IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Mrs. Carl "Jack" Stange, who passed away five years ago, July 3, 1950:

You cannot say—you must not say That she is dead. She is just away.

With a cheery smile and a wave of the hand She has wandered into an unknown land And left us dreaming how very fair

It needs must be—since she lingers there; So think of her faring on—as dear

In the love of there as the love of here; Think of her still as the same—and say She is not dead—she is just away!

We have lost our soul's companion, A life linked with our own, And day by day we miss her more.

As we walk through life alone, Oh! What would we give to clasp her hand, Her dear, kind face to see, To hear her voice, to see her smile,

As in the days that used to be, Sadly missed by her husband and sons, Robert, Ralph and Richard.

Two Heinemann Dairy Trucks Badly Damaged in Fire

Two large trucks, owned by Wm. H. Heinemann Creameries, Inc. of Kewaskum were extensively damaged in a flash fire which occurred at noon Thursday, July 7, in the street (First st.) next to the dairy plant.

The trucks damaged were a White tractor with trailer and an international truck. The White truck was damaged beyond repair and damage to the international machine also was extensive.

One of the trucks was loaded with jugs and bottles of milk and the other was empty when the blaze broke out. The trucks were two of a large fleet owned by the dairy to transport dairy products to Milwaukee and surrounding areas.

The trucks were parked close to each other in a parallel position. The blaze started on one of the vehicles and is believed to have been caused when gasoline around the outside of a tank and dripping from a cooling unit came in contact with a spark from the battery in the ignition system.

When the fire hit the gasoline the flames broke out furiously and spread over the truck in a matter of seconds. The flames leaped to the nearby truck and this, too, immediately began to burn with the blaze also reaching the gasoline tank on this vehicle.

The fire spread widely and a dense cloud of black smoke arose high into the air from the burning trucks. The fire could be seen from a far distance and when the fire siren sounded residents at first believed it was a tar roof or oil fire.

Almost next door to the fire station, the firemen were there immediately with two fire engines and their equipment truck. They played three streams of water on the trucks from two sides and had the blaze under control and out in a short time.

The loss which has not been determined as yet, is covered by insurance.

EXPRESS THANKS

Heinemann Creameries, Inc. wishes to thank the fire department for their hurried action and fine assistance at the blaze. Their work in snuffing out the flames and keeping the damage down as much as possible is appreciated.

Branta canadensis
If the success of any organism is dependent on its ability to inspire other creatures to worthy endeavor there are few who would doubt that the Canada Goose has been eminently successful. We enjoy its flesh. We pay out enormous sums in connection with the sport of harvesting its surplus populations. We thrill to its calls in migration and to the effect produced by a flock migrating high in the sky. Our ancestors literally feathered their beds with down from the birds. And we devoutly hope that our descendants will be able to share the experiences we have had with these birds.

Most organizations that rely on pictures to help tell their story use the Canada Goose as a central theme now and then. The National Wildlife Federation publishes a series of large pictures of waterfowl and one of these entitled "Autumn Calling—Canada Geese" is justly a favorite with many, particularly those whose outdoor experiences have been such that the picture stimulates an almost unbearably happy nostalgia. The little picture shown here is from the Federation's series of wildlife stamps around which these articles are written.

A Canada Goose may have a wingspread of to 5 1/2 feet and a length of 3 1/2 feet. The larger gander may weigh to 18 pounds but the younger migrating birds of the year may be under 8 pounds in weight. The flight formation is that of a wavering V changing as the leaders may fatigue and drop back to let more vigorous or more rested birds take over. Canada geese breed from Labrador to Mackenzie and south to the gulf of St. Lawrence, South Dakota, Utah and California. The winters are spent from southern British Columbia to Nova Scotia and south to southern California, Mexico and Bermuda. In New Zealand enormous flocks have been developed that migrate only slightly.

Adult Canada geese mate for life. The goose incubates the 5 to 9 eggs in a down-lined nest that is usually but not always on the ground. Incubation lasts from 28-

30 days and the yellow goslings usually appear about June. There is but one brood a year. Once a year in late summer or early fall the adults have a molt in which they lose all their flight feathers at once. In some areas, the natives harvest great numbers of the birds during this time when they are helpless.

Many recognize a sustained wildlife population as really big business. To these, the Canada goose is an asset that might well rank with the celebrated goose that laid the golden egg. Few animals rank higher than the Canada Goose to wildlife economists. Many farmers whose fields lie in the path of the migrating hordes do not always share this enthusiasm for the birds. Somehow a rational program must be worked out for the management of this international source of wealth which will assure a continued reasonable abundance of these splendid birds. It is to the solution of problems such as these that the National Wildlife Federation has dedicated itself. — E. Laurence Palmer

Three-Car Family Predicted by '57

Lester L. Colbert, president of the Chrysler Corporation, recently told several thousand business men that, by 1975, a large proportion of the country's families will be three-car families. Colbert said the one-car family would be in the minority by that time. This statement parallels one made recently by Henry Ford II, president of the Ford Motor Company, who said that he was also looking forward to the three-car family era in the future.

