WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS --

Security Council Gets Berlin Issue, Inconclusive Meeting Stalls Action; Russia Proposes Big Four Parley

-By Bill Schoentgen, WNU Staff Writer_

(EDITOR'S NOTE: When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of Western Newspaper Union's news analysis and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

DEBATE:

Inconclusive For better or for worse the U. N. security council had become wedded to the problem of what to do about Berlin, but there was no honeymoon. Russia had boycotted the security council debate, and although Andrei Vishinsky, Soviet delegate, attended the first meeting in body he remained monstrously aloof from the proceedings in spirit.

THAT FIRST session was not only inconclusive but downright dull. No one would have thought that the 11 men mulling over this world crisis in the Chaillot palace in Paris were engaged in deliberations of so momentous a nature that they might turn the balance for peace or war in the world.

While Vishinsky sat dourly and silently-playing the part of the vicarious witness to the hilt - the American and French delegates read polite tirades against the manners and morals of Soviet motives and politics.

WHEN THE TWO western speakers were done, Juan A. Bramuglia of Argentina, acting president of the council, was forced simply to drop the whole business, temporarily at least, with a hollow thud.

After the French delegate had completed his review, Bramuglia waited expectantly for a time, then observed mildly that since he didn't seem to have any more speakers on the list the meeting would be recessed.

It appeared probable that the delegates would take considerable time for studying the charges of the U. S., Great Britain and France against Russia before meeting again. There was a possibility, too, that the security council might delay further formal meditation on the off chance that Russia might lift the Berlin blockade and the Big Four foreign ministers might take up the entire German ques-

BIG FOUR:

More Talks?

Russia, whether the Kremlin admitted it or not, was dissatisfied with the way its pet Berlin situation was being handled. The Soviets wanted it out of the hands of the U. N. and in the hands of the Big Four foreign ministers.

EVEN WHILE the United Nations was deciding to discuss the issue, Soviet Foreign Minister V. M. Molotov was sending a note to the Britain and France urging that the four foreign ministers meet to consider both the Berlin crisis and the problem of Germany as a

It was a peculiar development, inasmuch as it set the western nations to wondering the Soviets could justify such a conference in view of their flagrant defection in the long, futile and disillusioning Moscow talks which had ended recently.

Molotov's note, however, claimed that the U. N. security council did not have the authority to deal either with the Berlin crisis or the overall subject of Germany.

REVIEWING the six weeks of negotiations in Moscow, the note said that the talks did not break down over a Russian demand for control of all air traffic in and out of Berlin, as the allies had contended.

All that Russia wanted, said Molotov, was some control over air transport to prevent black market money deals. U. S. Ambassador Bedell Smith had agreed with that condition, Molotov insisted, and quoted him as he dwells on the rigors of being the saying: "It is quite understandable the Soviet government wishes to have certain guarantees against utilization of air transport for illegal currency deals or black market operations. Satisfactory guarantees of such kind could easily be

IF SMITH'S statement is correct, Molotov reasoned, then the Soviet in that capacity. Union believes it is possible an agreement may be reached between the four powers on "a mutually satisfactory basis."

Anyway, Molotov continued righteously, he couldn't see what all the fuss was about. He claimed international peace and security.

Sen. Chan Gurney (R., S. D.) chairman of the senate armed servmal military alliance that would pledge the U.S. to fight if the nations of western Europe were to be attacked by Russia. He announced that he would ask appointed under an act of the last the next congress to approve his congress. President Truman approposed alliance and to back it up pointed a third of the commission with a new lend-lease program to and the senate and house each named help rearm western powers.

Gurney, recently returned from a month-long observation tour of Europe and the Middle East, said he discussed his plan with Secretary of State George Mershall, but he did not indicate what Marshall's reaction to the idea was.

The South Dakota senator thus became the first ranking member of the upper house to call for an outright military alliance with Great Britain, France, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands as a ment in eight countries of western means of preventing a possible Rus- Europe, western Germany, Trieste sian drive to the west to bring all and the Netherlands East Indies and | rope's acute shortage may be eased of Europe under Soviet domination. | China in the Far East.

Ex 'Vice' Twice

Garner and President Harry Truman, also a former vice president, staged a cheery reunion when Mr. Truman came to Uvalde, Tex., in the course of his pre-election campaign tour. The two are old buddles from way back, and the visit didn't hurt the President any politically, either, because Cactus Jack is a mighty popular man in Texas.

INFLATION: What Price Bread?

Ever since the price of wheat deyear's bumper crop a good many inflation-harried Americans have been asking when the price of bread was going to take a corresponding drop.

