

Hospital Drive to Go on Until Goal is Hit

$55,000 Raised to Date; Village of Kewaskum Nears Quota

Approximately $55,000 had been raised up to Wednesday morning toward the $100,000 goal to help the sisters of St. Joseph's Community hospital, West Bend, pay for the institution's new wing, according to fund campaign headquarters, and it was emphasized that the drive will continue until the $100,000 is realized. This was made public in the following statement from Judge F. W. Bucklin, general chairman of the committee:

"When the policy committee fixed the dates for the hospital fund drive, March 2 to 8, they hoped that most of the work would be completed during that time. However, the main purpose of the drive was to raise $100,000, and as yet that objective has not been fully realized. The need for the money is just as urgent as ever, so the drive will go on until the objective is reached.

"Those who have contributed justly expect the committee workers to finish the job, and we owe it to these contributors, as well as to the hospital, to continue the campaign until we reach our goal of $100,000. All indications are that it can be done."

"Hoping that the drive will be completed within the next few weeks, the judge sent out a letter to every campaign worker urging rapid completion of the task of contacting individuals for subscriptions to the fund. In part, the letter reads:

"Some people are complaining because they have not been solicited in behalf of the hospital fund. Some have come to the general chairman some to the co-ordinating chairman, and some to headquarters, saying:

"Is the drive over? No one called on us."

"Of course, the drive will not be over until everyone is called on.

"We owe a duty to these people, as well as to the hospital. No one should be overlooked or neglected. People generally want to do their part. They feel slighted if not called on.

"So please get out as soon as you possibly can and complete the calls in your assigned territory. . . . If for any reason you are unable to call on the people assigned to you, let your chairman know about it at once."

It was pointed out that people who are away from home when solicitors call can leave their contributions at the hospital and that credit for subscriptions left at the hospital will be given the solicitors in their respective localities. Assurance was given that any persons not yet contacted will be eventually.

The disclosure was made that another Cedar lake resident donated $500 during the week to equip a room at the hospital, while the village of Kewaskum was within $1,000 of reaching its quota in the drive. Hopes were bright that Kewaskum would reach its goal within a week.

Campaign leaders are confident the $100,000 quota will be reached within the next few weeks, provided the workers complete their contacts and provided those people not contacted will leave their subscriptions at the hospital. Until the goal is reached, the leaders have promised that there will be no letup in the campaign. That is why it is being continued beyond the dates originally set for the drive.

The public was urged to watch the progress of the drive on the giant thermometer atop the West Bend theatre marquee. The reminder was issued that people can help the "mercury" in the thermometer reach its goal by making generous contributions to probably the most worthwhile and humanitarian undertaking ever launched in this part of the county—that of protecting health and life through support of the community hospital.

The public was also reminded that the names of contributors, whether their subscriptions be large or small, will all be carried on a plaque prominently situated in the hospital. The plaque will not carry the amounts contributed, however.

700 People Attend Scout Exposition

About 700 people took advantage of the opportunity to get a better understanding of the training Boy Scouts are receiving by attending the second annual Moraine district Boy Scout exposition at the Melane school, West Bend, Saturday. A parade from North Main st. to the school by the Racine Boy Scout drum and bugle corps opened the exposition which was open from 2 until 9 p. m. A great deal of planning and work was done by the scouts, their patrol leaders and their scoutmasters for the exposition.

Boy Scout troops from Barton, Campbellsport, Germantown, Jackson, Kewaskum and West Bend make up the Moraine district. About 40 scouts representing all units participated in the event.

Troop 16 of Barton, sponsored by the Barton fire department, stressed nature study in their exhibit. Camping equipment was the theme of Troop 12 of Campbellsport, sponsored by the Campbellsport fire department. Troop 21 of West Bend, sponsored by the West Bend Rotary club, had one of the most unusual exhibits, that of mastering the complexities of sound signaling. Sound tone signalers were used for demonstration by two teams set up to send and receive messages in Morse code. The troop also had an exhibit on marksmanship.

Winter camping was the theme of the exhibit of Troop 22, West Bend, sponsored by the Kiwanis club. The American Legion sponsored Troop 23 of West Bend stressed camping safety and handicraft in their booths. Model airplanes and camping and signaling were featured in the booth of Troop 41, West Bend, sponsored by the Moose lodge.

The Cub Scouts group includes boys 9, 10 and 11 years of age. Crafts taught the boys give them many hours of entertainment in their leisure time. The Barton Advancement association sponsored Pack 16 exhibited handicraft. Pack 4 of Kewaskum, sponsored by the Kewaskum American Legion, also featured handicraft in its exhibit.

Pack 21, West Bend, is divided into nine dens. Den numbers and exhibits were as follows: Den 1, bird houses; Dens 2 and 3, metal craft; Den 4, scrap lumber; Den 6, "Have You Heard of Lucretia"; Den 8, leather work is fun; Den 9, belt box, cork and stuff.

Sea Scout Ship 121, West Bend, sponsored by the West Bend Rotary club, featured ice boating and sail boating in its booth. Explorer Post 125, sponsored by the West Bend Kiwanis club, devoted its exhibit to Indian lore.

The Girl Scout booth showed only a small portion of the varied activities of this branch of scouting. It was the first time the organization shared in the exposition.

The council booth depicted the aid and guidance to all units in the Badger Council given by council headquarters, Fond du Lac.

A pageant written by Lloyd Schafer, scout executive, Badger Council, entitled "Golden Arrow" marked the closing ceremony of the exposition. The pageant depicted an international ambassador in which Lord Robert Baden-Powell, founder of scouting, was characterized and presided. Powell's part was capably enacted by Al Homuth of Barton. About 40 boys from all scout units took part.

All booths were given participation ribbons.

Spring Election Apr. 1; One Contest Here

The only contest of local interest facing voters in Kewaskum in the spring election next Tuesday, April 1, is for the offices of trustees. There are four aspirants seeking the three trustee posts. They are K. A. Honeck Sr. and H. B. Rosenheimer, incumbents, and A. W. Martin and Lester Dreher, new candidates. All other incumbents are unopposed and there are no candidates for supervisor, clerk and justice of the peace. The voting will be in the village hall from 9 a. m. to 5:30 p. m. Elections will also be held in the various townships Tuesday for the election of township officials.

Charles Miller is a candidate for re-election for the office of village president, as are John Marx, treasurer, and Joseph Mayer, assessor. Carl P. Schaefer and E. M. Romaine, incumbent clerk and supervisor respectively, are not aspirants for re-election. Both have served in office a number of years. Romaine is chairman of the Washington county board and if a new village supervisor is elected by a written vote the county board will be faced with the necessity of electing a new chairman when the board convenes in May.

In addition to balloting for local candidates, electors will vote on a referendum ballot to determine whether they are in favor of establishing daylight saving time in Wisconsin. The referendum reads as follows:

"Shall the Legislature authorize daylight saving time during the period beginning the last Sunday of April and ending the last Sunday of September in each year?"

This vote should develop quite a battle between village and city people and the rural residents. Many farmers are opposed to daylight saving time while people in cities and villages seemingly are strongly in favor of the time, which makes for nice, long evenings during the summer months.

Another contest on the ballot is between James Ward Rector, Madison, incumbent justice of the state supreme court, and Judge Henry P. Hughes, Oshkosh, who aspires to oust Rector.

Red Cross Workers Make Anti-Tuberculosis Masks

Each month workers at the Red Cross chapter make five hundred masks for use at the Veterans hospital at Wood. Wis. to help prevent the spread of tuberculosis.

These masks are worn over the nose and mouth by T-B patients, doctors, nurses, gray ladies and visitors. They are made of three layers of a soft tissue paper folded so that both nose and mouth are covered. They reduce the spreading of the bacteria by the patients, and help to prevent infection of those caring for them.

The paper is stapled to hold its form and strings tied around the head hold it in place. Each mask is worn not over forty minutes and is then discarded.

