Lisa Bronkhorst Remains in Critical Condition

The Bronkhorst family includes Lisa, Sandra, Amy and Ashley.

By Laurie Ottery Staff Writer/Photographer

None of us ever know what lies ahead in this uncertain world we live in. Lisa Bronkhorst has been a Kewaskum resident for the past six years. She moved here with her daughters, Amy, age 8, and Ashley, age 10. They attend St. Lucas School.

Lisa grew up an only child in the Waupun area. She chose Kewaskum as her new home because her mother, Sandra, also lives

She works full time at McDonalds and has completed a medical technician program, while attending school at night. Lisa is trying to make a better life for her and the girls. After seeking jobs in the medical field it soon became apparent that she needed more schooling to get the job that interested her. Those classes were to begin recently, but Lisa is unable to attend.

On Jan. 3 Lisa did not show up for her job at McDonalds. Her friend and co-worker, Peggy, became concerned and called Sandra. She went over to the house only to find Lisa disoriented and with a bloody nose. Lisa was taken to the hospital in West Bend where Flight for Life flew her to Froedtert Hospital in Milwaukee.

There are a lot of unanswered questions about what happened and why. Doctors may never know for sure. In December Lisa had sinus surgery. She had returned home with medications for her recovery. Right after getting home she became very ill. Her symptoms were flu-like and that is what she thought was happening, but her condition was not improving.

"Her liver and kidneys had shut down," said Sandra. "Lisa was put on top priority to receive a liver transplant. The surgery was to take place on Jan. 7 with a liver from a man in Illinois. The liver was too large so surgery was delayed. Things became even more complicated because Lisa's brain had swollen and she slipped into a coma. She developed infections and was removed from the transplant list."

Sandra took a break from her job at the West Bend Company, took over the care of the girls and spent every chance she could with Lisa. She wanted the children's lives to remain as normal as possible because she was sure it was what their mother would want. They visited Lisa, but not while she was hooked up to all of the machines in intensive care. They only missed a few days of school.

"The doctors did not give me much hope of her survival," said Sandra. "A Catscan showed that there was activity in the brain and that was hopeful. Her brain swelling was one of the major concerns at that point. Until we got the results from the test we didn't know if there was brain damage or any activity there at all. Despite good Catscan results, for a whole week they kept telling me that I should plan her funeral because her chances were not good."

On Friday, Jan. 14, Lisa miraculously came out of the coma. Doctors had searched through family history and ran several tests, but do not know why everything happened. They speculate it could have come about because of a combination of the sinus surgery and a mix in medication and Tylenol, but do not know for sure. There are no liver problems in the history.

Lisa's heart remained strong throughout her ordeal. By Monday, Jan. 17 her kidneys were functioning on their own, taking her off dialysis. The liver appears to be working as "Things are still real touch and go with many unanswered questions," said Sandra. "Lisa was moved to a private room, but remained very weak. On Jan. 22 her condition took a turn for the worse. She began having seizures and internal bleeding. On the 22nd doctors did surgery to repair arteries and control the bleeding. Lisa remains in intensive care. We just don't know what is what at this point."

Lisa is a single mother who, despite the financial hardships, has managed to keep her children at St. Lucas School. She is a Girl Scout leader and former Sunday school teacher. She remains in the hospital with many uncertainties lying ahead. Two accounts have been opened for donations to her and the girls. One is located at West Bend Savings Bank where donations can be made to the account, "Donations for Lisa." The other account is located at St. Francis Bank under the name, "Sandra Bronkhorst - Donation Account.'

Lutheran Brotherhood Branch #8434 of Washington County will be matching $2.00 for every $1.00 donated up to $900. So now is the time to make your contribution add up even more

Local Dairy Queen to Unveil National Drive-Thru Champion Award

KEWASKUM, WI -- The the previous International local Dairy Queen will unveil the "Fastest drivethru in the Nation" plaque Wednesday, January 26, 2000 at 4 p.m. Gary Furger, the local field consultant for International Dairy Queen, will present the award. the presentation will be made at the Dairy Queen located at the corner of U.S. 45 and Hwy. H in Kewaskum, a small farming village of 2500 about 30 miles north of Milwaukee, WI.

