Haack Resigns as Law Enforcement Officer

"Eddie" Haack, who has served as full time traffic and law enforcement officer for the village of Kewaskum since June of last year, has resigned his position to take over operation of a service station in West Bend. His resignation became effective on March 1. However, "Eddie" has consented to continue to serve as part time police officer for the village until such time as a full time man is engaged by the village board.

Sum of $17,000 Raised Toward Hospital Goal

The sum of $17,000 has been raised up to Wednesday morning towards the goal of $100,000 to equip the sisters of St. Joseph's Community hospital, West Bend, pay for and equip a newly built wing that provides for the people of this area of the county a modern hospital second to none in a community this size in the entire state.

Floral, Gift Shoppe to be Opened Here

A floral and pottery gift shoppe will be opened in the near future in the Kippenhan store, opposite the Kewaskum post office, by Miss Lois Zanow. Miss Zanow is a graduate of our local high school, class of 1945. She attended Valparaiso university, Valparaiso, Ind., for one year and then enrolled and graduated from the Tommy Bright School of Floral Design, Chicago, Ill. Since last November she was employed by the Alice Floral Shoppe of West Bend. Her many friends of Kewaskum and vicinity will be pleased to know that she is opening her own floral shoppe in Kewaskum.

John Weddig, Veteran, Well Known Man Dies

John Weddig, aged 76, popular, widely known Kewaskum resident, a veteran of the Spanish-American War, and former village official, passed away at the Veterans' hospital at Wood, Wis., on Saturday morning, March 1. Although he had not been well for several months, Mr. Weddig was not a man to complain and was able to be up and around until five weeks ago, when he went to the hospital at Wood. He submitted to medical treatment and a week later was operated. He failed to rally after his operation and slowly grew weaker. Death was attributed to carcinoma.

Over $5,000 Raised in March of Dimes

Kewaskum Does Splendid Job, Chapter Among Highest in State. Over $5,000 from the 1947 March of Dimes, the largest ever raised in north Washington county to combat polio, has been turned in to the treasury of local chapter of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, B. DO YOU WANT AN ORCHARD PRUNING DEMONSTRATION?

The agricultural extension office can take on a limited number of orchards for pruning demonstrations. We would like an orchard that has both young and old fruit trees in it. We would also, if possible, like to show how grapevines and bush fruit, such as gooseberries and currants, can be pruned. Any farmer wishing to have a pruning demonstration would be expected to invite in at least ten neighbors to observe and help with the demonstration.

FARM CHIMNEY FIRE

The Kewaskum fire department answered a call to the John Heisdorf farm in the town of Kewaskum Saturday morning. A threatening chimney fire was the reason for the call. Firemen put out the fire with no damage resulting.

Fete Recalls Strides in Telephony

Bell's Varied Achievements Revealed During Centenary

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON. — Everybody has been talking telephones because of the well-publicized Alexander Graham Bell centenary. Reading the pounds of publicity, I learned more about Alexander Graham Bell than I ever knew before. I had read of how he dreamed of making the telegraph instrument "talk" and how and why his dream came true. I didn't know about his father's deep study of phonetics and his own interest in "making speech visible," in teaching the deaf to talk, or that he was an accomplished musician or many other facets of this remarkable man's remarkable history.

I already knew a little about the telephone business from first hand observation.

It was just about 20 years before I ever used a telephone that Bell, thanks to his harmonically trained ear, found on that day in 1875 that what he thought could be done, had been achieved in his own laboratory on Court street, Boston. From then on it was just a question of removing "the bugs." The next year he was demonstrating his instrument before audiences with conversations over several miles of wire. Before he died at the age of 75, people were talking over an underwater cable from the United States to Cuba.

I doubt if the great inventor were to return to earth today he would be greatly surprised at the strides in telephony which have been made since his death, great as they have been. He may not have considered, however, one of the temporary problems (electrolysis) which created many a headache for the telephone companies and which helped, indirectly, to provide the writer of this column (who was to be a future extensive user of telephone facilities) with a part of his education.

A study of Alexander Graham Bell in later life shows how he spent many hundred "man-hours" of his time—tabulating statistics concerning the deaf. At one time he produced a "Memoir Upon the Formation of a Deaf Variety of the Human Race."

To explain the above remark:

(1) 150,000 miles of program transmission circuits now are provided by the Bell system for use of radio networks. (It's "wireless" to your home from your radio station, but it's "wired" between stations.)

(2) The writer has been using a lot of these circuits five days a week for most of the last 14 years.

(3) He worked two college vacations as "electrolysis inspector" for the telephone company.

To explain further:

(1) You know how electroplating is done? The object—say it's a spoon—is to be plated is suspended in a "bath" containing the material with which the spoon is to be plated. An electric current is passed through the substance in the bath into the spoon. The substance follows the current as far as it can, which is the surface of the spoon. Anyhow it moves.

(2) You've seen the lead-sheathed cables containing telephone wires being pushed through the manhole into conduits that lie under the pavement. The sheath on the cable protects the insulated wires that carry the current which rings your phone bell and carries your voice.

(3) But other electric currents get loose and run all over the place. You'd be surprised but almost every foot of earth or anything that will conduct an electric current in a city has some electricity flowing through it. When the power companies were careless about preventing leaks in their wires it was worse. Stray currents left power wires or the rails of electric railways and took a short cut back to the power house.

(4) Wherever they found a good conductor like a lead cable that was like thumbing a ride for the wandering volts and amperes. So far so good. But eventually they had to leave the cable, to find their way to a better conductor or just to say "so long" and struggle back to the dynamo.

(5) When they did that, "electrolytic action" set in. The lead in the cable sheath followed the current as far as it could (like the substance in the bath) and left the sheath porous. Dampness and destruction came in and soon your telephone line was out of order.

My job consisted of sitting by the hour watching the face of an ammeter (which registers the direction and flow of electric current) and discovering where the current was escaping. Then I had to get the power company to do what it could to stop leaks and the telephone company did all it could to keep stray current out or to provide a safe exit for what got in.

