Annual Festival Revives Past In Picturesque Mining Town

Stars Still Follow Paths Traversed On 'Gold Circuit'

WNU Features.

CENTRAL CITY, COLO.—The golden tradition which was born 88 years ago in the heart of a mountain wilderness is being revived again this summer with presentation of the twelfth Central City festival. In the famous old stone opera house of this quaint city tucked in the heart of the Rocky Mountains, Beethoven's dramatic opera "Fidelio" and Flo-tow's romantic "Martha" are being sung by a cast of Metropolitan opera stars. Throughout the festival the picturesque old mining town itself becomes a theater, presenting life as it was when Central City was known as "the richest square mile on earth."

Known as "the summer theater capital of America," Central City annually is host to thousands of visitors during the play festival. Because of increasing interest in the production, the festival this year has been extended to two periods, the first running from July 4 through July 26 and the second performance being scheduled for August 2 through August 27.

Birth of the opera festival is traced back to the 1890s when miners of the little boom town of Central, despite grueling hours with the pick and shovel from daylight to dark, always managed to find time for an hour or so of music and drama of an evening. The prospectors who swarmed over the mountains after John Gregory's lucky gold strike which created Central City in 1859 had only the faithful burro to share their toil.

Save for a few Indian trails, there were no paths, much less wagon roads. So the performers of that bygone day, often world famous singers or actors, covered the "gold circuit" on horseback.

The historic Central City opera house, which was built in 1878 to satisfy the demands of the mining camp's unusual urge for the finer things of life, remains essentially the same today as it was 88 years ago. Not so the roads and trails. Gone is the early toll road up Golden Gate canyon, west of the town of Golden. Today motorists speed up the mountainside on a modern highway, paying no toll charges.

The opera house itself, reputed to have cost $80,000 and to have been paid for in great part in gold dust contributed by the miners, was the finest theater west of the Mississippi river in 1878. Built of native granite with walls four feet thick, the opera house possesses an ample stage, perfect acoustics and seating space for 750 persons.

GOLDEN TRADITION REVIVED. . . . The nostalgic days of the past in "the richest square mile on earth" are recalled in the annual Central City, Colo., Festival. The contrast between the present and the past is depicted in the top photo, showing opening night festival guests arriving in an old stage coach. Like a scene from the early days, the old gold prospector and his pack-laden burros (left) wend their way down Eureka street. A carnival atmosphere pervades Central City throughout the festival, with much of the gaiety centering at the historic Teller House. The Lloyd Shaw dancers (right) are shown in the Teller House gardens.

While many music lovers come to Central City simply to listen, others also are curious to view the hand-tinted frescoes of the old theater, its plate glass mirrors and crystal chandeliers. Many another is attracted by the seething, good humored boom town activities which crowd famous Eureka street.

Since the early days of the old mining town, there never has been a time when music was not the favorite byword of Central City. Early Cornish miners used to sing at their work, their old world melodies rising from the bowels of the earth with an eerie beauty

Early Central City people sponsored church choirs, quartets and even musical "duels," in which Irish ballad singers competed against adherents of German love songs. They paid royally when visiting artists came to town. So it was natural that when the famous opera house passed into possession of University of Denver in 1931, the first thought was to revive the musical glories of the past.

The modern era of Central City opera opened with Lillian Gish in the title role of "Camille" produced by Robert Edmond Jones in 1931. Since then, every year except during the four war years, outstanding productions with world famous artists and producers as well as the dramas and music of the masters have graced the old stage.

Canning Queries

Pressure cookers and other canning equipment will be working overtime to take care of garden produce this year, and those of you who have canned foods undoubtedly know that it's a big task, but not a thankless one when it comes to next winter's eating.

There's no other food task so gratifying as canning, for once you are finished, you have loaded shelves to look at. In order to avoid canning mistakes and failures, check over these points:

First, garden-fresh, sound ripe vegetables are the only kind worth canning. Unsound produce does not improve during the canning process, and it's a waste of time, money and food to put stale vegetables into jars.

Select all vegetables as carefully for canning as you would for your most finicky guest, and you'll be a long way toward success. Tender peas, small beets, plump, shiny corn, crisp and meaty beans, etc. all will give satisfactory results because they are prime produce to begin with.

Every vegetable should be washed thoroughly before the skin is cut or broken. Why? Because some of them have dirt and fuzz that is difficult to remove once it becomes mixed with the juicy content.

Pre-cooking and hot packing gives best results, as this method shrinks the vegetables and gives a better looking pack as well as less shrinkage in the jar.

Use Pressure Cooker
Some women can consistently and successfully process vegetables in a hot water bath. Either they are very careful workers or just plain lucky. However, fool-proof results are best obtained by using a steam pressure cooker. It is possible to bring food to a higher temperature in this way and kill harmful bacteria, thus avoiding spoilage.

Boil Before Serving
One of the basic rules for home-canned vegetables is to boil the canned vegetable 10 to 15 minutes before tasting or using. Never taste a vegetable which you may suspect is spoiled. If you are certain of spoilage, discard it. If not sure, cook it first and then taste.

This boiling is best done in an open saucepan. The rule applies to all vegetables except tomatoes and red pimientos, which are acid vegetables and hence in a somewhat

LYNN SAYS: Glamorize Foods Before Serving
For both fruit and vegetable salads you may use the prongs of the fork for fluting such things as cucumbers and bananas.

Use vegetables prepared in molds to make vegetable platters more attractive. Carrots, peas and spinach are nice to look at when served in a ring mold. Use a contrasting colored vegetable in the center of the mold.

Use meats and vegetables on the same platter to make them complement each other and give color to the table.

