Small Communities Employ Many Methods To Raise Money to Buy Playground Tools

Every American community wants swings, slides, merry-go-rounds, and other playground equipment so that its youngsters may enjoy healthful, outdoor recreation.

The need for playground equipment is apparent to every school superintendent, city manager, park board, Parent-Teacher Association, as well as to the service organizations. But how to get the money?

This is a puzzling question in many small communities, but no small number of them have found an answer to it.

Take the case of Wells, a small community near Escanaba in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan. The Wells school, with an enrollment of more than 200 students, for years had a bare playground, except for two home made swings.

Supt. Lawrence Klug told the Wells Parent-Teacher Association of the need for modern, well-built, and safe playground equipment. The P.T.A. got busy raising money with pancake suppers and other social events, accumulating enough to buy an American wave chute slide and Castle Tower.

When members of the Wells board of education saw the fun the kids were getting out of the equipment, they scraped the school treasury and found enough money to purchase six sets of heavy duty swings.

Wanting still more fun equipment, the Wells students got an idea themselves. They installed a candy vending machine in the school lobby and earmarked all the profits, about $100 a year, to the recreation fund.

In all kinds of weather and all seasons, the Wells children can be seen on the playground. One January day it was two degrees below zero, but still at recess time the student body was out swinging, climbing, and sliding.

Another Upper Michigan hamlet, Carney, acquired some playground equipment for its youth when the P.T.A. held an amateur show in the school gymnasium and made several hundred dollars.

Garden, Mich., has just completed a $125,000 elementary school, as modern as you will find anywhere in the country. But after building the school, the board of education was at a loss as to how to get some money for recreational equipment.

Then, one member pointed to the possibilities of revenue from the 80-acre school forest. A state forester cruised the tract, and found there is enough mature timber to yield several hundred dollars. The commercial-sized trees will be marked by the forester and will be cut in the spring.

Guilford, Vermont has only about 700 inhabitants, but it has a live Recreation club, which means a lot. What they lacked in financial resources, the 200 members of the club made up with muscle, enthusiasm, and cooperation. They built a fine baseball diamond in Whittemore Park, later added a horseshoe court and a well-equipped picnic ground. Money for the improvements were raised through benefit baseball games and dances. During the past several months, the Recreation club has raised more than $500 for a swimming pool, which it hopes to have ready for the youngsters next summer.

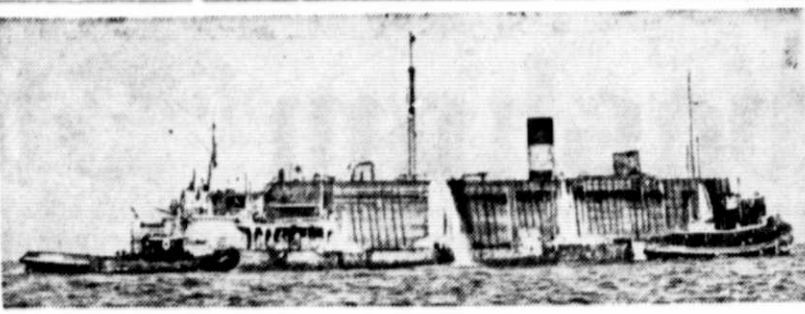

Other communities have obtained well-equipped playgrounds by holding box socials, movie shows, recreational demonstrations, popular subscription campaigns, and tag days. It's getting a start that is important. Once some playground equipment is installed and the public sees how the small fry are kept busy at wholesome forms of recreation, new opportunities for getting money knock at the door.

One small community got such a windfall recently when its future looked as dark as it could be. When its only industry, the Bay deNoquet Lumber company's sawmill, closed down last summer, Nahma, Upper Michigan town of 750 population, feared it would become a ghost town. But last fall, Nahma was purchased, lock, stock, and barrel, by the American Playground Device Co., which will erect a branch factory there. And the new owner of the town will give the Nahma school next spring a complete set of swings, slides, castle towers and other playground equipment.

And he gave it for his opinion, that whoever could make two ears of corn, or two blades of grass, to grow upon a spot of ground where only one grew before, would deserve better of mankind, and do more essential service to his country, than the whole race of politicians put together.

