In the dairy cattle judging contest in which all junior members who attended the meeting participated Gerald Lofy, Richfield, Route 1, placed first according to Del Wanles, county 4-H club leader, and Neal Nicholson, Hartford high school agricultural instructor, who had charge of the contest. Bernard Zinke and John Schroeder placed second and third, respectively. Other prize winners were: Bob Mayer, Melroy Juch, Donald Klett, Harvey Pockhard, Hroy Mittelstadt, Louis Koening Jr., Antonia Ellmayer, and Jim Esselman.

Local Drive of Children's Service Society Underway

Johnny's pudgy face breaks into an expectant smile on the letter many people in Washington county are receiving this week.

So that the Children's Service society can continue its service to children in Washington county, this drive for funds was planned by the local sponsoring committee under the chairmanship of Judge F. W. Bucklin of West Bend. Other committee members are: Mrs. H. W. Kuester of West Bend.

Johnny is one of the youngsters cared for by the Children's Service Society of Wisconsin last year.

Mrs. F. W. Schaefer of Hartford, Joseph Weninger of Allenton, Mrs. E. L. Rosenheimer of Jackson, Dr. Richard G. Edwards and Mrs. Charles Miller of Kewaskum, Mrs. Ada Thompson of Richfield and Mrs. Louis Hiesch of Slinger. No solicitation is being made in Hartford or West Bend since the agency is a member of the community chest. All contributions will be acknowledged by the society.

The Children's Service society is the largest non-sectarian private children's agency operating in all parts of the state. It provides foster home care for children who have no homes of their own, or who have been separated from their families by death, illness or divorce. Last year the society cared for 22 children in Washington county.

Some children come to the agency for only a little while and then return to their own homes. This isn't true of Johnny. His mother died when he was just a tiny baby and there were no relatives to care for him. Johnny gained almost ten pounds while living in his boarding home. Soon he'll have a mother and father of his own.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Clarence Mertes, who passed away two years ago, July 29, 1945: Time speeds on, two years have passed since death its gloom, its shadow cast within our home, where all seemed bright. And took from us a shining light. We miss that light and ever will. His vacant place, there is none to fill. Remembrance is the golden chain Death tried to break, but all in vain. To love, to love and then to part. Is greatest sorrow of one's heart. The years may wipe out many things. But this they wipe out never. The memory of the happy days. When we were all together. Sadly missed by his wife and children.

HOUSEHOLD MEMOS... by Lynn Chambers

Can Your Most Luscious Fruit (See recipe below.)

Fruit Preserving

This is the year many women have waited for—the year when they could obtain unlimited quantities of sugar to put up all the fruit in their orchards, and berries in their patches.

For many of us, it has been so long since we put up fruit in any quantity that a quick brush-up of methods is essential. As in all big undertakings, the underlying organizational work is most important, and this can be done the day before.

The day before you begin actual canning, check on equipment to be sure that it works properly. For fruit and berry canning you will need a water bath, which may be a large kettle or broiler, fitted with a rack, and a tightly fitting cover. Or, you also may use a pressure cooker for processing, but this is not as essential for fruits as it is for vegetables.

You will need several large pans and kettles for preparing the fruit and for making the syrup. You also will need to prepare jars, checking them for cracks and imperfections, and washing them in hot soapy suds. Make certain you have enough covers or lids.

Estimating Amounts

Although fruits and berries vary in size and moisture content, it is still possible to make some sort of estimate as to how much syrup and the number of jars you will need. For sweet fruits, you will use a syrup made of 2 cups of sugar to 4 cups of water; for slightly acid fruit, use 2 cups of sugar to 3 cups of water; for acid fruit, 2 cups of sugar to 2 cups of water is ample. If the fruit is very acid, 2 cups of sugar to 1 cup of water is essential. The syrup is made simply by adding the sugar to the water and boiling together for 5 minutes.

If you are canning large fruits such as peaches and pears, allow 1 pint of syrup to a quart jar of fruit. For small fruit, or berries, you will need only a half pint of syrup to the quart.

The amount of fruit usually depends upon the size, but ordinarily we count 2 pounds of fruit for the quart jar. This will aid in estimating your yield.

Method of Packing

Some fruits and berries are hot-packed, but most women prefer using the cold pack method for preparing fruit for canning as it takes less time. If the fruit is carefully packed, there will be little floating. Wash and clean the fruit, peeling and coring, slicing and stoning when necessary. Pack into sterile jars and attach the lid, using manufacturers' directions.

Process by placing the fruits in a boiling water bath, making certain that the water comes to two inches above the jars. If the water tends to boil away during the processing time, it's a good idea to have a kettle of boiling water near by from which the supply can be readily replenished.

Count the processing time from the time the water starts boiling. When processing time is finished, remove jars (with a jar lifter to prevent burning the fingers) and place on thick layers of newspaper to cool.

For many of the new type lids, the manufacturer does not approve inverting the jar to test for leaks. This is one reason for not inverting certain types of jars. When the jars are cool, wipe them off, label and store in a cool, dark place.

Use This Time Table
If you are using the water bath, which is recommended by most experts, you will want to observe the processing time very carefully. The following fruits are processed for 20 minutes: apricots, blackberries, blueberries, cherries, currants, gooseberries, peaches, pears, plums, raspberries, rhubarb and strawberries.

Apples and pineapple, processed in the same type of water bath, will require 30 minutes, while quinces require 35 minutes. If you are using the pressure cooker for processing, keep the indicator between 5 and 10 pounds pressure and process all fruits, except pineapple and quinces, for 10 minutes. The two exceptions will require 15 minutes processing.

Queries Answered
How high should fruit be packed for canning? Pack fruit and syrup to within one inch of the top.
How much salt should be added to water in which peeled fruit is placed to prevent discoloration? Add one teaspoon of salt to each quart of water used.

