WEST BEND 4-0

Manager KIMAN Honeck, Jr. shut out the West Bend Boosters on five hits here Sunday as the Kewaskum Chevrolets came through with a 4-0 victory. Some fine defensive play by his teammates was helpful. Kewaskum sewed up the win in the very first inning with three big runs. After that "Killy" coasted along and was never in danger in blanking the neighbors. The first batter, Miller, fanned but then C. Stautz singled, stole second and went to third on Prost's one banger. Dekker followed with another hit and drove in the first run. J. Stautz followed suit with another single, sending another run across. Dekker scored the third run on Honeck's long fly ball. The Chev's other run came in the eighth frame. Prost was hit by a pitched ball but was forced at second by Dekker. J. Stautz went out but then three straight walks to Honeck, Held and Duengel, batting for Schief, forced a marker across. Along with his five-hitter, Honeck struck out six and walked three. Oelhafen, Booster pitcher, was touched for eight hits, fanned four and passed four. West Bend had two or three good scoring opportunities but Honeck bore down and pulled out of them without damage being done. In the 7th and 8th innings three Boosters reached first base and every one of them was thrown out stealing on beautiful throws by Earl Dekker to Barney Prost.

"We are hopeful that we can reach our quota during the coming week," Marth said, adding that he is certain many people who plan to make a contribution have simply forgotten to do so. Checks can be mailed care of "Cancer Fund Drive, West Bend, Wisconsin," he pointed out. "Without the funds raised in campaigns such as this, the researchers and scientists who are laboring night and day to solve the mystery of cancer, will have to curtail their activities. Norman Jaeger's Sister Murdered at Fond du Lac

Miss Agnes Jaeger, attractive 25-year-old telephone operator, sister of Norman Jaeger of Kewaskum, who resided with her mother, Mrs. Frank Jaeger at 499 South Main st. in Fond du Lac, was found brutally murdered early Saturday, Aug. 16, in a farm field on the Rogersville road about a mile west of Fond du Lac. Her face was beaten beyond recognition. Miss Jaeger, whose body was discovered by two farmers, was last seen by her friends shortly before 1 a. m. Saturday. Identification of the dead girl was made by her sister, Mrs. John Ogie, R. 3, Fond du Lac. Miss Jaeger was wearing a blue skirt, yellow blouse and white high-heeled shoes. Her bright red shorty coat was found near the side of the road about 20 feet from the body. Coroner Joseph E. Mar-ray said the murder apparently occurred sometime between 2 and 3 a. m. and was done with a blunt instrument. An autopsy that was performed showed that the girl had not been criminally attacked. Sheriff Arnold Sook of Fond du Lac county said there were signs of a scuffle near the side of the road. Also found at the spot were Miss Jaeger's wrist watch, earrings and a hair ornament. Near the body was a lower dental plate which she wore. The girl's head was beaten to a pulp, the only recognizable feature being her dark brown hair. It was learned that several persons came in contact with Miss Jaeger and a few of her girl friends at two Fond du Lac taverns during the course of the evening. The girl friends reportedly told the sheriff that they and Miss Jaeger accepted a ride home at about 1 a. m. from two male acquaintances. Her pals were the first to be taken home. Miss Jaeger failed to arrive home according to her mother. William M. Gardner, 24, a recently married Fond du Lac machinist, who gave the slain girl a "lift" home on the night she was found killed was taken into custody by authorities and charged with first degree murder of the girl in municipal court. He pleaded not guilty and was bound over to circuit court where his bond was fixed at $50,000. Gardner admitted giving Miss Jaeger a ride but maintains that he left her out of his car in front of the Fond du Lac county court house, a distance of nine blocks from her home. Gardner testified that he met Miss Jaeger and a companion, June Coyne, at one of the taverns after he finished work on the night shift and offered to take the young women home. He dropped Miss Coyne at her home and then left Miss Jaeger at the court house. He claims he played cards with his wife and some friends at the latter's apartment until 5 a. m. Miss Jaeger was born on Dec. 31, 1926, in the town of Ashford, the daughter of Elizabeth and Frank Jaeger. She attended the Fond du Lac High school and graduated in 1945. Her father predeceased her. Survivors include her mother, five sisters, Mrs. John Ogie, R. 3, Fond du Lac; Mrs. Frank Bove, Fond du Lac; Mrs. Vern Corey, Chula Vista, Calif.; Mrs. Richard Paige, Fond du Lac; Miss Betty Jaeger, at home, and seven brothers, Waldmar, Roland, Alex and Herbert of Fond du Lac; Norman, Kewaskum; Russell, Milwaukee, and Ambrose, Chula Vista, Calif. Funeral services were held from the W. A. Hiddinger Funeral home, Fond du Lac, at 8:30 a. m. Tuesday and at St. Mary's church at 9 a. m. Burial was in Calvary cemetery there.

Behind The Scenes In American Business

By Reynolds Knight

NEW YORK—This is Christmas time!

So it's the middle of summer and no snow is expected for several months, but for manufacturers and retailers this is the time of year when the real work is done to make Christmas what it is, commercially.