In the process I learned much more than I needed—not much about electrical engineering but I had a fine worm's-eye view of several Middle Western cities—bird's-eye views, too, for I worked in cable boxes up on poles, as well as down in manholes, and also learned that it isn't only newspapermen who "meet so many interesting people."

When I ponder on my electrolytic age and also when I "address the mike" Mondays through Fridays now, I am deeply and doubly grateful to Alexander Graham Bell.

Jones Finally Gets Birthday

One day recently I received a telephone call from my friend Capt. E. John Long, USNR, who is assistant curator of the United States naval museum at Annapolis. I detected exultation in his voice and, sure enough, when I joined him at the club he was wearing that "Eureka-I have found it!" expression which blooms only on the face of a Bell discovering the telephone, a Lord Carnarvon (and-or) Howard Carter exclaiming as he leans over the mummy-case: "King Tut, I presume?"—or possibly you or I when we finally get a firm hold on the end of our vanished pajama cord.

What happened to Long was comparable. He had received the confirmation by his chief, Capt. H. A. Baldridge, chief curator, of the long-suspected but never-proved date of birth of John Paul Jones, father of the navy. And it was fortunate he had, for the post office department was demanding it for the next memorial stamp.

Baldridge already had a letter of Jones' containing this sentence: "America has been the country of my fond election from the age of 13." Since it was known he sailed from Whitehaven, England, in 1780 that would make the birth date (1780 minus 13) 1747.

But the birth date was not actually recorded in any authentic writing, not even the early Jones biography by Charles Sands. However, there came into temporary possession of Captain Baldridge a copy of that work, upon whose margins Janette Taylor had written some caustic comment. Miss Taylor was a niece of Jones who had been a close and meticulous student of her uncle's life and many of his papers which she possessed.

One of her holographic statements re the picture of Jones in the frontispiece was this:

BARBS . . . by Baukhage

An Alaskan amphibian wouldn't recognize a Hudson seal if he met him on the Palisades.

A survey of 3,000 G.I.s heads reveals that they come in five sizes, according to the Army Times. That doesn't account for the oversize specimens possessed by some second lieutenants I have known.

" . . . it is even too old, making every allowance for his mode of life, for a just representation of his appearance at the time of his death, he was then only 45 years and 12 days." (His death, 1792, is of record.)

That tied it. No wonder the captains tossed their scrambled eggs in the air like graduating midshipmen. John Paul has an official birthday only two centuries late—and his face on a stamp for a present.

SHORT OF DEMAND

Improved Medical Care Urged

WASHINGTON. — Present-day medical personnel and facilities fall far short of the demand, Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Health Service, declared in calling on congress to provide better medical care for all.

In his annual report on the nation's health, Parran asserted: "We have yet to solve the economic problems of medical care. We have yet to make it possible for everyone, regardless of income, to obtain the basic services needed for protection of his own health and that of his neighbors."

The two major problems confronting public health workers were

NEWS REVIEW

Clash on Budget Looms; Union Merger Advanced

CONGRESS:

Budget Trouble

As in the case of reducing personal income taxes, the Republican congress divided on the extent of slashing President Truman's 1948 budget request of 37.5 billion dollars.

While GOP members in the house led by Representative Taber (Rep., N. Y.) favored a 6 billion dollar cut, senate Republicans led by Senator Taft (Rep., O.) stood out for a 4 1/2 billion dollar decrease. It was expected that a compromise figure of 5 billion would be reached, permitting a 20 per cent income tax reduction and a sizable surplus to be applied against the national debt.

House Republicans charged their senate colleagues with having succumbed to military and naval pressure against substantial reductions in army and navy expenditures.

Declaring there was room for economy "and an end to extravagance" in every federal agency, including the army and navy, they asserted that the services could take a 15 per cent slash in appropriations without hampering national defenses in the slightest.

Taft replied any cut in military appropriations be held to 10 per cent to assure national security and fulfillment of overseas obligations.

LABOR:

Discuss Unity

Divided in 1935 over the issue of vertical (mass) organization of workers, the "House of Labor" was another tortuous step closer to unity with CIO acceptance of an AFL invitation to merge the two great American labor movements with a total membership of over 12 million.

Significantly, John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers, who left the AFL to head the new CIO and then returned to the AFL, was named on the AFL negotiating committee headed by Pres. William Green. Familiar with the mechanics and personalities of both unions, John L. is in a strategic position to pave the way for unification.

Representatives of two former AFL unions were named on the CIO committee led by Pres. Philip Murray. They included Emil Rieve of the Textile Workers and Jacob Patofsky of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. As former units in the AFL, these two CIO unions also can bring their combined experience in both labor movements into the discussions to reach a common ground of agreement.

WHITE HOUSE:

Emergency Ending

Continuing to keep abreast of the GOP, President Truman paved the way for an early end to the national emergency proclaimed in 1939 and extended in 1941.

With the Republican congress bent on restoring normalcy, Mr. Truman again anticipated GOP action by asking the legislators to repeal 24 temporary laws, temporarily extend 12 others, permit another 10 to run out their course, and cut back 12 appropriations.

Among the 24 laws the President tabbed for repeal were those authorizing the secretary of agriculture to buy and distribute food for U. S. territories and possessions; disposal of ships under lend-lease and accumulation of 90 days annual leave for government employees.

Laws which he said should be restricted of active duty of reserves to emergencies; government construction and use of petroleum lines, and temporary maintenance of training on public lands.

Trimming of emergency laws would reduce the President's wartime powers still in effect to those covering the official war period, which will end with ratification of peace treaties.

POTATOES:

Seek to Avert Loss

Seeking to avert the loss of at least 20 million bushels of surplus potatoes taken over by the government in support of the 1946 crop, the department of agriculture offered them to commercial exporters and processors for 5 cents a hundred pounds. The support price was $2.20.

The department's latest offer compared with a price of 35 cents previously set for export sale. Because of the low food value of potatoes, their perishability and high handling costs, foreign governments have preferred to purchase more nutritious and less cumbersome supplies of grain.