What makes fruit and tomatoes float? Too much processing, too heavy a syrup or too loose a pack may be the causes.
Why should fruit for canning be uniform in size and ripeness? Fruit should be evenly ripe and about the same size so that processing will be equal.

Can I can over-ripe fruit? No, it's too difficult to get a good product. Use over-ripe fruit and berries for fruit butters as the fruit will have to be mashed and there is enough sugar to act as a preservative.

Old-timers may remember "Secrets," made as a silent picture in 1924 with Norma Talmadge, again in 1932 as a talkie with Mary Pickford. Samuel Goldwyn will do it again, setting it in the U. S. A., and starring Teresa Wright and Dana Andrews.

"Duel in the Sun" has grossed about $7,000,000 and caused no end of discussion. Some say it's wonderful, some say it's bad; others claim that it's a satire on all pictures of that type, and scream with laughter over the blue faces created by Technicolor. Of course the answer is that that enough people have paid to see it pile up $7,000,000.

A deal is under way to film a series of short subjects based on Gabriel Heatter's "A Brighter Tomorrow," stressing the point that courage can overcome practically insurmountable obstacles; a film mogul thinks the material is wonderful.

Profuse apologies are extended to William Bendix (who didn't ask for them) because his radio program was called "Where There's Life" instead of "The Life of Riley" recently in this space. Also, we'd been told he wasn't a Brooklynite. Seems he did live in Brooklyn, though he wasn't born there. So if the citizens want to name him "Mr. Brooklyn" it comes naturally.

Bud Abbott and Lou Costello have a contract with Universal-International permitting them to make one outside picture a year, so they've signed with Eagle-Lion to do "The Noose Hangs High."

In September—and his time, too—Jack Lawrence gets his own radio program; he'll play the piano, sing his own songs, and introduce them. In case you didn't know, he wrote such hits as "Symphony," "If I Didn't Care," "All or Nothing at All," and the current "Linda." Also wrote the lyrics for the songs in Greer Garson's forthcoming musical, "A Woman of My Own."

You'll see Betty Hutton on the screen in "Dream Girl"—but you'll hear Nadine Connor's voice singing "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly" in the sequence in which Betty imagines herself an opera star, impressing Macdonald Carey.

Penny Singleton ("Blondie") has become a backyard theater manager. She and her husband have built a miniature stage with sets, seats for the audience, curtains and an arch at the rear of their home in Van Nuys, Calif. It's the special property of their youngsters, Dorothy and Susan, and Penny is delighted with its name—it's called the DorSue, of course.

ODDS AND ENDS—Josephine Fox doesn't have to stretch her imagination to play the role of seventy-year-old "Miss Nancy Travers" on "Young Dr. Malone"—She's eighty years old herself. . . . At the age of 16, "Willard Waterman" of "The Guiding Light" had his own ambition—to quit smoking coal in his father's coal yard. . . . Phil Baker is writing his autobiography, "I Shop for Pallbearers." . . . Movie executives are listening to Peter Lorre's new "Mystery in the Air" series Thursdays nights on NBC, with the idea of starring him in a series of pictures based on some of the famous stories he's using.

We are always hearing that radio actors don't look like the characters they portray on the air. For "Arthur's Place" writer Leonard Holton, a cartoonist, made sketches, and actors who fitted them were hired.

When you see "Stampede" you'll be visiting the Duke of Windsor's Canadian ranch with its face lifted so it'll photograph better. The main ranch house will be used for interiors. Joan Leslie and James Craig head the cast.

Store oranges, grapefruit, lemons and pineapple in refrigerator as soon as you get them home or they will lose much of their vitamin C content.

Don't toss away those green cauliflower stalks; cut them into pieces, cook in boiling salted water until tender but still crisp, then serve with a creamy white or hollandaise sauce for a real treat.

Never try to separate bacon slices while the meat is very cold. Let stand in room temperature for a few minutes, or place in skillet under a low flame until it warms.

ON AUGUST 4th, at 11:45 a. m. (E.S.T.), your correspondent goes on the air, to be interviewed by Ted Malone on his program on ABC, and be given his Excellence Award for "consistently impartial coverage of radio broadcasting news." That night Ted leaves the country! He will fly to Stockholm, Oslo, Copenhagen, Berlin, Amsterdam, and Shannon, taking four cameras—he says he has lost expensive cameras all around the globe. In ten days he will be back; with his gift for description, he will make the rest of us feel that we, too, have had a glimpse of the countries he has visited. Remember when he went around the world in 1945 and told us about it?

performance after another. She celebrated her 26th anniversary in pictures with her role as Elizabeth Scott's mother in "Desert Fury."

On July 31, 1939, the aeronautical division accepted its first airplane. It was a fabric covered bi-plane built by the Wright Brothers of Dayton, Ohio, capable of a speed of 40 miles per hour. Contract price was $30,000.

From that time until World War I, the aeronautical division progressed slowly. New personnel was recruited and training schools activated, but there was no great expansion.

Expands During War.
The expansion came with World War I. At the outbreak of the war, the aviation section, as it was then known, numbered about 130 officers and slightly more than 1,000 enlisted men. At its peak strength, in 1918, the aviation section numbered more than 195,000 officers and men. Starting with only 55 planes, the aviation section received 13,961 during the war years from American industry and bought 5,151 more in Europe.

On March 1, 1935, general headquarters air force was established. This new unit was not merely a change in designation for the air corps, but a new organization within the army. GHQ, as it was called, was on the same level as the office of the chief of air corps, but it was concerned with the operational work while the air corps continued to handle supply and training administration.

February, 1936, saw the debut of the plane which was later to become the "guts and backbone" of army air forces—the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, a four-engine, high-altitude heavy bomber.

In 1937, the air corps dropped out of lighter-than-air experimentation, turning over its remaining airships, the TC-13 and TC-14, and other lighter-than-air equipment, to the navy.