Many larger stores have Christmas promotion plans well developed. Orders for clothing, accessories, sporting goods, specialty gifts, ribbons and wrappings are going out and being filled.

Manufacturers of gift items are stepping up production in anticipation of demand and are preparing advertising and promotions to aid dealers in making the most of the holiday season. Retailers will soon be receiving such promotional material, if they haven't already done so.

But of all businesses which lean heavily on Christmas for their profits, none is merrier than the toy industry. It will be a good year. One authoritative estimate puts this year's sales at $800 million compared with record 1951's $720 million.

Moreover, this heavy buying in toys is being spread more evenly through the year. Christmas this year is expected to account for only 65 per cent of the full-year total, down 10 per cent from last year. The main reason for this trend seems to be a shift in habits in purchasing for the bumper kiddie crop and the high consumer spending power which permits the folks to buy at Christmas and still have something left for later in the year.

WALL STREET, IOWA—Many leading American firms whose reputations or products are known the world over are home-grown, home-owned companies and remain true grass-roots enterprises despite the far-reaching fame of their products.

A good example is the Sheaffer Pen Company which sells writing equipment throughout the world, yet just built its new $3½-million plant at Fort Madison, Iowa, only a few yards from the small building where Sheaffer pens were first made 39 years ago.

Sheaffer is an Iowa company in more than one way. Over 30 per cent of shareholders are Iowans and more than 50 per cent live in Iowa or one of five neighboring states. These are probably shocking statistics to opponents of our free enterprise system who prate about control of industry by "a powerful few in Wall Street."

THINGS TO COME—A wax-type lubricating oil for cutting metals called "Wax-Cut," which reduces smoking, permits increased feeds and speeds and contributes to longer tool life, has been developed by Johnson's Wax. The lubricant has been put through exacting tests and, in addition to the aforementioned properties, it will not stain machine parts, enables the operator to observe his work through the clear fluid, lacks odor and will not turn rancid. . . . A 12-ounce, pistol-shaped torch produces an acetylene flame when the trigger is squeezed and goes out the instant the trigger is released. . . . A multi-purpose floor maintainer, which scrubs, waxes, polishes and steel wools floors, is available for stores, offices and small firms. . . . Employees can be protected from nuisance dust by a low-cost, soft, porous, absorbent vegetable fiber mask now on the market. The mask can be sterilized in boiling water without damage.

LOSING PRACTICES—Some of the conditions contributing to department stores' loss of business to specialty shops, mail-order houses and chain stores were revealed in a survey by the University of Illinois Business Management Service.

Among the complaints registered were poor parking facilities, slow service, bad salesmanship and high prices. The place where most stores fell down was, apparently, the promotion of related merchandise—although this is an area in which they should have an advantage over the competition. The study showed only one in every five purchasers bought any two of the survey items in the same store.

CRYING TOWEL—Every year there are a few industries which complain of adverse conditions besetting them.

Perhaps it is an election year that these claims are a little more widespread than usual. But, except for a few like the liquor industry and the appliance field which had more than their share of troubles, it is best to take such statements with a grain of salt.

While there have been bad spots this has been, on the whole, a good year. This is shown by a Commerce Department report listing total dividends of firms publicly reporting them at $3,833 million for the first six months of the year, or up 5 per cent from the same period last year. The oil industry did best with a 20 per cent hike.

Floating Life Tent Gives All-Weather Comfort

Packaged raft hits water.

'Copter which dropped it hovers as raft automatically inflates.

"Survivors" scramble aboard raft 30 seconds after 'copter-drop.

Although airmen and shipwrecked sailors might survive a mid-ocean disaster, many have died because of over-exposure to extremes of weather. Now the Navy comes up with a 15-man rubber lifeboat that beats the heat and the cold, maintaining temperatures on the raft at 70 degrees via dead-space insulation in the canopy, which cuts off the sun or Arctic winds, and floor liner, which holds radiant heat from the bodies of the survivors. In tropic climates the floor liner is removed and towed as an additional raft. The pictures at left and above show the 15½ by 7½-foot floating tent as it was demonstrated at Floyd Bennett Field, N. Y. Thirty seconds after the helicopter dropped the raft it automatically inflated and was ready for the "survivors."

Improper Canning May Cause Food Poisoning

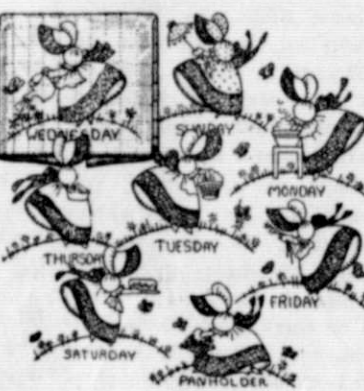

Balancing both the budget and the menu takes a lot of ingenuity these days, so many housewives are busy now preserving summer fruits and vegetables to help with both next winter.

But this should be carefully done. Improperly canned foods are not only a waste of time, energy, and materials but also may be a hazard to health. Illness, sometimes even death, can be due to food poisonings caused by unsafe home-canning methods.

