Legion Post Adds 50 Members, Renewals

A total of 50 new members and renewals were added to the 1948 American Legion membership rolls of the Kewaskum post last week, according to Harry E. Koch, commander.

The post is presently in the midst of a state-wide campaign to bring 100,000 Wisconsin Legionnaires in Wisconsin's 1948 year," Commander Koch said. The American Legion now has over 92,000 members and is shooting for an additional 8,000 for Wisconsin's centennial year.

The membership quota for the Kewaskum post has been increased approximately 10 per cent which means that it is aiming for 175 members in 1948. Quotas have been set for each of Wisconsin's 532 Legion posts.

The state membership drive will be climaxed on Nov. 11 at Milwaukee, Commander Koch reported, when the annual Legion State Aerial roundup is held. On that day planes from all over Wisconsin will fly to department headquarters in Milwaukee with new and renewal membership cards for final tabulation. The post which leads in total number of cards flown by air will be awarded the Carlisle E. Godske trophy, a new award this year. Approximately 100 planes with 75,000 cards are anticipated at the roundup, although the campaign will continue until Jan. 1.

"Veterans from Kewaskum and the surrounding area are welcome at our clubhouses at any time," Commander Koch said. "Because the American Legion has so many activities and sponsors so many projects that many people are not aware of, we want all veterans to become familiar with them. I know that if a veteran learns about Legion activities, he will be anxious to join."

The Kewaskum post is planning further stunts and activities in connection with the membership campaign, Commander Koch said.

Progress in Educational Phase of Cancer Drive

As the 1947 drive to raise funds in Washington county for the American Cancer society continues the most pleasing aspect of the campaign as far as the officers of the committee are concerned is the manner in which the educational phase is progressing. Particularly talks on cancer by physicians at meetings of societies and other organizations, it was disclosed this week.

"Our cancer talks are taking hold in the county real well, and this is certainly most gratifying," said Dr. J. Kenny, West Bend, county chairman. "Again I urge every gathering of at least 20 persons to invite a doctor to address them on the subject of this dreadful disease."

Kenny revealed Dr. Richard H. Driessel, West Bend, spoke on cancer at a meeting of the Farmington Farm bureau at Fillmore on Tuesday, while Dr. P. M. Kauth, West Bend, spoke at a meeting of the Germantown Rotary club the same day.

Dr. Maurice Monroe, Hartford, spoke on cancer at a meeting of the American Legion auxiliary in that city Monday and was heard by a crowd estimated at 200 persons. Dr. J. Greg Hoffmann related details about cancer at a meeting of the Hartford Evangelical Youth group Saturday evening.

Recently, Dr. Kauth addressed a Myra social group and Dr. Alvin T. Grundahl, West Bend, deputy coroner, spoke to a similar group in the town of West Bend. Kenny disclosed Dr. K. F. Precontaine, Slinger, will speak to a combined meeting of the Christian Mothers and Holy Name societies at Slinger on Tuesday, Oct. 28.

Pointing out that literature concerning cancer has been mailed to all village and rural householders and that it is being distributed this week in the cities of Hartford and West Bend in conjunction with annual Community Chest campaigns, Kenny added:

"This educational phase of the drive is as important and as imperative as the need for raising funds. We need to make better use of what we know about cancer. In this way alone can we save many lives."

"It is tragic, but true, that 50 per cent of the persons whom cancer attacks cannot be saved by medical science until new discoveries are made. It is for this reason that the American Cancer society puts so much emphasis on education of the people leading to early detection of cancer and on research."

"A large part of this year's contributions will be devoted to the search for new knowledge that will rob cancer of some of its potency as a killer. Eventually, the disease will be brought under control."

"We should give ourselves of the opportunity to avail to the American Cancer society's drive for funds because our contributions will add force to the research attack on cancer, and will at the same time help provide better facilities for treatment and cure of cancer in our own community."

It was revealed that Mrs. Lee B. Miller, Mrs. Jack Ryan, and Mrs. Harold Riley, all of West Bend; Miss Edna Schloemer, secretary of the West Bend-Barton Community Chest, and Fred C. Weinreich, cancer committee chairman for the town of Farmington, attended a fifth medical district conference of the American Cancer society at Sheboygan Wednesday, Oct. 15.

Principal speaker was Rep. Frank R. Keefe of Oshkosh, and reports were heard from county representatives, including Mrs. Ryan and Weinreich.

It was revealed that the state-office headquarters, now located at Beaver Dam, will be moved to larger quarters at Madison in the near future.