Mrs. Walter Carey, Barton, who is production chairman of these masks, surgical dressings supplied by the chapter to St. Joseph's hospital, and for other Red Cross items, reports that she has been receiving splendid co-operation from her co-workers, Mrs. Opal Leonard, field director at the Veterans hospital at Wood expressed her sincere appreciation to members of the West Bend area chapter for their assistance in this work.

Annual Army Day Observance To Emphasize Peacetime Role

Nation Will Honor Achievements at Programs April 7

WNU Features.

Dedicated to "The American Army in Peace," Army Day will be observed throughout the nation on April 7 with parades, community celebrations and addresses by prominent army and civilian leaders.

The observance has been proclaimed by President Truman and by governors and mayors. The army's role in the observance, on orders of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, will be keynoted to securing and maintaining the peace.

In addition to the traditional Army Day, the war department this year will observe Army Week during the period April 6 to 12.

Army day customarily is observed on April 6, anniversary of the declaration of war in 1917. The observance was postponed for a day this year because Easter Sunday occurs on April 6.

Started in 1928.

Originally proposed by the Military Order of World Wars in 1928, Army Day at that time had no governmental inspiration. From its beginning, however, the observance received full and active support of other veterans' organizations as well as civic groups. In 1937 the house of representatives and senate, by joint resolution, designated April 6 of each year as Army Day. Since then, it has expanded to a national project and is observed on a major scale annually.

As in the past, Army Day and Army Week this year will call upon the nation to honor the wartime army in peacetime for a job well done and to pay tribute to all serv-

Parades Scheduled. Throughout the nation, Army Day will be marked by community celebrations and parades. In communities where army units are located, uniformed troops will participate in the parades and new army equipment will be displayed.

On the second observance of Army Day since conclusion of the greatest war the world has ever known, the nation has come to recognize the army as an instrument of national security both in war and peace.

Army achievements, both military and scientific, have played an instrumental role in America's advances ever since its early days as a small federation of newly independent states.

In the fields of medicine, construction, transportation, communication and allied endeavors, army research and developments have aided the nation's growth and welfare.

As Army Day celebrations added recognition will be given the nation's armed forces as peacetime instruments as well as wartime necessities.

Passing of 'Saturday Night'

America is losing something in the passing of the old-fashioned Saturday night. We endorse a recent national weekly magazine editorial deploring the spread into the smaller cities and towns of the idea of closing stores so early on Saturday that Saturday night shopping is disappearing.

"Merchants in the smaller towns are taking a big chunk of pleasure out of life in their communities by heading into this program," the publication quotes a Minnesota country editor as writing. "The Saturday night shopping trip is like the Saturday night bath. It has a social angle. Nothing does so much for keeping town and country contacts."

"Good here! But there is little hope. In the heading dive into a new order of shorter days, shorter weeks, shorter schedules and shorter sweats, the American week has been processed into a five-day affair with the old-fashioned Saturday blizzed to a fare-thee-well."

Saturday night was the great night of the American week through most of its history. It was something to look forward to. It had the flavor of a combination picnic, bazaar, county fair and jamboree. There was a banjo-on-key mood to it.

The stores kept open until 10 and closed reluctantly. The dimming of the store lights was as sad as the last tune at the country dance. The crowds were slow going home. Saturday night died hard.

Today the people quit work Friday night or early Saturday and settle into a prolonged program of week-end recreations that will make 'em miserable. They don't get as much fun out of a 48-hour pursuit of happiness as they used to get between 7 and 1 Saturday night.

Yesterday people went to town Saturday night, fresh, smiling and in a mood for high adventure, and got back around midnight still feeling they had a good time. Today they pile into the jalopy early Saturday morning in a mood of irritation and with their faces fairly screaming: "We're off for a week-end and Lord how we hate it!"

CAN YOU REMEMBER— Away back when it was the pupil and not the teacher who failed to show up for school!

Russia has cut its military budget. The stuff it got from us will help tide things over another year or two.

One big Broadway movie theater has reduced its admission prices, noting a drop in attendance, especially at the shows which used to draw the bobbysoxers in great numbers. It is our deduction that millions of kiddies must have decided that they have completed their crime education.

Oh, Say (Hear! Hear!) Can You See?

It was proposed the other day that England merge with the United States of America, with King George (shown as a title), Winston Churchill and others serving in the U. S. senate. That will come to pass, the day a way is found to cross a tea muffin with a hot-dog and an Oxford class clamors for bleacher seats at a Brooklyn baseball game.

Made half in jest and half in earnest, the idea has America by the ears. And the English are in a dither, too. We hope the matter isn't pressed too speedily. A new war is apt to be started over the mere problem of a new joint flag to be designed by a committee composed of the duke of Windsor, Senator Hickenlooper, Gracie Fields, Francis Perkins, Ernie Bevin and Alf Landon.

And U. N. won't know what a real job it is until it is asked to handle the problem of finding an artist to merge the figures of Uncle Sam and John Bull, removing the chin whiskers, substituting a double chin and making the vest more of a Piccadilly waist.

What an election it will be with Wallie, Beatrice Lillie, Bob Wagner, Fred Astaire, Vandenberg, the duke of Argyle and the Eton soccer team all running!

Things are picking up in America. Sales people are locking up when customers appear, and the other day we encountered a business man who seemed interested in getting new business.

The Aluminum Company of America has been refunded $47,168,157 in overpaid income tax. It seems to prove that all bookkeepers have their off days. Or perhaps some playful executive said, "Let's overpay by 50 million dollars and see if anybody cares!"

"The Beginning or the End," a story of the atom bomb, is New York's latest movie. We observed a manager keenly watching the women members of the audience. "I'm observing the Jane reaction," he explained.

Pork may go to a dollar a pound in city butcher shops. This was reflected the other day when we went into a store to buy an old record of the Disney "Three Little Pigs" number and were told it would cost $2,000.

AFTER seeing talented Deborah Kerr's fine performance in the thrilling "The Adventuress" it is easily understandable why Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cast her opposite Clark Gable in "The Bucksters." Garbo, Dietrich, Bergman—now Kerr, who already rates right along with them. "The Adventuress," a J. Arthur Rank production released by Eagle-Lion, is delightful. Sometimes it's a thriller worthy of Hitchcock, sometimes it's wonderful comedy. The cast, of course, is excellent; the scenery —Ireland, the Isle of Man—is beautiful. Ask Miss Kerr, who has the courage to look plain as well as very beautiful, gives a performance to be enjoyed, and better, to be remembered.

DEBORAH KERR

Jean Harsholt, the kindly "Dr. Christian" of the CBS Wednesday night show, got his first movie job in Hollywood in 1915 not because he could act, but because he owned a dress suit, tuxedo, spats, derby and cane. He received all of $15 a week.

The cast of "This Is Hollywood," numbering close to 30 of the film capital's top people, converged on Salt Lake City for the recent premiere of "Ranard" via all modern methods of transportation. Some went by plane, some by train, others by automobile. The reason for splitting the group was to make certain that a talent nucleus would be on hand no matter what the weather happened to be.

Bryan Foy will personally supervise "Red Stallion," which may outclass "Smoke" and "Thunderhead," produced under his supervision at 20th Century-Fox. There'll be animal battle scenes that have never before been attempted in a picture.

Richard Benedict, who plays the bouncer in Columbia's "The Guilt of Janet Ames," is really Joseph Scouria, an Italian. He got his start by hanging around East Coast studios as a youngster. One day Al Christie, looking over a crowd of prospective extras, singled him out and asked if he spoke Spanish. "Si, bueno," said Richard, in his best Italian, and they gave him the part.