The answer is that it probably won't, and the reason is that although the price of wheat is down the cost of the other basic bread ingredients are not.

BAKING INDUSTRY leaders, in a considerable ferment over recent charges that bread prices are deliberately being kept aloft, have said-and with some justificationthat the present costs of bakery goods reflect "a remarkable achievement in resisting inflationary pressures."

They base this contention on bureau of labor statistics figures which show, among other things, that the baker today is paying $2.53 for the four major ingredients of bread that cost him $1.00 in 1939.

THAT FIGURES out to an increase of 153 per cent in the cost of raw materials; yet the American housewife is paying on the average only about 63 per cent more for her bread than during the 1935-39 base period used by the bureau of labor statistics in computing its cost-ofliving index.

Last November, BLS figures show, flour reached a record of 164 per cent over the base period, and in December wheat of the type used for bread flour hit a record high of 214 per cent over the base. And although flour and wheat prices have slid somewhat recently, the flour used in bread now on the grocers' shelves was purchased by the baker several weeks ago when prices were up. OF THE FOUR major bread ingredients-flour, sugar, shortening frenetic and of inestimable imporand milk-only sugar now has a lower BLS index than bread. And still another factor which has the bread-makers beside themselves singing in the wilderness is the mounting costs of other elements involved in producing the staff of life -such as labor, machinery, distribution and packaging.

Any way you slice it, it's still in-

Anti-Truman

It was an accomplished fact that sooner or later John L. Lewis would have his say about the 1948 election, feeling as he obviously does that no political campaign would be complete without his having expressed an opinion on it.

At the United Mine Workers' 40th convention in Cincinnati the UMW chief shoved his foot in Mr. Truman's campaign machinery by turning a sour and sarcastic eye on the President's bid for re-elec-

PRESIDENT Truman is "dangerous to the United States," said convention delegates agreeing with him. They made it clear that they would not go along with the bulk of AFL, CIO and other independent unions now working for Mr. Truman's election

While the delegates cheered and applauded his criticisms, Lewis declared that:

"Harry Truman is totally unfit for the position. His principles are elastic. He is careless with the truth. He has no special knowledge of anything. He is a malignant, scheming sort of individual who is dangerous not only to the United Mine Workers but dangerous to the United States of America."

PROCEEDING oratorically in this vituperative vein, Lewis devoted 25 of the 50 minutes he took for his speech to derogating the President in general and specific terms. He charged that Mr. Truman vetoed the Taft-Hartley labor law only "for the record of his campaign." He said the President prosecuted the mine workers and had them fined twice "because he was too cowardly to send me to jail."

"I WAS WISHING he would put me in jail," Lewis went on reminiscently, "which is what a white clined under the impetus of this man would have done rather than rob you.

Two shortages, food and coal, are responsible for most of the discomfort and quite a few of the major troubles in the world, a report by the United Nations economic affairs department says.

Scarcity of basic foods and coal have lamed reconstruction efforts, provided an impetus to inflation and generally upset the world's economy by reducing human strength to work and produce.

Most of the people in Europe and Asia, including both the Soviet Union and China, are eating about 18 per cent less, in calories, than they did before the war, the study observed. Parapsychology Could Do Just Fine on Election Bets

By BAUKHAGE

WASHINGTON .- It won't be long now before you'll be able to settle those election bets.

A few days after the release of the official record of the negotiations with the Russians over the Berlin situation, I was sitting in the club with a couple of members of the Democratic administration. Naturally my friends didn't indicate that they had any doubts as to the outcome of the election, but when we started talking odds, I noticed the conversation was confined largely to the race for the senate. After all, said my friends, even some Republicans concede that Dewey might face a Democratic upper house.

It wouldn't take much of a push either way. The Democrats have 45 seats now, and the Republicans only 51. The Democrats are confident that only one or two of their candidates are in danger. On the other hand, there are a number of stiff state fights in progress in which the Republicans are being pushed pretty hard. The Democrats feel that if they can get out a large vote in these uncertain states, they have a chance of winning the four seats that would give them the edge. In other words the count then would be: Democrats 49; Republicans, 47. That two-vote margin wouldn't assure Democratic dominance on all senate policy matters, of course, because too many senators are given to leaping out of the party corral these days. On the other hand, many issues are bound Cordell Hull, former secretary to be settled along purely partisan lines. But far more important, the party of the majority gains contro of the senate committees.