Inasmuch as they can buy wheat flour at five to six cents a pound, the foreign governments also have been hesitant about paying 15 to 20 cents a pound for dehydrating potatoes. Sale of the potatoes to processors at 5 cents per 100 pounds will bring the price of the dehydrated potatoes down appreciably, providing a stimulus for export.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring readers this column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. We make direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Subsistence Checks

As a result of thousands of complaints received by Veterans' administration concerning delays in receiving subsistence checks by veterans in school, VA is urging both the veterans and the schools to give better cooperation with the administration as preparations are made for second semester enrollment throughout the country.

Here are some reasons why subsistence checks fail to arrive or are delayed.

1—Veterans fail to report changes in address when they move, so checks are automatically returned to the Veterans' Bureau there. Government checks never are forwarded by post offices.

2—VA receives incomplete information from the school or the veteran. Subsistence checks must be delayed until complete facts are obtained about marriage status, wages, date of enrollment and other conditions are reported.

3—Schools may delay payments by being slow in sending in necessary papers. Last large midwestern university last fall waited until six weeks after enrollments to give VA necessary papers to pay 450 veterans.

4—Veterans transfer from a school in one regional office area to one in a different jurisdiction so delay is unavoidable while VA records are transferred. Early in January about 50,000 veterans in school more than 30 days had not received subsistence checks. Many were in schools not yet approved by the state for training under the G.I. bill and thus were not eligible for subsistence allowance.

Questions and Answers

Q. About a year ago I was informed that all interest charged by the government on loans of World War I veterans' bonus money would be paid back to each veteran who borrowed on his bonus. Eight per cent interest was charged by the government on these loans. Is it true that it is to be repaid?—E. W., North Kansas City, Mo.

A. It would depend upon your status and under what circumstances you received your bonus or loan. Veterans' administration informs me that all World War I veterans with the exception of less than a dozen who were entitled to rebates have been notified and paid. If you did not receive a notification, likely you are not entitled to any repayment, or if you received your money in adjusted service bonds, you are not entitled to reimbursement. However, to be sure, suggest that you write to Mrs. E. M. Robinson, chief, Adjusted Compensation Section, Finance Division, Veterans Administration, Room 4346 Munitions Building, Washington, D. C.

Q. I would like information for two children of a veteran of World War I in regard to their being heirs to a grandfather's estate. Several years ago a childless couple adopted a boy. Later he married and had two children. The grandmother died and within two years the father and mother of these children died. That was in 1942 and two years later the grandfather died in an insane asylum. Have the children of an adopted son the right to the grandfather's property, the same as if it were his own child's children?—C. C. Peawake, Wis.

A. With reference to all veterans' affairs, adopted children are regarded as having the same rights as own children. However, in your case, with reference to an estate, suggest that you consult an attorney.

Q. My husband filed application for his terminal leave pay in August, 1946. He received a card saying his claim had been received and filed. He hasn't heard anything since then. Should he write again? The card said the claim was in order and would be received as soon as possible.—Mrs. R. H. B., Charlottesville, Va.

A. It would do little good to write since everything seems to be in order and your husband will receive his bonds and cash as soon as the claim can be processed. However, if you desire to write, send your inquiry to the same finance office to which you made your original claim.

Q. My husband has a breaking-out on his feet that he got when he went to doctors for it and it seems they do him no good. My husband was discharged in March, 1946. Is there anything he can do about it?—F. S., Frost, La.

A. As I understand your letter, your husband is a veteran. If so, it is suggested that he contact the nearest office of Veterans' administration. They will advise him what can be done, or you might have him contact his local Red Cross chapter or any veterans' organization in your city, such as American Legion.

Q. A brother of mine who passed away in May, 1922, was a soldier at Camp Meade at Baltimore, Md. I would like to know where to receive information on obtaining a headstone. To whom shall I write?—Mrs. E. S. W., Norwood, Ohio.

A. Write to the Office of Quartermaster General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C.

Q. The army loses some of my bonds. I would like to know where I could get help.—W. R. B., Miller, S. D.

A. Write to War Bond Division, U. S. Army, 4200 Goodfellow Blvd., St. Louis 20, Mo.

Keep Potholders Near

There should be a good supply of dry potholders near the range for handling hot utensils and pecking into the oven. Remember, too, that the cover of a utensil should be lifted away from you for protection against steam.

Satisfied Everybody

Richard Heber, English book-collector, was never satisfied with a single copy of a book. He maintained: "No gentleman can be without three copies of a book, one for show, one for use, and one for borrowers."

Corn Protein

Corn protein, comprising about 10 per cent of the dry substance of native corn, is now being put to many new uses, although until recently its sole market was as stock feed.

Nylon Family

The word nylon is a generic term and not a trademark. Like "wood" or "glass," it designates a family of related compounds, which may vary as to properties, form or use.

Horses' Legs Lock

Horses can sleep standing up because their legs are provided with muscular mechanism which causes them to lock, making a horse stand as if he were on stilts.

Honey Sources

The major honey sources for the California bee industry are confined to the plants of only eight of the 120 plant families listed for the state.

Watering Plants

Watering newly set plants helps to bring the soil in close contact with the roots and gives the plants a better chance to live and grow.

Milking Machines

Experimentation has shown that an average milking time of three minutes is sufficient with mechanical equipment.

Turkey Eggs

Turkey eggs taste just as good and are just as good as chicken eggs, though the consuming public generally does not realize this. They have no off-flavor as compared with chicken eggs and they are somewhat larger.

Some Snakes Slow

Snakes cannot travel as fast as some people suspect. One species of king snake has a maximum speed of 72 miles an hour, a bull snake 1.4 miles an hour and the race racer of California 3.60 miles an hour.

Research Projects

The annual expenditure for research projects in this country is estimated at $500,000,000. The chemical pharmaceutical and petroleum industries lead in the volume of research.

Hands Need Care

During the winter months, hands need special care to keep them soft and attractive looking. Improperly washing and drying your hands is often a cause of chapping.

Used Fans at Bites

Fans were used in religious ceremonies by the Christian church during the Middle Ages. Deacons waved them to drive flies and insects from the sacramental vessels.