In the absence of greenery for the meat platter, try using some carrot tops which have been freshened by allowing to stand in the refrigerator in a glass of water.

Use the natural shape of vegetables when thinking of ways to serve them. For example, a cabbage head may be scooped out and used as a container for slaw. Beets and tomatoes may be scooped out and used for vegetables such as peas.

different class from non-acid vegetables such as peas, beans, corn, etc.

Some questions always come up concerning particular vegetables during canning time. Typical queries are these, and here are the answers:

What causes cloudiness in canned peas? This may be caused by insufficient cooking or some mineral in the water used for canning. Proper pre-cooking or soft, distilled water eliminates the cloudiness.

How high shall I pack vegetables? Pack them to within 1/2 inch of the top of the jar, except peas, lima beans and corn, which are packed to within one inch of the top to allow for extra expansion.

What causes corn to turn brown in the can? Most often this is due to a high temperature used during canning, which caramelizes the corn. Sometimes a high deposit of mineral such as iron in water used for canning will cause it.

Why do beets turn white? This may be due to certain varieties or to too old beets. Use the very dark red kind, and see that they are young and freshly gathered.

Why do vegetables fall apart when home canned? This is due to overprocessing or overcooking in pressure cooker or water bath. Watch the time and check with timetable to avoid this error.

Shall I overprocess or underprocess? Neither is good, but under-processing probably will result in spoilage while overcooking will give you wilted looking goods that do not hold their shape.

How much shall I can at one time? Unless you have help for preparing the vegetables, it is best to do it in several small batches so vegetables do not spoil. If you can get the produce from garden to kettle—or jar—within two hours you are working according to the best rule. Much depends upon your own speed and ability.

How much salt should be used? Season according to taste or not at all. Most people are satisfied if one teaspoon of salt to each quart of vegetable is added as a last measure to the jar before it is closed.

Should jar tops be wiped before cover is placed on jar? Yes, this is essential to remove any bits of vegetable, water or salt which might prevent a perfect seal.

What kind of covers should I use? There are a number of good varieties available, and each should be used according to the manufacturer's directions.

Ring black or green olives around the sides of a meat salad bowl to make it look attractive.

Never overcook food if you want it to look nice on the platter. Have it crisp looking even if cooked.

If vegetables lack appeal for the children, invest in a set of fancy vegetable cutters and use these for a change to add interest.

Use your gayest mats or linens when serving out on the porch or lawn. Pottery and heavy goblets are ideal for service here.

Chill plates for salads, and heat those for serving hot food to heighten the best quality of the food.

HAVEN IN HILLS

Old and New Vie in Vacation Fare

STURGIS, S. D. — Western rodeos and historic re-enactments of the gold rush days of 1876 share the tourist season limelight with such modern attractions as an air fair, horse races, theatrical productions and motorcycle classics in the scenic vacationland of the Black Hills.

Tempering the excitement of lusty celebrations are quiet lakeside resorts and lodges where fishing, hiking, horseback riding and loafing are the most popular pastimes. There are cool, mosquito-free evenings and long, sunny days in which to enjoy the enchantment of the pine-clad region, so steeped in western lore.

Scattered throughout the area are many caverns—enchanting underground wonderlands with their many crystal formations and lakes.

Largest of these is Wind Cave, a national park recently designated as the North American bison preserve. More than 1,500 buffalo, the largest free herd in the nation, already roam the national forest and prairie habitat afforded in the Wind Cave and adjacent Custer state park areas.

The summer events, which invariably follow a regular weekly schedule, opened with the traditional Black Hills Roundup at Belle Fourche. Other July events included Wall's anniversary fete, parimutuel horse races and the Miss South Dakota pageant at Hot Springs, the Black Hills air fair at Spearfish and Range Days at Rapid City, with Gold Discovery Days at Custer the week-end of July 25-26 completing the month's activities.

August visitors also will find a varied entertainment fare. Opening the month's activities will be the historic Days of '76 fete at Deadwood, August 1-3, followed by the Jack Pine Gypsy Tour and motorcycle classic at Sturgis, August 9-10; boat races at Sheridan lake, August 17; the Hill City celebration, August 23-24, and the Key City rodeo at Sturgis, August 30-31.

Concluding the summer vacation schedule, Lead, site of the Homestake gold mine, will stage its annual Labor Day fete on September 1.

Located at the gateway to the Pacific Northwest, the Black Hills area is making an all-out effort to cater to vacationists seeking variety in entertainment or simple relaxation on their holidays.

In these highest mountains of the United States east of the Rockies are found the scenic beauty of the famous Needles drive and Cathedral Spires in close proximity to trout streams and quiet canyon resorts.

Here, too, in the vastness of Harney national forest is Mount Rushmore, where Sculptor Gutzum Borglum and his son, Lincoln, blasted and carved the faces of Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson and Theodore Roosevelt, symbolizing four great periods in American history.

Courtesy, service, information and fairness. These four words have been adopted as the canons in South Dakota's treatment of vacation travelers. First enunciated at a series of tourist forums conducted by the Black Hills and Bad Lands association, the tenets for hospitality have been expounded throughout this scenic vacationland.

Charcoal Burner of 1875 Ranks as First Automobile in Nation

BOSTON.—Laurels as the builder of the nation's first automobile go to George A. Long, 96-year-old Buck Bay man, in the opinion of Massachusetts Council of Automobile Old-Timers.

The society believes that Long's charcoal burning motor vehicle, constructed at Northfield in 1875, ranks as the oldest automobile. It consisted of a chassis on wooden wheels, with a fifth wheel in front for steering and a solid axle to which the driving wheels were keyed.