The pre-election battles in which the Democrats seem to have the edge are in Oklahoma, West Virginia, Wyoming, and Kentucky. About in that order. Also Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, and Idaho. The Democrats admit their weakest points are in Montana and people who look for it and work Colorado. The Republicans by no with it, knows much about uranium | means concede New Mexico, Rhode | the raw material of splitting Island, and Tennessee, but the Democrats don't seem too worried Clairvoyance is a common experience. An example might be of the mother who has a vivid and alarming impression of a train wreck. It may be a nightmare, a waking hallucination, or just an intuition. The wreck seems to be connected with her son, perhaps with some definite place like a tunnel. It turns out later that her son was actually injured in a wreck at the spot where ner dream assigned it.

Careful checking of such experiences is now going on, and Dr. Rhine feels that the results in these cases too, appear to show that some unknown process is involved, unexplained in terms of our ordinary senses. As to psychokinesis, experiments have seemed to prove that dice

It was again after their performance.

But Tony was oblivious to all this activity as he moved intently into the tent, and slipped quietly onto the grass near the end of the hippodrome track. His position gave him a commanding view of the space directly over the center ring. Multicolored spotlights played upon the spangled figure of a dainty lady silhouetted against the tent top.

The gentle music of a waltz now wafted through the tent from the bandstand. Poised upon the tiny platform, 80 feet above the ground, stood the petite Annette-queen of the aerialists. Many said she was the greatest since Langtry. The swinging bar floated rhythmically back and forth as she swung it gently and evenly away from her. Far across the space atop the tent, her assistant swung a similar bar back and forth.

Annette was readying herself for the highlight of her performancethe feature attraction of America's greatest circus. She was about to perform her triple somersault, defying death, as she swung her lovely, slim body through the top of the tent. There were no nets beneath! Then she quickly slid down the rope to the ground, took several graceful bows, and scampered toward the exit. Already the performers and horses were pouring into the tent for the grand finale; but Tony watched only the movement of the raven-haired beauty. Annette.

Twice each day he came to the main tent to watch the star of the high swings. How his heart yearned for the little French actress, but Annette was entirely unaware of his affection for her.

Tony was billed as Anthony Fragiotto, creator and manipulator of FRAGIOTTO'S MARIONETTES. He was part of the sideshow, and had been with the circus about six months, joining them two months before they left winter quarters.

Tony was in love with Annette. But the shy lad from Vicenza Euganea province in far-off Italy scarcely dared speak to the star of the show, let alone declare his feelings for her. Tony had been a farmer's son, working in the fields of those rolling plains when a boy. But Guiseppe Fragiotto was no ordinary farmer. He was the village wood carver, and for years had delighted the peasants in the Vicenza region with his puppet shows. Naturally, he taught his son, Antonio, the art.

When Tony was big enough to assist his father in the manipulation of the gayly-costumed dolls, they traveled to Vicenza, Como, and even Padua to present the Fragiotto puppets at the street carnivals.

Then the war had come! The Fragiotto family had gone underground when the Germans flowed into Italy. Eventually Tony had come to America. And with him he had brought his precious puppets. He found work as a farm hand in Pennsylvania where he exhibited his puppets one evening at a Red Cross benefit show. Not long after that night, the circus agent had contacted him, and he was on his way to the circus quarters. There he became part of the strange conglomeration which comprised the side show.

During the months in winter quarters, Tony had seen Annette practicing her feats on the rings and samble in the side show tent after dinner tomorrow.

"Fine," replied Annette. "I have often watched your charming show. I would be delighted M'sieur Fragiotto. Perhaps you would be so kind as to show me how to make them work?" This was even more than Tony had dreamed might be possible.

"Indeed! Indeed!" he shouted enthusiastically. "I shall expect you then tomorrow.'

The next afternoon, Tony was ready with the puppets long before the dinner hour. He talked to them affectionately as he put them through their paces To Beppo, the clown, he chuckled. "And now, leetle fonny man, you make the boys and gurls to laugh, no?" The beautifully carved wooden horses pranced and danced as gracefully as their real counterparts in the big tent across the way. But the truly artistic masterpiece was the replica of Annette. Tenderly, he placed the tiny puppet into place on the aerial swing in his miniature arena.

"My beautiful one," he almost whispered, "we shall see if you can do the triple soubresaut, reesking your lovely life!" As the graceful puppet tumbled through space at the behest of Tony's nimble fingers, he became entranced in his work. He did not see Annette slip into the tent. He was startled when she exlaimed:

it is perfect!" She scampered behind the scenes to examine the trappings of the new show. She oh-ed and ah-ed at the beautifully wrought details of the tiny circus, and when Tony handed her the tiny duplicate of herself, she was utterly speechless. Finally

"Oh, Tony, it's beautiful . . . beautiful. I don't really look like that, do I?" she queried, looking coquettishly up into his eyes. The blood rushed to Tony's face, and he stammered weakly.