More Vitamins

The average yield of vitamins is greater in cabbage harvested in November than in cabbage harvested in May, according to recent tests.

Cracked Dishes

Handle cups with care to prevent chipping and cracking. After dishes are cracked and the glaze is off they are not sanitary.

Cold Waves

Cold waves probably account for approximately $400,000,000 of the two billion dollar a year bill for beauty.

LAST LOVER

By Helen Topping Miller

Jill McFarlane, whose father, Richard, disappeared in World War I, falls in love with Lieut. Spang Gordon. She is upset to find that her brother, Ric, has fallen in love with Sandra Calvert, a divorcee. During her absence,

Richard returns from the dead and visits her mother, Julia. He is using the assumed name of Captain Mackey and is stationed at the same camp as Ric. Julia is heart sick. Richard tells Ric he knew his father in France, and later threatens Sandra with exposure of an illegal divorce if she doesn't leave Ric alone. Julia, her father-in-law, John I., and Jill are horrified when they get a letter from Ric announcing his marriage. Sandra will live with them.

CHAPTER XV

Julia said, "Jill—think. Ric is going out to fight, for us. If he loved this woman enough to marry her, the least we can do for Ric is to make her welcome."

Jill's face was stony. "I love Ric. He's my brother. But when he sends a female tramp here to live with his mother it's too much!"

John I. had come bumping up behind them. "Confounded young puppy!" he snorted. "He's got about as much use for a wife as I have."

"It's this war. It's that feeling of desperate haste they all have that they must crowd a lifetime of living into a few weeks or a few days," Julia said. "She can't be the dreadful creature that Jill thinks she is, she wouldn't have appealed to Ric."

"I saw her, I tell you! I had lunch with her."

"Why doesn't he send her to her own people?" John I. wondered. "Probably she hasn't any. Probably they threw her out, long ago. If you're going to take me to town, Dooley, we'd better go. The telegraph office closes at nine."

"Go up and put on something else then. You certainly can't go to town in a negligee and nothing much under it. Tell Marie to help you with the zippers. I'm still shaking all over."

Julia dropped on the long seat in the hall. Every inch of her body was cramped and cold. Her throat ached intolerably.

She said, "Should I have told Richard about Ric, John I.? After all, Richard is his father. He might have found an opportunity to talk to Ric. He might have saved him from this folly."

"They're both soldiers. Soldiers go where they're sent. Richard may be in Africa by this time."

"John I., I can't bring myself to turn Ric's wife away from his home! Where would I have been in that other war if you had cast me off?"

"It was you took me in, Dooley. I was a homeless old man, living in a hotel."

"You took care of us for years, till we could make this place pay. Perhaps this is the way I must pay back to pass that help along. I wish I could change Jill's attitude. She's so determined when she's angry and upset."

John I. lit his pipe, puffed it slowly. "You and I aren't so young any more, Dooley. You're young, compared to me, but you've lived long enough to know that things pass. Maybe she won't like it here. He chuckled. "Could he she wouldn't like it here at all. You just relax some ways, and get tough other ways. Keep a strangle-hold on your money. Ric's done a lot of bragging about his family, like as not, and she thinks you're a wealthy woman. Well, don't be wealthy when she's around."

"How can I be wealthy, when we both know that if they put low ceiling prices on hogs this year, we won't make a penny? I've been so relieved that Ric and Jill were through with college, this year, and that if we made any money at all we might get a little put away against the hard year that's ahead of us."

"If she does come—if Jill doesn't head her off, for up on your dearest clothes and get her up at six o'clock in the morning. Tell Marie to churn all the cream, and we'll live on country victuals—turnips will be ready soon, I looked at them today. I can be plenty tiresome, too, if I put my mind on it. Any old man gets to be windy. I'll talk her to death."

A Phone Call
From Richard
"John I., you're priceless!" Julia smiled again, reached for his hand, as Jill came pelting down the stairs.

"Ready?" Julia said. "I still don't approve of this, remember, Jill."

"It's my responsibility, Dooley. I'll sign my own name to the wire. I won't even sign it 'Julia.' She might think you sent it."

"I'll get the keys," Julia got up slowly. And just then the telephone rang sharply and long.

"I'll get it," Jill sprang to the receiver. Then she turned back with an odd look. "It's long distance—calling you, Dooley. Maybe she isn't coming after all."

"It could be Ric, Jill. I can't say cruel things to Ric—I can't!" She sat down at the instrument. She said, "Hello, yes, this is Mrs. Richard McFarlane," and instantly all the color drained out of her face, and the receiver trembled in her hand.

The voice that came over the wire said, "Dooley, is that you?"

Richard! Richard was calling, and she could not let Jill know. She said, "Yes, this is Mrs. McFarlane," stiffly, formally.

Richard's voice came again. "Dooley, I've seen the boy. He didn't know me, of course. I haven't told him anything. You've heard from him, today?"

"Yes," she had to hold her lips stiff. She had her face calm because John I. and Jill were watching her. "Yes, Captain, I heard from him today. He told me that he had been married."

"That's why I'm calling you, Dooley. I wanted you to know that I did everything I could. As soon as I suspected that he had this reckless marriage in mind, I had him up before the board and arranged for his immediate transfer, but I was too late."

"It's an impossible marriage, you think?"

"Oh, Richard, Richard, why are you talking like this? We're Ric's father and mother! And we must speak to each other like formal strangers!"

But a little warmth lightened her wretchedness. Richard had tried to save Ric. Richard had not betrayed himself. It helped a little to be able to believe again in some small nobility in Richard.

Richard said, "It's a rotten marriage. She won't do, Dooley. She's no good. I knew her in the islands. I don't know just what I can do, but I'm going to try to do something."

"But, she's coming here. That was in the letter."

"Dooley, do the best you can for the present, will you? And trust me? I know I haven't the right to ask it, but I'm going to try to do something about this. Yes, she's coming there. She's already on the way."

"Then I suppose there's nothing we can do? But thank you so much for calling me 'Captain.' She wanted to cry, 'Thank you, Richard! Thank you for trying to be a father to your son at last!' But Jill was listening. Jill must not suspect."