AAF Is Formed.
On June 20, 1941, the army air forces came into being, fulfilling the need for an overall air arm which would combine the functions of the air corps and GHQ. Maj. Gen. H. H.

Tribute to army air forces for its major role in restoring peace to the world and its present mission of safeguarding the national security will be paid at Air Forces Day observances throughout the country on August 1.

The observance will mark the 40th anniversary of AAF's existence, a period which saw its growth from a unit consisting of three men and no airplanes to a wartime organization of more than 2,411,000 men which could put as many as 2,000 planes over a single target.

Air Force association, an organization comprising in its membership both past and present members of AAF, is the official sponsor of the observance. In more than 100 cities and towns where the association has chartered squadrons, the ceremonies will be planned and carried out by these groups with the aid and cooperation of personnel from nearby AAF establishments.

To Demonstrate Aircraft.

Special events are planned at all AAF bases in this country as well as at AAF establishments still active in Europe, the Far East and other parts of the world. Air demonstrations, open houses, dinners and banquets will highlight the day's programs. At the open houses AAF will exhibit aircraft and other new equipment to the public.

AAF came into being on August 1, 1907, when the aeronautical division of the signal corps was created to handle "all matters pertaining to military ballooning, air machines and kindred subjects." Capt. Charles DeF. Chandler was placed in charge and assigned two enlisted men, Pfc. Edward Ward and Pfc. Joseph E. Barrett.

On July 31, 1909, the aeronautical division accepted its first airplane. It was a fabric covered bi-plane built by the Wright Brothers of Dayton, Ohio, capable of a speed of 40 miles per hour. Contract price was $30,000.

From that time until World War I, the aeronautical division progressed slowly. New personnel was recruited and training schools activated, but there was no great expansion.

Expands During War.

The expansion came with World War I. At the outbreak of the war, the aviation section, as it was then known, numbered about 130 officers and slightly more than 1,000 enlisted men. At its peak strength, in 1918, the aviation section numbered more than 195,000 officers and men. Starting with only 55 planes, the aviation section received 13,961 during the war years from American industry and bought 5,151 more in Europe.

On March 1, 1935, general headquarters air force was established. This new unit was not merely a change in designation for the air corps, but a new organization within the army. GHQ, as it was called, was on the same level as the office of the chief of air corps, but it was concerned with the operational work while the air corps continued to handle supply and training administration.

February, 1936, saw the debut of the plane which was later to become the "guts and backbone" of army air forces—the Boeing B-17 Flying Fortress, a four-engine, high-altitude heavy bomber.

In 1937, the air corps dropped out of lighter-than-air experimentation, turning over its remaining airships, the TC-13 and TC-14, and other lighter-than-air equipment, to the navy.

AAF Is Formed.

peak, 13,000 planes in combat action, operated by a force of 619,000 men. More than 750,000 bomber sorties and almost 1,000,000 fighter sorties were flown. AAF dropped nearly 1,500,000 tons of bombs and destroyed over 35,000 enemy aircraft, while losing about 18,000 planes.

In the war against Japan, AAF flew more than 659,000 sorties, dropped more than a half-million tons of bombs on Japan and its islands and destroyed more than 10,000 Japanese aircraft while losing about 4,500.

Weapon of Destruction.
But, although these statistics give an indication of AAF's destructive power, they cannot accurately measure its contribution to the ultimate victory—the real contribution is in the extent that its air power furthered destruction of the enemy's military strength and resources.

In the months of 1945 following the surrender of Japan, AAF saw swift demobilization. Personnel, which had reached a peak of more than 2,411,000 in 1945, fell off to 733,785 by the end of the year. At the same time, aircraft fell off from a wartime peak of almost 80,000 to about 30,000. And the downward trend was by no means finished—AAF continued to lose both men and planes for many months.

In 1946, the emphasis turned to aeronautical research. That year saw the debut of such aircraft as the speedy jet fighters, the Lockheed P-50 and the Republic P-54; the giant six-engine bomber, the Consolidated-Vultee XB-35; the "Flying Wing," the Northrop XB-35, and the AAF's first rocket plane, the Bell XS-1.

In one of the most significant aerial flights AAF had ever made, Col. Clarence S. Irvine, assisted by a crew of nine, flew a Boeing B-29 from Hawaii to Cairo, via the North Pole, on October 4, 1946. Total time for the flight of approximately 10,000 miles was only 39 hours and 36 minutes.

On February 28, 1947, AAF made another great record flight, when two pilots flew a North American Twin Mustang fighter 5,000 miles from Honolulu to New York City.

Then, on December 7, 1941, the Japanese struck the blow that plunged us into war and resulted ultimately in development of the greatest aerial combat force the world had ever seen. At the time of our entry into war, AAF consisted of 275,000 enlisted men, 23,000 officers, and 16,000 cadets. There were eight air forces, four within the continental limits and four without.

Arnold, who had been chief of air corps, was placed in command.

In 1941, with war on the horizon, AAF began a great expansion program. The quota of pilots was raised to 33,000 a year, and several schools were opened to meet the need for technical specialists.

Achievements of the AAF provided one of the most spectacular stories of the war. A few statistics give an idea of the part it played in forcing the capitulation of the axis powers. During the war against Germany, AAF had placed, at its

THE MIRACLE OF RUNNING WATER

"Yes, son... the sound of running water is the sound of progress. When running water is handy, folks live better and make more money. Yet it's hard to understand how some folks still pump and haul water when an electric water system will bring it just as close as the nearest tap."