Michael Woulfe, fashion creator under contract to William Cagney, says he's rapidly going nuts. At RKO he's designing clothes for Laraine Day and Judith Anderson for "Tycoon"; at Eagle-Lion he's dressing Sylvia Sydney and Ann Richards for "Love From a Stranger"; and at U-I he's whipping up frocks for Ava Gardner for "Singapore." Ran up a taxi bill of $107.15 in no time at all, dashing from one studio to another. So he decided to learn to drive, and on his first day as a motorist was hassled in by a cop for improper parking.

Radio announcer Don Wilson has been signed as narrator for scenes in Columbia's "The Corpse Came C.O.D." George Brent, Joan Blondell and Adele Jergens have the leading roles in the thriller—about a series of murders with a Hollywood studio background.

Seven years isn't too long to wait for a honeymoon, according to Robert Mitchum and his wife. They decided when they were married to wait till he was a star, and then honeymoon in New York, where he grew up. She'd never been there. His movie career was well under way when the war interrupted it; "The Locket" starred him and they headed for New York—and he bought her a locket, because that made it possible.

ODDS AND ENDS—Zachary Scott is convinced spring is really here; his daughter Waverly, 10, has poison oak poisoning. . . . No less than 50 Hollywood news photographers have snapped candid shots of Ann Sheridan crocheting a bedspread. . . . Matt Crowley, star of "Road to Life," and radio's "man with the perfect duster," so altered his plans for earning a livelihood—from radio engineer to radio actor. . . . Donald O'Connor, comedian on the Gene Krupa show, is just 21, but he's a father and has a lot of responsibilities—but he still eats Eskimo pies during rehearsals!

Eddie Cantor and Joan Davis costar in "If You Knew Susie," but when you see it, keep an eye on three juveniles—Bobby Driscoll, Terry Randall and Dick Humphreys. Cantor, who's producing, thinks they're so good, he's enlarged their roles.

Mel Blank, who is "Bugs Benny's" voice in all those film cartoons, has written a song called "Ugga-Boo-Ugga-Boo-Ugga," and what's more, a publishing company snapped it up.

FBI SCORES AGAIN

Science Proves Aid to Crime Detection

WNU Features.

Science has established itself as one of the strong allies of crime detection. Equipped with more than a million dollars' worth of scientific apparatus and staffed with specialists in various scientific fields, the Federal Bureau of Investigation crime detection laboratory in Washington has proven an increasingly potent factor in detection and apprehension of criminals throughout the nation.

Facilities of the modern scientific crime detection laboratory are at the command of every duly authorized law enforcement agency throughout the nation, both in large cities and in small communities. During the last fiscal year the volume of work received from state and municipal law enforcement agencies increased 73 per cent over the previous fiscal year.

Services of the FBI laboratory have been expanded phenomenally since its modest beginning in 1932. In the early 1930s it became apparent to John Edgar Hoover, FBI director, that his organization as well as all local law enforcement agencies needed the assistance of a crime detection laboratory. This need was given concrete expression on November 24, 1932, by founding of the FBI laboratory.

Solve Sheep Theft. Indicative of the widespread use being made of the laboratory's facilities is a recent case involving theft of 270 sheep in Big Horn county, Montana.

Investigation had disclosed that a suspect was selling a large number of sheep whose wool bore evidence of efforts to obliterate brand markings. Specimens of the brand paint remaining on the sheep wool and samples of the brand paint, used by the true owner of the sheep in marking his animals, were forwarded to the laboratory.

A spectrographic examination conducted by FBI technicians revealed the presence in all the samples of Prussian blue paint, identical in both color and texture. In addition, it was found by checking with the manufacturer that only one shipment of this particular lot had been made to Montana. After being tried and found guilty, the accused was fined and sentenced to serve three years and four months for the theft.

Another case in which findings of the FBI laboratory aided local officers in their investigation involved a mule-riding thief in a southern state who had pilfered a number of articles from a private home. Packing his stolen goods on a mule belonging to the victim's next door neighbor, James Henry Brown, he was seen riding off. But when the mule later was found abandoned, someone remembered seeing an individual who looked like Brown riding it down the railroad tracks.

Picked up by local officers, Brown was held as a suspect while his trousers, together with a sample of hair from the side of the mule, were submitted to the FBI laboratory. There, the mule gave Brown away. Hair, bearing characteristics of the equine family, was found on his trousers and in his trousers cuffs. When this hair and the hair from the side of the stolen mule were compared under the microscope, it was determined that the two specimens strongly resembled each other. When Brown was faced with this evidence he confessed and later was sentenced to a term in the state penitentiary.

Adopt War Methods. The knowledge acquired and techniques developed and perfected by FBI laboratory technicians through the war years in defeating espionage, sabotage and related wartime cases are being adapted to postwar crime problems. Kidnaping, bank robbery, hijacking, murder, auto theft, robbery and many other types of crimes handled in prewar years now are being afforded the latest and most comprehensive attention in the laboratory.

Many times findings of the laboratory experts will clear the name of innocent individuals suspected of involvement in a case. A woman in Wilmington, Ohio, when arrested for issuing a worthless check, protested that the store manager to whom she had given the check agreed to hold it. She stated she had written the words, "Hold this till I pay," on the face of the check. Submitted to the FBI laboratory, the questioned check was examined under ultraviolet light and found to contain this message. The case against her was dismissed.

Whether it is a request for identification of suspected bloodstains, matching of hairs and bits of fibers, classification of various body fluids, handwriting, paint and soil comparisons, bullet identifications, restoration of obliterated serial numbers or any other type of examination, technicians of the FBI laboratory stand ready to offer reliable, scientific analysis.

NO CLUES OVERLOOKED . . . Science engages in painstaking and exhaustive effort to aid crime detection as indicated in this photo showing experts at the FBI crime detection laboratory collecting dust and debris from clothing for microscopic study.

Perfect Cure for Insomnia—Eating Crackers in Bed

CHICAGO — Eating crackers in bed is the "perfect cure" for insomnia! That unconventional advice emanates from J. P. Fanning, sleep expert for National Association of Bedding Manufacturers. Your wife won't like it, Fanning admits in discussing his proposed cure, but you'll be too sleepy to hear her angry words. He also prescribes four or five "good hot cups" of black coffee to wash the crackers down.

Some other methods Fanning has found effective in his years of trying to put the nation to sleep comfortably include:

Watch goldfish swimming about in their bowls for a few minutes before retiring. They'll bore you so thoroughly you'll fall asleep the minute you hit the bed.

Run several miles every night. If that's too much for you, just go around the block at a slow trot.

Eat a head of lettuce to quiet your nerves. Don't try celery as a substitute. It's too noisy.

Drink a quart of beer. Or, if you don't like your milk mixed with alcohol, try munching malted milk tablets.

Sip a cup of hot milk with a lump of butter in it. If that doesn't work, add black pepper.

Put an extra pillow under your feet or stomach.

200-Mile Detour Used To Speed Mail Service

NORTH BEND, ORE.—Although it's only a five-minute drive from here to Coos Bay, three miles distant, letters mailed to that town travel 200 miles in order to be delivered faster. The mail is put on a northbound train, transferred in the night to a southbound train and dropped off at Coos Bay the next morning. Mail sorters on the train work at night, those in the post offices don't.

Joyce Kilmer School Finally Gets Trees

BOSTON.—Steps to rectify a "gross oversight" have been taken by the Boston school committee. When it learned that there isn't a single tree in the yard of Kilmer public school, named in honor of Joyce Kilmer, author of the famous poem, "Trees," the school board approved plans to plant several trees around the school building. The trees will be set out this spring.

Geisha Girls Attempt To Save Cherry Trees

TOKYO.—In an attempt to save its cherry trees, Kumagaya, a suburb of Tokyo, enlisted the services of 10 Geisha girls. Residents of the community, shivering through the cold winter months because of lack of fuel, confiscated the cherry trees, branch by branch, for fuel. The Geishas will sing and dance near the charcoal district in an effort to spur fuel deliveries.