Pains of Arthritis, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Lumbago, Bursitis*
Relief Can Start in Minutes

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait anxiously for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this: SURIN is a new external fast pain relief medicine.

It's methacholine, a recent chemical horn of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tested on chronic rheumatism in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 73% patients and in home-for-the-aged 77%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief, longer, without burning or blistering; without unpleasant odor or grease. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything else ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. *SURIN is not a cure for deep seated rheumatism.

FARM RENTAL SURVEY BEING MADE; COUNTY TAKING PART
Farm operators in Washington county are taking part in a seven-state survey this week to find out about farm rental arrangements, according to E. E. Skalsky, county agricultural agent here.
The survey, designed to find out how renters and landlords share income from farm operations, is under the direction of the University of Wisconsin and the United States Department of Agriculture.
Questionnaires were mailed earlier this week from the university to a

Seed Treatments Reduce Losses From Cereal Diseases

Control of cereal diseases should increase crop yields and quality of both grain and forage. Many cereal diseases are seed-borne and can be controlled by chemical seed treatments. The fungicides now used are either (1) mercurials, mostly organic; (2) copper and zinc inorganic materials; and (3) non-mercurial organic compounds.

Fungicides may be applied (1) as solutions in which the seed is soaked for a period and then dried; or (2) as dust at rates from 1/2 to 3 ounces per bushel; or (3) in the form of a thick, soup-like "slurry" which coats the seed with the fungicide; or (4) in the form of a volatile concentrate applied by special machines.

Organic mercurials have proved more effective in cereal seed treatment than any other class of fungicide, according to R. W. Leukel, cereal pathologist, U.S.D.A. "Ceresan" was the first organic mercurial to be used widely for cereal seed treatment, but it was soon replaced by "New Improved Ceresan," which is in turn now being replaced by "Ceresan M," because the latter is less objectionable and can be applied as a slurry.

"Panogen," introduced from Sweden, has been found effective for seed-borne diseases of barley, oats, wheat, flax and sorghum. Applied in concentrated liquid form, usually as a spray in a special machine, the dust hazard is eliminated so that no mask is necessary.

Among the other organic mercurials, "Leytosan" has been found less effective than the "Ceresans," and "Parson's Seed Saver Dust" has been found generally to be inferior to standard cereal seed treatments.

A number of organic non-mercurials have been found effective for treating seed of corn, rice, sorghum, flax, and vegetables, but in general are not recommended for wheat, oats, and barley. Among these are "Arasan," "Arasan S.F.," "Spergon," "Phygon," and "Dow 9B."

The seed-borne diseases of small grains listed by Leukel as amenable to control by seed treatment are: for barley—covered smut, black or false loose smut, stripe disease, the seedling-blight stages of anthracnose, bacterial blight, spot blotch and scab; for oats—mostly loose and covered smuts, but treatment also reduced losses from seed-borne bacterial blights and some other diseases; for wheat—stinking smut or bunt, and also seed-borne flag smut, anthracnose and seedling blight.

The most effective fungicides for barley and oats are "New Improved Ceresan," "Ceresan M," and "Panogen." These are equally effective for bunt in wheat, but this disease can also be controlled by a number of other materials such as copper carbonate, basic copper sulphate, "Arasan," "Spergon," "Phygon," sulphur, and "Anticarsin."
The only diseases of corn that are prevented by seed treatments are seed rot and seedling blight. Treatment, however, frequently produces stronger and more vigorous plants. The materials now recommended for treating seed corn are "Arasan," "Spergon," and "Phygon," all of which may be applied either in dust or slurry form.
Sorghum seed is treated largely to combat seed-rot and seedling blight, but the kernel smuts and transmission of seed-borne anthracnose and bacterial leaf diseases are also prevented by treatment. "Arasan" and "Phygon" are especially beneficial, but with varieties like Leoti with persistent glumes "Ceresan M" or "Panogen" should be used, if the kernel smuts are present.
Equipment for treating seed with chemical dusts ranges from small homemade rotating-barrel and gravity mixers to large commercial outfits ranging in capacity from 100 to 500 bushels per hour. The latter are usually combined with seed-cleaning equipment so that both processes can be done in one continuous operation. The slurry treaters on the market are of large capacity and are generally too expensive for the average farm. Their use is confined largely to seed houses, elevators and cooperative treating centers.
Leukel finally cautions all persons handling fungicides to bear in mind that they are poisonous, that dust or fumes should not be inhaled, that the fungicides should not touch the skin, and that treated seed should not be used for feed or food.
Research workers in commercial laboratories and in Federal and State experiment stations are continually testing new fungicidal materials in an effort to produce better, safer and more effective fungicides for the control of plant diseases. A number of promising materials have been tested during the past year, and some of these may prove to be superior to fungicides now on the market. However, they are still in the experimental stage and require additional testing.