- In the Poultry House
- In the Dairy House
- In the Bath Room
- In the Kitchen
- In the Cellar
- In the Barn

An Electric Water System Doesn't COST... It PAYS

An electric water system soon pays for itself in labor costs alone by taking over the laborious, time-consuming job of pumping water for cattle, hogs, sheep, poultry, garden and home. Enough fresh running water means greater production and needed hands released for more essential work. It's a great convenience in the house, too, where the back-breaking drudgery of hauling water for cooking, dishwashing, cleaning, etc. makes many a good farm wife long for better days.

A Statement To Our Customers About Resale PRICES of PRODUCTS
 Built by International Harvester Company

Here at Harvester we are concerned over the fact that a growing number of our products are appearing on the resale market at greatly inflated prices.

As manufacturers, we try to produce at the lowest possible cost. We cannot set the prices at which our products—tractors, motor trucks, farm implements, refrigeration, and industrial power equipment—are sold. We can and do suggest list prices which the great majority of our dealers adopt as their retail prices.

$20,000,000 Price Reduction
 Our basic price policy was publicly stated in March, 1947, when we announced price reductions at the rate of approximately $20,000,000 per year on our products. At that time, Fowler McCormick, Chairman of the Board, said: "ANY PRICE IS TOO HIGH IF IT CAN BE REDUCED."

Practically all of our dealers cooperated with this policy and passed on the savings to their customers.

The objective of the price reductions was to make it possible for customers to buy our products, which they need so badly, at lower prices. Naturally, this purpose is defeated when our products are sold by anybody at inflated prices.

IH Production at All-Time Peak
 Inflated prices are caused by the difference between supply and demand. To increase supply, we now have the greatest number of employees in history on our payrolls—almost 90,000 in the United States, as against about 60,000 prewar. Large new plants are getting into production in Louisville, Evansville, and Melrose Park. A fourth will soon be in operation in Memphis. The men and women now employed are turning out the greatest quantities of IH products of all kinds that we have ever made. These are also the finest products we have ever made, and recognition of that fact is an important contributing factor to the demand for them.

Distribution to Dealers
 But even record-breaking production is not sufficient to give your dealer—and other IH dealers—enough products, to meet today's demand. We have tried to make the fairest possible, geographical allocation of our products so that every dealer would get a fair share, and we know that dealers, in most cases, have tried earnestly to make the fairest possible distribution to their customers.

But we also know that many of our products—far too many—are being resold at inflated prices. The public criticism and resentment of these resales are of real concern to us, as we know they must be to our dealers, because such reactions endanger the good will of both the dealer and the Company in any community.

Distribution to Customers
 Experience shows that many IH new products are being resold by users who decide they can continue to make out with their old equipment after they have had an inflated offer for their new equipment. To eliminate this, many dealers are taking measures to be sure that equipment purchased is for their customers' own use and is not to be resold.

Nearly all IH dealers, we believe, are now using the basis of PRESENT NEED as their primary guide for the sale of scarce products. The customer whose need is real and urgent is not likely to resell.

What Price Should You Pay?
 While it may take a little more time to get delivery, we urge our customers to consider all of the factors mentioned here, before paying more than the list price for any IH product. Any IH dealer or branch can furnish the suggested list price for any IH product.

We know that the overwhelming majority of IH dealers are as much opposed to inflated prices as we are. In the public interest, we have already asked their cooperation—and are now asking the cooperation of customers—in correcting this situation.

Yes...OUR PAYROLL IS BIGGER THAN EVER BEFORE

Since 1940, the size of our payroll has about doubled. That's all right with us because it means more people are being paid higher wages to bring you the best in telephone service. Our expansion and service betterment program will raise our total payroll expense even higher, for we will need many more skilled workers.

Higher wages and more employees have been the main cause for our 82% increase in operating costs. However, income increased only 70% during these same years and in spite of serving more people than ever before. We want to continue paying good wages—and to more people—but unless our rates are adjusted upward to keep our books in balance, the job becomes increasingly difficult.

Reds See Nation's Economy Gravitating Toward Disaster

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—There are a good many ways to judge the moods of official Washington. Sometimes you can assay them the moment you read the latest statement of the bureau of labor statistics.

But in recent times one of the best barometers of Washington emotions (some of my deep-dishers tell me) is the facial and/or oral expressions of the professional Communists who inhabit the carefree district of Columbia.

To help you understand the above somewhat un-understandable statement, let me refresh your memory concerning the Kremlin's most cherished desire. That dearest wish, as you know, is a great, big all-out replica of the depression of 1929 for the United States.

Let's step for a moment into the sanctum sanctorum of the Soviet's No. 1 boy, Josef Vlas Rionovich Djughashvili, alias Marshal Stalin.

The following is an excerpt from the official transcript of a conversation between Harold Stassen of Minnesota and Josef Stalin of Georgia, U.S.S.R., not Georgia, U.S.A.:

Stassen: Our problem now is to see to it that we do not have a depression, an economic crisis.

Stalin: Do you expect a crisis?
Stassen: I do not... with wise policies... we can avoid a crisis'...

Stalin: Do American industries have a lot of orders? Is that true? And that American factories can't keep pace with them and that all factories are running 100 per cent? Is that true?

Stassen: Yes, substantially, but they are largely domestic orders...
Stalin: But that is the most important... magazine analysts and the American press carry open reports to the effect that an economic crisis will break out.

Stassen: The problem is one of... stabilizing without having an economic crisis...
Stalin: But what about business men? Will they be prepared to be regulated and restrained?

Stassen: No, some will have objections.
Stalin: Yes, they do.

That is a verbatim record with omissions which do not affect the context. They reveal Stalin's keen interest in our domestic economy and any prospective depression in that economy.

The conversation took place in the Kremlin on April 9 of this year. A friend of mine, a financial expert met a Communist acquaintance who was bubbling over with

When Herschel V. Johnson, deputy U. S. delegate, warned that the crisis developing in Greece "may burst into explosion any day," Andrei Groznyko, Soviet delegate, protested that an emergency debate on the issue was unnecessary and France added that the United Nations "must not act too hastily."

establishment of a powerful 11-nation border patrol with authority to scout both sides of the borders separating Greece from the Communist-dominated countries of Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania.

