MAIN STREET IN ACTION

Sale of 'Non-Existent' Building Lots Enabled Town to Build a Reservoir

Towards the end of the economically lush '20's, city officials in Carrollton, Georgia, bought a strip of land outside the city to be used as a site for a reservoir and a lake. The depression and war, however, got in the way of their plans and nothing was done until, one August day in 1948, the city engineer and a young businessman were about to start on a fishing trip.

MAIN
FEATURE

"If we had our city reservoir," the engineer remarked, "We wouldn't have to go to Alabama to fish."

"What reservoir?" The businessman was both curious and interested. So the engineer took him in his jeep about a mile outside the town.

Silently, he pointed to the almost rotted away survey stumps that marked the site for a reservoir that it seemed would never materialize. Both men stared with unseeing eyes; for each saw in his imagination a picture of a lake a full mile long with boats sailing on it and summer homes built around it. And simultaneously into the mind of both leaped the idea that it might be possible to persuade a group of Carrollton citizens to buy the land from the city with the understanding that they would provide a city reservoir and a lake for the community.

With the help of the Carrollton Service Council and the Soil Conservationist, they were able to sell their idea to individuals and groups—bankers, businessmen, city officials, civic and business clubs. Next they got an option on the city land and bought 418 extra acres. Then, at a public sale which took place in the city hall, they sold 100 imaginary lots on a non-existent lake front.

The sale was scheduled to start at 10 a.m. By 9 o'clock the crowd was jamming the city hall. One hour after the sale began, Carrollton businessmen had bought the hundred lots, paying $350 a piece for them.

With $35,000 cash realized from the sale of the lots, they began work that very day. By 2 p.m. a bulldozer was pushing out dirt. Four months later a 185-acre lake had been filled. And around that lake the cottages, summer homes, week-end cabins, bathhouses, docks, and fishing piers that the engineer and the businessman had visualized began to go up.

Besides the section reserved for homes, they have a public park that covers 54 acres and a bathing beach with 1,800 feet of shoreline. The Boy Scouts have their special site; the Sea Scouts have an island all their own. The city has a reservoir that provides water for progressive industrial expansion and the community has ample recreational facilities.

The cost in dollars and cents, as of this writing, is $77,540 for lake and reservoir. With the $35,000, proceeds from the sale of the lake front lots and from the sale of backlots and houses on land that would have been under water when the lake took shape, they had $60,540. The city paid the remaining $17,000.

Possession of the extra 418 acres that had been bought (owners refused to sell unless they took whole farms) enabled Carrollton to get federal aid for the erection of a municipal airport adjoining the lake.

"Looking into the future," a businessman predicts, "I can picture people flying down in private planes and renting week-end cottages where they can enjoy swimming."

Undoubtedly, his vision will become a reality. For the people of Carrollton have a way of making their civic dreams come true. Besides its lake and reservoir, Carrollton owes its effective public health service, regional library, Tanner Memorial Hospital, town gymnasium, church, and community center on Oak Mountain to the individual participation and cooperative effort of its citizens.

The chief thing is the people's faith in themselves and each other, and their willingness to work for and with each other that enables them to get done seemingly impossible things, like selling hard-headed businessmen land that was invisible to flesh and blood eyes. Incidentally, those lots that sold for $350 are now worth from $1,200 to $1,500.

Every man, however obscure, however far removed from the general recognition, is one of a group of men impressible for good, and impressible for evil, and it is in the nature of things that he cannot really improve himself without in some degree improving other men.

American Farmer Big User of Electricity

A startling ten-year rise in farm electrification has made the American farmer one of the nation's biggest users of electric power.

The farmer is now receiving more than twice as much farm high-line service as in 1940. Moreover, the amount of electricity used by farmers has increased nearly five times, and the average use per farmer has more than doubled.

American farms are now using in excess of 15 billion kilowatt hours of electricity a year, while in 1940 they consumed only 3 1/2 billion. In addition, the number of farms serviced by electric power—about two million in 1940—has leaped to approximately five million. The average kilowatt hours of power used per farm, exclusive of irrigation projects in the West, has increased from about 1000 ten years ago to 2300 today.

The farmer is just beginning on the road toward complete rural electrification. Many new electric devices will be aiding the farmer in his struggle for higher output. Things like automatic poultry feeders, crop-drying equipment, automatic barn cleaners, silo unloaders, wagon unloaders, and feed handling equipment are all a part of the American farmer's future.

SCANNING THE WEEK'S NEWS of Main Street and the World

Gen. Eisenhower, Sen. Kefauver Win in New Hampshire Election

NEW HAMPSHIRE—Political posters, both Republican and Democrat, have spent days trying to read a national trend into the results of the New Hampshire preferential primary. No one can be sure how the results can be applied to the nation as a whole, but there are several noteworthy facts as a result of the election which the average home town voter can apply to his own area.

EISENHOWER

KEFAUVER

General Eisenhower's victory is an indication of the respect and popularity he commands from the average voter. This is important when it is remembered that Eisenhower backers made no all-out effort in the contest. On the other hand, Senator Taft stumbled the state as if campaigning in the presidential race itself. There is one obvious conclusion. Except for Ohio, and perhaps, a few other strongholds, Eisenhower appears to be the GOP's best vote getter. Whether or not he can get the nomination, of course, still remains in serious doubt.

On the Democratic side of the picture, Senator Kefauver pulled something of an upset by defeating President Truman, who had the state's Democratic machine behind him. As a result, it is reasonable to assume that the Tennessee senator has a far greater vote getting potential than political forecasters realized, or President Truman is so unpopular the votes went to Kefauver as a protest of the Truman administration and policies.

It should be remembered, however, that results of the preferential contest are not binding on the state's convention delegates, either Republican or Democrat. Taft still retains a majority of the Republican convention delegates. Encouraged by the New Hampshire result, Eisenhower backers may now begin their all-out drive to corral delegates and thus the nomination.