Botulism is one type of food poisoning especially associated with improperly canned non-acid vegetables such as green beans, corn, and greens. It is caused by the poison or toxin produced by certain bacteria which are in themselves harmless to people. These bacteria feed on organic matter and their spores can be found in soil, in dust, on fruits and vegetables, and in other foods. Authorities hold that in the home canning of non-acid vegetables the pressure cooker should be used in preference to the cold-pack method.

Any home canned foods that look spoiled, smell tainted, or seem to have gas should be discarded without being tasted as prevention against botulism. Even when home-canned vegetables look and smell all right, to be sure the housewife should bring them to a rolling boil, then cover and boil for 10 minutes. Spinach and corn should be boiled for 20 minutes before tasting or serving.

Careful studies have been made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture to determine correct canning methods so that as much food value as possible will be retained and the food be safe to eat. Bulletins explaining these methods may be obtained from county home demonstration agents or directly from Washington, D. C. Instructions need to be followed very carefully.

Bible Comment:

Bible's Words on Work Still Apply During Our Times

THE vigorous words, written many hundreds of years ago to describe what happens when men stop working and become sluggards, describe what happened in many countries where the masses turned from honest toil, not in this instance to sleep like sluggards, but to engage in the equally unproductive business of war. The wise man of the Proverbs predicted that "want as an armed man" would come to the non-worker, and that is the situation in the lands stricken by war.

Even in countries like ours we have had ample demonstrations of what happens when men stop working. Without trying to assess the matter of rights and causes, one can point to what happens when trains stop running, when steel mills stop producing and when coal isn't dug.

Such strikes and lockouts no longer affect only the things that people can do without, but they imperil the very basis of living and safety. Even the automobile that was once a luxury is now, for many people, essential in the business of life. Regardless of where the blame lies it ought to be evident that when work is stopped in any basic industry the very fabric of society is endangered.

The problems associated with the right not to work have become more emphasized than those which for a long time were concerned with unemployment and the right to work.

The productive powers of man are so great that if all who are able to work were doing their fair share, and were doing it faithfully, the resulting resources for the satisfaction of human needs and for the agrandizement of life would be so great that short hours of labor, with much time for leisure, pleasure and home-building would be available for all. But the greatness of this productive power leads men to forget the tragedy that befalls, when men cease producing at all, or when great numbers of them do.

So, the wise words concerning work are still words of wisdom. And the words of Jesus are above all to be remembered, "My Father worketh hitherto; and I work."

SURVIVES 1,500 FOOT FALL

Lack Arrowhead, Cal. — Kenneth Wright, Jr., 10 tumbled down a 1,500-foot cliff and didn't break a bone. He was playing atop the cliff with two companions when he slipped. He rolled and tumbled, landing on a rock slide, then rolled and tumbled before reaching the foot of the cliff. He suffered a concussion, cuts and bruises and possible internal injuries, but is expected to be all right.

Timely Tips

Vacation time is here, and as with all good things, you'll have more fun and time to enjoy yourself if you plan carefully in the beginning. Make a list of what you'll need while traveling and what you need when you arrive at your destination. Then go over it and meticulously cull all that can possibly be eliminated. Too much equipment merely means added burden. Making as many costumes as possible do double duty is one way to travel light and still have all you need.

Best headgear for travel is the little crushable, like soft pillboxes or sea hats. If you must take a fussy hat, wear it en route and pack the "little changes."

Fold suit skirts at the hip line, not in the middle. Thus any crease that remains will come up under your jacket away from critical eyes. Those handy plastic bags you use for storing things in the refrigerator will prove equally useful for packing things for travel, whether it be for a full vacation period or just a day's outing in the country.

Sports Afield

By Ted Kesting

Gunners sometimes object to the special archery seasons or reserves set aside for archers, saying that it makes a privileged class of them and spoils the gun hunting. It does no such thing, and there is plenty of room for both. In fact, the average archer also is a gun hunter. The kill of deer by bow hunters is small in proportion to the number of archers. Another objection—that arrows wound more than they kill—doesn't hold water. Outdoor writer Bill Wolf has said "I think I would rather be hit by a bullet than any of the razor-sharp broad-head arrows."

There are two kinds of bows, straight and recurved. The tips have no curve in the straight bow; they are bent away from the archer in the recurved bow. There also are modified straight and semirecurved bows, but these are only variations. The buyer will have to decide for himself which he wants, but many hunters prefer the straight bow although the recurve usually has a smoother pull.

The pull or draw is the force in pounds required to draw a standard arrow its full length. A bow should not be drawn beyond the length of an arrow, and it should never be released without an arrow on the string. Snapping a bow without an arrow is a good way to break it.

The first and major mistake most persons make when buying a bow is to get one with too heavy a draw. The pull or draw depends entirely upon the individual—his or her height and strength. It is a singular fact, but a deer killed with a bow having a 55-pound pull is just as dead as one slain with a 90-pound bow. Too heavy a draw makes for inaccuracy because the bow is inclined to wobble if the user can't handle it.

It is difficult to advise on the proper length. The most practical thing is to write to the manufacturer stating your height, weight, sex and purpose for which you want the bow. If you must economize, do it on the bow and not the arrows. The cheaper bows will shoot well if good arrows are used but not vice versa. The best bows are useless if the arrows are no good. A fairly good bow can be purchased for $10, or you can spend $50 or more if you wish.