Richard said, "Wait, Dooley. I just wanted to tell you. Don't worry. He'll be all right. He's a fine looking boy. He's like you. He isn't going to be like his father. He'll outgrow this foolishness."

"Oh, I hope so!" She said. "Good-by," almost in a gasp, and hung up. She turned to the others. "There's

"I can't spare Jill to the WAVES. I need all the help I can get at Buz-zard's Hill."

"Isn't it ghastly? My yard man went to a defense plant, and he's the only one that knows what to do about the rhododendrons."

She had got Ric's room ready that morning. She had impressed upon Marie that Mrs. Richard McFarlane, Jr. would be tired when she arrived, and it would be kinder not to cook cabbage or anything else that smelled up the house. She had talked to John I.

"If she should turn out to be a nice person, John I., do try to restrain Jill a little, will you? I do hope we can meet this situation as nice people."

"Jill and I will be so nice you'll admire us," the old man promised. "Only don't you get in our way."

"But you won't be rude and inhospitable? Remember we're doing it for Ric."

"I'll be so hospitable and full of fancy manners you won't know me."

That smudge of smoke down the shimmering V of the rails, was it another cloud that would be darkly over her heart? She walked out to the track. She set her face in her best imitation of a welcoming smile. She had on her everyday brown felt hat and a linen dress that felt too warm over her arms.

"Don't you dare dress up, Dooley," Jill had warned.

And Julia had countered, dryly, "You're still here, Jill? I thought you were leaving us forever, if Ric's wife entered this house?"

"I decided that it would be criminal to desert you. You're such a softy, Dooley, that you'd let her walk all over you," Jill said. "I'll give her two weeks. But if she's still hanging around after that, I may go to Washington and get my Boots Palmer named a congressman."

"All right, Jill. But try to be a lady for those two weeks. After that I won't raise any objection, whatever you want to do."

Perhaps, Julia was thinking as she watched the engine thunder toward her, Sandra wasn't too happy either. Perhaps she had let love rush her off her feet, and now she was being shifted off on people she did not know, whom she might suspect did not want her. But would a woman who had been married before be swept off her feet by a boy? Jill could be wrong after all. This might be a girl whom Ric had met later. She held to that hope till the train ground to a stop, then surrendered it, resignedly.

Sandra Arrives At the Farm

That had to be Sandra getting off. Julia's heart gave a sick flop. Small, blonde, no girl for all the soft curls, the delicate make-up. The face under the clever hat had been written upon grimly and a bit cruelly by life. The eyes, so skillfully shadowed and masked, had seen too much, and now they were guarded, ready to melt or turn to stone.

Julia went forward. "You must be Sandra? I'm Richard's mother."

She felt that slow blue gaze travel over her, moving anxiously, but the voice, too young and limpid for that throat, cried, "How nice of you! I was afraid you might not get my telegram."

"It came this morning. I'll have some one see to your bags. Are all these yours?"

"They do look a frightful lot, don't they? That's because since the war began I've had no real home. I've lived in a trunk. I have a trunk, too. Do you think it could be here?"

"We'll ask." Moving across the platform, Julia felt the impact of watching eyes upon her. The eyes of women she knew well, women who knew to a day how old Ric was, and she knew that they were seeing, too, with pitiless, female clarity, that for all the illusion of youth Sandra Calvert had achieved, artifice had put up a losing battle with time. It would be all over town in no time that Ric McFarlane had married a peroxidized old hag, she was certain.

She said, "I'm so sorry we have to take you out in the station-wagon, but we've put up the cars for the duration."

not escape her lips. Because her ears were hearing Richard's voice again, calling to the old ache within her, teaching that old tenderness that had never melted.

"Dooley, trust me!"

(Oh, Richard, Richard, why did you come now, so tragically too late? When he needed you, when he was little, when I was so alone, where were you then, Richard? He had no father to teach him honor, no one to teach him to be strong. Now it's too late, Richard, forever too late!)

It was with trepidation that Julia met the train next afternoon. That the small town grape-vine had been busy was evidenced by the numbers of people who had also decided to meet the train. She greeted a dozen old friends, who restrained their curiosity behind a front of sweetly casual courtesy.

"Richard, Jr. coming home, Julia?"

"No, I'm meeting his wife. We're having a new war bride in our family."

"How romantic! And so nice for Jill, too. These young girls are really pathetic, aren't they, these days? My Betty practically drives me insane. I'd be happy if she'd join the WAVES or something."

"I can't spare Jill to the WAVES. I need all the help I can get at Buz-zard's Hill."

"Isn't it ghastly? My yard man went to a defense plant, and he's the only one that knows what to do about the rhododendrons."

Lenten Specials

Many of us never investigate the possibilities of delectable fish dinners until the Lenten season. I can't help thinking this is a pity because fish is a source of such easily digested proteins and is especially rich in vitamins and minerals.

Fish is tender and requires little cooking. It can be prepared easily even by the amateur cook if she just follows some simple directions.

For the more experienced cook, there is a wealth of fish dishes, many of them coming in two types: eggs, for extra deliciousness. She can get an amazing variety into the diet simply by experimenting with the delightful variety in fish cookery.

Baked Red Snapper Marguery. (Serves 8 to 10)
2 pound red snapper
2 pounds boiled shrimp, chopped
1/2 pound American cheese, grated
1 cup white sauce
3/4 hard-cooked eggs
1/2 cup cooked mushrooms
1/2 teaspoon chopped oysters or truffles

Boil fish until tender and separate from bones into large pieces. Place one half of fish in buttered or oiled casserole, cover with one-half the eggs, shrimp, mushrooms and oysters. Repeat, then pour white sauce over all. Bake 30 minutes in a moderate (350-degree) oven. Any boiled or leftover fish may be used in place of the red snapper.

Sizzlin' Fish Steaks. (Serves 8 to 10)
4 pounds frozen or fresh halibut, salmon or swordfish
1/2 cup diced bacon
1/2 cup rich cream
1/2 cup pepper
1/4 teaspoon garlic or onion salt

Allow steaks to thaw, if frozen. Dip in seasoned milk, then in bread crumbs. Place in a pan with diced bacon on top of fish. Cook in a very hot (450-degree) oven for 30 minutes, until browned nicely. Transfer to heated metal platter which has been sprinkled with water. Serve immediately while sizzling.