Kathleen Norris Says:

No Money of Her Own

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"Cookies, bread, jams have a big sale in these times, and catering is surprisingly simple."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"MY HUSBAND is a wonderful man in every respect," writes a Texas wife, "but he never lets me handle any money. We live in my old home, an enormous old place, which Gordon recently has freed from a heavy mortgage, so that strictly speaking my mother might feel him the rightful owner. Our family includes Mother, my four children and a brother recently discharged from the service because of poor health.

"Gordon likes a generous table and wants his children nicely raised, pays dentist, school, department store and grocery bills willingly, but he checks every item, and makes me feel like a beggar as I explain a long-distance call or a charge at the florists. He never lets me know how we stand financially, but about twice a month when I ask for it, he gives me $5. If I ask often he gets it. This money covers carfare, children's ice cream, library books, stamps, a hundred small things. I am always conscious of not having money, for a casual telegram, a lunch downtown, a magazine.

"Before my marriage I earned good money, put my brother through college and supported my parents. My father was never a successful business man, and my mother was of the old school that knew nothing of management. I was a fitter in our smartest frock shop, so that today I can make all my daughters' clothes and most of my own and mothers. We do all the housework and manage the vegetable garden and chickens. Of course, it is true that all the necessities of gracious living, clothes, food, laundry and so on, can be managed on charge accounts, but that never gives me the pleasure of spending.

Pride Hurt by Dependence.

"Spending!" this letter finishes. "It is a real pleasure, isn't it? To feel that you can have a book or a taxi or a lunch downtown without that feeling of utter flatness and emptiness in your purse. I've argued with Gordon about it, but while he is perfectly amiable he is inflexible, too, and treats me as if I was merely a child. My children, by the way, are aged 8, 6, 5 and 1, so that there is no question of my earning money again for some time. For years I was the main support of my father and mother; as I say, my father was unfortunate in his business affairs and became completely dependent some years before his death. I miss the sensation of having money of my own, and my pride is hurt by complete dependence. I feel that a wife is a money-earner, too, especially when she gives a man the four children who will some day be such a comfort and delight. Other women surely have had this problem; can you give me any hint as to how it may be solved?"

Other women—many hundreds of other women—have indeed had this problem, Madeline, and as it usually rises from a certain situation, it is often curable. Your husband's attitude indicates that he is conscious of being heavily burdened; he is the only support of an elderly woman, a young wife, a sick man and four children. He is afraid. Afraid of waste and debt and extravagance; afraid of some day perhaps having to leave you and the children helpless.

"He checks every item..."

Army Develops Body-Warmer for Frigid Zones

A device for keeping the lungs and upper respiratory tract of the wearer warm through the heat contained in his own breath is being tested by soldiers with Task Force Frigid at Fairbanks, Alaska. The apparatus also prevents waste of body heat.

The respirator, of light and simple construction, is made of soft rubber and fits snugly around the nose and mouth. Outside the mask

A FIRM HAND ON THE PURSE STRINGS

The only thing Madeline has against her husband is that he doesn't let her handle money. Everything she buys must be on credit. At the end of the month he scrutinizes every bill carefully, and questions her about any item that seems to him unnecessary or extravagant.

They have four children, so Madeline cannot work outside to earn pin money. Her mother and brother also are living with them for the present, so there is a large family to care for. They live in a big old mansion in Texas, a roomy and comfortable home. Gordon has paid off the large mortgage on it, so he is virtually the owner, although title is in Madeline's mother's name.

Madeline says she feels like a child without any spending money. Gordon gives her about $10 a month to cover everything—stamps, carfare, candy for the children. Before she was married Madeline earned a good salary, and with it she supported her father and sent her brother through college.

Miss Norris replies that Gordon is conscious of the heavy burden he must bear. He is aware that Madeline is inclined to be a free spender, so he has taken the only means he knows to preserve the financial stability of his household. There are many ways, Miss Norris says, for a woman situated as Madeline is to earn a little money at home, such as making home-made jelly and cookies or some novelty like rag dolls.

He Fears Extravagance.

Bills he will pay, because he can glance over these and check items that seem unnecessary or wasteful. But, inasmuch as your father was improvident, and you, evidently, spent all the money you made as fast as you made it, he is apprehensive that things will get out of hand. When he went into your old home he had a mortgage to handle; his married life began with heavy obligations.

It would seem that in so large a house you and your mother might find a source of income that you might rightfully divide as your own. Fitting up an apartment, or taking in children for overnight board are two easy ways of making money, but other very profitable things are being done by housewives today in their own homes. Two old sisters I know weave beautiful table runners in peasant colors; a California family is supporting itself making sturdy, rosy-cheeked cloth dolls. Cookies, bread, jams have a big sale in these times, and catering is surprisingly simple when handled in one's own neighborhood. A mother and two daughters here have all they can do at $2 a dinner, delivered hot at any hour. Even with your four children you can find time for one of these activities, or one of a hundred others, and at once save your own pride and lighten your husband's anxieties.

Divorce, War and Liquor

Half the domestic troubles that have led to an increase in divorces this year can be blamed on the war and half on alcohol, according to Judge McNamee of Nevada.

"Four out of five complainants are women," said Judge McNamee, "but the social stigma of a man divorcing a woman has disappeared."

Troubles arising from the loneliness of war and the excessive drinking of one of the partners lead the entire field of reasons for the increase in broken homes, he added.

My, how she's grown!

This is the snow-suit that fitted Sally so well only two years ago. It was a little snug last winter, but still wearable. Now it's outgrown. Sally needs a new outfit—fast!

A lot of businesses are in the same spot as Sally. Their facilities are outgrown too. During the tight war years, they nursed old equipment along, patiently waiting for new materials and machines. And all the time they, too, kept on growing. But a lot of things they've been needing still aren't available.

That's why so many businesses—our own included—are like Sally, straining at the seams, waiting for the new outfits we need.

This is a friendly apology to those folks who've asked to be added to our crowded lines. Though we haven't gotten around to you, we haven't forgotten. We appreciate your patience, and want you to know that—as soon as materials are available—we'll be happy to bring cheap, dependable electric service to you, too.

Ideologies Clash in Occupation Zone

Korea a House Divided Between U. S. and Russia

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON. — A couple of months ago I wrote a piece about Korea for this column.

It was largely a factual report and when I wrote it I realized how little I, and perhaps some of you, know about Korea. I have been realizing that for many years but not too many. I think that the first time Korea meant anything more to me than a smear on the map was when I was quartered with a young fellow in France in World War I. He talked in his sleep. That was bad enough, but I couldn't understand what he said. So I asked him. He said:

Baukhage

"My father was a missionary in Korea. I was born there. When I have a nightmare I talk Korean."

Korea est omnis divisa in partes duas, unam incolunt Red Army et unam (south of a dividing line drawn by Stalin and Roosevelt) by the American army.

The agreement was that the two nations would set up a unified provisional government and lure the Koreans back into democratic life. Then things began to eventuate. Roosevelt died and he couldn't tell Stalin that "democracy" meant one thing to Americans and something quite different to Marxian schooled Russians. Oh, quite different.

But regardless of academic definitions, this has happened, according to General Hodge's own statements: The Russians have drafted Koreans in their zone into an army.

They have set up a Communist regime in their sector.

We haven't done so well with our business of democracy in our sector. Not because of lack of good intentions nor of the efforts of General Hodge (so his enemies admit) but due to a lot of things including the spectre of the past which has harassed the Koreans. They like America. But all they have got from us in the past is vague promises. Other nations beginning with Japan took them and tore them. They have faced a historical array of broken promises from the great nations. Koreans thought they were promised independence "in a few days" after American occupation. That misunderstanding was due to the fact that the Moscow agreement was translated by a Korean who was possessed of more native optimism than knowledge of the English language. From then on, the Americans attempting to abide by their understanding of the Moscow decisions have tried in vain to get an agreement out of the Russians which would be the basis of a unified Korea behind a unified provisional Korean government.

