Unfortunately the picture, like most of the originals, went astray. Since that article appeared, two national magazines published stories about this magnificent bird, whose whoop is becoming fainter and fainter every day. One article estimated that only a hundred specimens were still alive and whooping. The other article placed the number at 29. Czar for the Airwaves

Radio is to have a czar. A sort of Judge Landis with time signals. And maybe cash prizes.

Broadcasters, advertisers and industry have formed a joint committee to eliminate radio evils. It has been decided to name a head man to clean things up. His first test will be to prove he can start functioning without a commercial.

"Radio today is far from perfect," syas one committeeman. This is the understatement of the generation.

Any and every industry has some faults. But radio is the only one that has subsidized and glamorized them. The things that annoyed the public in 1925 are still annoying it, but over more networks and with more cash prizes between exasperating mo-

> Readjustment, Unemployment

With approximately 218,000 veterans already having exhausted their readjustment allowances for unemployment and self-employment benefits, Veterans' administration cautions all veterans against wasteful use of these benefits, since they will remain available until two years after official end of the war.

The 218,000 who have exhausted these benefits cover the period from the inception of the program in September, 1944, to February 1, 1947. It includes the 60,000 veterans who drew the last of their benefits in January, 1947. The January total established a new record high. In December, 1946, the previous high, 38,000 veterans had exhausted their entitlement.

While the number who have used up all their benefits is not great in comparison with the nearly 6,000,-000 veterans who have been on the rolls for varying periods at one time or another, VA said an accelerating rate of exhaustions may be expected with the passing of time. VA admonished that by conserving their use now, veterans will retain a valuable asset to tide them over any possible future period when jobs may not be so plentiful.

Questions and Answers

Q. My grandson enlisted voluntaryears. He likes army life and is in Germany. He got into some trouble, the nature of which we do not know, but the fine was severe so we think it must have been quite serious. He was placed in a stockade and fined $300. This happened No-vember 22, 1946. His time will be up March 27. We did not hear from him from November 4 until he wrote us January 1, 1947. We tried to have him traced through the Red Cross, but had no result. He has had only two letters from us in all that time, received only two packages from us, although we have written many letters and send packages from time to time. He said his mail is censored, but states he has had good treatment and does not rebel at his sentence. Now what we wish to know is why does he not receive his mail and why do we not hear more frequently while he is confined. To whom should we write about this?-Mrs. L. W. H., Ponca,

Q. Is there any way of finding out about provisions for the wives of G.I.s going to Germany? My son will be six months old in April. I also have one child aged 3 years. I would like to know how often the boats go to Germany with wives; what clothes and household things and such we take; does the government pay my expenses to New York and does this mean food, train and such; how long is one in New York before sailing; are there shots and such to be given us before we sail; do we have to get a place to stay while in New York or does Uncle Sam attend to all that? Are there certain clothes we must take for on boat; how does one take care of baby diapers and such on the boat? My husband has put in for my coming but I'd like to be as nearly ready as possible. Or will I have plenty of time after I get my notice of sailing to do all these things?-G.I. Wife, Borger, Tex.

A. You will have plenty of time to make all arrangements after you receive your notice of ship sailing and can gauge your time in New York by the hour of your sailing. The government pays your way from port of embarkation and provision is made aboard ship for laundry and nurseries for children. It is possible that you may have to take "shots" before sailing. Would suggest that you write your husband It looks more and more as if the as to the nature of clothing needed in Germany. Also he can give you all details, since all arrangements officer.

> Q. I am a veteran taking advantage of the on-the-job training offered by the Bill of Rights for the G.I.s. S., Augusta. A. VA says the law provides that > the veteran taking this training is entitled to 30 days leave with subsistence payments. However, there is nothing in the law which requires the firm or establishment for which he is working to give him leave.

> Q. Please tell me if I will have any terminal leave pay. I joined the service January 28, 1946, and was sent to San Antonio A.A.F., M.T.C. and was discharged Decemlong enough to rate any terminal leave pay-R. L. D., Phoenix Ariz.