SHELBY OATS BEST OF BOND VARIETIES IN YIELD TESTS

Of the Bond varieties, Shelby has given the highest yields in Wisconsin in the past three years, according to experiment station tests. It is the most recent one of this group to be distributed, following after Clinton, Bonds and Minto.

Shelby has the same desirable qualities as these other popular varieties: plump, heavy kernels, strong straw, and resistance to Helminthosporium disease, smuts and most rusts. In addition, Shelby tends to produce less late tillers and to shatter less than other oats of Bond parentage.

Certified Shelby oat seed, field inspected and laboratory tested, was produced by 298 certified seed growers in 1951. It is available for planting this spring and can be obtained from seed dealers or growers. Growers' names can be secured by writing WISCONSIN CERTIFIED SEED PRODUCERS, MADISON, WISCONSIN.

County Farm Bureau Women Attend Regional Meeting

The following township chairmen of the Washington County Farm Bureau Associated Women attended a regional meeting at the Avalon Hotel, Wausau, Wis., Friday, Feb. 22: Mrs. Arvid Ellis, Addison; Mrs. Norman Lepson, Erin; Mrs. John Youngbauer, Farmington; Mrs. Milton Schreiber, Jackson; Mrs. Victor Bauer, Wayne; Mrs. Betty Whitmore, county home agent, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Lepson.

Mrs. Harold Russell, state president, and James Green, executive secretary, Wisconsin Farm Bureau, and Herbert Ellison, regional organizational director, led in discussions and plans of programs to be considered this next year, such as "Get Out to Vote." It was pointed out that only 2 out of 10 eligible voters used this privilege in the last presidential election.

Much emphasis was placed on our great national issues: Inflation, price control and balancing of national budget.
The Associated Women of Wisconsin Farm Bureau will raise funds for the support of Janata college in Delhi State, India, through the sale of stamps provided by the United Nations Educational Scientific and Cultural organization (UNESCO).

The meeting was concluded by a health talk and film on cancer control

All-Over Champion

A baseball world series is in reality the championship of the United States. Few other nations play baseball, Japan being an exception. Football, soccer and rugby are entirely different games, with the United States pointing largely at American football.

Golf and tennis are international, with Uncle Sam dominating golf and Australia ruling the tennis empire.

Boxing is another international sport. Champions in each class should be listed or ranked on performance, regardless of nationality.

What about thoroughbred racing? Is there any international standard? There may be before this next spring is over. That standard might be Windy City II. He is a three-year-old. He can run fast. He can also run far.

Windy City II is not a Kentucky, Midwest, Eastern, Southern or California horse. He is a fine-looking Irish horse.

A horseman known as Rex Bell picked him up for $2,000 in Ireland. Then as a two-year-old, Windy City II proceeded to break loose with a rush over European tracks. He won his crown as the best two-year-old in Ireland, England and France. He was the champion over there while Tom Fool, pressed by Oh Leo, Primate, Hill Gail and one or two more took the lead over here.

But Windy City II had the jump on Tom Fool. He cleaned up more nations. Bell then proceeded to sell his $2,000 horse to Mrs. Petite Luellwitz, for $150,000.

The horse that had run badly in its first American start two weeks ago was another horse in the San Gabriel Stakes.

About Windy City II

A few minutes before the Irish runner's wild gallop I had asked Ben Jones about Hill Gail.

"In fine shape," Ben and Jimmy said. "He is a different horse now."

But Windy City II, with Arcaro up, came on a wild march down the stretch to beat a Gleam by three lengths and Hill Gail by six lengths in terrific time over a track none too fast. He ran the seven furlongs in a shade over 1:22.

It was the way Windy City II turned the trick that counted. He was running away from the field when he passed the wire.