War Again
As additional troops were sent up to reinforce both the invading leftist guerrillas and the Greek government forces, the swiftly developing battle in the rugged heights of northern Greece began to take on a reminiscent of the Spanish civil war.

The war ministry disclosed that six strong guerrilla units had been concentrated along the Albanian and Yugoslav frontiers of Greece and that all were poised to join the original invasion force of 2,000 which government troops had so far been able to repel.

Napoleon Zervas, defense minister, told a press conference at Ioannina that several of 20 prisoners taken by the defenders were unable to speak Greek and wore the Red Star insignia of the Soviet Union.

In the meantime, a war department announcement said that one invading force of 2,000 had been gripped in a pincers nine miles from Ioannina and that a battle of annihilation was in progress. A second column was halted in its drive toward Ioannina and surrounded by the government troops.

FLOOD CONTROL: 10-Year Program
Terminating the problem of "desperate urgency," President Truman, in a special message to congress, proposed that a swift start be made on a 10-year, 250 million dollar program to control floods in the entire Mississippi basin and change the character of the river from a destructive giant to a productive force.

He strongly implied that the present congress should undertake the immense, long-range task before its adjournment. A number of senators immediately threw their support behind the President's proposal.

In general, the construction program as outlined by Mr. Truman would provide a coordinated system of storage reservoirs in all the major tributary basins of the Mississippi, coupled with levees, floodwalls and diversion channels to protect cities, towns and farms in those basins.

Also, he proposed that soil conservation measures be put into effect farther up-river on the tributaries of each major basin in order to retard the flow and run-off of waters from heavy rains and reduce topsoil loss.

RACKET: Training Hit
Dr. Allan Bates, a Chicago scientist, testified before a house armed services sub-committee that universal military training has become "a vicious political racket" and will be "a horrible cancer on the United States."

He cited the fate of European nations in the last war, declaring that despite assurances from their top army leaders that universal training would safeguard them from invasion they all fell before the Nazi blitzkrieg.

As an alternative to universal military training, Bates said the United States should concentrate on a strong striking force, a large air force, strong reserves and a well organized national guard, all backed by adequate scientific and industrial research.

nese military occupation. The estimated increase in sugar production in the United States would place the 1947 crop at 2.2 million tons, of which about 1.7 million would be beet sugar and the remaining cane. Last year this country produced 1.78 million tons of both beet and cane sugar, which was about 200,000 tons below an average crop.

With supplies of cane and beet sugar now adequate to supply all demands by housewives, demands for other sweeteners are expected to decline. These sweeteners, many of which were used in war time as substitutes for sugar, include corn sugar and sirup, maple sugar and sirup, honey, cane sirup, sorgo sirup, and molasses.

SCIENTIFIC: Bill for Research
Indicating its awareness that the United States must, for the sake of self-preservation, retain its war-war supremacy in science research and development, the house has passed a bill intended to coordinate scientific research for national defense, medicine and engineering projects.

The bill was sent to the senate, which previously had approved a measure similar to the version passed by the house.

Said It Again
Prof. Albert Einstein, backed by other noted members of the Federation of American Scientists, warned once more that "human security can never be assured until the world has been made safe for atomic energy."

The scientists appealed—on the second anniversary of the Los Alamos atomic bomb explosion—for international atomic energy control through the United Nations.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU
EDITOR'S NOTE: This newspaper, through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is able to bring you this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family.

Eligibility Proof Simplified
In an effort to expedite issuance of certificates of eligibility for education and training under the G.I. bill, Veterans' administration has announced it will accept terminal leave orders as a basis for determining eligibility.

Where orders reflect at least eight days of terminal leave indicating they have at least 90 days of service, they will be accepted as valid for a period of six months, VA said.

VA said the procedure would expedite issuance of certificates where army and navy personnel are separated from service but will not be discharged until expiration of their leave period. Under the new plan it will not be necessary for VA to check applicant's service records to determine eligibility before authorizing matriculation in an educational institution or training establishment. The temporary certificates will be replaced by regular forms after the veteran's exact period of entitlement has been determined. Also, by this procedure service personnel in separated status may take advantage of the education and training, privileges pending their discharge. There is one rub. They will not be eligible for subsistence allowance until their formal discharge.

Questions and Answers
Q. I am a navy seabee veteran with less than three months service, having received a medical discharge due to an un-united fracture of the right ankle, not service-connected. This injury, which was sustained prior to my entrance in the service, had given no trouble at all in civilian life. But the rigorous training aggravated it to such an extent that the navy saw fit to discharge me. Shortly after my return to civilian life I applied for a pension, which was denied on the grounds that the examination given me at the VA hospital showed no such condition existed. However, this condition most certainly does exist and is growing steadily worse. On the basis of the facts as outlined above, am I eligible for treatment, an operation if necessary? My present condition and the cause for my discharge is due to an old injury being made much worse while in training to the point of making me unfit for service and curtailing my activities and normal pursuits of recreation as a civilian.—C. F. S., Cincinnati, Ohio.

A. On the basis of facts as outlined, you are suffering from an injury aggravated by your service and as such should be entitled to treatment by Veterans' administration. Your recourse is to file a claim for an appeal to the board of appeals at your nearest regional VA office within a year after your original examination. Any new evidence from your local physician or other evidence would be helpful. You will find forms available to fill out and a contact man at the regional office will aid you.

Q. I am a veteran with four years service in the army. Does Veterans' administration provide maternity care for my wife either at a VA hospital or at the out-patient clinics?—J. T. R., Jonesboro, Ark.