Veterans' SERVICE BUREAU

EDITOR'S NOTE: This Newspaper through special arrangement with the Washington Bureau of Western Newspaper Union at 1616 Eye Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., is bringing readers this weekly column on problems of the veteran and serviceman and his family. Questions may be addressed to the above Bureau and they will be answered in a subsequent column. No replies can be made direct by mail, but only in the column which will appear in this newspaper regularly.

Down Payments Discussed

Veterans service bureau has received so many letters complaining about the practice and growing tendency of many lenders to require down payments on purchase of a business, a home or farm under the G.I. bill that this entire column will be devoted to setting forth views of Veterans' administration concerning this "diservice" to the veterans of the nation.

- 1—Defeating the primary purpose of the G.I. bill;
- 2—Virtually inviting the passage of new legislation;
- 3—Rendering a disservice to veterans who have a right to expect 100 per cent financing where credit and other factors are favorable; and
- 4—Already new legislation is being considered which would provide for more direct loans to veterans in the purchase of farms;
- 5—If the price of the property is so high that security factors would demand a down payment, the lender would be doing the veteran a service not to make the loan at all.

So prone have lenders become in demanding down payments on G.I. home purchases, Veterans' administration has overruled a former policy not to name specific lending institutions when asked, and will in the future give veterans all information and direct them to lending institutions which are favorably disposed to making G.I. loans without the necessity of a down payment in addition to the federal guaranty of $4,000.

Veterans' administration points out that in the case of homes selling for $10,000, as an example, the federal guaranty of up to $4,000 is 40 per cent of the appraised value.

VA says: "In any case where a lender thinks a cash payment is necessary from a security standpoint, particularly in the case of loans under $10,000, then that would seem to pretty clearly establish the fact that the particular property is over-priced and it would be a greater service to the veteran not to make the loan at all. These veterans' loans are not intended as a convenient conduit through which the sale of over-priced houses can be financed."

Pointing out the fact that the lender is guaranteed against loss up to $4,000 of the amount of the loan, Veterans' administration says:

"Assurance against the probability of loss of principal with regard to loans under $10,000 in particular, is afforded the lender by the combination of the cash guaranty and the physical property securing the loan. For example, in the case of a $10,000 amortized loan running for 20 years, based upon a reasonable value finding of $10,000 and which is guaranteed for the maximum of $4,000, the market value of the home, which is the underlying security for the loan, would have to decline to a point 42 per cent below the original amount of the loan at the end of the first year of the loan before the investor would incur a loss in case of default.

"At the end of the sixth year the market value of the property securing the loan could need sink to a point more than 50 per cent below the original amount of the loan before the investor would suffer loss. It is difficult to see how within the foreseeable future such a drastic decline in real estate values could occur unless our economy experiences a depression of extreme magnitude."

Questions and Answers

Q. I receive $63 a month insurance payments for my son, killed overseas. May I retain a lump payment of about $3,000 or $4,000 to purchase a home and have the remainder paid as at present?—A. M., Mansfield, Ohio.

A. No. Payment is made in the manner the insured designated. After August, 1948, the veteran was allowed to change his policy to a lump sum payment; however, this applied to living veterans only. You are not eligible for lump sum payment.

Q. I took a course of study under public law 346 and would like to continue school in another city. How can I make this transfer?—E. J. E., Binghamton, N. Y.

A. Contact Veterans' administration office having jurisdiction in the city where you plan to reside. They will make the arrangements.

Q. I was forced to quit school recently. Through some misunderstanding, I have been receiving my subsistence checks. Shall I return them?—B. J. F., Denver, Colo.

A. Refund of the checks should be made within 60 days.

THEY'RE GOOD SCOUTS... A wide field of interests and activities is embraced in the Girl Scout program, as exemplified by these pictures of typical scouts. World friendship and peace are being emphasized during Girl Scout Week, as a phase of the good citizenship program. Homemaking, outdoor activities, arts and crafts, agriculture, aviation and multiple other interests provide a well-rounded schedule for Girl Scouts.

BADGE OF DISTINCTION

Girl Scout Week Will Stress World Friendship and Peace

WNU Features.

In almost every town and hamlet of the United States from October 26 to November 1 the trim, neat, green uniform of the Girl Scouts will be in evidence as members of the organization, a million and a quarter strong, mark the annual observance of Girl Scout Week. In 1,600 councils, which include 52,000 troops, the girls and their adult leaders will celebrate the week with special events every day, stressing the lessons of democracy and friendship which are the heritage of Girl Scouting.

Scout Week always centers around October 31, anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Juliette Gordon Low, founder of Girl Scouting in the United States, and is observed traditionally by devoting each day of the week to a major phase of scout activities and ideals. Rallies and demonstrations will be staged by councils and troops, and new emphasis will be placed on the 35th anniversary theme, "Girl Scouts—Better Citizens Build a Better World."