Long got his idea for the contraption from an army camp in New Hampshire where he saw a steam boiler and visualized steam as the source of propulsion for his vehicle. The car was sold to a railroad, which replaced the wooden wheels with train wheels and used the vehicle to carry newspapers to Keene, N. H.

Patents were obtained by Long in 1883 on a two speed, 300 pound "steam road vehicle" which made the first use of the ball bearing steering fork, still used on bicycles.

Mother Cat Baffled By Offspring's Toes

SEATTLE, WASH.—Minerva, a mother cat belonging to Mrs. Mel Swanson, is baffled by her latest litter.

One kitten has four extra toes on one foot and three extra on another foot. Another kitten boasts six extra toes on one foot and five on the other.

'Million Dollar Baby' Is Common in China

NEW YORK.—A "million dollar baby" sometimes isn't so high. Associated Hospital service decided. The company received a bill for $2,400,500 from a subscriber who had just borne a child. The medical expenses were those of Mrs. Mary Johnson Tweedy, now in China, and represented the cost in inflated Chinese dollars. The amount was $201.04 in U. S. currency.

HIGHLIGHT OF VACATION FARE. . . . Western rodeos hold the limelight in entertainment attractions arranged for vacationers in the Black Hills. This rodeo scene is from the "Days of '76" celebration at Deadwood, center of a dude ranch territory.

Handcuffed Couple Foils Wedding Prank

SPOKANE, WASH.—Police were abashed when a worried young man entered the station to ask: "May I borrow a pair of handcuffs? I'm being married tonight." When he returned the handcuffs, the bridegroom explained: "If my bride and I had not been handcuffed together those friends of ours surely would have separated us as they had planned."

Busy Waiters Married While Waiting on Judge

FORT MYERS, FLA.—A restaurant provided a novel setting for a wedding here. Unable to get time off to be married during Judge Hiram Bryant's office hours, Mary Louise Sheffield, a waitress, and William Frank Arthur, waiter, produced their license when the judge came in for lunch and asked that he marry them while he was waiting to be served.

HOW IT STARTED

SLEPT LIKE A TOP—When a top first begins to spin it wobbles around noisily, but when it reaches top speed, it becomes so steady and quiet it doesn't appear to move. In this state it is said to "sleep." So, a person who has slept quietly, without moving, has slept like a top.

NOT WORTH HIS SALT—Roman soldiers used to receive an allowance of salt as part of their pay. Hence a useless soldier was not worth his salt.

SPINSTER—In the old days it was the custom that a young unmarried woman should not marry until she had spun herself a set of linens for herself, bed or table. Thus unmarried women became known as "spinsters." The term is used in all law proceedings to identify an unmarried woman.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Cream won't drip from the pitcher if you put a bit of unflavored fat on the tip of the spout.

Wear an apron when you sew. Have large pockets in the apron for holding thimble, scissors and tape measure.

Dry rot seldom attacks timber when the air can circulate freely under the boards. It is important therefore to have good ventilation throughout the home.

Wash cloths last much longer and the edges will not fray if they are turned back and stitched on the sewing machine when new.

Human Thing to Do
Seeking to teach a beady-eyed chimpanzee to play tennis, a great psychiatrist took the animal to a squash court, where for 20 minutes he banged the ball against the walls of the court, running madly to retrieve it, tripping a couple of times, and once bashing his forehead with the racket.
The chimp watched without moving. Finally the exhausted psychiatrist put the racket and ball within easy reach of the animal, left the court, and closed the door behind him. Then he knelt and peered through the keyhole to watch developments.
Glued to the other side of the keyhole was a beady little brown eye.

TESTS show that Champion Farmer Renk's Firestone Champion Ground Grips will clean up to 100% more effectively, pull up to 62% more, last up to 91% longer, and roll smoother over highways than any other tractor tires.

The RENKS of Sun Prairie use Firestone CHAMPION GROUND GRIPS

Only Firestone Champion Ground Grips are made with connected curved traction bars. The curves... and the connections... give the bars far greater strength than those on any other tractor tires. They eliminate the excessive beading and wiping and rapid tread wear of broken center tires. The curved bars cut into the soil with a sharp, plowlike action. Mud and trash fall freely from tapered openings between these powerful traction bars. The continuous contact of the connected curved bars with the highway insures a smoother ride.

A FARM CORPORATION, one of the first, has enabled Champion Farmer William F. Renk, Sun Prairie, Wisconsin, and three sons, Walter, Wilbur and Robert, to build an efficient and profitable farm business. Last year, on 1053 acres in 7 farms, they produced more than 3 million pounds of grain and livestock... more than enough to load a freight train a mile long. Purebred Hampshire and Shropshire sheep earn top awards... bring highest prices. Their hybrid seed corn and certified seed grains are in demand. Soil fertility, through fertilization and an efficient cattle and hog plan, is high. Last year 50 acres of Forvic oats yielded 102 bushels per acre. Farm work is mechanized to the limit. The Renks, shown below, L to R, William F., Wilbur, Robert, John (Walter's son), and Walter.

Like Champion Farmer Renk... and other cost-conscious farmers... you will get more pulling power and longer life if you specify Firestone Champion Ground Grips for your new tractor... or buy Champions for your present tractors.

Presidential Veto Poses Problems

Roosevelt Said, 'I Forbid' 631 Times for New Record

By BAUKHAGE News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—"I forbid!" said President Truman. He said it 74 times to the 79th congress while Democrats were still in control. The score for the Republican-controlled 80th is not quite complete at this writing.