The crew of Kewaskum Dairy Queen earned the honor last June 27, 1999, when it set the National "DQ Speedway" record for most cars served by a drivethru in one hour. From 6:40-7:40 p.m. Kewaksum Dairy Queen served 254 cars in one hour, easily crushing Dairy Queen corporate record of 145 cars, set by the Bellingham, WA Dairy Queen. This achievement came about when International Dairy Queen offered a program called "DQ Speedway" to its franchisees. This program is designed toturn the drive-thru into a racetrack in order to help Dairy Queen operators clip a minute or two off its service time. Keaskum Dairy Queen was operating with a two-minute average service time per car before the program and achieved a 14.2 second service time per car during the record-setting hour.

"This is a great achievement for the crew and the community of Kewaskum," commented Kevin Scheunemann, owner of the local Dairy Queen. "254 cars was far beyond all of our expectations, we were shooting for 150 cars, just enough to break the record," Scheunemann added. A large portion of the community participated in the event, including a crowd of onlookers witnessing the historic event.

International Queen, the parent franchiser, carefully scrutinized the records and videotape of the event. Certification was made five months after the event by International Dairy Queen (IDQ). After certification, International Dairy Queen then sends the traveling award to the DQ that set the record. The award previously resided at the Bellingham, WA Dairy Queen. The award will stay at Kewaskum Dairy Queen until another Dairy Queen serves 255 or more cars in their drive-thru in one hour.

QSR, a fast food industry-tracking firm has suggested this may be the drive-thru record for the entire industry. Other fast food chains simply refuse to release this information according to QSR. "We are claiming to hold the industry record, until someone proves us wrong with reliable documentation," says Scheunemann.

Dairy International Queen is working on expanding the drive-thru award system. Kewaskum Dairy Queen "...has put this record far out of reach for another DQ operators" according to Doug Pavelka, IDQ Vice President of Operations for the Pacific Suggestions Northwest. have included an award for most soft serve, hot food, or blizzards in drive-thru in one hour. "Most everyone in the Dairy Queen system is confident this will be a record that will never be broken," says Scheune-mann. "However I have been 'stoking' other franchises in the system to challenge our drive-thru record. Some of the other franchises are naturally competitive and they will not be able to resist my overt flaunting of the industry drive-thru record. It would be exciting to challenge for an even higher standard than the one we set. I'm confident our crew would do all it can to regain the drive-thru championship, if we ever lost it," said Scheunemann.

Gary Furger, Kevin Scheunemann, and Jerry Mehring, the local director of Territory Operations, will be available for questions and comments from the press.

The first railroad tunnel was built in 1831. It was just over 36 miles long and connected Hollidaysburg, Pa. with Johnstown, Pa.

"I would like to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has offered prayers, food and have called to see how Lisa is," said Sandra. "The people at Froedtert have been super. They do everything they can for Lisa and I really don't believe she would have made it without them. It is nice being a part of a small community where people care and are there for us.

Audra Beyer runs a daycare in Kewaskum. At one time she had Amy and Ashley as students. "I want to do whatever I can to help," said Audra. "I hope the people of this community can find it in their hearts to donate to the accounts and help out.'

Kewaskum is a small community and a great place to raise a family. Lisa and her daughters need your help. There are many bills from her ordeal and many more to come. Life is uncertain and none of us know what our future holds. Donate to the accounts that have been opened, and give from the heart, for a young mother and her daughters. Show the Bronkhorst family what being a part of Kewaskum is all about.

Sooner or later every person opens his mouth and puts his foot in, but only a baby is admired for it.