Kefauver's victory in New Hampshire does not mean he is as popular in other sections of the country. Truman still has the nomination tied up if he wants it. Some observers believe, however, Truman will now hasten his decision about running, if he has not already made up his mind. By a quick announcement he might check growing Kefauver popularity.

DEADLOCK—With peace talks deadlocked over prisoner exchange and what nations will supervise the armistice, if one is ever negotiated, the big question on the battlefield is what effect spring will have on the two armies which have faced each other for nearly two years.

In this connection, Gen. James A. Van Fleet, U.S. Eighth Army commander, indulged in a little speculation. The commander reported that the Chinese and Korean Reds have built up a force of 900,000 men in Korea. He added that the Reds have more men, weapons, and planes than the Allies.

But he does not believe the Reds will launch a spring offensive, but if they did he would welcome it and stop it cold. "I am confident we could stop any attack the Communists might throw at us," he said. "It would be a good thing if we could get those people out of their foxholes and dugouts to mow them down the way we did last April and May."

As for possible Allied plans, the general said: "The future operations of the Eighth Army are still on the conference table at Panmunjom."

That was not saying very much, but it is generally believed there will be no all-out Allied offensive unless the truce talks collapse completely. If they should, then the people of the home towns of America must steel themselves for the explosion that of necessity must follow. It could mean an all-out war in Asia.

Meanwhile, the Department of Defense reported the latest American casualty total in Korea at 106,458. Of the total, 18,505 are known to have been killed.

TAXES—The all-powerful house-senate economic committee reportedly has agreed that there should be no general increase in tax rates this year. It was not exactly surprising news to the nation's taxpayers, since congressional opposition has been expressed from the moment President Truman announced his record $85,000,000,000 spending budget.

The committee went on record as favoring a $10,000,000,000 cut in the budget. By closing existing tax loopholes, the $10 billion budget cut, and with surpluses which go into government trust funds, the committee said it believed the budget could be balanced.

The President had asked congress to close the tax loopholes in his annual economic report, but had also asked an increase in taxation by whatever additional was necessary to boost government income by $5,000,000,000 a year.

AVERAGE FAMILY—A recent economic survey reveals there has been such a vast shift in income distribution in the United States in the past 20 years it can be classed as a social revolution.

The survey reveals the very poor have become fewer by two-thirds of their 1939 number. And the poor have become better off. Where three out of four families had incomes of less than $2,000 a year in 1939, only one out of three fell into that class ten years later.

The well-to-do and the rich have become more numerous. In the late thirties, one family in about 50 was in the $5,000 and over income class, and one out of 100 was in the $10,000 and over class. Ten years later, one family out of six was in the $5,000 and over class, and one out of twenty in the $10,000 and over class.

Over the years the very rich have become poorer because the rise in labor incomes has been accompanied by a decline in property incomes. The share of the upper 1 per cent of income receivers in total incomes has declined in 35 years from 16 per cent to 9 per cent.

NEW WATCH—A fantastic achievement in the science of time-keeping was revealed when Elgin researchers took the wraps off their latest development—a conventional sized wrist watch that stores its own source of electrical power and will operate more than a year before its tiny "energy capsule" expires.

The electronic watch of tomorrow is still in the laboratory but its sponsors claim it will eventually revolutionize personal timekeeping. Its motor, the smallest practical unit ever built, replaces the mainspring which has been used in all watches made the past 450 years. Also eliminated is the winding mechanism, since the energy capsule does that job.

The capsule itself, smaller in volume than a penny, discharges power at such a constant rate that the new watch will keep perfect time. And when it expires, a watchmaker will be able to insert a new one in a few minutes at nominal cost.

Some estimate of the infinitesimal size of Elgin's "power plant" was given in the description that 10,000,000 electronic watches could be operated from the power consumed by a single 100-watt light bulb. And eventually they hope to make it smaller still, applying the same principle to a woman's watch.

GAMBLING TAX
Yield Far Less Than Congress Expected

The internal revenue bureau reports the government's new gambling license and tax has yielded far less than expected when it was enacted. The total yield from November through January was a mere $1,455,393. When a congress passed the license law, it was estimated that the annual yield would be 400 million dollars.

Sales of the $50 a year occupation stamp in November, December, and January netted $484,429 from 16,029 professional gamblers. The 10 per cent tax on gross receipts amounted to $970,964. For December, the first full month to which the tax was applied, the return was $759,182. The 10 per cent tax on gross business for January has not been tabulated and is not included in the total gross receipts.

Using the $759,182 return for the month of December as a starting point, the indicated total of money handled by professional gamblers in December was $7,591,828, a considerable drop from gambling estimates before the license and tax law was enacted.

More than half of the total was wagered in Louisiana, Illinois and Ohio. In Louisiana, 916 gamblers registered and tax payments totaled $167,987. In Illinois, 2,602 registered gamblers paid $140,410. Ohio gamblers paid a total of $136,248 for the month.

THE WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round BY DREW PEARSON

Morris Nearly Quits

THE WHITE HOUSE has hushed it up, but clean-up man Newbold Morris came within a whisker the other day of packing his bags and going home. He was stopped at the last minute by a personal appeal from President Truman, himself.

The inside story is that Morris, depressed over the runaround he was getting, decided that his assignment was "impossible." He announced his decision to quit at a routine conference with Justice department officials.

"I'm going home," he declared simply. "This thing hasn't been thought through. For example, I'm supposed to report my investigations to the very man I'm supposed to be investigating."

Morris was referring, of course, to his boss—Attorney General McGrath. Within a few minutes, however, word of Morris's surprise decision was flashed to the White House, and presidential aide Charlie Murphy was rushed to Morris's office.

Talking fast, Murphy urged the new trouble-shooter to talk it over with President Truman, and promptly hustled him to the White House. Within half an hour, Morris was in the oval room conferring earnestly with the President.