Every American president is permitted to say he forbids, but he has to say it in Latin. The word is "veto." Of course the congress can say "So what?" right back, as they did so emphatically this session in the case of the Taft-Hartley labor act, but they have to say it two-thirds strong, a strength they aren't always able to muster, as history has shown.

Why the founding fathers were so generous with presidential power, which they never conceived as expanding to its modern breadth, we don't quite know. The veto is written down in Roman law, but Latin is a dead language. In England, the crown has a veto power over parliament, but it is almost as dead as Queen Anne, since it hasn't been used since her time.

It seems to have flourished on American soil. "We ought to call it National Veto Week," House Majority Leader Halleck is reported to have remarked when the third presidential veto in one week of June bounced back into the lap of the 80th congress. Others studying headlines "President Nixes Tax Cut," "Truman Vetoes Labor Legislation," "Wool Bill Turned Down," shook their heads and opined that Harry S. Truman was the vetoing president yet.

Nonsense, said capitol old-timers. Harry Truman, according to the record, has been very sparing of his veto, and has a long way to go before he attains the really big-time veto statistics racked up by Pres. Franklin D. Roosevelt (who had more time than anybody else to exercise his thumbs-down power), Grover Cleveland (the veto runner-up), and Ulysses S. Grant.

"Why," the old-timers grunt, "when FDR was president, it seemed as if we had a veto on something or other almost every day." And the record shows that he said, "I forbid," or achieved the same end by the pocket method in 631 instances. (A "pocket veto" comes about in this way: The president has 10 days, not including Sundays, to act on any bill. Congress sends a bill to him. If congress adjourns before the president's allotted 10 days are up and he still hasn't acted on the bill, it cannot become a law. That is considered a "pocket veto.") Cleveland, during his two terms in office, used his veto power 584 times, and was overridden only twice. The majority of the Cleveland vetoes were personal pension bills many based on utterly absurd claims growing out of the Civil war. At first, Cleveland's forthright refusal to permit these myriad, lilliputian treasury raids infuriated Civil war veterans. Later, however, the GAR came to consider him its friend.

Ulysses S. Grant, a poor third to Roosevelt and Cleveland, vetoed 92 bills, was overridden four times. All told, the veto power has been used more than 1,633 times by presidents. George Washington started it off by killing two important acts— one having to do with legislative organization; another which would have reduced the size of the army. He was not overridden. There were eight other presidents who never experienced a veto upset by congressional action—Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Polk, Buchanan, Lincoln, McKinley and Harding.

On the other hand, there were several presidents who scorned the veto entirely. John Adams, Jefferson, John Quincy Adams, Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, Taylor, Fillmore and Garfield. Perhaps because all was harmonious between executive and legislators in those days. Perhaps because, as some students suggest today, a sustained veto is a contradiction of the principle of majority rule—a rule of a minority of one-third of either house plus one, plus the president who is not supposed to have a vote. (It takes a two-thirds vote to kill a veto.)

Historic Trees Threatened

For years now I have walked back and forth to my labors under a Gothic roof of green, formed by the interlacing elm branches which, since Civil war days, have made my street one of the world's most beautiful avenues. Today there are some nude gaps in the raftered ceiling where huge branches have been ripped away by the wind and storm. But now there is a threat of greater devastation for our and other elm trees, ancient and historical, or merely beautiful, for the dreaded Dutch elm disease has descended upon America—two cases of virulent infection have been discovered within the District of Columbia alone, and no cure is known.

My generation found nothing exotic in the idea of the village square under the spreading chestnut tree. Today the smith would have a tough job finding a chestnut tree under which to build his smithy, even if you could find the smith. For, thanks to the infamous chestnut blight, a horsechestnut tree in this country is now almost as rare as a horse.

Most elms go that way? I talked this question over with a member of the American Forestry Products Industries, Inc. (a private industrial association). He said: "A recent house action reduced the federal appropriation for the control and research of the European beetle and Dutch elm disease to $51,000. If the cut is approved by the senate, it means the end of the Dutch elm disease laboratory in Morristown, N. J., where the department of agriculture's bureau of entomology and plant quarantine has conducted extensive research into the control and possible prevention of the insect and fungus.

An elm, according to official classification, is a "prized shade tree in the northeastern and central United States." But passing over its esthetic value, consider that its "wood is used for variety of purposes—especially slack cooperage, market and bushel baskets, for heavy crating and for veneers."

But what does an economic care for all that? Consider the White House grounds, for instance. In these quiet 18 acres there are something less than 350 trees comprising some 90 species. The two great magnolias planted close to the rear portico were placed there by Andrew Jackson. Nearly every president planted a tree—there is the Benjamin Harrison oak, the Harding beech, the Coolidge birch, several species set out under Hoover. Maples predominate, but the elms are next, and many have historic memories. Just southeast of the south portico is an elm said to have been planted by John Quincy Adams. There are others planted by Lincoln and McKinley.

Under these trees history lives, but for beauty nothing surpasses the high arched cluster, thick-tapered in summer, stark but graceful in silhouette in winter, which roofs my avenue.

A withering and partly defoliated 30-foot American elm severely affected with Dutch elm disease.

INDEX HIGH, TOO Gain Shown in Farm Income WASHINGTON.—Farm income during the first six months of 1947 was 36 per cent higher than that of the corresponding period last year, it was revealed in the agriculture department's monthly review of farm income.

Farmers netted $11,700,000,000 from the sale of their products during that period, with the total increased to about 12 billion dollars through government payments, the report showed.

Largest increase was 70 per cent registered in sale of meat animals. Cash receipts from dairy products were up 30 per cent from the corresponding period last year.