New State Pension Equals Five Brewers Stadiums

By Rep. Glenn Grothman

Late last year, the State Legislature voted on a state budget full of new spending and new state bonding. Quietly, on the same day, while the papers covered the budget, the State Legislature voted themselves and other state employees a pension increase.

The state retirement plan, which includes state, county, public school, university and most municipal employees, may already be the most generous plan in the state. For most employees, upon retirement they receive the average of their three highest salaries times years worked times 1.6%. For example, if one worked 35 years and makes $40,000 ones initial pension is $40,000 times .016 times 35 = $22,400. After one starts to receive the pension, your annual increase is the greater of the increase in value of investments or a minimum percentage.

Currently, pressure for an increase is coming from public employee unions, which is understandable. The feeling is that since the trust fund is going up in value with the stock market, there should be an increase. However, the market can also go down. Further, by increasing pensions it means that the difference will slowly have to be made up through higher school, county, and municipal property taxes as well as university tuition.

Sadly, another group pushing for this increase is some state legislators themselves -- since we are part of the system. In debating this bill on the floor, they use the phrase "our money" when talking about the plan, showing that they have personalized the matter.

Not only will this increase result in higher taxes, but it also could be challenged in court. Just two years ago, legislative finagling with the state pension plan resulted in a $250 million payback. Why change the plan and risk another lawsuit?

By rushing through the plan while the press was focusing on the budget, the Legislature was also avoiding the normal actuarial studies, which are done before a major bill like this is passed. (The pension plan proposed will transfer $4 billion from one account to others.) At a time when the stock market took an eight percent drop in less than a month, this is highly irresponsible. Nevertheless, if the bill were given appropriate scrutiny and passed on a day other than the budget, it would be the headline of the day in most daily newspapers.

Pay careful attention to this vote. This bill will cost taxpayers more than five county stadiums. I voted no.

Super Bowl Facts And Figures

(NAPS)—Sports fans seem to thrive on trivia and football fans are no exception. Here are a few little-known facts and figures to whet your Super Bowl appetite.

Did you know:

• by winning last year, the Denver Broncos became the first AFC team to capture back-to-back Super Bowls since the Pittsburgh Steelers in 1979 and 1980, quarterbacks Bart Starr and Terry Bradshaw are the only players to earn back-to-back Super Bowl MVP awards, • Super Bowl XXXV is scheduled for Tampa Bay in 2001. The game moves to New Orleans in 2002 and San Diego in 2003.

You are more than a casual fan if you know that:

 former New York Giant quarterback Phil Simms holds the Super Bowl career record for passing efficiency,

• former Oakland Raider Rod Martin still holds the single-game record he set in 1981 for most interceptions with three, the Dallas Cowboys didn't make their first appearance until Super Bowl V in 1971. However, they have since made up for lost time and hold the record for most appearances with eight, and according to Neilson Media Research, ten of the 20 mostwatched television programs of all time were Super Bowl broadcasts.

Clearly, with an audience of that size, advertisers and retailers tend to be Super Bowl winners no matter who plays.

For example, the Midwest's

Superbowl t-shirts will be available online one hour after the game.

largest sporting goods retailer has announced it will offer official Super Bowl merchandise almost immediately following the end of the game.

One hour after the completion of Super Bowl XXXIV on January 30, DunhamsSports.com will be selling licensed Super Bowl t-shirts, hats, sweatshirts and other items with the logo of the winning team.

They are also authorized to offer a special "Locker Room Kit" containing the hat and t-shirt worn by the winning team in the locker room during the presentation of the Vince Lombardi trophy.

According to the company's chief executive officer Jeff Lynn, "Usually, Super Bowl merchandise is only available immediately in the city or state where the winning team is located. Now, with just a few clicks, fans who live elsewhere can purchase licensed apparel as well."

Celebrated Author To Lecture to UWWC

West Bend -- How can a loving, all-powerful, allknowing Creator exist if He allows so much evil in the world? This theological problem has plagued thinkers and philosophers for centuries.