Founded in 1912.

Founded by Mrs. Low in Savannah, Ga., in 1912, the scout movement spread rapidly, and when Mrs. Low died in 1927 her "infant" had grown into a national organization of more than 100,000. Since that time, and particularly during the war years, the national Girl Scouts have grown at a phenomenal pace, the membership increase amounting to 99.9 per cent in the last few years. The group now ranks as the major organization of its kind in the United States.

Major objective of Girl Scouting is to teach girls, from 7 through 17, how to become better citizens and to spread the message of peace and friendship throughout the world. For 35 years the Girl Scout promise, "On my honor I will try to do my duty to God and my country and to help others at all times and to obey the Girl Scout laws," has been a guide to an ever increasing number of girls.

Opening the week's activities, Girl Scout Sunday will be noted October 26. Girls and their leaders, in uniform, will attend church services in a body. Homemaking, which since the foundation of scouting has been the keystone of the program, will be stressed in Monday's activities. Tuesday is Citizenship Day in cognizance of the fact that promotion of good citizenship always has been a basic purpose of the organization. One of the tenets of scouting is that "a good scout is one who is a better citizen because of her scout training."

Emphasize Health.

Wednesday has been designated as Health and Safety Day, emphasizing another major point of the scout program. "A healthy scout who knows how to avoid accidents is a better citizen," the manual proclaims.

In line with the organization's effort to promote understanding of peoples throughout the world, International Friendship Day will be observed Thursday. As the finale of the week, Saturday will be devoted to the outdoors. The extensive program of scouting is designed to teach a girl how to enjoy the great out-of-doors and how to live simply without sacrificing comfort.

Among the notable achievements of Girl Scouting in recent years has been its extension into an increasingly large number of rural areas. The scout program is devoting added attention to the girls from small towns and the farming country.

In addition to gaining proficiency badges in camping, the home and community, Girl Scouts now may win honors for proficiency in agriculture. A number of new proficiency badges in agriculture are expected to be announced at the biennial convention in Long Beach, Calif., November 4 to 7. The new badges, which will cover practically every field in agriculture, are designed to appeal not only to the girl who lives on a farm but also to city youngsters who spend their vacations on the farm or who have a natural bent for agriculture.

Broaden Outlook.

With advancement of international friendship and peace as one of the organization's major objectives, considerable attention has been given during the 35th anniversary year to a regeneration of the international aspects of scouting. Several international gatherings were conducted.

"These teen-age youngsters displayed a keen understanding of the problems facing a weary world and demonstrated that they are eager to help solve them," camp officials universally commented.

Despite its rapid gains in recent years, Girl Scouting, with a potential membership of many millions, now serves only one girl out of every hundred of scout age. Expansion is being retarded, leaders point out, by a lack of volunteer adult leaders. Thousands of girls are anxious to become scouts but organization of additional troops requires sponsors, meeting places and volunteer leaders.

Blind Minister's Own Story Gives Inspiration to Others

ARGENTA, ILL.—Perpetual darkness permits the blind to "see" many things which escape those with sight. In an attempt to share these things with others, the Rev. Robert S. Kieser, who is totally blind, is conducting a series of lectures on "Adventures in Darkness." In his lectures, he recounts his own experiences in the belief that they will serve as an inspiration to other handicapped persons.

When he finished the eighth grade, Mr. Kieser was told he must study no more because of failing eyesight. However, he longed for more education and despite the advice of doctors entered Blackburn college. While a student there he lost the sight in his right eye through an operation. Despite this handicap, he finished his course and then entered McCormick seminary in Chicago. He was graduated from the seminary and then studied a year at University of Chicago as a graduate student.

Speedometer Sets Doctor's Fees

DOTHAN, ALA.—The story of a country doctor a century and a quarter ago who gauged his fees by the cost of the first—if not the first—speedometers ever used was revealed here by his grandson, R. P. Williams. Williams' grandfather was Dr. John Owen, who practiced medicine in North Carolina for about 50 years. For most of that time, he drove his fine horse and gig over unimproved trails. People of that day undoubtedly were intrigued by the strange contraption mounted over one wheel. Actually, Williams explains, it was a crude forerunner of the speedometer. Dr. Owen, however, wasn't particularly interested in how fast he was going, but it meant money in his pocket to know how far he had traveled for each call.

In the early 1800s a country doctor had a lot of traveling to do. Dr. Owen figured that it wasn't fair to charge a patient who lived "down the road a piece" as much as he would a sick person who lived across the county, so he decided the practical thing to do would be to charge by the mile. However, gigs didn't come equipped with speedometers in those days, so the doctor had to invent his own. He measured the distance his gig moved with one revolution of the wheel, and then figured the number of times the wheel turned in traveling a mile. Then he attached a device to the wheel to clock each revolution, and when he had traveled a mile a bell would ring.