BARBS . . . by Baukhage The British merchant marine is now taking on female sailors. So perhaps even if it is a girl, sir, you can dress her up in blue and let her walk the quarter deck as daddy used to do!

Note from an Illinois town: A mother kitten is nursing three baby rats. (And they say there's no hope for United Nations!)

FIRE'S TRAGIC AFTERMATH . . . The tragedy which invariably follows in the wake of fire is typified in this picture of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Tate of Chatsworth, Calif., standing in the charred ruins that once was their home. A brush fire that swept the area destroyed many houses, including some under construction.

Mine Pact Draws Fire; New Aid Parley Opens

BETRAYED: Mine Pact

Rep. Fred A. Hartley (Rep., N. J.), co-author of the Taft-Hartley labor act, has charged big business and big labor with betraying the public in negotiating the latest John L. Lewis coal mining contract.

Hartley's attack followed shortly after southern coal operators followed northern and midwestern operators in signing soft coal contracts with the 400,000-member United Mine Workers.

He told the house that "at least one clear violation of the law" was contained in the contracts, referring to the section providing for a "checkoff" from the miners' wages.

The Taft-Hartley law, he said, permits a checkoff only for union dues, but the contract calls for a checkoff of initiation fees and union assessments. Hartley added that other sections of the contract "violate the spirit and intent of the law."

Noting that the contract afforded a "prime case history of the evils of industry-wide bargaining," he said that there was evidence of "collusion between the mine operator and the UMW with the intention of violating the law."

R.S.V.P.: Paris Parley

Pro-Communist Hungary turned down its invitation to attend the Paris conference on European reconstruction as 17 other nations lined up to participate in the talks, first step in carrying out the Marshall plan for aiding prostrate Europe.

The conference, previously boycotted by Russia on the grounds that the Marshall plan will be a foothold for American intervention in the internal affairs of Europe, will attempt to set up a scheme whereby Europe, with the aid of American dollar credits and supplies, will be able to lift itself from its economic morass by its bootstraps.

In addition to Hungary, four other Communist-inspired governments—those of Poland, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Bulgaria—also refused the invitations sent out by Great Britain and France. As the deadline for replies approached, Finland and Albania had not yet been heard from.

NAVY RESIGNATIONS GROW

Higher pay and a more satisfactory home life are the two main lures which have drawn the most bright and capable young career officers from the navy and army into civilian jobs at what is called "an alarming rate" during the past year.

In the last 10 months more than 1,700 naval officers have resigned commissions won at Annapolis to take higher paying civilian jobs. During the same period, the army lost only 250 West Point officers via the resignation route, but they are men whom the service can ill afford to spare.

OIL EXPORTS: Supply Russia

A special export license for the shipment of petroleum products to Russia was granted by the department of commerce hours after representative Weichel (Rep., O.), chairman of the house merchant marine committee, demanded the license be refused.

Weichel previously had telephoned William C. Foster, under-secretary of commerce, urging him to halt the movement of 246,000 barrels of petroleum being loaded aboard three tankers on the West coast.

"Meat animal prices in mid-June were about 50 per cent higher on the average than a year before."

The declining wheat prices are expected to continue into August or September. "Because of the very large export demand, however, the price decline will be less than is usual when a very large crop is marketed."

Prices paid by farmers for their needs in June averaged 230 per cent of the 1910-14 average. Prices paid for feed advanced to the highest level since last August.

In general, the statement concluded, the index of prices paid by farmers is expected to continue at high levels in the next few months.

VETO ATTACKED:

Evidence is growing that there is under way in the senate a quietly organized bipartisan movement to reduce or eliminate the veto power through which Russia has blocked virtually every important United Nations program.

Still in its early stages, the movement is interpreted as a reflection of strong apprehension in congress that the United Nations cannot continue to function under existing rules.

FARMERS PROSPER

Both farm assets and farm income have expanded tremendously since the outbreak of World War II, according to a late report released by the National Industrial Conference board.

Total assets increased about 90 per cent from $3.7 billion dollars at the beginning of 1940 to 101.5 billion dollars six years later. Gross income from agriculture shot up 124 per cent over the same period.

That income, plus government payments, totaled about 11 billion dollars in 1940 and only a little less than 25 billion dollars in 1945. Virtually all the gain was registered by income from agriculture. Government payments were not changed during the years covered by the report. Cash receipts from farm marketings rose from 8.3 billion dollars in 1940 to a very considerable 20.8 billion in 1945.

Real estate was by far the largest item among farm assets, rising from 33.6 billion dollars in 1940 to 56.6 billion in 1946.

ROMANCE: Royal Road

Princess Elizabeth, 21-year-old heiress presumptive to the throne of England, and Lt. Philip Mountbatten, 26, former Prince Philip of Greece, are formally engaged to be married this autumn, probably in October.

King George VI, and Queen Elizabeth cleared the road to royal romance by giving unqualified approval to the match and announcing the engagement in a traditional court circular.

Lt. Mountbatten is a second cousin to the king and a great grandson of Queen Victoria. As the husband of Princess Elizabeth, he will be Britain's first prince consort since Queen Victoria's husband, Prince Albert of Saxe-Coburg. He cannot become king, but probably will be given a dukedom shortly before the wedding.

King George is expected to ask parliament to increase Princess Elizabeth's income and perhaps give her husband a special allowance.

IT COULD BE WORSE

Shortages of petroleum products in the Middle West, although accentuated by the action of a major oil company in rationing gasoline to dealers, probably will not develop into a serious crisis, according to an article in the July issue of "Business Comment," published by Northern Trust company of Chicago. Supplies are not expected to fall below 10 per cent of the current demand.