Truman begged Morris to stay on, promised him a free hand and guaranteed full White House support. "You can have anything you want," the President offered.

Message to Moscow

School children across the nation are participating in the Messages-to-Moscow campaign. Many of the messages will soon be heard behind the iron curtain via the powerful radio beams of the Voice of America and will help offset Moscow's propaganda about American "warmongers."

Here, for example, is the kindly and straightforward message from a 19-year-old veteran of the Korean war—Purple Heart winner Garland Roberts, a junior at Pineville high school, West Virginia:

"My message is not a message of bitterness. Although I am only nineteen years old, I have fought in one of the most conflicting wars of the century—the Korean.

"Your nation is often accused of starting this war, yet I do not feel malice toward you. There must be many of you who have suffered more than I. Every American realizes that much is forced upon you.

"America and her people would like to see the Russian people free in a democratic nation with all the rights that we in America enjoy.

"I know that you, being my age, feel and act the same way as I; and that you would enjoy our democratic form of government.

"It is a great thing to be free and to live without knowing fear and unhappiness."

American Prisoners

While the public anxiously watches U.N. truce negotiations to free American prisoners in Korea, many Ex-G.I.s who were prisoners during the last war wonder if congress will ever get around to settling claims arising out of their imprisonment.

Though congressional hearts bleed profusely for G.I. prisoners of the Communists, some of the same congressmen are secretly trying to whittle down or completely eliminate the funds to compensate U.S. war prisoners for work they performed while prisoners of Italy, Germany or Japan. Though these payments won't cost the American taxpayers a single cent, congress is strangely reluctant to O.K. them.

The Geneva convention provided that a nation which captures enemy prisoners in wartime must pay the men for labor performed as prisoners. Accordingly, after World War II, we concluded agreements with the German, Italian and Japanese governments, under which congress appropriated a total of $169,000,000 to pay enemy prisoners for work done for us.

However, believe it or not, congress is now considering turning this alien property back to German, Italian and Japanese nationals, rather than paying American P.O.W.s.

There are a total of 14 bills now before the house interstate and foreign commerce committee—several of them already passed by the senate—which would return the property to certain classes of former enemy nationals.

Worried McGrath
Old senate friends who have dropped in on Attorney General Howard McGrath recently are shocked at the change in him.

Usually genial and self-confident, McGrath now complains to visitors: "I'm being hounded. Nothing I say or do is right. Every time I make a statement, it's distorted. Even in my own state, the people don't get an accurate picture of what I'm trying to do."

Garland Roberts
His beautiful, blonde wife listened raptly as Robert Vogeler, who no longer bears the marks of imprisonment by Communist Hungary, urged a militant anti-Soviet program of psychological warfare.

"Your husband looks great," remarked a newsmen.

"Do you know, he's gained 50 pounds since that experience in Hungary," beamed Mrs. Vogeler. "Even though I happen to be a very bad cook."

NARROW ESCAPE . . . An hour before this picture was taken, a mortar shell burst a few feet from this soldier. One piece of shrapnel nicked his ear. With a hot canteen cup of coffee in his hand to steady his nerves, he sat down in the medical aid station to think it over.

MIRROR OF YOUR MIND Should You Tell Child What's Good? By Lawrence Gould

Should you tell a child, "This is good for you?" Answer: Not unless you have been more successful than most parents in keeping your child from feeling that what is good for him and what he likes are the opposite of each other. It is a new dish you want to add to his diet, do not "over-sell" it, because this will make him suspicious, but don't say it is "good for him," either. The best way will be to let him see that you eat and enjoy it, for seeing you enjoy something will dispose him favorably toward it more than anything you can say. This applies, of course, not only to food but to anything you want a child to cultivate a taste for. Don't just tell him—show him!

Does realism exclude faith? Answer: By no means. There are aspects of reality which are unpleasant, especially from a childish standpoint, but it is no more "realistic" to expect the worst than to hope for the best. If there is something you want to accomplish, you will be wise to recognize the obstacles that stand in your way, but it is not a rule unrealistic to believe that you can find how to surmount them, and "faith" of this kind will both release your energies and inspire you to go on trying. The fellow who "doesn't know when he is licked" may be just stubborn, but quite often the reality is that, in spite of appearance, he is not licked at all.

Do your friends try to "standardize" you? Answer: Yes, say Dr. Leon Festinger and John Thibault, University of Michigan psychologists. In any small, face-to-face group there is a "pressure toward uniformity" with the bulk of members tending to "gang up on" the individuals whose opinions are most different from the average. The stronger the feeling of group solidarity (as a fraternity) the more insistent will be the demand that everyone be pretty much like everyone else. One of the main reasons for belonging to a group is to protect yourself from the sense of dangerous isolation created by doing your own thinking, so that you tend to feel safest in a group whose members are "like-minded."

KEEPING HEALTHY
Heart Patients Form Defense Units
By Dr. James W. Barton

AS MOST OF US think of any form of heart disease as practically a death sentence, it will come as a surprise to learn that the United States is forming a task force made up of patients with heart disease to be organized by the U.S. office of defense mobilization under the medical direction of the American heart association. It is estimated that the group will number one million and a half.

In a news release from the American heart association, Dr. Theodore G. Clump, chairman of the task force of the handicapped, states that, to meet the nation's production goals, it will become vitally necessary to bring into defense work many with various forms of heart disease. The above organization of effort is operated under the work classification unit. This new development is restoring handicapped workers to productive employment.

Heart associations and other groups in several cities throughout the country have developed these units within the past year as part of a cardiovascular (heart and blood vessels) clinic or community rehabilitation center and plans are under way for the establishment of similar units in other areas.

A work classification unit is concerned with finding out the work capacity of its patients, based on medical diagnosis, and matching these abilities to types of job activities for which they are best suited by their physical condition.