Richard McFarlane, who disappeared during the first World War, leaving his wife, Julia, and two children, suddenly returns 25 years later and identifies himself as Captain Mackey, stationed at the same camp as his son, Ric, come involved with Sandra Calvert, a divorcee who Captain Mackey knew at one time. He threatens her, but she and Ric marry anyway, and she arrives at Julia's farm to live. She startles ard as that of Captain Mackey. Sandra and Jill, Ric's sister, have a quarrel during which Sandra demands $10,000. That night Captain Mackey arrives, saying he is there to take Sandra to Ric

CHAPTER XIX

"Gordon?" He looked at her over the rim of the glass, and his eyes seemed to reach fingers of blue light that touched her, caressed her throat, outlined her brows, slid down the brown slimness of her arms and out past her finger tips. She felt a little troubled and untain Mackey, but when he spoke his flight training school, I think. He was a splendid fellow."

"I heard a plane go over a little while ago." Jill let water run to fill the ice tray, wondered if she wasn't used to this aspect of hosit, or sometimes Dave. "I thought | now?" about all of you-Spang and you, "I suppose so." He seemed to had picked up that awful old wooden potato masher. Mamie had left back to her husband." it lying out-it was a thousand years old and all scarred where Ric had envied you," she ended, thinly. He perched on the kitchen stool and lighted a cigarette. "Smoke these?" he asked. She shook her head. "Now and then. But Mother doesn't like it much." "Tell me a little about yourself.

You're not in school?" he asked, coolly. "Good gracious, no!" Jill laughed. "I'm practically middle-I'm almost twenty-seven years old. I was a war baby-last war. I've never seen my father. He didn't come back."

"In every war some of us don't come back," he said slowly. "But we're all vain enough to hope that we'll be remembered."

"It's the old urge for immortality, isn't it?" Jill said, sensing something in this man's mood that answered the aching thing she had kept in her heart so long, the part of her that belonged to Spang. "So, you see I have to be my father's immortality. Ric and I are his future-all the future he has. In school I used to read all those weird books, all about the transmigration of souls, and metempsychosis, and all that fantastic stuff, and for a while I pretended to myself that I was my father, that perhaps he'd been killed just at the very moment I'd been born, and that his soul had gone into my body, and that really I was Richard McFarlane." An oddly gentle smile moved over his face. "Perhaps that did happen. Perhaps his soul did go off and leave him and come to rest in your body. And if it did and if he knew I'm quite sure he wouldn't wish for anything better than to live on through some one so lovely and sweet as you!"

It wasn't a line, Jill knew. She knew about middle-aged wolves, and the ones in uniform were the worst of all-but this wasn't the old army game. This was deep, like poetry, like the Psalms, it was beautiful and from a man's heart.

She led him back to the livingroom, and found an ash tray for him, and forgot for the moment that he had really come to see Sandra. She hoped Dooley wouldn't stay out too late, because if Captain Mackey had really been an old friend of her youth, her mother would be disap-

She said, when the silence had stretched a little, "Do you have a daughter, Captain Mackey?" He looked up sharply, and she saw his lip twitch a little.

Talk About a Lost Daughter

"I lost my daughter," he said, quietly. "Oh, I'm sorry!"

"It was a very great loss," he went on. "Now that I've seen you I know how great my loss was.' "I'm sorry. We've both lost, haven't we? A daughter needs her father terribly, and I suppose fathers need their daughters, too, don't they?" "They need them very much. But sometimes they fail to realize the need until it's too late. I'm quite sure I didn't appreciate my daughter-when I had her. I-had my mind full of other things."

"But of course your daughter that you lost can be a sort of glory to you, don't you think? My father is like that to me. If my father could come back, I suspect he'd be a little embarrassed by the splendor I in vested him with, and very likely your daughter would be just a nice, human girl, too-maybe she'd worry you by staying out too late and smoking and things like that. But because we don't have them we can keep them wonderful and extraordinary, can't we? And maybe it comthem a little for being separated from us, if they know. Do you think they could know, possibly? But there was no boredom in his eyes. And his voice was a trifle hoarse when he spoke. "I wish your father could come back to live up to all the things you've built up for him in your mind, Jill McFarlane. But there's a big chance that he might be a sad disappointment."

Jill took the hand and pressed it, looking up at him, terdefended, remembering the sharp ribly sorry for him. "I'm sure of that," he said. "I have another plan I hope to be able to work out for Sandra. One that will be better for everybody.'

