis, Minn., to combat the polio epidemic there.

In addition to the six artificial respirators supplied by the army air forces, two throat-type models were sent when it was found that many of the polio patients were dying of suffocation due to the closing of the larynx.

The tube of the throat type resuscitator is inserted into a patient's neck below the larynx after an incision is made. The oxygen thus supplied enables the patient to continue his breathing.

TREASURE OF THE SEA

BY George E. Walsh WNU Release

THE STORY THUS FAR:
The crew of a small sailing vessel in the Caribbean pick up Dick Jordan, adrift on a raft. He realizes that he is among men little better than pirates. They come upon a drifting schooner with only two people aboard, the demented captain and his daughter, Rose. Tucu and his pirates capture the schooner and search fruitlessly for the "treasure." Then Tucu goes away, because a storm is brewing. Dick swims to the schooner, arriving just in time to rescue Rose from two of the pirates. Captain Bedford recovers and they sail to an island. Dick discovers that Tucu and his crew are on the other side. They are battling a group of white men.

CHAPTER X

The Caribs were checked again by a volley of stones, and withdrew after that to a safe distance, while Burley and Tucu held a consultation.

Dick struggled to his feet, a little bewildered and uncertain what course to pursue. There were six white men, now that Pettigrew had been killed, and a dozen Caribs attacking them, an even disposition of forces, perhaps if they had been equally equipped for battle—for one white man could ordinarily handle two Caribs—but armed with pistols their enemies lacked the black men had the advantage. They could pick off their enemies leisurely without running any risk from flying stones, and in the end conquer through their superior weapons. Bravery did not count much as a factor in such a battle.

The sight of Hen lying there on the sand, treacherously shot by the Caribs, suddenly changed Dick's whole attitude; he felt sorry for him, and forgave him for much of what he had condemned in the past. Hen was human; he had a heart; he was brave and fearless; he would not attack a man from behind, and shoot him in the back.

"Damn Tucu!" he exploded. "He's a devil! I'll get him yet for Hen's sake!"

It was a queer reason for arousing him to a fighting mood; or perhaps it was the age-old instinct to rally to the white man's side, when those of another color had him at his mercy more than any sympathy for Hen Pettigrew. Hen was merely a symbol of the eternal struggle.

ford to remark, "Ye can't never teach a Carib to shoot straight. 'Tain't born in 'em. Reckon we'll show 'em how to do it."

Dick had been scanning the rocks below with a careful estimate of the danger ahead. The shipwrecked men had reached the upper part of the beach, and it was possible to get within a hundred feet of them without exposing their bodies by following closely a ridge of outcropping boulders. When he indicated this to Captain Bedford, the old skipper nodded, and waited for him to lead.

Once more Dick urged Rose to remain behind, but she stubbornly shook her head and prepared to follow.

The Caribs had their attention directed upon the breastwork of their enemies, and, not expecting danger from above, they never once raised their eyes to the summit of the cliff. This more than any skill on their part enabled the three to creep stealthily down the ridge until close to the hiding place of the sailors. Crouching there for a moment they considered the next move. Between them and the breastwork was an open stretch of flat sand. To cross this they had to expose their bodies to the cross fire of the Caribs.

"I'll go first," Dick whispered. "No, wait a minute," replied the skipper. "Likely's not them sailors will take ye for a flankin' party an' land a ton of stones on yer head. We got to let 'em know we're friends."

a hand as a signal. Four vicious bullets sped toward their marks, and before they were well on their way others were following them. The automatics barked so continuously that half the Caribs were down before the others could duck for shelter.

The sailors wanted to break cover and charge, but Dick restrained them. "No, they'll get some of you. Keep covered until we get Tucu and Burley. The rest will surrender."

"Who's Tucu — their leader?" asked one of the seamen.

"Yes, he's the captain of the lugger, and Black Burley's the mate."

"Know 'em?"

"Sure, I've sailed with them."

The sailors eyed him curiously. In the lull that followed, one asked: "Wasn't ye on the City of Bahia?"

Dick nodded.

"Thought I remembered yer face. Got away, did ye?"

Further conversation was interrupted by the unexpected barking of a gun far on their right. For a moment they thought a flanking party had crept up behind them; but almost simultaneously with the crash of the report there came a cry from the enemy. They saw a gigantic black man leap in the air and tumble face down-ward.

"Black Burley!" exclaimed Dick. "Who shot him?" asked one of the sailors, unasily glancing in the direction of the shot.

"Captain Bedford," smiled Dick. "He's trying to flank them."

The rest of the Caribs, with Tucu leading, had leaped from cover, and were making a run for their last refuge.

"After them!" yelled Dick, springing over the breastwork. "Don't let Tucu escape."

Dick led the assaulting party, but Tucu had a big start. It looked for a time as if he would escape, and Dick hesitated between keeping up the race and stopping to shoot. Perhaps in either case he would have lost if Tucu's vengeful nature hadn't temporarily handicapped him.