After all, the country needs these handicapped individuals and it is certainly true that the handicapped want to do useful work. Nothing is more important than the maximum use of our human resources. It is a well-known fact that persons with heart impairments can make an important contribution toward meeting these man power needs if their work abilities are carefully estimated.

The American heart association has prepared a guide for the cardiac-in-industry commission.

★ HEALTH NOTES ★
The life span has been lengthened to an average of 66 years.

Foods rich in Vitamin A are fish liver oils, carrots, yellow squash, sweet potatoes, spinach and cabbage.

Circulation of the blood is timed by injecting a substance in the vein and timing its arrival at some point in the system.

Standing absolutely still for a long time causes pooling of blood in the legs.

Foods rich in Vitamin B are lean beef, liver, beet greens, peas, dried prunes, wheat germ and spinach.

Foods rich in Vitamin C are oranges, lemons, grapefruit, raw cabbage, tomatoes and potatoes.

Lack of Vitamin D causes softening of the bones, early fatigue, pains in the ribs and small of the back.

Scaly, dry skin is often due to lack of Vitamin A.

Symptoms of Vitamin B deficiency include constipation, muscles pains, poor appetite, nervousness and red tongue.

Lack of Vitamin C may cause spongy, swollen or bleeding gums and bleeding under the skin from slight injuries.

Something can be done about chronic illness.

Premature or extra heart beats are harmless.

Foods rich in Vitamin D are butter, egg yolk, liver.

As high blood pressure is progressive, the progress of the disease may be halted if, early after it develops, the nervous factor is interrupted by extensive sympathectomy.

KATHLEEN NORRIS

Wasted Youth

"IT'S BECAUSE my daughter's tragic story is typical of many others that I'm writing you," says a letter from Thelma Dellenbaugh of St. Paul. "We want to know how we managed so badly with our Marie Eileen."

"What I will call the wrongness of her life began when she was a child of 12. She then was accustomed to permanent waves and lipstick and she was the prettiest girl in school. Boys flocked about her and for two or three years she went steady with more than one. At 14 the question of evening dates began, first in groups, for the movie and for sodas afterward — it sounded perfectly safe. By this time some of the boys had cars, and others, whom we knew, would occasionally borrow our car. Hours got later and later, and on Saturday and Sunday mornings I would look into her room to see Marie still sound asleep, pretty clothes tumbled on the floor, lips still red, hair in pin curlers. She would be tired all day, but fresh as a daisy to go out the next night."

They Tried Hard
"Oh, we tried! Charley and I tried to maintain rules; in bed by ten, school nights, and right after the dance or show other nights. But she always had excuses, and although she smoked she did not drink, and as I say, the other girls were going to the cabin week-end or off for the skiing, and what they did she did."

"None of these boys, of course, course suggest marriage, and at 17 they began to drop away. 'They go with the younger crowd,' she would say to me bitterly. She was tired out, nervous and pale, but on vitamins and a diet, and watched by the doctor. She cried easily and wanted to go to Boston and live with an older woman friend who was doing radio work there. For at least seven years she dragged for her. She had a good job and a dull steady admirer, but when they went to a movie Marie paid for her own ticket, and sometimes he borrowed money from her; there was no glamor to this affair.

"One day I asked her if in her young-girl love affairs she had ever gone too far and she answered indifferently that of course she had, that often when I had supposed her staying with a friend she had been having adventures in motor-camps with this boy and that, but that she hated the whole thing and only consented because the boys expected it."

Horrible Shock
"I won't tell you of the horrible shock this was to me—I don't matter. It was too late for change or reproaches and I didn't indulge in them. I just loved her, made her home as happy as I could, and shared with her the happiness of her brother's home and his little family. And at 29, she married, without much interest or any glow; her understanding with the good quiet man she married was that there were not to be children, and more than once she has deliberately, and I believe dangerously, avoided that possibility."

"What became of my girl's girlhood? The laughter, the girl friends, the beauty and bloom of her teens, the delight of an engagement, a wedding, the pride and flowering of young wifehood? All sacrificed to those few feverish years in which she did not know the danger of the edged tools with which she was playing, and destroyed her capacity for normal living as a woman. Where were we wrong, and what might have helped us?"

Well, Thelma, there are a few words that might have helped you, but you will have to look in the dictionary for them; they have gone out of use. Among them are such terms as duty, obedience, self-control, motherly advice and example, fatherly concern, a good home, quiet home hospitality, and rules laid down in affection and understanding while a little girl is still small enough to be impressed and controlled.

Girls, as a matter of fact, like home restrictions when they are accompanied by plenty of home cooperation. They like to be the ones to say, "No, Daddy won't let us." They like to feel themselves precious, protected, secure.

Last year two fifteen-year olds were taken to the police court after a traffic accident in which a boy accompanying them was killed. They came from presumably fine homes, but they were out on the highway at 2 in the morning so their mothers' agitated explanations fell rather flat.

Possessions
This business of having one's own things is the first step in the journey toward generosity and sharing. A child of 3 who has a wagon is better able to understand how another child feels about sharing his tricycle than one who has no such toy. With a little help he is able gradually to learn to share and to take turns.

GET LARGE PIG LITTERS AND KEEP THEM GROWING

With the approach of April many brood sows will farrow. The average size litter in Wisconsin is seven pigs. If you can raise a greater number than seven per litter it means increased profits for you as a swine breeder.

Good equipment and a careful watch over your brood sows at farrowing time can be the secret of large litters. Even with lower pork prices, every pig lost at and after farrowing time will cost you money.

Here are some suggestions that may be of help to you.

A few days before the sows are due to farrow cut down on their feed supply and move the brood sows into clean farrowing pens. Have only scant supply of chopped straw for bedding in the pen.

Have a corner of the pen fenced off where the young pigs can go to rest and sleep. Supply extra warmth by means of one or two heat lamps of about 250 watt capacity. Have these lamps high enough so that they will not ignite the straw used for bedding. A height of about 30 inches should be reasonably safe. Check the lamp cord to see that it is well insulated. A good temperature of a hog house is about 55 degrees.