Veteran J. P. Refuses To Perform Marriages

ALBANY, N. Y. — Although his bilfold suffers his peace of mind improves, insists William Mock, justice of the peace, in explaining his refusal to perform marriage ceremonies. Mock, who has held the office since 1912, has married only three couples in the 35 years and none in the last five years. "There are enough preachers to handle all the marrying," he says.

Youth Has Excuse For Knowing Nurses

REEDSBURG, WIS. — Wilbert Haller, 21, had a legitimate excuse for knowing nurses by their first names when he was admitted to the local hospital for a tonsilectomy. Last year Haller won a bout with meningitis. While driving home after his discharge he broke a leg and back he went to the hospital. Then he was stricken with appendicitis, returning to the hospital.

Farm To Change Hands First Time in 68 Years

IVANHOE, MINN.—For the first time in 68 years, the old Jensen farm in Royal township will not be worked by a member of the family. In 1879 the late Hans P. Jensen homesteaded the property, farming it until his death in 1914. Since then the property has been operated by his sons, Will and John Jensen. They have leased the farm to Harris Haman for next year.

PACKS 40,000 MUSCLES

Trunk of an Elephant One of the Wonders of Nature

Though the casual observer may be unimpressed, the trunk of an elephant is one of the wonders of nature. It is estimated to contain something like 40,000 muscles, strangely interlaced and curiously arranged so as to give it the fullest diversity of movement. It communicates with the head by a system of nerves which give it almost the precision and delicacy of the human finger. The elephant breathes through his trunk, and when wild it is not an infrequent thing for it to take to the water and swim for some distance completely submerged, with nothing but the tip of its trunk visible. In those great forest fights that one reads about, this lord of the woods, even when most severely pressed, takes care to fight with its trunk aloft. The elephant's tusks are almost as remarkable in construction as the trunk. Hard as we all know ivory to be, the roots of the tusks are a sort of ever-growing pulp, which, as the tusks wear out from year to year, gradually pushes forward and hardens. It is no uncommon thing to find bullets thus embedded in the solid ends of these tusks — bullets which originally lodged, during some hunt, in the pulp at the roots, but which have, in the course of years, been steadily pushed forward and forward, until, in the end, they would have been thrown off altogether.

How to Successfully Grow and Care For Your House Plants and Flowers

House Plants Ruined By Faulty Watering

POTTED chrysanthemums are a fall favorite that bloom until near Christmas. They must be kept cool, and flourish best in an unheated room or sunporch.

Water only enough to keep them alive and in the spring start new plants by pinching off slips from tops of growing stems or using the new shoots around the base for slips. Mums can be potted all year and planted outside in summer but during these winter months they need cool, moist air to survive. You may want to know about preserving other indoor plants—cyclamen, primrose, cactus, geranium. Proper planting and watering for these and others are discussed in our booklet No. 29.

before having your tonsils removed. Is there a machine in the world that will do its work perfectly with some of its parts missing? Doesn't the designer use only enough parts to make it as nearly perfect as possible?

Then is it reasonable that the designer of the most perfect machine in the world—the human body—would have supplied you with tonsils unless you needed them?

By all means use every effort to save them. Let us explain how

Ike Reluctant; Taft Works Hard for Party Nomination

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WASHINGTON.—Back before World War II started, I attended a party given by Mark Woods, (my present boss). One of the guests, with whom I had been associated on the Farm and Home Hour came to me and said: "I want you to meet my brother. He's a lieutenant colonel in the army, and I think he's going places."

Somewhat later, and often since, I have had occasion to remember the lieutenant colonel vividly.

I have just been looking at a graph drawn in 1945 by that same lieutenant colonel (after he was needed into it by a biographer). It shows his promotions from the time he was graduated from West Point in 1915.

Baukhage

He soon was promoted to a major (he was slow in those days) and remained a major until 1936. From then until the time I met him at that party, he was a lieutenant colonel.

Two years passed and then things began to happen: Colonel in '41; upped to brigadier general the same year; major general in 1942; commanding general of the European theater of operation; then, in 1945, lieutenant general and commanding general, Allied forces in the European theater—now, president of Columbia university (or maybe something bigger) to be.

Milton Eisenhower was right when he said his brother was "going places." It is in the voluminous volume "My Three Years With Eisenhower" by Harry Butcher, his naval aide, that the chart appears. The graph shows at its peak the rank of four-star general. Butcher jokingly plotted the curve (down) after that point, to zero. Eisenhower immediately drew a fishing pole at the nadir, thus expressing his hopes.