Today Korea has become one of those explosive areas where two ideologies meet; where the two great empires left in the world (the U. S. and the U.S.S.R.) face each other for better or for worse. Neither thinks it should retire and allow Korea to erect a government which would take its pattern from the other.

What's going to happen now? We are going to get a little tougher with the Russians, and if we can be released from that ambiguous agreement will let the Koreans in our zone set up their own provisional government. They already have a parliament of their own, but General Hodge has a veto and he will keep it until we see some kind of a coalition, free from Communist pressure—or any other kind of pressure, of which there are a lot. It will cost money.

Blast Teacher Pay Proposal

My folks came originally from New England. We followed the various migrations west in jerks. But my New England ancestry is the only reason I've always been proud of American schools. As school boy I had a tough time because I wasn't tough enough. There were a lot of fights that had to be negotiated. But I came out with the idea that I'd take the public schools of America because they taught democracy whatever else they didn't teach. Later, I studied abroad and didn't change my mind.

Then I joined the army and discovered from my buddies (I got five francs for writing letters for them), that parts of America I hadn't grown up in were as illiterate as parts of Europe which I'd held my nose going through, and that some of Europe was more literate than the United States, although at our worst we had a better school for the poor man, proportionately, than Great Britain.

Years passed and finally I began hearing complaints about our schools—including the high-literacy areas. I realized what teachers were being paid compared to dog catchers and garbage collectors and bartenders (not as much). I mentioned it on the radio. Most people complimented my stand for higher remuneration for education. (Of course we couldn't expect to pay as much as we pay for liquor to redder our noses or the women pay for cosmetics to redder their lips).

But what shocked my New England soul was some of the letters on the "other side".

"The most important teachers in the world are the mothers and fathers, who are now earning wages less than the teachers in a great many cases. Lack of adequate pay for them is the greatest cause of education failure—and failure it is—because it does not aid properly those who need it worst."

From a California teacher who is "almost in despair over the situation":

"The school cannot substitute for the home; it can only supplement it. You can't teach children who have had no home training; you can't even teach those who have if your whole time and strength are consumed by those who haven't. Most parents will pay whatever they have to pay for a parking station for their children and will ask no further questions. More and more of the parking attendants are unwilling to deal with such children at any price."

From a Pennsylvania mother: "If monetary remuneration were the only consideration for our services in this life—would there be nurses, doctors, welfare workers and ministers? Yet they abound in love and kindness and tolerance."

From a Virginia man: "There is an adage to the effect, 'you get just about what you pay for.' The point is, when the school teacher does his job as well as the street cleaner or garbage collector, he will be paid accordingly; but as long as the educators are content to have the street cleaners do their job better, the educators should not complain that the street cleaner is better paid."

Gets Wasps Straight

Sixteen-year-old David Shappiro of Washington, D. C., one of 40 finalists in the sixth annual Westinghouse science talent search, cleared up an entomological "triangle" by mating "Mrs." Wasps with her proper spouse. The wasps had been wronging this couple for years.

COMPETITION COMING

Lower Costs and Prices Advised

WASHINGTON. — Warning that business faces a period of intense competition for consumer dollars, the department of commerce advised business men to begin now to cut costs and lower prices.

"Business is on the verge of a period of intense competition; there are more retailers than before the war and the implication is that competition for the consumers' dollar will be greater than ever," the department declared in a study of pricing problems by Frederick M. Bernfield of the marketing division.

The department forecast that "unless business men start reviewing their pricing policies now with a

Greek, Turk Aid Proposal Keynotes Shift in Policy

D (DIPLOMACY) DAY:

Back Truman Despite its radical departure from traditional American foreign policy and inherent threat of conflict with Russia, President Truman's program for aiding Greek and Turkish resistance to Soviet pressure in the strategic Middle East gained strong support in congress.

Many Republican senators and representatives crossed party lines to back Mr. Truman's proposal to lend Greece and Turkey 400 million dollars within the next year to bolster their economies and buy arms and provide military experts to train key personnel. Senator Bridges (Rep., N. H.) summed up congressional sentiment: "If we are ever going to try to stop the spread of Communism, now is the time."

Critics of the program did not so much oppose the forthright action proposed to check the Red tidal wave in eastern Europe as they inveighed against past state department practices in aiding the Soviets and their puppet states in strengthening their hold on oppressed people. With the entire nation sensitive to growing Russian dominance, critics were expected to lend their support for maximum safeguards against precipitating hostile action.

Mr. Truman made no bones about administration intentions of resisting Russian expansionism, declaring that U. S. foreign policy remained dedicated to the principle of freedom for all people. After lambasting Communist interference in Greece and imposition of totalitarian regimes in Poland, Romania and Bulgaria, he asserted that all nations faced the choice of dictatorship or democracy.

Significantly, the Middle Eastern trouble spot lies at the crossroads of the East and West. Whoever controls this strategic area controls the gateway to two worlds plus the huge oil deposits of Iran, Iraq and Arabia, in which the U. S. and Britain have heavy interests.

LABOR:

End Long Strike

Beaten in their attempts to obtain "union security," local 180 of the CIO-United Automobile Workers ended its 14½-month-old strike at the J. I. Case tractor and harvesting equipment plants in Racine, Wis. Previously, union members had returned to work in Case's Rock Island, Ill., Burlington, Ia., and Rockford, Ill., factories after prolonged walkouts.

Asst. Sec. of Labor John W. Gibbons was successful in bringing the company and the Racine local together. Abandoning efforts to obtain a union shop, maintenance of membership and a compulsory dues checkoff, the local settled for an average 25 cents an hour wage raise, new grievance machinery and improved vacation provisions.

ASKS BAN ON REDS

Questioned about a bill outlawing Communists from official positions in labor unions, Secretary of Labor Schwelb said: "It does not go far enough. Why should we recognize the Communist party in the U. S. Why should they be eligible to run for office when their purpose is to destroy the government? Why should they be theoretically able to get elected to congress? I just can't see any reason why we should have that."

Settlement of the strike posed a labor problem for Racine since many of the 3,500 strikers had taken other jobs during the course of the walkout. Their action eased the strain on the union treasury although other workers received strike benefits. The plants were completely shut down during the dispute, with the union maintaining effective picket lines.

RAIL MURDER:

FBI Enters Case

Congressional concern over the shotgun slaying of Pres. George P. McNear of the embattled Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad brought the FBI into the case in an effort to track down the killers of the millionaire rail executive.

The justice department authorized the FBI investigation on the grounds that the federal government was interested in what otherwise might have been a local incident because of McNear's recent testimony before the house labor committee.

Committee Chairman Hartley (Rep., N. J.) revealed that McNear had charged the Railroad Brotherhoods with inciting violence on the T. P. & W. to prompt government seizure of the line during the war. Brotherhood officials replied by accusing McNear of a lack of knowledge of railroading, Hartley said.

BIG BUSINESS:

Growing Bigger

Pointing out that 1,800 companies have been absorbed by purchase or merger since 1940, the Federal Trade commission urged adoption of a bill proposed by Representative Kefauver (Dem., Tenn.) that would prevent such practices where they tended to create a monopoly.

Under present provisions of the Clayton anti-trust act, only stock purchases forming a monopoly are prohibited. Operators have been able to get around this provision, however, by outright purchase of a company's assets or exchanging stocks through a merger. Kefauver's bill would plug the loophole and empower the FTC to rule on mergers.

view towards meeting this competition, they may find themselves faced with making drastic price changes."

The old wartime formula of price of goods plus operating costs plus desired profit is no longer sufficient, the department said. In general, markup policies must be directed toward a reasonable net profit. Business men in considering revisions must be sure to include in their costs such items as markdowns, damage and theft.