It is true that in 1975, the population of the United States will probably be well over 200,000,000 and that automation may enable the automobile industry to reduce prices of cars while increasing wages at the same time. It is also true that the average American will be earning more, and may be able to afford more than one, or even two, automobiles.

However, we think one development will be necessary to make the three-car family a reality in the United States in the next twenty years. That would be the elimination of the heavy and multiple taxes which are now levied on the total price of an automobile.

It has been estimated that a man, paying $2,500 for an automobile, pays about $600 in hidden and direct taxes, and that the automobile he buys could be priced at less than $2,000 if he were not required to pay so many different taxes when purchasing a car. Taxes will perhaps never be eliminated, but the excise tax on new cars, which amounts to several hundred dollars for most buyers, is a cost which is not recovered when the car is traded in. This is one reason for the big drop in the trade-in value of a car which is only one year old.

If current taxes were not necessarily so high, low-priced automobiles in the United States would be selling for $1,300 and $1,400. This would make for larger exports and larger total sales.

Iced Tea — Baked Alaska Success With Simple Rules

Among the good things to eat during the summer, there are two foods many homemakers just never seem to have luck with. One is iced tea and the other is Baked Alaska. Actually both are easy to make and neither requires an especially deft hand of an experienced cook. All they do need is strict adherence to basic rules.

With iced tea it's important to remember that melting ice dilutes the flavor. So, use half again as much tea as you would if you were serving it hot. The basic recipe for making 10 glasses of iced tea is this: Bring 2 quarts freshly drawn cold water to a real lively boil in a saucepan. Remove from heat and immediately add 5 tablespoons loose tea or 15 tea bags. Brew, uncovered, 4 minutes by the clock. Stir and strain. Serve in ice-filled glasses with lemon and sugar to taste... or, if you prefer, sweeten with a spiced simple syrup. To make the syrup, in a saucepan, combine 2 cups water, 2 cups sugar, 1 stick cinnamon, 8 whole cloves and 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind. Bring to a boil, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Cover and boil 5 minutes. Cool at room temperature. Strain into a jar. One-two tablespoons will sweeten a glass of iced tea.

To make Baked Alaska, the two basic facts to remember are (1) ice cream should be as firm as possible and (2) ice cream should be completely covered with stiffly beaten egg white. There should be no spaces between ice cream and edges of cake. Four servings of baked Alaska will require 4 baker's sponge cups, 4 teaspoons currant jelly, 1 pint of ice cream, 8 egg whites stiffly beaten with 6 tablespoons sugar and 1/2 teaspoon almond extract.

Fill the well in each sponge cup with equal portions of currant jelly and ice cream. Cover completely with stiffly beaten egg whites. Place immediately in preheated oven 450°F for about 4 minutes, or until whites are lightly browned. Serve at once.

The time for living outdoors and outdoor eating has arrived. The object is to make things easy on the cook with simplified cooking. Have food that is tasty and appealing to those who gather around the table.

Got Troubles?

If you are currently concerned about your health, or think that you have troubles, the experiences of Mrs. Blondella Wert since 1933 will be encouraging.

Mrs. Wert, now 55 years old, is now recuperating from an operation. There is nothing unusual about that except that it is her thirty-eighth operation in twenty-two years.

Mrs. Wert believes this last one was the final one and frankly says she does not know what else the surgeons could find to operate on her for or take out.

Despite the operations, Mrs. Wert is active and lives a happy life when she is not under the knife. She believes she is healthy enough to live another fifty years and does not seem to be overly discouraged by all the surgery.

If Mrs. Wert can maintain her equilibrium along with thirty-eight operations in twenty-two years, we believe it proves that others with lesser ailments and fewer hospital confinements, are not so badly off after all.

"The surest way to have happiness and peace of mind is to give them to somebody else."

"BURRO" AN APPLE?—Trinca, pet burro owned by Dr. Laurel Foxworthy of Bellevue, Wash., nudges aside the top half of a Dutch door as she makes her way into the Foxworthy residence. She has the run of the house, is as much a pet as the family's four dogs.

TEACUP TOPICS

By BETTY ANN

With the first hint of warm days, America takes to the road. Shiny new sports cars, two toned convertibles and sedate family sedans roll along the highways, exposing their passengers to the warm sun and the balmy breezes.

But even the gentlest winds carry dust and soot, says Betty Ann. In industrial areas as much as three ounces of the smudgy black dust falls on your head each month. So regular brushing is important to keep your hair free from dust and dirt.

A hundred strokes a day may sound old-fashioned, but the practice is supported by the newest findings of science. Brushing is helpful, too, for hair that has been dried or dulled by winter winds and indoor heat.