This will make the Irish horse a healthy favorite for the Santa Anita Derby to be run shortly. It will also make him something to handle in the $100,000 Handicap later on where he'll meet Counterspot, Hill Prince, Bed of Roses and Next Move at extremely light weights.

Fourteen years ago, Stagehand won both the Santa Anita Derby and the Handicap. This Irish sprinter is first to challenge that record.

Counterspot and Hill Prince carry two heavy packages—around 130 pounds. This may be too much weight to spot Vanderbilt's two mares and Windy City II.

Windy City II was badly confused in his first race at Santa Anita.

"No wonder," some horseman said. "Here's an Irish horse discovered by an American, Scot, sold to a Dutch-bred father, trained by W. F. Alvarado, ridden by an Italian, groomed by a negro."

Anyway, there was no Russian around.

So there is now a very good chance that this Irish flyer will repeat in Kentucky before Uncle Bill Corum's astonished eyes. It could happen. Don't forget the name.

All-Around Athletes

Mr. Don Iddon of the London Daily Mail insists that American athletes are single-track specialists. They don't even play out one game, he insists. It must be admitted our platoon system in football isn't much for stamina and fibre. It is merely better for the coach and the less ambitious player. But on the all-around stuff Mr. Iddon is largely listening to funny noises in his home. The United States is packed with athletes who have starred in more than one sport.

For example, what about Mickey Cochrane, all-time catcher for the Athletics? Cochrane at Boston U. was a great football player. He was a fine passer, runner, kicker.

He was undoubtedly All-America as far as playing worth goes. He was a fine ballplayer. He was an excellent boxer. He was a first-class golfer. That's four sports. How many sports does one have to star in? How many combined golfers and tennis players, who could star at both games, has England? None, that anyone ever heard of. How about Ellsworth Vines, better than the best of the English at either sport? What about a kid known as Mathias of Stanford who won the Olympic all-around championship and then a fullback star.

What about Al Dark of the Giants, Merriman of the Reds, Sternweiss of the Yankees and Browns, Jackie Robinson of the Dodgers, Kluszewski of the Reds, Chapman of the Indians and many others?

Competition has become so keen lately with so many more contestants that it is difficult to become a star in more than one sport. Yet the U.S. has turned this trick, stars in two or three sports, far often than any modern country. Norman Brookes, good at both tennis and golf, was one of the few athletes of the Empire to play both games well.

It takes scrap... to make steel. Multiply the amount of iron and steel scrap in your plant by 2... that's the amount of steel that could be made if that scrap were salvaged.

Today, there's not enough scrap coming in from normal sources to keep steel mills and foundries producing at capacity.

TULE LAKE

Fabulous Crops Being Produced On Dry 90,000-Acre Lake Bed

Modern pioneers have struck pay dirt in the now dry bed of a 90,000-acre lake near the California-Oregon border. Instead of rich ores, in the past five years they have taken $27,000,000 from the rich soil in the form of Klamath potatoes, malting barley and clover.

This is a typical field of barley nearing maturity in the Tule Lake homestead area. The old shoreline of the lake can be clearly seen at the base of the hills in the background.

The new farmers, most of them veterans of Uncle Sam's fighting forces, homesteaded and developed the area, after the waters of shallow Tule Lake had been drained by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation.

At first, even the surrounding terrain was inhospitable. It lies on a 4,000-foot high plateau, rimmed by rugged mountains and the desolate Modoc lava beds.

But the soil was fabulously rich, and needed only irrigation water and the hard work of the willing veterans to eventually transform the area into a prosperous, modern, comfortable agricultural community.

EVEN after appearing in more than 25 pictures John Beal was still hoping for a big break, the one role that would take him straight to the top. It was given to him by Stanley Kramer, the star maker; Kramer called him, in New York, to ask if he'd like to play the prison psychologist in "My Six Convicts," at Columbia. Beal says he reacted very calmly—except that he still has a lump on his head from hitting the ceiling of his hotel room. Between films he has done radio, television, and appeared on the New York stage; two plays he starred in were bought for the movies, but someone else was given the roles he created.