If a business man cannot meet competition, maintain quality of his merchandise, pay all costs and make a reasonable profit, "then he

Hospital Services

A new medical service in seven centers has been established by Veterans' administration for treatment of spinal cord injuries. These paraplegic centers are now in operation in VA hospitals at Framingham, Mass.; Memphis, Tenn.; Van Nuys, Calif.; Staten Island, N. Y.; Richmond, Va.; the Bronx, N. Y., and at Hines in Chicago.

Because of a general shortage of doctors, physical therapists and others qualified to treat paraplegics, VA personnel skilled in this field have been assembled at the seven centrally located hospitals over the country. This will permit veterans to receive the proper treatment needed for their rehabilitation and at the same time to be as close to their homes as possible.

Until recently most spinal cord injury cases were doomed to a life of inactivity, and in many cases death resulted. Under modern treatment, however, many paraplegics are able to lead active, productive lives. Treatment in these cases includes the services of neurologist, neurosurgeon, psychiatrist, doctor of physical medicine, physical therapist, occupational therapist, corrective physical rehabilitation officer, educational training officer, vocational shop supervisor, social worker and nurses. There are approximately 1,200 veteran-patients suffering from injuries to the spinal cord and the number is expected to reach about 2,000 eventually.

Questions and Answers

Q. Our son served four years in the navy and while at this work he fell across a gun mount and cut a gash in his head which left a very large bump. This bump does not seem to bother him now, but may in later years. It took quite a few stitches to sew up his head. Now he is discharged and in such a hurry to get home he was afraid he would have to stay longer if he put in for this accident. So after he got out, his boy friend told him he should have put in for it and could perhaps draw a small monthly pension. Now what we are wondering is, is it too late to put in for the accident and to whom should he apply?—Mrs. S. C. B., Litchfield, Neb.

A. The only suggestion we can make is to have your son go to the nearest office of Veterans' administration, explain the situation and ask for a disability rating. If he is entitled to such a rating, VA will take care of the rest.

Q. My son enlisted in the army as an X-ray technician. He went overseas and right after the invasion he was wounded and died two days later. It was in France somewhere, I never found out where. His serial number was 47433002. I have written two different officers and they have never told me anything about him. Now what I want to know is who could I write to to find out something about his death and what he was doing when it happened? I want his body to be brought back here to be with the family when it can be moved. It seems to me his records should be in Washington.—Mrs. K. H., McGregor, Iowa.

A. Suggest you write to Memorial Division, Office of Quartermaster General, War Department, Washington 25, D. C., giving your son's full name and serial number, his point of enlistment and his outfit, if you know.

Q. I am a veteran and am self-employed. If I draw the self-employment pay which is offered veterans will this amount be deducted from the bonus I am entitled to receive later?—R. E. B., Sikeston, Mo.

A. There has been no provision for a bonus to World War II veterans as yet. However, your adjusted compensation as a self-employed would not be deducted from any future bonus voted by congress.

Q. I would like to know what Sec. 1, AR 615-361 means on my discharge?—L. C. Britt, Iowa.

A. This section refers generally to medical disability. It is known as a certificate of disability for discharge.

Q. I am a veteran of World War II and about four weeks ago I had a major operation by a civilian doctor. Now what I would like to know is, would I be entitled to collect any money from the government to pay for this operation?—H. H. S., Parks, Neb.

A. If this operation was an emergency operation and due to service-connected injury or disease, the chances are you could obtain reimbursement from Veterans' administration. Would suggest that you contact your nearest Veterans' administration office.

Q. My brother is a Spanish-American war veteran. He is aged and is being cared for by a sister. He has never drawn anything from the government. Is he deserving of some government help?—Mrs. A. C., Raleigh, N. C.

A. Yes, the law provides for pensions for Spanish-American war veterans, even though disability is not service-connected. These pensions range from $20 to $75 per month, depending upon the rate of disability. Even though the veteran may not be disabled, he is entitled to a pension on account of age.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

By PAUL MALLON

Released by Western Newspaper Union

FOOD PRICES EXPECTED TO STAY AT PRESENT LEVELS

WASHINGTON. — The labor department has been ardently fanning the fears of another food price inflation. A United Press dispatch said: "A labor department spokesman predicted the cost of living will climb to a new price record peak by the end of June. The department reported that on January 15, retail food prices were 30 per cent higher than on the corresponding date a year ago." On the basis of this supposedly official, although anonymous, interpretation of the Chicago market figures, a break occurred in the New York stock market. Naturally Wall Street traders whetted their fears that food price increases would cause another round of wage increases in coal, steel, autos and the other spring contracts awaiting renewal, and thus break our economy up into a still higher inflationary level, if not break the accepted economic program entirely.

Actual facts of the matter do not justify these fears. Indeed they fall so far short of justification you might hastily conclude offhand that the unions and the labor department must be throwing their pressure weight behind the food price increases, so they can collect another wage increase. This may sound foolish to some, and possibly it is not true, yet you can find some evidence in the government itself to substantiate such a suspicion.

The government has been warning farmers against over-production, which certainly had lent encouragement to food production deficiencies. Actually it has advised against accelerated production of beef cattle, although the figures upon which it bases such advice seem to be wrong, inasmuch as they do not calculate the increased population and increased demand likely in a period of widespread availability of money, such as we are in now. Worse than that, the government actually has created the shortages in wheat by its export program, and expects to continue to do so.

A HANGOVER FROM OPA DAYS

Despite this evidence, I do not accuse the government of fostering the food price increases to encourage the wage demands of its strongest following. The truth of the matter seems to be they are merely taking advantage of an abnormal and temporary situation in foods in order to further the union demand. The actual food situation is this:

Farmers require about a year and a half to develop a new big crop. Only about seven months have elapsed since OPA went off, ending the confused condition of the farmers, which induced them to avoid full hog production. The crop of last spring has just about all been sold, and the fall crop (started before OPA) has not come in yet, so we are at an in-between period on hog production. Furthermore, deliveries at markets have been abnormally low because of snow and wintry weather (much of the deliveries these days being by truck).

Actually we had a good corn crop last year. The hog crop is low but yet undeveloped. And we cannot know anything about the coming season's production until fall, so we must conclude that if the farmers go ahead normally they will produce enough hogs to keep us away from further inflation.

If pork chops go to $1 or $1.25 a pound in this interim period, the cost of living need not increase for most people, except in the government statistics.

WE HAVE ENOUGH WHEAT

Wheat is a somewhat different story, but to the same effect. Last year we had 100 million bushels carryover at the end of the crop year, and this year the milling people are alarmed because consumption expects 125 million bushels (millers figuring that if the government is wrong again, we will be skating too near thin ice). But our government itself will largely influence our wheat supply by the extent to which it exports in answer to foreign demand. England is buying here, with the money we gave her—pardon me, "loaned" her. Russia is not buying, and so far as I know, has not attempted to influence our markets lately.

Perhaps government statistics have increased 30 per cent on food prices "since a corresponding period last year." Last year, the government statistics were warped by price ceilings on foods not available at any price. Now they cannot fool themselves but must take actual market prices. Yet if they encourage another round of wage increases on that basis, prices will go still higher, and everyone will be worse off.

Thus the realities of the situation fall somewhat short of justifying their conclusions and predictions.

STALIN CHANGES PACE

I hear that Stalin has decided to let his various diplomatic campaigns around the world coast for a time. Specifically, reports say a Russian move to capture the Dardanelles from Turkey has been dropped. This was the feared venture which American government authorities thought might bring on another armed conflict, although our military people recognize they could not do much about protecting the distant straits unless we wanted to declare war on Russia.

Race Horses Seriously Affected by Seasickness

Horses are so affected by seasickness that many thoroughbreds, after a rough sea voyage, have been unfit to race for as long as six months, says Collier's. To avoid this hazard, a plane was used recently to transport six race horses from Limerick, Ireland, to Los Angeles, the first cargo of its kind ever flown across the Atlantic.

A state secret in Washington is something that columnists release upon receipt.