"It's certainly generous of you to take the trouble," Jill remarked. "I hope there is an answer to this problem. I know Sandra isn't happy here." She started for the door

"So you're Captain Mackey?" the old man said.

Richard McFarlane looked at his father steadily. "I am Captain Mackey, Mr. McFarlane," he said, "How do you do, sir?" evenly.

Shake Hands Then John I. said, "So you've come to take that woman awaythat one young Richard married? He sent for her, did he?"

The captain waited a moment before he answered. Then his words came slowly. "I promised Richard McFarlane that I would take her away from this house, sir. It's quite important that I keep my promise to Richard McFarlane, don't you think?'

John I. drew his lips in. "Give me a minute or two to get used to it," he said, dryly. "A captain keeping a promise to a private."

"Important that a captain keep any promise, Mr. McFarlane, even a promise to himself," the other man reminded him.

"In a case like that, I'd say he'd better go very slow making promises to himself," John I. remarked. "He might make a few he couldn't

'Now, take a man that had never had a thought for anybody but himself, his experience might not be much help to him-that is unless he changed his ways a lot."

"Only fools and dead men never change," returned the captain. "Experience can teach a man a great deal. It can teach him, for instance, that there's a time for speech and a time to be silent." John I.'s black eyes sharpened and then grew sober.

"If you've learned that, sir, you've learned the most important thing in human experience," he said. "I'm an old man and I know."

"And being an old man, you'll give a younger man credit for trying? "I am always glad," John I. Mc-Farlane spoke slowly, and Jill was a little impatient with him for being so pontifical and making such tiresome speeches, though Captain Mackey seemed not to be bored or amused by him at all. "I am always glad," the old man went on,

'to give credit where credit is due. Good night to you, Captain." They shook hands again, and Jill saw how little her grandfather looked, so shrunken, so old. Then he turned and went toward the stairs, and he seemed to grope for the door, and she heard his feet stumble as he went up ahead of her. She heard his bedroom door close, as she reached the upper hall, and sound beyond it, a sound almost like a sob. Poor Grandfather, Jill was thinking, he was getting so old! She knocked on Sandra's door, and it was opened with suspicious alacrity. Sandra still wore the to make a good pie, and that is in feathered robe, the sculptured curls, regard to the filling. Make it just the bluish shadow on her eyelids, the rosy curve of lip meant for allure. But her eyes were hard as the filling has to be good, too! matrix and as cold.

"What's Rod Mackey doing here?" she demanded. Jill closed the door, moving into the room. "You listened, did you? He's a captain from Ridley Field. He says he has come to take you to Ric." "How can I go to Ric? I don't even know where he is! How will I live when I get there? Ricky told me to stay here till he sent for me.

This is some kind of trick. I know Rod Mackey. I'm not going." "Don't be an idiot, Sandra, Captain Mackey told Grandfather that he had promised Ric to bring you. 'All right. I'll talk to him." she said, sullenly, "but I won't go with No woman in her right mind

"Oh, no doubt. You're the naive type that men like Mackey look Sandra was posing, Jill saw, even walking down the stairs. Her head was up, she was pointing her toes, she was being regal and keeping her eye on the long mirror in the lower hall. She was the affronted queen when she faced Roger Mackey at the living-room door. "Just what," she asked in an imperious tone, "is the meaning of this, Captain?"

Mackey's lips twitched, and his eyebrows flickered. He was seeing through Sandra, too, Jill noted. He said, "Go pack your bags, Sandra. I'm taking you to your husband.' Sandra tilted her head and narrowed her eyelids.

A Close Call

For Mackey

"Thank you, I'm not going. I doubt if Ricky knows anything about this at all. You're meddling again, aren't you, Rod Mackey? Asserting your authority to meddle in the affairs of other people, that don't concern you!"

"On the contrary, this concerns me," he insisted. "I have a very definite commission. Otherwise I shouldn't have made this long trip." "For goodness sake, Sandra, you said you were breaking your heart because you had to leave Ric," Jill exclaimed. "I should think you'd be and fluffy with whipped cream and delighted to have a chance to go with Captain Mackey." Sandra gave her a slow, pitying look. "Did you ever see this officer before, Jill?" she asked, cold-"Why, of course. I met him at Ridley Field." "Does he remind you of some one? Some one you've seen before?" Sandra went on in that same deadly level voice. Jill did not answer because she was startled by the odd, harsh sound that Captain Mackey made.