Vets Learn New Skills

Watch-making, wood-carving, photography, automotive repair, radio and broadcasting technique, engraving, metal work, jewelry, plastics and leather-working are among the trades being learned by severely injured patients in most veterans' hospitals throughout the country.

These courses not only speed the recovery of the patients and reduce the number of readmissions, but also provide the veterans with an opportunity to contribute to their own livelihood after their recovery.

The program, VA says, is fitted to the individual needs of the patients and to the requirements of each type of hospital whether neuropsychiatric, tuberculosis or general medical and surgical hospital.

Watchmaking has attracted many seriously disabled veterans and has materially helped in their rehabilitation. Recently a group of 30 veterans completely paralyzed from the waist down because of spinal cord injuries have progressed so well they continue their training at the Bulova school of watch-making in Long Island, N. Y.

Questions and Answers

Q. My husband was in service in 1943 and he had cerebrosplinal meningitis. Since that time he has been sick, taking medicine and going to different doctors and to a veterans' hospital. He runs a fever almost every day. He is 42 years old, his blood pressure is 108 and his weight just 110. I don't know just what to do. He gets $13.80 a month pension and they won't give him work because he is so sick. How can we live on $13.80 a month and pay his doctors and medicine? Please advise me what you think the right thing to do about this sickness.—Mrs. H. M. Resery, La.

A. I would suggest that he make application for admission to the nearest veterans' hospital where he can obtain proper treatment at the expense of the government. It is possible that his disability rating may be increased so that he can draw more pension.

Q. I would like to ask a question on beneficiaries. My one and only child served almost five years in the army but never got a day's furlough all the time. He went down at Okinawa. I want to know the reason the parents as dependents do not receive the furlough pay that was justly to be our son's if he had lived to come back. I have had personal talks with a lot of our boys that did come back and every one said we most certainly were entitled to his furlough pay. Please give an answer to my question. A broken-hearted mother that lost all that mattered in this world.—Mrs. D. C. Snyder, Tex.

A. Suggest that you write to the Adjustment Division, Army Finance Center, Building 204, St. Louis 20, Mo., and explain your situation. We believe you are entitled to all back pay, a six month gratuity pay and whatever other benefits your son had coming at the time of his death. You should also check with Veterans' administration concerning his insurance and, if you are dependent parents and his father is living, you are both entitled to a pension from Veterans' administration.

Q. My grandson was discharged from the army a few months ago and he was to have had his tonsils and appendix removed before. They told him they would let him know as soon as they had room at the hospital. Now he was working in Wisconsin and he had to have his appendix removed in a hurry. The doctor there tried to get him in the vets hospital but they didn't have room for him so they took him to the local hospital. Now they tell him he will have to pay his own bill because he was not in Minnesota. How can we find out?—E. McG., Staples, Minn.

A. It is very unlikely that he can be reimbursed under the law unless he can prove that his appendicitis ailment was service-connected, which would be difficult to prove. The fact that he had contacted the army medical before his discharge might have a bearing and it would do no harm to take it up with Veterans' administration, but VA is not obliged to accommodate non-service connected cases unless they do have room in the hospitals.

Q. I have a brother who served in the army four years and was wounded in Italy. His right foot was shot all to pieces and he couldn't walk a step for a year. So they discharged him and now won't pay him but $24 a month. He has a family and is under the care of a doctor. He has spent around $700 for his doctor bills.—M. H. Addison, Ala.

A. There is no way for the war department to help him. His only recourse is to ask for a reexamination at Veterans' administration in the hope that his disability rating may be increased.

Q. How can I get my G.I. bill right training program extended? My year of training is about to expire but because of bad flying weather this past winter and spring I have not been able to get enough flying hours in to get my commercial rating.—G. W. R., Joliet, Ill.

A. VA states that regardless of delays in your training resulting from bad weather, the flying school that contracted for your pilot training must give you the number of hours of instruction contracted for. Subsistence allotment cannot be extended, however.

MAYBE some day, when a movie producer announces that he will search for an unknown girl who's perfect for the leading role in a big picture, and star her in it, he'll be greeted with the derision that he deserves. Of course nobody who's at all familiar with the workings of the industry believes him, but a lot of "unknown" girls do. They have high hopes of being chosen — then the producer announces that some experienced actress has been given the part. The latest offender is Jesse Lasky; after all the whoop-do about the role of "Olga" in "The Miracle of the Bells" he gave it to Talli, the Italian actress who recently made "The Paradine Case."

When John Larkin was in Hollywood he tried to get a bit part in the "Perry Mason" pictures, but didn't succeed. Disheartened, he headed for New York, took a radio audition—and now he's the "Perry Mason" you hear on the air!

Dick Jones, the 1943-44-45 "Henry Aldrich," has an important role in the Gene Autrey picture, "The Strawberry Roan," featuring Gloria Henry and Jack Holt. Pictures are nothing new to Dick; he broke in when he was six. He was the voice of "Pinochio," played the teenage Sam Clemens in "The Adventures of Mark Twain," and recently completed a featured role in "The Chase."

After five strenuous years in the army, Dan Dailey returned to Hollywood and dropped 20 pounds in his first stint before the cameras in 20th Century-Fox's "Mother Wore Tights." Lost the weight during the long dance rehearsals. In the Betty Grable picture he has two solo dance numbers, four elaborate production routines, and plays a strong dramatic role.

After 16 years of performing dangerous film stunts without a single serious injury, Don Turner had his nose broken three times in one year after he retired to his farm near Hollywood. He's back in pictures now, in "Silver River."