Just how valuable are movie stars in radio? "Pulse of New York," a top research organization, has reported the result of its survey. The week all those M-G-M programs featuring such stars as Bette Davis, Ann Sothern, Lionel Barrymore and

Truman Will Be in Ring Fighting for Nomination

By Wright A. Patterson

AT A PRESIDENT'S PRESS conference in Washington, with the bright and shining lights of the nation's correspondents in attendance, Harry S. Truman stated he would not reveal his political plans until the last week in April. The Democratic primaries for United States senator from Missouri will be held the last week in April, and the always-awake newspaper boys immediately popped at the President's question: "Do you intend to enter the race for that senatorial post?" but he would not say.

They knew he could not seek both the presidential and the senatorial nominations. Those newspaper correspondents figured that as a Democratic presidential candidate, he might be beaten. As a Democratic senatorial candidate in Missouri he would have a far better chance of winning. They knew that as a Missouri senator he had been far happier than as president.

They jumped at conclusions and wired their papers that he would attempt to secure the Missouri senatorial nomination, but the President had not said he would make such an attempt.

The correspondents pointed to the fact that he could not have both nominations and that he was never happier than when serving as Missouri's United States senator at the close of World War I and as chairman of a committee to negotiate army war contracts through which he saved the government large sums. There were no criminal charges involved then as there have been in the internal revenue audits, which, as President, he has not cleaned up.

As a Missouri senator he cannot continue to be the big boss of the Democratic party. He would have to listen to others, and that would not be acceptable. The President likes the sound of coins jingling in his pockets. He has not turned his salary back to the treasury as did Hoover.

He has spent his $50,000 expense money, and he paid no tax on it, nor was the account audited. He has enjoyed the privilege of using the President's yacht as a diversion; he has appreciated having his boon companion General Vaughn in the White House to distribute deep freezes. He likes to spend his winter holidays at the Key West naval base, which he could not do as a Missouri senator, but can continue to do as President. Such are some of the prerequisites he would have to surrender when he quits the job of President. And then, instead of living in the rent free White House, he would have to again pay rent.

Now what would he gain by a switch from the presidential to a senatorial job—if he could get that? It is only reasonably possible that he could. Instead of a $50,000 untaxable, unaudited, expense account, he would have only $12,500, quite some difference. Instead of some 1,200 White House employees to do his bidding, he would have one, probably Bess as his secretary. And her salary could be added to the family income. He would just

THE FICTION CORNER

SHARE ALIKE

By Richard Hill Wilkinson

THE second week after they reached the cabin on Wolf Creek, Sid Condon, exploring a tributary alone, found gold. He spent half a day estimating the value of the find. It was a pocket and would probably net a total take of between $40,000 and $50,000. Sid filled his pipe and sat down to meditate. The thing to do, of course, was to get Duke Brandon, his partner, clean out the placer, and hit for Big Rock settlement before the snow came.

Sid sucked on his pipe, and his eyes grew crafty. Into his mind there came a picture of thin-lipped Duke Brandon. Why should he share this find with Duke? A man with $40,000 could retire and live for the rest of his days in comfort. A man with only half that amount would have to scrimp. Forty thousand dollars!

Duke Brandon was in a surly mood that night. He had had no luck. The food supply was getting low. Snow would come soon. Why not quit now while their chances of getting out were good?

"Wait a week," Sid urged. "Might as well make sure we ain't missin' anything."

So Duke prevailed upon. The next morning they started out again in opposite directions. Sid went south, circled west and came to his claim. Working feverishly he panned a handful of gold and carried it up stream a half mile, caching it beneath a large moss-covered rock.

The next day and the next and the next it was the same. Duke became more disgruntled. He decided to remain only one more day. The next morning Duke headed north. Toward noon he swung west and south. At mid-afternoon he came to a moss-covered rock lying near the shore of what was to him an explored tributary. He sat down to smoke and rest, and as he sat there the slanting rays of the sun fell upon a dull, yellow piece of metal. Duke blinked, then leaned forward. He picked up the piece of metal and saw beyond it a small opening beneath the rock.

He knelt and reached into the hole and took out a handful of gold. Sid Condon had stood in the bed of the stream when caching his placer gold, so there were no footprints nor other signs to indicate his having been there.

There must be $30,000 worth of metal in the cache. Half of that was his, according to the unwritten law. The other half—but what could a man do with a mere $15,000?