On March 1, the students in the University of Wisconsin-Washington County's Philosophy of Religion classes will discuss the issue, with the guidance of nationally known author James Morrow.

Morrow, whose prizewinning books "Towing Jehovah," "Blameless in Abaddon," and "The Eternal Footman" have met with widespread critical acclaim, will give a free public lec-ture titled "Stop Me before I Kill God Again," at 7 p.m., Feb. 28, at the University. The following day, he will lecture to classes at the University of Wisconsin-Waukesha, and present the same public lecture at UWW at 7 p.m. that night. He returns to UWWC to speak to students the following day.

All Morrow's appearances are free and open to the public.

The author, who primarily has written science fiction works during his professional career, recently raised eyebrows with the books of his so-called "godhead trilogy," in which God dies, his Connecticut-sized body is turned into a sort of theme park (run by Baptists), and is, in turn, hauled off the Hague to be put on trial for the evil He allowed in the world.

Morrow says he wasn't sure where the trial scenes were going to go when he started writing the series. But in a recent online interview he said he realized the books were likely to cause consternation in some camps. In many interviews and talk shows, he explained, he has been castigated for his irreverence.

"Irreverent' isn't quite strong enough," he wrote. "Blasphemous...heretical...a candidate for hellfire...those are the sorts of blurbs I sometimes get on call-in shows. But I am reverent vis-a'-vis the Universe. I think you have to be in awe of reality."

UWWC Philosophy instructor William Schneider says the books fit right in with the philosophical questions about evil he raises in class. "How can there be an all-knowing, allpowerful, benevolent God, if there is so much evil in the world?" he said. "How do you resolve a God with perfect knowledge.. knowledge of everything that goes on in the world or will go on in the world...with human free

UWWC Philosophy professor Mark Peterson says that an intellectual examination of one's faith is always in order. "You have to decide whether you want to have the kind of faith and beliefs that won't stand up to questions," he said. "Philosophy is all about answering some of those basic, eternal questions; Who am I?," Why am I here?', What do I do next?"

Peterson said he realizes that some in the community may be disturbed by Morrow's presence on-campus, but said that kind of intellectual pursuit is what Universities are meant to nurture. "People want and need to think about these issues," Peterson said. "It's our job to help them do that."

Morrow, when posed with a similar question online, agreed, "I want to get people thinking until it hurts.

Sick of the Flu? Don't Ask for Antibiotics

By Edward Belongia, MD

Influenza is a serious problem that is widespread across the country now. But beyond the illness that it's causing, the flu is contributing to antibiotic resistance. That's when germs develop the ability to resist the medicine.

What does the flu virus have to do with antibiotics? It shouldn't have anything to do with them because antibiotics won't cure viral illnesses. Unfortunately, for a variety of reasons, some patients suffering from the flu are taking antibiotics. And when these powerful medicines are overused, they promote the spread of antibiotic-resistant germs.

To be clear, I am not talking about anti-viral medications intended for flu sufferers who have chronic illnesses or who are elderly. Instead, resistance occurs when patients suffering from cough, cold or flu viruses take antibiotics such as amoxicillin, erythromycin, or similar drugs. Antibiotics only kill bacteria, not viruses, so it is pointless to take them for the flu.

Antibiotic resistance is not a theoretical threat. Already in Wisconsin, 20% of the bacteria that cause ear and sinus infections are partly resistant to antibiotics. And although these infections can still be treated with other antibiotics, we're seeing more cases where there is multiple resistance to different types of antibiotics. This is happening rapidly and everybody should be concerned about it. Just 15 years ago, the germ that causes most ear and sinus infections hadn't developed any resis-

The origins of the problem rest in the origins of antibiotics themselves. Developed during World War II, these powerful medications saved people who otherwise would have died. They were hailed as miracle drugs, and rightly so. Unfortunately, we have now grown to expect antibiotics for minor ailments. This leads patients to specifically ask their doctor for antibiotics when they really aren't indicated Physicians, on the other hand, are under tremendous time pressure to see a growing number of patients, and may give in to their patients' wishes so they don't go away unhappy. Physicians and patients together must work to reduce inappropriate antibiotic use. So if you have the flu, ask your doctor how to best treat the symptoms, not for an antibiotic.