Feed the brood sows an abundance of protein before and after farrowing. To nurse a litter of say 10 young pigs takes a lot of milk, and protein will help produce this milk. See that the sow gets exercise. As soon as there is green grass turn both sow and litter out on pasture. Otherwise give them a shovelful of fresh soil each day. The young pig gets iron and copper from the soil which is needed to ward off anemia or thumps.

The use of antibiotics and vitamin B-12 in the ration fed to the young pigs is to be encouraged. Such pigs, it is claimed, make faster and bigger gains than those not fed antibiotics. These can be mixed with the ration.

Growing young pigs for the feeder market is a profitable enterprise especially in an area where alfalfa pastures is a sure crop, and where the corn needed to fatten out the pigs must be largely purchased.

TODAY the length of your life is not determined by the sign of the moon but by the color of the light when you cross the street.

Tasty Cheese Makes Appetizing Snacks
(See Recipes Below)

Tasty Snacks
 THERE ARE MANY occasions for snacks in every home, especially when the family is social. Perhaps you have people dropping in before dinner, and like to serve something in the living room whether they stay for dinner or not.
 Then, too, there are evening get-togethers when a bit of snacking is in order. Perhaps you bring the evening to a close with a tasty snack, something not too much, but just enough to fill you, once the conversation or games have fanned the appetite.
 Both men and women appreciate a snack which has some zest to it. If it's before dinner, a salty or tangy type of tidbit is indicated. After dinner and dessert, the same type of snack is in order since the sweet tooth has already been nourished with dessert.
 Tangy meat spreads, tasty breads, salty crackers and various cheeses fill the snack role to perfection. Here are many suggestions from which to choose.
 These tiered sandwiches may be made in advance and chilled. The base is a round loaf of pumpernickel bread and makes an attractive sandwich piece to set on a platter.

LYNN CHAMBERS' MENU

- Chicken Chop Suey
- Hot Rice
- Buttered Green Beans
- Pineapple, Cottage Cheese, Grape Salad
- Caramel Layer Cake Beverage

- Garlic Cheese Dip
- 1 6-ounce package garlic cheese
- 1/2 cup soured cream
- Let cheese soften at room temperature, then beat until light and fluffy. Blend in soured cream and then chill until ready to serve.
- Blue Cheese Spread
- 1/2 cup blue cheese
- 1/2 cup cream cheese
- 2 tablespoons mayonnaise
- 1/4 to 1 teaspoon worcestershire sauce
- Onion juice
- Lemon juice

Softened cheese and blend together with mayonnaise. Season with worcestershire sauce, onion and lemon juice to taste.

- Deviled Ham Dip
- 4 tablespoons deviled ham
- 4 tablespoons horseradish
- 1 teaspoon grated onion
- 2 tablespoons minced chives
- 1 cup heavy cream whipped

Blend deviled ham with horseradish, onion and chives. Fold in whipped cream and chill before serving.

- Dried Beef Dip
- 6 ounces cream cheese
- 1 wedge blue cheese (about 1 ounce)
- 1/2 cup dried beef, finely cut
- 1 small onion, grated
- 1 tablespoon horseradish
- 1 tablespoon mayonnaise

Let cheese soften at room temperature. Blend together both kinds, and then mix in other ingredients. Serve with crackers or potato chips.

- Avocado Dip
- 4 strips bacon
- 2 avocados
- 1 tablespoon grated onion
- 1 tablespoon lime juice
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/4 cup mayonnaise

Dice bacon, fry until crisp, then drain. Peel avocados, mash fine and add lime juice and seasonings. Soften with mayonnaise and add bacon bits. This may be used for dipping or for a spread on crisp crackers.

When you want a hot appetizer, these little meat balls are tasty and easy to serve as well as to eat:

- Spicy Meat Balls (Makes 24)
- 1/2 pound ground beef
- 1 egg
- 1/4 cup dry bread crumbs
- 1 1/2 teaspoons minced onion
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon black pepper
- 1/4 teaspoon prepared horseradish
- 1/4 teaspoon nutmeg
- Dash of tabasco sauce
- Grated American or Italian Style cheese

Combine all ingredients except cheese, blending well. Shape into tiny balls. Sauté in hot fat until all sides are lightly browned, which will take about 4 minutes. Roll each ball in grated cheese. Insert toothpick and serve hot.

For a spicy snack to serve before dinner, try some thin slices of salmon spread with cream cheese, then wrap around 2-inch sticks of celery.

You'll like these hot tidbits to serve before a meal: spread strips of uncooked bacon with peanut butter; roll tightly, fasten with a toothpick and broil until bacon is crisp.

Like to stick tasty tidbits into a grapefruit for snacks? Wrap rolled anchovies in a half slice of bacon and broil until bacon is crisp. Or, wrap shrimp in bacon and broil.

Ground tongue makes excellent hearty sandwiches or a spread for crackers. Mix the tongue with prepared horseradish and mayonnaise.

Ever thought of grinding the last of the veal roast for sandwiches? No! It's too bland just as it is with mayonnaise, but it's tempting when seasoned with lemon juice and prepared mustard.

Cottage cheese gives an economical sandwich spread. It has both color and flavor when you add minced stuffed olives, chopped nuts and just a bit of butter and salt to it.

TELEVISION DISCOVERS MAIN STREET

New Electronic Science Born in Cottage

(This is the last of a series of three articles on the coming of a nationwide television service.)

To the people who will receive this new ultra high frequency television service, various considerations will govern their selection of home equipment.

In some areas, under the FCC plan, only UHF channel will be received. Present set owners, who have perhaps been picking up a distant VHF signal, will be able to purchase a simple and inexpensive fixed channel tuner to go with their present sets.

For residents of areas where several UHF channels can be received, full range tuners have been designed.