Launder your tresses at least once every five to seven days with a shampoo compounded especially for your type of hair, advise experts. Sticky, dust catching oils are removed to the last trace leaving your hair flower fresh and completely manageable.

There's only one secret to shampoo success: Double rinsing with generous water rinses. The first lather floats away accumulated dust, oils and perspiration. The second polishes hair strands till they sparkle.

When locks are dry and brushed into place, you've completed the first installment in a hair care program for beauty.

What, exactly, is sportswear? Or, perhaps, when is it sportswear? Not, certainly, what is likely to be worn for active sports. Yet, elegant shirts with French cuffs and handsome cuff links are teamed with heavy linen shorts, worn for lazy lounging on patio, beach or in the sun and termed "sportswear."

Separates and one piece dresses, jackets and sweaters and skirts are all found in "sportswear" departments. Some "sportswear" is even right for wear to dinner or to parties at the end of a summer's day.

Perhaps it was thinking somewhat like this that set designer Tom Brigrance on a trail that is unorthodox. Abandoning fashion cliches, he creates clothes that fit. And he doesn't see why sportswear shouldn't be versatile.

Care for the skin of your neck as you do for your face. Wash your neck with the same mild complexion soap and apply cold cream to keep the skin from drying.

Old-Fashioned Potato Salad
6 white potatoes; 1 medium onion, chopped; 4 stalks celery; 2 hard cooked eggs, chopped; 8 to 10 sweet pickles, chopped; 2 teaspoons salt; 1 cup mayonnaise; 1/2 teaspoon celery seed; 1/2 teaspoon mustard; 1/4 teaspoon pepper; 2 1/2 tablespoons vinegar; 2 tablespoons sugar; 1/4 cup evaporated milk.

Boil or bake potatoes until done. Dice and sprinkle with salt. Add onion, celery, eggs and pickles. To the mayonnaise, add celery seed, mustard, pepper, vinegar and sugar. Mix well, stir in milk and pour over potatoes. Garnish with greens, tomatoes and sliced eggs, if desired.

There is more than one way to fry chicken, as everyone who has special tastes knows. But when it comes to outdoor eating there's just one perfect answer—crisp, golden brown chicken to be eaten in the hand. Young chickens of the fryer-broiler weight, from one and one-half to three pounds, are in especially good supply now and can be a best buy. The chickens are available fresh iced or already cut up, boxed and quick frozen to preserve their freshness for months. The very small family might prefer boxes of chicken parts, breasts or legs and thighs which are also available.

A sumptuous frosting for a just out of the oven cake is what your family loves. A praline topping is made this way: Mix together one-half cup firmly packed brown sugar, two tablespoons cake flour, one-fourth cup melted butter, two tablespoons water and one-half cup finely chopped nuts. Spread carefully, a little at a time, over the cake. Return to the oven and bake five minutes more.

Rhubarb pie benefits from the addition of grated orange rind. Use four cups of the diced rhubarb and one-half teaspoon orange rind for a nine inch pie with a lattice crust.

When soaking large dry lima beans before cooking, use two and one-half cups soaking water for each cup of beans.

Health & Beauty

It has long been known that your emotions affect your health and looks. All of us know that an exciting idea can pull one out of fatigue and revitalize one. On the other hand, boredom can make a person feel absolutely exhausted.

Take your responsibilities seriously, but not too seriously. If you do take problems and responsibilities too seriously, you may have gotten into the habit of keeping your problems with you all the time. Although you may not think consciously of them, they pop into your head several times during the day. This will make you sleep poorly at night and even show in the tensions in the muscles of your body.

If you are under great pressure, try to adopt this attitude. The first step is to try every possible way to solve your problem. If you find you can't do anything about it, shrug your emotional shoulders and decide to have a little fun anyway.

A grim, tense attitude will damage you and hinder rather than help you to arrive at a solution.

Relax from your everyday cares for a while each day. This may mean a nap to some of us, reading a few chapters in a good book to others. Perhaps it relaxes you to have a chat with a friend, but whatever relaxes you, indulge in it for some time during each day. If you think you don't have time for this, take the time and leave something less important undone.

Learn to enjoy the beauty of nature. It is all around you, and if money is one of your problems, the song of a bird or the beauty of a sunset is free for all to enjoy. Get out in the open as much as you can. Sunshine and fresh air will do wonders for you.

If you have trouble sleeping at night, try doing some really hard, long hike, you will probably find you will be so tired at night getting sleep will no longer be a problem.

In Fashion Now

With the coming of hotter weather, one's thoughts naturally turn to something cool to wear. And then's when cottons come to the fore.

Today's cottons are things of beauty, as well as being most practical and inexpensive. Wonderful things are being done by the manufacturers of cotton textiles to make them more wearable, as well as more attractive.

All types of costumes — from early morning wear to evening wear, not to mention attractive bathing suits, are being shown in cotton. Solids combined with prints are very popular while solids of two shades of the same color make up pleasing outfits.