For example, over-thecounter decongestants, pain relievers and a humidifier can help you feel better during the 7 to 14 day course of the flu. As miserable as influenza can be, it usually goes away on its own.

But antibiotic resistance won't go away unless we address the problem. We all must do our part to make sure these medicines remain strong. If we don't, I fear we may run out of drugs to treat some infections, creating a crisis in public health.

Wisconsin is on the forefront to pre-empt this threat, with the Marshfield Medical Research Foundation, the State Division of Public Health and the State Medical Society of Wisconsin, working collaboratively to reduce inappropriate antibiotic use in Wisconsin. Through a grant awarded by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, we are in the midst of an antibiotic education campaign aimed at the public and an effort to remind physicians about prescribing these medicines more judiciously.

With your help, these important medicines will remain potent for years to Woolly Mammoth Sighted in Area?

Well, okay, it's a bit of an exaggeration, we admit. But, it is true, kind of. Well, at least it was true... like 12,400 years ago. That's our story and we're sticking to it, and so is Dr. David Overstreet. Overstreet is the director of the Great Lakes Archaeological Research Center. He shared his explorations into the past at the forum, "Life on the Ice Age Edge," held December 9 at the Ice Age Center near friendly Dun-

The focus of Overstreet's work involved the excavation of a woolly mammoth kill site along the western shore of Lake Michigan. Mammoths are extinct cousins of today's elephants. At the site, which was dated over 12,000 years old, Overstreet and his team of student researchers found flint spear points and scraping tools located under the mass of disassembled mammoth bones.

The most important part of Overstreet's research indicates that early human habitation in this part of Wisconsin occurred much earlier than once believed. It now seems that our ancestors were roaming the region soon after the glaciers began to recede.

According to Overstreet, thousands of years ago it was open season on woolly mammoths as they were pursued by prehistoric hunters. These hunters used spears rather than bow and arrow, as the bow wasn't invented yet. A short weighted shaft, called an atl-atl, leveraged the spear greater distances than simple hand throwing. The findings also hint that the hunters preferred to track down lone male mammoths. The female mammoths, like today's elephants, were avoided as they were more dangerous to hunt due to their aggressive group defenses.

The forum was jointly sponsored by the Drumlin Protection Alliance and Ice Age Interpretive Center Naturalist Program. Exceptional holiday snacks and over 55 folks in attendance made for good company and a very interesting evening.

You can still discover remnants of prehistoric life on the land in Fond du Lac and Washington Counties. Rock forms, bison effigy stones, mammoth effigy stones (some believe) and entire drumlin hills, in some cases, are now believed to have been important symbols for prehistoric cultures. The majority of these sites are located on privately owned land. Many land owners have chosen to preserve these features while others may not even realize they exist.

So the next time you step outside, look around and give thanks for what you have... and then look down... you might be standing over something mammoth.

Five Secrets to Building Wealth in the 21st Century

This article is about how to build personal wealth in the 21st century. However, if you're expecting hot stock tips or a nifty new way to use the internet to invest your money, you've come to the wrong place. In fact, we confess to being somewhat deceptive with the title. There are no "new" secrets for building wealth in the new millennium. They're really the same old secrets smart people used in the last century to get wealthy.

1. Have a goal. wanna build wealth" and "I wanna retire rich" aren't goals. They're dreams, and vague ones at that. To build wealth, you first need to determine what you want that wealth for. Do you need the money to buy your own business or retire in a certain place by a certain time? Then you can decide how much money you actually need to accomplish those

Instead of thinking about becoming "wealthy," a better concept might be to become "financially independent." That suggests enough money to allow you to make the choices you want to make. Perhaps you want to have enough money to quit the job you're in so you can pursue another career that you love more but that doesn't pay as well. You may not need a lot of "wealth" to accomplish that goal.