Both were wrong. The government pinned a fifth star on him, and the fishing pole has been transmuted into a cap and gown, as symbol of his new rank when he switches bosses from Mars to Minerva.

But if certain boosters have their way, the line on the chart may move upward again.

I haven't heard what the general's deep-down plans are, but from what I hear, the fishing pole is still the final objective, and he doesn't necessarily mean fishing from a presidential yacht.

Senator Taft Personifies GOP

Of course, it is more fun generalizing about generals than it is to particularize about the prime contenders in the candidates' elephant race to come. But, no matter how much political dust some dark or even chestnut roan stirs up later, there are just two people the politicians have to consider now. They are Senator Taft of Ohio and Governor Dewey of New York.

I was standing with a group outside the executive offices of the White House, waiting for the presidential press and radio conference when a genial human cloud, much bigger than a man's hand, in fact almost twice as big as most men's bodies, appeared on the horizon. It was the politically astute and ardent Taftite, Rep. Clarence Brown of Ohio.

The boys ragged Brown a little about the Taft trip, but he wasn't a bit down-hearted. Said he: "We didn't expect to bring back a bunch of delegates. Taft made votes for the Republican party, and that means votes for Taft." (Despite Brown's optimism, some observers have felt that although Taft did make new friends, they weren't new votes, for they were already solid Republicans.)

Frankly, I don't understand Taft very well. There is no question about his intellect or his intellectual judgments. Nobody could ask for a greater demonstration of political skill on the legislative side than his record in the last congress reveals. But that isn't all.

One of Taft's critics, fully cognizant of the Republican policy leader's achievements, said that his intellectual judgments "ran ahead of his practical application" of them. I suppose the critic meant that for all Taft's powers of reasoning, scholarship and tremendous ability to acquire knowledge and weigh facts, he sometimes appears to allow his hereditary viewpoint rather than his acquired conclusions to guide his course. Taft is naturally conservative—and sometimes, I am sure, he has been intellectually persuaded as to the validity of certain measures, but has been unable to support those measures fully because of this inborn conservatism.

To those who know Taft even more than casually, he is cool, rarely unbending, legalistic. He can prove himself, however, as even the least sympathetic newsmen on his recent trip admit, affable and approachable. Also, he has that on many occasions so useful acquisition, (especially when chaperoning a bob-tailed flush), the poker face. Even his smile, which if over-worked, becomes a bit rubbery, doesn't always dispel this impression. Although he inherited from his father, William Howard Taft, a tremendous capacity for hard work and a conservative point of view, he lacks the robust geniality conveyed by the Elder Taft's smile and laugh.

Unfortunately, Robert Taft hasn't that risible faculty to relieve a certain aloof remoteness of manner and expression. He is by no means a glamour-boy, and he knows it. One time when Republicans and Democrats were gathered at some clambake in New England, and the rally became a little personal, Taft challenged the Democrats to a beauty contest. Senator Pepper, who knows he has no claim to pulebitude himself, immediately jumped up to say: "I'm paired with the senator from Ohio."

Taft has some sense of humor, even if he isn't famous for it. Perhaps he absorbed it from his witty wife. He stands six feet tall and he isn't stout, although somehow or other you seem to think of him that way. He is still young—only 58. (I'm sure that's young because it's exactly my age.)

As Representative Brown intimated, Taft's speeches on his western tour, almost entirely devoted to the glorification of the Republican party's record in the first session of the 80th congress, helped strengthen the party. In fact, Taft generally is accepted as the personification of the Republican party—and well he might be—considering the manner in which he dominated the last session, maintaining the respect of the Democratic leaders which he always has had—if not their love and admiration, which he never has had.

EDUCATION GOES HIGHER

Danger Seen in Rising Fees

That great old American institution of "working your way through college," which oftentimes is a critical ordeal for the serious student, is showing signs of vanishing completely, and many young seekers-after-truth soon may find it impossible to get through college if they are not blessed with higher-income families to help them out.

A director of the office of education has expressed the fear that the rising cost of a college education soon would keep large numbers of able students outside the campus gates.

Effects of steadily mounting fees in the country's institutions of higher learning already would have

SPECIAL SESSION—IN SURGERY . . . In case you've never seen a surgery amphitheater, either as a patient or a spectator, take a look at this picture. Members of the U. S. chapter of the International College of Surgeons, which held its convention in Chicago, are shown here watching the removal of three-fourths of a man's stomach.

Food Plan Opens Shakily; Comintern Brings Jitters

SIX MONTHS How Long No Meat?

Amid a certain amount of weeping and wailing and less gnashing of teeth than usual, President Truman's program involving meatless Tuesdays and eggless Thursdays lumbered tentatively through its first week.