The ensemble — a pretty, cool-looking print dress worn with a top coat which picks up one of the colors of the print — is a practical outfit which may be worn on many different occasions.

Evening dresses of cotton, in organdies, voiles, ginghams or piques, are very popular and practical for the young as well as the older woman.

COUNTRY PLATERS

LES CARROLL

SEVERAL fine country blues discs are riding high now and, surprisingly, some are happy tunes. Joan Hager's "Bob-O-Link Blues" has a gay, lilting quality and "Goin' Steady With the Blues" by George & Earl features tricky, rocking rhythm (Mercury). Ruby Wells (Victor) sings she's "Fighting the Blues" and Ted Rains answers beautifully with "Free of the Blues" (Decca). Jimmy Newman's offering is the pretty "Blue Darlin'" (Dot).

The girl vocalists have come up with some great ballads, and Wanda Jackson's "Tears at the Grand Ol' Opry" should be exceptionally popular (Decca). Anita Carter duets beautifully with herself in "I'm Sorry If That's the Way You Feel" (Victor), and Jean Shepard (Capitol) chooses the currently popular "A Satisfied Mind."

In the sacred vein the Rangere Quartet have a good, unusual arrangement of "Sing, Brother, Sing" (Capitol). King's Reno & Smiley duet nicely "Jesus Is Waiting," and T. Tommy's "Salvation Is Free" is also excellent gospel singing (Mercury).

Red Foley has two good peppy numbers in "You Little So and So" and "Plantation Boogie," while Ernest Tubbs does a cute novelty number, "Have You Seen," backed by a nice ballad, "It's a Lonely World" (All Decca).

Sunday Buffet Breakfast Makes Real After-Church Treat

BY DOROTHY MADDOX

DO you like to ask friends in for a big Sunday breakfast after church? If you do, we hope these brunch suggestions will please you.

Try a brunch served buffet fashion. This creates a feeling of leisure. Let your guests help themselves on arrival to chilled wedges of melon and a choice of cereals.

The corned beef hash mixture can be pressed into a baking dish in advance, ready for the addition of the eggs at the last moment.

Baked Eggs in Corned Beef Hash (Yield: 6 servings)

One quart of 2 (1-pound) cans corned beef hash, 1 pint soft 1/2-inch bread cubes, 3/4 cup milk, 2 tablespoons finely chopped onion, 6 eggs, 2 tablespoons light cream.

Combine corned beef hash, soft bread cubes, milk and onion. Press mixture into a greased 1 1/2-quart baking dish. Make 6 square indentations in hash for eggs. Bake in a moderate oven (375 degrees F.) for 15 minutes. Remove from oven and break one egg into each indentation. Pour 1 teaspoon cream over each egg. Return to oven for 15 to 20 minutes longer until eggs are set. Cut into squares and serve immediately.

Spiced-Orange Loaf (Yield: 15 servings)

One-quarter cup soft butter or margarine, 1/2 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed; 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/2 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 tablespoon orange juice, 2 teaspoons grated orange rind, 1 (1-pound) loaf sliced, enriched bread.

Combine butter, brown sugar, granulated sugar, cinnamon, orange juice and rind. Assemble the loaf by stacking each slice of bread as you spread it with about 2 teaspoons of the sugar mixture. Hold the stack firmly and, with a sharp knife, trim away the crusts.

Turn loaf on its side and set in a greased shallow pan. Loosely tie a string, lengthwise, around the stack. Spread remaining sugar mixture over the top.

Slice lengthwise, cutting completely through center of loaf. Gently pull top of loaf apart in several places. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for 10 minutes.

This buffet breakfast is the answer to a Sunday-menu prayer. Baked eggs in corned beef hash and spiced-orange loaf. Mmm!

About Your Home

Are you still putting away winter clothes? If so, have the woolen articles cleaned and then spray thoroughly to moth-proof them. This way you will be able to face summer with the assurance that your clothes will be undamaged when autumn arrives.

Actually, moths do damage the year round. It is only in the larvae, or worm stage that they are actually destructive. However, the adult moths are the ones you must destroy to lay the cuprits to rest.

The adult moths lay eggs in the nap of clothing, rugs and furniture upholstery. Even in the cracks of floors. This is especially true if some cat fur or dog's hair has caught there.

The eggs hatch in four to eight days in the summer. During cooler weather, it usually takes from three to four weeks.

Effective moth-proofing should be applied directly to the article. Read the directions on the liquid to be applied. You will find that various articles take varying amounts.

Hand-spraying will do very well for clothing. However, upholstery, rugs and blankets should be power-sprayed. This type spraying will penetrate more deeply and can be done with a modern vacuum cleaner.