2. Spend less than you earn. There isn't a millionaire on the planet who got that way by spending all the money they made. That means living below your means. It doesn't have to be far below your means, say Certified Financial practitioners, but it does mean not spending every penny you earn. Take housing, for example. People often buy the maximum amount of home they can afford. Yet for every dollar they don't spend on a house, they save approximately $2.40 over the life of a 30-year mort-

One trick is to design and follow a spending plan, or budget, so your money goes exactly where you want it to. Another key is to spend wisely. Research has found that Americans "waste" 20 to 30 percent of their money by not getting the most for their dollars through such simple steps as using coupons, comparative shopping for the best buys from food to auto insurance, and a zillion other money-saving

3. Minimize your debt. It's difficult-and not always wise-to avoid debt entirely. Yet too many Americans saddle themselves with needless debts. It's little wonder bankruptcies are near an all-time high despite a booming economy. Too many consumers can't wait to spend. One key is to avoid consumer debt that pays nothing in return (unlike mortgage or college debt), provides no tax breaks and is often high priced. This particularly applies to credit-card debt.

4. Invest early, wisely, often and as much as you can afford. "Early" is especially the key. Nothing consistently makes money like time. Investments that return even modestly over the years will usually make far more money than investments made hurriedly at the last minute. Other "old fashioned" 20th century secrets to investing include maximizing investments in taxdeferred accounts and investing regularly every month. And skip the daytrading and market timing. A recent study of mutual fund investors by the Boston-based financial services research firm of DAL-BAR found that investors who bought and held their stock mutual funds over the past 15 years earned 17.9 percent a year. The average investors, who switched in and out of funds every three years, earned just 7.25 percent a year.

5. Protect your wealth. As you build wealth, the last thing you want to do is lose it to an unexpected financial catastrophe. Most of us get the basic insurance-life, auto, home. But some of us skip medical coverage because it's expensive and tough to get sometimes, even though a serious medical illness can wipe you out financially. Many of us overlook disability coverageinsurance that replaces income last because of sickness or disability. Only a small percentage buy longterm care insurance, and many overlook liability insurance and the use of asset protection trusts to protect us from someone suing us for all we're worth. You don't want others becoming wealthy on the money you worked so hard to save.

Guitars, Pretending, and Teaching Writing

Sarah McWilliams, a first grader at Wayne Elementary School, shares her writing with Barry Lane during a workshop session.

Watching Barry Lane at work, you might not realize he's teaching writing.

At first glance, you might only notice that he's playing his guitar, or pretending to be a made-up character, or telling a story about his favorite teacher, Miss Foley.

But if you look deeper -into his message, into the excited faces of the students and teachers with whom he worked recently at Kewaskum, Farmington and Wayne Elementary Schools
-- you can see why he has earned national renown for his books and seminars on discovering writing.

He makes writing FUN!
"Writing is hard work," Lane explains, "but why do all the hard work if you're not having a good time?'

To those ends, Lane met with all Kewaskum School District elementary teachers during a recent inservice, then worked with every class at each school, inviting students and teachers alike to participate in writing activities to help make writing more enjoyable.

He had students invent and become characters; he challenged students to get inside a feeling when writing about it; he explored the role of detail and how it makes writing more interesting for writers and readers alike. And it all was interspersed with personal anecdotes, silly jokes, and fun, self-penned songs that helped illustrate his teaching points.

"Fantastic!" and "I'm ready to go write right now," were just two of the comments heard from teachers following Lane's presentations.

Students were excited, as well.

Lane, an affable, forever smiling man, visited with each small group of students as they did actual writing as part of the workshop. Afterward, he often played one of his songs, be it about a favorite teacher, or the wolf's version of the Three Little Pigs.

"It was awesome," said KES second grader Emily Huf.