DUKE took a small sack from his pocket and filled it full with the dull yellow dust. His breathing was heavy as he knelt there. His eyes glowered feverishly. He knotted the sack together and rose from his knees—and stopped dead still.

Sid Condon was standing not 15 feet away. Sid's left hand contained a sack similar to the one in Duke's. It was not full, but the bulge was evidence enough as to its contents. For split seconds the two men stared at each other. Significance of the meaning of the situation dawned slowly in their sluggish brains.

Sid Condon's lips flattened against his teeth. His eyes narrowed to slits. "So!" he cried hoarsely. "So! This is how it is! Partners, eh?" "Partners?" Duke B r a n d o n echoed. "Partners!" he repeated in ugly scorn. "You louse!"

Sid Condon laughed harshly. He was bigger than the other man, and he felt confident. With the speed of a snake his hand flashed to his hip where hung the revolver. His finger contracted on the trigger and flame belched from his muzzle.

Sid Condon saw his partner's body jerk convulsively, and he knew he had scored a hit; knew it only dimly though, for the sound of his own gun had come from a great distance, and there was a drumming and pounding in his ears. He sank to his knees, and through the haze of his vision he saw that Duke Brandon was also on his knees.

Then he knew that Duke had equalled him in speed at the draw. They lay, so close they could almost touch, each holding firmly to a sack of gold; lay and cursed and were eventually silent while the silvery stream rippled on, and night finally came.

President Truman saw enjoyed doing things that astonish the American people. He has liked to establish exceptional precedents. It might be he would resign as president, and give the Veep a chance for a brief term.

KATHLEEN NORRIS
Why the Cigars?

"MY HUSBAND was out of his senses with joy when our boy was born 18 years ago," writes a Los Angeles mother. "At that time we had two girls of 9 and 11, and for years Chester had complained that he had no son. The careless way he would answer, 'yes, we've got a couple of girls!' hurt me terribly though I never said so.

"When Lawrence was born his actions hurt me just as much: he chattered and telephoned about the boy, made me presents, acted as if he never had about Persis and Vinnie. For a year or two the baby could do no wrong; then our fourth child and third daughter, Jacqueline, was born, and from that moment he never had any more use for the long-desired son. The older girls were smart students, never had any trouble in school. Larry was slow.

"During this time, I advised, talked, prayed, saw teachers, helped with homework, punished, rewarded. Chester, my husband, took no part in this. Our daughters married; he did the correct fatherly thing, grandchildren came, we have five, and he is proud of them. But to Larry he gave only criticism, impatience, intolerance. That boy would have to wake up, that boy couldn't get away with it, that boy thought fathers were made of money, that boy could telephone his crowd he couldn't go. If Larry ever was sneaky or sullen it was when his father was around. Jackie could do no wrong, but with Larry it was scene after scene.

"Well, Larry, now in Korea, is superb at it. He is strong, friendly, simple, immensely popular, and a wonderful son to me. For his father he has only a respectful politeness, which disappoints and baffles Chester. He wants his tall son to be his pal; he wants to boast to his friends that he and Larry are like brothers. He reproaches me as having deflected the boy's confidence and affection. "But how could it be otherwise when for years Chester has avoided the outings I planned for them, signed report cards which left him only indifferent or angry, and invented excuses that saved him the bother of taking a small boy off for a Sunday with his father? My years of 'well, don't you take Larry?' never bore fruit. Small boys are greedy, exacting, destructive, boring, and most men don't like small boys.

"... like brothers..."

"Understandable enough. But then why that uproar when the baby is a boy, why that glumness when it's another girl? Why the cigars?"

Frequent Question
This, Elena, is a question women often ask themselves. Because a boy is slower than a girl to develop manners, character, studiousness, it is his mother who must be patient with the boy, and stand by him. And with this position his father, who was so rapturously, fatuously, self-congratulatory when the boy was born, has no patience, Martha is running that kid.

Friendship with one's children is a thing of slow growth, and like all other friendships must depend upon liking, sympathy, understanding, and the flattery of occasional outbursts of affection, occasional presents, and a very open desire to share that friend's company whenever possible. How many men give these to that dumb, open-eyed, coke-and-movie-and-comics-demanding little fellow who has broken his pencil, lost his rubbers, spilled his milk, and whined about school for the hundredth time at this morning's breakfast?