"Oh, Tony, show me how to make her work," pleaded Annette, dancing up and down excitedly like a child with a new toy. "Can you really make her do a triple somersault like myself?"

"Yes," laughed Tony, "but it is not easy. You must practice. Now see," he said, placing the toggle sticks in her hands as she clanibered onto the platform beside him, 'When you move this one so, the arms and legs do your beeding. When you move thees one so," he show would be laying over. He had indicated the other stick, "the head and body move at your command.' Annette moved the sticks awkthought. But surely she would not wardly, and the little doll gyrated wildly in her hands. In her effort to disentangle the puppet, she became involved in the strings. Tony reached around her shoulders to straighten up the entanglement, when she raised her face, brushing his chin with her soft hair. Her lovely feminine fragrance held Tony entranced, and acting impulsively, he kissed her upturned her evening meal. After an interval "Plees, forgeev me, I . .

." he stammered. But Annette was not angry. Rather she seemed pleased. Ever so tenderly, she cuddled against Tony, and speaking softly, she said. "But, Tony, little Annette is still all tangled up. She will surely never make the somersault if you do not help me.' Tony's heart was making the somersaults now, as once again he put his arms about her. Then the words came pouring forth . . . the words he had whispered to the puppet Annette. "Oh, my beautiful Annette," he

KATHLEEN NORRIS Rocky Road Ahead

Bell Syndicate.-WNU Features.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

HIRTY YEARS AGO, when I the first world war ended, Barbara Whitman was left widowed, with a baby boy three weeks old. Bruce naturally became all Barbara's world; she was 32, delicate, walking with a slight limp even when using her cane. She did not remarry.

Now Bruce, grown, has passed his bar examinations with distinction-and he wants to marry Mollie Barbara writes me, on a tear-spat tered sheet, that she would rather see him dead. She will not meet Mollie; she will not see Bruce again if he makes this marriage.

"She has been married twice before and divorced twice," writes Barbara of Mollie. "I am not an extremely sophisticated woman, but I know her type. She's truly in love with Bruce now; he dances divinely and she loves to dance. He has a good income, augmented by accumulated service pay, and he spends money on her. DOESN'T WANT CHILDREN

"This woman has a little girl of 9, a neglected and difficult child. She says openly that she doesn't want more children. She told her aunt, whose closest friend is one of my intimates, that she and a divorced woman friend of hers had had a bet on which should get Bruce. She's that sort of a reckless, coarse woman.

"Her life is amusement, drink cigarettes, careless, scandalous talk, dress extravagance, rushing about in anybody's and everybody's cars. sleeping half through the mornings, up in some night club or at some private party well into the next morning.

"Her life is amusement . . ."

"My heart is broken over all this, my life wrecked. I cannot stay here in my own home city and watch the terrible disillusionment that is ahead for my son. Everything about him is fine; there are a dozen splendid girls in his own circle who would give him a real home, children, peace. To think of the tender, adoring love he gives her, des tined to so complete a change, is driving me mad.

"Bruce is quiet, sympathetic with my anxiety, sure that Mollie will win my heart in her own time. They are steadily getting ready for a November marriage; bridesmaids, caterers' supper, everything. What shall I do? Don't suggest that I welcome Mollie with open arms; it's too late for that. Just tell me some argument that may save my idealistic, noble boy from ruining his life.

MOLLIE HAS POOR RECORD Unfortunately, Barbara, there's no such argument. And optimistic as I am apt to be about all marriages, I must confess that Mollie has a discouraging record. Her story includes a rich old first husband with whom she lived only a year before claiming a large alimony; a wartime husband she divorced when he returned with physical and nerve injuries that should have demanded her tenderest care. That she should turn into a devoted wife, ready to face the inevitable difficulties of domestic life today, is more than one dares to hope.

Your only course, Barbara, and you know it as well as I do, is to keep quiet, refrain from criticisms and complaints, and play a waiting game. Ask Mollie to a home dinner. She'll come. Then include her in a club lunch with other women friends. Make Bruce feel that your loyalty to him includes his wife, too.

There are cases, and they are not a few, when these young wildcats settle down; when happiness and stability and a husband's love work a miracle in their tempestuous hearts. Trust Bruce for some sobering influences, and trust time, the all-healer, for a solution you cannot see now.

Married Couple's Antics in Parked Car Amaze Policeman RED WING, MINN .- As a policeman approached an unlighted car parked in an off-limits area here, he thought "illegal parking and illegal sparking." But the officer learned he was only half right. The car was off limits-but the couple inside was not. They were married 20 years ago. "Remarkable," wrote the officer in his report, "this woman was really the man's wife."