A. No. Under existing laws only veterans are eligible for hospital care or the out-patient clinics.

Q. My son had dental work done shortly after his discharge from the navy. He was in four years. I understand the government takes care of such expense for a year after discharge. He wasn't aware of it. Could he get a refund by having dentist give bill and type of work? Amount was $25.—Box 60, Coronado Beach, Fla.

A. Veterans' administration does provide for certain treatment for veterans for a year after discharge on the theory that such disability is presumed to be service-connected for that long. However, application for such service must be applied for in advance and there is no provision for refund for work done by civilian dentists.

Q. I was discharged in June, 1942. May I still get vocational training in barbering?—E. G. W., Savannah, Ga.

A. You may, if you apply for training within four years after date of your discharge.

Q. My husband, a veteran, was discharged from service and a few days later underwent an emergency operation. Will the government pay the expenses of the operation?—Mrs. A. L. C., Oconomowoc, Wis.

A. Two conditions would have to be met before the government would pay for emergency treatment: (1) that the veteran's hospitalization was a result of a service-incurred or aggravated disability, and (2) that the Veterans' administration be notified of the action within 72 hours after emergency treatment was given the veteran.

Q. I would like to use my terminal leave bonds to pay up my lapsed government insurance. It won't take all my bonds and my question is do I get the balance coming to me in cash?—L. L. B., Norfolk, Va.

A. You may use your terminal leave bonds to pay your insurance premiums but you get no cash. The remainder of your bond is placed to your credit until such time as it becomes payable in cash or you authorize further premium payments from the balance to your credit.

'Fanciers' Fancy Fancier Bantams

I (or to be honest, my wife) have recently acquired three new bantams for our flock. Elmer, the proud cock-of-the-walk, and his two "tunes," Clementine and Adeline.

Bantam raising is a real industry in the United States. Among my acquaintances, most people raise bantams for pets. Elmer, Clementine and Adeline had hardly gotten out of their crate which brought them all the way from Iowa to Florida where they are now ensconced, before the ladies were leaping up on my wife's arm and eating a piece of bread right out of her mouth.

The industry breeds the birds for exhibition and fancier sale.

TO LANE MERRIT there was more than the title of club golf champion at stake in today's match—very much more, indeed. There was, for instance, the need to wipe out this Donald Young's attempt to humiliate Lane's evening before, after the semi-finals, when he called across the club dining room: "How about a little bet on the match tomorrow, Merrit? Say, $5,000 or so?" It was a deliberate, and Lane thought, cheap try to embarrass him, for Young, and the others, knew Lane didn't have $5,000. Old Pop Weller, sitting with Lane, had glanced at him to see how he was taking it. He hesitated and then called to Young: "I'll take that $5,000 bet! And the 'so' can be anything you want to make it!" Lane had looked appealingly at Pop and pleaded: "Don't do it, Mr. Weller." But Pop snorted: "It's about time that show-off was taken down a peg or two." Under the circumstances there was nothing for Young to do but accept the bet, but Lane sensed he wasn't too keen about it.

And then, most important of all, there was Kay Cawley. Now, up to a few months before, to the Cawley and Merrit families and, naturally, Kay and Lane, the future was definitely settled for these two. Then Young entered the picture with his flashy man-of-the-world manners, clothes and swank car. And he proceeded to give Kay the rush of that young lady's life. Lane was hurt, but somehow it all seemed so right. Not that he blamed Kay. She was young, pretty, and bubbling with enthusiasm for life. She deserved adulation and also the good times that Lane, just making his start, was unable to provide. In fact, without his father's help, he would have had to relinquish his membership in the Midvale Country Club. At best it would be two or three years before he could rightly ask Kay to set the wedding date.

At breakfast Lane gave thought to his problems. He wanted to win for his own sake; he wanted to taste the sweetness of victory over that blow-hard, Young; he wanted to win for Pop Weller, fine sport, gentleman and friend that he was; and most of all, he wanted to win back Kay. Of course, winning a golf match wouldn't be enough for this last, but it might help.

Lane arrived at the club a good half hour before the time set for the start of the finals, and as he drove his modest coupe into the grounds he saw Young on the practice tee. "Mmm-m-m," he thought, "the guy can't be too confident." As he made his way through the locker-room to his alley Lane was hailed from all sides with "good luck" wishes. Strangely, he felt none of the excitement which seemed to fill the room. He knew that, besides Pop Weller's large bet, much money had been wagered on the outcome of the match. He dressed leisurely and he was lacing his shoes when Young entered, held out his hand and in a voice loud enough to carry, said: "Good luck, Merrit." Lane promptly acknowledged and returned the wish in kind, but thought, "Still playing to the gallery." There was quite a crowd at the first tee and for the first time Lane felt a bit queasy in the stomach. On the tee itself he saw young Willie Hopper waiting with his clubs; young Willie, freckled-faced, snub-nosed and hardly a dandy in his well-worn denim pants and khaki shirt; Willie, loyal and capable at his job—the thought made Lane feel better. He caught a glimpse of Kay standing in the crowd well back of the tee. Lane waved, she smiled and waved back, in encouragement, he hoped. They drove off, straight and far, with Young's ball stopping a few yards out in front. They halved on the first hole in par figures and that's the way it went until the seventh when Lane rolled in a long, curling putt for a par to Young's bogie five, to go one up. Lane held that lead until the twelfth when Young birdied the short hole after his iron shot from the tee had stopped a scant foot from the cup. Lane went one up again at the seventeenth when Young's second found a deep trap off the green. And that's how the morning round ended.

Gallery and players trooped into the club dining room for lunch. The big room was noisy with the clatter of dishes and the chatter at the tables as shots of the round were talked over and replayed. Pop Weller sat with Lane. "You played fine, got my boy, but I think, on one or two occasions, a little too safe. Don't let my bet disturb you, Lane. Win, lose or draw, the dickens with it. It doesn't mean a thing to me, except the satisfaction I'll get when I collect it from that phony." At two the second round started.