The other day, I saw a list of four rules for fathers. Perhaps they were for mother, too, but if father gets started on them mother will cooperate. They were: (1) Give your child religion. Give him that very definite sense that means he is happy when he is unselfish, obedient and good, because there is some spirit in us that feels and corresponds with a higher power than we ever can understand, and its reward is happiness. (2) Set your child a high example. (3) Make him feel as you do yourself a responsible unit in his family and group and community.

A teacher of 8 and 9-year olds for some 30 years told that before a boy was two weeks in her classes she knew the sort of home from which he came. More, she knew the chances he had to become a good citizen or a failure as a human being. She told me that many a life is ruined before a little fellow is 8 years old, and many a little soul twisted forever.

All of the Norfolk and Western Railway's 486 locomotives are coal-burning.

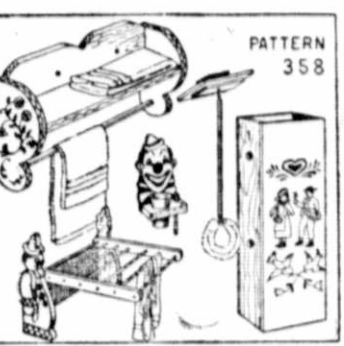

Flower Attraction
What is it that attracts a bee to a flower? Probably it is the nectar in the base of the flower which the bee tries to reach with its so-called tongue. Some bees, however, visit flowers only to gather pollen in the "baskets" on their legs. The pollen is then carried back to the hive and fed to young and immature bees. Certain species of bees visit only certain kinds of flowers, while others, such as the honeybee, go to a wide variety, for the purpose of gathering nectar or pollen, or both.

Fighters Against Heart Disease

by LOUIS N. KATZ, M.D.

President, American Heart Association

Investigators in the field of heart research are faced with the greatest medical challenge of our time. Their urgent task is the development of new, improved methods for the prevention, care and treatment of diseases which lead all others in this country as a cause of death and disability. The health, the very lives of millions of Americans depend on how successfully our research fighters against heart disease reach their vitally important objectives.

Dr. Katz

In 1959, 745,000 Americans died of diseases of the heart and blood vessels. It is estimated that at least 10,000,000 men, women and children are crippled in varying degrees by some form of these diseases. About 90 percent of all heart disease is the result of either high blood pressure, rheumatic fever or hardening of the coronary arteries. And science has not yet found the basic cause of any one of these three.

So the first and greatest challenge confronting heart research is the challenge of the unknown. But even though our research investigators have not yet been able to solve this vast problem of the unknown causes of the three major types of heart disease, they have made significant progress on many fronts.

Operations on the heart are certainly among the wonders of modern surgery. They have brought new life to the most pathetic of all heart disease sufferers, children born with defective hearts, and those crippled by heart valve deformities caused by rheumatic fever. Progress in the development of drugs that are effective in the treatment of certain forms of heart disease has been striking. For example, the antibiotics such as penicillin have given physicians powerful weapons against "strep" infections which precede attacks of rheumatic fever. The antibiotics have made it possible to prevent the onset of this disease which is a leading disabler of children. Again, drugs which slow blood clotting, when used under proper control, have opened the way to reduction in deaths following heart attacks.

These and many other advances have changed the concept of two decades ago that nothing could be done about heart disease. Today we know that heart patients can be rehabilitated. Because of these advances we are confident that there will be greater, far greater hope for hearts tomorrow.

Yes, hope for millions of hearts lies primarily in our research laboratories, in the hands of the scientists who man those laboratories. I can assure you that the research men fighting heart disease are of high caliber. Their lives are dominated by a determination to conquer the unknown. Our scientists are the front-line fighters against disease. They need your support. They depend on you, on the home front, to give them more weapons, more ammunition and more courage.

You can give them your support, so urgently needed, by contributing to the 1952 Heart Fund. A considerable part of your gift will be used to increase knowledge of the heart and blood vessels and the diseases which attack them and to disseminate our accumulated knowledge to every physician and patient in the land. In contributing to the Heart Fund you will be making an investment in heart research. And you can expect that your investment will bring you returns in the form of increased protection for your heart and for the hearts of your family and friends.