Fish With Mushrooms. (Serves 4)
2 cups cooked fish, flaked
1 cup medium thick white sauce
2 tablespoons butter or bacon fat
1/2 cup water
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 pound mushrooms
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
Salt, pepper, paprika

Cut and saute mushrooms in butter or bacon fat. Remove mushrooms when cooked and add water, fish, green pepper, lemon juice and seasonings. Combine mushrooms with white sauce. After fish mixture has simmered 5 minutes, add white sauce and transfer mixture to casserole. Dust top with paprika, and bake in a hot (450-degree) oven for 25 minutes.

Cod: Native of the North Atlantic and North Pacific, is in season all year around. This is a lean fish which may weigh from 10 to 100 pounds.

Red Snapper: In season all year, and can be found in South Atlantic and Gulf waters. It is a lean fish, weighing about four pounds on the average.

Butterfish: Found in North Atlantic, in season from April to December. Average weight is one-half pound.

Mackerel: Native of Atlantic, in season from April to November, but also is marketed in frozen form. This is a fat fish, weighing 1 1/2 pounds.

Haddock: Is a lean fish averaging four pounds in weight. Under 2 1/2 pounds, it is marketed as schrod. Native of North Atlantic, in season all year.

Flounder: Includes lemon sole, blackbacks, dabs, yellow tail, etc. A fat fish with lean meat, this averages two pounds and is in season all year. Flounders are well-flavored, economical little fish.

REDUCES PRICES
$50.00!

ALTHOUGH production costs are still high and many of our dealers are still waiting for deliveries, the Sanitary Refrigerator Co. is glad to give this liberal price reduction through their dealers as our mutual contribution towards bringing business back to a normal and stable flow of merchandise at attractive price levels.

WE BELIEVE the pent-up desire for Sanitary Quickfreez represents a steady and long term market, which should be served at a sensible price.

IT IS HOPED that current shortages which now hold back production of Sanitary Quickfreez will soon be a thing of the past so that the increasing production volume during the following months will compensate for this price reduction.

Tiny Adirondack Village Leads In Winter Sport Development

Garnets Glitter Along Ski Trails At North Creek

WNU Features.

NORTH CREEK, N. Y.—Determined to improve the opportunities nature gave it when it placed a 3,000 foot mountain right in its back yard, this tiny Adirondack village, long known as a pioneer in New York state winter sport development, has entered another bid for fame this season. It has installed what the village fathers describe as the first electrically operated Constam T-bar lift in the eastern United States.

The lift pulls skiers up the entire 3,000 foot slope of Gore mountain—a labor saving device that adds immeasurably to enjoyment of the sport and vast popularity to North Creek as a ski center.

The new electric lift is an excellent example of community spirit in operation. Skiing is a community enterprise in the little town of 703 inhabitants, whose pattern of life is tied up with it. When it was decided to put in the new Alpine lift, the money as on previous occasions was raised by the townfolk.

Form First Patrol.

Back of this venture was the recollection of North Creek's record as a winter sports specialist. It was at this little Adirondack town that the first ski patrol in the United States was organized. On Gore mountain's slopes the first down-mountain ski trail in New York state was laid out and this small skiing center was the destination of the first snow train in the state on March 2, 1934. That train, as the villagers recall, came from Schenectady and was planned to handle a crowd of 500—but 700 took the trip.

North Creek also pioneered the famous "Ride Up—Slide Down" slogan, when buses were provided to carry skiers from the bottom of the trails up the winding mountain road, which leads to the noted garnet mines and to the beginning of five well-known trails.

It was this highway that made North Creek the original "down hill" ski center in the East, for it is from the top of the highway that the Gore mountain network of downhill trails radiates.

The combined investment in lift, slopes, hut and other facilities provided by the village entrepreneurs aggregates more than $70,000.

Community Endeavor.

Heading the community development program is the town physician, Dr. James A. Glenn, who is president of Gore Mountain Ski club. The manager of the local woodworking mill, Spencer Johnston, is vice president. Dr. H. I. Braley, the local dentist, is executive member of the club in charge of racing. The lawyer, Philip C. Brassel, the justice of the peace, Kenneth Bennett; and the lumber dealer, William C. Schields, are directors of the Ski Lift corporation, of which the undertaker, Kenneth W. Swain, is president.

At the top of North Creek's "Ride Up—Slide Down" Gore mountain are the leading garnet mines in the country. Garnets shine like red diamonds in the sunlight and the winter sports fan gets an added thrill out of digging small pieces of the colorful stuff from the snow. From a promontory the skier can look down into the mines and across to the sheer rock walls hung with various sized icicles sparkling in the sun. Close by are the high peaks of the Adirondacks, forming a startling panoramic view of mountain grandeur in winter dress. At his feet are the headwaters of the Hudson river.

Maze of Trails.

A city block from the garnet mines is a 1,400-foot long leading to trails rated for the novice, intermediate and expert.

Cloud and Garnet trails, which range the higher slopes on Gore's summit, are expert trails which intermediate skiers can use in the spring's corn snow. North Creek villagers assert that nowhere else can one ski on such a jeweled trail with changing vistas of high mountain peaks.

Skiers have been flocking to North Creek for years for the simple reason that snow lies deep on the slopes and especially on Gore mountain, which rises from the village to an elevation of 3,595 feet. Everything the winter sports fan desires is at North Creek.

Children Get Lessons.

Firm believers in controlled skiing and upholding Otto Schneib's famous statement that "skiing is a way of life," instruction is offered to children from 5 to 18, who gather on the slopes every Friday afternoon to take lessons. Annually there is a children's ski race when the Toppling trophy is in competition.

Special awards are made to winners but North Creek enterprise believes skiing should be encouraged and as a result all contestants win a prize for participation.

The Barton trophy race, sanctioned by USEASA, is held annually on the Garnet trail, a mile long and with a drop of approximately 1,000 feet.