Trenton, N. J. — Brock Whitlock, general manager of an air-conditioned motion-picture theater, saw two ambulances drive off with persons suffering from the heat in his neighborhood and decided to do something about it. He went around the neighborhood with tickets, inviting people sitting out on their porches and in their backyards to come over to the theater. Around 700 accepted the invitation. The theater, which normally closed at 11 p. m. ran on until 3 a. m. for the comfort of the heat-worn spectators.

QUESTION: My basement has much water coming up from below only after a hard rain, therefore it must be surface water. Would you install drain tiles inside or out, and how?
—A. E., Niagara Falls, N. Y.

ANSWER: While you may be right about this being surface water, it is obvious that your foundation is undermined. Water must pass under the gutters to come up inside. Therefore, unless drain tiles are located outside the footing, there is always the danger of undermining and collapse. Put your drainage tiles outside and below the footing.

QUESTION: The interior of my house is finished with fiber board panels. Every joint has cracked its full length. The joints seem to have been made with a tape and putty or paste. This may have cracked due to swelling and shrinkage due to moisture changes. Is there a flexible material I can use for these cracks?
—D. C. J., Racine, Wis.

ANSWER: More likely the cracked joints result from shrinkage in structural timbers of your home. Taped joints are standard, and we'd suggest replacement with the same material. Green timbers continue to shrink for some years, with resulting cracks in all wall finish, but it seems probable you've passed the worst stage. Flexible materials make poor bases for paint, paper.

QUESTION: I'm looking for something to prevent rust on gutters and downspouts. Would red lead do this?
—W. B., Seattle, Wash.

ANSWER: Yes. Red lead is a fine rust preventive on all metal. It does require a coat of paint after it has dried, unless you want to live with its color. In addition there are paint-on galvanizing compounds, black metal paints, rust-sealing compounds with rubber and asphalt bases.

NEW NEIGHBORS?

Coincident with the Navy's announcement that one of their rockets had travelled at a speed of 1,238 miles per hour, thus smashing the sonic barrier like a baseball going through the schoolhouse window, comes word from the Air Force that no less than 60 flying saucers have been reported within a two-weeks period.

Among these observers were two veteran pilots who saw "eight glowing, red-orange discs" travelling, they said, at 1,000 miles per hour.

Far from disparaging any such expert testimony, we are passing on this information so that, if you walk into your kitchen some morning and find a Martian with a pointed head foraging for breakfast, you will keep calm and show him how to use your orange juicer.

White Summer Jewelry Has Added Attractions

BY EDNA MILES

In costume jewelry for summer, the right fashion look is white. But it's white with a difference.

The plain and unadorned white jewelry of a few seasons back is gone. Coro, for instance, gives white a touch of crystal, a golden gleam, a rim of rhinestones, then uses a texture theme throughout an entire summer collection. White melons may be joined by golden stems or white beads may be caged in golden spirals.

You may wear a bib of white strung on gold or find that shiny enamel spheres are circled with rhinestones. Crystal is used to accent white enamel chokers and pendant necklaces. In polka dot beads, white is mixed with color for crisp contrast. Or, again, mounds of white sweetberry beads are mounted on golden leaves to carry out the frosty theme and a floral motif.

Often, smooth and textured beads are used together in an alternating pattern. In masses, they make chunky bibs. Bracelets are worn twining round and round or are the rigid type with handsome floral center.

A corsage of sweetberry pins can go on a suit or coat lapel, a trio of chokers at the neckline of your Gibson Girl dress. Or, fill in a low, scoop neckline with a chunky bib. Whatever the jewelry, just make sure that the color is white.

White and crystal are blended in this choker and drop necklace, a perfect fill-in for your low neckline. Drop earrings add flattery.

Nursing Mothers, Athletes Warned Of Using Some Medicines

Nursing mothers should avoid certain drugs which are excreted in the mother's milk, according to a recent study to determine the effect of drugs, heavy smoking and the use of alcohol on 55 nursing mothers. Reporting on this and other medical findings in Redbook Magazine for August, Dr. Edward T. Wilkes also warns that athletes risk permanent disability by using novocain indiscriminately as a pain killer in injuries.

"Certain drugs which are excreted in the mother's milk and have a harmful effect on the infant should be avoided by nursing mothers. Bromides, for instance, should not be taken as sedatives — and phenobarbital only in small doses. If a laxative is necessary, one without cascara should be chosen.

"A study of 55 nursing mothers was made to determine the effect of heavy smoking upon them. Small amounts of nicotine were found in the milk. No symptoms were noted in the infants who had developed a tolerance to nicotine, and the amount of breast milk produced was not significantly diminished. However, one case of nicotine poisoning was reported in a breast-fed infant six weeks old. The symptoms were restlessness, insomnia, rapid heart, vomiting and diarrhea. When the baby was weaned, the symptoms disappeared. The use of alcohol in moderate amounts was not found to be harmful.