Between V-J Day and October last year, 10½ million people moved out of the county they were living in, according to a census made by Business Week. What did they move into?

LAST LOVER

BY Helen Topping Miller

Richard McFarlane, who disappeared during the first World War, leaving his wife, Julia, and two children, suddenly returns 23 years later and identifies himself as Captain Mackey, stationed at the same camp as his son, Ric, serving in World War II. Ric has become involved with Sandra Calvert, a divorcee who Captain Mackey knew at one time. He threatens her, but she marries Ric anyway, arriving at Julia's farm to live with her. She starts Julia by recognizing a picture of Richard as that of Captain Mackey. When John goes to a theater with Dave Patterson, a family friend, Sandra and Jill, Julia's daughter, become engaged in a vehement argument.

CHAPTER XVIII

"You couldn't understand Ricky, though. He's so sensitive. And you aren't a complex person at all, you know, Jill. You're primitive really. You are in your element here on a farm. Odd that two people could be so entirely different as you and Ricky?"

Jill was hanging on to her temper. She would not please Sandra by quarreling with her, by letting her see that anything she could say or do mattered at all. "I'm such a primitive that I learned to tell the truth very early, and Ric never bothered. He went in for the more esthetic angles; he thought living excitingly was more important than keeping his word or choosing high-minded people for friends, or anything like that."

"I suppose that's intended for a dig," Sandra said, "but it's quite all right. It doesn't worry me at all. Ricky told me that you would probably hate me."

"How stupid of him—to think that I'd bother!" Jill drawled. "Why would anything you do matter to me, Sandra? Or anything that I do concern you? We're separate people. We can live our lives without getting emotional, one way or another. Only don't put on an act with me, Sandra. It's no good. And leave my mother alone. Dooley's not like me. She doesn't know how to take care of herself. She's never grown any prickles. She doesn't know how to be unkind to anybody, and she thinks that most people are good and decent and that the messes they get themselves into are misfortunes that ought to be condoned."

"I rather like your mother," Sandra said, languidly. "I'd never want to do anything to hurt her, if I could help it."

"What do you mean, if you can help it?" demanded Jill, hotly. "You'd better make an effort to help it, Mrs. Richard McFarlane."

Sandra got up and strolled over to the dressing table, picked up the framed photograph that stood there. The picture of a blue-eyed officer in an old-fashioned, wide-brimmed campaign hat.

"Is this a relative?" she asked, with studied casualness.

"My father," Jill did not look at her. "Ric's father, too. He died in France in the last war."

"Oh, yes," Ricky told me. He looks so much like an old friend of my first husband's that the resemblance is really startling."

"She studied the picture, and her lips curved greedily. She licked them shyly like a cat, and her eyelids narrowed, a speculative look growing behind them. She put the frame down, shrugged a little. "Your father was very handsome, Jill, but he reminds me so much of that man I detest that I won't look at him any more. Odd that two people should be so alike, isn't it?"

"Not terribly odd. We only have a few features. They couldn't help putting a few similar combinations together."

"By the way, Jill?" Sandra paused in the door. "I haven't discussed the future with your mother. I really dread having to do it. But I do have to know what's ahead of us, don't I?"

Jill stood up, stiffening. "What has my mother to do with what's ahead of you?" she asked.

"But naturally—she has everything to do with it! Don't you think it would be better if you talked to her about it, Jill?"

"Talked to her about what? What future do you mean? You knew that Ric would be gone, perhaps for years. You knew that, when you married him."

"But that's just it. I did marry him. I am Ricky's wife. And because I'm his wife I do have to be concerned about our future. Ricky has rights that have to be considered."

"Rights?" Jill repeated curtly. "Of course he has rights. The right to get the best out of life that he can when the war is over. But my mother has nothing to do with that. That's Ric's problem."

Sandra's eyes flattened with a reptilian look.

A Request for Ric's Rights

"You'd like to see him pushed out, wouldn't you? You'd like to keep everything for yourself. You've been digging yourself in, haven't you—building yourself up as such a dutiful daughter, playing Ric down with those sly, sidelong glances! Awfully clever! But—I think I know something that you don't know. Miss Jill McFarlane! It's merely a hunch I have, but my hunches have a way of coming through. And my advice to you is to change your tactics, and quick! If you don't want your mother to be very unhappy, suggest to her that Ricky has some rights, as a member of this family."

Jill looked at her, her eyes like loops.

"You'd better put it in words of one syllable, Sandra," she said, coldly. "Being a primitive I'm no good at puzzles. I think you know how to speak plainly, if you want to do it. I think you know a lot of very plain words, indeed."

Sandra threw back her head. "I do know the plain words! Only plain words would do for you, you smug, self-satisfied little snob! I want ten thousand dollars. Is that plain enough?"

"I haven't got ten thousand dollars and my mother hasn't got it—and she's not going to sacrifice anything to get it—not for you, Sandra McFarlane!"

"Very well," said Sandra, evenly. "I see I shall have to speak to her about it myself."

"You dare to do it! You dare to make my mother unhappy—you dare! I'll throw you out of the house myself. Get out of my room—get out—get out!"

The door clapped angrily as Sandra slammed it. Her hands trembling, her body like ice but her face and eyes blazing, Jill stood still for a minute glaring, shuddering all over with the fierce anger that shook her.

She was still trembling all over when the door opened a cautious crack and old John I. thrust his head in, his thin hair disordered, his mustache quivering like an inquisitive antenna.

"So blackmail is one of your special arts, too, is it? I thought as much," she said, slowly. "I suppose poor Ric has done something foolish—the poor deluded sap! And now you've got hold of it and want to hold it over my mother's head, because you've seen how s. a adores Ric? Well, it won't work, Sandra. It simply won't work. Ric's been in jams before, and my mother is more or less resigned to anything that comes now. She's given up expecting anything from Ric, except disappointment. So you can pack up your threats and peddle them somewhere else, there's no market here."

Sandra pressed herself against the door, her mouth twisted to one side, her eyes guarded.

"I don't like scenes," she said, loftily. "I hope it won't be necessary for me to say or do anything unpleasant. I don't want to hurt your mother. I merely want my rights—Ricky's rights. And I mean to have them. Anything you say is entirely unimportant. You can speak about this to your mother or not, just as you please."

"I shall certainly not speak to her about it!" Jill snapped. "And if you plan any chiseling I shall do all I can to defeat you. You've been made a welcome here, you're Ric's wife, and on his account I'll treat you as Ric's wife should be treated. But I'll appreciate it, right now, if you'll get out of my sight. I still like to believe that I'm a lady, but when you're around, Sandra, I have difficulty remembering it."

Mackey and Jill Meet Again

"I'm going. With pleasure!" Sandra bit the words off like lengths of red-hot wire. "But I'm going to have ten thousand dollars! I'm going to have it right away! Do you think I was fool enough to marry into this family without knowing what Ricky's prospects were? I'm no child! I've taken care of myself for a long time. I know how to go on doing it. I want that money, and I'm going to get it. Is that plain enough?"

"I haven't got ten thousand dollars and my mother hasn't got it—and she's not going to sacrifice anything to get it—not for you, Sandra McFarlane!"

"Very well," said Sandra, evenly. "I see I shall have to speak to her about it myself."

"You dare to do it! You dare to make my mother unhappy—you dare! I'll throw you out of the house myself. Get out of my room—get out—get out!"

hoarsely. "I yelled like a—like a . . ."

"Like a McFarlane," supplied her grandfather, helpfully. "I heard you. What were you yelling about?"

"Sandra made me mad. She wants money. She says she wants Ric's share. How could Ric have a share now—while Mother is alive? I got furious. I wish I hadn't, I feel unsure of myself now—but I did. I'm sorry if I waked you up, John I."

"I wasn't asleep. So she wants money, does she? Will she clear out if she gets it?"

"I don't know. But she made vague threats if she didn't get it. She said she knew something that I didn't know, something that would make Mother unhappy. That's when I flew at her."