In many new television areas, the projected coverage will include both types of service. And combination UHF-VHF sets are likely to be the industry's answer. These sets will probably gravitate toward the major population centers since the allocation plan envisages both services in all but three of the country's 50 major market areas.

In addition to tuners and combination sets, the public will probably have an opportunity to purchase various types of antenna for UHF reception. In the course of their long experimentation, RFC engineers designed numerous effective receiving antenna of remarkable varied shape. One of the simplest is known as a "bow-tie" and looks just like an enlarged version of this male neckwear. Another is known as a "Double V", and consists of two sets of dipoles (metal rods cut to a critical length) attached to a pole in the form of two V's.

These are the antenna which in a few years might dot the rooftops of farms and ranches and city residences. When new stations begin to go up, the industry will undoubtedly standardize on a few of many experimental antenna models, giving full consideration to both performance and appearance.

The industry has already made formidable gains in overcoming the problem of designing UHF station transmitters with sufficient power to provide required area coverage. The first test models were one kilowatt, but units of from 10-12 kilowatts are now being tested.

Ample Power New gain antenna have also been developed, and the industry is looking toward UHF antenna that can radiate 200 kilowatts—more than ample power to meet nearly all conditions.

Of course, the UHF service has its limitations like every other service. UHF transmissions, like VHF, are dependent on line of sight between transmitting and receiving antennas.

In addition, they are more directional and the location of transmitter sites is of prime importance. Mountains, hills and other physical impediments can block effective transmission.

In addition to promising television to presently vacant areas, UHF offers new hopes for thousands of set owners who live in "fringe" areas. These areas are on the outskirts of the effective telecast coverage from present VHF stations.

To obtain a home picture in these fringe areas, towering antennae are frequently required, and often the pictures are too faint and "noisy," and lack the contrast required for enjoyable home viewing.

SUCCESS HILL—The lofty antenna of the Bridgeport UHF station towers over the white frame station house at the left. In the foreground is a station wagon equipped with UHF receiver and portable antenna. It has been used to test signal strength throughout the Bridgeport area. Station KC2XAK is the first and only UHF station in the country to operate on the regular daily basis. It is located on the crest of Success Hill on Bridgeport's outskirts.

New stations are the obvious answer to fringe viewing, but if they are VHF stations they might conflict with the signal, however faint, from the more distant VHF transmitters.

With UHF, however, new stations with new channels can go in the very shadow of existing transmitters and a clear, bright picture can be enjoyed by everyone.

A small Cape Cod cottage which sits atop a wooded hill on the outskirts of Bridgeport, Conn., is the cradle of a new electronic science. For two years, field tests on the transmission of television signals in the upper regions of the air waves have centered around the cottage.

Out of these tests has come a new system of video transmission that will soon have a very real impact on the life of residents of Tazoo City, Miss., and Thief River Falls, Minn., and Wolf Point, Mont.

Center of Interest Despite its lack of pretension, the cottage has been a prime attraction in recent months for government leaders, for scores of executives in the radio and television industry, for some of the nation's outstanding electronic scientists, engineers and technicians. Even the Connecticut State Police have been lured there for extra-curricular duties.

Since December 30, 1949, the little cottage on Success Hill has housed the first and only Ultra-High Frequency television station in the nation which operates on a regular daily basis. It has been the field headquarters for the television industry's march into the untapped UHF band.

The station was built by the Radio Corporation of America and the National Broadcasting Company as the culminating move in a long campaign to find sufficient space in the air waves for a national television service. A lofty 250-foot UHF transmitting tower was erected outside the cottage. The interior was stocked with television transmitting equipment. Inside, it looked much like any other station, but its special tubes and circuits were designed for UHF rather than VHF channels now standard for video transmissions.

Bridgeport was picked for the field tests because the undulations of its terrain make line-of-sight television transmission difficult. In addition, it lies in a "fringe" television area, picking up remote signals from New York and New Haven.

Under these extreme test conditions, the Bridgeport station, which was given the experimental designation of KC2XAK by the Federal Communications Commission, began picking up the video signals of Station WNBT, the National Broadcasting Company's New York outlet which beams off the Empire State antenna. These signals, in turn, were rebroadcast via UHF to Bridgeport area.

To pick up this broadcast, engineers of the RFC Vector Division designed and built 50 UHF experimental sets, and 50 tuners to permit present set owners to receive both UHF and VHF telecasts.

The test equipment, together with various experimental receiving antennas, was installed in local homes within a 25 mile radius of Success Hill. In about half the homes, there were no receivers and technicians installed both UHF and VHF antennas. This permitted comparison of the pictures picked up directly from New York and New Haven with those beamed over the Bridgeport experimental unit.

There were hundreds of offers of voluntary cooperation from residents of Bridgeport and its suburbs. The homes selected for the tests were carefully spotted to obtain a full area study. Engineers made regular rounds of the town homes over a period of months to analyze the pictures and to compile reception ratings.

But even this was not enough for a full picture. A station wagon was equipped with precise measuring equipment and receivers, and a truck was fitted out with a collapsible antenna that could be quickly elevated.

Members of the Federal Communications Commission, headed by Wayne Coy, then chairman of the FCC, visited the workshop. RCA engineers and technicians maintained a steady flow of information into the Commission headquarters, and on the basis of this technical data the plan for a national service began to take shape. In August and September of 1951, Mr. Coy and more than a hundred engineers from TV stations throughout America attended demonstrations of the latest UHF equipment. They saw a clear, flickerless picture brought in by a variety of tuners.

At last UHF was ready. Mr. Coy spoke of 3,000 television stations in America "soon," with two-thirds to three-quarters in the UHF band. "I am sold on UHF," the FCC chairman declared, and the industry echoed his words.