Now, Midvale was no heart-breaking course. Tough enough and long enough, but an intelligent golf committee had pointed to make it interesting and suitable to the games of its members, rather than a test for top-flight pros. It did boast, however, one hole, the thirteenth, which would try the skill of the world's best. Many Midvale members had protested this hole, but the terrain was such that the committee could do little about changing it. Two hundred and fifty yards from the tee, just far enough to catch the driver's second or third, the fairway ended and dropped abruptly into a gully about fifty feet deep. This gully, with excellent turf, stretched approximately a hundred yards along the bottom before the start of the rise back to the second section of fairway. Arriving at the thirteenth, Lane still retained his one up lead of the morning round. He had played steady golf and two or three times he had fought off brilliant play by Young which threatened his slender lead. On the tee Lane debated the advisability of blasting for the gully or playing it safe. He decided on the latter, much to Willie Hopper's visible disapproval. Willie reluctantly handed over the requested spoon and ambled off toward the brink of the gully. Lane, hitting first, stepped to the tee; the murmuring of the gallery ceased. He swung and hit, hard and clean. The ball carried fairly straight as far as the two-hundred-yard marker and then hooked sharply downward and to the left. Two long bounces and it disappeared into the heavy rough.

Willie, on the other side of the fairway, groaned as he hurried across to locate the ball. A member of the gallery pointed deep to a tiny white speck at the base of a small tree. Willie glanced hurriedly at the ball, his heart sinking, and took up his position nearby. It was a bad break and he was puzzled that the ball had bounded so deeply into the rough. Meanwhile, Young's drive, a tremendous clout, had carried the first fairway and gained momentum as it hit the downhill roll of the gully, rolling almost to the very center. Lane went into the rough and glanced down at the ball Willie was guarding. It was partly buried, its markings completely hidden. It was almost an unplayable lie and Lane, berating himself for the error in playing safe, had about decided the best thing to do was to try to cut it out to the fairway.

Just then someone called: "Here's a ball, Lane. Looks like yours!" Jim Meredith, refereeing the match walked to the second ball. It was but a few feet in off the fairway, sitting up pretty as you please on a small tuft of grass, its markings clearly visible. Meredith ruled it was Lane's ball and Lane, with a quick glance at the perfect lie, selected his brassie and sent the ball sailing over the gully and well onto the second section of the fairway. It was a perfect shot.

As soon as Lane had hit Young walked up to Meredith. "I protest that ruling," he said. "How do you know that it was the ball Merrit hit from the tee? It could have been dropped there. I insist on examining that other ball by the tree. I'm sure it's Merrit's ball because, from the tee, I watched it bounce into the rough toward that tree!" His face was white and set, his voice shaky as the import of his words suddenly dawned on him. Meredith answered. He sure rested to sleep and lifted the half buried ball, carrying it back to Young. "See," he said, "it's a Falcon, and you know the make ball Merrit is playing." With that he walked off.

Pop Weller, who had seen and heard, muttered to the man next to him. "There goes your ball game!" And the ball game went. Young dubbed his second completely, the ball missing the top of the gully and rolling back to rest half way up the slope. He stood watching the ball for a few seconds then, his nerves breaking, slammed the club heavily into the turf.

Yes, you've guessed it. Lane won the match. Best of all, Kay rushed onto the sixteenth green, where the match had ended, to congratulate Lane and—right smack in sight of that large audience—threw her arms around his neck and kissed him! And—much to Pop Weller's delight—Young's $5,000 check bounced!

Kathleen Norris Says: One More Stupid Woman

Bell Syndicate—WNU Features.

"Between Billy and me there is a complete break. We just don't seem to talk the same language any more."

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

OUR marriage has simply gone dead—perhaps has been dying for years," writes Frances Lyons of Richmond. "I don't remember quite when the glamor went out of it, but it is as dull now as if Billy and I had never fallen in love—if we did. Perhaps it never was real love, just excitement and the novelty of being married—just kid stuff. Yet I was 23, and Billy four years older. Our people highly approved of the marriage. Ours was a church wedding. After that there were happy years getting the new house running, welcoming two beautiful boys.

"The boys now are 9 and 7; we both adore them, naturally. But between Billy and me there is a complete break. We just don't seem to talk the same language any more. Sometimes we're polite and silent. Sometimes we flare up at each other for a moment, when he feels that I am indifferent to his interests or I make plans that don't include him. And then of course sometimes we quarrel, when he comes home tired. I am always tired, with two lively boys and a 10-room house to manage without help.

"There isn't any other man; there isn't any other woman. It's just that we bore each other; I don't take any interest in my own life, and I know Billy is as tired of the whole setup as I am. Is it smart," this letter concludes, "to go on with this half-life, dragging through days without love that really is life to a woman? Is it fair to bring the boys up in this lifeless atmosphere, hearing no happy home talk, hearing only civil replies and occasional outbursts of anger that show them how completely out of sympathy we are?"

"Freer and Happier Apart." "I should never marry anyone else; I don't believe Bill would. But wouldn't it be both lead freer and happier lives apart? Call it incompatibility, call it mental cruelty on both sides, call it what you like. But doesn't it spell failure, and isn't there something one can do about it?"

This is the sort of letter and situation that account for thousands of broken homes and thousands of small boys and girls either shunted into boarding schools or placed by the state in institutions that care for misplaced, unwanted, drifting American children. What a bitter shame it is!

Only this year in our state an immense sum was raised to build another of these half-charity, half-pay homes, this one for 200 boys. All but 13 per cent of these boys have two living parents, who have found each other "incompatible" or guilty of mutual "mental cruelty." Isn't it a bitter shame?