Jill saw her grandfather's eyes move past her uneasily for a moment, focus on the picture on her dresser; then his mouth drew straight and his eyes narrowed a little. Without word, he walked out of the room. Then she heard a car door slam down below, and she snatched up her robe and wriggled into it and fled down the stairs. Dooley had come, and Dooley must not know. She had to get to Dooley before Sandra did.

She flung open the screen door and stood framed in the light as she wrinkled green silk and flaming hair and eyes like black flames in a face as white as chalk.

And so it was that Richard McFarlane, standing there under the light, saw his daughter.

Jill drew back, startled, and said, "Oh!" and pulled her flying drapery around her. Then she got her breath a little and said, "Oh, I'm sorry! You startled me. I was expecting my mother. You're Captain Mackey, aren't you? I remember. I saw you at Ridley."

He came into the room, blinking at the light. He looked a little odd, Jill thought; there was that same bewildered look in his eyes, that same curious nostalgia, as though he were thinking back hard, trying to remember something that hurt. He held out his hand.

"I remember," he said. "You are Julia, aren't you? You were with young Gordon, down at Ridley."

"I'm Jill. Nobody ever has called me Julia. Won't you sit down, Captain Mackey? You came to see Mother, did you? I'm sorry. She's out just now, but she should be back soon. Will you wait?"

He stood turning his cap around in his hands.

"I came," he said, "to see your brother's wife. The young Mrs. McFarlane. She's here, isn't she?"

"Yes, she's here. Shall I call her?" She went to bed, I think. It isn't there isn't anything wrong, is there, Captain? With Ric, I mean?"

"No, there's nothing wrong. Not with your brother, at least. But I have a message for your sister-in-law. But there's no special hurry about it."

"Will you sit down then? I'm sorry you find me in such disarray, but I was tired, and I didn't feel like dressing again after my bath."

He took the chair she indicated. He said, "You're very like your mother. She had hair like that, I remember."

"Oh, yes," Jill said, "you were an old friend of my mother's, weren't you? You told me, and I'd forgotten." She dropped on a stool and coaxed her thin garments to cover her brown legs and eased her broken arm into a comfortable position. "But I'm more like my father," she went on. "He was an officer, too. I was always sorry that I wasn't born a boy so that I could be a soldier like my father. I have a brother in the air corps—but you know that, of course. You've seen him, down at Ridley, I suppose?"

"I may have seen him," he evaded. "You've been hurt, haven't you? What happened? Car get away from you?"

"No—it was a horse. I went over her head. 'Can't I get you something to drink, Captain?'"

"I could use a drink," he smiled at her. "Could I come with you and fix it myself?"

"Of course, if you like. Men all ways like to get into kitchens, don't they? Jill led him through the hall and the dining-room, flipping switches as she went, noting that he seemed to be studying the rooms as they passed through them. "This house is very old," she talked on, pushing the swing door back and waiting for him to precede her into the warmth and peach-pickle fragrance of Mamie's kitchen. "My mother's grandfather built it before the Civil War, and the bricks were burned here on the place. It went to ruin for a while after my mother's father died—you see my mother didn't like farming—and then Mother came back and restored everything a little at a time, but she wouldn't spoil any of it."

Leftover biscuits and rolls may be heated in a casserole with a tightly fitting cover or in a paper bag. Sprinkle rolls with water and heat in oven for a few minutes before serving.

Hot muffins for any meal need never be a problem. Mix the dry ingredients ahead of time, store in refrigerator, and then just add milk and eggs before baking.

The Kitchen Is the Same

She was sliding the ice cubes out of the tray, and she saw him turn and reach for a glass and wondered how he knew where to look—but of course glasses were kept in the obvious place. If he hadn't found one there he'd have opened another cupboard door.

"Say when," she prompted, as she balanced the bottle over the glass. "Oh, but I should let you pour your own, shouldn't I? I'm awfully inexperienced at this sort of thing. Captain, you spoke about Lieutenant Gordon? You don't happen to know where he is now, do you?"

"I got mad, John I.," she said,

Make Your Easter Dinner Springlike! (See recipe below.)

Easter Favorite

According to the calendar, Easter comes after spring officially begins, but we have always rather looked to this special holiday as a start of the spring season. Is it any wonder then, that we try to make the dinner menu for this day especially springlike?

Traditionally we like to serve ham or lamb for Easter, but this is really up to you and your family as far as taste and budget is concerned. Whatever you plan to serve, garnish it properly and make the platter look as pretty as a picture.

A roast loin of pork does very well with a border of alternate browned potatoes and spiced crabapples. If you are serving ham, use the same garnish. But with lamb you might do well to substitute minted and spiced pears or pineapple for the garnish. In either case, the fruit serves as a delightful relish.

Roast Loin of Pork. (Serves 6)
5 pounds loin of pork
1½ tablespoons salt
Pepper

Have loin of pork prepared at the market. Rub salt and pepper into the meat. Place in rack in an open pan and roast in a 350-degree or moderate oven allowing 30 minutes to the pound.

Roast Leg of Lamb.
Wipe meat with a damp cloth, place on a rack in an open pan. Rub meat with a clove of garlic and salt mixed with a few grains of ginger, pepper and paprika. Add to meat in pan.

¼ cup butter
1 sliced onion
1 bay leaf
Juice of ¼ lemon

Add about 1 cup of water to the seasonings and roast in a moderate (350-degree) oven 25 minutes to the pound. Baste frequently with sauce and drippings in pan. One-half hour before serving, meat, pour excess fat from pan and baste thoroughly with the following sauce. Strain before serving.

Sauce for Lamb.
2 tablespoons butter
Juice of lemon
1 cup catsup
 Worcestershire to taste
2 tablespoons vinegar

Melt butter in skillet, add remaining ingredients, blend and pour over meat.

Easter Bunny Salad. (Serves 4)
1 envelope plain, unflavored gelatin
1 cup cold water
1½ cups hot pear juice
¾ cup grapefruit juice
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon salt
Green coloring
¾ cup cottage cheese
¼ cup dried celery

4 pear halves
8 whole blanched toasted almonds
Chopped almonds
2 packages cream cheese or 1½ pound cottage cheese
1 small jar pimiento cheese

Soften gelatin in cold water. Dissolve in hot pear juice. Add grapefruit juice.

LYNN SAYS:
Ways to Make Hot Breads Delectable

Hot breads, whether they are biscuits or muffins, require a light hand in the mixing. Don't worry if the ingredients are not as smoothly blended as a cake batter. They shouldn't be for best results.

A toothpick test, made by inserting the toothpick, is fine for testing doneness. No dough should adhere to the toothpick when it is withdrawn.

Leftover biscuits and rolls may be heated in a casserole with a tightly fitting cover or in a paper bag. Sprinkle rolls with water and heat in oven for a few minutes before serving.

Ever try splitting leftover biscuits, toasting them and spreading with jam, jelly or honey? Try them if you want something truly delicious.

Hot muffins for any meal need never be a problem. Mix the dry ingredients ahead of time, store in refrigerator, and then just add milk and eggs before baking.

Glory the muffin by occasionally adding dates, raisins, nuts, grated orange rind, etc., to them before baking.

If muffins or biscuits bake a little ahead of dinner, loosen them from the pan and set in a warm place. Never let them sit as they are, or they will steam and become soggy. The same goes for breads and rolls.

Grated cheese sprinkled on top of biscuits gives them delightful flavor and color. Do this before baking, of course.

Rubber scrapers are indispensable for getting the last bits of dough out of the bowl.

Baking powder biscuits, if there is a delay in getting them into the oven, may be placed in the refrigerator.

Muffins, buttered and toasted under the broiler, are a delicious way to use leftovers.

If you like soft biscuits, place them close together on the baking pan. If you like them well crusted, separate them one inch apart. Serve pan-baked rolls and honey with all salad luncheons for a treat.