Four ladies recently posed for a Clarissa Independent picture that portrays 339 years of pioneer life, ranging 82, 84, 85, and 88 years old, these hale, hearty and happy pioneers have lived a total of 257 years in the Clarissa community, two of them 55 years each, one 65, one all of her 82. Factual News About The Eyes

NEARLY HALF THE MAJOR LEAGUERS ARE IN LINE FOR GLASSES

White Sox outfielder Bob Nieman thinks almost 50 per cent of the major leaguers could play better baseball with the help of eyeglasses, the Better Vision Institute reports. It's pride that makes them go without, but they'll change their tune when they learn that spectacles can raise their earning power.

"When you need them," says Nieman, "glasses certainly help you pick up a line drive quicker and add 10 or 20 points to that batting average."

Among the players now wearing specs is Del Ennis of the Phillies, who took them up after his batting went down to .267 in 1954 and who is well satisfied with their effectiveness. He and Nieman agree that the only drawback is a little fogging up when it's necessary to flip sunglasses over the corrective lenses. Catcher Stan Lopata, first baseman Earl Torgerson, and infielder Bob Micelotta also use spectacles.

Other well-known eyeglass-wearers are Cub pitchers Bob Rush and Jim Bronson, White Sox catcher Clint Courtney and pitcher Ted Gray, Pittsburgh Pirate shortstop Dick Cole and second baseman Curt Roberts, St. Louis Cardinal outfielders Harry Elliott and Bill Virdon, Cleveland catcher Hank Foyles, and Yankee shortstop Phil Rizzuto and pitcher Jim Konstanty.

For baseball-players who need them, glasses unquestionably have a meat-and-potatoes value, says the Institute. And in every field of work regular professional eye-care can increase one's chances of success.

Clean Out Medicine Chest Regularly As Safety Precaution

Does your medicine cabinet look like Fibber McGee's closet? Are you keeping the remains of that prescription that helped restore your health three years ago, feeling that similar symptoms may possibly again appear? If so, you may unknowingly be harboring a health hazard in your own home.

First of all if you have young children in your home, there's the ever present danger that they may get into the cabinet and unwittingly endanger their health and even their lives by eating or drinking some of these medicines. All drugs and medicines should always be stored out of reach of young hands and if possible, under lock and key.

Secondly, modern drugs may become dangerous with age since they are often subject to chemical change or to lessening of potency with age, especially if storage conditions are not quite adequate. For example, some types of eye drops contain salts of silver. They are very useful in combating certain eye infections. However, with age they tend to become caustic due to chemical change. If they are used in this state they can cause irritation which results in discomfort and possibly harm.

Changes associated with age may occur to patent drugs which may even make them dangerous to life itself. Certain ingredients in these drugs when given in small doses may be beneficial for treatment of certain ailments, but poisonous in larger doses. Some of these ingredients, after long periods of standing, settle to the bottom of the container. When this happens the upper portion may contain little or none of the drug, while the bottom may contain quantities far exceeding the prescribed dosage.

Though our laws protect the untrained person from health hazards—including the improper use of drugs—legislation can never completely protect us unless each person uses good judgment when drugs are needed. Rely on the years of study and training of your doctor and pharmacist when drugs or medicine are required, and make it a point to clean out your medicine chest at regular intervals—at least once a year.

SMART DOG

Cleveland Ohio — Somehow a dog, of no discernable breed, discovered that an electric eye which opens a grocery store door works for dogs as well as for people. She made periodic visits to the store, looting the baked goods counter. Finally, clerk Larry Hirsch solved the problem by adopting the dog, naming her Lucky, and feeding her well at home.

Bible Comment:

Spiritual View Of Work Yields Satisfaction

WORK is more than just a task, more than a drudgery. Saint Paul says, "Whether therefore ye eat, or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God."

The spirit in which one's work is performed is important. One may take great satisfaction in performing his part in the fabrication of finished, marvelous products.

Also, there is a great compensation in the fact that even monotonous routine has been offset by shorter hours of labor, which leave the worker more time for family and the real business of living.

Nevertheless, the old debate remains as to whether work is a curse or a blessing. The original conception of Genesis suggests that it is something of a curse—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread"—. But in the Old Testament that conception received another interpretation. To extract from the soil abundance and prosperity became a national and social ideal. A glory was attached to work, and to achievement of craftsmanship.

The blessedness of work, too, became more emphasized and vindicated in all that Jesus said.—"My Father worketh hitherto, and I work"—. Work was what Jesus called His "Father's business." It was Christian work, and as such Paul commended it by precept and example.

And St. Paul had a message as a tent-maker as well as in the role of an Apostle and Christian leader.

Use a wet cloth or dampened paper towel to pick up broken glass. Even the tiniest bits will adhere. Then throw away cloth and all.

Soon it will be time to store the winter woollens. A cedar chest is the most likely and safest item of furniture for this purpose.

Today, it is possible to have a cedar chest in your home wherever you want it most. The modern cedar chest is attractively styled in a manner that doesn't set it apart from the rest of your home furnishings.