But his voice came, level and even. "I remind her of her father," he said, looking straight at Sandra. 'And she reminds me of my own daughter. We've been comforting each other because we both know what we have lost. People with imagination should indulge their whims sometimes, but not too far -not too dangerously far! ### LYNN SAYS: There's a Trick in Doing Even Simple Tasks

When cleaning green vegetables, always add a handful of salt to the second water in which they are washed. This will cause the sand in the leaves to sink to the bottom of the pan and really help make vegetables clean.

Use old soap scraps by grating them or putting through a food chopper. Then add water and make a soap jelly to use for laundry.

Use a wire basket when storing potatoes to allow free circulation of air around the vegetables.

To freshen dried out English walnuts, pour boiling water over them, then allow to drain and dry. Drying may be done in a slow oven.

Mix sparingly when making pastry and don't get too ambitious. This applies also to rolling dough, which should be done in outward directions with very little pressure on the roll-

Dyeing printed fabrics is feasible and often produces highly desirable color effects. The print designwhich cannot be removed - will show throug, even when dved black. The resultant effect will depend upon the fabric and strength of the dye solution. Frequently a striking two-tone effect is produced. It is suggested that a darker dye-color be employed on prints.

Roasting Almonds Almonds or raw peanuts may be roasted except that they usually are blanched - have their skins removed - first, and must be heated a little longer. These nuts are heated until light brown in color-about 15 or 30 minutes in all, depending on the size and the degree of brownness desired. For "redskin" peanuts, follow the same method but use unblanched, raw peanuts.

Fur Center Alaska produces 17 kinds of commercial furs and they yield about $2,300,000 annually. One of the marked developments in the territory in recent years is the growth of fur farming, particularly of mink, blue and silver foxes. In the territory there now are more than 60 fur firms, some of them occupying whole islands.

Shaped Like Minnow Net

On the map, South-West Africa is shaped like a minnow net, its handle reaching 300 miles northeastward to touch the Rhodesias. The handle is cattle country; sheep and goats graze in the cooler south. Averaging 3,600 feet above sea level, the land is too arid for grain crops. Most of the rivers flow only for one month of the year, but water is readily raised from wells sunk in dry river beds.

Citrus Aids Digestion Citrus fruits provide acids and flavors that stimulate the appetite and aid digestion. The bulk they contain helps prevent constipation. Their mineral value is of importance to health, too. Let's think of 2,000,000 cattle and 350,000 head of sheep. Just imagine pastures so lush that each section of land cares for 40 head of cattle. Picture a state where farms average 112 acres each. No, it's not some western state. It's New York!

After all, Manhattan island is a small part of the area of New York, which is 49,576 square miles of farms, orchards, mountains, valleys, streams, lakes, forests and other rural, beautiful and natural things. Times square, Greenwich village, Fifth avenue and Wall street are rivaled by Niagara falls, the Adirondacks, the Catskills, Lake Placid and Mount Marcy. The subways are no match for ski runs and toboggan slides. It's a long step from the Bowery to country lanes and old farmsteads

Champlain Came First. New York has so many firsts they can't be counted. Samuel de Champlain was the first white man to set his foot in New York as well as the first to teach religion to the Iroquois. Within a year Hendrik Hud-son anchored his little ship off Coney Island, finally sailing up the river which bears his name to the present site of Albany

Two years later some Amsterdam merchants were given a trading charter for New Netherland, as New York was to be known. The first post was set up in 1613 on Manhattan; the second in 1614 at Fort Nassau on Castle island, south of the present Albany. Ten years later all Manhattan island was purchased from the Indians for $23 worth of trinkets. Forty years later, in 1664, a British fleet demanded surrender of New Amsterdam, and Director-General Peter Stuyvesant found himself with little support. He capitulated, and the duke of York was granted the conquered land. "New York" became the new - and lasting -

As years passed, more and more people flocked to the New World, many of them finding the rich lands of New York state to their liking. Hamlets, villages and cities sprang ap, knit together with a network of zines, furniture, carpets, business tame roads and highways. CHIEF EXECUTIVE . . . Thomas E. Dewey, who was born in Owosso, Mich., March 24, 1902, began his meteoric rise as a national figure in 1931 when he was appointed United States attorney for the southern district of New York state. As prosecuting attorney for New York county, he gained fame in prosecution of gangsters. Defeated for governor in 1938, he ran again in 1942 and was elected by a wide margin. He was re-elected in 1946 after losing the presidential contest in 1944 to the late Franklin D. Roosevelt.

ery, Valley of the Mohawk, the Niagara frontier-from these grew New York, a state which has mushroomed from scattered colonies to the most populous state in the union with 13,479,142 inhabitants!