Hen Pettigrew lay directly in his path, where he had been left by the Caribs for dead; but Hen had as many lives as a cat, and despite the fact that he carried three bullets in his body he was a long way from being dead. He sat up and began struggling feebly to get on his feet. He was not aware of Tucu's presence until the latter stopped suddenly in his steps.

The sight of one of his enemies escaping when he could kill him was too much of a strain on Tucu's nature. He decided to linger long enough to put Hen out of the game. With a malevolent glint in his eyes, he leered at the half-dazed man, and said:

"I reckon y'don't need to get up."

There was a puff of smoke and a sharp report.

"Captain Bedford may have pistols or rifles that Tucu overlooked," Dick reasoned. "With two or three we could rout the Caribs."

Animated by this thought, he turned and began scrambling down the rocks, scarring his hands and knees and nearly losing his balance once or twice through careless haste. Rose saw him coming, and waved to him; Dick gave no heed to her until he stood on the deck, hot, flushed, and panting.

"Captain Tucu's gun," was on the other side of the island!" he announced abruptly.

Rose recoiled and turned deathly white, but Captain Bedford's face set in hard lines without a trace of fear in it. "Then we must get ready for them," he said grimly. "Did they see ye?"

"No, but I saw them."

"The old skipper nodded. "Can ye shoot?"

"Yes, if I had anything to shoot with. Tucu disarmed me, and took every weapon off the schooner."

"Did he?" The skipper's face was wreathed in a crafty smile. "I reckon now," he added a moment later, "he overlooked some of 'em."

Dick turned eagerly to him. "You have more?" he asked jerkily.

"Maybe he found 'em," was the grunting reply, "but I don't think so. I hid 'em fur such things as mutiny an' boarding parties. We'll see."

Reinforcements Come From the Schooner

Leading the way into the cabin, with Dick and Rose eagerly following, he began prying up a section of the floor. After loosening a few boards he lifted out a small chest hidden underneath, which, when opened, disclosed a treasure more precious to Dick than the gold taken from the submarine. It consisted of half a dozen brand-new pistols of modern pattern, automatics of a deadly type, with ammunition enough to feed them for a considerable time.

With a little cry of delight, Dick seized them and began stuffing them in his pockets. "Ye ain't leavin' none for me," protested the skipper. "Ye ain't figgerin' on wiping out Captain Tucu's crew alone. Be ye?"

Dick laughed, the tension broken, and then in a few words told them what he had discovered on the other side of the island. Rose's eyes widened and darkened, and her face flushed with excitement; but Captain Bedford merely nodded and grunted.

"We could do it alone," he murmured finally, "but maybe it would be better to get down to the sailors, an' let 'em have some sort of fun. Reckon they'd enjoy it."

"Yes," nodded Dick, "we must have nearly enough guns for all. We must hurry."

They started up the companion, but when they climbed over the side of the schooner to get ashore Rose suddenly protested.

"Aren't you going to help me ashore, Dick?"

"No," he replied gravely, "you must stay on the Betty. We'll come back to you."

She sniffed and tossed her head in the air. "If Father's going I'm going too," she answered.

Dick started to protest further, but Captain Bedford nudged him. "No use arguin'," he whispered. "I've spilt her. She always has her way."

With a smile she acknowledged this doubtful compliment, and climbed down to the mass of wreckage. Dick somewhat unwillingly extended a hand and helped her ashore.

When they reached the summit of the cliff, the situation below was not changed. The Caribs were still at a safe distance, shooting occasionally at the breastwork behind which the white men were crouched. Their bullets went wide of the mark, which induced Captain Bed-

Dick Saves the Life Of His Nemesis

He could have shot him on the run, but he wanted to make sure this time. He brought his gun close to Hen's head, thrusting it viciously between his eyes so he could stare his fate directly in the face. It was a brutal, bloodthirsty act, and for a moment Hen recoiled.

"Damn ye, take that!" grunted the half-breed.

There was an explosion, so close that the powder blackened Hen's face, but the bullet buried itself in the sand as Tucu's right hand dropped to his side with the forearm broken close to the wrist.

Dick had taken advantage of his hesitation and shot at the hand holding the gun to Hen's face, pausing to aim carefully and deliberately to make sure he did not miss.

Grasped his wounded wrist in his free hand, and seeing that escape was impossible he turned upon Dick like an enraged animal. All the venom of his nature flared up in his eyes.

Dick could have shot easily, but he hesitated. The man was wounded and unarmed, his gun having fallen to the ground. He could not shoot Tucu even when he had him at his mercy.

"It's all up, Tucu," he said, smiling as he advanced. "I won't kill you if you'll surrender. You can't get away."

"Y'won't shoot me if I surrender?" whined the half-breed. "Y'won't let 'em kill me?"

"No, we'll give you a fair trial, but you don't deserve it."

Tucu's shifty eyes seemed to lose their fire, and Dick noticed that the limp arm was bleeding freely. "I'll help you," he added, kicking the man's gun away to a safe distance. "That arm must be broken."