The cedar chest shown above is one of the most contemporary cedar chests. It resembles none of its predecessors. New design features, both inside and out, offer greater convenience, and safer protection for blankets, favorite cashmires, and other special wintertime furnishings and apparel.

The base is of coffee table height and is made of alternating strips of maple and walnut. The accordion-hinge doors are maple wood, and glide on a special dust sealing metal rail. For color contrast the case frame is made of cherry wood. The maple doors are edged in ebony. Naturally, the inside wood is protective cedar.

SPORTS AFIELD

By Ted Kesting

"A wilderness area may be defined as a country of solitude where Nature is at its best, a country free from destruction wrought by man and the sights and sounds of modern civilization. In few regions of the world are found such varied and priceless retreats and masterpieces of Nature as lie along the crests of the Appalachian Mountains in our East, and the Cascade, Sierra Nevada and Sierra Madre Mountains in our West." So claims Col. Townsend Whelen, camping editor of Sports Afield magazine.

"Along the trails that traverse these, the lovers of the unspoiled outdoors can wander, pitch their little camps and open up their sleeping bags under pine trees, in view of gorgeous peaks, in crisp air, in solitude and silence except for the singing of the birds, the tinkling of running water, and the swish and hum of wind through the trees." And all this is free to all of us, with no taint of commercialism, no license, no guide's charge. Our only obligation is to keep this country clean and unharmed.

The Appalachian Trail is a footpath extending for 2,050 miles from Mount Oglethorpe in Georgia to Mount Katahdin in Maine. It crosses the wilderness areas along the crests of the Great Smokey, Blue Ridge, Alleghany and Catskill Mountains, through the Berkshire Hills, the Green and White Mountains, and finally the lake and mountain country of Maine.

This trail is a volunteer recreational project. It is supervised and maintained by the Appalachian Trail Conference with headquarters at 1916 Sunderland Place, N. W., Washington 6 D. C. On receipt of 35 cents in coin the Conference will mail a pamphlet, "Suggestions for Appalachian Trail Users," which gives general information and lists other helpful books.

The Pacific Crest Trailway extends to Mexico for a total of about 2,156 miles, passing through many national forests and parks, and skirting the most famous mountains — Ranier, Adams, Hood, Shasta and Whitney. It passes through Sequoia and Yosemite Parks. It has been built and is maintained by the U. S. Forest Service and the National Parks Service.

It is not a trail for picnic parties; it is a wilderness trailway for expert backpackers — a "true nature trail." To publicize it the Pacific Crest Trail System Conference was organized with headquarters at Pasadena, Calif. The Sierra Club, 1050 Mills Tower, San Francisco 4, has done much to bring public attention to the trail. Both publish numerous bulletins and books on the trail.

3,000 School Children Have College Plans

Three thousand children in the schools of British Columbia are engaged in a joint saving effort, designed to put them through universities and other institutions of higher learning.

From Vancouver, in British Columbia, comes the report that some fifty schools are participating in this program. The plan is known as the Credit Union School Savings Club.

The whole thing began eight years ago, and the idea was that the students would earn money, put it in a joint saving effort and then have the money, or part of it which would put them through institutions of higher learning. A club director of the program in British Columbia said the children in the forty schools have saved $60,000 already, and are building good citizenship and character.

We commend this system to schools in the United States as a character-builder and as a method of getting more of our students to go to colleges.

Rubber gloves will slip on and off easily if you powder the inside.

REA Program Twenty Years Old

The Rural Electrification Administration recently celebrated its twentieth birthday. It was in May, of 1935, that President Roosevelt signed an executive order creating the R.E.A. and authorizing it to make loans to build rural power systems.

The best testimonial of the R.E.A.'s efforts since that time is its claim that R.E.A. systems are now supplying fifty-four per cent of the country's rural users with power. If the R.E.A. has done that job in twenty years, it certainly is a creditable record.

Of course, the R.E.A. has been controversial agency from the outset, and private utility companies have claimed that they were being placed in the position of having to compete with a Government agency. Private industry also said it could do the same job R.E.A. was doing.

However, complaints from rural folk in the 1930's were very numerous, especially those which contended that the private companies were not making haste to bring service to rural areas where there were few users. The R.E.A. immediately attacked this problem by making loans to local units, mostly farmer cooperative units, and these units built power systems and erected lines, and paid back loans over the years. The R.E.A. also offered financial aid in acquiring electrical equipment.

In our opinion, it is highly doubtful if private industry could have attacked the problem as rapidly as did the R.E.A. On the other hand, it is no doubt true that private industry has sometimes been hard put by competition from this Government agency and that electric cooperatives have sometimes moved into areas where private industry could and would serve users.