Probably the briefest romantic role in movie history is Paul Bradley's in "The Unfaithful." After appearing for exactly two minutes as Ann Sheridan's lover he meets death at the hands of an assassin, and becomes "the photograph of a corpse."

Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson used up 10 pounds of crepe beads in comedy sequences for the Warner Bros. Technicolor musical "Two Guys From Texas." Figure it up—a shoe box full of crepe weighs only two ounces.

Many of the tunes you hear in Western movies are written by Red Foley, the singing guitarist of "Grand Ole Opry." In all he's written 91 of them, one of the best being "Old Shep," written when his favorite dog died.

Ralph Edwards entertained professional visitors recently when "March of Time" cameramen visited his "Truth or Consequences" program. They were gathering material for a short on radio shows. So Edwards' zany show will soon be visible to thousands of movie-goers as it is actually broadcast, instead of in the exaggerated versions you've seen in full-length feature films.

Conrad Nagel, narrator of "Silver Theatre," seldom, if ever, bluffs a line on the air, but he does it just often enough during dress rehearsals to scare the cast. "And now, 'Silver Theatre,'" said he recently, and they shuddered.

ODDS AND ENDS—Betts Davis has given her big stamp collection to the veterans at Birmingham hospital. . . Ray Milland began his Hollywood career as a talent agent. . . RKO's "It's a Wonderful Life" was adjudged by the General Federation of Women's Clubs "the best picture of 1946-47 that portrays the highest ideals of American life." . . Jack Oakie returns to films as the comedy lead in "Stampede," which will be filmed at the Duke of Windsor's ranch in Alberta, Canada. . . Paul Whiteman's been holding reunions with the Hollywood celebrities since associated with him and his band.

Dick Powell, who thinks he used to use too much make-up, doesn't use any in Columbia's "Assigned to Treasury," and says he'll stick to that practice from now on. Just keeps evenly tanned with a sun lamp.

As a tense scene in RKO's "Rifflin' Raft" got under way, Verrill Murray, make-up man, accidentally flipped a lighted cigarette inside his open-neck shirt. Though it burned him, he didn't move till the scene was finished.

No Labor for Labor

SECRETARY OF LABOR Lewis B. Schwellenbach, a sad-faced man at best, is more mournful than ever these days. For the former U. S. senator, judge and law school dean finds himself heading a department of labor with little to do about labor and, as a matter of fact, with little to do about anything.

The long gray stone building on Constitution avenue, which houses the cabinet agency set up to promote the welfare of the workers of the nation has been fast emptied of its agencies. First the U. S. employment service was turned over to federal security. The retraining and reemployment administration to help veterans also was transferred to security. The Taft-Hartley bill makes the national labor relations board an independent agency and the federal conciliation service also is divorced from the department. The labor standards bureau has been made impotent by lack of appropriations.

Left for Schwellenbach to operate with an under-secretary and three assistant secretaries are the women's division and the bureau of labor statistics.

When members of congress get back to their homes they will be asked by veterans what happened to their 350 bills introduced; by housewives—what happened to prices; by farmers—what happened to the farm program; by school teachers—what happened to the teachers federal aid bill; by veterans and tenants—what happened to the housing programs and by the taxpayers—what happened to that six billion dollar appropriation act.

program; by school teachers—what happened to the teachers federal aid bill; by veterans and tenants—what happened to the housing programs and by the taxpayers—what happened to that six billion dollar appropriation act.

No Uncertainty Here

Labor will not have to ask congress what happened to labor. They know. The portal-to-portal pay bill and the omnibus Taft-Hartley bill are on the law books. Labor calls the measure a "slave labor bill." Industry dubs it a "Magna Charta for labor." And in the meantime, the president, who vetoed it, and the NLRB who must administer it, say they will give the measure a fast administration to make it work. It is almost certain, however, that some provision will be declared unconstitutional.

The national council of farm cooperatives doesn't want any tinkering which will change the purpose and operation of the farm credit laws. Witnesses told a senate committee considering H.R. 3756, already passed by the house, that the bill would "seriously damage" the present system by making it a direct government lending agency.

As adjournment of congress nears, the senate civil service committee still is playing politics with appointment of some 700 postmasters which have been awaiting confirmation for six months. It may take a last-minute log-rolling to get them through, if at all, before the gavel sounds for congressional recess.

'Sneak Attack'

A PARADE of witnesses, lobbyists, attorneys and big guns of the private power industry have been testifying before the house interstate commerce committee in behalf of a seemingly innocent measure introduced by Congressman William J. Miller of Connecticut.

This bill, however, is not innocent. In effect it would take most of the huge power trusts from under control of the federal power commission by repealing important provisions of the law creating the commission. Opponents of the measure brand it a "sneak attack" at the governmental policy of power regulation.

There is no denying the fact that the private power interests are finding the 80th congress a sympathetic one in their attempts to evade the anti-trust laws, to slap down public power which is giving cheap electricity to millions of users.

Action Delayed

The first six months of the 80th congress finds nothing done on President Truman's proposals for health insurance, universal military training or river valley developments, although in this latter category the record-breaking floods along the Missouri and Mississippi rivers have given added proof of urgently needed action. Likewise, there has been no action on federal aid to the needy, anti-poll tax or anti-lynching legislation.

Condemn Cuts

The congressional slash in armed services appropriations, with the consequent curtailment of military strength, has provoked the wrath of many veterans organizations. Paul Griffith, American Legion national commander, says: "America has burned its security candle at both ends. While increasing our obligations to support free peoples abroad, we have dissipated the military strength needed to meet those obligations."