Eighty-six members make up North Creek's ski patrol, which is affiliated with the national ski patrol system, and the ages range from the high school years on up.

Arabia Comes to the Point

Amir Saud, crown prince of Saudi Arabia, presented Harry Truman with a bejeweled sword and dagger as gifts from his father the other day. This puzzles us. We had heard rumors about the quality of those 30-pound turkeys which the White House has received, but we never knew anybody suspected they were that tough.

The President gets a lot of curious presents, but this sword and dagger one gives us pause. If we were a Republican congressman we would feel uneasy. If we were Mrs. Truman we would feel fidgety, too. (In fact even if we were Harry we wouldn't like it.)

This country has had Presidents with whose personalities a sword and dagger might not clash. But Harry is not the type. Even a cloak, sheet or turban wouldn't help matters.

It would be a step from all that to an Arabian horse. After that a President does not belong to the American people. He belongs to the films.

He even lays himself open to becoming a double feature.

Prince Saud in presenting the gifts also handed Harry a letter from his old man, the Imperial Poobah of Saudi Arabia, where the oil comes from. What did the letter say? That's important. Did it contain a set of directions for sword and dagger usage?

Did it open up "Dear Harry: The next paragraph will show you how to attach these implements to Senator Taft's chair?" Was there a postscript "Also mighty handy for use if you travel at all by motor bus or subway?"

Anywhere in the letter were there the words, "Look sharp, act sharp, be sharp!"

In return Prince Saud got an autographed photo of Mr. Truman. It does not seem to us that an autographed photo of the President is quite in the mood in such an exchange. If we were the President's secretary we would throw in a lariat and a branding iron, or something.

On the level, Harry, whatever gonna do with the sword and dagger anyhow?

You can't slash a man's tax with either. Joe Martin is wearing a suit of armor these days.

Back Home Stuff

Tom Edison's anniversary stirred up a boyhood memory of the kerosene lamp. Our boyhood home had gas (the quarter meter), but Grandmother Johnson's house at 84 Sylvan avenue back home had no such luxury. She used kerosene lamps and they were things of delicate beauty. We can see her now, trimming the wicks, shining the chimneys and cleaning up the china shades which seemed to us to be pretty wonderful. Once in a while she would send us to Lutz's grocery for a can of kerosene. We remember that Lutz would always slam a potato over the spout as a sort of cork. At our house when the quarter meter came in, dad had a tendency to expect too much of two-bits and every once in a while at dinner the light would begin to fade, bringing cries of "Quick! Who's got a quarter in change?"

The kick after touchdown is not going to be the same play in football under the new rules. If blocked, the ball is to become dead. Thus one of the most stirring moments in football is to be blitted. The blocked kick, the scramble for the ball, the breathless uncertainty for a few seconds and then, perhaps, a kid breaking from the pack to score a long run . . . oh, man! The game is being steadily modified to a point where it is more fun watching the cheer leaders.

CAN YOU REMEMBER—

Away back when the only thing that annoyed you on the radio was the static?

Artur Rodzinski, former conductor of the New York Philharmonic, has gone to the Chicago Symphony. Rodzinski asked for and was given his outright release by the New York club, but we think if it had been smart it could have had a large cash sum, six outfield violinists and a couple of southpaw oboe players for him.

The new magazine "47," just out, is owned by its writers and artists. We look for a lot of fun the day the authors and illustrators confer with the operators on the matter of bigger checks.

BOTH MANAGEMENT, LABOR FEAR TREND TO SOCIALISM

WASHINGTON. — Unions and management agreed a few days back the trend of this nation is toward socialism—a rather startling agreement—although no notice was paid it. Perhaps one reason this cheerless foreboding drew bare public mention was that AFL's Bill Green did not send around a copy of his speech to the publicists, as he usually does. What he said was: Toryism is driving unions to the left; the threatened union reform legislation is being pressed as a stratagem of the Tories to destroy the unions. Pointing to the rise of the union socialist government in England, Green asked: "Do you doubt that the same thing could happen here? Is it inconceivable that union workers might be driven to the same course under similar provocation?"

This springly reported speech was, in a sense, a challenge flung at President Wilson of General Motors. Wilson had said earlier in a political-economic analysis, which should be read by all students of the subject in full: "The attack on profits is really an attempt to substitute state socialism or communism for free competitive and capitalistic system." He claimed union leftists were forcing us toward a system imported from east of the Rhine, or even from England, installing the state as God and government.

Here was considerable agreement as to the facts. They both say the unions are forcing us to the political and economic bankruptcy of the backward nations. Green excuses this by blaming it on what he calls toryism (a word imported from England). Furthermore, both seem agreed neither wants to go where we are being pushed.

USED AS THREAT

Behind this, of course, is Green's desire to threaten management with socialism so it will ease down in current dominant demands for union reform. Similarly, management wants to threaten socialism to scare labor into a cooperative peace for production. But if they are talking in this way for propaganda purposes, both also are telling the truth.

What neither Green nor Wilson reported was that socialism has decayed and been corrupted by communism throughout the world in the past few months. The trend of socialism, I would say, is toward communism, or a more accurate way to put it is that the Communists are using the Socialists for their own revolutionary advantage. This was not true earlier in the postwar era. The Socialists knew and hated the Communists better than did we who are living in a democracy. Since then the Socialists have become mere dupes for the Communists in France, and other continental countries.

In Britain, union socialism has taken the bankruptcy of that nation into a union receivership, which cannot even produce enough goods to sustain itself. Everyone knows about the coal shortage situation, but few realize the same condition applies to other British goods and services. Coal is the biggest natural product of Britain, used for export to acquire import food. Lately Britain has not been able to produce enough coal to keep itself warm.

Union Socialism in Britain has paid the people's money for industries, piling more debt atop the war debt, and as it naturally must grant concessions to the unions in wages, hours and working conditions, it cannot operate to produce enough.