Service to Mankind Today, there are 2,400 AM and 680 FM radio stations in America. Daily broadcasts reach 95 per cent of the country. More than 105,000,000 radio sets have been sold. There are more than 53,000,000 radio equipped homes. It can be claimed, without exaggeration, that in a quarter-century radio has become as much a household utility as the electric light or the telephone.

All signs indicate that television will acquire a comparable status in the next decade. The industry, in typical private enterprise fashion, has gambled millions on the perfection of VHF and the development of UHF. It has paved the way for small-town television, and the speed with which the small towns capitalize on this opportunity is in part a local question.

Under FCC procedure, television station license applications will be accepted for a fixed period. It is then the responsibility of local people—businessmen, educators, newspaper publishers, bankers, labor and religious leaders—to see that local license applications are filed and that the opportunity does not go by default.

The government won't build the stations. The broadcast industry operates under the old American tradition of free enterprise. Industry can provide the equipment, the government can provide the license, but the people of America—must make the final decision on whether their towns will be linked to the world via television.

SHORT STORY With All The Fixings By Michael Tiff

AS USUAL, stepping out of the exclusive Bankers and Manufacturers Club building, I felt that I had a lot to say to the world in general and to my favorite shoe-shine boy, Mickey McKensie, in particular. In fact, I was overjoyed to see him coming toward me through the crowded sidewalk, with his business stock and equipment housed in a crudely constructed box with a shoe rest. The feeling of satisfaction within me, born of recent pyramidal successes in the stock market, glowed with pleasant warmth; and I wanted presently to transmit that glow to Mickey himself.

3-Minute Fiction

"Hi, Mr. Crowley. Shine?" "You bet, Mickey. How's your business?" "Okay, Mr. Crowley. How's your business?" "Okay, Mickey."

I watched him again with satisfaction. I approved of the way he worked, with his long sandy hair falling from one side to the other as his slight body swayed to his task.

Noticing Mickey's curious glance at the other members of the club walking into or out of the building in greater numbers than usual, I informed him, "Today is the anniversary—the hundredth—of the Bankers & Manufacturers' Club. Nice sunny day for it, too."

"Sure's an old cub. I once belonged to a club, too. It was a hiking club. But I got plenty of walking all day looking for customers, so I lit out of it."

"I'm doing pretty well right now, Mr. Crowley, with my own business."

I was suddenly interested in his personal life—and I was positive Mickey had one. "I suppose, after your day's work is done, you can't wait until you're in a movie theatre watching your favorite Western hero? Eh, Mickey?"

I expected, when he raised his rather large blue eyes, to see them aglow with sudden fire. Instead they were quite calm, perhaps skeptical. "The movies are okay, Mr. Crowley, but they're mostly for kids."

"TELL ME, Mickey, what do you like to do besides shining shoes?" "Eat, Mr. Crowley. Just eat. My specialty's hot dogs and fishcakes. But gimme hot dogs any time—with lots of mustard and onions and saurkraut. 'Course I go for fishcakes, too. But hot dogs is my specialty. When I get home mom's got potatoes and beef stew and that's okay with me. But I always sneak down to the hot dog stand on the corner with two or three nickels—sometimes as many as six—and get myself hot dogs with all the fixings."

"Guess I'm just about the hot-dog-eatestest guy in the city. Gosh! Guess I'm always hungry for 'em. Mom says I got a barrel for a stomach, always going after after eats the way I do. But mom's a pretty good sport anyway for letting me have some of the nickels I take in over the day."

I could tell, by the rapt expression on Mickey's gold-flecked face, that he was mentally immersed in those delicious frankfurters, with "all the fixings"—concocted by this genius Mike. That small tongue of his seemed to move faster as if it were curling about a portion of his favorite delight. I could almost taste with him that incomparable flavor, laden with the essence of onions, mustard and saurkraut. But Mickey was straightening up and packing his brush, his rags, his cans of polish back into the crude little box. His small grimy palm hovered toward me and with a burst of generosity, I placed on the little hardened palm not one nickel but three.

I watched the freckles for the sign of joy. But a man happened to pass close by me at the moment, one of my fellow club members, and he placed a brotherly hand on my shoulder.

"Fred," he called me by my first name, of course, "don't you forget the dinner tonight. Hundredth anniversary of the club, you know. And it's going to cost you just one hundred dollars for your plate, whether you come or not. Cheap at that."

"One hundred dollars a plate! I saw Mickey pocket the three nickels. I had given him and when I looked into his eyes, they stared back at me, very wide and very blue, and I had nothing to say.

THE Once Upon A Horse And Steak

"Horsemeat Scandal Spreads in West." —Headline.

"WHAT'S GOOD today?" I asked the waiter. "I was just talkin' to the chef. It's a tough card," he replied. "Some days it's easy to figure 'em, some days it ain't."

"Any late scratches?" I asked, as he handed me a menu, which looked strangely like a racing program. "No. Everything is goin'," he replied.

"How's the sirloin?" I asked. "They gimme the word it's okay. Looks fit and ready for the test. It's in smart hands."

"It wasn't so good last time out," I remarked. "They wasn't trying with it," said the waiter. "They're shootin' today, I hear."

"How about the tenderloin?" "It's droppin' down where it belongs and should win in today's field," said the waiter.

"I got a tenderloin here last week that was pretty disappointing," I said. "How so?"

"The waiter told me its workouts were sensational and that it showed Derby quality. It was a bum, even with catnip riding," I said.

"Maybe they was waitin' to find the right spot," said the waiter. "You can't be sure of anything about beef these days."

"You're telling me!" "The chef had a couple of good things this week. Trials had been okay. He recommended 'em to a customer, but they broke down in the stretch. The customers still think it was a fix," said the waiter.

"Did they complain to the boss?" I asked. "No. They filed a protest with the racing associations," said the waiter.

"A bugle blew 'boots and saddles.' 'It's post time in the kitchen,' explained the waiter. 'You better make up your mind.'"