"Local injection of novocain is often useful in the treatment of sprains and muscle pains, but a recent article in the Journal of the American Medical Association indicates that athletes are using such medication to their detriment. While the novocain may stop the pain, the athlete should not be permitted to continue play. Permanent weakness of the foot may result from playing with a sprained ankle, and it may be that the injury is more serious than it seems.

"A revised schedule for infant immunization, similar to the new recommendations of the American Academy of Pediatrics, has been announced by the Michigan State Health Department.

"Injections against whooping cough, diphtheria and tetanus are to be started at three months instead of six, as formerly prescribed. The reason for this is that more than half the deaths from whooping cough occur in infants under six months of age.

"Smallpox vaccination should be given at five months. Booster doses for protection against whooping cough, diphtheria and tetanus are recommended at the ages of two to three years. Immunization against diphtheria, tetanus and smallpox should be renewed at five or six years and again at nine or ten years."

MODERN TOWER OF BABEL?

Word may have seeped back to the Kremlin that General Eisenhower is not one who believes "all Russians are 14 feet high." At any rate, the ancient city of Prague, famed for its old-world loveliness, is now to be beautified by a 50 foot statue of Stalin, mounted on a 70 foot base.

Stoically as the Czechs have borne the thievery, terror and brutality of iron curtain rule, this new indignity may prove too much. Even if it should finally be completed, think what little boys could write on such a pedestal!

The A. F. L. accused Communist China of using more than 1,000,000 slave laborers.

Do Insects Help Or Harm Farm Crops?

Whether an insect is injurious or beneficial depends very largely upon the economic status of the material it feeds upon. Scientists tell us, despite the enormous toll taken by insect pests annually, that the credit side of the ledger is much larger than the debit side. They point out that the great amount of insects that feed on weeds provide a valuable service to the farmers.

This beneficent work is unfortunately not without its drawbacks according to E. L. Chambers, State Entomologist, Wisconsin Department of Agriculture. He points out that too often large insect populations have increased at the expense of weeds and, subsequently, shift and attack the cultivated crops. The painted-lady butterfly is a recent shining example. This insect, believed to be the most common butterfly in the world, has attracted considerable attention for its fondness for Canadian thistles. The spiny larvae feed voraciously on this weed as well as upon burdock, mallow, sunflower, and many other weeds.

Many farmers observing heavy defoliation of their Canadian thistle patches year after year have wondered why development of large numbers of the insect were not encouraged to solve their thistle control problems. This summer the insect seems to be exhibiting equal fondness for soybeans, small grains, and other field crops when thistles were growing in them.

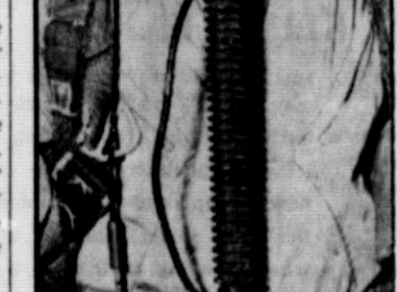

In some sections of the country control measures have had to be applied to protect these cultivated crops from the ravages of this insect. For this purpose, methoxychlor and DDT are being recommended. Three pounds of the 50% wettable methoxychlor powder in 20 to 30 gallons of water, or 3 quarts of the 25% DDT emulsifiable solution in 10 gallons of water, are being applied per acre.

C. H. Beckman, J. E. Kuntz, A. J. Riker, and J. G. Berbee made this finding by using radioactive chemical solutions injected into the trunks of healthy and diseased pin oaks. Then, using portable Geiger counters which could detect the position of radioactive materials inside the tree, the men recorded how fast this liquid was moving upward in the trunk.

In healthy trees, they found the liquid moved upward at about a foot each minute. In trees that were beginning to wilt, however, there was almost no upward movement. That gave them a clue as to where the trouble was. When they examined cross sections of twigs they found the sap-carrying vessels of the infected trees were plugged up. In healthy trees, these vessels were open.

Oak wilt is a serious disease in the midwest and is spreading into more southern areas, such as Kentucky and Arkansas. Previously, Wisconsin scientists had found how the disease spread within a small area from tree to tree—through root grafts. They discovered that the disease could be prevented from spreading by cutting these root grafts below the soil surface or by poisoning infected trees.

The scientists also find that the fungus keeps on growing under the bark of wilt-killed trees. Various insects, as well as woodpeckers, have been observed near these large, scattered fungus patches. This discovery suggests many possible answers as to the way oak wilt spreads from one infected area to a healthy area some distance away.

Ticklers

By George

"Joe's wife must have gone home to mother again."

How many times have you clipped out a suggested diet from a magazine, promised yourself you'd start it tomorrow—carefully laid it aside—and forgot all about it? Your not alone. Self-improvement attempts follow that old saw about the spirit being willing but the flesh weak.

One beauty authority suggests a literal "campaign" for you this summer that will give you results as you go along. That's really the basis of most women falling down on self-improvement attempts—the results are not achieved daily. The "four point program" that will keep your interest alive in your beauty campaign is diet, exercise, make-up and skin care.