Lane, author of books including "Discovering the Writer Within: 40 Days to More Imaginative Writing," travels from his Vermont home about half the year for writing seminars and workshops like those he presented at Kewaskum.

"I call it Fairy Godteaching," says Lane of his seminars. "I go in, sprinkle a little fairy dust, and see what happens. The real satisfaction comes when I see the teachers that are able to use some of the things I presented to them in such a way that it makes students enjoy writing more and also inspires their learning."

"I want to leave teachers and kids with something they can recall that they can apply to their own work," he explains. "I want to teach a little bit of the craft of writing that they can... use themselves."

At a workshop session in the Kewaskum Elementary School gym, Barry Lane discusses making characters with fifth graders Tristin Wright, left, and Zack Parish.

And Lane's advice for anyone wanting to improve their writing?

"Do it (write). Just do it."
And through guitars, books and stories about his childhood teachers, Barry

EDUCATION... It's Everyone's Business

Wayne P. Graczyk Kewaskum Superintendent Of Schools

LET IT SNOW, LET IT SNOW!!! Parents, students and community members may now get school closing information off the Internet. If you have access to the Internet, simply go to www.cancellations.com

Once you get to that site, enter our zip code (53040) and keep the area at five miles (you can also increase the radius you need to check by expanding the miles). If you wish another area of the state and you know the zip code, enter that. Any schools, etc., in that zip code area that have registered for this service will be shown. Special feature: Click on "CheckAccu Weather.ComForecast" and get the current weather. Have fun!

I mentioned in last week's column that another schematic building design would be printed in this week's edition. The Wayne Elementary School floor plan can be seen elsewhere in today's paper. You will notice that there are a couple structural changes in the plans.

The existing gym was going to be expanded to the west but the structural limitations and cost considerations altered our original plan. The current gym will now be divided in half with the north end serving as the new music/art room and the south half functioning as a cafeteria and large group instruction room.

The new gym will be built off the north end of the building along with two unfinished classrooms (new addition). The new computer lab will be located immediately south of the unfinished classrooms but north of the new library. With this new format we will increase the overall square footage by about 2000 square feet, without increasing the projected cost. Once again, our goal is to be in the remodeled building by the first day of school this fall.

Hopefully, we will have dates scheduled so people can go through the construction sites as work is being completed. While many people like to see only the finished product, others love to see it during the various construction phases. Of course, we will have an Open House for FES and WES in the fall, probably once the new gym is completed at FES. This will be in either October or November.

Stay tuned and don't forget that you're always invited to call or stop in and visit, ask questions, etc. Our telephone number is 626-8427 and the address is 1450 School Street, Kewaskum

The options on how to handle the vacant seat was discussed. On a motion by Trustee John Kenworthy, seconded by Trustee Robert Stoltzmann and unanimously carried voice vote the Board accepted Trustee Kuehl's resignation. The Administrator was directed to prepare a news release requesting anyone interested in fulfilling the unexpired term of Trustee Kuehl to submit a letter of interest. This will then be used to appoint someone to the Board. Village President Robert Wagner directed the Administrator to send Andrew Kuehl a letter thank you for his dedication and support of the Village.

Discussion was held on questions asked by O & R Development Enterprises regarding street improvements; how to pay for them and how to be reimbursed for them. No decision was made but the Administrator was asked to place the matter on the agenda for further discussion for the January 24, 2000. On a motion by Trustee Robert Stoltzmann, seconded by Trustee John Kenworthy and unanimously carried by voice vote, the Board denied any Village utilities being extended outside of the Village corporate limits. Annexation is a criterion for said service.

Police Chief Richard Knoebel informed the Board that the Administrator, Director of Public Works and he are looking at the feasibility of renting the old village landfill site to the local Wings Chapter as a proposed food plot for wildlife. When additional information is available, the matter will come back to the Board.

On a motion by Trustee Warren Dums, seconded by Trustee Robert Stoltzmann and carried by the majority roll call vote, to adjourn. Roll call vote was 5 "Aye" 0 "Nay" 1 "Absent".