Through the years, the centuries and many wars, the great industrial commonwealth of New York has emerged. During World War II, of all the war contracts awarded by the federal government in the 48 states, 11 per cent went to industrial plants in New York state. Of the 100 largest industrial corporations in the nation, 94 are represented in New York City.

Still, there are 153,238 farms in New York state, the appraised value of which is more than a billion dollars. The average growing season is often as high as 210 days, particularly in the Long island section. New York's own fruits and vegetables supply the state's large canning industries. Wines, champagnes, oysters, seafoods, poultry, eggs and other products go to nearby mar-The last prewar year placed a total value of more than 300 million dollars on New York's agricultural products, with milk the largest farm revenue producer.

Today the port of New York City is the nation's foremost center of foreign trade, and yet its people like to recall that it was there that George Washington was sworn in as first president of the United States. Buffalo is the nation's largest freshwater port, yet when white men first came they found a basswood forest and Erie Indians fishing and hunting along the creeks and lake. And there are Binghamton, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Yonkers and others -all playing an important part in commerce and trade today.

Those who live in New York -anywhere in the state-have playgrounds close at hand. There are mountains, seashores, lakes, rivers, waterfalls, farm lands and more than 70 state parks. Niagara falls, the Thousand islands, Ausable chasm, the Palisades, Howes caverns, Lake George and many others are points of interest for natives and visitors alike.

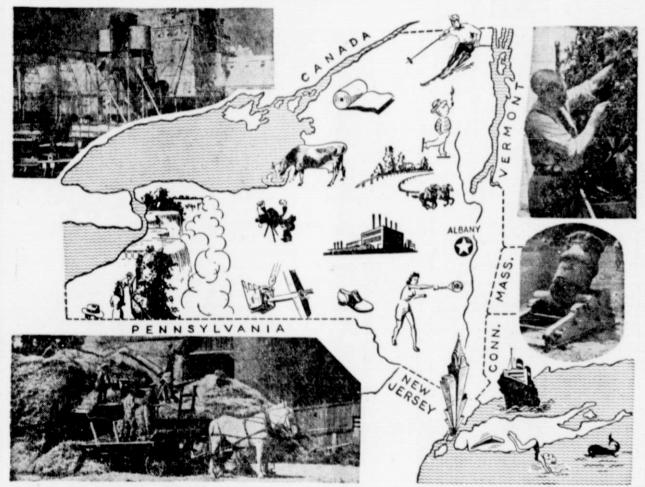

Lake Placid is internationally known as a summer and winter resort, with toboggan slides, ski runs, skating rinks, stables for skijoring horses and kennels for sled dogs. There are literally hundreds of other places in the state for winter sports. Saranac lake is famed as a health resort as well as a winter and summer sports center.

Lures Vacationists.

Coney island, Brighton and Manhattan beaches, and Long island, with its Riis park, Rockaway, Long beach and Jones beach, provide a playground for the great metropolitan areas. Southampton is the scene of a noted society colony, and Staten island has a number of resorts.

And there's still New York City. with its universities, its cathedrals, museums, libraries, subways, bridges, parks and driveways-one of the great wonders of the modern world!

WORRY GOP LEADERS

WASHINGTON. - Why some Republican leaders are reaching for the whip is not difficult to ascertain, You can guess this one accurately from the scoreboard, which to date shows no runs, no hits and innumerable errors.

Their congressional leadership is in danger of nullification, and this of course means nullification of democracy. The matter is no less important than that. The Trumanites (unions?) who look at the situation gleefully as a chance to ruin the election prestige of their adversaries need new glasses. The Republicans who think they can gain political prestige by appealing to class groups are no less blind.