He read, over an official seal, that the prospective bride and bridegroom had been "duly inspected and found fit for human consumption." The registrar, who is also the meat inspector, had his seals mixed up.

Journal Recommends Bedside Manner for Animal Doctors

CHICAGO.-Future veterinarian should have the proper "bedside manner," in dealing with their "patients," the Journal of the American Veterinary Medical association says.

Understanding "the proper relationship between the practitioner and the patients and clients," is just as important in animal medicine as in human treatment, the journal says.

Loyal Cocker Pup Starves

To Death at Mother's Gr. BIRMINGHAM, ALA. - A shining example of canine loyalty was revealed when a thin, starved cocker died in a veterinary bospital here. The pitiful bag of skin and bones was found by its owner after being missing for two weeks. The pup was located at the grave of its mother, which was buried on the same day her two-year-old offspring disappeared.

Kitten on Subway Tracks Provides Thrills for Riders

NEW YORK .- Subway motorman Victor Klepacki was heading his three car train into a Brooklyn station when he saw green eyes down the tracks.

He jammed on the brakes. There was a kitten on the track. As Klepacki climbed down to pick up the kitten, it fled. Back into the car went Klepacki and the pursuit was

To Relieve Your Cough, Mix This Recipe, at Home

You'll be surprised how quickly and easily you can relieve coughs due to colds, when you try this splendid recipe. It gives you about four times as much cough medicine for your money, and you'll find it truly wonderful.

Make a syrup by stirring 2 cups of granulated sugar and one cup of water a few moments, until dissolved. No cooking needed—it's no trouble at all. (Or you can use corn syrup or liquid honey, instead of sugar syrup.) Then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (obtained from any druggist) into a pint bottle, and fill up with your syrup. This makes a full pint of medicine that will please you by its quick action. It never spoils, and tastes fine. This simple mixture takes right hold of a cough. For real results, you've never seen anything better. It loosens the phlegm, soothes the irritated membranes, and eases the soreness. Pinex is a special compound of proven ingredients, in concentrated

HOW IT STARTED

SALARY—In the early days of the Roman empire, salt was con sidered almost as valuable as gold. Roman soldiers received all or part of their pay in salt. This stipend was called a "salarium" from where comes our word "salary," denoting pay for services rendered.

"MINDING YOUR 'PS' AND 'QS'" is said to originate from the old English alebouse custom of keeping book tor each drinker in which "P" represented pints and "Q" quarts.

JOHN BULL—As a nickname for an Englishman, this expression first appeared as a character in a satire by Dr. Arbuthnot, published in 1712. John Bull was represented as a bull-headed tarmer.

48 hours pay for 40 hours work Penalty pay for weekends ε holidays 25¢ an hour increase Total 1/2 BILLION DOLLARS

14 Billion Dollar Road Block!

RAILROADS MUST OPERATE around the clock every day and night of the year.

Although they know this, leaders of 16 railsoad unions are demanding a five-day, Monday through Friday, week for one million railroad employes.

They want 48 hours pay for 40 hours work -in itself a 20% wage increase.

They also demand a minimum of 12 hours pay for any work performed on Saturdays, and 16 hours pay for any work performed on Sundays and holidays. On top of all this they want an additional increase of 25c an hour for every employe!

You'd Pay the Bill!

Summing up these demands, they mean that these union leaders seek to force the railroads to give one million employes an annual raise which would average $1500 per employe!

The total cost of this would be no less than 13/2 billion dollars per year, which is more than twice the expected net income of the

You'd pay the bill, because if these in creased costs are forced on the sailroads, increases.

Demands Unreasonable

These employes have had substantial raises during and since the war. Their average weekly earnings are higher than the average weekly earnings of workers in manufacturing industwies. They have more job security than the average werker in American industry. They also enjoy paid vacations, a retirement system and other advantages more generous than the average worker receives.

In contrast with the demands of these 16 unions, which add up to the equivalent of 48c an hour, the Conductors and Trainmen recently settled their wage request for an increase of 10c

Railroads Run for Everybody-Not Employes Alone

The railroad industry must serve not one but many groups-producers, businessmen, shippers, passengers and the general publicnight and day, every day of the year. These unions are proceeding in utter disregard of this important difference between railroads and other industries. Industrial plants can be shut down over weekends and holidays, but freight, mail, express and passengers must continue to move. Everybody who enters railroad employment knows this.

On September 18, 1948, the leaders of these 16 unions began taking a strike vote. But the threat of a strike will not alter the opposition of the railroads to such unreasonable demands!