INCENTIVE LACKING

This is natural because a union miner, given added pay, shorter hours and less work, can hardly be expected to break his back in an idealistic endeavor to keep the nation warm. Furthermore, in the midst of the Union Socialist party there has arisen a secret bloc favorable to the Moscow foreign policy, or at least anti-American. Anyone with half an eye clear can see where England is going, down, down, down. Churchill once said socialism would have to become a dictatorship like Moscow to force the union men to work, a campaign remark for which he received the counterpart of a tomato in the face. Wilson now says the same thing from his objective perch.

Now Green seems to realize how bad socialism would be for American labor. The Standard of living of the British Union people is very low as compared with this country — and it is even lower in France. Socialism would force our wage level down to the declining receipts which socialism provides. Profits are due to the energy of both labor and management, and socialism does not generate energy in either, because it does not carry a reward for effort.

Socialism instead tends to breed down the volume of production, as can be seen in England, and so there is less for the wage earner and manager to divide between themselves. These things Green must realize. But he has not yet come to the further inevitable realization that the way to beat socialism is to make capitalism work, to produce more in this goods-scarce era, to cut taxes, yes, to promote even profits so the wage earner can get more—a course opposite the one he has been following. It is not yet too late for him to change.

Progress in Telephone Service Related

WNU Features.

"The proprietors of the telephone, the invention of Alexander Graham Bell, for which patents have been issued by the United States and Great Britain, are now prepared to furnish telephones for the transmission of articulate speech through instruments not more than 20 miles apart. Conversation can be easily carried on after slight practice and with the occasional repetition of a word or sentence. On first listening to the telephone, though the sound is perfectly audible, the articulation seems to be indistinct; but after a few trials the ear becomes accustomed to the peculiar sound and finds little difficulty in understanding the words."

That picture of the telephone, as depicted in the first telephone advertisement of May, 1877, represents a marked contrast to the instrument of today.

The advertisement is recalled in connection with the observance of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, on March 3, 1847.

Although born in Edinburgh, Scotland, Bell was an American by choice, coming to Boston at the age of 24 to teach the use of "visible speech," developed by his father for training the deaf to speak.

A deep and scientific interest in the mechanics of speech, an inventive streak and the challenge of making the telegraph "talk" led to his experiments which produced the telephone. On June 2, 1875, he first succeeded in transmitting sound over a wire and one of his experimental telephones transmitted the first complete sentence on March 10, 1876, just a week after his 29th birthday anniversary.

In addition to being a great scientist, Bell was a man of remarkable vision, which led him only two years after the telephone was invented to foresee the day "when a man in one part of the country may communicate by word of mouth with another in a distant place."

The fulfillment of that prediction has revolutionized communication in the United States and throughout the world. Progress has continued uninterruptedly ever since Bell created the telephone. In the United States alone, there are now more than 32 million telephones in use, more than double the number in 1940. Since V-J Day four and a half million instruments have been installed.

A major phase of the telephone company's postwar program is to extend and improve farm telephone service. The telephone, it is pointed out, always has been the farmer's "good friend and loyal assistant"—in business, in time of sickness or emergency, or as a means of keeping in touch with relatives and friends.

These benefits will be extended to more rural families under the 100 million dollar rural expansion program with its objective of a million more farm telephones.

RECOGNIZE THIS? . . . This scene of a pioneer rural home shows what the farm telephone looked like in 1914. Long recognized as a boon to farm areas, telephone service will be extended and improved throughout rural United States during the postwar period.

House Sprouts Hidden Cash after Storm Victims Leave

DE FOREST, WIS. — Although Mrs. Clement Wolfe doesn't believe in fairies, she insists that she has been finding money under a pillow, in pairs, then in carloads, finally in busloads. When the house started filling up, Mrs. Wolfe was glad she had just brought five leaves of bread from town. She also had several pairs of eggs she had been unable to send to market and she served them—fried, scrambled, boiled and secreted by more than 60 unexpected guests who spent from two to three days with her during a storm.

The guests started coming in pairs, then in carloads, finally in busloads. When the house started filling up, Mrs. Wolfe was glad she had just brought five leaves of bread from town. She also had several pairs of eggs she had been unable to send to market and she served them—fried, scrambled, boiled and poached. It wasn't long, however, before only crackers and mayonnaise were left.

Two of the guests struggled two miles to the village, carrying back all the food they could. By that time Mrs. Wolfe was re-using coffee grounds.

By noon of the third day everyone had been rescued—after the mayonnaise had given out and Mrs. Wolfe was passing out dry crackers.

Ear Scrubbers Gain In Colorado School

DENVER, COLO.—The childhood habit of neglecting to scrub behind the ears no longer worries Denver teachers. Youngsters, they report, are using nearly double the amount of soap in school washrooms. The sudden urge for cleanliness probably was inspired by the polio epidemic last fall. Good scrubbing is a "major safeguard against polio, the children were told.

Two Apples a Day Keep Children Away

ANDREWS, IND.—To protect their apple crop, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Keefer have an unwritten agreement with the 320 pupils in Dallas township school, which is adjacent to their three-acre orchard. The Keefers put out a basket of apples daily and each student is permitted two apples a day. In return, the children agree to stay out of the orchard and not to shake the trees.

KEWASKUM HIGHLIGHTS

GIRLS' CHORUS ELECTS

At the beginning of the second semester, the number of girls in the regular chorus was comparatively small. At Miss Kohlbeck's request, many girls volunteered to join, bringing the number to seventeen.

Last week we elected new officers from our group. The following were chosen for offices: President, Bernice Bunkelman; vice president, Joyce Bartelt; librarian, June Degner; assistant librarian, Betty Ann Rose; scribe, Mercedes Lehnerz.

As George Washington's birthday approached, Miss Kohlbeck organized a patriotic program. Choral work was done by the English classes while the chorus added a musical touch to the program.

Several girls sang an acoustic and the entire chorus led the student body in singing "The Star Spangled Banner," "America," and "Columbia the Gem of the Ocean."

At present we are working on the songs, "My Lover is a Fisherman," "Doan Yo Cry Ma Baby," "Allah's Holiday," and "Chinese Lullaby."

We have talked occasionally about our music festival but no definite plans have been made.

That's all for this week!