The only development which could save this democracy is for the Republicans to get the chance for leadership which the people gave them in the last election. Otherwise there will be no leadership, only nullifying conflict at the helm.

Mr. Truman did not have to call off his vacation for a crisis in Greece. He has one here at home which would warrant attention. If you do not believe me, look at the scoreboard on the gross Washington leadership to date: The closing of the senate hearings normally would bring a report and bill on union reform within a week or 10 days. Then will come long senate debate, which reporters suspect cannot be concluded for three or more weeks. The house committee was late getting started for some reason, but has a plan to get its bill out there ahead of the senate. Also the debate there will be shorter. But after action is taken by the house, the two bills will go to conference (because both bills will not be exactly alike) and the final form will be wrangled out. Ultimately dispatched to the White House thereafter, the legislation faces prospect of veto and it then may return to both houses to pass

Will Resemble Case Bill.

Anyone who figures all this can be done within two months is taking liberty with reasonableness. It is likely to require three or

The final form, as nearly everyone has guessed by now is likely to follow the Case bill some modifications, or what will be called the Ball-Taft-Smith bill this time. It will be practically the same as Mr. Truman vetoed last year before election.

Those in charge of congressional affairs judge much of the debate will center around the proposals to abolish the closed shop and the restrictions upon industry-wide bargaining-both amendments of Minnesota's Senator Ball. One or both might be passed by one house, but the chances of either passing both nouses is elim

So while some Republican leaders are claiming the job they are doing in congress is unprecedentedly tremendous, they can hardly escape the conclusion that:

After all the current trouble and more coming, the result is apt to be just what was passed last session in a Democratic congress and failed then by

Look at the scoreboard again. They have pushed up near to final enactment and then stopped the bill limiting the presidency to two terms (a matter which could wait until 1950 at least before it could have any practical effect); also they have pushed abolition of the portal-toportal backpay increases (incidentally labor did not object strenuously) and the proposed cuts in the budget. On the budget they have spent considerable time and patience on the theory that they should pare expenses before adopting a tax reduction.

Less Tax Reduction.

This latter step naturally has had the effect of postponing tax reduction, which many Republicans consider to be the swiftly needed key to economic advancement of the country, equal in importance almost to labor legislation. This proposed tax stimulation to economic activity has run into the Truman promotion of more loans and relief to Europe. The question of loans has weakened some Republican backing for a 20 per cent cut and caused some congressmen privately to talk about 15 or 10 per cent or maybe even less.

Now I am informed with the utmost reliability, the Truman administration has not contemplated getting anything from abroad in return for the loans. Indeed, high Democrats tell me they cannot get anything in return for the money-for in-stance any guarantees from Greece or Italy or the other nations, which would promote our struggle to maintain our ideals in those nations against the growth of Communist and Russian interests, or any commit-

This would seem to make American taxpayers suffer not only a loss in proposed tax reductions, but apparently continued loss of their interests abroad in the nations where Communism has been active politically in the minority.

Otherwise, as Senator White, Republican floor leader, said in a speech inserted in the Record not long age, the Republicans have been snowed under with routine work. The trouble is you cannot put snow on the scoreboard. We'll have to wait and see what happens.

The deadliest moment in radio comes when sound effects fail, says William Spier, sound effects man. It's happened to him twice on "Suspense," when guns didn't go off as scheduled. Once an actor cried "Don't shoot me!", nothing happened, and another actor came to the rescue by exclaiming "Okay, I'll use this knife!" Recently, when William Bendix did "Three Faces for Midnight," two guns balked; finally one delivered the fatal bang.

George "Gabby" Hayes showed up at the Saturday night "Roundup" rehearsal the other day looking slightly green around the gills. He'd spent the entire morning riding a stagecoach in Paramount's "Albuquerque," and just couldn't take the Parks Johnson and Warren Hull, the famous Vox-Pop team, feel, like a lot of us, that radio commercials have their place and shouldn't mess up a broadcast. When the matter came to a showdown between them and their sponsor, they lost the argument, and quit. More power to them! So, beginning May 20th, they're released from their contract, repiaced by Arthur Godfrey's Talent Scouts.