Even the most ardent optimist could not call this phase of the food conservation drive to help Europe an instantaneous success; however, it might improve with time.

And it was in the handwriting on the wall that there would be considerable time, for administration experts predicted that the days of voluntary self-denial would last for at least six months.

President Truman himself has set the dates for the interim emergency aid to Europe campaign—from December 1 to March 31—although that winter limit was imposed specifically for the raising of 500 million dollars in cash. Regarding the food conservation aspect, Charles Luckman, head of the citizens food committee, said "Our only idea is to do the job until it is done. No time schedule has been set."

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton Anderson was a little more definite. He pointed out that conservation to save grain might be necessary until the winter wheat crop, now being planted, begins to come in next June and July. Then he offered a faint hope with a hollow ring: "Meatless days are not in the picture indefinitely," he said.

The Eating Public

Public opinion, it developed, was far from united on a solid front behind the food conservation plan. Restaurant operators said their customers were grumbling about meatless and eggless days.

Millions of Americans resented the suggestion of a voluntary meatless Tuesday since they already are going without meat four or five days a week because they can't afford to buy it oftener than that.

The poultry industry pointed out that if every one of the 140 million residents of this country were to eat one egg a week, the government would have to buy 600 million dozen eggs under the law requiring government support of parity prices; and the government already holds in storage several million cases of surplus eggs purchased to support farm prices.

SECURITY RISKS: No Peace of Mind

Communism, particularly since the revival of the Comintern in nine European countries, is taking its toll in the U. S. by undermining the American peace of mind.

That obvious fact has been given added significance by the state department's disclosure that summary dismissal faces state department employees who are "habitual or close" associates of persons even "believed to be" Communists.

In plain language, that is a reversal of a fundamental principle of Anglo-American law—that a man is ### judged innocent until he is proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt.

In fact, the state department, in a "security principles" document recently made public, says specifically that if there is a "reasonable doubt" about a worker's loyalty the "department will be given the benefit of the doubt and the person will be deemed a security risk."

While idealists could quibble at length about abridgment of "constitutional rights," few would deny that the state department simply was playing it safe in the face of a manifest danger.

SOLD GOLD: Second Time

Badly bent economically, although not yet quite broke, Great Britain, in the latest phase of her desperate quest for dollars, has sold 120 million dollars worth of gold to the U. S. in exchange for an equal amount of ironmen.

It was the second such sale from Britain's now dwindling gold reserve. Early in September 80 million dollars worth of gold was sold to the U. S.

The September gold sale came after the 400-million-dollar balance of Britain's dollar loan from America was frozen by British-American agreement when Britain declared she no longer could honor the loan's convertibility clause requiring her to provide dollars in exchange for pounds sterling on demand to any nation she traded with.

IRENE BEASLEY celebrated the beginning of "Grand Slam's" second year on the air at a large, and delightful party. There were roses for everybody, and amusing pictures of the party given last year, when the program was launched. In its first year on the air "Grand Slam" received more than a million entries from the public, and distributed more than 4,000 valuable prizes to contestants from every section of the country. The first broadcast of the new year was swamped; some hundreds of radio fans couldn't get in, although the big CBS Playhouse No. 2 had been taken over for the event.

Doris Day, "Your Hit Parade" vocalist, making her film bow in Michael Curtiz' "Romance in High C," recently received a huge, console-model television set. Unable to find an apartment, she's living in a

Speaking of parties, the advertising agency that handles the Lovell Thomas radio programs has won the undying gratitude of the newspaper people by not giving one when he changed networks. Instead, they announced that the $1,000 party would have cost would be given to charity, and asked us each to name the one we'd like to have receive a portion of the money.

If Terry Moore looks familiar to you when you see her playing opposite Glenn Ford in "The Return of October," it will be because you've seen her as Jan Ford, also Helen Koford. A child player since she was 11, she played Ingrid Bergman as a child in "Gaslight," and Brenda Joyce as a child in "Maryland." Then she went into teenage roles; now at 18, she's under contract to Columbia.

Gov. Oscar E. Rennebohm of Wisconsin, guest of Dennis Morgan and Jack Carson at Warner Bros.' studio recently, accidentally worked in the rehearsal of a scene for Morgan's film, "To the Victor." Director Byron Roberts mistook him for one of the atmosphere players and directed him to walk across the stage lobby until Morgan and Viveca Lindfors completed their scene.

The Oklahoma State Poultry show, December 2-8, has been selected as the site of an international contest to choose a rooster suitable to succeed the one that has been the trademark of Pathe News for nearly 40 years.