The net effect to the rural consumer, however, who had little hope of getting electric power in the near future twenty years ago has been a good one, for the R.E.A. program has been a spur to private industry, and this, in addition to R. E. A. efforts, has brought about rapid electrification to those who were given service by the R.E.A., and constitutes one of the most successful programs of the Roosevelt era.

Gang Wars In U. S. Cities Major Problem

Many Americans living in small communities and in rural areas are unaware of the lawless order of life which has developed among many youngsters in this country's larger cities. This problem, called juvenile delinquency, is especially acute in cities like New York and Chicago, where gang wars often break out among youngsters.

Recently, in New York, a fifteen-year old lad, William Blankenship, Jr., was killed by the leader of a rival gang because he was a member of the wrong gang. The killer told authorities he had used a gun because he was a boxer and did not want to hurt his knuckles.

The dead boy's father, William Blankenship, Sr., has already moved his family from that city, into Pennsylvania, but he is staying in New York in an effort to fight the rise of gang wars and juvenile terror, so that New York City can be made a safe place to live in again.

The seriousness of what amounts to a jungle atmosphere in many sections of this country's largest cities has been emphasized by a congressional study into the problem. One approach to the problem would be the sending of juvenile delinquents into the nation's forests and parks, in an effort to teach them real values, outdoor life, and to give them the satisfaction of honest work. Some such national approach to the problem might be in order if the trend toward gang-wars in our cities is not reversed.

The present state of juvenile delinquency in some of our cities is a disgrace to the nation, and a poor commentary on our social system.

An Unusual Method Of Cultivating Friends

A recent news story included a tip on making friends. It revealed that Mrs. Emma Hawkins, of Honey Grove, Texas, had made a lot of friends after buying her coffin, twenty years ago.

At that time, she says, the Lord told her to be prepared. She was sick much of the time in those days and feared she might soon die. She reports that she obtained a baking powder can and every time she had some change, or a dollar, she put it in the can.

After what Mrs. Hawkins calls a long time, the baking powder can contained $65 and she bought herself a gray upholstered coffin, with white satin lining. She put a dress and some mothballs inside.

That was some twenty years ago. And at that time Mrs. Hawkins was 64. Today she is 84, and relates how the purchase of the coffin, which news passed rapidly through her community, brought her many visits and future friendships. She says people are still coming to see her, and they all ask whether she has tried the coffin for size.

The newspaper which reported Mrs. Hawkins' experience reports she hasn't tried it out for size.

Fairchild's Work Changed Face of America's Gardens

"I have always liked horticulturists, people who make their living from orchards and gardens, whose hands are familiar with the feel of bark, whose eyes are trained to distinguish the different varieties..."

"Their brains are not forever dealing with vague abstractions; they are satisfied with the romance which the season brings to them. They have the patience and fortitude to gamble their lives and fortunes in an industry which requires infinite patience, which raises hopes each spring and too often dashes them in the fall."

Thus spoke Dr. David Fairchild in his eloquent book, "The World Was My Garden." He spoke after 60 years of untiring travel and research, hunting new plants in every corner of the world, to improve America's agriculture and to beautify its gardens and countryside.

Lifted Farm Economy

He was remarkably successful in his research. As founder and director of the office of plant introduction of the Department of Agriculture, he was responsible for bringing some 100,000 new plants into the United States. Through his efforts the nation's farm income was increased by at least $100,000,000 a year.

Last August 4, while Dr. Fairchild was tending his own beautiful tropical garden on Biscayne Bay at Coconut Grove, Florida, he collapsed and two days later he died, in his 85th year.

A tall, modest man with white hair and a gift for service and friendship, he died in the knowledge of accomplishment and full of honors. He was a life trustee of the National Geographic Society. He was a recipient of the George Robert White medal, the highest horticultural award in America; and of the Meyer medal, presented by the Secretary of Agriculture for "distinguished service in agriculture." He was president of the American Genetic Association, and honorary member of the famed Miami Beach Committee of One Hundred, and a member of botanical and horticultural societies in many countries.

His colleagues, over the years, were an honor roll of science and conservation. They included Theodore Roosevelt; Luther Burbank; Gifford Pinchot of the Forest Service; Alexander Graham Bell, whose daughter, Marian, is Mrs. Fairchild; Gilbert Grosvenor and John Oliver LaGorce of the National Geographic Society, and scores more.

Inspired Young Scientists

Dr. Fairchild's home and gardens in South Florida were a loadstone for young plant prospectors and geneticists. They came from all over the world for instruction and inspiration.

In his semi-retirement of recent years, there was time for Dr. Fairchild to observe the fruits of his labors—how the soy bean, the tung nut tree, the date palm, the avocado, the Persian melon, disease resistant sugar cane and wheat, and long-staple cotton, to name a few, have changed and enhanced the agriculture of his country.

Other plants of Dr. Fairchild's introduction were "merely beautiful," like the 300 kinds of palms and the 15,000 orchids of the public Fairchild Tropical Gardens—named in his honor—below Miami.