"He glanced at the window, blocked by police . . . there was no escape."

was ship-shape—just as he had planted it three months ago. There was the box with the ten thousand dollars. Here was his gun, wrapped in felt. There were cartridges and stuff to clean the revolver in case it got rusty. And he had a complete change of clothes.

He could not miss! He had brains. That's why, when he got twenty-five thousand bucks from the last stick-up, he had only tried to get away with fifteen—he put the balance in the trunk with the rat and other gear. He had cached them just in case his plans went wrong, and he failed to get out of the country. Well, they did go wrong. He had trusted a guy, and gave him five grand to help his getaway. The "pal" had not only taken his money but squealed on him, and got the reward, too. But now he was in the same spot with the same amount of dough, only this time he could not fail, because he trusted nobody.

Alone in the dark, he got to thinking—and whenever it was dark, and he was alone, he thought of his mother. He liked Mom, not because of what she was to him, but because of the many favors she had done for him. He remembered how she used to battle the neighborhood hoodlums to save him from a beating. She was always looking out for his good.

Yes, sir, Mom was all right.

He stretched out, and fell into a peaceful sleep. Two hours later, he awoke, frightened! He shook with fear as he grabbed his gun.

A voice called hurriedly, "Eddie, Eddie!"

It was his brother. He did not answer. Dan called again, "Eddie, I must see you!"

Eddie let him in, then slammed the door and bolted it. He jabbed the revolver into his brother's ribs. "You're still playing cops and robbers. But you'll never live to collect your reward."

Dan regarded him coldly. "Mom wants to see you."

The savage tenseness faded from Eddie's face. "No kiddin'! After all that bunk they printed about me?"

"She doesn't know anything about you," answered Dan. "She hasn't been able to read for six years. I made up stories, instead of reading what was there."

"Thanks, Dan, I sure wish I could see her—but it's impossible right now."

"She's very sick."

"No!"

"It's your last chance to see her alive."

"I'll go."

He changed quickly into his good clothes. He stuffed the gun and cartridges into his pockets, and carried the money container under his arm. At the door he stopped.

"Listen, Dan, even though we're brothers, we never had any love for each other. If this is your trick to turn me in, I'll get you if it's the last thing I do."

Dan shook his head in sympathy. "Don't you trust anybody?"

"Only me—and Mom. Let's go."

In Dan's car they raced for home. Midway they ran into a heavy storm. Rain flooded the windshield faster than the wiper could clear it. Thunder boomed and lightning lit the countryside.

The storm was at its height when they stopped in front of a little white cottage. Dan jumped out of the car and ran to the house. Eddie followed. A flash of lightning, and Eddie turned to see a police car skidding to the curb.

Eddie pushed Dan inside and threw the door shut. He whipped out his gun, and leveled it at his brother.

Edison Phonograph Record Found in Institute Files. What is believed to be the earliest phonograph record now in existence came to light recently in the Franklin Institute museum files. It is a piece of flat lead foil, grooved in the manner of the current phonograph records, but these grooves are the reverse to the records we know today. The thick lead foil was wrapped around a hand-cranked drum on which a screw thread had been cut. The record was made by talking into a horn, at the narrow end of which was a diaphragm vibrating a needle. After cutting the record, the needle was replaced at the beginning of the sound track, the crank turned again, and one speech was reproduced in a husky whisper, although the words were clearly recognizable. On the morning of April 19, 1878, when Thomas Alva Edison visited the patent office to apply for the patent for his talking machine, Secretary of the Interior Carl Schurz asked for a demonstration of the new wonder. To prevent any talk-brating a needle, Schurz decided to make a talk in French. When the record was offered to Edison as a souvenir of the occasion, he declined it, with the remark that his laboratories had been destroyed by fire so often, that this old record had a better chance of preservation if it were to be kept elsewhere.

A Lot of Water The tropical Amazon basin is nearly as large as the United States. Rain totals as much as 200 inches a year in the Amazon jungles. The river, 4,000 miles long, is the world's greatest in volume of the water it carries. It has 1,100 tributaries. The largest ocean steamers can travel 1,000 miles up the Amazon during the period of low water.

Tree Sap May Freeze Foresters say that freezing may cause a tree to crack, sometimes with a loud sound, but not to explode, as is still widely believed. Sap in a tree may freeze and expand so that it cracks the wood, just as milk may freeze and break the bottle.

Compulsory Pasteurization First compulsory pasteurization law was enacted in 1908 in Chicago. All milk for our armed forces and 88 per cent of the fluid milk supply in U. S. cities of over 10,000 is pasteurized. The U. S. Public Health service says: "The public health value of pasteurization is unanimously agreed upon by health officials."

Big River of Milk Enough milk is produced annually in the United States to fill a river 3,000 miles long, 40 feet wide and 3 feet deep. If all the milk produced in the U. S. in one year had been put in quart bottles side by side, they would extend almost 150 times around the world.

Cracking in Radio Inside radios is a large tuning condenser, which has movable plates controlled by the tuning knob. Cracking noise probably is caused by a bit of dirt connecting the plates. A pipe cleaner run between the plates may stop the cracking noise.

Fire-Resistant Tree Because it is exceedingly fire-resistant, the jarrah tree of western Australia has been used in place of brick or stone in chimneys and fireplaces. It also is used under conditions where steel would buckle because of heat.

History of Glass The secret of making colorless, or "flint" glass was discovered in England, in the 16th century, however, Venetians discovered the formula for absolutely colorless and transparent glass and were able to blow it to extreme thinness.

Chile Cost to Spain The conquest of Chile cost Spain more in men and money than did all the rest of Spanish America. The reason: The courage, generalship and spirit of the native Araucanian Indians.