This woman won't give herself generously, tenderly to making a broken home and thousands of children face the fact that the breathless passion of young love has settled down into commonplace affection and respect. She isn't smart enough to know that where there is that mutual affection and respect love has an odd way of creeping back, a different sort of love—married love—deeper and sweeter than the earlier emotion.

"There were happy years..."

BE MORE LOVABLE

Married life often becomes dull after the first years. Frances Lyons, who writes for advice to Miss Norris, says she can no longer endure her drab existence. She tells Miss Norris that there is nothing exactly wrong—no other woman, no other man. They have two nice children, a fine home, a fair income. The trouble is they have fallen out of love. The old emotion just isn't there. They are beginning to grate on each other's nerves.

Frances wonders if she and her husband, too, wouldn't be happier if they were divorced. She says she would never marry again. She just wants to get away from a loveless atmosphere.

Miss Norris replies that such a divorce would be a fatal mistake. Sooner or later Frances would be wishing she were back in the security of her husband's arms. After a complete break, such a return would be impossible. Frances should do everything she can to regain her husband's love, advises Miss Norris, and to make a happy home for her sons.

She won't busy herself with growing flowers, studying a language, keeping her wardrobe charming, starting table games with the boys and their father, asking Billy at least one sympathetic and interested question at night about his business, telling him at least one tiny detail of good news as he sits down at the table.

New Problems Will Come.

She wants to remain an eternal adolescent, an eternal bride, always seen through a mist of reverence, white veiling, orange blossoms. She says she won't marry again, but presently she will, "to give the boys a good father, to have a man's influence over them."

Then wreckage. Then the claims of the new husband jealously pressed against the older claim of motherhood. Then financial degradation. Billy hasn't paid this month; Arthur must pay.

The heartbreak for the children. They won't show it; they'll shut it into their puzzled, inarticulate little boy hearts. They'll pay all their lives for Mom's incompatibility and Dad's mental cruelty. Cheated out of home, Mother, Dad, cheated out of the love and security that is the first essential to happy living, happy and safe growing-up, what can be expected of the boys except similar stupidities and mistakes.

I'm afraid Frances hasn't the qualities that pull a marriage out of a jam like this. They are great qualities: Courage, imagination, affection, self-forgetfulness. She'd have to be made over. No, she'll run the usual course—explaining, justifying herself, softening it to the boys, setting her jaw stubbornly when Billy asks her to reconsider, to try again. And three years after she ends this potentially happy, perfectly normal marriage, how she'll want to be back in safety, with Billy and the boys. Three years?—perhaps three months. Perhaps three weeks.

COURSE IN BABY SITTING

Baby sitting now is being offered as a college course at the Berkshire Hills school for girls. This attempt to bring order out of chaos comes none too soon. Desperate parents already had devised such elaborate mechanical devices as the one which connects all the nurseries on one street to a common communication system. The wail of any baby is picked up by a microphone near his crib and carried to the home of the parent "standing watch" for the block that night.

AROUND THE HOUSE

Put newspapers under grass or fiber rugs to prevent dirt from seeping through. On cleaning day remove the newspapers which have caught the dirt.

As you empty fruit jars, wash and thoroughly dry them, then place the lid on to prevent chipping.

Coarsely woven or braided, brilliantly colored table mats in clear ruby red, emerald green, cerise or chartreuse will be a smart vogue for summer tables. Simple china and clear glassware are especially effective with these mats.

After powder puffs have served their purpose, wash them thoroughly and keep them near the sink or stove. These can be used as pads for scouring powder.

No Time Like Present, So Anniversary Date Is Set Up

An acquaintance of Mrs. B. congratulated the old lady on her golden wedding anniversary. "Guess you read in the paper," Mrs. B. replied, "about the party and all the presents we got." Then she chuckled. "It wasn't really our 50th anniversary. Only our 49th. But Pa's getting pretty feeble and I'm not too spry myself, so we decided we'd better have our celebration while the getting was good."

Chairman of General Foods Anticipates Lower Prices
Average food prices might be down "as much as 15 per cent" by harvest time in 1948, according to Clarence Francis, chairman of the board, General Foods corporation. Francis told a house committee he believed a "corrective" in food prices was under way. He went on to speak of a 15 per cent reduction that might come in 1948 and added: "By this I don't mean to imply anything like a wide open break in prices."

Sound Sleep Will Prolong Youthfulness in Women
When women are discussing another woman, her age—and if she looks it—is usually the first thing brought up. It's surprising how many ways there are to guess a woman's age. For instance, knowing the age of somebody else who went to school with her or about how old she was when she was married will help. But, any way it's done, it's a popular pastime.

Even more fun, however, is to be the one discussed and to have the estimates fall far below the age suggested by the date on one's birth certificate. Creams, lotions and masks by the dozen are advertised for this purpose, along with pills, exercises and magic tonics. And yet, the one best way to stay young—plenty of sleep—is so simple that it frequently is ignored. Nothing ages a woman faster than lack of sleep or sleep of poor quality. It puts wrinkles in her face and listlessness in her posture and walk. On the other hand, sufficient, restful sleep every night is a real elixir of youth, keeping the skin healthy and free of wrinkles and supplying energy rivaling that of a bobby soxer. Sleep, resting to sleep is possible only on a comfortable mattress and spring which cushion and fit the body so that perfect relaxation is possible, resulting in sleep "like a baby's." A good buoyant pillow is important, too, to support and relax the neck muscles.

SIZE OF FARMS STABLY INCREASING

With settlement beginning as early as 1839, and with most of the early settlers interested in agriculture, it is not surprising that by 1890 there were nearly 2000 farms in the county.

More than a thousand rural school teachers and students attended "Youth Day" at the Waukesha spring dairy show.

1946 census? This land has been absorbed into other farms thus making a larger operating unit. Our farms have increased in average size from 87 acres to 103 acres.

By 1945 the county enumerated only 2529 farms. What has become of the land not accounted for by