System Really Works

The Army's assignment system really works.

It worked so efficiently for Private Robert Cawthon of Pennsylvania, Fla., that he is now back at his old job.

In March, 1952, Cawthon, then a civilian, accepted employment as a camera operator at the Army's guided missile test center here.

Some months ago Cawthon was drafted. He went to Camp Gordon Ga., for basic training and then to Fort Monmouth, N. J., to attend photographer's school.

After completing his schooling at Fort Monmouth, he was assigned to White Sands Proving Ground. His job—camera operator.

Letter "J" Unclaimed

The letter "J" never has been used to designate a company in the Regular Army.

Although there are companies designated by the letters "A" through "I," and "K" through "M," the letter "J" always has fallen by the wayside.

Though the Department of the Army has no official record showing the precise record for this practice, Army historians believe the following is correct:

The system of using letters to designate companies was established in 1816. The letter "J" was omitted to avoid confusion, inasmuch as at that time the letters "I" and "J" still frequently were written exactly alike.

Behind The Scenes in American Business

By Reynolds Knight

Those great feet-on-the-grounders, the nation's purchasing agents, held their annual convention in New York last week, and said everything looked rosy—or as rosy as anything ever looks to a purchasing agent.

This quarter is fine everywhere, delegates from throughout the nation agreed. The coming quarter—July-August-September—will see some slackening of the industrial pace, they likewise agreed. More plant shut-downs for simultaneous vacations for all hands will contribute. So will a natural reaction from high auto production, whether or not there's a long strike.

The fourth quarter, it was expected, would see a new upsurge. Credited for this were early introduction of 1956 auto models, continuing demands for a multitude of consumer goods stemming from full employment, and cautious upbuilding of inventories, the last because, the industrial buyers generally agreed, prices wouldn't go any lower.

Looking a little farther into the future, the purchasing agents saw clouds on the horizon in the form of excessive credit and a pattern of wage increases moving up, they felt, faster than supporting rises in productivity.

BIG REPAIR TASK AHEAD—More than $100 billion must be spent in the next ten years to repair the nation's non-farm homes, a meeting of mutual savings banks officials was told recently. That sum will be needed for such work as painting, replacing heating equipment, re-wiring old homes and modernizing bathrooms.

Such outlays will keep hundreds of thousands of carpenters, painters, tile setters and handy-men busy throughout the nation, and will account for a large volume of such products as lumber, ceramic tile, cement and even steel.

The ceramic tile industry, to take an example, has long found the remodeling and modernization market a huge one. In many areas installing ceramic tile in old bathrooms and kitchens to give them waterproof, durable finishes is almost as large a business as installing the materials in new homes.

The 10-year home repair figures points up the importance of this field, and focuses attention on an often-overlooked factor in the national economy.

A jet-propelled toy rocket, using water and compressed air as fuel, soars 300 feet... An emergency warning signal light folds up for your auto trunk, but stands 44 inches high when set on the road to divert traffic.

COMPETITION EQUITY—More competition in the transportation industry is recommended in the recently released report of the Presidential Advisory Committee on Transport Policy and Organization.

The report, aimed at a general overhaul of the Interstate Commerce Act, contains 12 recommendations. Four call for less ICC control over the rates of common carriers; one is intended to reduce general ICC control over various elements of the transportation industry with the aim of equalizing regulation.

In releasing its report the Cabinet Committee gave as its major objectives "increased reliance on competitive forces of transportation in rate-making, and maintenance of a modernized and financially strong system of common carrier transportation."

BITS OF BUSINESS—One carpet maker has raised prices 3 per cent to compensate for the recent sharp increase in wool costs... Automobile production in May, despite the Memorial Day holiday, reached a record 731,000 passenger cars and 125,000 trucks... Rail freight car loadings were lifted to 77,419 for the week ending May 21, as the L. & N. strike ended... Ratio of U. S. paper production (exclusive of newsprint) to capacity in the May 21 week was 96.6 per cent. The week earlier figure was 97.4, the year-before figure 94.1.

Twin Pipes that play sweet music!

Chevrolet's "Super Turbo-Fire V8" with 180 hp.

You can spot this one by the twin tailpipes. No matter what you drive, you're going to see twin-exhaust Chevrolets pulling away—in traffic, on the toughest hills, on the long straightaways.
... Unless you have a "Super Turbo-Fire V8" of your own! And then you'll know what it's like to pilot the car that sets the pace for everything else—and doesn't pause to read the price tags!
What makes the Super scat? Chevrolet's superb valve-in-head V8, with the shortest stroke in the industry, the most power per pound, and the only 12-volt electrical system in its field—all this plus a four-barrel carburetor and free-breathing twin exhausts.†
Want to sample this silk-lined cyclone? Just give us a call, any day this week, and we'll be proud to show you just how hot a V8 can be.
*Optional at extra cost.
†Station wagon models have single exhaust pipes.