On Thursday, January 20, they traveled to Campbellsport and lost, 71-49, despite giving a good effort. The Indians are now 3-10 overall.

The Cougars set the tone in the opening quarter. Point guard Angela Flood had three three-point baskets and 13 points as Campbellsport had a 27-10 lead after the first eight minutes of play.

The Cougars continued their hot shooting by outscoring the Indians 16-10 in the second quarter to take a 43-20 lead into the locker room at halftime.

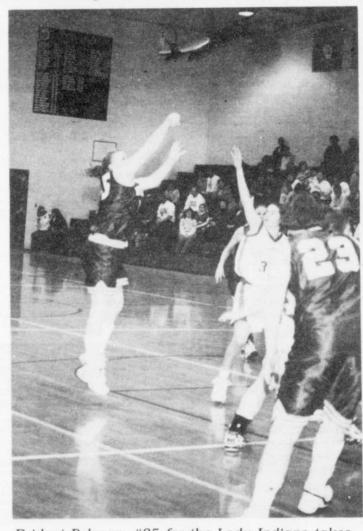

The Indians would not give up in the second half. They played hard and outscored Campbellsport, 20-14 in the fourth quarter, but it was too late as the Cougars left the game with an overall record of 10-4.

Early Antierless Deer Hunt Being Considered

MADISON -- Three consecutive years of mild winters have caused the deer herd in northern Wisconsin to grow well beyond population goals. In response to a state Natural Resources Board request for recommendations on how to curb deer herd growth, wildlife biologists will recommend an early antlerless gun deer hunt similar to the Zone-T program held in the farmland regions of the state.

This winter we have the second largest deer population in the north since the forties when deer numbers were at an all time high," said Dave Evenson, a Department of Natural Resources northern region biologist. "Farmers and foresters are telling us that these deer are causing short and long range economic problems. The deer harvest has increased with the increased deer numbers, but it appears that the regular nine-day gun season is not enough to curb the deer populations growth."

Evenson said foresters are increasingly reporting that heavy browsing by the deer herd is hurting the regeneration of oak, white pine, maple and hardwoods that provide raw materials for wood-using industries throughout the state.

In 1998, 27 deer management units in northern Wisconsin had unsold bonus antlerless deer tags at the end of the season, and the harvest was inadequate to trim the herd in many other units. There were even more units in 1999 with bonus permits remaining.

"By law, the department must mange the deer herd at established over-winter population goals," said Bill Mytton, DNR big game ecologist. "For the last several years most of the units in the north have had deer populations significantly over those goals. Even though we've continually increased the availability of bonus permits we have not been able to reduce the herd."

He added that should a harsh winter with deep snows and cold temperatures hit the north next winter, significant deer losses would occur similar to that seen in 1995-1996. During that winter more than 170,000 deer were lost to starvation and diseases caused by winter stress.

The early antlerless only hunt under consideration by the wildlife managers would be a tool to help trim the herd in conjunction with the bow and regular nine-day gun deer season. Mytton said it would be modeled after the Zone-T hunt that has been successfully used in the central and southern parts of the state to trim deer numbers in selected farmland deer management units. The department only has authorization to conduct Zone-T hunts in farmland units.

This year the proposed early Zone-T hunt would run four days from Oct. 26 through 29. Three free antlerless tags would be issued per hunter for each license they buy for a possible total of six tags with the purchase of a gun deer and an archery license. The free antlerless tags would be acceptable for use in deer management units where a special early antlerless season exists.

The archery season would also be extended an extra four days in the units where the hunt would take place.

A preliminary proposal for an early northern hunt will go to the Natural Resources Board in February. If the board concurs, it will direct the department to hold a series of public information meetings in March on the proposed northern forest special hunt. A final decision would have to be made on the special hunt by the board at its April meeting in order to be implemented in the fall of 2000.