Summer is an ideal time for diet says Betty Ann, Editor of The Milwaukee Journal Women's Pages, for you're less apt to miss heavy starchy foods, and there is such an abundance of fresh fruits and vegetables on hand. Instead of incorporating a set diet into your four point program—why not try this formula for a change? Most everyone knows what foods are the most fattening (usually all the ones we like) and so instead of embarking on one of those strenuous and nerve wracking 30 day diets that allow you something like a cup of plain tea and a half a split soybean—why not just be sensible?

Steer away from the summer habit of soft drinks that contain billions of calories. Search out the ripe tomatoes—the fresh naturally sweet berries and fruits, and forego your usual "seconds" on bread, butter and gravies. A wonderful thing about dieting is that if you do pursue it for at least three days, you'll find your ordinarily jaded taste buds awakening to the much more delicate natural taste of foods. You'll wonder why you hadn't appreciated your foods undrenched by gravies and salt and spices. So much for the diet angle—it wasn't too painful.

Exercise is the second point of the program. A lithe line, a handy rubberized exercise cord, is your best weapon here.

Try this also swinging slowly from side to side, one hand high above the head, the other hand reaching as far down the side as possible by bending sideways, but not bending your knees.

If you prefer your exercise lying down (this is ideal for your stomach), try this: Lie perfectly straight, holding the lithe line over the head in "Y" shape. Then, with control, sit up, keeping the lithe line taut, and shoulders straight.

You'll get results from this right away—if you haven't been doing any athletics lately. Now for the easiest part of your program—skin care and make-up. Scout through all of your make-up. Visit your local cosmetic counter and have your beauty expert help you in choosing the newest (and most flattering to you) cosmetic hues for summer. Think of yourself as an artist—sharpen up your dull eyebrow pencil—clean your mascara brush well—in short, be your own beauty artist.

Be exacting about skin cleansing each night. If your skin is sluggish, use a stimulant. If your skin lacks natural oils, lubricate it well. Make sure every little trace of soil and stale make-up is removed from your face before you retire. When you put on your make-up—take time. Don't do it slap dash. Make your lipstick out line clear cut and smooth.

See that your eyebrows are naturally arched, not garishly made up. When applying foundation, be sure it is applied evenly, and drawn out under the chin line and well back to the ears. Don't have a line of make-up demarcation. Apply face powder generously—then carefully remove the excess with clean cotton.

Your friends will notice the change in you right away, and the inspiration that you will get from the compliments you will receive will help to keep you on that sensible self-imposed diet. After a while, your stomach will accustom itself to its new regime, and you won't find dieting half bad at all!

Gait Too Fast
The reason some boys don't follow in their father's footsteps is because the father's gait is too fast for them.

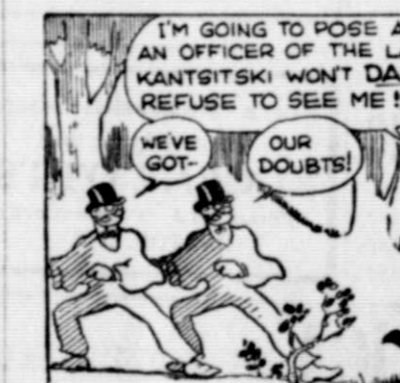

STRICTLY FRESH

WITH the baseball season past the halfway mark we can look forward to the return of basketball "court" scenes. Tokyo thieves stole 300 man-hole covers, explaining they couldn't make a living selling regular scrap metal. The boys were out to put the city in the hole. With election campaigning in the offing the voter is advised to buy a fencing mask for baby or demand more smoothly shaven politicians. A Duluth, Minn., woman sent the city a bill for "ruining" the dinner she had cooking when the gas was turned off. Let them put that in their pipe! The nation's aircraft spotting posts are half-manned. Too many people looking down their noses at this job of looking up.

THOSE WERE THE DAYS BY ART BEEMAN

STARTING A WOOD FIRE IN THE FIREPLACE

- 1—Lay kindling wood and crumpled paper on inside hearth.
- 2—Lay two or more small logs on andirons.
- 3—Lay more kindling and paper on top of logs.
- 4—Be sure damper is open.
- 5—A torch of crumpled newspaper will help start the draft.
- 6—Light top kindling.
- 7—Light bottom kindling.
- 8—Add larger logs when small logs are well charred.

The logs should be held up off the floor at least four inches. Fuel basket may be used with or without andirons OR ordinary bricks may be used.

Place logs on top of bricks used as fuel basket—kindling underneath.

AVOID FIREPLACE SMOKE

There may be many reasons why a fireplace smokes. However, in most instances by using a little precaution in starting the fire, you may be able to get the fire burning without smoking up the house. The fact that the fire burns well after you once get it started, probably means your chimney construction is O. K. Try this:

Lay small split kindling, and shavings or crumpled newspaper on the inside hearth between the andirons. Soft wood kindling from packing crates will start easier than hard wood.

Lay two or three small logs on the andirons over the kindling. Two or three will burn better than a single log. The draft between the logs keeps them burning. The fire should be as far back as possible. Split logs are better than whole logs.

Lay more kindling and crumpled newspaper on top of the logs.

Open the damper. Do not forget this. Open it all the way.

Crumple two or three pieces of newspaper in the shape of a torch. Light this and hold it up into the throat of the fireplace. The purpose of this torch is to warm or expel the mass of cold air which is in the flue, and start it moving upward. There will be no smoke from the newspaper.