Don't miss the new March of Time, "Fashion Means Business." It shows backstage views of new Paris and New York collections, shows New York's huge garment center at work, lets you see designers in their studios, gives the inside of the fashion business

Lamenting the difficulty of finding a singer to replace Betty Barclay, Sammy Kaye said "I'm not fussy; all I want is a girl who can sing like Dinah Shore, with a face like Lana Turner, a figure like Betty Grable's, and the natural poise of Ingrid Bergman!"

ODDS AND ENDS-Universal-International Pictures has bought "The Wist-ful Widow of Wagon Cap" for Abbott and Costello . . . Nice timing; within the past few months "David Harding—Counterspy" has had four shows on themes which made front pages the day before the broadcast . . . The reason so many well-known stage stars appear on "Crimes of Carelessness" is that Producer-Direc-tor Jim Sheldon has so many good friends in the theater . . . Cass Daley, comedy star of Paramount's "Variety," collects antiques—hought an 1880 clock recently, and found an old five-dollar bill

Bill Gargan, star of ABC's Saturday night "I Deal in Crime," had to call the police recently; he lives in a house once occupied by the late Jean Harlow, and a man who insisted that she was still there wouldn't leave till he saw her.

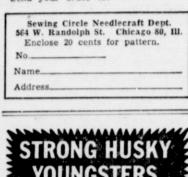

Time was when no movie studio would have dared make a picture based on a story of murder flaring out of race hatred. RKO's set to do it now; it's "Crossfire," starring Robert Young, Robert Mitchum and Robert Ryan.

It's a poor rule that doesn't

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

MOST ridiculous situation has arisen between my husbandandme," writes a young wife from Portland, Me. "Jerry is in an office that employs several attractive girls. Ever since our marriage seven years ago I have taken quite serenely the fact that when I telephone Jerry during business hours a charming voice answers, and that sometimes instead of calling 'Mr. van Arden,' it calls 'Jerry.'"

From time to time I have come to know some of these secretaries and bookkeepers, liking some, not liking others, just a little uneasy, now and then, as to what my husband thought of this one or that. Jerry is tall, handsome and magnetic, and it isn't human nature that the admiration of some of these girls should not affect him. We women who stay at home with our children-I have three small children-have a way of worrying about the trim, smart, perhaps unscrupulous women in the offices.

"Well, here's my problem. We live close to a man's college, and some of the boys have got into the habit of wandering over my way between eight o'clock and one or two o'clock classes. 'Two of them, brothers, are fond of the children, and glad of the 50 cents an hour I can pay for baby care, housecleaning, gardening, even dishwashing. They are gentle-men born, lots of fun, full of college gossip and delighted to escort me occasionally to some college show or lecture. "Jerry doesn't mind the occasional date, but he gets white with fury if he calls me at home and a man's voice answers the telephone. He points out that these boys come of a good family, have lots of idle time, can afford to read books, see shows, be amusing company. While he, he reminds me, is shut in an office all day, and comes home jaded and

'Stimulating Companions'

He says that he would be only too glad to fool around the house with the babies, get out into the garden, experiment with special dishes. I am a ghost-writer for one of the New York magazines that handles many manuscripts not ready for the printer, cutting and correcting, so that I have a fair income of my own and can afford some help. These undergraduate helpers of mine save me much time, give me stimulating companionship, and are sufficiently younger than I am to prevent any nonsense about love affairs.

"Since my husband expects me to be unsuspicious and happy about his office relationships with younger and better-dressed women," this letter concludes, "do you think it consistent in him to go into rages of jealousy because personable young men are assisting me with my work? Of late he has been muttering about the boys 'taking his place, alienating his children,' and all that sort of nonsense. If I talked that way about the girls in his office he would think I was an idiot. Should I concede him this point, double my housework, give up amusing friendships, jeopardize my job, simply because he cannot see that there is a parallel in our positions? Sometimes it seems to me that men are the most ridiculously inconsistent creatures alive." On this last point, my dear Martha, I emphatically agree with you. There never has been any consistency in the way men regard women; their charms, their faults, their wisdom, their foolishness. A Mother Honored The National Catholic conference on family life has chosen Mrs. Math Lies, of Andale, Kas., as the Catholic Mother for 1947. Mrs. Lies is the mother of 14 children and lives on a farm. Her husband is dead. At the same time the conference made public a letter from President Truman, in which he termed the family "the root and flower of civilization." He said the church had made a great contribution toward development of a sound and responsible family life.