Patsy Walker, retiring from "Juvenile Jury" at the age of 12, has grown up with the show. If you heard her in those days you'll recall that she was rather shy; it wasn't long before she acquired self-assurance and sharpened her wit. Patsy thinks it's all been good training, for the career she intends to follow—she wants to be a script writer for a top-flight comedian.

"Silver," the first horse to star as "High-ho Silver" with the Lone Ranger in movies, is now 18 years old. But he hasn't retired; he's portraying an ancient nag in Warner Bros.' adventure picture, "Silver River."

Seems that Lassie, the dog star, has been suffering at the hands of souvenir hunters; they snip strands of hair from his coat. Now, when he travels, his familiar golden hair is darkened with make-up so he won't be recognized en route.

This Week's Best Fiction

STELLA was as curious as any wife should be of her left hand. She was a note telling him he can look after himself in the future, because she's fed up with his bad temper when he comes home evenings, and that she's just about had enough of cleaning and polishing and cooking in a three-room flat for a guy who's got as much sense of gratitude as an undertaker has a sense of humor.

She was curious because she'd never done this before; she'd never had time. They'd only been married three months, and that's not really long enough for a girl to know all about what happens when a wife gives her husband the air in writing. She wanted to see how Bill reacted to that note on the dressing-table; whether he took it on the chin and went out to face the world, dauntless and wifeless, or whether he crumpled. She hoped he'd crumple.

Anyway, the best way to see a thing, she decided logically, was to go to the place where it was happening and keep your eyes open. It'd been two-fifteen in the afternoon when she had written the note, and by three-fifteen she'd changed her mind a few score times, packed a suitcase with a few clothes, just for appearance, and closed the front door behind her with a firm resolution never to darken the threshold again until Bill went down on his knees and craved pardon.

Knowing Bill was due home at five o'clock, the thought occurred to her that unless she hurried she'd miss the show, and if she did that no one would forgive her, least of all herself.

The threshold was darkened once again as she entered the flat, but she didn't look at it that way. After all, maybe she'd been a little harsh with the darling boy; perhaps there was something in this jaded business man's notion, or else why did movie magnates make pictures of them? And then—the spectre flashed like a lively nightmare through her mind—there was a chance, an awful chance, that Bill would kill himself with that gun he'd bought during the burglar scare.

He might even take to drinking his head off with his pay envelope, or put his head in the oven.

In fact, there were quite a number of things he might do, and Stella began to think she'd been led back to the flat by some Fate which had a personal interest in the destiny of young couples.

SHE walked into the bedroom and noticed that her missive was still there, just where she'd placed it on the dressing table. So Bill hadn't been back yet. She was in time to prevent disaster and that ugly follow-through about insanity which they always printed in the papers whenever anyone put himself on the spot.

Glancing around the room, the only place she could think of to peek from was under the bed. From this angle, by lifting the frills of the bed-cover, she had a ringside view of the note on the dressing-table.

She'd be able to watch Bill's reaction when he read the note, and then, if he didn't stage a horizontal but went to the drawer where the gun was kept instead, she'd jump out and do her stuff.

She crawled floorwards and wriggled her way into position. Too bad she couldn't have a cushion or two to help her get comfortable, but there wasn't space. The floor was mighty hard, and it wasn't possible to move much, because the underside of the mattress was so close; an inch lower and she couldn't have squeezed in at all.

Just as her pose was reproducing the first stage of paralysis, the front door opened and Bill came into the hall with a hearty "Hello, darling! You there?"

A few strides and he was in the bedroom. He saw the note and, squinting between the frills of the bed-cover, Stella watched him read it, peer at it, turn it over, and finally fold it away in his pocket.

There was dead silence while he stood beside the dressing-table staring blankly into space; deciding whether to use a gun or the gas meter, Stella supposed. She was all set to haul herself out the moment he made for the drawer where the weapon lay. Instead, he opened his wardrobe and, with a deep sigh, took out a suit—a good suit, which he put on.

Stepping out to discuss the problem with a friend, thought Stella, or maybe... maybe he'd make a date with a pre-marriage sweetheart! She hadn't thought of dames before.

But the horror of the idea was crushed out of her by Bill's weight as he sat heavily on the bed and changed his shoes. When he'd got the second shoe on he began to hum. It was a snappy, light hearted tune, the kind a man hums when his spirits are on the boom.

Anger welled up in Stella's heart. He wasn't in the least repentant. A hard, insensitive brute who could watch his quarter-year-bridal walk out on him like so much laundry.

He had no feelings, and she felt she wouldn't care a hoot if he dropped dead on the floor beside her.

When he'd dressed she saw him, still humming, write something on the back of her note, fold it in reverse way, and replace it in its original place on the dressing table. Then he brushed his suit carefully, fixed his tie straight, gave himself the once-over in the mirror, and went into the hall.