When the torch has burned too close to the fingers to hold any longer, place it on the kindling which is on top of the logs.

When the top kindling ignites, it will start a draft up between the logs. Then light the bottom kindling. If the bottom kindling seems to be burning out igniting the logs, add more kindling.

Add larger logs if desired, after the smaller logs are burning well. Do not wait until the blaze has died down.

Always use a fireplace screen to protect the floor or carpet around the hearth from flying sparks.

Death By Smothering Very Rare In Babies

Babies rarely die from smothering. It is important that parents realize that sudden death during sleep is more often caused by the serious interstitial pneumonia, not from smothering in blankets or a pillow. A bulletin from the Minnesota State Medical association lists these precautions:

1. Don't needlessly expose your baby to infection—keep him out of crowds and away from people with colds.
2. Never dismiss a runny nose and watery eyes as "just a cold." These can also be forerunners of other such childhood diseases as infantile paralysis and rheumatic fever. A sick baby should be looked at every two hours day and night, even with a cold, for he can take a turn for the worse at any time.
3. If home care hasn't brought relief from a cold in 24 hours, call your doctor again. It may be more serious.
4. Let a doctor prescribe any medicine you give the baby. Don't give him anything in the same dosage as for an adult. Instead of nose drops, use cotton to swab the nostril.
5. Give your baby a chance to burp before he goes to sleep.
6. Let the infant sleep alone. A pillow is not necessary, feather ticks are dangerous. If he sleeps in a basket or carriage with no mattress, use padding rather than a large pillow. The mattress should be firm and fit closely to the sides so no vacant space is there for him to slide into. Make sure bars on the bed are close enough together to prevent his head from being caught between them. If the child is sick, he may not have the strength or freedom to get himself out of a bad situation. Don't leave the baby alone.
7. Don't let older children give him small objects such as jacks, marbles or pennies—they can become lodged in the windpipe.

U. S. Olympic Hope Richards, Problem Child, Now Minister

One of the most unusual figures in sports is twenty-six-year-old Bob Richards, ranking pole vaulter and ordained minister in the Church of the Brethren. Whether preaching or jumping, Richards calls on God for spiritual guidance and shows the persistence and fire that have aided him in his biggest jump of all—from problem child at sixteen to America's leading Olympic hope. Writing in Redbook Magazine for July, Stanley Frank gives Richards' eloquent case for combining religion and sports and tells why he is one of the most criticized of sport personalities.

"Last year Richards was awarded the James E. Sullivan trophy, given annually to the nation's outstanding amateur athlete. At the Olympic Games he is also advertised as a typical young American, and, in a sense, he is. An affable, personable fellow of twenty-six, Richards and his wife, Mary, a tall, grave girl, have two children and do the best they can on an average income of $5,000 a year. But that is where his typicality stops.

"Even if Richards were not an ordained minister in the Church of the Brethren, an old orthodox sect, he would be an unusual figure in sports for his uninhibited behavior alone. When he misses a vault, he tears his hair in agony, when he soars over the bar at a winning height in an important meet, he dashes around the arena whooping like a kid.

"Richards' only regular source of income is the $2,800 a year he receives from LaVerne College, a small school in California, for a variety of services.

"During the fall semester he teaches three courses. During the spring semester, he does public relations, traveling all over California, advertising La Verne in hundreds of speeches and interviews. To add to his meager income he also competes in some twenty track meets a year in the East and the Middle West, and schedules his appearances so that he can conduct week-long revival meetings for the Church of the Brethren between meets. He makes 300 speeches a year at college, church and civic functions.

"On top of all this Bob finds time to work out three hours a day to keep in condition for track. Not content with being the world's number-one pole vaulter, he has tried his hand at the decathlon, and, according to the experts, stands an outside chance of upsetting the Olympic champion. He is, of course, the favorite to win the pole vault, in which he was third at London four years ago.

"Richards himself makes an eloquent case for his combination of religion and sports. There is a definite affinity between the two activities," he argues. "Christianity teaches the ideals of simple living, self-confidence, hard work and willingness to endure suffering, and encourages bouncing back from defeat to strive for victory. Every good athlete must be capable of these things and religion helps him develop. I never amounted to much as an athlete, a student or an individual until I was converted to religion. I changed overnight from a mediocre to a topnotch athlete, and, most importantly, I was saved from becoming a social problem—maybe a bum."

"Most of the criticism of Richards in La Verne is focused on his apparent neglect of his family. In the arena it stems from his practice of praying publicly before making a crucial vault in a track meet."

Sarah Anne's COOKING CLASS

Lazy Day Refreshments

Keep cool these lazy summer days by entertaining in an informal, casual manner. Good food is such an important part of any entertaining that it is essential to keep up to date on all short cuts. So be sure to use packaged mixes frequently and save yourself hours in a hot kitchen. For example, the luscious cake pictured here is made with packaged devil's food cake mix. Thickly swirled with fluffy frosting or whipped cream it is a tempting dessert suitable for afternoon or evening refreshments. Tall, cool glasses of tangy lemonade is a perfect accompaniment.