Although in the act of kicking Tucu's gun away, he showed that he didn't trust the outlaw, Dick was careless in another respect. He thrust his own gun in his pocket. The half-breed noticed the action and almost immediately his whole attitude changed. A murderous gleam flashed in his eyes.

With his left hand he jerked an ugly knife from his belt and made a lunge at Dick. The attack was so sudden and unexpected that there was no time for counter action. Dick had barely time to catch the uplifted arm and save himself from almost instant death.

With a growl of rage that his ruse had failed, the half-breed struggled to release his arm for another blow; but Dick flung himself upon the outlaw, grasping the arm with one hand, and the knife with the other.

Although wounded, and one arm helpless, Tucu, who was a giant in strength, fought ferociously, succeeding finally in hurling his enemy from him through sheer muscular superiority.

Add Finishing Touches to Canning Now! (See Recipes Below)

Late Canning

Well, the summer's about over, with late fruits peeping through the leaves in the orchard, and the last of the season's vegetables pushing up through the earth. I am assuming you have most of your canning done, but there are some things that cannot be canned until late.

Look over what you've canned during the summer before winding up with a final session of canning and try to balance the canning cupboard and fill in spaces with the foods you need.

Pear Butter.

Wash pears, but do not peel. Slice and add a small amount of water to start cooking. Cook until soft, then press through a colander. To each cup of pulp, add 1/2 cup sugar, and a few spices, if desired. Cook to a paste, stirring frequently to prevent burning. Pour into sterilized jars and seal at once.

You know fruit butters will spread a lot of slices of bread this winter and put a damper on that rifting of the cookie jar. Here's how it's done with apples:

Spiced Apple Butter.

4 gallons prepared apples
1 gallon sweet cider
4 pints sugar
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Pare, core and slice apples. Boil cider until reduced by one-half. Add apples to cider while boiling and cook slowly until the fruit is soft.

Press through a sieve and then return to fire and continue cooking, stirring frequently to prevent burning. When the fruit begins to thicken, add sugar and spices. Cook until smooth and thick. Pour into sterilized jars and seal while hot.

End-of-the-Garden Pickles.

1 cup sliced cucumbers
1 cup chopped sweet peppers
1 cup chopped cabbage
1 cup sliced onions
1 cup chopped green tomatoes
1 cup chopped carrots
1 cup green beans, cut into 1-inch pieces
2 tablespoons mustard seed
1 tablespoon celery seed
1 cup chopped celery
2 cups vinegar
2 cups sugar
2 tablespoons turmeric

Soak cucumbers, peppers, cabbage, onions and tomatoes in salt water (1/2 cup salt to 2 quarts water) overnight. Drain. Cook the carrots and string beans in boiling water until tender. Drain well. Mix soaked and cooked vegetables with remaining ingredients and boil for 10 minutes. Pack into sterilized jars and seal.

New Dishwashers, Roasters, Lights Help Solve Homemaker's Problems

By MARION NATKINS

Soon to appear on the market is an automatic washer that will solve many laundry problems. A new principle of water action is used, whereby a full load of clothes is turbulently oscillated 144 times a minute, continuously submerged in the water. Another new feature removes the soap and dry-dumps the garments, eliminating need for ringers. This washer can be used as fully automatic in homes that do not have water heaters.

An unusual charcoal broiler resembles a Caribbean fire pot used by natives of the West Indies. The small, lightweight grill is made for broiling steaks, chops, game or fish.

A new home freezer incorporates handy counter space. An adjustable drop-leaf seats two people for dining or may be used as a work bench. Heat from the motor is conducted to a defrosting tray to speed thawing out food in preparation for use.

Consolidated Features—WNU Release.

Household Hints

Get more servings from your meat roast by cooking slowly at a low temperature.

Use a large piece of glass as a backplash for a washstand or sink. Have an ordinary piece of glass cut to the desired size and secure it to the wall with L-shaped screws. The glass will be easy to clean and look rather on diletto.

Delicate fabrics, such as organza and fine voiles, can be restored to their original crispness with gelatin. To do this, dissolve a teaspoon of plain gelatin in a quart of boiling water. Strain the solution and use as you would boiled starch.

To prevent cake frosting from breaking when cut, beat a teaspoonful of vinegar into it when the flavoring is added.

Save a scrap of wool from the material of the suit you are making and turn it into a bracelet handbag. These carry-all purses hang from the arm and are simple to make.

COUNTY AGENT NEWS NOTES

PAVED BARNYARD AIDS QUALITY MILK PROGRAM

Concrete paving in the barnyard is a valuable aid to quality milk production.

Because cement, sand and gravel are available at this time when many other building materials cannot be obtained, dairymen who wish to improve their farm dairy plant will find this fall an ideal time to start a barnyard paving program. Where a large area is to be paved, the program can be spread out over a period of two or three years, making it possible to do the job in spare time.

The first cost of concrete paving may be a little higher than gravel or crushed stone surfacing, but because of its permanence it will prove cheaper in the long run.

A sixth of America's farm tree planting last year was done in Wisconsin. This state led the nation.