Immediately the front door closed Stella wormed her way out from underneath the bed and snatched at the note. This must be some kind of clue to his movements.

She read: "It's much softer ON the bed."

ABOUT YOU

BECOMING A GOOD LISTENER
He's gay, he's debonair, he's popular, he's sought after for his wit and charm. Among his friends are many attractive young women. The other day he was telling me about how he evaluates the personalities in deciding whether to continue their friendship or not, for he is a critical judge of personality and apparently is a man who is hard to please.

My friend says that the one quality he looks for, the great quality of attractiveness in a human being, is simply that of showing interest in the other person and in what he is saying.

"Whenever I take a young woman out to dinner for the first time," he explained, "I begin talking. She doesn't know it, but I am giving her a personality test."

"I tell her of some experience of mine. I don't talk about things I'm sure would bore her, but I try to make one of my experiences interesting to her."

"I say something like this: 'I had an interesting weekend a couple of weeks ago. Some amazing things happened to me. It was really funny.' And then I interrupt myself. 'Is that draft bothering you?' I'll ask."

"Then what's the next step?" I asked him.

"Why, I wait to see if she'll ask what happened to me on my trip or whether she will forget it and talk about something else."

"Most of them ask you to go on, don't they?"

"They do not. That's just the trouble. That's why I say that the average man or woman misses a fine opportunity to develop lasting and interesting friendships by not taking a deeper interest in the other person and in what he is saying."

I think that this man has hit upon one of the most vital subjects in the whole field of improving your life—an expressed interest, a sustained interest, a lively interest in the other person.

If you develop that, though you may have none of the other attributes of charm or appearance, you will have a priceless aid in becoming more popular.

And if you want to see how few people actually have developed it, give those with whom you are thrown into contact the same personality test that this man described to me—talk to a person about yourself a little while, then interrupt. Probably six out of ten won't ask you to get back on the subject.

I'll wager that the four out of ten who do are the ones you like and respect the most.

Synthetic Vitamin A To Be Better Tasting
Commercial production of synthetic vitamin A, which promises to bring the vitamin within reach of all who need it, soon will be inaugurated, it has been announced by American Chemical Society.
Large-scale output of the vitamin, essential for proper growth and vision, has been made possible by development of a new process for synthesizing it in pure crystalline form, totally free from the fishy odor which has made many natural vitamin A concentrates unsuitable for use in certain foods and pharmaceutical products.
Up to now, the only commercial source of vitamin A has been oil obtained from the livers of such fish as the cod, dogfish and squalin shark, the report explained. Although the United States has adequate supplies of oil available from fish in coastal waters, few other nations are so fortunate, it was pointed out.
Special effort was devoted by the researchers to proving that the light yellow, viscous oils prepared by the new process were actually vitamin A concentrates, and not some other substance with vitamin A activity, the report said. The high potency of the concentrates provided strong evidence, it was noted, and additional evidence was obtained from the measurement of certain well-known properties of vitamin A.

Boy Helped Solve Problem Of Bridging Niagara Falls

When the first bridge over Niagara Falls was planned in 1848, the problem of getting a cable from the American to the Canadian side was solved by offering $5 to the first person who could make a kite carry a string across the 800-foot chasm.

After this had been accomplished by a boy, the string was used to pull over a small steel cable which, for several years, enabled persons to go back and forth, two at a time, in a little wire basket.

The original steel suspension bridge thrown across the river just below the American falls had a span of 820 feet, and was long considered to be a feat of engineering.

First cost of farm equipment should be judged by average hours of use expected. Skyline equipment is built for year 'round use, and that's giving the user his money's worth.

The Skyline Field Harvester makes ensilage from row crop. Field Harvester makes ensilage or chop forage for ensilage or dehydration. By leaving off harvester attachments and simply adding chute and feed collector, you have a portable grinder to use all winter.

The Skyline Trailer has sides and end gates that let down for any hauling job. Also equipped with stake pockets—good clearance—auto steering construction. The two-wheel trailer hauls 10 bales of hay, both end gates let down to haul material. Manure spreader attachment also unloads ensilage—lifts out leaving trailer for other uses.

The Skyline double-duty grinder will grind all grain, chop hay or cut and blow ensilage. It's the most versatile grinder for farm use.

The New Skyline clear vision loader is a beauty. Fits most all tractors. Has its own hydraulic pump. Indispensable for handling hay, manure, dirt, snow and rock.

The new large capacity blower is designed for safety and efficiency. Its all-steel construction will give years of trouble-free operation. It handles ensilage, grain or chopped hay in stride.