Quick Devil's Food Cake

- 1 package Swans Down devil's food cake mix
- 1 teaspoon grated orange rind
- 1 1/4 cups milk

Turn cake mix into bowl; add orange rind. Add 1/2 cup of the milk, blend, then beat 2 minutes. Add half of the remaining milk, blend, and beat 2 minutes. Then add remaining milk and beat 1 minute longer. (Beat cake vigorously by hand or at a medium speed of electric mixer. Scrape bowl and spoon or beater often.)

Turn batter into 2 8-inch layer pans 1 1/4 inches deep, which have been lined with paper. Bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 20 minutes or until done. When cool, spread Fluffy Frosting or Whipped Cream between layers and on top of cake.

Crisp Fried Chicken

- 3-3 1/2 lb. frying chicken (fresh or frozen)
- 1/2 cup flour
- 1 1/2 teaspoons paprika
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1/2 cup butter

Cut the chicken in parts (if frozen, just thaw), rinse in cold water and pat dry with paper towels or clean tea towel. Now you're ready to start frying.

Toss pieces of chicken, several at a time, in a paper bag into which a mixture of flour, paprika, salt and pepper has been sifted. Coat each piece thoroughly. Shake off excess flour.

Heat shortening and butter in a large skillet until a test drop of water sizzles. Cook meatiest pieces first (don't crowd them) over a medium heat until nicely browned.

Cover browned chicken tightly and cook over low heat about 20 to 30 minutes longer. Uncover during last 10 minutes to crisp. Secret of fine poultry cooking is low temperature.

Test for doneness by cutting into thickest part of drumstick with a sharp knife. When meat cuts easily and no pinkness is apparent, chicken is ready to serve to 4 husky eaters.

Danish Coffee Cake

- Dough:
- 1 pkg. active dry yeast
 - 1/4 cup water
 - 1 1/4 cups milk
 - 1 cup butter
 - 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
 - 3 tablespoons sugar
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - 1 teaspoon ground cardamon
- Filling:
- 1/2 to 3/4 cup butter
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1 tablespoon cinnamon
 - 1 cup raisins
 - 1/2 cup chopped citron
- Topping:
- 1 egg
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1/3 cup almonds, slivered

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water. Heat milk and fat until film shows; cool to lukewarm. Mix yeast and milk with sifted dry ingredients until smooth. Brush top with more fat; let rise in warm place until double in size.

Knead dough several minutes. Divide in two parts and roll each part into a long sausage-like piece 6" wide. Spread with softened butter, sugar, cinnamon, raisins, citron. Fold edges of dough over filling.

Arrange both lengths of dough on a cookie sheet in the shape of a giant pretzel with joining seam of dough down. Now let dough rise a second time in a warm spot until it doubles in size.

Brush top of coffee cake with a topping of beaten egg, sprinkle with sugar and almond slivers. Bake in a 350 F. or moderate oven for about 50 minutes or until roll is an enticing brown. Cut in sections and serve warm.

13TH FLOOR LUCKY

Baltimore, Md.—The much abused 13th floor proved lucky for Walter Morton, 34-year-old window washer. Morton slipped from a 14th floor window sill and fell one floor to a protruding 4-foot ledge on the 13th floor, where he was pulled to safety inside by Elmer Bloke.

"Monthly Pains" stopped or amazingly relieved in 3 out of 4 cases in doctors' tests!

• Chances are you're putting up — unnecessarily — with the functionally caused pains, cramps and weak "no good" feelings of menstruation!

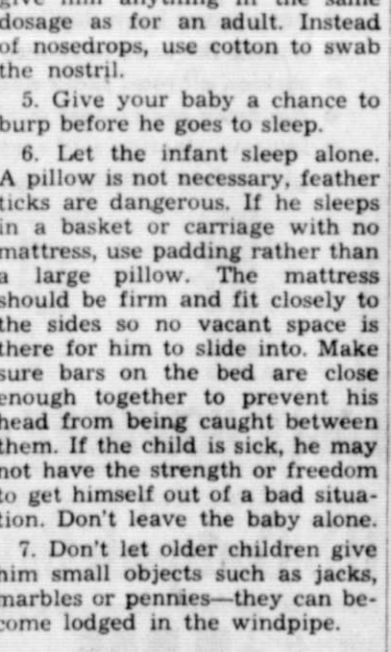

For, in actual tests by doctors, Lydia Pinkham's Compound brought complete or striking relief from such distress in 3 out of 4 of the cases!

Lydia Pinkham's is modern in its action!

So get Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—or new, improved Tablets with added iron. See if — taken through the month—it doesn't give relief from those backaches, jittery—help you feel better before and during your period!

Or—if you suffer from functional "hot flashes" of "change of life," find out how wonderful Pinkham's is for that, too!

It has a quieting effect on uterine contractions that often cause "period" pain!

RAGGED HERITAGE—Probably feeling as though he's looking in a mirror, Fred Stone, who created the role of The Scarecrow in the Wizard of Oz, checks his daughter Dorothy's outfit as she prepares to play the part for the first time in Sacramento, Calif. The Stone family is one of the oldest in show business.