"What's the word on filet mignon?" I asked hurriedly. "It's rated a good bet for a sprint but if you like a route I favor sirloin," said the waiter. "I got a feelin' you came in for lamb chops. If you did, don't let me tout you off onto any steak. Stick to your own handicap figure these days."

At this point a waiter rushed in from the kitchen and whispered to my waiter. They talked out of the sides of their mouths for some time. "What did he say?" I asked my waiter.

"He likes hamburger at the price," the waiter said. "I decided to go for hamburger, with mustard up. After a while my waiter returned with a platter which contained only a boiled potato and some green peas."

"What happened to the hamburger?" I demanded. "It won," said the waiter, "but they disqualified it."

The plane in the last Elizabeth crash landed at Idlewild, after a flight from Florida, at 10:31. . . . Whatever inspection and attention it got there consumed only three-quarters of an hour before it left for Newark, leaving there at 12:18. . . . Is that the key to the tragedies, inadequate time for a 100 per cent check? . . . And the hurried operations which a shortage of time demands? . . . If mechanics can do a proper job on a 60-passenger airplane after a 1,200-mile flight in less than two hours why does it take so much more time to tune up an auto? . . . Serge M. Jose Ferrer took an option on "The Shiraz" three times before producing it. . . . We always thought it was "three strikes and out". . . . Probably that New York man who stole a big passenger bus and operated it for at least one round trip always had an ambition to drive a machine without any regard for fenders. . . . After 22 years at the Roosevelt, Guy Lombardo is going away to Freddy Martin, a bandleader discovered by Guy. . . . Lucian C. Sprague, well-known railroad man whose "Pledge of Allegiance" was a Christmas greeting unusual, sends his friends the Gettysburg Address in color on an embossed parchment for Lincoln's Birthday. . . . Can you remember away back when if a man had money he was thought to be well off? . . . Al Pearce, a newcomer to video, has a home-spun quality. . . . Sort of cross between Art Godfrey and Bob Burns.

The New Jersey legislature is making an inquiry into hundreds of complaints from veterans that they have been victimized by shoddy work in housing projects. Watch this spread all over the country, bub! To call some of the work shoddy is the highest flattery.

There's no internal dosing with SURIN. Nothing to swallow and wait around for relief. You simply apply SURIN right at the point of pain and blessed relief starts as penetration beneath the skin gets under way. Of course there's a reason for this wonder-working new external fast pain relief medicine. It's methacholine, a recent chemical born of research in a great laboratory. It acts speedily to aid penetration of SURIN's pain-quelling ingredients. Methacholine also causes deeper, longer-lasting pain relief and increased speed-up of local blood supply.

Tried on chronic rheumatism in large university hospital it brought fast relief to 75% patients and in home-for-the-aged 75%. Totally different from old-fashioned rubs and liniments, modern SURIN brings faster relief longer without burning or blistering without unpleasant odor or greasiness. Simply smooth on SURIN at the point of pain and feel pain ease in minutes. Money-back at your drug store if SURIN doesn't relieve muscle pain faster and better than anything you've ever used. A generous jar costs $1.25. SURIN is not a cure for any of these conditions.

MAR. 31 LAST DAY INDUCTEES CAN ENLIST IN MARINE CORPS
Interested young men of draft age, who desire to enlist in the Marine Corps, were reminded this week by Captain Norbert C. Manley Jr., org-in charge of the Milwaukee recruiting station, that March 31, 1952, is the deadline on enlisting those who have already received their pre-induction physical examinations.

For the past eight months, men who had received their physicals could still enlist in the Marine Corps providing they had not received notice to report for induction.

With the steady influx of more and more volunteers into the corps, pro-ent induction procedure, as far as the Marine Corps is concerned, is going to be halted soon, according to Washington D. C. reports.

Those interested in enlisting in the U. S. Marine Corps should contact Sgts. Sadowski and Ertl, marine recruiters for the Kewaskum area, with offices in the post office in Kewaskum.

AMERICA NEEDS A FIGHTER

● Bob Taft is a fighter. In 1952 the voters want positive action in Washington, instead of vacillation and confusion. As Republicans they want a clear-cut, fighting campaign instead of the me-tooism that has cost the party so dearly.

● Bob Taft will present to the people clear and definite issues, so that they may have an opportunity to make a clean cut choice as to the kind of government they shall have.

● Bob Taft has always been proud to be a Republican. With Bob Taft we will offer the voters a genuine positive alternative to what they have today.

● No American can question Bob Taft's ability, courage and integrity. He is one of the ablest and most sincere human beings ever to step upon the national scene. His experience qualifies him for the presidency.

● He will work well with Congress. He understands and respects the Constitutional rights and prerogatives of the Congress as representing the people. He will bring about mutual confidence and respect between the Congress and the White House.

● Taft has proved his ability to win elections. His kind of forthright, fighting campaign will insure not only a Republican President, but equally important, a Republican Congress. He has the real grass-roots popularity.

● In this Truman era of political immorality and corruption Bob Taft stands out as a refreshing example of honesty, integrity and decency.

Arold F. Murphy
to the
SUPREME COURT

Judge Arold F. Murphy has been a Circuit Judge for 22 years, presiding over the 20th Circuit, comprising Marinette, Oconto, Forest and Florence Counties.

Judge Murphy is 56 years of age, married, and has 5 children and 8 grandchildren. He was graduated from Marquette University Law School in 1917 and after a short service in the Army commenced the practice of law at Marinette, Wisconsin.

Judge Murphy was District Attorney of Marinette County for 4 terms from 1919 to 1927. He had practiced law for about 13 years when he was elected Circuit Judge in 1929.

Judge Murphy was Chairman of the Wisconsin Board of Circuit Judges in 1942.

His large experience as a lawyer and judge qualifies him for the important position of Supreme Justice.

You are invited to ask any lawyer of your acquaintance about the qualifications of Judge Arold F. Murphy for the Supreme Court.
